The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CON-TINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hend corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

GENTLEMEN,

P_{ROPRIETY} and affection alike incline me to inferibe to you the following undertaking. We are mutual and peculiar fufferers by the event of the campaign in 1777. You were witheffes and judges of my actions; but I owed you an account of the principles which directed them.

Another motive for this Addrefs is to avail myfelf of a proper public opportunity to repeat to you, what I have omitted no occasion of expressing in Parliament, in correspondence, and in conversation—the fulless approbation of your fervices. My errors may have been numberless; your conduct has been uniform—faithful, gallant and indefatigable. Debarred of the power of doing you justice before the King, these testimonies are the only means to which my effect and gratitude can refort.

After vindicating myfelf as a commanding officer from any inattention to your intereft or fame, I next throw myfelf upon your judgment for my conduct as a friend.

You will find by this publication, and fome others, which though not addrefied to you will probably engage your curiofity, that I have been accufed of fhrinking from the common captivity.

I have been fupported under that afperfion by the confcionfnet's I did not deferve it, and the confidence that you (to whom chiefly upon that charge I was refponfible) would not adopt it. After the fortunes we have run together, it is not furely unworthy of belief, that I fhould rather have defired, than avoided to partake the clofing feene : uniting with a due fenfe of perfonal attachments, the prefervation of my military fortune, and a retreat from the diffractions of my country. The defence of your bonour and my own, at one time, and refiftance to an affront * which my nature could not bear, at another, alone detained me here.

In regard to my political transactions, I have flated them, and I wills them to be confidered by my friends, apart from my miltary conduct. I bear very high refpect to fome eminent and ill-treated characters in our profeffion, who in deference to the tranquility of government, have filently refigned the flations which they could no longer hold with fecurity to their honour, or benefit to the fate. But the option is not left to thofe, who having a voice in Parliament are obliged to act as citizens as well as foldiers. The number of officers altogether of the army and navy, who with known love to their country and profellional fpirit equally confpicuous, have voluntarily withdrawn themfelves from employment within thefe two years, exceeds all precedent. I do not place my name in the lift with the fame pretenfions; but it is not arrogant to emulate where we cannot compare; and I am defirous of following the high examples before me in no point more than in that of avoiding to diffurb the zeal of those who are now employed. The officers who have held it their duty to take part in oppofition, have afted openly and directly in their place in Parliament; but they may

* The part of my treatment which I call an affront upon this and other occafions, is the refulal of my fervice in this country, even at the head of my own regiment, or as a volunteer, in the time of exigency, and when other officers precifily in my actor futuation were employed. My complaint of this partiality has never been officially antivered; it has only been evaded by anonymous writers, who have laid it down as a polition, that I meant to allude to the example of Lord Harriagron (with which it certainly has nothing to do) and then have taken a merit in refuting me. The particular example to which I appeal is that of Lieutenant Colonel Kingiton, of the 86th regiment, appointed to that regiment, employed in it for the defence of Plymouth, and actually now embarking with it for foreign fervice, under the fame terms of the convention, and the fame terms of parole to the Congrefs verbatim with myfelf. Other objections, and of a nature that could not be afterwards fupperted, were tried againft the Duke of Rutland's recommendation of this excellent officer : but the objection of parole, though fully known to be precifiely the fame with that which was fo peremptorily urged againft my pretentions, was never mentioned.

INTRODUCTION.

W HEN it becomes neceffary for men who have acted critical parts in public flations to make an appeal to the world in their own juffification, there are many prudential confiderations which might lead them to commit the care of it to friends, or, which is in many refpects the fame thing, to defend themfelves under an affirmed character. The charge of vanity ufually made on egotifm is thus cluded : a fuller fcope may be given to felf-love and particular refentment : even the lower vexations which attend an author are to a great degree avoided : the ill-nature of criticifm is feldom awakened by anonymous writings, and the venal pens of party lofe half their gall when the object of it is not perfoually and directly in queftion.

But there are fituations, in which, not only general affert feems to juftify a man in fpeaking of himfelf, but in which alfo no little confideration ought to be admitted to the mind. Such will be the cafe, if I am not deceived, when the interefts of the public are blended with those of the individual; and when his very errors may ferve as influction to others. Misfortunes which awaken fentibility will be a further, and a perfuasive call, upon the attention of the public; and it will amount to a claim upon their juftice, if he can fhew that he has been injurioufly treated.

Upon maturely weighing thefe and feveral other circumftances, after I had been denied a professional examination of my conduct, and disappointed of a parliamentary one, I determined to lay before the public a state of the expedition from Canada, in 1777, in my own name. And my first design was to do it under the title, and with the latitude of Memoirs; as a mode by which I could best open the principles of my actions, and introduce, with most propriety, collateral characters, incidents, and discussions, as they might occasionally tend to illustrate the main subject.

However, in the last fession of Parliament, the enquiry which had not been agreed to the year before, took place. I had preffed it, and I entered into it under all the difadvantages which attend a struggle with power, and the the prejudice that power can raife againft the perfons it means to defiroy. The utmost that power could do was done; the Paliament was prorogued pending the proceedings. But though by this contrivance, a final and formal adjudication by that august affembly was avoided, their minutes stand a facred record of truth and justice, and the most fatisfactory reliance to which my wishes could aspire, in offering my actions to the judgment of my country at large.

From that time, therefore, I refolved to publifh, inftead of Memoirs, the Proceedings precifely as they paffed in Parliament, and to continue my defence by fuch Obfervations and Comments upon the Evidence, as I thould have had a right, and was prepared to make, had the proceedings in the house continued.*

Poffibly in this latter part fome colour of my original defign may remain. The feenes I have been engaged in are uncommon, and it is a natural defire to place them in a full light. The interefts concerned make that defire more urgent; and I dare believe they will be beft guarded by being moft explained.

They next heard my Narrative and Evidence, respecting the conduct of the expedition from Canada. Lord George Germain them opened a defence on his part, and formoned wineffes to fupport it. According to the arrangement made by the committee, Sir William Howe and myfelf were afterwards to be heard in reply; but the proceedings were ended by the prorogation of Parliament before the examination of Lord George's fecond wineffs, Mr. Galloway, was clofed, and there were fixteen or eighteen more upon his lift. The SPEECH of Lieutenant General BURGOVNE, prefatory to his NARRATIVE.

MR. MONTAGU.

BEFORE I enter upon the narrative, which the precedent of your late proceedings authorifes me to lay before you. I think it a duty to the committee, to promife that I shall trouble them with little other matter than fuch as may be necessary to elucidate the transactions of the campaign 1777, in that quarter where I commanded.

I fhall keep in mind, that to explain the caufes of the difafter at Saratoga is the principal point to which all my evidence ought to lead ; but at the fame time, I fhall take confidence in the juffice and benevolence of my hearers, that where argument, in exculpation of the commander can aptly be combined with a faithful reprefentarion of facts, they will not be deemed foreign to the main object under their confideration.

Upon these ideas, though fome introductory explanations are requisite, I shall fupprefs the inclination I at first conceived, of stating my conduct from the time, when, conjointly with my honourable friend who took the lead in this enquiry,* 1 was called to the unfolicited and unwelcome fervice in America: nor will I enume rate the complicated circumftances of private misfortune and ill health under which I purfued it. Prudence, as well as other propriety, is, I confels, confulted in this fuppreffion; for were it feen, that an officer had blended with the refpect due to authority, warm, though difinterefted perfonal attachments; that under a perfualion of the honour and integrity of the king's fervants, he had united to his zeal for the public caufe an intereft in their private credit and ambition; would it not be conceived, that his guilt must have been atrocious, beyond all excuse or palliation, to induce the very men to whom his endeavours, and his faculties, fuch as they were, had been thus devoted, not only completely to defert him, but to preclude him, as far as in them lay, from every means of defence, and if poffible, to ruin him in the opinion of the king, the army, and the country?

An earnest defire to fave, as much as possible, the time of the committee, would alfo diffuade me from recurring to any points previous to my inftructions which have been difcuffed upon former occafions; but I find that great ftrefs is ftill laid to my prejudice upon a paper which found its way to the houfe during my abfence : I mean the private letter to the noble lord, fecretary for the American department, dated ift January, 1777.*

The noble Lord has frequently flated that letter to have flipped inadvertently into the parcel deflined for the houfe, and I give credit in that particular to his affertion ; becaufe,

R * Sir William Howe.

PREFATORY SPEECH.

becaufe, whatever other imprefions he might have found it his intereft to make refpecting me, he certainly would not have thought that the imputation on me which that letter tended to fix, a proper one for bim to put forward : it is a notorious fact, or I would not mention it, that it has been held a reflection upon my character (by the part of the public with whom the noble lord is unpopular) that I addreffed hum as a patron and friend.

This is an imputation to which I must plead guilty; for at the time I wrote that letter, I certainly did hold that noble lord as my friend, and I had acted to deferve he should be fo. The next ill tendency of that paper was, as the noble lord well knows, to imprefs the public with an opinion, that I was endeavouring to fupplant Sir Guy Carleton in the command of the northern army-an action abhorrent to the honour of an officer and the liberality of a gentleman; and of which, thank God, I can prove the falfehood, by irrefragable evidence upon your table, and in a very finall compase. I need only refer to the difpatches to Sir Guy Carleton by his aid de-camp, dated 22d August, 1776,* four months before I came home, to fhew that it was at that time determined, that Sir Guy Carleton should remain in Canada; and that determination was made, as I have been informed, not only upon the political reasoning which appears in that dispatch, but also, upon great law opinions, that he could not, under the commission he then held under the great feal, pals the frontiers of his province. Sir, this confutation was urged by me laft year; and were collateral proof neceffary to my justification upon this subject, I could bring to your bar a tribe of gentlemen, who had imbibed imprefions not very favourable to the military proceedings of Sir Guy Carleton in the campaigne of 1776: I could fhew that I feized numberlefs, indeed I feized every possible occafion to vindicate the judgment, the affiduity, the activity of that highly refpectable officer, carelefs how ill I paid my court, earnest to meet every attack against his fame.

I beg leave also to call the attention of the committee very particularly to one other paper, the date of which is previous to my departure from England : it is entitled, "Thoughts for conducting the War from the Side of Canada, by Lieutenant "General Burgoyne."* Sir, it will be in the recollection of the committee, whether, when the conduct of the war was under confideration laft year in my abfence; it was not underflood, that the plan of the northern expedition was formed upon that paper as produced upon your table? If fo, I must ask the noble lord, why he fuffered that error to prevail? The noble lord knew, (and it was peculiarly his duty to declare it) that the two proposals, the first of turning the expedition eventually towards Connecticut; and the fecond, of embarking the army in the river St. Lawrence, in order to effect a junction with Sir William Howe by fea, in cafe the attempt by land appeared " impracticable, or too hazardous," were crafed while the paper was in his lordship's hands.

Lawattempt e paper From that paper, as it appeared without erafures, naturally arofe the conclution, that the plan I had to execute was completely my own; upon that paper were founded, as naturally, the doubts which have been entertained upon the peremptory tenor of my inftructions. I muft again afk the noble lord, upon what principle of juffice he fuffered those impressions to exist in this house? Why, in a debate in which he took a part, did he conceal, that the circumstances in reality were totally different from those upon which gentlemen reasoned; that the different referved in the paper before the house was taken away, and confequently, that my orders were rendered abfolute in the ftrictes fense by his own alterations?

Let any gentleman who has fuppofed I had an implied latitude for my conduct, now compare this circumftance with the wording of the letter to Sir Guy Carleton, dated March 26, 1777, with a copy of which I was furnified, and extracts from which were afterwards the only orders I had to act upon. *

I shall take no particular notice of what is called the faving claufe, in the latter part of the orders, except to give the flatteft contradiction to the supposition that I dictated it-a supposition that I know is not yet abandoned by the men who first suggefted it. I have fpoke to it very fully upon a former occasion; † and I do not wish, when it can be avoided, to enforce or reiterate the charges of duplicity and treachery which muft enfue, if that claufe could be fuppofed to have reference to any conduct previous to my arrival at Albany. The circumstance of forbidding me the latitude in the two particulars I had proposed in my plan, and many other circumstances, clearly indicating the decided intentions and expectations of the minifters, rendered the fenfe of the whole order taken together clear and diffinct, and shewed that the claufe which is pretended to have left me a difcretion as to my main object, had no fort of relation to that object. That claufe evidently related not to my forcing my. way, or not forcing it, to Albany, the place of my deftination, but to fuch collateral and eventual operations as might be adviseable in the course of my march. It related to the making impression upon the rebels, and bringing them to obedience, in such manner as exigencies might require, and in my judgment might feem most proper, previous to receiving orders from Sir William Howe, " of my junction with whom I was never to lofe view."

Notwithstanding there has been fo much difcuffion in debate and print upon the interpretation of abfolute orders, the committee, I am confident, will abfolve me, though, at the expence of a few moments more, I fhould continue a fubject upon which the merit or blame of the future proceedings in great measure refts.

I do not admit the polition, that there can be no cafe in which an officer acting at a diftance is bound at every hazard to purfue orders, that appear abfolute and decifive.

PREFATORY SPEECH.

It is easy to conceive circumilances, which might juffify a flate in hazarding an army, for the fake of facilitating great and decifive objects. Gentlemen, convertant in military hiftory, will recollect many examples of this principle: upon a former occafion, I flated a fuppofed cafe;* and I now entreat leave to add a real example of peremptory orders, which happened in the courfe of my own fervice. I have ever retained the imprefilon, that the circumflance I am going to relate, made upon my mind at the time; and to those few who may flill think, that in any part of my conduct, I rafhly rifked my peace, my interest or my fame, to forward the wishes of others, this preposite flion may in fome measure account for, and excuse my imprudence.

In the campaign of 1762, in Portugal, the Count La Lippe, a name, which, if it finds a due hiftorian, will ftand among the first in military fame, was placed at the head of about 6000 British troops, and a Portuguese army, the greater part of which was little better than nominal, to defend an extensive frontier against the whole force of Spain, and a large body of the veteran troops of France. The favation of Fortugal depended folely on the capacity of that great man, which united the deepest political reasoning with exquisite military address.

I had the honour to be entrusted with the defence of the most important pass upon the Tagus, and my orders were peremptory to maintain it against any numbers, and to the last man.

A felect corps of the enemy, greatly fuperior to mine, were encamped within fight on the other fide the river, and our advanced pofts were within half mulquet flot.

In this fituation, I received intelligence from Count La Lippe, of a defign of the enemy to pafs the Tagus in force, about fix miles above me, and to take pofferfion of the open country in my rear, with a large corps of cavalry, by which means all communication, fupply, or fafe retreat, would be cut off.

Together with this intelligence, the Count's letter expressed, "That every delay "to the enemy in getting possed for the pass I guarded, was so material to his "other plans and operations, that it justified a deviation from systematic rules; that, "therefore, after taking timely precautions to secure the retreat of my cavalry, I "must abide the consequence with the infantry; that at the last extremity, I must abandon my cannon, camp, &c. and with such provision as the men could carry " upon

^{*} The cafe ailuded to was put in a former debate, as follows: fuppofe the Britifh army that invaded Britany in 1758, had gain: d a complete victory over the Duke D'Aiguillon; to have marched rapidly towards Paris, abandoning the communication with the fleet, exp fing the army poffibly to great want of provision, and to the impracticability of retreat, would certainly have been a meafure confummately defperate and unjuffiable, it ried upon military fyllem: yet, will any man fay, that if that meafure muft evidently have produced fuch alarm and confution in the heart of France, as to have compelled the recall of her whole force from Germany, or fuch part of it, as would have given uncontrouled fcope to the armies under the King of Proffia and Prince Ferdinand, that the minifter of England would not have been judicious, though at the palpable rifk of the army, as far as capture was concerned, in ordering the general to proceed by the molt wigerout exertions, and to force his way to Paris?

I muft obferve, that when thefe peremptory orders were given, the commander was at a diftance that made all timely communication of circumftances as impoffible, as if the Atlantic had been between us; and I cannot clofe the example without mentioning the concluding part of Count L2 Lippe's letter. " He participated," he faid, " in the feelings with which an officer would be ftruck " for his reputation, in fuffering himfelf to be cut, and reduced to facrifice his camp, " his baggage, and twenty pieces of cannon. But be at eafe," continued that great and generous man, " I will take the meafure entirely upon myfelf, perfevere as I bave " diretted, and be confident of my defence and protettion." This was a faving claufe of a nature very different from those it is the practice in the prefent day to pen; and if any man doubts the quotation, I can bring positive evidence to the truth of it verbatim.

Thus much, Sir, I thought it incumbent upon me to flate in argument againft the polition that has been infifted upon, that no orders can be worded fo peremptorily at a diffance, as not to admit of an implied latitude, in cafe of unforefeen and infurmountable difficulties: but to prevent all future cavil, upon this fubject, I requeft the committee to recollect, what I have again and again repeated; that I by no means put my defence, in paffing the Hudfon's River, folely upon this reafoning. On the contrary, fuppofing for the argument's fake, I fhould concede (which I never have done, nor mean to do) to the noble Lord, and to every other gentleman, all they can defire to affume upon implied latitude in given cafes, I fhould equally prove that no fuch cafe did exift, as would have juffified me upon their own principle, in departing from the letter of the orders under which I acted.

Having thus cleared my way to the time of my leaving England, to take upon me the command of the Northern expedition; I fhall now lay before the committee, a narrative of its progrefs, in as concife and fimple terms, as the nature of the fubject will allow, endeavouring to imitate the perfpicuity of the honourable gentleman who took the lead in this bufinefs, and not without hope of my endeavours producing the fame effect; and that, in the opinion of the houfe, my language, as has been expressed of his, will be deemed the language of truth.

N A R R A T I V E.

NARRA-TIVE. I is my intention, for the more ready comprehension of the whole subject, to divide it into three periods. The first, from my appointment to the command, to the end of my pursuit of the enemy from Ticonderoga; the second, from that time to the passage of the Hudfon's Diver; and the third to the signing the convention.

I left London on the 27th of March, and upon my departure from Plymouth, finding the Albion man of war ready to fail for New-York, I wrote to Sir W. Howe by that conveyance, upon the fubject of my expedition, and the nature of my orders. I arrived at Quebec the 6th of May. Sir Guy Carleton immediately put under my command the troops defined for the expedition, and committed to my management the preparatory arrangements. From thence I wrote a fecond letter to Sir William Howe, wherein I repeated that I was entrufted with the command of the army defined to march from Canada, and that my orders were to force a junction with his excellency.

I expreffed alfo my wifhes, " that a latitude had been left me for a diversion to-" wards Connecticut, but that fuch an idea being out of question, by my orders " being precife to force the junction, it was only mentioned to introduce the idea " ftill refting upon my mind; viz. to give the change to the enemy if I could, and " by every feint in my power to establish a fuspicion, that I still pointed towards " Connecticut."

"But," I repeated, " that under the prefent precifion of my orders, I fhould really " have no view but that of joining him, nor think myfelf juftified by any temp-" tation to delay the moft expeditious means I could find to effect that purpofe."

S.eAppendix No. V. I proceeded to Montreal on the 12th, and as my letters, lately laid before the houfe from that place,* and from Quebec, will fhew the flate of things, I fhould not reft a moment upon this period, were it not to add one more public teftimony, to thofe I am not confcious of having omitted upon any occafion, of the affiduous and cordial manner in which the different fervices were forwarded by Sir Guy Carleton. I fhould think it as difhonourable to feek, as I know it would be impofible to find excufe for any fault of mine in any failure on the part of Sir Guy Carleton, or of any perfons who acted under him, in any matter refpecting the expedition. Had that officer been acting for himfelf, or for his brother, he could not have fhewn more indefatigable zeal than he did, to comply with and expedite my requifitions and defires.

Certain parts of the expected force, neverthelefs, fell fhort. The Canadian troops, flated in the plan at 2000, confifted only of three companies, intended to be 0. too men each, but in reality not amounting to more than 150 upon the whole; nor could they be augmented. The corvées, which are detachments of provincials without arms, to repair roads, convey provifions, or any other temporary employments for the king's fervice, could not be obtained in fufficient number, nor kept to their employments, although Sir Guy Carleton ufed every poffible exertion and encouragement for the purpofe. Drivers for the provifion carts, and other carriages, could not be fully fupplied by the contractor, though no expence was fpared; a circumflance which occafioned much inconvenience afterwards.

To these unavoidable disappointments were added the difficulties occasioned by bad weather, which rendered the roads almost impracticable at the carrying places, and confequently the passage of the batteaux, artillery, and baggage exceedingly dilatory : we had besides a great deal of contrary wind. Notwithstanding all impediments the army assembled between the 17th and 20th of June, at Cumberland Point, upon Lake Champlain.

On the 21ft I held a conference with the Iroquois, Algonchins, Abenekies, and Outawas, Indians, in all about four hundred.

This conference appears in your papers^{*}. It hought at the time that the cordiality of the Indians over the whole continent might be depended upon, and their firftoperations tended to perfuade me into a belief of their utility. The prieft to whom they feemed devoted, and the Britifh officers employed to conduct them, and to whofe controul they engaged to fubmit, gained advantages, and fpread terror without barbarity. The firft party fent out made feveral of the enemy prifoners in the heat of action, and treated them with European humanity.

During the movement of the different corps to this general rendezvous, I wrote a third letter to Sir William Howe. The chief purport of it was to give him "intelli-"gence of my fituation at the time, and of my expectation of being before Ticonderoga "between the 20th and 25th inftant; that I did not apprehend the effective flrength "of the army would amount to above 6500 men; that I meant to apply to Sir. "Guy Carleton to fend a garrifon to Ticonderoga when it fhould be reduced, but "that I was apprehenfive he would not think himfelf authorifed by the King's orders "to comply; that whenever, therefore, I might be able to effect the junction, Sir "William would not expect me to bring near the original number. I repeated my "perfeverance in the idea of giving jealoufy on the fide of Connecticut, and at the "fame time my affurances, that I fhould make no manœuvre that could procraftinate "the great object of a junction."

I ftate thefe different letters to Sir William Howe merely to fhew that my conception of the precifion of my orders was not upon after-thought, and taken up as an excute excule when I found the expedition had failed; but a fixed decided fentiment coeval with my knowledge of my command.

For a further proof of the fame fact, I beg leave to flate an extract from my orders to the army at Crown Point, Ju 20th. The words were thefe.

" The army embarks to-morrow to approach the enemy. The fervices required of this particular expedition are critical and confpicuous. During our progrefs occafions may occur, in which, nor difficulty, nor labour, nor life are to be regarded. "This army muft not retreat." Were it neceffary, I could bring abundant collateral proof to the fame effect, and fhew that the idea of forcing a way to Albany by vigorous exertions against any opposition we might meet, was general and fixt through the whole army.

My proceedings from the time of affembling the army as before deferibed, to the date of my public diffatch from Skenefborough, comprehending the manœuvres which forced the enemy from Ticonderoga, and the actions at Skenefborough, Huberton, and Fort Anne, are related at full in that diffatch.*

It is the lefs neceffary to give the Committee further trouble upon this fubject, becaufe I believe no enemy can be found to arraign my conduct in those days of fuccefs; or if there were one, he could not deprive me of the confolation, that I had his Majefty's full approbation and applaufe, of which it is known to many, I had a very honourable and diffinguished proof.

All theref re that is neceffary before I quit this first period of the campaign, is to give a precise state of the effective strength of the army, at the time it assembled.

In regard to the artillery, I think this the proper place to rectify the mifreprefentations that have prevailed refpecting the quantity employed. It has been flated as far beyond the neceffary proportion for the number of troops, an incumbrance to their mevements, and one caufe of what has been called the flow progrefs of the expedition.

In order to juftify this charge, a view of the whole mass has been prefented to the public without any explanation of its diffinct allotments; and many have been led to believe, that the whole was attached to the army throughout the campaign, and reprefentaated as far e to their xpedition. ted to the been led aign, and fell fell into the enemy's hands at last—The intention of this representation is obvious: the allegation is false.

The facts, as I fhall prove them to the committee, are as follow. The whole original train furnished by Sir Guy Carleton confisted of fixteen heavy twenty-four pounders; ten heavy twelve-pounders; eight medium twelve-pounders; two light twentyfour pounders; one light twelve-pounder; twenty-fix light fix pounders; feventeen light three-pounders; fix eight-inch howitzers; fix five and a half inch howitzers; two thirteen-inch mortars; two ten-inch mortars; fix eight-inch mortars; twelve five and a half-inch mortars; and twenty-four four and two fifth-inch mortars. Of thefe t vo heavy twenty-four pounders were fent on board a ship for the defence of Lake Champlain, and the other fourteen were fent back to St. John's. Of the heavy twelvepounders, fix were left at Ticonderoga, four ditto in the Royal George; four medium twelve-pounders at Fort George; one light twelve-pounder at Ticonderoga; two light fix-pounders at Fort George; four light fix-pounders at St. John's; four light three-pounders at Ticonderoga, five light three-pounders at St. John's, two eightinch howitzers at Fort George; two ditto at St. John's; two five and a half inch howitzers at Fort George; two thirteen-inch mortars in the Royal George; two ten-inch mortars in ditto; four eight-inch mortars in ditto; four five and a half inch mortars at Ticonderoga; four royal mortars in the Royal George; twelve cohorns at Ticonderoga; and eight cohorns in the Royal George.

The field-train therefore that proceeded with the army confifted of four medium twelve-pounders; two light twenty-four pounders; eighteen light fix-pounders; fix light three-pounders; two eight-inch howitzers; four five and a half-inch howitzers; two eight-inch mortars, and four royals.

The carrying the twenty-four pounders (though they were but two) has been fpoken of as an error, and it is neceffary therefore to inform the committee that they were of a conftruction lighter by 800 weight than medium twelves, and to all intents and purpofes field artillery.

This artillery was diffributed as follows.

Frafer's corps, estimated at three battalions.

Ten pieces, viz.

Four light fix-pounders.

Four light three-pounders, conftructed for being occasionally carried on horfeback. Two royal howitzers.

German referve, under Colonel Breyman, estimated at two battalions. Two light fix-pounders.

Two light three-pounders, and ferved by the Heffe Hanau artillery men. The line of British, four battalions

Ç

Germans,

Germans, five battalions. Total, nine battalions.

Three brigades of artillery, of four fix-pounders each; viz. one brigade for each wing, and one for the center.

From hence it appears that to fourteen battalions there were allotted twenty-fix pieces of light artillery. The cuftomary allotment is two pieces per battalion, confequently the proportion of artillery was lefs than upon common fervices.

The forming artillery into brigades, in preference to detaching two guns to each battalion, has been conftantly practified in moft fervices during laft war under the ableft men, and it is productive of many advantages, as the brigades by that means, either tingly or united, fall under the command of a proportionable number of officers. The fervice is carried on with greater regularity, and the effect of the fire becomes much more formidable than when feattered along the front of the line.

This mode of fervice was recommended by Major-general Phillips, and adopted without hefitation by me, my own judgment being confirmed by an officer of his great fkill and experience.

The park artillery confiited of ten pieces, viz.

2 light twenty-four pounders.

4 medium twelve-pounders.

2 eight-inch howitzers.

2 royal howitzers.

I underftood this proportion of field artillery to be the fame as that propoled by Sir Guy Carleton had he commanded; it was the proportion recommended by General Phillips, and I formed my opinion conformably to the fentiments of those refpectable officers upon the following reasons, viz. that artillery was extremely formidable to raw troops; that in a country of pofts it was effentially neceffary againft the beft troops; that it was yet more applicable to the enemy we were to combat, because the mode of defence they invariably adopted, and at which they were beyond all other nations expert, was that of entrenchment covered with ftrong abbatis, againft which the cannon, of the nature of the heavieft above defcribed, and howitzers might often be effectual, when to diflodge them by any other means might be attended with continued and important loss.

In these general ideas of the use of artillery against the rebel forces, I have the happiness to observe, from the papers before you, the concurrence of Sir William Howe, who states fimilar ideas very fully in one of his requisitions to the fecretary of state: but further reasons for not diminiss the proportion of guns of superior calibre to fix-pounders in this train, were, first, their use against block-houses (a species of fortification peculiar to America); fecondly, a probability that gun-boats might be requisite for the security of the water transport, on some parts of the Hudson's

Hudfon's River; but principally the intention of fortifying a camp at Albany, in cafe I fhould reach that place, fhould meet with a fufficiency of provision there, (as I was led to expect) and fhould find it expedient to pais the winter there, without communication with New-York.

With refpect to the quantity of ammunition attached to this artillery, it is to be obferved, that the number of rounds accompanying the light pieces, and which were carried in finall carts, were not more than fufficient for a day's action.

Light fix-pounders	 124 rounds each
Light three-pounders	 300 rounds.
Royal howitzers	 90 rounds.

The different referves of ammunition were chiefly conveyed by water in fcows and batteaux; it certainly would not have been advifable, after a communication with Canacia was at an end, to depend upon precarious fupplies from the fouthward, and therefore it became neceffary (as far as the fervice would allow) to carry forward fuch ftores, as there was every appearance of an abfolute want of, during the courfe of an active campaign.

Had the enemy eftablished themselves in force upon the islands at the mouth of the Mohawk river, or on other ground equally advantageous, to have disputed the passing of that, or of the Hudson's River, or had they even waited an assault in their works at Still-Water, it is probable, that recours must have been had to artillery of the heavier nature; in the latter case especially they must have been used in order to derive any advantage from our seizing a post upon their left flank: I have fince known, that they had iron twelve and nine-pounders mounted upon those works, which were in other respects very formidable.

Add these numbers to the former state of the army, and it will be found, that the regular strength when at the greatest confisted of 7213.

I come now to the fecond period of the campaign, comprehending the transactions from the time the pursuit of the enemy from Ticonderoga ceased, and the corps of Brigadier-general Fraser, and the 9th regiment, rejoined the army, after the respective actions of Huberton and Fort Anne, to the time when the army passed the Hudfon's river to attack the enemy near Still-Water.

It had proved impossible immediately to follow the quick retreat of the enemy farther, from the nature of the country, and the necessity of waiting a fresh supply of Queflion has been made by those who began at this period to arraign my military conduct, whether it would not have been more expedient for the purpole of rapidity, to have fallen back to Ticonderoga, in order to take the convenient route by Lake George, than to have perfevered in the laborious and difficult courfe by land to Fort Edward? My motives for preferring the latter were thefe: I confidered not only the general impreffions which a retrograde motion is apt to make upon the minds both of enemies and friends, but alfo, that the natural conduct of the enemy in that cafe would be to remain at Fort George, as their retreat could not then be cut off, in order to oblige me to open trenches, and confequently to delay me, and in the mean time they would have deftroyed the road from Fort George to Fort Edward. On the other hand, by perfifting to penetrate by the flort cut from Fort Anne, of which I was then mafter, to Fort Edward, though it was attended with great labour, and many alert fituations, the troops were improved in the very effential point of wood fervice; I effectually diflodged the enemy from Fort George without a blow; and feeing me mafter of one communication, they did not think it worth while to deftroy the other.

The great number of boats alfo, which must necessfarily have been employed for the transport of the troops over Lake George, were by this course spared for the transport of the provision, artillery, and ammunition.

The fuccefs anfwered this reafoning in every point; for by the vigilance of Geneneral Phillips, to whom I had committed the important part of forwarding all the neceffaries from Ticonderoga, a great embarkation arrived at Fort George on July 29th. I took poffeffion of the country near Fort Edward on the fame day, and independently of other advantages, I found myfelf much more forward in point of time than I could poffibly have been by the other route.

Another material motive, which could not be known by ftrangers who have reafoned upon this movement, was, that during the time that my army was employed in clearing Wood-Creek and cutting roads, and the corps under Major-general Phillips working to pass the transports over Lake George, I was enabled to detach a large corps to my left, under Major-general Reidefel, and thereby affilt my purpose of giving jealousy to Connecticut, and keeping in check the whole country called the Hampshire Grants.

It was at this time Major-general Reidefel conceived the purpofe of mounting his regiment of dragoons. In the country he traverfed during his detached command, he found the people frightened and fubmiffive. He was industrious and expert in procuring g his and, rt in ring procuring intelligence in parts of the country more remote than Bennington, and entertained no doubt of fucces, were an expedition formed under the command of Lieutenant-colonel Baum.

On the arrival of the army at Fort Edward, the great object of attention was the transports from Fort George. The diffance was about fixteen miles, the roads wanting great repair, the weather unfavourable, the cattle and carriages fearce; part of the latter inconvenience was occasioned by the number of both that were necessfarily detained at Ticonderoga, for the purpose of dragging the boats and the provisions over the carrying places, between Lake Champlain and Lake George; another part of the inconvenience was caused by the unavoidable delays, in bringing the different divisions of horses as they were collected in Canada through the defart, for such most of the country is between St. John's and Ticonderoga.

It was foon found, that in the fituation of the transport fervice at that time, the army could barely be victualled from day to day, and that there was no prospect of eftablishing a magazine in due time for pursuing prefent advantages. The idea of the expedition to Bennington originated upon this difficulty, combined with the intelligence reported by General Reidefel, and with all I had otherwise received.

I knew that Bennington was the great deposit of corn, flour, and flore cattle; that it was guarded only by militia; and every day's account tended to confirm the perfuasion of the loyalty of one defeription of the inhabitants and the panic of the other. Those who knew the country best were the most fanguine in this perfusion.

Had my intelligence been worfe founded, I fhould not have hefitated to try this expedition with fuch troops, and under fuch inftructions as I gave to the commanding officer, for fo great a purpole as that of a fupply fufficient to enable the army to follow at the heels of a broken and difconcerted enemy. The German troops employed were of the beft I had of that nation. The number of British was fmall; but it was the felect light corps of the army, compoled of cholen men from all the regiments, and commanded by Captain Frafer, one of the most diftinguished officers in his line of fervice that ever I met with. The inftructions recommended the utmost caution respecting pofts and lecurity of retreat, attention againft exposing the folid part of the detachment to affront, or committing it in any inftance, without a moral certainty of fuccefs. I touch with tendernefs and with great reluctance points that relate to the dead. My defence compels me to fay, my cautions were not observed, nor the reinforcement advanced with the alacrity I had a right to expect. The men who commanded in both inftances were brave and experienced officers. I have ever imputed their failure partly to delution in refpect to the enemy, and partly to furprife and confequent confusion in the troops.

For further explanation of my motives, and the circumstances attending the conduct of the expedition. They leave to refer the committee to the letter laid before the bould laft year, and more particularly to the private letter laid before the hould lately.*

The fame letter will flew the only refource that remained for proceeding towards Albany, after the difappointment of this expedition, viz. to prefs forward a necellary tupply of provision, and other indifferentiable articles, from Fort George. I thall bring proof to your bar to this point, and I truft I thall thew beyond a doubt, that no poffible exertion was omitted. It is not uncommon for gentlemen, unacquainted with the peculiarities of the country to which I am alluding, to calculate the transport of migazines, by meafuring the diffance upon a map, and then applying the refources of carriage, as practifed in other countries. I requeft permittion to fnew their mittake. The first stage from Fort George to Fort Edward is by land. The distance and the roads were defcribed before. At Fort Edward the Hudion's River becomes navigable for a certain extent, and it is the conflant practice in all transports to refume the water carriage. Were it not, new impediments would arife from hills, worfe roads, and fuch an increafed diftance, as would prevent the cattle returning to Fort George the fame day. About fix miles below Fort Edward lie the falls of Fort Miller, where there is another carrying-place, which, though of no confiderable length, makes it neceffary to unload the boats, to place the contents in carts, and to replace them in fresh boats, at the place the river again admits of navigation. The boats unloaded, return to Fort Edward against a rapid stream.

Upon this flort flate of facts, gentlemen fill judge of our embarrasiments. In the first place, it was necessary to bring for and to Fort Edward fourfcore or a hundred boats, as mere carriage-veffels for the rovifions, each boat made a hard day's work for fix or more horfes, including the return of the borfes. At the next carrying-place, as above deferibed, it was neceffary to place a confiderable relay of horfes to draw over, first, a portion of carriage boats, and afterwards the provision, as it arrived. I have not mentioned the great number of other boats neceffary to be brought forward, to form bridges, to carry baggage and ammunition, and the number of carriages framed to transport the boats themselves at the enfuing carryingplaces, as we fhould proceed to Albany. This will be fhewn in detail at the bar, if the committee chufe to hear it; and I pledge myfelf, it will appear, that the diligence in this fervice was extreme; that it was performed in the most expeditious manner possible, regard being had to our refources, and that no delay was occasioned by the artillery, becaufe the horfes appropriated to it were fupernumerary to those for which we had carts, and the artillery, not already with the army, at laft was all brought up by its own horfes in two days.

On the 13th of September, the flore of provision, amounting to about thirty day's confimption, was completed. I have flated, in my letter to the fecretary of flate, my reafons againft proceeding with lefs quantity. And it is now time to enter upon the confideration of that object, which is held by fome to be conclusive upon the executive part of the campaign, the paffage of the Hudfon's River.

Two errors, refpecting this paffage, though of oppofite and incompatible natures, are fuppoied to have contributed to the ill fuccefs that enfued; the one, the error of delay, the other, that of precipitation. In defence against the first, I refer to my effort at Bennington to procure supplies, and to the impediments, I have just now flated, after that effort failed. Against the latter, I refer to the reasons laid down in my private letter to the fecretary of flate, dated 20th of August. * The flate of things at this important crifis, and my reafoning upon it, are expressed still more at large in my difpatch from Albany; I will now only touch them flortly. On the one hand, my communications were at an end; my retreat was infecure; the enemy was collected in force; they were ftrongly poffed; Colonel St. Leger was retiring from Fort Stanwix. Thefe were difficulties, but none of them informountable. On the other hand, I had diflodged the enemy repeatedly, when before in force, and more ftrongly posted; my army was confeious of having the fuperiority, and eager to advance; I expected co-operation; no letters from Sir William Howe removed that expectation; that to Sir Guy Carleton had never weighed upon my mind, becaufe it was dated early in April, and confequently long before the fecretary of flate's inftructions, which I must have supposed to relate to co-operation, could be received. The let r of 17th July,* mentioned that General's return to my affiftance, fould Washi ton turn his force towards me; indicated, as at Albany; and informed me, that Sir Henry I thought, an expectation of my arri-Clinton was left at New-York, and would act as occurrences might direct. I did not know Sir Henry Clinton's force. I did know, that confiderable reinforcement might be then expected at New-York from England. After all, should co-operation from below fail, the whole force of Colonel St. Leger, and Sir William Johnfon, was to be expected from above, in time to facilitate a retreat, though not in time to affilt my advance. Under these different suggestions, and those that are more copjoufly flated in the difpatch, to which I have referred, I read again my orders (I believe for an hundredth time) and I was decided.

And I am still convinced, that no proof that could have been brought from appearances, intelligence or reafoning, could have justified me to my country, have faved me from the condemnation of my profession, or produced pardon within my own breast, had I not advanced, and tried a battle with the enemy.

I will conclude this fubject, with again afferting upon my honour, what I hope to fupport by evidence, though it is impofible to bring politive proof to a negative, that neither General Frafer, nor General Phillips, ever offered, as has been reported, nor can be fuppofed to have conceived any objection against the paffage of the Hudfon's River.

This

N A R R A T I V E.

This refolution being taken, I truft, the manner of approaching the enemy, when explained by witneffes, will not be difgraceful to me as a foldier. The action, which enfued on the 19th of September, verified my opinion of the valour of my army; and I muft, in truth, acknowledge, a very refpectable fhare of that quality in the army of the enemy. To the general defeription given in my difpatch, it will be fit to add, by evidence, the peculiar merits of the troops in that action. The honour of three Britifh regiments, in continual and clofe fire for four hours, all of them fuffering confiderable lofs, and one remaining with lefs than fixty men, and four or five officers, ought not to lofe its due applaute, becaufe it is faid, their opponents were irregulars and militia.

A victory was at laft obtained, but the clofe of day unavoidably prevented any immediate advantages. On the day following, it was known from priloners and deferters, that the enemy were in a polt ftrongly fortified; but from the thicknefs of the wood, it was impoflible to catch a view of any part of their pofition. All that could be done, therefore, was to take up ground as near them, as the nature of the country would admit with regard to military arrangement. It appears from the difpatch already alluded to, that the army remained in this pofition till the 9th of October, when the fecond action enfued, employed in fortifying their camp, and watching the enemy, whofe numbers it was now known, had been greatly fuperior to ours in the action.

It may here be afked, why, as foon as it became palpable that no use could be made of the victory, I did not retreat?

It will be fhewn, that on the fecond day after the action, I received intelligence from Sir Henry Clinton, of his intention to attack the highlands about that time, and I was hourly in expectation, I thought a juilty founded one, of that measure operating to diflodge Mr. Gates entirely, or to oblige him to detach a large portion of his force. Either of these cafes would probably have opened my way to Albany. In these circumftances, could the preference upon these alternatives admit of a moment's reflection? To wait fo fair a prospect of effecting at last the great purpose of the campaign, or to put a victorious army, under all the difadvantages of a beaten one, by a difficult and difgraceful retreat; relinquishing the long expected cooperation, in the very hour of its promise, and leaving Sir Henry Clinton's army, and probably Sir William Howe's, exposed, with fo much of the feason of the campaign to run, to the whole force of Mr. Gates, after he should have feen me on the other fide of Hudson's River.

Some of the fame confiderations, and other concomitant circumftances, will, in part, ferve to account for my not attacking the enemy during this interval; for in this fituation, as in former ones, my conduct has been arraigned upon opposite principles. The enemy, when action, which of my army; quality in the th, it will be on. The hors, all of them n, and four or cir opponents ces, will, in l ; for in this te principles. The The committee will obferve, that after receiving intelligence of Sir Henry Clinton's defign, different meffengers were difpatched by different routes, to inform that officer of my fituation, and of the time I thought I could continue in it. To have hazarded a repulfe, under fo reafonable an expectation of a powerful diverfion, would, in my opinion, have been very unjuftifiable; but when I add, that from the backwardnefs, or defection, of the few Indians that remained, the numbers of rifle-men, and other irregulars employed on the enemy's out-pofts, and the ftrength and darknefs of the furrounding woods, it had not yet been practicable to gain any competent knowledge of their pofition, I truft every man will go with me in the fentiment, chat all thete circumftances confidered, an attack would have been confummate rafinefs.

Another very powerful reafon, that operated on the fide of delay, was the flate of my fick and wounded. Numbers of the latter were recovering faft; many excellent officers in particular; and the more I delayed the flronger I grew. The time alfo entitled me to expect Lieutenant Colonel St. Leger's corps would be arrived at Ticonderoga, and fecret means had been long concerted to enable him to make an effort to join me, with probability of fuccefs.

Upon mature confideration of these and other circumstances attending this period, come to my knowledge fince, I am clearly of opinion, that had the reinforcements from England arrived in time, to have enabled Sir Henry Clinton to have effected the stroke he afterwards fo gallantly made in the highlands, any time between the two actions, I should have made my way.

The difpatch alluded to, proceeds to flate the reafon that induced me to make the movement on the 7th October. I fhall only add, to obviate a fuppofed error, in not advancing my whole line, that the part remaining in my camp, operated as effectually to keep the enemy's right wing in check, from fupporting their left, as if it had moved, with this additional advantage, that it prevented the danger of their advancing by the plain, near the river, and falling upon my rear.

I have reason to believe my disappointment on that day proceeded from an uncommon circumstance in the conduct of the enemy. Mr. Gates, as I have been informed, had determined to receive the attack in his lines; Mr. Arnold, who commanded on the left, forfeeing the danger of being turned, advanced without confultation with his general, and gave, instead of receiving battle. The stroke might have been fatal on his part had he failed. But confident I am, upon minute examination of the ground since, that had the other idea been purfued, I should in a few hours have gained a pofition, that in spite of the enemy's numbers, would have put them in my power.

Difagreeable as is the neceffity, I muft here again, in justice to my own army, recur to the vigour and obstinacy with which they were fought by the enemy. A more determined perfeverance than they shewed in the attack upon the lines, though they were D. finally  finally repulfed by the corps under Lord Balcarras, I believe, is not in any officer's experience. It will be the bufinels of evidence to prove, that in the part, where Colonel Breyman was killed, and the enemy penetrated, the milchief could not be repaired, nor under it the camp be longer tenable.

The transactions of the enfuing night, the day of the eighth, and the whole progress of the retreat to Saratoga, will be laid before the committee minutely in the courte of my evidence, as well as every circumftance, from the time the army arrived there to the figning the convention. I have only to premife, that, I truft, I shall be able to prove, to the fatisfaction of the committee, that even in this fituation, I had the chance of a favourable event. The enemy had intended to attack by the plain of Saratoga. On the morning of the 1 tth, a confiderable column had actually passed the Fish Kill for that purpose during the fog, which at that feason was regular till fometime after fun rife. The intention was prevented taking place, by intelligence one of their generals received from a deferter, that I had a line formed behind the brufh-wood, to support the poss of artillery, which was their immediate object of attack. The general inftantly retreated his column, and prevented a general action, which my possition, compared with the proposed one of the enemy, gave me reason to hope would have been to my advantage.

I have likewife a fatisfactory confidence, that I fhall demonstrate that the intelligence I stated to the councils of war, respecting the strength of the enemy, did not fall short in any part, and in some parts much exceeded my own belief, particularly on the only possible routes of my retreat; and that those posts were not taken up during my stay at Saratoga, as has been reported, but some of them previous to the action of the 7th, and the rest immediately after it.

I shall close the whole of this by delivering at your table, from the hands of my fecretary, an authenticated return of the force of General Gates, figned by himself, and the truth of it will be supported from ocular testimony, by every officer of the British army. Many of them are now in England, and after what has been infinuated, not to fay charged in this House, it becomes the duty of the accusers, not only to examine closely the officers I have called, but to produce any other witness, that in their thoughts may be qualified to speak to the good or bad order of the rebel troops, when they marched by in their prefence, and to their behaviour, when opposed to our troops in action.

I cannot close this long trefpafs upon the patience of the committee, without expreffing one humble hope, that in forming a judgment upon the whole, or any diffinct part of these transactions, they will be confidered as they must have appeared at the time; for, I believe, where war is concerned, few men in command would stand acquitted,

I fubmit all I have faid, fome of ir, I fear, not iufficiently prepared or arranged, with true refpect to the committee. I fhall not mention all the difadvantages, under which I have preffed this bufinefs upon their attention. I have caufe to regret the abfence of a most confidential friend in Major General Phillips, zealous advocates, I trust, in Major General Reidefel and Brigadier Hamilton. Much of my vindication is in the grave with General Frafer; much with Colonel Ackland your late member. I trust my zeal, in promoting this enquiry, as I have done, will be one mark of the fenfe I bear of the general character of this house; that however men may be biaffed by political attachments upon common occasions, when the honour of an individual is committed to their hands, they will alone be guided by truth and justice. And the next inference I should wish to be drawn, from my earnefinefs for a public appeal, is this ; that however others may impute errors to my conduct, I am myfelf confcious of thre rectitude of my intentions.

Jovis 20° die Maij, 1779.

Committee to confider of the feveral Papers which were prefented to the Houfe by Mr. De Grey, upon the 19th Day of March laft, purfuant to their Address to his Majefly.

Mr. F. Montagu in the Chair.

SIR GUY CARLETON was called in and examined by General Burgoyne as follows :

1. Q. Do you recollect having received a letter from the fecretary of flaté, mentioning the reafons that made it expedient for you to remain in the province of Quebec?

A. Yes, very well.

- 2. Q. What was the date of it ?
 - A. I think the 12th of August, 1776-I am fure it was in August.
- 3. Q. Was not the date of that letter long before the return of General Burgoyne from Canada to Great Britain ?

A. Yes.

4. Q. During the winter, preceding the campaign of 1777, was not the artillery prepared at Montreal for field fervice, upon the fuppolition that you was to command the army beyond the frontiers of the province?

A. It was.

6. Q. Was the proportion allotted to General Burgoyne for field fervice more than was intended, had you to commanded ?

A. I don't precidely recollect that-It does not strike me there was any great difference.

6. Q. Was the quantity of artillery decided on in concert with Major-General Phillips, and on his recommendation?

A. The artillery I had prepared for the campaign, on a supposition I was to go myfelf, was in concert with General Phillips. That department, as well as others, was put under the command of General Burgoyne on his arrival; and, I suppose, he followed the fame method fo far as regarded the artillery.

7. Q. Did General Burgoyne apply to you for troops from Canada to garrilon Ticonderoga when he advanced ?

A. He did.

8. Q. What was the purport of your anfiver?

A. That I did not think myfelf juftified to grant it by my orders-My anfwer will appear more precifely by a copy of my anfwer to General Burgoyne.

Q. Do

Sir G. Carleton.]

Q. Do you recollect that General Burgoyne informed you of the motives on which 9. he proceeded from Skenefborough to Fort Edward by land in preference to the route by Ticonderoga and Lake George?

A. I do.

Q. Did you concut in his fentiments ?

A. I remember my answer was an answer of approbation.

Q. Do you know of any circumftance of General Burgoyne's military conduct, 11. while under your command, that you difapproved ?

A. I had no reafon to difapprove of any part of his conduct while under my com-Withdrew. mand.

Again called in, and examined by other Members of the Committee.

Q. Whether, when you proposed to take that train of artillery with you that you 12. have mentioned, it was with a view to the reduction of the forts at Ticonderoga; or whether you propofed to have taken with you the fame train of artillery in cafe you had marched forward in the country toward Albany?

A. It was with an intention to reduce the forts and lines at Ticonderoga; the train of artillery was calculated for that fervice.

Q. Whether you know what proportion of artillery was carried forward by the ar- 13. By Geo. my under General Burgoyne's command after the reduction of Ticonder on? A. I don't recollect.

Q. Would you not, in cafe you had reduced Ticonderoga and marched forwards 14. towards Albany, have carried with you a train of field artillery ?

A. I probably fhould have taken artillery with me.

Q. Had you forefeen a neceffity of fortifying a camp at Albany, would you not 15. have carried fome guns of the calibre of twelve pounders and light twenty-fours?

A. It is really a very difficult matter off hand to run into all the minute operations of a campaign; every measure of that fort mult have been a matter of confideration and deliberation, and there are a thoufand circumftances that might have determined me upon the fpot—I don't wish to conceal from this House any thing that 1 would have done-but I hope they will confider, that every gentleman may have different ideas of the flate and fituation of the army, as expressed by the question asked, and the leaft inaccuracy of expression on my part may convey ideas very different from what I could wifh-In general, to confiderable a corps as that was, very feldom moves without artiflery, but the precife number muft depend on a variety of circumftances, which the diferetion and judgment of the officer who commands muft determine.

Q. Were not the orders you received from government politive, for General Bur- 16. goyne to march to Albany?

A. The orders have been published I understand-Every gentleman in this House mult be a judge of those orders whether they were policive or not.

Q. Did you not receive a letter, dated the 5th of April, from Sir William Howe, 17. informing you that he could not fende any force to affift the operations of General Burgoyne's army?

A. I received a letter from Sir William Howe relative to his operations, a copy of which was fent to General Burgoyne-I think it was not just in those terms, but a copy of the letter is on the table.

 Q. Whether on that information, you confidered that you had any diferentionary power to detain General Burgoyne after that information ?
 A. Certainly not.

19. Q. Whether in cafe of any difficulty that General Burgoyne might meet with on his march, there was any latitude given to him (General Burgoyne) to retreat?

A. I faid before, that the orders were before the Houfe, who are competent to judge on that point.

Q. Did you yourfelf understand those orders to General Burgoyne to be positive?
 A. That is giving an opinion upon what perhaps may be a question in the House; whereas I have already faid, the House are as competent to judge as I am.

21. Q. Is the Committee to understand from that answer, that you have any objection of giving your opinion on that question ?

A. I have an objection to give an opinion on almost all points.

22. Q. Did you give it in orders to General Burgoyne, in cafe he met with any difficulties during his march in Canada, under your command, not to proceed?

A. I fhould have taken care that General Burgoyne met with no difficulties in his march in Canada ; nor do I well fee how he could.

23. Q. Where do the boundaries of the province of Canada end?

A. Between the Illinois and Point au Fer.

24. Q. Is the fortrefs of Ticonderoga in Canada?

A. No.

25. Q. Did your commiffion, as commander in chief of the troops in the northern division, extend beyond the boundaries of Canada to Ticonderoga?

A. That commiffion as commander in chief, I underftood, did extend fo far; but by the orders already alluded to, or by those which General Burgoyne brought out in the fpring 1777, I underftood that my command was restrained to the limits of the province, and that General Burgoyne was entirely from under my command, as toon as he passed the limits of the province.

26. Q. Did you apply to the fecretary of flate for a reinforcement of 4000 men, as neceffary for the campaign of 1777?

A. I recollect when General Burgoyne was coming home in the fall of 1776, as I was perfectly fatisfied with his conduct in the preceding campaign, I talked over with him, in confidence, what I thought neceflary for the following campaign; among other things I defired him to make a memorandum to demand 4000 men, as a reinforcement for the enfuing campaign, or at leaft for four battalions. I think I have feen those memorandums were accurately stated and laid before the House.

27. Q. What part of that 4000 men which you thought neceffary for the campaign of 1777, was actually fent out to Canada in this year?

1777, was actually fent out to Canada in the year ? A. I do not accurately remember how may—I think a very fmall part—You may have a very precife account from the returns.

28. Q. Of that fmall part fent in 1777, did not a certain proportion arrive very late in the year?

A. Yes, a part arrived late.

Q. After

Q. After you had received your orders from the feeretary of flate, did you appre- 29. hend that General Burgoyne, as long as he was within the province of Canada, was positively under your command?

A. Yes, I did: as long as he was in the province of Canada, I looked on him to be pofitively under my command; but the load of the expedition being on his fhoulders, I thought it proper that he, in all things fhould direct; and therefore I gave out immediate orders, that not only the troops he was to command out of the province, but all the departments neceflary for the affifting his expedition, fhould comply immediately, and without delay, with every requifition and order he fhould give. The reafon of my doing fo was, that no time might be loft. I only required that they fhould report to me what orders they had received from General Burgoyne. I believe those orders are also on the table.

Q. Will you explain to the Committee what you mean by the words, load of the 30. expedition lying on General Burgeyne's shoulders?

A. I had no particular meaning ; they are words I should have used on any expedition of importance.

Q. If General Burgoyne had met with very confiderable difficulties to impede his 31. progrefs within the province of Canada, would you have thought yourfelf juftifiable in giving any orders to General Burgoyne, different from those transmitted to General Burgoyne, through you, from the fecretary of flate?

A. Had there been any difficulties in Canada, I would not have given him up the command.

Q. Having given up the command to General Burgoyne, and having ordered all 32. the troops to obey him, only reporting their proceedings to you, would you after that, have thought yourfelf jufifiable to change the order to General Burgoyne, upon his meeting with great difficulties on the frontiers of the neighbouring provinces?

A. I really did not mean to evade the queftion in the leaft. It did not appear to me poffible that there could be any difficulties. I don't mean to fay there could not, from the nature of the country, be difficulties in the march that might occasion delay, but by the nature of the queftion I understood difficulties from the enemy. In that case I should not have thought myself justifiable in giving up the command.

Q. If you had heard, that on the frontiers, and within the province of Canada, 33. there was the greateft reafon to think, that the refiftance of General Burgoyne's army was fo great as to make it, in your opinion, exceedingly difficult for that General to force his way to Albany, would you think yourfelf jufifiable in giving different orders to General Burgoyne, from those given by the fecretary of state; or would you have thought the fecretary of state's orders for General Burgoyne's army fo peremptory that it would not be proper for you to interfere ?

A. If I underflood the quefiion as it now flands, it is what I would have done, had the province been invaded, or close on the point of being invaded, and the enemy entering the province.

Q. The queftion does not mean an invading army, but a refiftance from the enemy 34to the progrefs of General Burgoyne's army, in the cafe stated in the last queftion?

A. In

Sir G. Carleton,

A. In that cafe, that an enemy should be found (within the limits of my command) I should have ordered all the troops defined for the defence of the province, to have immediately joined those defined for General Burgoyne, and have reaffumed the command of all, until those obstructions had been removed, within the limits of my authority.

35. Q. Suppole no enemy within the province of Canada, but polled in fuch a manner upon the line of communication with Albany, as to make it exceeding difficult for General Burgoyne to obey the orders given to him, would you think yourfelf jullifiable in giving different orders to General Burgoyne, from those given by the fecretary of flate; or would you have thought the fecretary of flate's orders for General Burgoyne's army to peremptory that it would not be proper for you tointerfere?

A. I could not change General Burgoyne's orders one tittle, that was my opinion; he received his orders from the fame power that gave me my authority; when once he patiled the limits of my command, I neither could give him orders, nor would he be juffified in obeying them.

36. Q. Do you mean the latter part of that answer as an answer to a queflion which supposes General Burgoyne within the limits of the province of Canada?

A. No : while he was within the limits of the province of Canada, I would have given General Burgoyne orders in all cafes of difficulty and danger. There being no fuch cafe when General Burgoyne arrived in Canada, in 1777, nor a poffibility of an event of that fort, I put the troops and all things under his command, which concerned his expedition, that he might arrange and combine their motions according to his own plan of operation for the campaign, that no time might be loft by any unneceflary applications to me, which the fluict forms of my command might otherwife require. [Withdrece.

Again called in.

Q. Should you, if you had been in General Burgoyne's fituation, and acting under the orders which you know he received, have thought yourfelf bound to purfue them implicitly, or at liberty to deviate from them ?

A. I thould certainly have thought myfelf bound to have obeyed them to the utmoft of my power; but, to fay as a military man, that in all cafes poffible, I mult have gone on, is a very nice thing to fay indeed; it mult have thrown me, and I fuppole every officer, into a moft unpleafant and anxious fituation, to have debated within himfelf, whether he was or was not to go on. Every man mult decide for himfelf. What I would have done, I really don't know; the particular fituation, and a man's own particular feelings, mult determine the point. If I might be indulged. I would beg leave to fay, that I did not mean to evade any queftion; I meant to anfwer directly; yet queftions may be put to me, of to delicate a nature, and perhaps no man in the world is in a more delicate fituation, with refpect to the prefent cafe in queftion, and the bufinefs of this Committee, than I am; when fuch queftions are put to me, I thall pray the indulgence of the Committee, to be excufed anfwering thems.

them, but I will not evade them. As I now underfland the meaning of the right honourable member in the former queflions to be, Whether I fhould have taken upon me to fuperfede the King's orders, fuppofing I knew of any unfurmountable difficulties in the way, as that I had information of 20,000 men at Ticonderoga, before General Burgoyne left the province of Canada, I fhould have told General Burgoyne my information? But it was General Burgoyne who was to carry the orders into execution, and not me, and therefore it was upon his own judgment be was to determine; I thould have given him my opinion, but I think I had no right to give him orders under those circumflances.

Q. Who was it that made the arrangement and diffribution of the troops that $_{38_{-}}$ were to be left for the defence of Canada, independent of those under the command of General Burgoyne?

A. The orders that are before the Houfe are very full, and I thought very clear. The Committee will fee in those orders the troops that were defined for General Burgoyne's expedition, and the troops that were to remain for the defence of the province.

Q. Who made that diffribution?

A. It came to me from the fecretary of flate.

Q. Did not the orders from the fecretary of flate go to the detail of the fmalleft 40. pofts within the province?

A. The letter is before the Committee.

Queffion repeated.

A. I should beg for the letter to be read; I don't wish to avoid any question, but 41. I wish to be accurate.

Q. Was the diffribution of the troops preferibed to you by the fecretary of flate, or 42. left to your difference?

A. In mentioning the number of troops which were to remain in that province, it was there faid that those troops would be fufficient for garrifoning fuch and fuch places, particularizing them.

Q. Did you ever know an inftance, in your military life, of a minister making a 43. diftribution of troops for the defence of a province, without taking the opinion or leaving a great deal to the difference of the governor of that province, that governor being an acting military officer of very high rank?

A. I never had the honour to correspond with a fecretary of flate till I was appointed to the command of that province.

Q. Whether you was confulted upon the practicability of penetrating from the 44. frontiers of Canada to Albany by force, with the strength allotted to General Burgoyne for that purpose?

A. No; I was not.

Q. Are you acquainted with the paffage from New York to Canada by the Hud- 45. fon's River.

A. I have gone that way.

Q. Have you observed it with a view to military operations?

46.

A. Had I had the honour to have commanded on that fide, I do not know what I should have done myfelf.

49. Q. After you received the letter from Sir William Howe, informing you of hisintended expedition to the fouthward, whether you did expect that Sir William Howe's army could co-operate on the Hudfon's River with the northern army that feafon?

A. I don't know.

50. Q. Whether you thought, after the receipt of that letter, that it was probable there would be a co-operation from the fouthern army?

A. I took it for granted, that Sir William Howe knew what he was about, and would do what he thought beft for the public fervice. I really was fo little informed of all the particular circumflances of his fituation and of the provinces under his command, that I could form no judgment of the propriety or impropriety of his conduct, or of the effects of his measures.

21. Q. Did your information lead you to believe, that the inhabitants between Saratoga and Atbany, were fo well affected to his Majefly and Great Britain, as that there would be much advantage derived from their affiftance to the King's army in the profecution of General Burgovne's expedition?

A. I had frequent accounts from that part of the country, that there were numbers ready to take arms and join the King's troops if they flould penetrate fo far.

22. Q. Do you mean, by penetrating to far, to Albany, or to the length the army. got?

A. The whole extent of the inhabited country, according to the information brought to me.

33. Q. Had you no information that a formidable militia might be raifed in that country to oppose his Majefly's arms?

A. Yes: Thad fuch information.

24. Q. Did you think that the force which General Burgoyne carried with him from, Ticonderoga towards Albany was fufficient to oppose fuch force?

A. Arcally must beg leave to be excused answering that question.

EARL of BALCARRAS called in and examined by General Burgoyne.

Q. IN what flation did your Lordship serve in the campaigns in America, in 1776. 1. and 1777?

A. I commanded the British light infantry.

Q. Was the British light infantry continually attached to the corps under the 2. command of Brigadier General Frafer ?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you occafion to obferve that General Burgoyne and General Frafer lived 3. together in friendship and confidence?

A. Yes, I had.

Q. Had you reafon to believe that General Frafer was confulted by Genaral Bur- 4goyne in all material operations?

A. I had reafon to believe that General Frafer was confulted in many material operations.

Q. Does your Lordfhip know or believe that the proportion of artillery, at- ς . tached to General Frafer's corps through the whole campaign, was according to his requisitions and defires ?

A. I underflood from General Frafer, that the proportion of artillery allotted to him was agreeable to his own requisitions.

Q. Do you recollect the number of killed and wounded in General Frafer's corps, 6. at the affair of Huberton ?

A. I don't recollect exactly; I think it was about 150.

Q. What was your opinion of the behaviour of the enemy on that day?

A. Circumflanced as the enemy was, as an army very hard preffed in their retreat, they certainly behaved with great gallantry.

Q. Was it practicable, the nature of the country, the fatigue of the King's troops, 2. the care of the wounded, and other circumstances confidered, to have purfued the enemy farther after that action ?

10. Q. On what day was the action at Huberton?

A. On the 7th of July.

11. Q. Do you recollect the difficulties of removing the wounded from Huberton to the holpital at Ticonderoga?

A. From the diffance and badnefs of the roads, the difficulties attending the removing of the holpital muft have been very great.

- 12. Q. Was it practicable, unlets the wounded had been left exposed to the enemy, to have rejoined the army fooner?
 - A. It was not.
- 13. Q. Does your Lordship recollect how the army was employed between that time and the march to Fort Edward?

A. The British were employed in opening the country and making roads to Fort Anne; the Germans under General Reidesel were detached about fourteen miles to the left.

14. Q. Do you recollect the post the enemy abandoned upon the ascent from the Low Country to the Pitch Pine Plains, in the march from Fort Anne to Fort Edward?

A. I do recollect fuch a place.

15. Q. Had the enemy maintained their ground on that poft, do you apprehend that a confiderable portion of artillery would have been neceffary to diflodge them?

A. Artillery would certainly have been of great use to diflodge the enemy.

16. Q. Did you ever fee an inflance, during your fervice in America, that the rebels continued twenty-four hours on the fame place without entrenching; and was it not alto their general practice to add abbaties to their entrenchments?

A. The rebels were always indefatigable in fecuring themfelves by entrenchments, and in general they added an abbatis to those entrenchments.

- 17. Q. Do you remember the position the enemy abandoned at Schuyler's Island? A. I do remember to have passed such an post once.
- 18. Q. Does you Lordship think that position could have been forced without a numerous artillery or heavy los?

A. I do not think it could.

19. Q. From the nature of that country, do you think that post could have been turned?

A. Not without greatly rifquing the boats and portable magazines.

- 20. Q. Is it poffible at any time in that country, and with a fmall army, to quit the navigable rivers, without leaving the boats and portable magazines exposed? A. I imagine it is not.
- 21. Q. Did you live in habits of intimacy and communication with General Frafer? A. I did.
- 22. Q. Was General Fraser of a warmth and openness of temper that generally made him communicative of his fentiments, when they differed from the fentiments of those with whom he acted?

Earl of Balcarras.]

A. General Fraser's temper was warm, open, and communicative, but referved in matters of confidence.

Q. Did you ever hear General Frafer express disapprobation of the measure of pas- 23. fing Hudson's River?

A. I never did.

Q. Was not a bridge conftructed of rafts, and fome boats thrown over that 24. river, a little before the time of the attack on Bennington?

A. There was.

Q. Did not General Frafer's corps pais the river by that bridge, and take post on 25. the heights of Saratoga?

A. It did.

Q. Do you remember that bridge being carried away by the torrents and bad 26. weather, whereby the communication was cut off between that corps and the main body of the army?

A. I do.

Q. Was General Frafer's corps recalled after that action, and obliged to repair 27. the river in boats and fcowls?

A. It was.

Q. Do you remember General Frafer expressing his forrow for being obliged to re- 28.. turn back over the Hudson's River ?

A. I remember General Frafer mentioning it with regret.

Q. Had the rear guard of General Fraser's corps been attacked during that paffage over the river, would not a powerful fire of artillery from the opposite shore have been of great use, if not the only means of protecting them?

A. If the enemy had attacked General Frafer, they would have found him in a very bad pofture; it was impoffible to take a better, and, as they could not be fupported by the line, the only means of fafety must have been to get under cover of the fire of our artillery.

Q. Was there not an expectation and impatience of the troops in general to pair 30. Hudion's River, and advance on the enemy?

A. There was.

Q. Was there not a general confidence and alacrity on the occasion? A. There was. 31.

Q. From these circumstances, and your other knowledge of the army, do you not 32. believe that to have made no further attempt on the enemy would have caused difappointment and dejection in the troops, and reflections on the general?

A. The troops were in the highest spirits, and wished to be led on.

Q. Does your Lordthip recollect the march up to the enemy on the morning of 33. the 19th of September?

A. I do.

Q. Was the combination of the march fuch, as, that notwithstanding the paffage of the ravines and the thickness of the woods, the column of General Fraser's march, and that of the British line, led by General Burgoyne, were in a fituation to fupport each other, and speedily to form in line of battle, at the time the enemy began the attack?

A. Aftev

A. After the columns had pailed the ravines, they arrived at their refpective polts with great precision in point of time, and every fortunate circumstance attended the forming of the line.

35. Q How long did that action laft?

A. The British were attacked partially about one o'clock. The action was general at three, and ended at feven o'clock.

36. Q. From the nature of the country, was it polible to differ the enemy's polition or movements, to form any judgment what attacks were in force, and what were feints?

A. I think not.

Q. Did we remain mafters of the field of battle?

37. A. We did

- 38. Q. Had the field of battle been well difputed by the enemy?
 - A. The enemy behaved with great obfinacy and courage.
- 39. Q. Was it too dark to purfue with effect at the time the action ended ? A. It was.
- 40. Q. Did the King's troops take up ground nearer to the enemy, the morning after the action ?
 - A. It was rather nearer to the enemy.
- 41. Q. How near were the out-polls of General Frafer's corps to the out-polls of the enemy from that time to the action of the 7th of October?

A. I fhould imagine within half a mile.

42. Q. From the nature of the country, and the fituation of the enemy's out-pofts, was it poffible to reconnoitre their pofition?

A. From the nature of the country, the difficulties attending reconnoitering must have been very great.

43. Q. Were not the riflemen, and other irregulars, employed by the enemy at out-pofts and on fcouts, an overmatch for the Indian or provincial troops that were with the army at that time?

A. They were.

44. Q. Was not General Frafer's corps continually at work during the interval abovementioned, in fecuring their own pofts, and opening the front to oppofe the enemy?

A. They were.

45. Q. After General Frafer received his wound, on the 7th of October, on whom did the command of his corps devolve?

A. On me.

46. Q. Was you in a fituation on that day, to observe the general disposition of the army, made by General Burgoyne, previous to the action?

A. I remember two redoubts having been erected on the left, to cover the boats and provisions to enable General Burgoyne to make a detachment from his army.

47. Q. Was you in a fituation to observe the disposition made immediately before the attack by the enemy?

A. I only recoilect the fituation of the two battalions of the advanced corps.

Q. After the retreat to the lines, were the lines attacked, and with what de- 48. gree of vigour?

A. The lines were attacked, and with as much fury as the fire of finall arms can admit.

Q. Does your Lordthip remember that part of the lines where you commanded, 49. being vifited by General Burgoyne during the attack?

A. I don't recollect to have feen General Burgoyne.

Q. Was the cannon of great use in the repulse of the enemy in your post? 50. A. Of very great use.

Q. Do you think that post would have been tenable next morning, the enemy 51. having possession of Colonel Briemen's post?

A. I do not think it would.

Q. Would the poffeffion of the poft by the enemy, together with the poffef- 52: fion of Colonel Briemen's pofts, have laid open the flank and rear of the camp of the line?

A. It would.

Q. Was the retreat in the night, and the new difpolition of the whole army made 53,. in good order and without lofs?

A. It was.

Q Did the army remain under arms, and in momentary expectation of battle, 54. the whole of the day of the 8th?

A. It did.

Q. Do you remember the confusion and difficulties attending the line of baggage 55. in the retreat, in the night of the 8th?

A. I do.

Q. Was not the retreat neverthelefs made in good order by the troops, and 56. without lofs?

A. It was.

Q. Does your Lordship remember the weather, the flate of the roads, the flate 57. of the cattle, and the difficulty of passing the Fish Kiln, in the retreat to Saratoga, in the day and night of the 9th?

A. It rained inceffantly, confequently the roads were bad; the cattle were nearly ftarved for want of forage, and the bridge over the Fifh Kill had been deftroyed by the enemy; the troops were obliged to ford the river.

Q. Had there been no enemy to oppose us, or no bridges or roads to repair, would 5° , it have been possible, from the state of the fatigue of the troops, to have continued the march farther immediately after the arrival at Saratoga?

A. The troops were greatly fatigued, and the artillery had been left on the other fide of the Fifh Kill.

Q. Why were they left on the other fide of the Fifh Kill?

A. The bridge had been deftroyed by the enemy , it was exceeding dark, and I do not know whether the ford was pafiable for the artillery without being first examined.

Q. Do you remember the enemy opening a battery on the opposite fide of Hudson's e_{a} , River, and the circumstances attending the opening that battery ?

A. The

61. Q. Does your Lordfhip remember the flot from that battery going over the table when you and leveral officers were at dinner?

A. I did not dine with General Burgoyne that day—I recollect hearing a cannon that had diffeompoted the company at the general's cable.

92. Q. Confequently muft not that battery have commanded the ford over the Hudfon's River?

A. I believe I faid, I did not recollect from what direction the flot came, but they had a battery which commanded that ford.

e.3. Q. Do you recollect on what day you was called, with other commanders of corps, to the first council of war?

A. On the 13th of October.

64. Q. Was there a fpot in the whole position to be found for holding that council, which was not expoled to cannon or rifle-thot?

A. We were not fo fortunate as to find one.

65. Q. Do you recollect that General Burgoyne, after flating to the council the difficulties of the fituation, declare, that nothing flould induce him to propose terms to the enemy without the general concurrence of the generals and field officers of the army, and that he was ready to take the lead in any measure that they should think for the honour of the British arms, or words to that effect ?

A. I remember words to that effect.

66. Q. Was the concurrence unanimous for treating on honourable terms ?

A. I hope I shall stand justified with the members of that council, when I have the honour to declare to this House, that our situation appeared to them so decided as not to admit of one differing voice.

67. Q. When Colonel Kingfton brought back the first proposition, wherein it was specified by Major General Gates, that the army should lay down their arms in their entrenchments and surrender prisoners of war, does your Lordship remember, that General Burgoyne, when he read them to the council, declared, he would not set his hand to those conditions, or words to that effect?

A. I think the words of the propofal from General Gates were, That the British army should be ordered, by word of command from their adjutant general, to lay down their arms in the entrenchments. It was rejected with difdain by General Burgone, and the council concurred in his indignation.

68. Q. Were the counter propolals, penned by General Burgoyne, unanimoufly approved?

A. They were.

69. Q. When those proposals had been agreed to by General Gates, but copies not figned by either party, do you remember General Burgoyne informing the council of intelligence he had received from a fpy in the night, and fubmitting to their confideration, whether it was confistent with public faith, and if fo, expedient to fuspend the execution of the treaty and trust to events?

A. I do remember it.

A. The determination of the council, on the queftion being put, was, that the public faith was bona fide plighted.

Q. Though that was the opinion of the majority, was there not a difference of opi-71. nion in the council?

A. There was.

Q. Were the opinions of the leveral commanding officers afked refpecting the con- 72. dition of their refpective corps, and what might be expected from them feverally in defperate cafes?

A. It was.

Q. Was there not on that queftion also difference of opinion ?

A. There was.

Q. After the Convention took place, did your Lordship fee the army of General 74. Gates pass in review before General Burgoyne and General Phillips ?

A. I did.

Q. From the manner and filence of their march, the order observed in keeping 75. their divisions, and an apparent attention to their officers, did that army appear difciplined?

A. They marched in good order and were filent, and feemed to pay attention to their officers. These are effential points of discipline, but I faw nothing farther of it.

Q. From the general behaviour of the rebel troops in the different actions in which 76. you was prefent in the courfe of the campaign, did you think them difciplined and refpectable troops?

A. When I answered the last question, I spoke to the manœuvre I saw upon the spot. At all times when I was opposed to the rebels, they fought with great courage and obstinacy.

Q. Judging by your eye, and the time the rebel army was marching in review, 77. did you form any judgment of their number?

A. It requires great experience to make a computation of numbers by feeing them pais : as far as I could judge on the occasion, they seemed to me to amount to thirteen or fourteen thousand rank and file under arms.

Q. Has your Lordfhip reason to know or believe, that the troops that passed in re- 78. view were exclusive of those corps that had been posted on the other fide of the Hudson's River?

A. They were exclusive of those corps.

Examined by other Members of the Committee and by General Burgoyne occasionally.

Q. What was the general opinion of the arry of General Burgoyne's behaviour 79. in action and in difficulty ?

A. It appeared to me, that General Burgoyne always poffeffed himfelf in every fituation of danger and difficulty, and, I may venture to fay, it appeared fo to the army.

A. They were.

82. Q. Was the army fatisfied with the general's behaviour at the court martial held on Colonel Henley?

A. He carried on that profecution in perfon, and as fuch they were fatisfied with him.

$3. Q. Did your Lordship ever hear any officer or foldier of that army express any diffatisfaction at the general's returning to England ?

A. I did not.

84. Q Does your Lordship think that the officers of that army wish to have their refpective merits stated to their Sovereign, by the general in perfor who had the honour of commanding them?

A. It was the wifh of that army that General Burgoyne fhould go to Europe, to juftify not only his own conduct, but the conduct of the army he commanded.

85. Q. Does your Lordship apprehend, that the return of General Burgoyne to that army, under perfonal difgrace, and without any distribution of preferment among the distinguished officers of that army, would be any fort of consolation to the troops under captivity ?

A. General Burgoyne, at all times, fhared the dangers and afflictions of that army in common with every foldier; as fuch they looked on him as their friend, and certainly would have received him in perfon, or any accounts of him, with every mark of affection.

86. Q. Your Lordship having faid that if the rebels had maintained their post, at the afcent from the Low Countries to the Pitch Pine Plains, in the march from Fort Anne to Fort Edward, artillery would have been of great use to diflodge them; will your Lordship fay what kind of artillery, of what calibre, would have been necessary for that purpose?

A. Any of the artillery officers now under the order of the House can give a much more fatisfactory answer to that question than I possibly can.

- 87. Q. Did you see that post?
 - A. I think I faid I did fee it.
- 88. Q. With what kind of work was that post fortified ?
 - A. I fpoke of it merely from its fituation.

89. Q. Were there then any works or none?

A. I don't recollect there were any works.

90. Q. If the army, after taking Ticonderoga, had been embarked, and proceeded directly to South Bay, would there have been any occasion to have attacked the post at Pitch Pine Plains at all?

A. The army did proceed by South Bay, excepting a detachment of General Frafer's corps, and fome Germans to fupport him; and the army affembled at Skenefborough on the 9th or 10th of July.

91. Q. Was it neceffary to go to the post at Pitch Pine Plains, in order to go to South Bay?

VIDENCE. Earl of Balcarras.] E

A. There were two routes to Fort Edward. General Burgoyne might ftill go the fame route without any neceffity of attacking that poft, as there might have been many different ways of diflodging the enemy from that post without attacking it.

Q. In how many inftances do you remember the rebels defending their entrench- 93. ments after they had made them?

A. We never got a view of any of their entrenchments but fuch as they had voluntarily abandoned.

Q. Is it then to be underftood that they never defended any entrenchments? A. They never did.

Q. Did you ever hear General Fraser express his approbation of the passing of the 95. Hudion's River ?

A. I never did.

Q. Did you ever hear General Frafer express his approbation of the Bennington 96. expedition?

A. That detachment was made, and the bufine's concluded, before I ever heard of the project or execution.

Q. Have you occasion to know, when the first detachment was fent out under Co- 97. lonel Baume, where they were ordered to rejoin General Burgoyne, after they had performed the fervice they were fent on?

A. I don't know.

Q. Whether, in your Lordship's opinion, after the loss the rebels had futtained over 08. night, in the action of the 19th of September, if they had been attacked brickly at break of day, the next day, there was a probability that they could have flood their ground ?

A. I have not hefitated to give an opinion upon fuppofed matters, which must have been attended with evident and demonstrable confequences; but I beg the indulgence of the House in declining to give any opinion upon any question relative to speculation or judgment. Had any general officer of that army under General Burgoyne been prefent in this country, I should have confined myfelf merely to the manœuvres of the corps I commanded. As there is no general officer here, I with to give this Houle every information confiftent with my rank in the army.

Q. Had you any information that might indicate to you that the rebels were pre- 99. pared to decamp after the action of the 19th of September?

A. I was ignorant of any fuch intelligence being received.

Q. Had you any information of their baggage being packed up?

A. I have already answered, that I had no information at all about it.

Q. In the action of the 7th of October, on which fide did the rebels force our lines 101. and make a lodgement?

A. The lines to the right were stormed and carried.

Q. Were the lines attacked to the left?

A. To the left of that post they were, but not to the left of the army.

Q. Did not the poffettion of Fort Edward, and the country thereabouts, cut off 103. the retreat of any garrifon that might have been in Fort George?

A. It undoubtedly did.

Q. Had the army proceeded to Fort George by Ticonderoga and Lake George, 104. might not the enemy have remained at Fort George till the trenches were opened, and have ftill had their retreat fecure ?

[Earl of Balcarras.

A. That is a matter of opinion upon fpeculation.

105. Q. Do you not think that the British army, being well provided with artillery, was a probable reason for their not defending entrenchments?

A. The reafon they did not defend their entrenchments was, that they always marched out of them and attacked us.

106. Q. Does your Lordfhip think it would have been adviteable, in point of prudence, or just to brave troops, who had fuffered fevere lofs, to attack an enemy the morning after that lofs, posted within entrenchments, which it was impossible to reconnoitre?

A. That attempt was tried on the 7th of October, and did not facceed.

107. Q. Were not the enemy reinforced between the 19th of September and the 7th of October?

A. I think it is likely they were.

108. Q. Were they likely to be in better fpirits to repel an attack the day after they had been repulfed with great lofs, or when they had been reinforced, and feen an army lie three weeks inactive in their camp?

A. I do not judge of the fpirit of the enemy but when I was opposed to them myfelf.

109. Q. On the first day of the action, when the enemy was repulsed on the 19th of September, had not our army fullered very confiderably?

A. They fuffered very confiderable lofs.

110. Q. Was not the army recruised, and in better order, on the 7th of October, than they were on the 20th of September?

A. Numbers of the men who had been wounded and difabled in the action of the 19th, joined their corps on the 7th of October.

- III. Q. Was the behaviour of the enemy, opposed to your Lordship, in the actions you have feen, fuch as to make them contemptible in the eye of a foldier?
 - A. I have already mentioned, that they fought at all times with courage and obfinacy.
- 112. Q. Whether the behaviour of the enemy was fuch as to make advantages obtained by them over his Majefty's troops more humiliating and dilgraceful to the British arms than the fame advantages obtained by an equal number of any other troops?

A. I myfelf felt more humiliation until I confidered that those advantages proceeded from the nature of the country, and not from the want of zeal or bravery in the British troops.

113. Q. Whether the enemy's troops were fuch bad troops as to make it more difgraceful to have an advantage obtained by them over the King's troops than by the like number of any other enemy over a like number of his Majefty's troops in the fame circum-ftances of country?

A. The advantages gained by the rebels over the British troops proceeded from their local situation, and not from the want of courage in the British troops. We were taught by experience that neither their attacks nor refutance was to be defipifed.

E VIDENCE.

O Whether the army under General Burgoyne, in general, expected co-operation 115. in their efforts to go to Albany, from the army under the command of Sir William 11119 2

V. General Burgoyne gave it out in general orders, that he had every reafon to Let ve that powerful armies were acting in co-operation with the army he had the fromour to command. 116.

 \bigcirc . Do you know at what time that order was given out?

A. The adjutant general's books will fnew it: I think it was about the 3d of October.

Q. Does your Lordship believe that if the army under General Howe had co-117. operated up the North River with the army under General Burgoyne, that the army under General Burgoyne would have been obliged to have made the convention it did?

A. That is a matter of judgment. The army looked forward to that co-operation, which they were led to underftand, by the orders General Burgoyne had given out, with pleafure.

Q. What was the general opinion of the officers of the army in which you ferved, 113. on that fubject of co-operation?

A. I do not think my rank in the army entitles me to give my opinion on that fubject; I shall still less prefume to give that of others.

Withdrew.

Then he was called in again, and feveral parts of the examination, particularly that which immediately follows the place where it is faid that his Lordfhip was examined by other members of the Committee, were read, and then the laft queftion which was put to his Lordship immediately before he withdrew, was repeated, with this addition, " To the best of your recollection and information."

A. I have already declined anfwering that queftion.

Q. When did you first know that there was to be no co-operation from General 120. Howe's army, and that Sir William Howe had carried his army to Chefapeak Bay ?

A. I did not know that we were to expect no co-operation, until after the convention was figned.

Q. When did you first hear that Sir William Howe was gone to the fouth- 121. ward?

A. It was reported to in the army about the beginning of the campaign, before we croffed the river.

Q. When was that report first confirmed fo as to make it a matter of belief? 122. A. I never knew it was confirmed at all.

Q. Whether you yourfelf was not furprifed or difappointed, or both, when you 123. first understood that there was not to be any co-operation from Sir William Howe, but that Sir William Howe's army was gone to Chefapeak Bay?

Again called in.

- Q. Whether you yourfelf was furprifed or difappointed, or both, when you 124. first heard that Sir William Howe's army was gone to Chefapeak Bay?
 - A. I neither knew the object of the campaign nor its expectations, and therefore cannot fpeak to any manœuvre of which I could not know the tendency.
- Q. Did the army in general express themselves pleafed at the news of Sir Wil-125. liam Howe's being gone to Chefapeak Bay?

A. The answer to the last question, as it relates to me in particular, relates to them in general.

Q. Whether your Lordship, as a matter of fact, in the confideration you had in 126. the army, on the news of Sir William Howe's being gone to Chefapeak Bay, heard those you conversed with express themselves pleased, or talk of that expedition to Chefapeak, as a powerful co-operation with General Burgoyne?

A. I think that queffion is fully answered in the two preceding ones.

Q. Whether you did not think General Howe's fighting General Washington's grand army, at the battle of Brandywine, was a very capital co-operation with the army under General Burgoyne?

A. I was not at Brandywine.

Q. Whether you was not furprifed when you returned home to this country, to 128. learn that the fecretary of state for the American department, had information from General Howe, of his intentions of going to the fouthward, before General Burgoyne departed from this country, and never communicated that information to General Burgoyne before his departure for Canada?

A. I have the honour to stand before this House as a military man, and not as a politician, and cannot answer any question but those relative to my own profeffion.

Q. What was your Lordship's opinion of the spirit of your own corps? 129.

A. The opinion I gave in the council of war, relative to the fpirit of the corps I commanded was, that they were willing and zealous to undertake any enterprife that General Burgoyne would pleafe to employ them upon.

Q. When advice was received that Sir Henry Clinton was coming up the North 130. River, did you apprehend the treaty of convention had gone fo far that it could not be broken?

A. My opinion was, with respect to that question, that all military negotiations were fair and juftifiable, to make delays and to gain time; I therefore thought and declared my fentiments, that General Burgoyne was at full liberty to break off that treaty in the flage it then was: and I could not conceive that the public faith was engaged, until the treaty an actually figned and exchanged.

Q. Whether the opinion of General Burgoyne, of General Phillips, of Brigadier Hamilton, and feveral other officers, did not coincide with your opinion in all the matters comprised in the last question?

A. As General Burgoyne feems defirous that I fhould answer that question, I declare his fentiments were the fame with those I have now delivered. I hope that the other members of that council, will foon be in a fituation to fland forward and to declare the opinion they gave on that and every other queftion.

Q. When the question relative to the point of public faith was decided, by the 132. majority of the council, was not the concurrence for figning the convention unanimous?

A. It was.

Q. What day was it first known that Sir Henry Clinton had taken the highlands, 133. and was coming up the North River ?

A. In the night of the 16th of October.

Withdrew.

CAPTAIN MONEY called in and examined by General Burgoyne.

Q. WAS not you deputy quarter master general of the army under General Bur- 1. goyne, in 1777?

A. I was.

Q. After Lieutenant Colonel Carleton returned to Canada, was you the fuperior 2. officer in that department?

A. I was.

Q. As fuch, did you make it your business from the beginning of the campaign 3. to get a knowledge of the country ?

A. Whenever there was any occasion to obtain the knowledge of any particular part of the country, a party was always fent with me for that purpose, but the woods were so thick that it was impossible to go without a party.

Q. Was you well acquainted with the country between Skenefborough and Fort 4. Edward?

A. I was.

Q. How long was the army employed in making the roads practicable between 5. Skenefborough and Fort Edward?

A. About fix or feven days in making the road between Skenefborough and Fort Anne, and between Fort Anne and Fort Edward. I do not believe the army was delayed an hour on that account; there was a very good road made by the rebels the year before, between Fort Anne and Fort Edward, in which road the rebels had cut down fome few trees which took the provincials in our army fome few hours to clear.

Q. Does not the possession of the country in the neighbourhood of Fort Ed- 6. ward, necessfarily prevent the remeat of a garrison that might be in. Fort George?

A. It

[Captain Money.]

A. It prevents the getting off any artillery or flores; but a garrifon might get throat a the woods, in cafe we were in the poffettion of the ground in the neighbourhood of 1 out Edward.

2. Q. Didner too gation of Fort George evacuate the fort upon the approach of the Long's troats to and Fort Edward?

A. I heard they did; I was not near enough to fee.

2. Q. Had the arroy taken their route by South Bay, Ticonderoga, and Lake George, how many batcaux do you imagine it would have taken to carry the troops folly over Lobe George, exclusive of provisions and flores?

A. I thin's between three and four hundred, which bateaux mult have been carried up out of Lake Champlain to Lake George.

9. Q. What the would it have taken, as you imagine, to have drawn those batents over the land, between Lake Champlain and Lake George, with the horses then at Ticonddrog (?)

A. 1 suppose a formight—Four hundred bateaux.

15. Q. Though there were no troops paffed over Lake George, how long did it take before the first transport of provisions arrived at Fort George ?

A. I can't recollect precifely.

11. Q. Confidering the length of time it took to transport the provisions, without the troops, over Lake George, was not the army forwarder in their way to Albany, in point of time, by the route they took, than they could have been by the route of Ticonderoga and Lake George?

A. I have already faid, that it would take a fortnight to transport the 400 bateaux from Lake Champlain to Lake George; it therefore would have delayed the army a fortnight longer than they were delayed to have returned from Skenefborough by Ticonderoga, and gone acrofs Lake George.

12. Q. Was you committary of horte, as well as deputy quarter mafter general? A. It was.

13. Q. What is the nature of that department?

A. It was to take charge of all the horfes furnished by contract for General Burgoyne's army, by any letter of inftructions from General Burgoyne. I am directed to give proper orders and directions to the drivers, furnished by that contract, for the purpose of transporting provisions and flores brought to Fort George, for the use of the army.

14. Q. Did you report from time to time to Major General Phillips, and take orders from him, as well as from General Burgoyne ?

A. Yes.

15. Q. Were not the orders from both the generals invariable, precife, and preffing, for using all possible diligence in forwarding the transport of provisions?

A. They were. There was one order which I will read, as it will fully anfwer that queffion: it is dated August the 18th, Duer-Camp, and is in thefe words; "It having been a practice for officers to order to be taken from the provition train, "in the fervice of the King for this army, the carts and horfes, for the carrying "baggage and other purpotes, to avoid for the future the danger and inconve-"niencies to the fervice, it is in the most positive manner ordered, that no cart or "horfe are to be used but for the public transport of the army; nor is any officer, "accidentally

Q. Was not the transport of merchandize, and even futler's flores, as well 16. as of officers' baggage, politively forbid till the transport of provision should be over ?

A. There was fuch an order, and a feizure made of two barrels of Madeira, and two barrels of rum, which were ordered to the hofpital.

Q. Do you recollect General Burgoyne's exprefling, at feveral times, particular 17. anxiety on the fubject of expediting the transport of provisions?

A. I do remember once to have heard General Burgoyne express his concern at our not being able to bring forward a greater quantity of provision to enable him to proceed with the army .-- I do recollect to have heard him fay with very great earneflnefs to General Phillips and Colonel Carleton, that one month's provision at that particular time (it was about the latter end of August) would be worth 100,000l. to Great Britain.

Q. Do you think that the committary of the waggons, and other carriages, 12. was authorifed to buy or hire ox-teams wherever they could be had, and that all draught cattle taken, were appropriated to the transport?

A. I-le received fuch directions.

Q. How many carts and ox-teams could be muffered at any one time ?

A. I think only 180 carts could at any one time be muftered; the number of 19. ox-carts I really forget, but I believe between 20 and 30.

Q. About how many days provision for the troops, and all other perfons fed 20. from the King's flores, could that number of carriages convey?

A. There never was any trial made, but if I may prefume to judge from the proportion brought forward, over and above the daily confumption of the army, fhould fuppofe all those carriages would not carry more than four days provisions at molt. I am fpeaking at random, as no trial was made.

Q. Did it not fometimes happen, from accidents of weather, and roads, and the 21. tired flate of the cattle, that not more than one day's provision could be brought forward in a day?

A. It did.

Captain Moncy.]

Q. How many hours did it take, one hour with another, to draw a bateau 22. from Fort George to Fort Edward?

A. In general about fix.

Q. Was not the unloading the carts at Fort Edward, and embarking the contents 23. in bateaux, unloading the bateaux at the upper falls of Fort Miller, and a fecond time unloading them at the lower falls, dilatory as it was, a more expeditious method than it would have been to have carried the provisions the whole way in carts?

A. I do apprehend it was not possible, in the feeble state I found the horses furnifhed by contract, to have brought forward the daily confumption of provisions for that army down to Fort Miller. In the month of August, in the latter end of that month, at which time I was appointed a commiffary general of horfe, I made, on the

the first of September, a general muster, and found 30 horfes unferviceable, from fatigue and hard labour.

24. Q. Was the transport of provisions at any time impeded by the bringing forward the autility from Fort George?

A. The artillery had a teparate contract for horfes, with which they brought forward their own flores. I don't recollect that any part of the provision train were ever employed in bringing forward artillery or artillery flores.

25. Q. Was it possible, with the means we had, to collect a month's flore of provisional fooner than it was collected?

A. I believe not, without the utter ruin of the horfes furnished by contract for the purpote of transporting flores.

. 6. Q. Was you prefent in the action of the 19th of September?

A. I was.

27. Q. Did the enemy diffute the field that day with obflinacy?

A. They did, and the fire was much heavier than ever 1 faw it any where, unlefs at the affair of Port Anne.

28. Q. Do you know how long the regiments of the British line were under that fire?

A. The three Britith regiments (the 20th, 21fl, and 62d) were engaged from three o'clock in the afternoon till leven in the evening; and whill I was a pritoner I heard the rebel quarter-matter general fay, they had nine different regiments in the field, oppofed to the three British I have named.

29. Q. Do you know the lots the three British regiments fullained?

A. I can't fay.

30. Q. Do you remember the flrength of the 62d regiment when they came out of the action?

A. I can't fpeak to the particular flrength of the regiment when they came out of action; but I heard that they were not too rank and file.

- 31. Q. How many officers were left in that regiment at the end of the action?
 - A. I can't antwer that queffion.
- 32. Q. From the general flate of the three British regiments, do you think that they would have been in a proper condition to have attacked the enemy the next morning ?
 - A. Certainly not; nor to go on any fervice whatever,
- 33. Q. About what time of the day did the enemy finally give way?
 - A. They gave way very often ; finally about feven in the evening.

34. Q. Was it practicable, at that time of the evening, and in that kind of country, to have purfued?

A. 1 thous think not.

- Q. Was you not often employed, between the day of that action and the action of the 7th of October, to reconnecte?
 - A. I was,
- 36. Q. Was you able to obtain a view of the enemy's polition?
 - A. I obtained a view of the polition of the right of the rebel entrenchments.

A. They were poffed on a hill that came very near the river. On the top of the bill was a frong breaft-work, at the toot an abbatis.

Q. Did it appear to you that that wing of the cnemy was attackable?

A. It is a queffion that is fearcely many line of leave c to antwork, but as there are no general officers, nor older officers than myklif, who bayed under General Borgovie, Thope no military man will think me profuming to give my option on that halped. I do think that we could not have attacked the right wing of the robal entrenchments without ritking the lofs of the whole army, and with httle probability of functify.

Q. Could you obtain a view of the left wing of the eventy?

A. I never faw the left wing of the encoy's currenchments till I was taken priforer and conducted through their works.

Q. On the 7th of October was you in a fituation to fee the entiny advancing to the 42attack of your left?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they advance under a well ferved fire of grape flor from our attillery?

A. I was in a futuation that pave me an opportunity of foring the durctions of the relicist columns, and I was very much alterative to hear the thot from the energy H_{2} to thick, after our cannonade had falled a quarter of an hour.

Q. When the Britifh grenadicts were forced fall from their poll, what enford?

A. I did not tee the Britith grenadiers forced back. I taw them on their march, as I apprehended, taking a different polition; at that time leveral of them broke their ranks, but on tome aid du camps calling to them for thame, to continue their rank, they marched away to their flation in good order. A battalion of Bruntwickers that were on the left of the artillery quitted their ground as foon as the firing began, and, to the beft of my recollection. I did not fee they left a man behind them on the ground. I would add, that after fome difficulty that battalion was brought to make a fland in the rear of the artillery, but in no order.

Q. Was not that battalion brought to that fland by the activity and exhortation of 43 Major General Reidefel?

A. I did not tee General Reidefel endeavour to flop the battalion; but I faw an aid du camp of his and a brigade major, with their drawn fwords, keeping them up. I did fee General Reidefel immediately afterwards, on the right of the artillery, with the battalion perfectly formed, and in good order.

Q. Do you imagine that the giving way of the battalion you first deferibed was 44the caute that the artillery on that spot was taken, and yourfelf and Major Williams being made prioners?

A. I believe it contributed, in fome meafure, towards the lofs of the action on that day; but before Sir Francis Clarke died of his wounds, he told me that he received his wound in bringing orders for the artillery and the whole of the detachment to return to camp; and to the circumflance of Sir Francis Clarke's being wounded, I do attribute the lofs of the artillery, if not the lofs of the whole army?

Q. Had you an opportunity, after you was prifoner, to fee the left of the enemy's 45entrenchments? A. I had.

- 46. Q. Was the ground within cannon flot of the left open and commanding it? A. All the ground 1 faw was cleared and entrenched.
- 47. Q Was there not ground within cannon shot that would have commanded that entrenchment on the left?

A. There was.

42. Q Had we gained poficilion of that ground, and been able to erect batteries of our heavieft guns, would not the whole line of the enemy have been enfiladed?

A. The ground alluded to was entrenched, and commanded the whole of the rebel camp and lines. If the army had got possession of that ground, I do not believe the rebels would have flaid one hour in their camp.

49. Q. Did you ever hear, in conversation with the rebel officers, that General Arnold, forefeeing that inconvenience, had marched out of his lines, and attacked, without orders from General Gates ?

A. I did hear that General Arnold had marched out on the 7th of October, without orders from General Gates. I did also hear that he advifed the going out to meet General Burgoyne on his march, and engaging him before he approached their lines; and the reason he gave was this: If General Burgoyne should ever come near enough their lines to be able to make use of his artillery, that he would certainly possible himself of their camp; that their troops in that case would never stand any where; but if, on the other hand, the rebels should be defeated in the woods, the troops would, after that, have confidence in their works, for which reason Arnold advised risking an action in the woods before General Burgoyne came near enough to fee their works.

Examined by other Members of the Committee, and by General Burgoyne occasionally.

50. Q. Did not your fituation, as deputy quarter master general, lead you to mix very much with the different officers of the army?

A. It did.

51. Q. What do you apprehend to have been the general opinion of the officers of General Burgoyne's conduct, as well in action as in the many trying occasions which have been stated by you at the bar?

A. They entertained a very high opinion of General Burgoyne's conduct.

52. Q. Had General Burgoyne the full confidence of the army under his command to the last moment?

A. He certainly had.

- 53. Q. What was the army's opinion of the rebels after their retreat from Ticonderoga?
 - A. The army in general did not think, after they had evacuated Ticonderoga, that they would make a ftand any where.

54. Q. What was the reafon given in your army for the expedition to Bennington?

A. I believe I cannot answer that question better than by reading an abstract of the General's orders the day after that action.

Q. Why did the army remain from the 16th of August to the 13th of September, 55. before they croffed the Hudfon's River to engage the rebels as Stillwater?

Q. To bring forward a fufficient quantity of provisions and artillery, to enable the general to give up his communication.

Q. What was the opinion of the army on their croffing the Hudson's River?

56. A. They did think it was their indifpenfible duty to proceed forward and fight the rebels, which we heard were then at Stillwater.

Q. Did you ever forage to the right of General Frafer's camp before the 7th of 57. Auguft?

A. We never foraged to the right of the camp at Freeman's Farm, at any one time; on the 7th of October, while the troops were in the field, General Frafer ordered all the batmen and drivers, belonging to his brigade, to come and forage in the rear of the troops.

Q. Do you know what was General Fraser's opinion on your foraging to the 58. right?

A. I do know that General Frafer mentioned to me, on the 5th of October, that there was forage on the right of his camp; but at that time the ground on which that forage was to be met with was in polleffion of the rebels' advanced poft.

Q. Do you think your army would have been loft, if even the expedition from 59. New York had taken place a few days fooner?

A. If the troops had arrived at New York foon enough to have enabled Sir Henry Clinton to have made his expedition up the North River a week fooner, I do conceive that our army would not have been loft.

Q. What was the opinion of the rebels on Sir William Howe's going to the 60. fouthward.

A. I was not acquainted enough with the rebel leaders, to hear their opinion on that queftion. I do not think that the peafants of the country were judges of the propriety of Sir William Howe's conduct.

Q. What was the opinion of the officers of General Burgoyne's army, after it 61. was loft, relative to the croffing Hudfon's River.

A. They did think that the alternative of retreating with their army to Canada, or proceeding to Stillwater, under the neceffity of giving up his communication, to be an unfortunate fituation; but I never heard any officers fay that they thought General Burgoyne had done wrong; many faid, that if they had retreated without risking an action, at the time Sir Henry Clinton was coming up the North River, the army would never have forgiven him, nor would he ever have forgiven himfelf.

Q. Was you at New York after the lofs of General Burgoyne's army ?

62. A. Yes.

A. Yes.

63. Q. What was the opinion or the language of the military at that place, relative to Sir William Howe's expedition to Penfylvania?

A. Whatever opinion was formed of Sir William Howe's expedition to Penfylvania, or is formed previous to this enquiry, fuch an opinion must have been illfounded, as Sir William Howe's reafons were not known, nor his inftructions communicated to the public.

64. Q. From your last answer, is the committee to understand that the opinions that were formed respecting Sir William Howe's expedition to Philadelphia, before this enquiry, were not in favour of that expedition?

Queffion objected to.

Withdrete.

Again called in.

65. Q. You have faid that the army thought it their indiffentible duty to pars over Hustion's River—Why did they think that that measure was particularly their inditpentible duty?

A. If the Hudfon's River had not been there, the army would have thought it their indifpenfible duty to have gone and rifked an action before they returned to Canada. If I recollect right, I faid, that if the army had returned to Canada, without fighting, that the army would never have forg; on the general, nor the general have forgiven himfelf.

66. Q. Do you know the nature of the country, between the place where we paffed the Hudfon's River and Albany, on the east fide of the river ?

A. Yes, I do.

67. Q. Could the army have taken that route, in order to pass the river opposite or near to Albany?

A. The army could not have taken that route, as part of the way was a fwamp, and on the right of the rebel entrenchments was a mountain very rugged, and not patiable nearer than two miles from the river

68. Q. Was it not a neceffary confequence then, that the boats must have been abandoned, if the army had taken that route?

A. I think I have faid the army could not take that route; if the army had marched on the east of the Hudson's River, they could not have marched near enough to have covered their provision bateaux from the rebel force, on the west fide of the river.

69. Q. Did the army under General Burgoyne, on their approach to Albany, expect a co-operation of the army under Sir William Howe, upon the North River?

A. They d'd; and this is the order of General Burgoyne, given October the 3d at Freeman's Farm :

" I here is reason to be affured, that other powerful armies are actually in cooperation with these troops ; and although the present supply of provision is ample,

" it is highly defirable, to prepare for any continuance in the field that the King's fervice may require, without the delay of bringing forward further flores for " those purposes; the ration of bread or flour is, for the present, fixed at one " pound."

Q. Are you acquainted with the North River, from New York to Al- 70.

A. I am not.

Q. How many days march from Fort Edward to Albany, if no interruption from 71.

A. I cannot enfwer that queflion, unlefs I am to fuppofe that a bridge was ready formed for the troops to pafs over, on fome part of Hudion's River, between Batten Kill and Fort Edward, or that there were veffels ready to transport the troops over Hudion's River.

Q. Is the diffance fo great between Fort Edward and Albany, that the army 72. could not carry provisions with them to support them during the march?

A. Certainly Albany is not at fo great a diftance from Fort Edward, but that a corps of troops might certainly carry provisions fufficient for the march to Albany.

Q. Was it not understood, that if you had arrived at Albany, that the army 73. would find plenty of provisions there?

A. It was generally believed, and I believe it myfelf firmly, that if the army had got to Albany, we should have found a number of loyal subjects, that would have joined and done every thing in their power to have established the army at that place.

Q. Must not the army, to march from Fort Edward to Albany, have necessarily carried a number of boats to form a bridge to pass the river ?

A. There was no paffing the river well without a bridge of boats, and there were not feouls enough on that river, to make a bridge.

Q. Would not the necessary delay, arising from carrying forward those boats, 75. and throwing a bridge, fit to pass an army, have confumed more time than it was possible for that army to subfiss with such provision as they could carry with them?

A. I fhould think it would.

Q. You will give the committee what information you can, refpecting a road 76. from Fort Edward to Albany, on the left fide of the river.

A. I have answered that fully.

Q. Whether by taking a pretty large circuit, the army would have reached Albany, and avoided the fwamps you mentioned?

A. Certainly not on the east fide of the river, because the enemy being on the opposite shore, would certainly have opposed General Burgoyne's army crossing the Hudson's River at Albany, the river being three times the width it is at Saratoga.

Martis 1º die Junii, 1779.

Mr. F. Montagu in the Chair.

EARL OF HARRINGTON called in and examined by General Burgoyne.

Ι. Q. IN what capacity did your Lordship ferve in America in the campaign 1777 ?

A. I was captain in the 29th regiment of foot, and went on the expedition with General Burgoyne, with the command of the grenadier company; I was afterwards appointed fupernumerary aid du camp to the general.

Q. While acting as captain of the grenadier company, was you at the action 2. of Huberton?

A. I was.

3. Q. What was the behaviour of the enemy on that day?

A. They behaved in the beginning of the action, with a great deal of fpirit; but on the British troops rushing on them with their bayonets, they gave way in great confusion.

Q. From the nature of the country, was it practicable to purfue the enemy fur-4. ther than they were purfued on that occafion?

A. Certainly not.-I think we ran fome rifque even in purfuing them fo far.

Q. At what time of the campaign was it that General Burgoyne requested your 5. Lordship to act as his aid du camp?

A. I think about the 12th of July.

Q. Was you prefent a few days after that time, at a council held with the Indi-6. ans of the remote nations, then just arrived, under the conduct of Major Campbell and Mr. St. Luc?

A. Yes.

7. Q. Was you present at a former council of the Indians held at Lake Champlain ?

A. Yes. 8.

> Q. What was the tenor of General Burgoyne's speeches and injunctions at both those councils respecting the restraint of barbarities?

> A. He abfolutely forbid their fealping, except their dead prifoners, which they infifted on doing, and he held out rewards to them for bringing in prifoners, and enjoined them to treat them well.

Q. Do

of Harrington.

Q. Do you remember being with General Burgoyne, foon after the laft council, 9. upon a vifit to an out poft near Fort Anne?

A. I perfectly recollect it.

Q. Had General Burgoyne a confiderable effort of Indians with him? A. He had.

Q. Did part of that efcort, on a fcout from that post, fall in with and take 11. a part of the enemy, who were laid in ambush for the purpose of killing or taking the general, and those who were with him?

A. They did.

Q. What were the fentiments of the captain taken on that occasion respecting 12, his treatment from the Indians?

A. He faid he was treated with much humanity, and I perfectly remember that prifoners brought in on many other occafions by the Indians, declared that they had been ufed with the fame degree of humanity.

Q. Does your Lordthip remember General Burgoyne's receiving at Fort Anne, the 13. news of the murder of Mils M'Rea?

A. I do.

Q. Did General Burgoyne repair immediately to the Indian camp, and call them to 14. council, affilted by Brigadier General Frafer?

A. He did.

Q. What paffed at that council ?

A. General Burgoyne threatened the culprit with death, infifted that he fhould be delivered up; and there were many gentlemen of the army, and I own I was one of the number, who feared that he would put that threat in execution. Motives of policy, I believe alone, prevented him from it; and if he had not pardoned the man, which he did, I believe the total defection of the Indians would have enfued, and the confequences, on their return through Canada, might have been dreadful; not to fpeak of the weight they would have thrown into the oppofite fcale, had they gone over to the enemy, which I rather imagine would have been the cafe.

Q. Do you remember General Burgoyne's reftraining the Indian parties from 16. going out without a British officer or proper conductor, who were to be responfible for their behaviour ?

A. I do.

Q. Do you remember Mr. St. Luc's reporting difcontents amongst the Indians, 17. foon after our arrival at Fort Edward?

A. I do.

Q. How long was that after enforcing the reftraints above mentioned?

A. I can't exactly fay; I fhould imagine about three weeks or a month.

Q. Does your Lordthip recollect General Burgoyne's telling Mr. St. Luc, that 19he had rather lofe every Indian, than connive at their enormities, or using language to that effect?

A. To the beft of my recollection, much the fame exhortation to act with humanity, and much the fame rewards were offered for faving their prifoners.

21. Q. Do you recollect the circumflance of the Indians defiring to return home at that time?

A. I do, perfectly well.

- 22. Q. Do you remember that many quitted the army without leave?
 - A. I do, immediately after the council, and the next morning.
- 23. Q. Was it not the general opinion that the defection of the Indians, then and afterwards, was cauted by the reftraint upon their cruelties and habits of plunder?

A. It was.

24. Q. Had you reafon to believe that the expedition to Bennington was much defired by General Reidefel, and that it was his wifh to have it conducted by Lieu-tenant Colonel Baume?

A. It was always imagined in the army, that it was his wifh, and that Colonel Baume was appointed to the command of it in compliment to him.

25. Q. Did you know the corps of British, commanded by Captain Fraser, which made part of that expedition?

A. They were volunteers from the British regiments, and also stood very high in the opinion of the army, from their gallant behaviour on all occasions.

26. Q. Do you remember General Burgoyne's vifiting the detachment after it was affembled, and conferring with Colonel Baume?

A. I do.

27. Q. Did Colonel Baume appear fatisfied with the ftrength of his corps ?

A. I converted with Colonel Baume, and with feveral officers under his command, and they appeared perfectly fatisfied, at leaft I heard no complaint from them; the only anxiety they expressed was, left the defination of that corps should become known to the enemy.

28. Q. Does your Lordship remember General Burgoyne's receiving, in the night, a letter from Lieutenant Colonel Baume, expressing he found the enemy in greater force than he expected ?

A. I do.

29. Q. Do you remember Sir Francis Clarke, General Burgoyne's aid du camp, being fent with orders to Colonel Breyman to march immediately to fupport him?

A. I do.

30. Q. Did you communicate the fame order to General Reidefel at the fame time?

A. I did.

- 31. Q. Was Colonel Breyman the nearest corps for the purpose of that support? A. It was.

A. I was often with General Frafer, and he frequently talked without referve upon matters which he was not particularly bound to conceal. There were certain matters of intelligence which it would have been improper for him to men ion to any body. In this cafe I cannot boaft fo much of his confidence, as to fuppole that he would have opened his mind to me on matters which he would have concealed from the reft of his friends.

Q. Have you not frequently been prefent when General Burgoyne and General 33. Frafer difcuffed the object of the campaign, and converfed freely on the circumtlances of the time?

A. I have.

Earl of Harrington.]

Q. Did your Lordship ever, in prefence or absence of General Burgoyne, hear Ge-34. neral Frafer exprets a difapprobation of paffing the Hudfon's River ?

A. | never did ?

Q. Do you know or believe that the idea of forcing our way to Albany was pre- 35. valent throughout the army ?

A. In every conversation I had with different officers of the army, I never remember once to have heard it doubted, but that we were to force our way.

Q. Did the army pass the Hudson's River with alacrity?

36. A. It is impoffible for any army to have been in higher fpirits than they were at that time, or more defirous of coming to an engagement with the enemy.

Q. Do you not conceive, that to have remained posted behind the Hudson's 37. River, at the time the army paffed it and advanced, would have caft a damp on the spirits of that army and a reflection on their General?

A. From the eagerness of the army to advance and the great uneafiness that was differnible through it on every delay, I apprehended that it could not have been otherwife; and I think that General Burgoyne's character would not have flood very high either with the army, this country, or the enemy, had he halted at Fort Edward.

Q. Do you recollect the march up to the enemy on the 19th of Septem- 3². ber ?

A. I do.

Q. Will you pleafe to deferibe it ?

A. The army marched in three divisions; the German line flanking, the artillery and baggage purfued the courfe of the river through the meadows, and formed the left hand division ; the British line marched parallel to it at some distance through the woods, and formed the centre division; General Fraser's corps, with the grenadiers and light infantry of the Germans, were obliged to make a large detour through the woods, and formed the right hand division or column. Beyond this, on the right, there were, as I underftand, flanking parties of light infantry and Provincials ?

Q. Was the country, over which the army paffed, interfected with a deep 40. ravine?

A. It was one of the deepeft I ever faw.

Q. Which column was first attacked?

A. The advanced party, confifting of the picquets of the centre column, being fent H 2 forwards, forwards, under the command of Major Forbes, to explore the way by which that column was to pafs, fell in with a confiderable body of the rebels, poffed in a houfe and behind fences, which they attacked, and after a great deal of fire, the detachment nearly drove in the body of rebels; but on finding that the woods quite round them were filled with the enemy, they were obliged to retire to the main body.

E V I D E N C E. [Earl of Harrington.

42. Q. Was the march to performed that when General Burgoyne formed the line of the British infantry, General Frafer's corps were ready upon their right to support them?

A. General Frafer, on hearing the fire of Major Forbes's party, detached two companies to fupport them, which came up jult after that engagement was over; and on their appearance the enemy finding that our troops were in ftrength, quitted the poll they had before occupied, and, immediately after this, the whole line was formed with the utmoft regularity. I would explain, that when I fpeak of the line, I do not include the left hand column which was composed of Germans, and which did not come into the line or into action till late in the day.

43. Q. How long did the action laft?

A. From three o'clock, I think, till very near eight.

44. Q. How long were the 20th, 21ft, and 62d regiments engaged?

A. During the greatest part of that time.

45. Q. Was the action well disputed by the enemy?

A. It was, very obfinately.

46. Q. Was your Lordthip near the perfon of General Burgoyne during that action, except when you were employed to carry orders?

A. Yes.

47. Q. Were not different attempts made by the General's orders to charge the enemy with bayonets, and did not those attempts fail by the heaviness of the enemy's fire and thickness of the woods?

A. There were many attempts made for that purpole, and they all failed except the laft, when the British troops finally drove them out of the field.

48. Q. When part of the German troops did get into action that day under General Reidefel, how did they behave?

A. I heard their behaviour fpoke of in the higheft terms; they marched up to the enemy with great coolnefs and fleadinefs, and gave them, as I was told, three vollies by word of command from their officers.

49. Q. Can your Lordship speak to the loss sustained by the three British regiments, the 62d in particular?

A. The lofs was very confiderable; but I don't recollect the numbers.

50. Q. Were those three British regiments in a condition to have attacked the enemy the next morning?

A. Their numbers were fo reduced, that I apprehend they were not.

51. Q. From the lofs of killed and wounded, particularly of officers, would it have been defirable to have brought those three regiments into action for the next ten days?

A. In less than ten days the flate of those regiments certainly would not have

Q. Had the army made a movement to gain the left of the enemy's entrench- 52. ments before the red subts were conftructed that commanded the plain near the river, would not all the bateaux, ftores, and hofpitals have been exposed to attack ?

A. It certainly would have been fo.

Q. Do you recollect the fearcity of forage on the weft-fide of the river ? A. I do perfectly.

53.

Q. Would not the bridge of boats, conftructed for the purpose of foraging to 54. the call fide, have also been expoled before the redoubts, above mentioned, were raifed?

A. They certainly would, had it not been for those redoubts and a work called the Tete du pout, which was raifed for the protection of the bridge.

Q. Do you recollect how long it took to raife those redoubts, to throw the bridge, 55. and raife the Tete du pont?

A. If I recolled right, the bridge itfelf was finified in one night; the making and compleating the other works took fome days.

Q. Does your Lordship remember General Burgoyne mentioning to you in 56. confidence, the receipt of a letter from Sir Henry Clinton, and his hourly expectation of his attacking the Highlands, and his opinion that his fuccefs there must diflodge the enemy without attacking their entrenchments?

A. I perfectly recollect the General's mentioning all this to me.

Q. Was you near General Burgoyne in the action of the 7th of October? A. I was.

Q. Do you recollect what orders you carried ?

A. I do.

Q. What were they ?

A. The first orders I recollect to have carried, were to post fifty men under the command of a captain of the 20th regiment, to the left of the detachment of the army, in order, in fome measure, to join them to the advanced works of General Frafer's camp, and, in cafe of any accident, to protect the detachment, fhould they find it neceffary, to retire thither.

The next orders I carried were to Major General Phillips, at the end of the action, acquainting him, that as that detachment feemed much difordered from the enemy having turned both their flanks, that it was neceffary to draw it as foon as poffible back to the camp, which feemed menaced with an attack; the care of this General Burgoyne committed to General Phillips, while he himfelf returned to the camp, in order to take proper measures for its defence. On our return thither the works of the camp were actually attacked as General Burgoyne had forefeen, and I was then employed to collect what troops I should meet, and to order them to those parts where they were most wanted. Soon after this, the enemy having got round the right of our camp, we expected an attack upon our rear, and I then was difpatched with orders from General Burgoyne to Brigadier General Hamilton, for all the works in the 3 the rear of the camp, which had been previously constructed, to be manned with fuch foldiers as he could spare from the defence of the front.

60. Q Does your Lordthip know what orders Sir Francis Ciarke was charged with, at the time he received his wound?

A. I met Sir Francis Clarke as I was fearching for General Phillips, and acquainted him with my orders, telling him at the time time, that as the thicknets of the wood might prevent my finding General Phillips directly, I wished he would affift me, in order that no time might be loft in delivering those orders; that was the laft time I faw Sir Francis Clarke, and I believe that foon afterwards he received the wound of which he died?

I. Q. Was it dark before General Burgoyne had a certainty that Col. Breyman was killed, and his poft carried by the enemy?

A. It was fo dark that the officer, who I believe fifth brought the intelligence of it, feeing a number of men-round the fires of that camp, took them for Germans, and was not convinced of his error till he was fired upon by them, as they proved to be a party of the enemy who had forced the works.

62. Q. Did General Burgoyne use any efforts to rally the Germans who were returning from the action, and to perfuade them to recover Colonel Breyman's poll?

A. He certainly did his utmost endeavours for that purpole, which however were ineffectual from the darkness of the night, and the entire confusion in which they were.

63. Q. Were any other troops at hand that could have been fpared for that purpole?

A. There certainly were not; every regiment was occupied in defence of its own lines which were not certainly overmanned.

- 64. Q. In the heat of the action do you recollect feeing General Reidefel about the time that the Germans, on the left of the British artillery, were giving way? A. I do.
- 65. Q. Was not General Reidefel exerting himfelf to reflore order in his troops?
 - A. General Reidefel appeared to me to have behaved, on that occation, in every way as became a brave and intelligent officer.
- 66. Q. Was the retreat of the army in the night of the 7th made in good order, and a new polition taken by the time it was day-light?
 - A. It certainly was.
- 67. Q. Was the army under arms the whole day of the 8th, and in continual expectation of action ?

A. They were, and indeed were cannonaded during the greatest part of that day, and the advanced corps in particular, who were possed on a hill, were under almost a continual fire from the riflemen of the enemy.

63. Q. Do you recollect the circumstance of General Fraser's funeral on the afternoon of that day?

A. I do, perfectly well; the redoubt in which he was buried was very heavily cannonaded during the ceremony, and even previous to this they fired at those who attended attended the corpfe on its way thither, which I fuppofe was accidental, and proceeded from the enemy's feeing a number of people together.

Q. Who were the chief perfons who attended that funeral?

A. All the generals of the army, their aid du camps, and I believe all those who were not attached to any particular poft, which at that time were very few.

Q. Was the retreat of the army on the night of the 8th, and on the day and part 70. of the night of the 9th, made in good order ?

A. It was made in perfect good order.

Q. What was the weather on the day of the 9th?

A. Exceeding wet.

72. Q. What was the flate of the troops, in point of fatigue, when they arrived at Saratoga ?

A. They certainly must have been much fatigued, from the length of time they had been under arms, and more particularly fo from the badnefs of the roads, occafioned by the rains.

Q. When it was day-light the next morning, did you fee any part of the enemy 73. upon the plain at Saratoga, on the ground where our artillery was afterwards pofted?

A. I don't recollect.

Q. Does your Lordship recollect feeing a corps of the enemy on the other fide the 74. Hudfon's River opposite to Saratoga?

A. Perfectly well; and they feemed in force.

Q. Do you remember the circumftance of a battery opening from that corps? 75.

A. I do perfectly well. The general, General Phillips, and feveral other gentlemen were at dinner. We were all obliged to remove, from finding ourfelves in the range of that battery.

Q. We being in the range of that battery, must it not necessarily have com- 76. manded the ford on the Hudfon's River?

A. It certainly did command that ford.

Q. Do you recollect Lieut. Col. Sutherland being fent with a detachment of 77. regulars and provincials from Saratoga, to cover a party of workmen employed to repair bridges, and render the road practicable?

A. I perfectly recollect it.

Q Do you recollect for what reafon Colonel Sutherland and the regulars were re- 7?. called ?

A. I underftood it was on the apprehension of an action.

Q. Does your Lordship recollect different fcouts bringing reports of the enemy's 79. being in poffellion of the country between Saratoga and Fort Edward, on both fides of the river?

A. I do.

Q. Do you remember General Burgoyne's mentioning, in confidence to you, dif- 80, ferent ideas of forcing the ford over Hudion's River; of cutting away by the enemy's right, and attempting a rapid march to Albany; or by a night march to gain the fords above Fort Edward?

A. I do perfectly remember that he mentioned to me all those ideas.

Q. Did

81. Q. Did you ever hear of an offer made by General Phillips to make his way to Ticonderoga with a body of troops? A. No.

82. Q. In the intimacy in which you lived with Major General Phillips, myfelf, and the officers in General Phillips's family, do you not think you should have heard of such an offer had it been made?

A. I apprehend that I fhould have heard of it.

8.3. Q. Did your Lordship hear of General Phillips offering to attempt an escape through the woods, with one or two guides, for the purpose of putting himself at the head of the troops at Ticonderoga, for the future defence of that place?

A. I heard it mentioned fince I came to England, in fome common converfation; but I never heard it hinted at while I was in America.

84. Q. The day before the council of the generals and field officers was called, can your Lordthip fpeak of the flate of things in general at Saratoga?

A. The flate of our army was certainly as bad as poflible. Their numbers were few, their provisions flort, and their polition not a good one, owing to the nature of the country, which role to the diffance of fome miles, one hill overtopping that which was next to it.

85. Q. Do you know any officer of that army who, in that fituation, thought we had a right to more than honourable terms?

A. Our fituation, in the apprehension of every one there with whom I converfed, did not entitle us to more.

86. Q. Did the army in general look on the terms obtained, namely, the power of ferving their country in other places, to be advantageous as well as honourable, and more than they had a right to expect ?

A. I believe they certainly did; and that few perfons in the army expected fo good terms as those which were granted.

Examined by other Members of the Committee, and by General Burgoyne occasionally.

- 87. Q. Did the Indians leave the army till after the battle of Bennington ?
 - A. Great numbers did, and at many different times.

85. Q. Were not fome Indians on the expedition to Bennington?

A. There were.

- Q. Was the expedition originally fent out to Bennington?
- 89. A. My fituation in the army not entitling me to be in the conneil of war, and not being employed on that expedition, I was of course not entrusted with the orders that were given to Col. Baume.

90. Q. Have you reafon to fuppofe that General Reidelel or Colonel Baume had a particular knowledge of that part of the country, fo as to make it particularly proper to give Colonel Baume the command of that expedition?

A. I believe there was no officer in that army of fufficient rank to have commanded fuch an expedition, who ever had been in that particular part of the country.

Q. The intention of the expedition being, as appears by the papers on the table, 91. to found the difpolition of the people of that country, was that part of the country peopled with Germans, as many other parts of the country are?

A. I can't exactly fpeak to the defeription of the people of that country, as I was never there myfelf; but there were employed on that expedition numbers of provincials, many of whom were of that very country; and I apprehend that the common foldiers of a regular army are not the immediate people who are expected to found the minds of any country to which they are fent.

Q. As your Lordthip mentioned the alacrity with which the army paffed the oz. Huston's River, did the army in general think themfelves at that time inadequate to the purpose of forcing their way to Albany ?

A. The opinions of an army, who cannot be acquainted with the intelligence that has been received, are often erroncous. The army was in high fpirits, and did not, I believe, doubt of reaching Albany.

Q. Did the General then doubt of reaching Albany?

A. I really don't know.

Q. Were the rebels' entrenchments completed on the 19th of September?

A. I never faw the entrenchments at all.

Q. How was our army employed between the 19th of September and the 7th of 95. October?

A. The army itfelf was employed in ftrengthening its polition.

Q. Did it take the army eighteen days to ftrengthen its polition before it made any 96. movement?

A. I can't exactly fay. They were working all the time.

Q. What works were executed in that time?

A. There were numbers of redoubts erected; the tête-du-pont; lines before the camp; outworks to the lines, in which guards and picquets were placed; and batteries, 98.

Q. How many redoubts were crefted?

A. I think in all there must have been five or fix.

Q. Was the crećting those works full employment for eighteen days ?

A. I am not an engineer, or I certainly fhould endeavour to answer that queffion.

Q. Were all those works neceffary, in your opinion, for an army that meant to 100. march forward and attack the enemy?

A. They were neceffary in our particular fituation, being within half a mile of the enemy, to whom we were oppofed, and being inferior in numbers.

Q. Does your Lordship know whether the enemy thought it necessary to fortify 101. themielves with redoubts?

A. I don't know what the fpecies of their fortification was; but I have been always told that great labour had been employed on their works; and what fmall part I faw of them convinced me of it.

Q. Had you not information from deferters or friends what the enemy was 102. doing ?

A. My fituation in that army did not entitle me to receive that intelligence. When any perfon came to me to inform me that he had been employed in gaining fuch intelligence, my duty was to bring him to the General.

103. Q. Was it not a matter of notoriety in the army, that the enemy received reinforcement between the 19th of September and the 7th of October?

A. The manner of receiving intelligence in an army feldom transpires; the army might guess, but I believe they knew nothing.

104. Q. Was it not understood that the rebels had fuffered a much greater loss than the king's troops on the 19th of September ?

A. It was.

105. Q. Was not the whole, or nearly the whole, of the rebel army engaged?

A. I don't know; I apprehend the whole was not engaged.

106. Q. Was our army in general, in your apprehension, in as good a condition on the 20th of September as the rebel army, who had inferred much more?

A. The rebel army was to numerous that their lofs was not equally felt with ours.

107. Q. What number had you reafon to suppose the rebel army confisted of on the 19th of September?

A. I always underflood they were very numerous. I never heard their numbers exactly.

- 108. Q. Was not the fcarcity of forage forefeen by every body?
 - A. Those with whom I conversed did not foresee it to the extent in which we experienced it,
- Q. Was it prudent, in your Lordship's opinion, to bring, or attempt to bring, upwards of fourteen hundred horses to attend the army, in a country so destitute of forage? A. I never heard that the horses in our army were thought too numerous. On all occasions a fearcity of them was complained of.
- 110. Q. Do you know how many hories were allowed for the baggage of each regiment?

A. I don't know.

111. Q. Does your Lordship know how many horses were employed about the train of artillery?

A. I don't recollect; but the returns are on the table.

112. Q. Was the heavy artillery brought back from Stillwater, on the retreat of the army to Saratoga?

A. We had loft fome fmall part of it, and the reft was brought to Saratoga.

Q. Did the bringing back of that artillery delay that retreat or not?

A. An army with cannon certainly cannot march fo rapidly as one without cannon; but cannon always creates a delay which armies have been content to put up with.

114. Q. Was it neceffary, in your opinion, in the fituation in which the army retreated, to make their retreat as expeditious as possible?

A. The army appeared to me that it did make its retreat as expeditious as poffible.

 τ_{15} . Q. Would the leaving of heavy artillery behind, in your opinion, have made a difference of four miles in the march ?

A. I can't conceive that it would. The enemy were in force behind us; not having numbers to contend with them, it would have been a very defperate circum-flance to have abandoned our cannon, in cafe of an attack.

Q. Were the heavy artillery, in effect, of any use in that retreat ? A. I don't recollect as it happened, that they were of any other use than that of their not being turned against us.

Q. Might not those cannon have been spiked, and their trunnious have been 117. knocked off, to have rendered them ufelefs ?

A. I understand that the fpikes in cannon are easily removed, and that it is not an cafy matter, I believe almost an impossibility, with any tools that are carried in an army, to knock off the trunnions of brais cannon.

Q. Might not the retreat have been accelerated by leaving behind a great part of 118. the baggage ?

A. I don't think it would. I do not remember that we were flopt on account of any particular impediment.

Q. Does your Lordship know at what time intelligence was received in General 119. Burgoyne's army of the failure of Colonel St. Leger's expedition?

A. I think it must have been in the month of August.

Q. Was not that before the paffing of Hudfon's River ?

A. I don't recollect the exact date of receiving that intelligence.

Q. Was it in the month of August?

A. I cannot tell. I heard of it fome time after by accident.

Q. Was there any heavy artillery with the army, properly to called ? A There was none of the heavy fort; we had medium twelve-pounders, and two twenty-four pounders, which we took from the enemy at Quebec, which were very much lighter than those twelve-pounders.

Q. From the flate of the fatigue of the troops, when they arrived at Saratoga, 123. do you apprehend they could have continued their march though there had been By Gen, Burno artillery?

A. The army was certainly very much fatigued. I believe they could have got but very little further. They certainly were not in a flate for a long march.

Q. If the battle expected at Saratoga had been on the plain, would not the 124. heavieft artillery we had have been one of our beft dependencies?

A. It certainly would; it would have given us a manifest superiority in that Burgoyne. particular.

Q. If the army had not been provided with the number of horfes they had, by 125. what means would their provisions or bateaux have been transported in places where By General the river was not navigable? Burgoyne.

A. The transportation of the bateaux and provisions could not certainly have been carried on.

Q. Were there not fuch places on the Hudfon's River between Fort Edward 126. and Albany? By General

A. There were.

Burgoyne, Q. 12?. Q. Whether in general you can inform the committee, whether the army had a confidence in the general?

A. They certainly and a confidence in the general, and I do not believe that they have altered their opinion.

129. Q. Did the army then in general, and the officers in particular, entertain a favourable opinion of the general's conduct, capacity, and attachment to them in the various fcenes in which he was engaged, and more particularly on very trying occasions?

A. I don't recollect that any officer, with whom I have had convertation, has ever expressed himself in different terms, and I believe there never was an army more defervedly pleafed with the conduct of their general.

130. Q. Whether the army expressed any diffatisfaction at the general's return home; that is, whether they thought he came with any purposes not friendly to them, or looked on themselves as deferted by him?

A. I was not with the army when General Burgoyne came away; but I have converted with many officers who have come from it, and they express no diffatisfaction on that head, much lefs looked on or confidered General Burgoyne's intentions as inimical to them.

131. Q. What was the flate of the American artillery, and how was it ferved?

A. Except on a few occasions, I do not remember their having made much use of their cannon; I thought on those occasions that they ferved them flowly, but not ill.

- 132. Q. Whether all circumflances confidered at the time of the affair of Saratoga, the retreat of the army was practicable, either with or without artillery? A. I thought it was impracticable.
- 133. Q. Whether after the convention at Saratoga you went to Albany? A. Yes.
- 134. Q. Whether you had any opportunity of observing the nature of the country, if it was fitrong or woody, clear or open?

A. Very firong and woody, and a great number of hills.

- 135. Q. What was the diftance?
 - A. I don't exactly recollect; about thirty-two miles.
- 136. Q. Was the fituation of Albany a ftrong fituation, or was it commanded by hills round it?

A. The fituation of Albany was in a bottom very much commanded.

137. Q. If the army had penetrated to Albany, from whence might they have drawn their fubfiftence, if the country had been againft them?

A. I don't know enough of the country to answer that question.

- 138. Q. Must they not have drawn their subfissence from New York?
 - A. I apprehend fo, if they were not mafters of the Mohawk country.
- 139. Q. Had you any opportunity of observing the extent of clear or cultivated country tound Albany?

Q. Do you think that, circumfanced as the army was after the engagement of 140. the 19th of September, it would have been more advantageous to have returned than to have flayed and fortified the camp?

A. As matters have turned out, it certainly might; but I believe no one thought Wakdrezv. fo at that time.

MAJOR FORBES called in and examined by General Burgoyne.

Q. WAS you major of the 9th regiment, and prefent with that regiment in I. the action near Fort Anne?

A. I was.

Q. What was the behaviour of the enemy on that occafion?

A. At half paft ten in the morning, they attacked us in front with a heavy and well-directed fire; a large body of them paffed the creck on the left, fired from a thick wood across the creek on the left flank of the regiment; they then began to re-ciols the creek, and attack us in the rear: we then found it neceffary to change our ground, to prevent the regiments being furrounded; we took post on the top of a high hill to our right. As foon as we had taken post, the enemy made a very vigorous attack, which continued for upwards of two hours; and they certainly would have forced us, had it not been for fome Indians that arrived and gave the Indian whoop, which we answered with three cheers; the rebels foon after that gave way.

Q. What command had you on the 19th of September ?

A. I commanded the picquets of the British.

Q. Was you attacked on the march, and with what degree of vigour ?

A. I was attacked with great vigour from behind railed fences, and a houfe, by a body or ritlemen and light infantry.

Q. Was you wounded in that affair ? A. Very early in the day.

Q. Do you remember General Burgoyne bringing up the British line to sup- 6. port you, and forming at the first opening of the wood ? A. Î do.

Q. Did General Frafer's corps arrive precifely in time to occupy the heights on 7. the right of the British line when the action began ?

A. It did, and two companies of light infantry came to my support.

Q. Where did General Burgoyne poft the 9th regiment?

8,. A. As were drawn off at a finall diftance from the left of General Frafer's corps, with orders to occupy two houfes, one company in each, and defend them to the laft extremity.

9. Q. Had you an opportunity in that fituation to observe the stress of the action?

A. I had while we remained in that polition.

10. Q. What was the progress of it?

A. The twenty-first and fixty-fecond regiments were drawn up on our left, and were attacked about three o'clock on the fame ground where the picquets had been attacked. About that time 1 heard a great deal of firing to my right with the advanced corps; an officer came up to General Burgoyne, and acquainted him that the enemy were endeavouring to turn the left of the fixty-fecond regiment, on which he dispatched an aid-de-camp with orders to the twentieth regiment to form on the left of the fixty-fecond; immediately after, fome companies of the light infantry came to occupy the ground the ninth were drawn up on; the ninth were then ordered behind a deep ravine, to form a corps-dereferve I faw nothing of the action after that.

11. Q. What was the firength of the ninth regiment on that day before they fuftained any lofs?

A. On the 15th of the month the weekly return was given in, and, to the best of my recollection, they were two hundred and fifty and odd rank and file fit for duty.

12. Q. What was the firength of the other regiments in the British line?

A. I cannot fpeak with any certainty, as I did not fee the returns; but on talking with different commanding officers: the four British regiments were about one thousand one hundred, and the advanced corps about one thousand two hundred.

13. Q. Where was the twenty-fourth regiment?

A. With the advanced corps.

14. Q. Where was the forty-feventh regiment?

A. Six companies of the forty-feventh regiment that were with that army, were employed as a guard to the bateaux and provisions, and two with the advanced corps.

15. Q. Where were the other two companies of that regiment left?

A. One at Fort George, and another on an ifland in Lake George.

16. Q. Of the eleven hundred which composed the line on that day, do you know how many were loft and difabled in the action?

A. I have heard the furgeon of the hospital fay, that there were more than five hundred of the whole in the hospital, but I can't speak to how many of the line.

17. Q. Can you fay how many were killed?

A. I can't.

Q. Were the British troops in a condition to have attacked an enemy in in- 19. trenchments after the action?

A. After the action of the 19th, I went to the hospital to get my wounds dreffed, and did not join the regiment till the 8th of October ; I can't therefore give an opinion of my own: but I have heard feveral officers fay, they did not think it would have been prudent or right from the lofs they had fuftained the day before.

Q. Did the regiments begin to be encreased in their strength from the recovered 20. men to any confiderable degree in lefs than eight or ten days? A. Not that I know of. I was at the hofpital at the time.

Q. Being in the hospital, had you occasion to know that the regiments were 21. ftronger from the receipt of their recovered men on the 7th of October, than they were at any time between the 19th of September and that day?

A. I know that feveral men were discharged from the hospitals so far recovered as to enable them to do their duty.

Q. At what time did the troops arrive at Saratoga ?

A. About eight o'clock at night on the 9th.

Q. Do you know how long the troops had then been under arms, and without 23. repote or regular refreshment?

A. From the 7th in the morning.

Q. Had they been in action, or in continual expectation of action, during that 24. whole time?

A. I was in the front of the army, and I heard a great deal of firing in the rear, and we confantly expected and looked for an attack.

Q. Did the battery of the enemy on the other fide of the river at Saratoga com- 25. mand the fort on that river?

A. It did.

Q. Was the ground fuch on our fide as would have enabled our artillery to have 26. filenced that battery?

A. It did not appear to me that it could.

Q. Had the paffage of the ford been effected, and the army have proceeded to- 27. wards Fort Edward, on the east fide of the river, must they not necessarily have paffed Batten Hill?

A. Undoubtedly.

Q. Do you remember the ford at Batten-Hill ?

A. Yes.

Q. Would it have been possible for the army to have passed that ford without 29. artillery to cover them, and the enemy posted on the other fide?

A. Certainly not. I had an opportunity of feeing the twentieth regiment pafs that ford without an enemy to oppose them, and they took a confiderable time, owing to the depth of the water, the rapidity of the current, and the ftones being remarkable flippery, fo that feveral of them fell into the river.

31. Q. Do you remember whether General Burgoyne flated the difficulties of the time, and that he mentionec his readinefs to undertake any measure they should think for the henour of the British arms?

A. I do remember it.

- 32. Q. Was the council unanimous to treat with the enemy on honourable terms? A. They were,
- 33. Q. When the first terms proposed by General Gates were read to them, were they unanimous to reject them?

A. They were,

34. Q. After it was decided by a majority of the council that the treaty could not be fulfiended without breach of faith, were not the council then unanimous to fign it on that day ?

A. As the majority of the council had given it as their opinion that the public faith was pledged, the council thought that there was no time to be left, and that it ought to be figned immediately.

Examined by other Members of the Committee and by General Burgoyne occafionally.

35. Q. Do you know or apprehend that the rebel camp was completely entrenched on the 19th of September ?

A. I don't know.

36. Q. Had you any reason to believe from information that they completed their entrenchments afterwards ?

A. I underflood they had—I don't fpeak from authority.

37. Q. Had you reafon to think that the rebels received confiderable reinforcements between the 19th of September and the 7th of October?

A. I did not hear that they had.

38. Q. Supposing the rebels to have received reinforcements, could any acceffion of Arength to our army from the recovery of any number you can suppose of the 500 that were in the hospital, be equal to a reinforcement of even 500 men received by the enemy?

A. I cannot take upon me to fay.

39. Q. From being in the hospital yourfelf, how many of the 500 do you judge joined the army?

A. I can't pretend to fay.

40. Q. Do you judge in your own opinion, putting all the circumftances you can together, whether the enemy were more likely to be forced on the 20th of September or a day or two after, than on the 7th of October?

A. It is impossible for me to judge—I did not know their flrength on the 19th of September, or what reinforcements they received before the 7th of October.

Q. Did you apprehend the army might have made their retreat good to Canada immediately after the action of the 19th of September?

A. That depended entirely on circumstances.

Q. Judging from the circumftances you then knew, what is your opinion ?

A. I was not more acquainted with the circumstances of the 19th of September than with those of the 7th of October.

Q. If the army had had three weeks more provisions when they began their retreat, 43. would not that have been a material circumstance to them towards making good their retreat?

A. The army could have defended themfelves longer in their entrenchments at Saratoga if they had had more provisions.

Q. Had you known, immediately after the action of the 19th of September, that 44. a letter had been received from Sir Henry Clinton, mentioning his intention to attack by General the highlands about that time, would you have thought either a retreat or an immediate Burgoyne. attack on the enemy adviscable ?

A. Certainly not.

A. Certainly not. Q. Do you know whether a council of war was called on the 20th of September, 45. By other or immediately after the engagement of the 19th of September ? Members.

A. I don't know that there was.

Q. Did the army in which you ferved, in its approach to Albany, expect a co-ope- 46. ration from Sir William Howe on the North River ?

A. We did.

Q. Do you believe if the army under Sir William Howe, inftead of going 47. by fea up the Chefapeak to Philadelphia, had operated upon the North River to effect a junction with General Burgoyne's army, confidering also the panic that prevailed after the taking of Ticonderoga, that the army under General Burgoyne would have been made priloners?

A. I fhould think not.

Q. Did you expect any great opposition from the rebel army after the taking 4⁸. Ticonderoga ?

A. I did not.

Q. Upon what grounds did you fo politively expect a co-operation with Sir Wil- 49. liam Howe's army

A. From General Burgoyne's orders.

Q. Did you ever fee General Burgoyne's orders ?

A. Every day during the campaign.

Q. By what orders of General Burgoyne did you expect a co-operation?

A. Early in October General Burgoyne gave it out in orders that there were powerful armies of the King's then co-operating with ours.

Q. Did not those orders give spirits to General Burgoyne's army?

A. Situated as our army was, every prospect of reinforcement must certainly give us spirits.

Q. Did you ever hear of any co-operation before those orders of General Burgoyne's 53. in October?

A. It was generally talked of in the army, but not by authority.

Q. Whether, if the operations of Sir Henry Clinton on the North River had taken 5+ place in time, it would not have been looked on as a very advantageous co-operation with General Burgoyne's army ?

- 55. Q. What fituation in general, and particularly with regard to provisions, was General Burgoyne's army in, at the time you mentioned those encouraging hopes of co-operation in his orders?
 - A. The army was put on fhort allowance at that time.
- 56. Q. Whether in military affairs a powerful diversion, if well executed, is not known often to answer very effectually the purposes of co-operation ?

A. Certainly very good effects have accrued from powerful diversions.

57. Q. If there had been a council of war on the 20th of September, or immediately after the engagement of the 19th, fhould you have known of it?

A. I think I mult have heard of it.

58. Q Whether, confidering the circumftances of Sir William Howe's having carried his army to Chefapeak Bay, you fuppoled, or ever heard it fuppoled, that Sir Henry Clincon workd have attempted his operations up the North River fooner than he does on a revious to the arrival of his reinforcement from Europe ?

A. Not knowing Sir Henry Clinton's flrength, or his orders, nor the force the enemy had to oppose him, it is impossible for me to answer that queftion.

59. Q. What effect had it on the fpirits of General Burgoyne's army when they found there was to be no co-operation between that army and the army of Sir William Howe?

A. We never knew but that there was to be a co-operation.

CAPTAIN BLOOMFIELD, of the Artillery, called in, and examined by General Burgoyne.

1. Q. IN what capacity did you ferve in the campaign in America in 1776 and 1777?

A. I was major of brigade of the royal artillery.

2. Q. Was you employed by General Phillips, on your return to England, after the campaign of 1776, to folicit a further fupply of artillery for the fervice of the enfuing campaign?

A. On my leaving General Phillips at St. John's, in the month of November, 1776, I was charged with a letter to Sir Guy Carléton, wherein he recommended it it to make a demand of a further fupply of artillery and flores for the complete equipment of an additional number of gun-boats for the fervice of Lake Champlain in the enfuing campaign, and likewife for the boats themfelves to be fent out in frame-work. Sir Guy Carleton, on perufing the letter, difapproved of the boats being fent out, but approved of the demand of the fores and artillery agreeable to General Phillips's requeft, and they were accordingly fent out in the beginning of the year 1777.

Capt. Bloomfield.]

E V I D E N C E.

Q. At what time did you join the army in the campaign of 1777

A. I joined the army at Ticonderoga on the 23d of July.

Q. Did you live in the family of General Phillips, and had you occafion to 4know his fentiments respecting the artillery department?

A. I did chiefly live with the general, and had frequent occasion to know his fentiments on the subject of the artillery in the course of my duty as brigademajor.

Q. Did you know, or had you reafon to believe, that the proportion of ar- 5. tillery employed that campaign was according to the opinion and recommendation of General Phillips?

A. I can have no doubt but that an officer of General Phillips's rank and extensive experience mult have determined that point.

Q. What was the diffribution of the artillery after the enemy evacuated Ti- 6. conderoga?

A. The light brigade of artillery proceeded with the army by the way of Skenefborough; the park brigade and ftores were conveyed across Lake George in bateaux.

Q. Was not a confiderable portion of artifiery of the heavieft kind either left 7. at St. John's, fent back from Ticonderoga, or difpoled of in vefiels?

A. It was : there were left at Ticonderoga fix heavy twelve-pounders, one light twelve-pounder, four light three-pounders, four royal mortars and twelve cohorns. Left on board the Royal George, two heavy twenty-four-pounders, two thirteen-inch mortars, two ten-inch mortars, four eight-inch mortars, four royal mortars and eight cohorns. Sent back to St. John's in the Radau, fourteen heavy twenty-four-pounders, two eight-inch howitzers. Left at Fort George, four medium twelve-pounders, two light fix-pounders, two eight-inch howitzers, two royal howitzers. With Colonel St. Leger's expedition to Fort Stanwix were fent two light fix-pounders, five light three-pounders, four cohorns. Left at St. John's, four light fix-pounders, five light three-pounders, four cohorn mortars : that was the diffribution of artillery that remained after the army had quitted Fort George. The quantity of artillery brought forward with the army were four medium twelve-pounders, two light twenty-four-pounders, eighteen light fix-pounders, fix light three-pounders, toor eighteen light fix-pounders, fix light three-pounders, two eighteen-inch howitzers, four royal howitzers, two eight-inch mortars, four royal mortars.

Q. Was not that park artillery, the confifting of fome twenty four-pounders 2, and fome twelve pounders, properly field artillery?

A. They certainly were, and have ever been confidered as fuch on all field fervices. Heavy artillery is of a diffinet nature, and confiderably heavler than guns of the fame calibre which we had in the ermy.

9. Q. Have you ever known a lefs proportion than the brigaded artillery, which was attached to the line and to the advanced corps, allotted to the fame number of troops?

A. The proportion of field artillery certainly fhould vary both in quantity and nature according to the variety of circumilances under which the army is to act; the ufual allotment of light field pieces are two to each battalion; and from a calculation of the number and firength of General Burgoyne's army, I do not conceive that our light field artillery exceeded that proportion.

10. Q. What do you apprehend was the proposed use of artillery in the country in which we were to act?

A. To diflodge the enemy from fuch pofts as every where prefent themfelves in that part of the country, and from which it may be impofible to diflodge them without artillery of a more confiderable calibre than light fix-pounders.

11. Q. Do you remember the polition which the enemy evacuated at Schuyler's. Ifland?

A. I do perfectly.

12. Q. Had that position been maintained, would not artillery of the heaviest nature we had have been particularly ferviceable?

A. Provided the post could not have been turned, and the enemy had madeuse of every advantage which the ground gave them, I have no doubt but the park artillery would have been absolutely necessary.

13. Q. Had the paffage of the Hudfon's River, or of Batten Kill been difputed, would artillery of that nature have been ferviceable?

A. Doubtleis it would.

14. Q. Had the enemy taken a polition at the Forks of the Mohawk River, would artillery of that nature have been ferviceable?

A. From the imperfect manner in which I faw that ground, it appeared capable of being made extremely defentible, and, of course, that fort of artillery would have been ferviceable.

15. Q. Had the army reached Albany, and it had been found expedient to fortify a camp there for the winter, would artillery of that nature have been neceffary?

A. There can be no doubt of it.

16. Q. What do you apprehend to be the chief use of howitzers and finall mortars in the field.

A. I apprehend they are of infinite fervice against all kinds of log work, abbaties, and against entrenchments. The small mortars are particularly useful against redoubts and other works where the enemy are confined within a small space.

17. Q. Are not log works a fpecies of fortification peculiar to that country? A. I never faw any elfewhere.

18. Q. Was the carrying forward the artillery from Lake George to the place where the army croffed the Hudfon's River any impediment to the transport of provisions?

A. The transport of our artillery and stores were constantly made by horses attached attached to our department, and therefore I do not conceive it did in any manner interfere with the transport of provisions—I mean to confine myfelf in this answer to the transport from Fort George to the Hudson's River, for after croffing the river we had fome oxen and horse attached to the fervice of the artillery, which I believe were before employed in bringing forward provisions and bateaux.

Capt. Bloomfield.]

Q. What time did it take to bring forward the park artiflery from Fort George 19. to the bridge of boats over the Hudfon's River?

A. The light brigade and the artillery of the park, with their proper proportion of flores and ammunition, had their horfes, carriages, and drivers conflantly attached to them; it therefore required no more time to carry those flores than was neceflary for the carriages themselves to pass from Fort George to the Hudson's River; but with respect to the referve which was afterwards transported by water in bateaux, I believe two days with all our carriages would easily have conveyed them to the Hudson's River.

Q. Do you remember the polition of the King's troops from the time of the 20. attack on the 19th of September to the attack on the 7th of October?

A. Yes.

Q. Had the army made a movement to gain the left of the enemy's en-21. trenchments without previoufly conftructing redoubts on the heights that commanded the plain, would not the bateaux, providens and hofpital have been left open to an attack from the enemy's right ?

A. They would have been left exposed undoubtedly.

Q. Were not the largest guns we had the properest pieces of artillery for those 22. redoubts?

A. I think it was a fervice that was exactaly adapted to them.

Q. Do you remember the difposition made by General Burgoyne on the 7th 23. of October?

A. I do.

Q. At what time was you wounded in that attack?

A. I believe in about twenty minutes after it commenced.

Q. What circumftance of the action did you observe before you was wound- 25. ed, particularly respecting the artillery and the enemy's advancing under the fire of the artillery, and what happened to the troops posted immediately on the left of the artillery?

A. The ground on which the artillery was posted was a clear spot, in a great measure furrounded by woods, the skirts of which on our left was dutant about two hundred yards where the attack first began. The two medium twelvepounders were posted on a small eminence, nearly in the center of this cleared spot between the German picquets and a detachment of the Hesse Hanau regiment. On the enemy's column approaching, the fire of the twelve-pounders and the four fixes was immediately directed towards the enemy's column, notwithstanding which, they drew up along the skirts of the wood behind trees, and after driving in the Germans, kept a pretty warm fire of musketry on the guns and the troops posted about them; foon after this I heard a firing on the right towards towards a cleared fpot, feparated from us by a wood on which the light infantry were polted on very commanding ground. On their retreating, as allo the twentyfourth regiment who was drawn up in the wood on our right, the enemy made their appearance on an eminence on our right, and cut off the retreat of the artillery—At this moment I received my wound, and therefore can give no farther account of the circumflances of that day's action.

Examined by other Members of the Committee.

26. Q. What was the number of horfes in general employed for the artillery after the march from Ticonderoga?

A. The whole number of horfes detached with the Britifh artillery, previous to the patting the Hudton's River, was about four hundred.

27. Q. How many would have been neceffary for the field pieces attached to the battalions only ?

A. Eighteen fix-pounders at four hories each; fix three-pounders at three hories each, and two royal howitzers at three hories each: the remainder were for park artillery, ammunition, and flores of all kinds to accommodate the army on its march.

28. Q. Was the forage for these horses procured in the country on their march, or brought from a distance?

A. A quantity of oats was brought forward from Canada, but with refpect to other forage they were under the neceffity of collecting it in the neighbourhood of the encampment.

29. Q. How many waggons might the bringing on that quantity of oats employ? A. I believe the quantity of oats after paffing Fort Edward was fo triffing that I don't believe it loaded one waggon.

30. Q. After the army arrived at Fort Edward, did any delay or not arife to its forward progress from bringing on the park artillery, waiting for horses and drivers for that purpose, or to provide forage?

A. The park artillery remained at Fort Edward no longer than was neceffary during the time the army remained in that neighbourhood: I do not know of any delay whatever from the want of horfes and drivers. Had the park artillery moved forwards fooner, no end could have been anfwered by it, before the bridge was thrown over the Hudion's River.

31. Q. Were there any gun-boats fent out to Quebec for the campaign 1776? A. There were.

32. Q. Were there a fufficient number fent out, in your opinion?

A. It appeared that the naval force was fuperior to that of the rebels, from the event of that engagement; and therefore I conclude, that for the uses of that campaign there were a fufficient number.

33. Q. Did vou apprehend, before the event of the action on the lakes, that the number was fufficient, and went out in time?

num-A. We A. We had received very exaggerated accounts of the rebel force on the lakes, and therefore uncommon exertions were used to render our force as formidable as possible; and probably fome time was lost, and the campaign in fome degree retarded, from that circumstance.

Q. Would the campaign have been retarded fo long if a greater number of gun- 34. boars had been fent out?

A. Certainly not.

Q. What number of artificers were fent to Canada for the campaign in 1776? 35.

A. I don't immediately recollect the exact number ; but I think Colonel Chriftie engaged about two hundred. I know of no others being fent out.

Q. Do you know of more being asked for by the artillery or engineers, as necessary 36. for the campaign?

A. I did hear of fome fuch intention; but at this diffance of time I cannot particularly answer that queffion.

Q. Whether the number of artificers fent out for that campaign were, in any 37. degree, fufficient for the purpole of carrying it on ?

A. Certainly not. We were under the neceffity of collecting all the artificers that could be met with in Canada for the armament of St. John's on';, most of the bateaux being built by private contract.

Q. Were not the operations of that campaign confiderably retarded, for want of 38. the number of artificers that were afked for and not granted ?

A. Had the number of artificers been greater, there can be no doubt but the work would have gone on much faster. With respect to the artificers being demanded, I have already faid I do not recollect the number.

Q. Were there not horfes neceflary for conveying the flores and ammunition 39necellary for the field train; and how many?

A. The best answer to that question will, I apprehend, be a state of the number of hories actually attached to the several brigades of artillery, fince the allotment of stores and ammunition were exactly proportioned to the number of pieces which they accompanied.

Anfwer interrupted goin into the fetail.

[The brigade attached to the advanced corps of light artillery confifted of eighty-five-----]

Q. How many horses might have been spared, if the heavy park of artillery had 40. not attended the army?

A. It would have made a difference of two hundred and thirty-feven horfes.

Q. Was the army furnished with carts to have employed those two hundred and 41. thirty-feven horses?

A. I really cannot answer that question of my own knowledge.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL KINGSTON called in, and examined by General Burgoyne.

1. Q. IN what capacity did you act in the campaign of 1777?

A. As deputy adjutant general of the province of Quebec; I acted as adjutant general of the army under General Burgoyne, and also as fecretary to General Burgoyne.

2. Q. Did not that double capacity, and the confidence with which General Burgoyne treated you, lead you to the knowledge of the material circumftances attending that campaign?

A. I looked on myfelf to be in the entire confidence of the general.

3. Q. Did General Burgoyne give any orders for the augmentation of artillery deflined for this expedition, after his arrival in Canada?

A. There was no fuch order went through me; nor did I hear of any fuch order being given.

4. Q. Have you reafon to believe that the proportion of artillery employed was according to the opinion and recommendation of Major General Phillips?

A. I believe General Burgoyne had the greatelt confidence in General Phillips's knowledge and abilities, and I believe the proportion of artillery to have been arranged between General Phillips and Sir Guy Carleton, becaufe I don't know of any directions given by General Burgoyne upon that head.

5. Q What were the orders given, at the opening of the campaign, respecting the incumbrances of baggage ?

[The witnefs refers to the orderly book, which he had with him.

Read the orders.

They are the original orders, written by myfelf at the time.

[Reads.] " Extracts from orders iffued by Lieutenant General Burgoyne at Montreal, dated 30th May, 1777.

"The regiments defined for the expedition under General Burgoyne are to "leave in their refpective fores their blanket coats, legging, and all baggage "that can be fpared during the fummer months; the officers are depended on "not to encumber the fervice with more baggage than fhall be abfolutely ne-"ceffary for a compaign where the movements may be expected to be fudden " and alert; the portion of bateaux to each regiment will be regulated on those " principles."

A. Orders were iffued again to the fame purport, dated Skenefborough Houfe, July 12.

[Reads.] " It is observed that the injunction given, before the army took the field, " relative to the baggage of officers, has not been complied with; and that the regi-" ments in general are encumbered with much more baggage than they can poffibly be " fupplied with means of conveying, when they quit the lake and rivers; warning is " therefore again given to the officers, to convey by the bateaux, which will foon " return to Ticonderoga, the baggage that is not indifpenfibly necessary to them; " or upon the first fudden movement, it must inevitably be left upon the ground. " Such gentlemen as ferved in America the laft war may remember that the officers " took up with foldiers' tents, and often confined their baggage to a knapfack for " months together."

Q. Have you a letter from General Burgoyne to General Reidefel, on the fubjea 8. of the incumbrance of baggage?

A. I have an extract of it, taken from the original letter in the letter-book. It is as follows :

Extract of a Letter from Lieut. Gen. Burgeyne to Major General Reidefel, dated Head Quarters at Skenefborcugh, the 18th July, 1777.

" Je vous supplie de faire en forte, que l'esprit de l'ordre par rapport " à le renvoye des baggages des officiers à Ticonderoga aye lieu.

" Les baggages des officiers Britanniques font deja renvoyés, et il n'en " refle à plufieurs qu'une petite tente, et un valife. C'eil réclement pour " l'interest de l'officier à la fin, que je fuis si porté à cet article."

TRANSLATION.

" I requeft you to take measures that the spirit of the order respecting " the fending back officers' baggage to Ticonderoga may have due force.

" The baggage of the Britith officers is already gone, and many of them " have only retained a fmall tent and one cloak bag. It is really for the in-" tereft of the officers, in the end, that I am fo preffing upon this fubject."

Q. When the contract was made for horfes and carts at Montreal, was it the 9. general opinion of the perfons of beft intelligence confulted, that the number was more or lefs than neceflary for the fervice on which we were going ?

A. In general conversation on that subject I remember to have heard it faid, that though they were infufficient, we might expect to find additional fupplies in the country. I have extracts of letters here that paffed between General Burgoyne and See Appen-General Phillips on that subject. They are extracted from the original letter copybook.

12. Q. What were the numbers of the artillery, and the corps under Lieutenant Nutt, attached to the fervice of the artillery?

Britifh artillery	² 57
Germans	100
Recruits under Lieut. Nutt	154

Q. Were there any other troops in the army that could be called regulars?

A. There were Canadians, Provincials, and Indians; but I never confidered them as regulars, becaufe they were not difciplined.

14. Q. Can you state about what was the number of the Canadians?

A. The Canadians were 148 the higheft number.

15. Q. The Provincials?

A. I would be underftood to fpeak to the opening of the campaign the first of July. They were low then, and encreased afterwards. They were then $3.

16. Q. The Indians?

A. Between three and four hundred. It was very difficult to collect what their number was exactly.

17. Q. Was the army ever fo high in numbers, Provincials and Indians excepted, as at that period?

A. I believe it never was. On the 3d of September, additional companies joined the Britith, to the amount of about 300 men, but from killed and wounded, and the garrilon left at Ticonderoga, the army was at no time equal to its first number.

18. Q. What was the force left at Ticonderoga?

A. The first garriton confisted of 462 British, runk and file, 448 Germans, rank and file, making 910 in the whole.

19. Q. Do you remember the difficulties which attended moving the wounded to Ticonderoga, after the action at Huberton?

A. I remember to have heard they were very great. Different propositions were made for the removing them, fuch as biers and hand-barrows, which were fo very meanmodious, that I remember to have been told that the wounded would rather be left where they were than move in the then flate of their wounds by fuch convery mees.

Q. Was the removal of those wounded effected long before General Reidetel was 21. recalled from Caftleton?

A. I believe not; for I am not quite certain that the whole were moved when General Reidefel returned to the army at Skenefborough, a day or two before the faift division of the army moved towards Fort Anne.

Q. Have you any papers written by General Burgoyne between the time he was 22. at Montreal and the time he left Skenetborough, explanatory of the motives on which he acted ?

A. I have. They are extracts from the original letter-book.

Q. Are you acquainted with any facts that will alcertain whether, on the army's 23. arriving at Fort Edward, it was forwarder in its progrets towards Albany, in point of time, than it would have been had it taken the route by Ticonderoga and Lake George ?

A. In answer to that queflion I have to fay, the army, by taking that route, was a-head of the transport of provisions, which, for the greater part, went from Ticonderoga by the route of Lake George.

Q. At our first arrival at Fort Edward, and previous to the roads being mended, z_{\pm} . in what proportion did provisions arrive at our camp?

A. Very little more than for the immediate confumption. Q. Have you the memorandum-books of Sir Francis Clarke?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know them to be his hand-writing?

A. I am fully convinced of it, having feen him enter many of the articles in thefe books.

Q. Has there been any alteration or addition fince you had them? 27. A. None.

Q. What was the character of Sir Francis Clarke reflecting his accuracy? 28. A. I never faw an officer more attentive to the duties of his flation than Sir Francis time?

Clarke, and always found him exceedingly accurate in the remarks he made. Q. Are there any memorandums respecting the arrival, of provisions at that 29.

A. There are feveral. Q. You will read two or three?

A. [Reads.] -" Fifth August. Victualling of the army out this day. and from " difficulties of the roads and transports, no provision came in this night."

"Sixth August .- At ten o'clock this morning, not quite enough provisions arrived " for the confumption of two days."

Q. Was it in general underflood, from the combined intelligence received by 31. General Reidefel, while he was detached to Caftletown, and that received by General Burgoyne from the Provincials in his camp, that there were many well affected inhabitants towards Bennington, who would flew themfelves on the approach of troops; and that there was dejection and lubmiffion among the party attached to the congreis in that country ?

Q. Have you the original rough draft of the expedition to Bennington, as prefented to General Burgoyne from General Reidefel; with General Burgoyne's alterations and additions?

A. I have the original rough draft of the propofals for the expedition to Bennington; but not being prefent at the time, I can't fay whether those proposals were delivered by General Reidetel or not; but I know of alterations made in those proposals by General Burgoyne, from a knowledge of his hand-writing.

See Appeadix.

Note, The witness delivered in to the Committee the original rough draft of the Inftructions, with a fair copy.

- Q. Whether you have reafon to know that all the erafures and alterations in that 33. plan were made before the expedition took place ?
 - A. I believe they were, from the reading of it.
- Q. Do you remember taking this plan to General Phillips the day General Bur-34. goyne went to Fort George to infpect the transport of provisions?

A. I do remember it very well; it was the rough draft I took.

Q. What were General Phillips's fentiments upon it ?

- 35. A. I remember General Phillips and I had a long conversation on the flowness of the arrival of the transport of provisions; and he faid he looked on this as a very good idea; that he faw no objection, and afked me if I knew of any.
- Q. Do you remember flewing the plan to General Frater? 36.
 - A. I do very well.
- Q. What did he express on the fubject? 37.

A. He defired me to leave it with him till the afternoon for his confideration. He came himfelf to my tent the next morning early; he expressed himfelf to me in a manner that conveyed a difapprobation of the Germans being employed in it. I think I observed to him that fince the honour gained by the advanced seps at Huberton, I believed General Reidefel was defirous of having the fir mana employed. I mentioned to General Frafer my ideas of provisions being obtained by that expedition, and the army thereby enabled to get quicker on to Albany than waiting for the flow transport from Fort George. General Fyaler faid fomething about Germans, which I don't recollect; which brought this remark from me. I defired General Frafer, from the friendship he had for General Burgovn, if he faw any real objection to this plan, to express himfelf fully and freely to General Burgoyne himfelf; that the fcouts of the army and the guides were attached to his the advanced corps, and he might, through them, perhaps know more of the nature of the country than I did; and therefore I prefied him to mention his objections, if he had any, to General Burgoyne. I think he faid, but am not quite certain, " the Germans are " not a very active people; but it may do." I prefied him at parting to go to General Burgoyne, if he thought it would not do. He faid No, and went off.

Q. Were not many of the Provincials in the army of the country about Bennington, and towards the Connecticut?

A. I can't pretend to fay they were from that country; but I underflood many of them were well acquainted with that country.

Q. Do you remember Captain Sherwood in particular ?

A. I do very well.

Q. Was he of that country ?

A. I understood he was of that neighbourhood.

Q. Did you ever hear Colonel Skeene, or any other Provincial, confulted on an 41. expedition into that country, express any apprehention of its fuccels?

A. I never did. Sir Francis Clarke told me he had received favourable accounts from Colonel Skeene; and I believe after part of the expedition had taken place.

Q. Are there any memorandums of Sir Francis Clarke's, effecting the expedition to Bennington?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any that marks the diftance between Batten Kill and Bennington? 43. A. Yes; it is his hand-writing.

[Reads.] " From the mouth of Batten Kill, East, for two miles ; then strike off " South East for about fifteen miles to Cambridge; and fo on about twelve miles " to Bennington."

Q. Have you the original letters, written from Colonel Baume to Grneral Burgoyne, while he was on the expedition?

A. They are here. He delivered them in the Committee. pendix. Q. Is there any memorandum of Sir Francis Clarke's marking the time when 45.

Colonel Breyman was ordered to march to fupport Colonel Baume ? A. [Reads.] " 15th August. Express arrived from Sancoick ; at five in the morn-

Q. Do you recollect what time of the day it was General Burgoyne met Colo- 46. nel Breyman on his return on the 17th?

A. I think it was fometime between one and three o'clock.

Q. Have you the influctions given by General Burgoyne to Colonel Skeene on 47. that expedition?

A. Here is a copy of them.

Q. Is there any memorandum of Sir Francis C ke's, of any intelligence received pendix. from Colonel St. Leger about this time?

A. There is of the 12th of August.

[Reads.] " This morning received intelligen of an action near Fort Stanwix."

Q. After the failure of the expedition to Beanington, can you speak to the ef- 49. forts made tor forwarding provisions?

A. I know that very great efforts were n de both before and after. I underflood that General Borgoyne and General Phillips had been both at different times at Fort George to forward the provisions, and I believe fubfequent to the ill news from Bennington. 50. Q. Have you the calculation, made by the commiflary general, of the carriages and horfes necetlary for different given quantities of provisions ?

See the Appendix.

A. It is here. I believe it is the original.

Q. Did the march of the artillery from Fort George to the bridge of boats over 5¹. Hudion's River, interfere with the transport of provisions?

A. I have had many convertations with General Phillips and the quatter-maftergeneral about the transport of provisions, and never remember to have heard from them, or any other perion, that the march of the artillery interfered in any manner with the transport of provisions.

52. Q. About what time did the additional companies arrive?

A. The 3d of September.

53. Q. What was the flate of the army when we paffed the Hudfon's River?

A. My return goes to the rft of September.

British, fit for duty under arms, 2635 rank and file.

·Germans ---

The 300 additional did not join the army till the 3d of September, fo that this return is exclusive of them.

1711

54. Q. What was the firength of the artillery and Lieutenant Nutt's corps at that time?

A. I believe there was very little variation in either of them from the former return.

55. Q. Have you General Burgoyne's application to Sir Guy Carleton for a garrifon from Canada for Liconderoga, before he paffed the Hudfon's River?

A. I have extracts from letters of General Eugoyne to Sir Guy Carleton, the 11th of July, 1777, and the 29th of July, 1777.

56. Q. Was there any confiderable alteration in the flrength of the army between the return of the 11t of September, and the action on the 19th ?

A. There was a tkirmith or two, but the lofs was not material in that in-

57. Q. In the course of the fervice, did you ever know any inftance of a day of action, where there was not fome deductions from the effective fitrength upon paper, for baggage guards, bat-men, care of the fick, and other indifpenfible regimental contingencies?

A. I apprehend there muft always be deductions of that fort.

6?. Q. In the fervice of our campaign, was there not a confiderable additional deduction for the care and defence of the bateaux and movable magazines?

A. It must of course make an additional drain from the army.

59. Q. Was not all we had of the forty-feventh regiment appropriated to that particular fervice ?

60. A. It generally was; I believe always fo.

A

Q. These deductions confidered, about what number do you compute the Britifh line to have confifted of on the day of the action of the 19th.

A. I

See the Ap-Jondix. Lieut. Col. Kingflon.]

E V I D E N C E.

A. I believe the four regiments of the line engaged that day amounted to little more than one thousand one hundred men on the spot under arms in the action.

Q. What lofs did the British fustain in that action ?

A. Killed, wounded, and prifoners, rather more than lefs than five hundred.

Q. Can you fpeak particularly to the lofs of the line?

A. I believe about feventy-fix killed rank and file, and between two hundred and forty and two hundred and fifty wounded, and about twenty-eight or thirty miffing and prifoners.

Q. Do you recollect the firength of the 20th regiment when they made their 63. Iast charge on the enemy?

A. I do very well. I was by General Phillips when the orders were given for that charge; he was then in the front of the line: the ranks appeared to be very thin, the regiment were much fatigued with the length of the action, but moved on to the charge with fpirit.

Q. Do you remember General Burgoyne going up to the fixty-fecond regiment 64, immediately after the firing ceafed, and the report that was made to him by the commanding officer of the flate of that regiment?

A. I remember it, and the officer reporting the great loss they had fuftained in the action; I faw them, and they appeared to be very confiderably reduced in number.

Q. Do you remember the officer mentioning that they had not above fifty or fixty 6_5 , men in the regiment?

A. I can't fpeak politively to that; but in my own judgment they did not exceed that number.

Q. Were not both the field-officers wounded?

A. Colonel Anthruther and Major Harnage were both wounded, and a great many other officers were killed and wounded, and the regiment (uffered greatly.

Q. To what degree did the men of the artillery fuffer in that action?

A. I think, but am not quite certain, that the number that were with four guns amounted to forty-eight. I faw Captain Jones, who was a very gallant man, and commanded thole four guns, killed, and fome other officers wounded, and I believe about thirty fix of the men were killed and wounded. I fhould in juffice to the artillery fay, that I think it is not in the power of men to keep a better fire, both of round and grape-fhot, than was fucceflively maintained for feveral hours that day.

Q. From your experience in the fervice, do you conceive it would have oc- 68. curred to any officer, to engage troops, if he could poflibly avoid it, in the fituation in which the Britith line was the day after that action ?

A. The experience of an officer of my inferior rank does not lead to much; but I fhould have been forry to have given orders to those regiments, after the gallant fufferings of that day, to have attacked an army reported, both from our fpies and our priloners, to be very near if not more than four times the number of our whole force : add to this, the country was a very thick wood, and the the fituation of the rebel camp, I believe, could not by any means be reconneitred within that fpace of time.

69. Q. Do you remember General Burgoyne receiving a letter from Sir Henry Clinton the day but one after that action, informing him, that he intended about that time an attack on Fort Montgomery?

A. I do remember his receiving a letter from Sir Henry Clinton about that time; it was the 22d of September.

70. Q. Do you imagine that any officer knowing of that letter would have entertained thoughts of immediately renewing an attack upon the enemy?

A. As far as an opinion of an officer of my inferior rank goes, I fhould not have thought of it, nor did I hear any officer of any rank express fuch an idea at that time.

71. Q. From what you knew of the country, did you not believe that a fuccefsful attack from Sir Henry Clinton during the time we lay at that camp, would either have diflodged General Gates entirely, or have obliged him to detach confiderably from his army?

A. I remember our fcouts giving information, that a bridge was laid over the Hudfon's River, very near the enemy's camp; and it was the opinion of fome very confidential men that were employed in that army in that capacity, and were much under the direction of General Frafer, that on the approach of Sir Henry Clinton's army, the army of Mr. Gates could not fland us, but would crofs the river, and go towards New England. Whether the idea was right or wroag, I can't tell.

72. Q Did you ever hear fuch perfons, or any others, express an idea, that the enemy would have taken the fame measure on our advancing to attack them without that co-operation?

A. I don't remember to have heard any fuch thing.

73. Q. Do you imagine that any officer knowing of Sir Henry Clinton's letters, would have thought it proper to retreat after the action of the 19th of September?

A. I never heard any officer express an idea of that fort. I don't know what efficers might be within the knowledge of such a letter; but I lived intimately with General Phillips, General Fraser, and with Mr. Twiss, the engineer; whether the letter was in their knowledge or not, I don't know: but I never heard them express such an idea.

74. Q. Did you ever hear any officer of that army, though unacquainted with the letter, before or fince the time, express a disapprobation of the measure of remaining in that camp without either attacking or retreating ?

A. Neithut then or at any time while I remained in America, and of courfe not fince.

2. Q. From your convertation with the chief engineer, and from other circumflances, have you reason to know, that every possible means were used after the action of the 19th, to obtain a knowledge of the ground on the enemy's left?

E V I D E N C E.

A. I had frequent converfations with the chief engineer on that fubjed. I believe his attention was given to that point almost every day, and a knowledge of that ground I understood to be very difficult to be obtained.

2. Was not the right of the enemy deemed impracticable.

A. I had no opportunity myfelf of feeing the right of the enemy; but I underflood from others, that the polition was too firong to be attacked with any profpect of fuccels.

Q. Were there not frequent confultations held between General Burgoyne, Ge. 77. neral Phillips and General Frater, previous to the movement up to the enemy on the 7th of October?

A. I understood there was fearce a day paffed without fuch confultation; I believe no day after the action of the 19 h.

Q. Did you conceive that the chief purpole of that movement was to attain 72. a knowledge of the left of the enemy's polition, and if expedient to attack them there?

A. I underftood it was.

Q. Did it appear to you, that the force left in camp, under General Hamil- 79. ton, was more than fufficient to keep the enemy in check ?

A. I don't think it was.

Q. From the intimacy and confidence in which you lived with General Bur- 80. goyne and General Frafer, do you imagine any difagreement of opinion could have fubfilted between them without your knowledge ?

A. I think I muft have heard of it.

Q. Do you know any inflance, but more effectially reflecting the periods of 81. paffing the Hudion's River, the action of the 19th of September, and that of the 7th of October, wherein General Frater expressed a disapprobation of General Burgoyne's meafures ?

A. I do not: but I would beg leave to obferve, that upon the plan to Bennington, General Frafer had expressed a different opinion, with respect to employing the Germans. At the time of paffing the Hudfon's River, and after it was croffed, I had a great deal of conversation with General Frater: he feemed to exprets fatisfaction in the manner in which the troops had pafied.

Q. In the action of the 7th of October, after the German troops on the left 82. of the artillery had given way, did you observe General Phillips and General Reidefel in perfort?

A. I was with General Phillips at different times, and I faw General Reidefel more than once; they were both very active, and exerted themfelves very much to form the broken troops, and to make the retreat as regular as the circumftances would permit.

Q. What was the last time you faw Sir Francis Clarke in that action, and do you 82. know what inders he was carrying?

A. It was after the retreat was become very general. Sir Francis Clarke afked me, if I had given any orders to the artillery to retreat? I told him, that as there was a major-general of the artillery in the field, who was confelled by the army to be a very excellent officer, I would not take on myfelf, as ad-M jutantjutant-general, to give orders to any part of the artillery. Sir Francis Clarke told me, that a difpolition had been made for a general retreat, and that he was going with orders from General Burgoyne to bring off the artillery. About the inflant we were parting, a very heavy fire came upon us from the enemy, and I have fince had reason to believe, that Sir Francis Clarke received his wound at that time.

84. Q. On the day of the 8th, do you remember the enemy forming a line in the meadows, and making a demonstration of attacking us?

A. I do remember it very well, and that there was a great deal of cannonading from the enemy.

$5. Q. Do you remember also a cannomiding in the afternoon, about the time of General Fraser's funeral?

A. I think I fhall never forget that circumftance. General Frafer, I underflood had defired to be buried privately, in one of the redoubts that had been raifed for the protection of our magazines and flores; as the corple was pafling by, General Burgoyne, General Phillips, and I believe General Reidefel, and feveral other officers, out of respect to General Frafer's memory, and to do him honour in the eyes of the army, notwithftanding his requeft, attended his funeral into the redoubt. The every were in this inflance, I thought, very defective in point of humanity; they pointed a gun or two at that very redoubt, and kept up a brifk cannonade during the whole of the funeral fervice, which was performed with great folemnity and very deliberately by Mr. Brudenel, the chaplain. I never faw to affecting a fight.

86. Q. Do you remember on the march to Saratoga feeing a corps of the enemy at work on the plain of Saratoga?

A. I do very well; a working party, and what appeared to be a battalion or more drawn up as a covering party.

87. Q. Was that the corps that afterwards took post on the opposite fide of the river?

A. I believe it was the fame corps I faw afterwards patting the ford.

88. Q. After the arrival of the army at Saratoga, was Lieutenant Colonel Sutherland detached with a command to cover a party of workmen to repair bridges and roads, in order to continue the retreat on the west fide of the river?

A. He was ordered with a party to repair bridges and roads on the weft fide.

89. Q. Do you remember on what account Colonel Sutherland and the party were recalled?

A. I believe it was on information given by our fcouts, that the enemy were preparing to attack us in great force.

90. Q. Have you further reason to know that a general attack on that day was really intended by the enemy?

A. There was particular caution fent round to all the troops to be prepared for that attack, as it was expected it would be attempted under cover of a very thick fog then prevailing. After the convention had taken place, a general officer in the rebel fervice acquainted me, that fuch an attack was intended,

and

and from information, I believe from deferters, or from their own fcouts, that our army was exceedingly well prepared to receive them, that they would be very much exposed when they came on the plain to our artillery, he not only retreated with his command, but tent word to another general officer to retreat alfo. The other general officer was his fenior; but he had taken that upon him, from the fear of the confequences of fuch an attack, of which he fent word to General Gates, who approved and confirmed his order.

Q. Previous to the council of war to which the field officers were called, do 91. you remember it being determined in the council of the generals, to try a night march, abandoning the carriages and baggage, and orders being given for the delivery of as much provisions as the men could carry?

A. I do remember fuch a determination very well.

Q. What prevented the execution of it?

A. I underflood there were fuch difficulties in getting out the provisions, that the delivery of the neceffary provisions could not be accomplished.

Q. Had we intelligence the next day from different fcouts, that the enemy was 93. in polieflion of the country in force, on both fides the Hudson's River, between us and Fort Edward?

A. I underflood, from fome of the feouts that we had been accultomed most to depend on, that the enemy were fo posted.

Q. Have you reafon to know that the intelligence General Burgoyne flated to the 94. council of war on this fubject was true?

A. I was affured by one of the general officers who conducted us towards Bofton that troops of theirs were in the position that our focuts had given us information of.

Q. Did you learn at the fame time at what period those posts were taken up by 95. the enemy, whether before or after our arrival at Saratoga?

A. I have extracts of minutes made at that time, from the mouth of the general officer I mentioned.

[Reads.]—" When the king's army was returning to Saratoga, a brigade of " fifteen hundred men were posted on the east fide of the Hudson's River, to difpute " the ford, and two thousand men more were posted between us and Fort Edward, " on the fame fide of the river."—Fourteen hundred more also were posted opposite to Saratoga, a little above the other party I mentioned before, to prevent our paifing the Hudson's River. Fifteen hundred of those I have mentioned were posted on or before the 5th of October. The others, I remember very well now to have heard, were posted previous to the 7th of October.

Q. Have you an extract of the last council of war at which the field officers 96. affisted?

A. The extract is true, excepting the names of the officers, and the votes they gave. I have the original paper, with the names of the officers that composed the See Appencouncil; and I believe their opinions. [The extract produced, dix.]

Q. Did you ever hear of a proposal made by General Phillips, to make a way 97from Saratoga to Ticonderoga with a body of troops?

I believe that the men on command were explained to me by General Gates to have been detached from his army, in the rear and upon the flanks of the king's troops, previous to the convention.

Q. Do you apprehend that that return includes the corps that were on the other 99. fide of the Hudson's River, immediately opposite to Saratoga?

A. I do recollect the name of one of the general officers who was on the other fide of the Hudfon's River, included in Mr. Gates's return, and therefore I imagine the men under his command are included alfo. When I fay one, I do not mean to have underftood that the other two general officers, the one who was stationed with a party opposite to Saratoga, and the one who was stationed on the same fide of the water, between us and Fort Edward, are not also included in General Gates's return.

A. I remember to have been told by other gentlemen, that expences of that fort General Burgoyne had been at, ought to have been charged in that manner.

Q. What was the nature of those expenses? A. They were prefents to people who had diffinguished themselves, and in acts of charity to women who had loft their hufbands, and other occafions which it was very proper for a general officer to give, and very proper to put into a public account.

Q. Had not General Burgoyne, from his fituation, all the expences attending 113. a Commander in Chief?

A. He certainly had, from being obliged to keep a public table for the entertainment and refreihment of officers and others coming to head quarters, on duty or bufinefs; and I know those expenses to have been very great, from the exceeding high price of all the articles of life in that part of the world.

Q. Did General Burgoyne ever receive more than the appointment of a lieutenant 114. general?

A. Never.

Q. Was there not a board of general officers appointed at Cambridge, to infpect 115. all the accounts of the campaign; and did not General Burgoyne regulate the payment of the battalions by the report of that board?

A. There was fuch a board, and the payments were regulated according to the report of that board.

Q. Upon the whole of what you know of General Burgoyne's receipts and 116. expences, do you believe he was, in his own purse, a gainer or a fufferer in the campaign 1777?

A. I really believe his appointments were not equal to his expences in that campaign.

Examined by other Members of the Committee and by General Burgoyne occasionally.

Q. What were the numbers of the effective British, at the opening of the cam-117. paign 1.777, including officers and non-commissioned officers?

A. I have not those returns; but they were fent to the Commander in Chief, and my extracts are for the rank and file.

Q. Can you answer that question with respect to the Germans ? 118.

A. My extracts are the fame both for the British and the Germans.

Q. What was the greatest number of Provincials in the army at any time in the 119. campaign ?

A. I believe the only question that has been asked respecting them was at the beginning of the campaign ; they were then eighty-three. On the first of September they amounted to about fix hundred and eighty, which was the greatest number they ever amounted to.

120. Q. What do you mean by Provincials?

Lieut. Col. Kingfton.] E V I D E N C E.

A. I understand them to be inhabitants of that country, assembled under officers who were to have had different commissions, provided they had ever amounted to certain numbers.

Q. Do you include Canadians under the name of Provinciais?

A. I believe, in the former part of my evidence, the Canadians were flated to be one hundred and forty-eight, and diffinguished from the Provincials.

Q. Was General Burgoyne's fecond order of the twelfth of July, relating to the 122. baggage, frictly complied with ?

A. I conceive it was the duty of the commanding officers of regiments to enforce an observance and obedience to the general orders.

Q. Was it actually enforced in fuch a manner to the degree you thought it should 123. have been?

A. I am not quite politive whether there was not another order iffued afterwards.

[Question repeated.]

A. I never had any report made to me by a commanding officer of any corps, of that order not being complied with.

Q. What was your own ocular observation of the quantity of baggage carried 125. with the army; and did it appear to you that that order could have been fairly complied with?

A. I own I don't recollect, not hearing any complaint nor attending to it. The quarter mafter general of the army must naturally know more of the baggage than the adjutant general.

Q. Do you know what allowance of waggons was made to a regiment ?

A. I don't recollect any waggons that we had to allow.

Q. Was none of the baggage brought down in wheeled carriages ?

A. Several officers, I believe, bought waggons and carts of the country people for their own use; but I do not remember any of the king's carts or waggons being appropriated to the carriage of officers' baggage. It might be, but I don't recollect it.

Q. Can you fay, in a general way, how many horfes might be employed in car- 128. rying the baggage of the army, including officers' horfes ?

A. I never had any information upon that fubject ; it did not belong to my de- 129. partment, and I had much business on my hands.

Q. How was the regimental baggage carried ?

A. I believe chiefly in bateaux.

Q. How was it carried when there was no water-carriage?

A. I can't fpeak to that point, having had no information on that fubject; and when I fpeak of bateaux, I fpeak generally, having had no information on the fubject. 131.

Q. Can you fay, in a general way, how many women attended the army?

A. I had really fo much to do that I had not much leifure to pay much attention to the ladies; and I know very little of their beauty or their numbers.

Q. Would not the feeding of two thousand women be a confiderable object with 132. respect to the provisions of the army?

A. I should have been very forry to have had two thousand women to have experienced that.

Q How many women were there, if not two thousand?

A. I would with to give the houte every information in my power, we let ern fpeak with any degree of accuracy or tolerable guefs. I have feen the commiftury of provisions return, and I think the number of women returned, as vietualled from the flores, were very very few.

134. Q. Do you think that a corps of dragoons mounted would have been of great use to the army?

A. I own, I very much withed those few dragoons we had could have been mounted, because, though in that part of America that I faw they might not have been needfary or uteful to have made a charge, I think those light dragoons might be always applied to very uteful fervices.

13.5. Q. How many had you of those dragoons?

A. They are included in the flrength of the Germans, and I really do not remember their particular number.

136. Q. If none or lefs of the park of artillery had been brought forward, would there not have been horfes to have mounted those dragoons?

A. I believe there might have been horfes enough taken from the artillery, or from the provision train, to have mounted those dragoons, if it had been thought more expedient to have employed the horfes in that manner; but they were hired or contracted for, for the special purposes of carrying provisions, and bringing on the artillery, and never meant by the perfons who furnished the contract for the dragoon fervice.

1 27. Q. If a finaller quantity of baggage had been carried, might not the officers have spared fome of their baggage hories for mounting the dragoons?

A. I never met with an officer who had horfes to fpare. I know Sir Francis Clarke and myfelf withed to buy horfes to carry our own fervants; cared very hitle what expense we were at, and yet I could not obtain any.

138. Q. Do you know of any corps or party finding their way back to Canada?

A. I never heard of any corps finding its way there; and I underflood from the guides who were with us, previous to the convention's taking place, that if that was attempted, we must break into finall parties, and go by what is called Indian paths.

130. Q. Supposing there was a small party that found its way to Canada by Indian paths, do you think it would have been possible for an army to have done the same?

A. My idea of that must be founded upon the report of those guides who bad ferved us very faithfully as founds upon former occasions, and who informed me that we must break into very small parties, to have any chance of making cur way through the woods to Canada; and I remember that when General Paillips offered to attempt to find his way to Ticonderoga, it was talked of and looked on to be as desperate as gallant.

be that party of provincials that ran away while they were employed to repair roads. and that were never heard of afterwards?

A. I remember fome were reported to have run away who were making roads, and it is likely to have been that party.

Q. When you mentioned the highest number of provincials, did you mean 141. that they were all armed?

A. I know that they were not all armed. We had not arms for them.

Q. Of those that were armed, some respectable perfores excepted, were they 142. much to be depended upon?

A. A very great part of them were fuch as I should have placed very little dependence upon.

Q. Before the army left Canada, was there not a first order, that not more than 143. three women a company should be fuffered to embark?

A. I do know there was fuch an order iffued, and I never heard any complaint of its having been broke through. I don't recollect the date of that order, or I would have turned to my book, and flated to the houfe, upon the first question relative to the number of women that were employed on our expedition.

Q. Is it not the cuflom in all armies victualled from the king's flores, to pro- 144hibit the delivery of provisions to any women over and above the number allowed by order?

A. It was cuftomary in all places where I ferved in the laft war, and very flrong and peremptory orders were given on that fubject to the commiffaries in our army.

Q. Do you not then, believe, that all women, who followed your army were 145fed from the ration of the men they followed, or found their provision in the country?

A. I remember, upon afking the commiffaries how there came to be fo few women in the provincial returns, I was told, it was the cuflom for them to be fupplied out of the men's rations.

Q. Were the women conveyed on baggage carts or horfes, or did they walk 146. a foot?

A. I never heard of the women's being conveyed on baggage carts or the king's horfes.

Q. If the women neithers employed the king's horfes, nor confumed his pro- 147. witions, do you think they were more of impediment, or of comfort to the king's troops?

A. I never underflood from my convertation with the commanding officers, or others, that the women were any impediment.

Q. If after the taking of Ticonderoga there was any doubt in the army in which 148. you ferved, of their being able to reach Albany?

A. I don't remember to have heard any doubts expressed upon that subject, meaning foon after the taking Ticouderoga.

Q. Was it generally underitood in the army, that it was was well supplied with 149. all the necessaries, appointments for war, and articles proper for forwarding the expedition to Albany?

 \mathbf{N}

A. I

A. I always underflood that the army had been very well supplied with every thing.

150. Q. Do you believe, if the fecretary of flate had ordered the army under General Howe to co-operate with the army under General Burgoyne for the North River, with a view to have formed the junction of the two armies, that the difafter which befel General Burgoyne's army could have happened?

A. If a junction could have been formed, I should apprehend that Mr. Gates's army might have been dislodged, and that the misfortune at Saratoga would not have happened. This is only matter of opinion.

151. Q. Do you apprehend, that if the army under Sir William Howe had operated on the North River, with a view to effect a junction, that fuch a junction would have taken place?

A. I had an opinion while in America, that if the expedition which came up the Hudfon's River under General Vaughan, could have have been there about the time of our action of the 19th of September, that Mr. Gates would have found it difficult to have kept his army together, if he had not croffed over the Hudfon's River towards New England. But this is mere matter of private opinion.

152. Q. If you are of opinion, that the troops under General Vaughan would have had to powerful an effect, even to late as September, what effect do you think Sir William Howe's army, affilted by all the fleet and craft, would have had as early as the beginning of July, immediately after the imprefition which took place among the enemy after the defeat at Ticonderoga?

A. I did not know what force there was under the command of General Vaughan, nor do I even now know; but I fhould think moft certainly, that a great army upon the Hudfon's River near Albany, would have contributed very much to our making our way to Albany.

153. Le Have you ever confidered what were the caufes of the failure of the exdition under General Burgoyne, and to what do you impute it?

A. I looked upon our force not to be equal to the forcing our way to Albany without fome co-operation.

- 1.54. Q. Where then did you expect that co-operation?
 - A. I had no where to expect it from, but up the Hudfon's River from New York; and the fuccess of Colonel St. Leger's expedition would have been of use certainly.
- 155. Q. If General Washington's army had not been diverted, would it not have impeded, or stopped the progress of any army up the Hudson's River.

A. I don't know the firength of General Washington's army, nor the nature of the country between Albany and New York; and therefore I cannot form any judgment of what would have happened.

156. Q. Are you not of opinion that there are very firong passes or posts on that river?

A. I found them very firong between Ticonderoga and Albany, and from reports of military men of high reputation in the fervice, I have underftood there were many very firong pofts between New York and Albany.

157. Q. From whence is the account of the flrength of Mr. Gates's army taken? A. From gfton.

Q. Was it by confent of General Gates that the foldiers after the convention re- 159. tained their cartouch-boxes?

A. They retained their belts, and I really don't recollect whether their cartouch boxes were in general retained or not: but talking with Mr. Gates when the king's troops marched by with the accoutrements on, Mr Gites afked me (we had been old acquaintance formerly) whether it was not cufformary on field days for arms and accoutrements to go together? I told him, there was nothing faid in the convention that I had agreed to with him relating to the accoutrements, and that he could have no right to any thing but what was flipulated in that treaty. He replied, "You are perfectly right;" and turned to fome of the officers in their fervice by, and faid, "If we meant to have had them, we ought "to have inferted them in the convention."

REMARKS

Review of the Evidence; its feveral Parts compared with the prefatory Speech and Narrative; and additional Remarks and Explanations.

THE noble Lord who is at affire with me upon this occafion has, in a great mean fine, deprived me of the benefit of a reply, properly to called, because he has produced no detence. His Lordthip criticity has been acculed by me in many The conduct inflances of a very terious nature. If he is really willing that his political, and my Generate, military conduct thould be tried by facts alone, I certainly have not thewn lefs inclination than his Lordthip for that tell; but, taxed as I avow he has been by me, with proceedings derogatory to the obligations which ought to hibliff between man and man, I really expected, as I believe did the Houle of Commons and the public, to have heard from him fome jultification in those respects. Inflead of that, the nuble ford, in opening the hibjects to which he propoled to call evidence, touched for Hightly upon the branch of the empiry in which we are parties, that a ftranger would hardly have thought there fublifled a difpute between us. This Lordfhip contradicted nothing that I have alledged refpecting his conduct or my own; he flated no circumflance of blame againft me, except he meant as fuch the enterprize of Bennington, which he qualified with the epithet " fatal," and pronounced to be the caule of all the indicquent misfortunes. He paffed entirely over the tranfactions at Sacatoga. Of forty officers or more, belonging to the Convention troops, then in England, one only was proposed to be called on his Lordship's part, viz. Lieutenant Colonel Sutherland, of the 47th regiment, upon parole from the Congress, and acting with a corps of the Fencible Men in North Britain; but, upon further reflection, his Lord thip thought proper to difpente with the attendance of this officer; and the only svitnefs under order of the Houle was Mr. Skene. No man was better qualified to give an account of the proceedings at Bennington; and I heartily Lonent that the public is deprived of his tellimony.

But although I and thus left in pofferiion of the evidence, uncontroverted by the noble Lord, I avail myfelf of my right of clofing the caufe, for the fol- Cinm of G. following purpoles : firll, to collect from the minutes (which, in an enquiry of this click the nature, are unavoidably prolix and difarranged) the feattered parts, and apply them calue. to facts, under diffinet and feparate heads. Next, to examine whether the facts (which, Mode of profrom the filence of the noble Lord, I am to affume as admitted by him) are in any costing. refpect invalidated by the crofs examination of the witneffes by other gentlemen. laftly, to explain fuch circumftances, and answer fuch new and collateral objections, as have been pointed at in the fame crots examination, and were omitted, or only flightly noticed in my opening, because they did not exist, or were not deemed possible objects of blame or cavil. In purfuing these purposes, I shall consider the proofs precisely in the order of the facts to which they are produced.

Infinuation of having acted untairly by Sir Guy Carleton, overthrown by his own evidence,

Though the first circumstance I took notice of in my opening, viz. my conduct refpecting Sir Guy Carleton, was rather an infinuation than an allegation against me, I thought it right that it fhould be the first overthrown by evidence; for while it remained in any degree of force, it gave a general tinge, as it was meant to do, to my whole caufe. I could not but expect even the virtuous prejudices of the human heart to be against me, whilst it was possible to be conceived that in absence of the commander in chief, to whom I had acted fecond; whofe attention I had conftantly experienced; and with whole confidence I was then honoured; I had practifed unmanly and adulatory intrigue to fuperfede him in a favourite object of command.-There are few worfe modes of betraying a fuperior officer to be found upon the records of diffionour; and whoever reflects upon the degree of odium with which the most palliated acts of that fpecies have been received by mankind, will not wonder at or condemn my impatience, in applying my first questions to Sir Guy Carleton to that particular object. Clear as my juftification flood by the letter formerly referred to. (No. II.) I shall be forgiven for obtaining, though with fome redundancy, a full and fatisfactory confirmation of my innocence, from the verbal testimony of the party whom I was supposed to have injured.

It may be proper here to observe, that the abovementioned aspersion, to which I have fo often adverted, and at which I have ftrove in vain for due terms to express my indignation, was not the only one cast upon me respecting Sir Guy Carleton. When impartial and candid men revolted at the infinuation of my treachery, my prefumption and infolence (a leffer but still a calumnious charge) was pointed out in that part of the paper (No. III.) that treats of the force to be left in Canada, and the difpolition of it. I am pleafed with the queftions in the crofs examination of Sir Guy Carleton, marking the prefcribed distribution of the troops, &c. (38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43.) because that enquiry affords me an opportunity of justifying myself in a point which I have not taken notice of before. The posts, and the troops which I imagined would be neceffary to occupy them, were specified merely to shew that the number of 3000 was indifpenfibly requifite for the defence of the province. The whole of that detail concurred with General Carleton's requifitions for reinforcement, and with my reafoning upon those requisitions; and when I affert, as I now do, that I never prefumed to fuggelt the neceffity or propriety of forming a detail of posts, (thus given for information) information) into precife orders for the general upon the fpot, I am fure the fecretary more contradict that affertion than he has done any other I have of flate w made.

When in the fame paper I confidentially communicated my reafons for preferring No. III. certain corps to others, I was actuated by the fame principle of offering every opinion that could conduce to make the intended fervice effectual. I thought it a just claim in an arduous undertaking, to have my own choice of the troops; and I am perfuaded Sir Guy Carleton never took ill of me, either that claim, or a fublequent one in the fame paper, of being held free from any imputation of delay, till I thould be clear of the province of Quebec. With an unfeigned confidence in Sir Guy Carleton, I thought it a precaution fully juffinable, to fecure myfelf against others, in the numerous and complicated departments under him, who might be found lefs equitable than he is.

I know I have before complained of the production of thefe fecret communications; but after fo many precedents as the laft Seflion furnished, of withholding parts of correspondences from Parliament, upon the plea that they might affect individuals, the noble Lord's filence upon those complaints, gives me a right fill to comment upon the finister purposes that are to be ascribed to the production of that paper at length, rather than by extract. Those purposes were various ; but it must be confessed one, and only one, good effect may result from a review of them, viz. It may ferve as a falutary caution to any officer, who shall for the future be admitted into confultation with the fame minister, how he commits himfelf by an opinion of men and things.

The next point that I entered upon previously to my narrative, was the tenor of my orders, and I believe it was generally expected that the noble Lord would have taken fome notice of the fact I alledged, that every difcretionary latitude which I had propofed was erafed, while the plan was in his hand. As his Lordship had to much commented upon the nature of peremptory orders, as a general question, in my absence, it would have been fair in him to have reasoned upon them after that important and on my orders. decifive circumftance was laid open.

The general idea of forcing a way to Albany, which the army at its outfet conceived, by reafoning upon the apparent principles of the campaign, without participation of the letter of the orders is clear, from the general tenor of the evidence. I wished, it is true, to have heard more copiously the sentiments of Sir Guy Carleton, because he had full participation of the orders. From the temper and judgment that always direct his conduct, he declined giving an opinion at the bar upon what might become a queftion in the Houfe. But I have fince (upon requeft) received his permiffion to publish a letter from him to me, dated foon after the Convention of Sara-

Review of the Soft Period.

Moti of the commutances flated in my Narrative refpecting the first period of the campaign, were, from their nature, to be effablished by written teffimony ; and the papers. No. VII. and VIII. in the Appendix, were added to those before produeed for that purpole; but the terring of the troops, No. XI, are moreover authenticated by the proper official ambority, the adjutant general, and the detail of the antillery, by the Major of brigade in that department.

From the evidence of the latter, is also confirmed all that I advanced refpecting the opinion and recommendation of Major General Philips, for the proportion of artilleis employed ; for the moderate quantity of it, comparatively with the principles and practice of other fervices, and for the great expected use of artillery in the country where we were to ach.

Had their opinions been merely speculative, the intelligence of the perfons from whom they came would have given them fufficient authority. But fortunately they are verified by facts; for it appears from a multitude of evidence, that the enemy made the true vie of local advantages : they fortified every pafs or proper pofl : the nature of the country, and the neceffity of keeping the banks of rivers, made it impoffibie to turn those pofts : had I wanted therefore artillery, I could not have proceeded any given ten miles, but at a heavy expense of my bell troops. When it was found that I was provided with that forcible arm, the enemy invariably quitred their entrenchments, either to retreat, or fight upon ground where they fuppoled artillery could be least effectually employed. I am to thank the honourable member. whatever his intentions might have been, who by his crofs examination placed the epediency of carrying the train I did, in to clear a view.

The only remaining fact of the first period to which verbal evidence is applicash Viz. The impatibility of Tollowing the enemy further than they were follow-Lord Balesed in their precipitate retreat from Ticonderoga, is ethablished by Lord Balcarras, and by Lord Harrington. ' obferving how much of the blame imputed to me has been occationed by mifrepretentation from performs whole buffinels it was to deery my actions ; and by uncommon millakes in the geography of the country by those to whom my actions were Millakes in miliencelented. By the crofs examination of Lord Balcarras it mult be fuppoled, geography. that the perfons who fujpedful I cired in not taking the route by South Bayafter the Usud Balerfuccels at Ticonderoga, did not know where South Ray was. They feen equally ignorabt of the fituation of Pitch pine Plaine, by the queffion immediately following queftion qu. the formet one ; and it mult have been a furprife to the enquiners to find that the route which they were inclined to approve, was precilely that which the main body of the army took under me in perton, and with fuch effect, as to come up with the rear of the enemy and drive them from their fortified poft at Skenefborough, with the lots on their part of five armed veffels and all the reft of their water craft.

But it may be faid, this part of the crofs examination, though incomprehensible in point of geography, flill applied to the queftion taken notice of in my narrative, viz. " Whether it would not have been more expedient to return to Ticonderago, and " take the route by Lake George, than to proceed, as I did, by the Pitch Pine Plains " to Fort Edward ?"

I thall not recapitulate the various motives I have before flated in fupport of that preference, having publickly in my favour the opinion of an officer fo enlightened in military feience, and fo well acquainted with the country as Sir Guy Carleton ;* and Sor Guy Care never having heard a difference of opinion is any other officer of a like defeription, leton, queftto rell much more upon a fubjed to supported by reafoning and by fucces, might be confirmed an attempt to divert the attention of my examiners from points lefs defenfible. I therefore fhall only add two flort remarks ; the one, that the fact of confiderable gaining confiderable time by allotting the whole fervice of the water-craft to the transport of provision and flores over Lake George, inflead of employing great part tiking the of it for the transport of the troops is incontellably proved by the evidence of Cap- route to Fort tain Money and Licutenant Colonel Kingflon : the other, that to have reached Fort 19hd. The combination of arrangement for feeding the army might, in fact, be flated to reading the have extended even to Ireland; for fome part of the tupply depended upon the vietualling fleet which was prepared in that country, according to my requifition before 1 left London, and had not reached Quebee when the army took the field. The tedioufnets of the navigation from Quebec to the mouth of the Sorel need not be again deteribed. The next embarraffment was to manage the conveyance for that part of the tupply which came from Montreal, and which was much the greatest, without interfering with the transport which with equal neceffity was to be expedited up the Saint I awrence to Lake Ontario, for the fervice of Colonel St. I eger's expedition, and the immente flores (then neceffarily upon the move alto) for the winter maintenance of the upper country. To thefe might be added a lift of chances and inconveniences, incident to the carrying places between Chamblée and Saint John's; the uncertaintainty afterwards of the paffage over Lake Champlain, and Lake George; the laborrous and flow operations of drawing the boats over the illhmus which divides the two Lakes. These together make a fyshem of embarratiments and difappointments hardly to be conceived by those who have not experienced them.

> But although the whole of this arrangement (the furnishing the upper country excepted) was made under my direction, I have been content to date my difficulties from the lodgement of the inpplies at Fort George ; and I have touched the other parts only to thew more peripicuoully the unfairnels of judging of an American campagen upon European ideas. How zealoufly foever a general, in fuch an undertaking as mine, may be ferved by the chiefs of departments (and much praife is due from from me upon that fcore) for one hour he can find to contemplate low he fhall fight his army, he must allot twenty to contrive how to feed it.

The behaviour of the Indians is a circumflance too material to be paffed over in a Behaviour of review of the anxieties in this part of the campaign. I had different the caprice, the fuperflition, the felf-interefledness of the Indian character from my first intercourse, even with those nations which are fuppoled to have made the greatell progress towards civilization: I mean with those called the domiciliated nations near Montreal. I h d been taught to look upon the remote tribes who joined me at Skenefboroug, as more warlike ; but a very little time proved that, with equal depravity in general principle, their only pre-eminence confided in ferocity. The hopes I had placed in their wild honour, and in the controul of their conductors, which, as I flated before, at first had been promifing, were foon at an end; and their ill-humour and mutinous difpofition Lord Harwere manifelt foon after my arrival at Fort Edward. The apparent caufes of their rington from change of temper were the refertment I had thewn upon the murder of Mifs Macrea, and the reftraints I had laid on their difpolition to commit other enormities; but J never doubted that their evil paffions were fomented, and their defection completed by the cabals of the Canadian interpreters. Rapacity, felf-intereff, and prefumption are the characteriflics of thefe men, with fome few exceptions. The acquifition of the Indian language has utually been a certain fortune to a man with an artful head and a convenient confcience.

To check the old practices of peculation in these men, Sir Guy Carleton, with great judgment, had given the fuperintendency of the Indian department to Major Campbell and Captain 1 cazer, gentlemen of the higheft integrity. The Britifh officers employed folely in the military conduct of that department, were also felected with equal propriety. The interpreters had from the first regarded with a jealous eye a fystem which took out of their hands the diffribution of Indian neceffaries and prefents; but when they found the plunder of the country, as well as that of the government, was controuled, the profligate policy of many was employed to promote differtion, revolt, and defertion.

I take this occasion to acquit Monfieur St. Luc of any sufpicion of his being con- St. Luc. cerned in their factions; but I believe he differned them. He certainly knew that the Indians pined after a renewal of their accultomed horrors; and that they were become as impatient of his controul as of all other, though the pride and intereft of authority, and the affection he bore to his old affociates, induced him to cover the real caufes under various trivolous pretences of difcontent, with which I was daily tormented, but to which I conftantly attended : and though I differed totally with Saint Luc in opinion upon the efficacy of these allies, I invariably took his advice in the management

The council of the 4th of August was held at his preffing inftance; and in that council, to my great aftonifhment (for he had given me no intimation of the defign) the tribes with which he was most particularly connected, and for whom he interpreted, declared their intention of returning home, and domanded my concurrence and afiiftance. The embarrafiment of this event was extreme. By acquiefcing, I voluntary relinquithed part of my force that had been obtained with immenfe charge to government, that had created high expectation at home and abroad, and that indeed my own army was by no means in condition to difpenfe with; becaufe, depending upon the fuppofed affiftance of this much over-valued race for fcouts and outpofts, and all the leffer, but neceffary fervices, for giving due repole to the camp, the British light-infantry had been trained to higher purposes : they were defined to lead in the general and decifive combats I expected in the woods, and could not be fpared, or ritked, or harrafied, without palpable confequences of the most difagreeable kind.

On the contrary, I was convinced a cordial reconciliation with the Indians was only to be effected by a renunciation of all my former prohibitions and an indulgence in blood and rapine : I had not a friend in the department in whom I could confide except Major Campbell, Captain Frazer, and the other British officers : their ignorance of the languages, and the very probity of their characters, rendered them of no weight in Indian councils. An answer, neverthelefs, was to be made upon the moment ; and the part I took was to give a firm refufal to their proposition, and to adhere to the controuls I had before eftablished ; but, with a temperate reprefentation of the ties of faith, of generofity, and honour, to join every other argument confistent with those principles which I could devise, to perfuade and encourage them to continue their fervices.

This fpeech appeared to have the defired effect. The tribes neareft home affected to feparate from the others, and only preffed for permiffion to return in parties to gather in their harveft, proposing to relieve each other; which was granted. Some of the remote tribes also feemed to retract their propositions, and profeffed a zeal for the fervice; but the defertion took place the next day by foores, loaded with fuch plunder as they had collected; and it continued from day to day, till fearce a man that had joined at Skenetborough remained. This whole transfaction, I aver, was before the plan of Bennington was formed. It appears to from the evidence produced upon the crofs examination by the gentlemen to whom I am obliged upon to many occasions, for clucidating different fubjects; and the precise date could have been further further supported by a memorandum of Sir Francis Clerke; but I thought that reference fuperfluous in a matter fo notorious.

That Monfieur St. Luc, anxious for the credit of his favourite troops, and invited by the propenfity he found in the minifler to liften to any whifpered intelligence, in contradiction to that he received from the General himfelf; that, under thefe comptations, that wily partizan flould mifplace dates, and confound caufes, neither furprifes nor offends me. With this exposition of fact, I leave him in full postellion of his petulancy respecting my military talents; and am concerned at no effect of his comments or communications, in the minister's closet or in the news-papers,* except as they may have tended to support the general system of deception which has so long and fo fatally influenced his Majefly's advifers. The Indian principle of war is at once odious and unavailing; and if encouraged, I will venture to pronounce, its confequences will be feverely repented by the prefent age, and univerfally abhorred by pofterity.

But to proceed to the furvey of other difficulties of the time. Great attention was Gemun troops. due to the management of the German troops.

The mode of war in which they were engaged was entirely new to them; temptations to defert were in themfelves great, and had been enhanced and circulated among them by emiflaries of the enemy with much art and industry. Jealoufy of predilection in the allotment of pofts and feparate commands ever fubfilts among troops of different states; and a folid preference of judgment in the commander in chief often appears a narrow national partiality.

I confess I was much affisted in maintaining cordiality in an army thus composed, by the frank, fpirited, and honourable character I had to deal with in Major General Character of Reidefel ;--- a character which was very early imprefied upon my mind, and which M.G. Rodeno trials of intricacy, danger, and diffrefs, has fince effaced; but addrefs was fill requifite to fecond his zeal, and to diffufe it through the German ranks; and I fludied to throw them into fituations that might give them confidence in themfelves, credit with their prince, and alacrity in the purfuit of an enterprife, which, when its difficulties were confidered, in fact required enthufialm.

Other parts of the alliance, though not liable to fufpicion of treachery, like the Indians, nor of confequence to be fo much attended to as the Germans, neverthelefs had their perplexities. The Canadians, were officered by gentlemen of greate The Cana-condition in their country, but were not to be depended upon. Inflead of the enterprifing and daring fpirit which diffinguifhed the character of that people under the French government, was fubfituted a longing after home, the effect of difuse of arms and long habits of domeflic enjoyments; and this difease (mal de payz) is carried in them to a greater proverbial extreme than in any other people to whom the term is more commonly applied.

It was neither eafy to keep these people together, nor to support the ideas of respect which the enemy entertained of them from the remembrance of the former war. The only manner of effecting the latter purpose was to shew them occasionally at a distance, but rarely to commit them upon parties where they were likely to fall in with the best classes of the Rangers epposed to us: perhaps there are few better in the world than the corps of Virginia Rislemen, which acted under Colonel Morgan.

The Provincial Corps, of which I had two in embryo, and feveral detached parties, were yet a heavier tax upon time and patience. They were composed of profeffed Loyalifts, many of whom had taken refuge in Canada the preceding winter, and others had joined as we advanced. The various interefts which influenced their actions rendered all arrangement of them impracticable. One man's views went to the profit which he was to enjoy when his corps should be complete; another's, to the protection of the district in which he refided; a third was wholly intent upon revenge against his perfonal enemies; and all of them were repugnant even to an idea of subordination. Hence the fettlement who should act as a private man, and who as an officer, or in whose corps either should be, was feldom fatisfactorily made among themselves; and as furely as it failed, succeeded a reference to the Commander in Chief, which could not be put by, or delegated to another hand, without distasfaction, encrease of confusion, and generally a los of such fervices as they were really fit for, viz. fearching for cattle, afcertaining the practicability of routes, clearing roads, and guiding detachments or columns upon the march.*

Such were the embarraffinents of my mind, added to the many neceffary avocations of command purely military. It will likewile be remembered that Lieutenant Colonel St. Leger was, at this time, before Fort Stanwix : every hour was pregnant with critical events. The candid and unprejudiced, reflecting upon fuch a fituation, will check the readinefs of their cenfure : far be it from me to contend that I did not commit many errors : I only hope to have proved, that they are not those which have yet been specifically pointed at, and whatever blame may be imputable to me in other inftances, my late examiners are not juftly intitled to triumph on any of their difcoveries.

And now for the expedition to Bennington as it ftands upon evidence.

The queftions upon the crofs examination are fo explanatory of the hints which ton. fell from the noble Lord afterwards, that one would almost imagine the hints were originally defigned to precede. It will be regular for me, therefore, to confider them in that manner, and, from the whole I am to collect, that the faults meant Faults fopto be eftablished are, that I employed Germans to found the disposition of a country in which no Germans refided: that the mounting dragoons was unneceffary: that the range given to the expedition was too great : that it was not originally defigned for Bennington : that the force was inadequate.

In regard to the first of these charges, relative to the employment of Germans, Fault of emit would be wafte of time to add to the full answer given by Lord Harrington. Colonel Kington has answered the question respecting the mounting the dragoons; and moreover it will be remembered, that the collecting horfes was by no means confined to that fervice. They were requisite for carrying the baggage of the army, as expressed in the infructions to Colonel Baume, to the amount of 1500. This circumftance may have ftruck fome gentlemen, as confirming the idea that the baggage attending the army was of enormous bulk. I requeft a fufpence of judgment upon this article, till I come to the proper place of explanation; and I revert to the part of the charge which feems of moft importance, viz. the extent of the march, as defcribed in the Inftructions, compared with the ftrength of the detachment, &c. and all other

It can hardly escape observation, what strength to my defence upon this point papers remay be derived from advocates who were not expected to appear in my behalf. For nington, I take support from the noble Lord himself, and all who have believed in his late affertions, or adhered to his favourite doctrines, by pleading that I undertook the expedition to Bennington upon report, ftrengthened by the fuggeftion of performs of long experience and refidence in America, who had been prefent on the foot when the rebellion broke out; and whole information had been much refpected by the administration in England; that the friends to the British cause were as five to one, and that they wanted only the appearance of a protecting force to shew themselves. Some criticisers upon the adequacy of the force I employed, may defert the caufe of the noble Lord; but will He maintain, that a recruit of force from the enemy's country was The ground a wild expectation, when the recruiters, provincial colonels, governors, land proprietors, and popular leaders of the party who glory in the defignation of Tory, Benefington were upon the fpot, and perfonally interested in the levies ? This I multinfift is an unantwerable defence, with refpect to the noble Lord, and those who think with him; for it is first and positive coincidence with their opinions, paft and prefent—and if I faid it will be for with those to come, my prophecy would be authorized by the conviction and triumph which Mr. Galway's evidence, respecting the loyalty of the Americans, feened to produce in the parties to whom I allude.

But in due refpect to other judges, it is incumbent upon me to flate a more ferious defence.

As Lieutenant Colonel Kingflon cannot prove juridically that the rough draft of the defign which ended the affair of Bennington was the fame which was delivered by General Reidefel, and I am unwilling upon memory to incur a pofibility of millake, even in an immaterial circumflance that refpects an abfent friend, 1 cm content it fhould be confidered as an uncertaintainty, and Ldrop all use that could be drawn from the original composition. It will fully answer my purpose to adhere to the bare affertion which I am fure will never be contradicted, that Major General Reidefel criginally conceived an expedition for the purpofe of mounting his dragoons, and supplying the troops in general with baggage-horfes; that I thought his idea might be extended to much greater ufe, and that the plan was confidered, amended, and enlarged, in concert with him. Therefore upon the abstract ground and reafon of the meafure, I might urge, that it was fupported by naked military principle, according to the featiments of a general of great natural talents, and long fervice under the first masters of the age. It is proved, that the fame fentiments were ratified by the full approbation of Major General Phillips, an officer of fimilar defcription, to whom the plan was communicated; and if a fingle part of the fame plan, mentioned to be at first disapproved by Brigadier General Frazer, continued to be fo after explanation, that difapprobation did not appear. Indeed the utmost that can be drawn from the evidence of Lieutenant Colonel

" taile from among them fuch a force as may be fulficient for the interior defence of the province, " and leave the army at liberty to preceed to offentive operations."

^{*} In a letter from Lord George Germain to Sir William Howe, dated May 28, 1777, after acknowledging that the force for the campuign would be thort of the General's requisitions, is the following paragraph.

[&]quot; If we may credit the accounts which arrive from all quarters, relative to the good inclinations of "the inhabitants, there is every reafon to expect that your fuecefs in Penfylyania will enable you to Kingfton, or any other witnefs, amounts to no more than an implied with in the Brigadier to have conducted the expedition at the head of his diffinct corps. It was the fact. Devoted to glory and prodigal of life ; earneft for the general fuccefs of the campaign, and particularly anxious for every plan adopted by the man he loved, he grudged a danger or care in other hands than his own. It was not envy or difparagement of the German troops, but zeal and impatience for employment, that influenced his predilection for the Britifn. I honoured the principle, while I reflrained it; and I referved his ardour and judgment for a fecond movement, which required those qualities much more than the expedition to Bennington did, according to any intelligence or appearance of things at the time. It will be obferved from the evidence, that the whole of Brigadier Fraler's corps was thrown over the river, and actually posted at the opening of the plain near Saratoga, when Col. Baume marched ; and the defign was, upon the first news of Baume's fuccefs, to have puffed that corps to take possession of the heights near Stillwater, and to have intrenched, there, till the army and the provision could have joined, by which means the whole country on the weft fide the river, to the banks of the Mohawk, would have been our own.

But moreover it is to be observed, that Major General Reidesch was far from being ignorant, as has been fuggefted, of the nature of the country, or the profettions of the inhabitants. He was just returned from commanding a detached corps at a confiderable diffance from the main army, in the very heart of the country from which the enemy's force at Bennington was afterwards fupplied. He fpoke the English language well; he was affilted by many natives of the best information.

It is evident, that the brave but deceived officer who commanded the detachment, was induced to deviate from the cautions preferibed in the inftructions. A plan drawn by an engineer upon the fpot is added to the evidence produced to the committee, to fnew more clearly where that deviation happened. It appears also in proof, that the measures taken to relieve Colonel Baume, upon the news of his difficulty, were the moft fpeedy that could be used, and would have been time- Lord Harly, had not Colonel Brieman's march been more tardy than could have been fuppofed poffible. I take the fact as flated in his own account, without impeaching his credit with regard to the obstacles he describes. But as a farther vindication of the intelligence and principle upon which the original ftrength of the detachment was framed, and the mere accident which made even error poffible, I requeft admiffion for the proof of a new fact which I did not know it was in my power to bring, till after Captain Money had left the bar of the Houfe of Commons; and as I was precluded from calling him a fecond time, by the abrupt clofe of the proceedings, I had no other way of laying it before the public, than by flating the queftion in writing,

A. " A few days after I was prifoner in the rebel camp, fome of their officers " told me, that it was a providential circumftance, that General Starks was coming " through Bennington with 1200 militia of the New-Hampfhire Grants, to join " their main army near Albany, for the guard on the provision at Bennington did " not amount to more than 400 men; and that on his hearing of a detachment of " our army being only four or five miles from him, he with the guard, and what " militia could be collected in the neighbourhood, attacked and defeated the de-" tachment, as well as the reinforcement that were on their march to join them. " The rebel officers also informed me, and I have feen accounts that agree with " what I then heard, that during the action General Starks was 'luckily' joined " by Colonel Warner with a confiderable body of men. I have frequently heard " our officers fay that were in this action, that had Colonel Baume retreated four " miles, and recroffed the river he paffed the day before, and taken poil there, " when he found by information he could not proceed, and had wrote for a rein-" forcement, he would have met Colonel Breuman coming to his affiftance, and " would not have rifqued the lofs of his corps, which by his infiructions were for " ftrongly recommended, as not even to rifque a confiderable lofs. This, Sir, is " as nearly as possible the answer 1 should have given had the question been asked " me in the Houfe of Commons.-J. Money."

This piece of evidence will ferve to flew that it was not the fuccefs of the rebels at Bennington that animated the militia to affemble, and march in the caufe of the Congrefs; and he muft be of fleady faith indeed in American loyalty who can fuppole much of it really exifted in the country of the Hampfhire Grants (howfoever it had been affected and profefied) when he reflects, not only that General Starks and Colonel Warner were not oppoled in collecting their men, though my army, then in a tide of fuccefs, were near at hand; but also that not a loyalift was found earneft enough to convey me intelligence.

It will likewife appear, from this piece of evidence, when compared with the map of the country and the difposition of the troops, that had not the accidental passage of the detachments under Starks and Warner been exceedingly critical, it could not have availed.—Forty-eight hours fooner, they would have joined General Gates; and he would hardly have detached them, or any other part of his force, back to Bennington, even though he had heard of a movement to my left; because he must have known that the whole of Fraser's corps lay ready to march rapidly upon him from my right.

right .- Forty-eight hours later, the blow would have been flruck; and the flores, confitting of live cattle, and flower, with abundant carriages to convey it, would have been out of reach.

Another reflection will be apt to arife in fpeculative minds upon this fubject, viz, on what nice chances depends the reputation of an officer who acts under felfifh and ungenerous employers ! Such men not only with-hold the fair protection that would arite from an explanation of his motives, but are the first to join the cry of the uninformed multitude, who always judge by events. Thus every plan receives a colouring in the extreme; and is denominated (often with equal injultice) a fatal error or a brilliant enterprize.

But it ftill may be faid, the expedition was not originally defigned againft Ben- Crofe exanington. I really do not fee to what it could tend againft me, if that supposition Lord Harwere in a great degree admitted. That fome part of the force was defigned to act rington, 4there, will not be difputed by any who read Colonel Baume's inftructions, and confult the map. The blame or nerit of the defign altogether, muft reft upon the motives of expediency; and it is of little confequence whether the first and principal direction was against Bennington, or Arlington, or any other district, as my intelligence might have varied respecting the deposits of corn and cattle of the enemy. At the fame time I mult observe it is begging the queftion, to argue that Bennington was not the real, original object, becaufe Bennington was not mentioned in the draft of inflructions. A man must indeed be void of military and political addrefs, to put upon paper a critical defign, where furprize was in queflion, and every thing depended upon fecrefy. Though it were true, that I meant only Bennington, and thought of nothing lefs than the progrefs of the expedition, in the extent of the order, I certainly would not now affirm it, becaufe I could not prove it; and becaufe it would feem, that I fearched for remote and obfeure juffification, not relying upon that which was manifeft; but furely there is nothing new or improbable in the idea, that a general fhould difguife his real intentions at the outfet of an expedition, even from the officer whom he appointed to execute them, provided a communication with that officer was certain and not remote.

This review of the affair of Bennington, tho' long, I truft will not be deemed mifplaced; and from the different parts of it, I think, will clearly be eftablished the few following affertions.

ift. That the defign upon Bennington was justified by the circumstances of the time.

2d. That there was no reafon to fuppofe the force of the enemy there greater than what the detachment was adequate to defeat.

3d. That when the force was diffeovered to be greater, the ill confequences would have been avoided had not Colonel Baume deviated from his inftructions, by commit-

sth. That the ftrength of the enemy was merely accidental.

And, as a final obfervation, I will add, that when a minifler flates a common accident of war, independent of any general action, unattended with any lofs that could affect the main flrength of the army, and little more than the milearriage of a foraging party, to have been fatal to a whole campaign, of which he had directed the progrets and apportioned the force, he makes but an ill compliment to his own judgment.

The next clais of proofs in regular progression, applies to the difficulty of bringing forward a magazine of provision, after the difappointment of obtaining live flock and flower at Bennington. It has been thewn, by the evidence of Captain Money, Licutenant Colonel Kingfton, and the authentic memorandums of Sir Francis Clarke, that carly in the month of August it was no cafy talk to fupply the daily confumption of the army. Our powers were afterwards, in fome degree, encreafed by the arrival of more contract hories, acquifitions of more ox-teams from the country, and the great vigilance exerted in the departments of the quarter-mafter-general and infpector, whole allifants had been augmented.

A minute invefligation of this operation I am fenfible will be thought dry, and perhaps unnecellary, by general readers-they will pais it over-but there are those who have laid much firefs upon a wafte of time, and who take delight in tracing the fmall parts of a fubject with ferupalous exactness. With fuch it is my duty, as a perfon on my defence, to enter into detail, and I will lay my ground in the queflion put to Captain Money in his crofs-examination and his anfwer.

Q. Why did the Army remain from the 16th of August to the 13th of September " before they croffed the Hudfon's-River to engage the Rebels at Stillwater ?"

A. " To bring forward a fufficient quantity of provisions and artillery, to enable the " General to give up his communication."

With all the powers of conveyance poffible to be muflered, Captain Money computes, (and his computation tallies nearly with the table formed by the Commiflary-General) ney, 20; and for the that five days provision, viz. four for forming the magazine and one for daily confumption, was the most that could be conveyed at once. count of the

To bring this to an average I will affume only two days for accidents of weather, roads, fatigue of cattle, breaking of carriages, and other common difappointments : evidence from this is much lefs time than according to the evidence might be allowed, and upon 9. 1210 25. This computation it would take ten days to convey the magazine to Fort Edward only. The

The flage from thence to the encampment and intended depofitary muft not be computed by diffance but by impediments. The rapids of the river and the different carryingplaces have been deferibed by the witnefles, and it refults that this flage was much longer in point of time than the former one. It was not poffible to keep the transforts going at both flages together for the ten days mentioned, becaufe there were not boats in the river fufficient for more than the daily fupply; nor could they have been conveyed there in that time by any poffible means, for thefe reafons; the boat carriages, which were of a confiruction fimilar to timber carriages ufed in England, were only twelve in number, and each carriage employed fix horfes or four oxen to draw it; and could any other means of draft for boats over land have been contrived, or cattle have been fupplied from the artillery, or any other department, all would have been ufelefs; becaufe the boats themfelves, to a greater amount than thofe above fpecified, were wanting till after the whole of the provision transport between Ticonderoga and Fort George, upon which they were employed, was finithed, and it had barely kept pace fo as to fupply the land transport between Fort George and Fort Edward.

I defire only an allowance of fifteen days for the carriage over the fecond flage, and it will thus take, in the whole, twenty-five days to form the magazine alone.

I claim no additional allowance of time for conveying one hundred boats, at leaft, through the difficulties of land and water, in the two flages, but comprise that labour among the reft of the laft fifteen days. It must be neverthelefs obferved, that even this number was flort of what was wanting, and, to fave time, all the artificers were employed in building feouls (fourteen of which were finished during the tranfport) to make water craft, in the whole fufficient to carry the magazine forward, after the communication fhould be at an end. The new caulking the boats, though indifpenfibly neceflary to great part of them, after paffing the lakes loaded, and afterwards being flaken and damaged by land carriage, is another work which I throw into the laft fifteen days of the transport, or into the fubfequent four days, which must at the leaft be allotted for loading the magazine, and arranging the order of its proceeding both in refpect to navigation and defence. This was committed to very expert naval oflicers, and was matter of no trivial concern, or eafy execution.

The whole bufinefs, according to the above reprefentation and calculation, both which are founded upon evidence, would have taken twenty-nine days: twentyfeven only were employed, viz. from August the 16th to September the 13th. The exertions in fact, outwent the calculation; and I challenge the most minute speculatist, to try the time and the powers we possible distribution of carriages and cattle, different from that which was practifed, and I will venture to fay none will be found lefs dilatory.

It appears clearly in proof, that no impediment to this transport was occasioned by the interference of the artillery; but it has been implied by fome questions in the cross examinations, that if the artillery did not interfere with the transport, the transport ought to have interfered with the artillery, and that by appropriating their horses to the provision train, much time might have been faved.

It might be a fufficient anfwer, that the artillery, for the reafons I have before affigned was not to be difpenfed with, and confequently the horfes were to be preferved: but I befides have fhewn, that they could not have been of ufe to the transport of the boats; and to fatisfy every feruple, and to fhew how miftaken they are who fuppofe an advantage was to be obtained by the employment of artillery horfes to convey provisions, I now offer to their reflection the additional fact, that they could have been of no avail, becaufe we had neither carts nor pack-faddles, more than were in ufe already.

That the baggage of the army was an impediment to the transport, is another accufation clearly confuted by the united evidence of Lieutenant Colonel Kingfton and Captain Money.*

made, whether the army might not have proceedwithout flores ? Ideaot arapid

It is very natural for men of all defcriptions, to apply the idea of a rapid march to a diffance of fifty miles, for it is not more measuring in a streight line from Fort Ed- march. ward to Albany, and it will be proper to confider the principle and practibility of fuch march, with respect to two diffinet periods, the one before, the other after the attempt upon Bennington.

With respect to the first, it will be remembered, that in the state the roads then were, and with the refources then to be employed, no provision before-hand was attainable. Therefore, to have brought the plan of a rapid advance within the compass of a possibility, the operation must have begun by marching the whole rapidly backward, in order to load the men with their packs of provisions. How the troops, zealous as they were, would have relified a ftep fo uncommon in its nature, and productive of fo much unexpected fatigue, particularly how the Germans would have been to perfuaded of the necessity as to have undertaken it with good will, cannot be afcertained.

But these doubts apart, it remains to be confidered, how the troops were to pake two very large rivers, the Hudson and the Mohawk, without previous provision for a bridge, or water-craft for conveying large bodies at once. Every conceffion a fanguine projector can defire shall be made upon this point also; the contrivance of rafts, bound together by twigs and strips of bark, as in fact was practifed at this very period for the paffage of Frafer's corps over Hudfon's River, shall be admitted equally practicable for the whole army; and in argument be it trufted to chance to pafs the Mohawk in the fame way; or fhould it fail, let recourfe be had to the ford, which is known to be practicable, except after beavy rains, near Schenectady, about fifteen miles from the mouth of the river.

Thefe conceffions granted, we will suppose the army on the bank of the Hudson's River, where they afterwards paffed it.

The idea of a rapid march will of courfe be exempt from all thought of perfonal incumbrances (provision exempted) and the foldier will fland represented in the imagination, trim and nimble as he is feen at an exercife in an English encamo-ment—Indeed it is neceffary he fhould be confidered in that form; for nothing can be more repugnant to a project of rapidity, than the foldier's load, were he to carry all the articles belonging to him in a campaign.*

But it may be faid, and with truth, that troops are ufually relieved from a confiderable part of this burthen, and many examples of this relief may be brought from the general cuftom of fervice, and from many movements of General Howe's army in particular—nay more, it was a frequent practice of the very army in queftion, to march free from knapfacks and camp equipage. The Wigwam, or hut conftructed of boughs, may be made a very wholfome fubfitute for a tent; and when victual can be cooked before-hand, even the camp kettle for an expeditious march may be laid afide. All thefe examples are admitted: but they all imply conveniencies for the feveral articles to follow, and to be brought up in due time. In our cafe they muft have been loft irrecoverably.

Will it be argued, that fome medium might have been devifed? And although it were impossible, confishently with the idea of rapidity, to carry forward more provision than for bare fullenance during the march, yet carts might have been found fufficient to carry the men's knapfacks, and camp kettles, and other indifpenfible articles? This fuppofition would betray a great ignorance of the country. From Saratoga to Albany there is only one road practicable for wheel carriage. There are many places where by deflroying the bridges over deep gullies which difcharge themfelves into the main river, a paffage would be rendered impoffible, not only for a wheel carriage, but a horfe. There are others where the road is bounded by the river on one fide, and by almost perpendicular ascents covered with wood on the other. Here the very flort work of felling a few trees would flop all paffage. The expence of time to remove these obstructions, or to make new roads, would have brought famine. All notion, therefore, of conveying any articles more than could be carried upon men's thoulders muft ceafe. The notion of artillery, even the finallest pieces, must also cease of course, not even a little ammunition-tumbril could. have found its way .- An eafy facrifice to the theorifts, who have maintained the inutility of artillery : but any officer who has feen the ground of this fuppofed march, would point out a dozen paffes, not to fpeak of the paffage of the Mohawk, where, ftrengthened with abattis and fuch other works as the rebels are expert in making in a very few hours, five hundred militia would ftop for a time, ten times their number of the best troops in the world who had not artillery to affift them.

* They could of a knapfack, containing his bodily neceffaries, a blanket, a haverfack with provifions, a carteen, a hatchet, and a fifth fhare of the general camp equipage belonging to his tent. Thefe artieles (reckoning the provision to be for four days) added to his accourtements, arms, and fixty rounds of animunition, make a bulk totally incompatible with combat, and a weight of about fixty pounds.

Having

Having stated these objections to the principle of a rapid march, let us now, from the knowledge that has been fince obtained of circumstances, confider what would have been the certain confequences of the attempt.

Those who are acquainted with the capticious workings of the tempers of men, will not wonder at the difficulty of prevailing upon a common foldier in any exigency to hufband his provificas. In a fettled camp, the young foldier has very fhort fare on the fourth day after delivery : but upon a march in bad weather and bad roads, when the weary foot flips back at every flep, and a general curfe is provoked at the weight that caufes the retardment, he must be a patient veteran, and of much experience in fearcity, who is not tempted to throw the whole contents of the haverfack into the mire. He feels the prefent incumbrance grievous— Want is a day remote.—" Let the General find a fupply : it is the King's caufeand the General's intereft—he will never let the foldier be ftarved."

This is common reasoning in the ranks. I state it for those who have not seen fatiguing service, and may have a judgment to form upon it. It need not be applied to the prefent confideration; for had the march taken place at the time it ought to have done, upon the principle of the defenders of that fcheme, the time that Frafer's corps first past the river upon the bridge of rafts, waste would only have confpired to accomplifh in three days a ruin that with the beft hufbandry would have been inevitable in fix: for the fame fall of rain which it has been flewn in evidence actually carried away the bridge a very few days after it was conftructed, neceffarily made the ford of the Mohawk for an advance, and every ford of the Hudfon's River for a return, impaffable. It hardly need be noticed, that a flood muft have made any use of rafts, could they have been timely obtained, equally impracticable. The army, therefore, would have become victims to famine, without a blow, or a fingle effort of the enemy. Saratoga mult have been the anticipated feene of furrender, without other conditions than the mercy of fuftenance; the whole force of Mr. Gates would have been loofe to co-operate with Mr. Washington, with the finest feafon of the campaign before them; and the General of the northern army, without a shadow of professional defence, and precluded from the plea usually so perfualive, that he fought hard before he failed, must have met the centure of his Sovereign and a juftly offended country, with none to support him but the prefent advocates of a rapid march. Could his dependence have been fure even upon them? Would they not rather have adhered to their opposite and original fystem (for ftrange as it is, the fame men have fupported both) and have afferted, that it was extreme rafhneis to crofs the Hudfon's River at all?

If what I have faid in objection to the principle and practicability of a rapid march to Albany, previous to the attempt upon Bennington, has weight, very little need be added on the fubject afterwards, becaufe every objection will multiply upon the mind of the most curfory observer. I shall only call the attention to a very few effential circumstances. The enemy was in force; a proof of his being fo is, that Mr. Gates quitted his polition behind the Mohawk, which was his flrongest, and advanced to Stillwater. The force found at Bennington upon the march from the Hampshire Grants to the main army, proved the vigour and alacrity of the enemy in that country. The circumstances of the action at Bennington established a yet more melancholy conviction of the fallacy of any dependence upon fuppofed friends. The noble Lord has faid, that " I never defpaired of the campaign before the affair of Bennington; that I had no doubt of gaining Albany in as fhort a time as the army (in due condition of fupply) could accomplifh the march." I acknowledge the truth of the affertions in their fulleft extent; all my letters at the time fliew it. I will go further, and in one fenfe apply with the noble Lord the epithet "fatal" to the affair of Bennington. The knowledge I acquired of the professors of loyalty was "fatal," and put an end to every expectation from enterprize unfuftained by dint of force. It would have been excefs of frenzy to have truited for fustenance to the plentiful region of Albany. Had the march thither been practicable in all refpects, and even unopposed, (which nobody will think would have been the cafe) the enemy finding the British army unsupplied, would only have had to compel the Tories to drive the cattle and deftroy the corn or the corn mills, and the convention of Albany inftead of Saratoga muft have followed. Would the Tories have rifen? Why did they not rife round Albany and below it, at the time they found Mr. Gates's army increasing by feparate and diftinct parties from remote diffances? They were better qualified by their fituation to catch the favourable moment than I was to advife it. Why did they not rife in that populous and as fuppofed well affected diftrict, the German Flats, at the time St. Leger was before Fort Stanwix? A critical infurrection from any one point of the compass within diffance to create diversion, would probably have fecured the fuccefs of the campaign.

Col. St. Leger's letter. No. V. But to revert to the encrease of reasons against a rapid march after the affair of Bennington. It was then also known, that by the false intelligence respecting the strength of Fort Stanwix, the infamous behaviour of the Indians, and the wapt of the promifed co-operation of the loyal inhabitants, Lieut. Col. St. Leger had been obliged to retreat. The first plausible motive in favour of hazardous hafte, the facilitating his defcent of the Mohawk, was thus at an end. The prospect of finding the enemy dispersed it has before been shewn was over.

The impofibility of preferving a communication was also evident. Was the army to have proceeded to action without hospital flores, as well as without victual? The general who carries troops into fire without precautions to alleviate the certain confequences, takes a fure flep to alienate the affections, and defroy the ardour of the foldier-he exacts more than human fpirit can furnish. Men need not be habituated to fields of battle to be convinced of this truth. Let the mind reft for a moment on the objects which will rife within it after the mention of action, and then reflect, there is not a mattrafs for broken bones, nor a cordial for agony and faintnefs. They who talk of these rapid marches, suppose no opposition, or no suffering in confequence of opposition. The hundreds of wounded men to be cruelly abandoned (if the reft could be prevailed upon to abandon those whose case might the next day be their own) make no part of the confideration of these gentlemen of precipitate imaginations. But officers who are refponfible to God and their country for the armies they conduct, cannot fo eafily overlook fuch objects; and muft be patient at leaft till a few hundred beds, and a proper proportion of medicine and chirurgical materials, can be brought up for troops that are to fight as well as to march.

The confideration of rapid movement has run into much length: the firefs laid upon it in the crofs-examination, was the caufe. I beg leave very flortly to recapitulate the principal points, and shall then difinits it to the public judgment, without great apprehention of having it renewed even in fpeculation.

Had a proper flore of live cattle been obtained by the expedition to Bennington (and by the bye it will be remembered, that had the loyalist of the country been really of the number and defcription reprefented, that acquifition might have been made without an action) all the carriages might have been appropriated folely to the conveyance of flour, hospital accommodations, entrenching tools, and other abfolute neceffaries; and a rapid march to Albany might have been hazarded.

After the expedition to Bennington had failed of that great purpole, had a garrifon for Ticonderoga been attainable from Canada, and the force then at Ticonderoga been brought forward, to establish a post of communication, and fecure a paffage of the river by a fortified bridge, and redoubts upon the heights which every where command the river, on one thore or the other, a forced march might ftill have been justifiable, becaufe a retreat was fecure : but, divested of both thefe refources, a rapid movement must inevitably have led to rapid ruin.

Having gone through all the material points previous to the 13th of September, and fhewn, I truft, by diffinct evidence, as well as reafoning, the expediency of the march from Skenefborough to Fort Edward; the principle of the expedition to Bennington; the caufe of its failure; the efforts used to bring forwards the provi- Review of the fion and neceffary flores, and the impracticability of proceeding without those mention of ftores; the attention of the reader will now be carried to a review of the measure Hudion's of paffing the Hudfon's River on that day.

I entered pretty fully, in my Narrative, into the principles which then actuated me; and I shall not enlarge upon them. I have only to request every man who has been led to doubt whether I was required by duty, fituation, the voice of the army, and the voice of reafon, to advance and fight, to follow the confideration of those principles, with a revifal of the applicable part of the verbal evidence, and I will then venture further to appeal to their judgment, whether, inftead of being required, I was not compelled, by the flate of things, to act as I did; even inderington's, 32 pendently of the peremptory tenor of my orders, which, confident in the ftrength of my cafe, I have purposely omitted, upon this occasion, to reconfider.

> In regard to the point to much agitated in this country, though with no foundation whatever from any thing that happened in America, Brigadier Frafer's fentiments upon this measure of passing the Hudson's River, it would be trifling with the patience of the reader to recapitulate and point the evidence to a matter which I do not believe there is a man fo prejudiced as now to difpute, viz. that that officer joined in opinion and impatience with the reft of the army. But though the fallehoods to grofsly and to long imposed upon the public, respecting this matter, are no more, it may not be unworthy curiofity to explore their origin and trace their progrefs.

Progrefs of the fallehoods propageted.

It is not difficult to different that the fufpicion of difference of opinion in the army, upon the measure of passing the Hudson's River, arole from the paragraph in my public letter from Albany to the Secretary of State, wherein I fay that I had called no council upon that fubject, but had acted upon my own judgment of the peremptory tenor of my orders.

That a man, chief in authority, fhould take entirely upon himfelf a measure of doubtful confequence, and upon mere principle preclude himfelf from any future means of fhifting or dividing the blame that might enfue, appeared incredible at Whitehall: the greater part of that political fchool concluded the profession of fuch candour must be a fineffe, and that, in fact, the General had not communicated wich his officers, becaufe he knew opinions would have been against him.

When little minds think they have got a clue of littlenefs it is wonderful with what real and dexterity they purfue and improve it. Correspondence and intelligence were not wanting; difappointed jobbers, difcarded fervants, diffatisfied fugitives of every fort, fpies, tale-bearers, and fycophants, whom it is to the honour of a Generul to have his enemies, and a difgrace to Office to encourage, abounded in town; and the primary idea once given, it was carried forward by very ready affiftance, and ever. logical deduction. --- As thus :

The General declares in his difpatch, he called no man into council upon the measure of passing the Hudson's River: Therefore, his officers differed in opinion upon the expediency of advancing.

To differ in opinion upon that expediency, they must construe his orders not to be peremptory : Therefore, he ftands fingle in the interpretation he put upon his orders.

If his officers faw that he was unadvifedly and defparately leading his army to death, they would certainly remonstrate: Therefore, they remonstrated.

The remonstrance would naturally be made to him by superior officers: Therefore, the conclusion follows; Major General Phillips and Brigadier General Fraser actually made a remonstrance against passing the Hudson's River.

General Reidefel, who was next in rank to General Phillips, feems to have been forgotten. He was probably overlooked in the eagernefs to get at General Frafer, on whofe name the important ftrefs was laid, and for two palpable reafons; the one, that his name flood high in the public effimation, and greatly as it deferved fo to ftand, perhaps it acquired, upon this intended ufe, more juffice from fome quarters than it would otherwife have received.

The fecond and more prevalent reafon was, that Brigadier General Frafer was dead.

Thus then ftood the affertion when I arrived in England: "Major General Phillips and Brigadier General Frafer remonstrated against passing the Hudson's River, which movement was the cause of all the subsequent missfertunes." And having traced this falsehood to its maturity, it now may be equally curious to follow its decline.

After my arrival in England, the friendship, and general conformity of fentiment between General Phillips and me became more known. He was alive, and might possibly foon return. His name was therefore withdrawn from the remonstrance, and referved, in case he did not return, to give colour to a second falsehood,* then kept back, but fince produced as one of the last efforts of malignity in the course of the late enquiry.

The first public occasion that offered was feized by me to pledge my honour upon the whole story of difugreement of opinion being false, and I dared any man to produce a letter or a fentence, from Brigadier Fraser or any other officer, to authorife a sufficient of its being true. Lieutenant General Fraser, upon the same occasion in the House of Commons, voluntarily and generously entered into my justification, upon the authority of his correspondence with his late relation, and the knowledge of his general fentiments.

The falfchood was immediately fo far weakened, that the word Remonstrance was changed into Opinion. "Brigadier Frafer's opinion was against passing the Hudson's River;" and thus it remained, now and then affisted and cheristed, when it was very languid, by a whisper, "that there were shill letters to be produced," till the late enquiry took place; and the evidence of Lord Balcarras, Lord Harrington,

Colonel Kingfton, &c. gave the death blow to the laft ftruggling efforts of that calumny. The rafine is of paffing the Hudfon's River was obliterated; every comment upon that $fa^{*}al$ ftep was fuddenly dropt, as if the river had funk under ground; the charge, with the full accompaniment of General Frafer's difapprobation, remonftrance, &c. &c. was fhifted; the minifter was as nimble as his confederates, and exclaimed upon the fatality of the expedition to Bennington.

And here I shall finally reft the support I have been to anxious to derive from that grave which has been ranfacked by my adversaries for evidence against me. As a foldier I avow a pride in having possified Brigadier Frafer's effeem. As a defendant I am tensible I have dwelt upon it to a fault. The precedent of a Chief in Command fuffering the comments of an inferior to be a test of his actions, requires an apology to my profession. It lies in the eminence of my friend's character. His approbation gave a grace to my defence, and I was impatient to confute the calumny that would have robbed me of it; but to admit that it was necessary for my acquittal would be to countenance and forward the most pernicious and preposterous doctrine that ever was practified to millead the public, and to betray the fervice.

When a minifter or his confederates lean upon private report, table talk, and half fentences, to depreciate an officer they dare not themfelves accufe, it is a feeblenefs of vengeance that, in its firft afpect, is contemptible in the extreme; but it calls for our indignation when we extend our view to its principle and effects. They operate to the very inversion of due patronage, and the abfolute extinction of every idea upon which command ought to be beftowed, or can efficacioufly be exercifed; they tend to encourage officers to be fpies and informers; to render camps and fleets, properly the refidence of harmony and honour, the feats of fulpicion, difcord, faction, treachery, and mutiny.

The diverfity and importance of the matter brought to review in the period of the campaign I am now clofing, has led to greater length than I was aware of; but I cannot difinifs it without one reference, addreffed to fuch of the examiners of my conduct as have infifted upon the tardinefs of the northern army.

Comparative view of the campaigns in 1759 and 1777.

The reference I would plead is to a campaign in the fame country, memorable for having been conducted by an officer whofe example must be acknowledged, at this juncture, to be of fplendid and peculiar authority; I mean the campaign of Lord Amherft, in the year 1759.

The great points of the war in America that year were to divide the enemy's force, and at the fame time to direct the feveral operations with fuch concurrence, thar, though feparate and remote, they fhould affift each other. The first objects of the army ments of an inferior officer no proper teft of a fuperior's conduct.

army to which I allude were to reduce Ticonderoga and Crown Point, and the ultimate and most important one was to effect a junction with Mr. Wolfe before Quebec.

Thus far there is great fimilarity between the plans of the two campaigns, except that the points from which the armies marched, and to which they were defined, were exactly reverfed.

In the Spring, 1759, the army, then affembled at Albany, took the field as early as the feafon would admit : but fuch were the natural impediments of the country, that though imported by the unanimous zeal of the inhabitants, and furnifhed with abundant impelies of draft cattle, carriages, water-craft, and every other neceffary; the feveral departments well directed, and no enemy to oppose the march, the General (Lord Amherft) was not able to commence the attack of Ticonderoga till the 7th of July, when the enemy abandoned that post, and retreated to Crown Point.

The diffance from Albany to Fort George is between fixty and feventy miles, the paffage over Lake George to Ticonderoga about forty miles.

The General had reafon to believe that Crown Point would be given up at his approach as precipitately as Ticonderoga had been. He did not, however, reach it, a diffance of thirteen miles, and water-carriage at will, till the 14th of August.

Was it at that time afked by the minister or his adherents, what was the army doing not to purfue a flying enemy?——Not to purfue when the whole country behind was their own, and magazines, baggage, hospitals, and every other neceffary, might follow at leifure, and in fecurity! When it was forefeen an encrease of fleet was to be constructed at Crown Point, to obtain the superiority over the enemy upon Lake Champlain, and consequently that every day's delay, in becoming master of that post, risked the campaign 1

Although these enquiries were not then suggested to the public, an answer to them has been given, greatly to the honour of the General, in a very impartial hiftory of that time. "The army was employed in repairing the fortifications at "Ticonderoga; and the General took his measures with the same care as if he ex-" pected an obstinate defence, and attempt to surprise him on his march."

The enemy actually did abandon Crown Point on the approach of the General, the 14th of August; and, as soon as in possibilition of that possible, he set about fortifying it as he had done Ticonderoga. The time confumed in that operation, and in building new vessels, brought it to the middle of October before the General could embark upon the Lake. A suffere, undoubtedly, of great anxiety; for the great end of the campaign, the junction of the two armies, upon which the reduction of all Canada was thought to depend, was unattained.

But did the minister or his adherents then cavil at the tardiness of that army?— Enterprising, fanguine, and impetuous, as was the character of that minister's R 2 counts of that ery comground ; tion, refederates,

The beflowed emphatic praifes on his General, and a failing campaign became part of that bafts, from which he his accended to the high honours he now defervedly poffetfes.

It would be great pretumption, and it is far from being intended, to draw any parallels or interencentrom the campaigns of 1.5.9 and 1777, except field as merely apply to contomption of time under fimilar cucumflances. In other points, the pretentions of the refpetive Generals may be as different as their fortunes 1 or, to unake a much clearer diffinction, and a yet flronger contraft, as wide atunder as the autpress under which they terved, those of Mr. Pitt and of Lord George German.

Appenix. No. XIV. Such was the fuminary of affairs given in unvelter from Albany to the feetetary of flate. At the time it was written, I little expected to have occafion for any other reflimony of my actions; and it has therefore been fuppofed, that I gave them a colouring more fpecious than exact. Uhis is the flage of my defence in which I am defirons to bring that matter to judgment; and I have quoted the above paffage, expressly to lead the attention of every examiner to the whole of that letter. I et it now be confidered, unitedly with my late narrative, and both be compared in detail with the evidence—I am bold to flake my caufe upon the iffire—And reffing upon these references, my comments upon this period, though it is the moff important, will be therter than upon either of the former; the proofs alfo are more collected, and the matters controvened or flatted in crofs examination are fewer.

The first remark 1 have to make is, that while the managers of the minister's caute have never admitted a doubt of the reality of those movements in the campaiga, with the propriety of which their ingenuity promifed them even a colourable caufe of eavil, they have had the addrets, when any little skill and conduct were generally acknowledged, to call the existence of such movements into question. I cannot make this remark more pertinently than at prefent, when the march of the army, army, preceding the action of the 19th of September, is in its due place the object of notice—9 A pretty combination of columns and deployments composed at Al " bany, and very fit for a Gazette," This fort of language 1 believe moft perform have heard, who have converted with the dependents or runners of office, and it will be my excute for fubmitting to the judgment of my probellion a plan of the movement. It will flow in fome depice the difficulties that the nature of the count try oppoind to a combined march of columns; and at the fame time the deferivant rage (I might fay the certain defeat) that intil have been toffained, had the array been only in one column upon the ground where it was attacked, or had the combination of the other columns, thole of General Frafer in particular, been lefs exa/t to the point of time in which it was expedient they fliond arrive and form.

To prove that this march was not compoled at Albany, I refer to feveral witheffes, but particularly to the Earl of Harrington. This fituation, as my aid de coup, gave him a general knowledge of a movement, that an other remployed in the execution of a fingle part of it could not have acquired. It will be confidered by all who $t = q e^{2\pi}$ know the qualities of my noble friend, as very honomable to the difpolitions of that day, that they are to curcumfrantially retained in to diffinguithing a round; and for my own part, I cannot commit them to military judgment under a better trust than single a's the accuracy of his defeription.

I thall not therefore detain the reader an inflant longer from a fubject to worthy his attention, as the evidence refpecting the behaviour of the troops in the enfineevents of that day.

Few actions have been characterized by more obfinitely in attack or defence. The Britith hayonet was repeatedly tried meffectually. Eleven hondred British folders, foiled in thele truth, hore incellant fire from a forceffion of freth troops in hyperior. A const numbers, for above four hours, and after a lofs of above a third of their numbers (and in one of the regiments above two thirds) forced the energy at laft. Of a de- tord the tachment of a cuptum and forty eight autiliery men, the captain and thirty-fix were transformer killed or wounded. Thefe facts are marked by a concurrence of evidence that no ignority man will diffute. The tribute of praife due to fuch troops will not be wanting in this generous nation; and it will as certainly be accompanied with a 100 por- ction of thame to thole who have dated to depreciate or fully valour to confractouswho have their cars open only to the prejudice of American cowardice; and having the torses, been always loud upon that courtly topic, fliffe the glory of their countrymen to Lient, Cal maintain a bafe confittency.

It will be observable from the accounts of the killed and wounded, that the loss of officers in all the actions of the campaign was proportionably much greater than that of the private men: and as this observation applies particularly to the action we are confidering, it may not be improper to account for it in this place.

The enemy had with their army great numbers of markfmen, armed with riflebarrel pieces : thefe, during an engagement, hovered upon the flanks in finall detachments, and were very expert in fecuring themfelves, and in fhifting their ground. In this action, many placed themselves in high trees in the rear of their own line, and there was feldom a minute's interval of fmoke in any part of our line without officers being taken off by fingle flot. *

It will naturally be supposed, that the Indians would be of great use against this mode of fighting. The example of those that remained after the great defertion proved the contrary, for not a man of them was to be brought within the found of a ritle thot. The Canadians were formerly very expert in fervice of this nature ; but befides the change in their military character, which I noticed before, their beft officer was killed early in the action, which event caft a general damp upon the corps. A few of the Provincials were ferviceable : but the beft men I had to oppofe as marktimen, were the German chaffeurs, though their number was fo finall, as not to be one to twenty of the enemy.

fhew the folly there would be in bringing a military caufe to a parliamentary enquiry, upon the prefumption that any parts of it would be left unexamined. The very want of practical knowledge in the enquirers renders them more inquifitive, and much more tenacious of doubts and furmiles, than they would otherwife be : for inflance; I do not believe that with an army exhausted by a long and fevere action, and deprived of an uncommon portion of officers, the queftion of attacking the enemy next morning would have occurred to any man of professional judgment : that enemy too in a polition of which no further knowledge could be obtained than that it was covered by an intrenchment and abattis, and the approach to be made through a thick wood, without any avenue cut, or a fingle post fortified to fecure a retreat, or to cover the magazine, which afforded the only poffible means of fubfiftence.

Equally remote would be the thoughts of military men from attacking a few days after, when it appeared I had received a letter from Sir Henry Clinton, informing me of a diversion to powerful as an attack upon Fort Montgomery to be undertaken as at that very time.

The queftions relating to the enemy having their baggage packed, if that circum-Lord Balcar. fance was meant as an indication that they meant to retreat, is another proof how little the queftioners knew of fervice. It does not appear in evidence how the fact was: but no officer will diffute, that if the enemy had not only packed their baggage, but actually conveyed it to the other fide the river, they would have acted conformably to the general practice of fervice when action is expected; and to no circumftance of fervice more than to that when it is refolved to diffute a post to the last extremity.

^{*} Capt. Green, aid de camp to Major General Phillips, was flot through the arm by one of thefe markfmen as he was delivering me a metlage. I learned, after the convention, from the commanding officer of the ritlemen, that the flot was meant for me; and as the captain was feen to fall from his horfe, it was for fome hours believed in the enemy's army that I was killed. My efcape was owing to the captain happening to have a laced furniture to his faddle, which made him miltaken for the general.

Upon the whole of my fituation at that time, I am fo confident that it was the part of an officer to fortify and wait events, that I am only further intent to prove that I fortified properly, the nature of the ground and my feveral purpofes confidered. Upon this principle I fubmit the plan annexed. It will alfo fhew the na ture of the ground between the two armies, and ferve to explain the difficulties the witneffes express of taking a view of the enemy's left: but it will be confidered, that befides thefe apparent obftacles to a near approach, the enemy abounded in militia, which supplied out-posts and fcouts, that could by no means be driven in without making the army liable to a general action.

As for any other intelligence than what could be obtained by eye-fight it was generally contradictory, always imperfect; the deferters were often fufpicious, the prifoners very few. I never faw any inftance of fervice where it was fo difficult to obtain information. Among people fpeaking the fame language with ourfelves, and many of them profeffing the moft favourable difpositions, fearcely any could be prevailed upon, by rewards or principle, to risk his perfon for the purpose of intelligence.

In regard to the crofs-examination, refpecting the time neceffary for the confurction of the redoubts and other works, I neither thought it worth while to conteft it at the time, nor fhall I conteft it now, though nothing would be more eafy than to fhew that there was a great deal of neceffary labour which the queftions did not lead to, and confequently the witneffes could not with propriety enter intothe explanation of them. But what makes the confumption of time to me immaterial is, that I place my juftification upon the expediency of waiting the co-operation from Sir Henry Clinton. It is in proof, that I received a letter from him the day after the action of the 19th, * informing me that he meditated an attack upon Fort Montgomery as at that very time. And as I have already faid, that I fhould have thought it the part of madnefs to have rifked an attack upon the enemy, in the weak flate of my army, for fome time after the late action, and under the expectation of fo powerful a diverfion; fo fhould I have deferred it longer, even after being recruited from the hofpital, on account of the fame expectation, and the further chance of the reinforcement of Colonel St. Leger's corps, and perhaps a convoy of provi-tions from Ticonderoga : to far am I from conceiving the part delay blameable, that I acknowledge the meafure of the 7th of October was precipitated by fome days, by the forage being become to fearce, that a fupply could only be obtained by a movement of the army.

If any perfons have fuppofed, that what has been called the inactive flate of the army at this period was a flate of reft, they are as much miftaken as they would be if they supposed it in any other circumstance comfortable. From the 20th of September to the 7th of October, the armies were fo near, that not a night paffed without firing, and fometimes concerted attacks upon our advanced picquets; no foraging party could be made without great detachments to cover it; it was the plan of the enemy to harrafs the arm; by conftant alarms, and their fuperiority of numbers enabled them to attempt it without fatigue to themfelves.

By being habituated to fire, our foldiers became indifferent to it, and were capable of eating or fleeping when it was very near them : but I do not believe either officer or foldier ever flept during that interval without his cloaths, or that any general officer, or commander of a regiment, passed a fingle night without being upon his legs occafionally at different hours, and constantly an hour before day-light.

The circumflances in general of the action of the 7th of October fland in that ar-Lord Balcarragement in the evidence of the Earl of Balcarras, Earl of Harrington, Lieut. Col. Kingflon, and Captain Money, and have been to little ontroverted by crofsrington, 57, examination, that any length of comment upon them is unneceffary. I will only observe, that the movement of the enemy under General Arnold, mentioned in my Narrative, is confirmed as far as circumftantial teffimony can confirm it, by Captain ney, 35tu 48 Money. And if there can be any perfons, who, after confidering that circumflance, and the politive proof of the fublequent obftinacy, in the attack upon the poft of See alfo Plan

Lord Balcarras, and various other actions of that day, continue to doubt, that the Americans poffels the quality and faculty of fighting (call it by whatever term they pleafe) they are of a prejudice that it would be very abfurd longer to contend with.

But though comments upon this part of the evidence may be fpared, the remembrance of what I perfonally underwent cannot fo eafily be fupprefied; and I am fure I shall not outgo the indulgence of the candid, if in delineating fituations fo affecting, I add feelings to juffification. The defence of military conduct is an interefting point of professional honour; but to vindicate the heart, is a duty to God and to iociety at large.

Few conjunctures in the campaign I nave been defcribing, few, perhaps, upon military record, can be found fo diffinguished by exigencies, or productive of fuch critical and anxious calls upon public character, and private affection, as that which now took place.

Capt, Mo-

v,

In the first place, the polition of the army was untenable, and yet an immediate Lord Balcarretreat was impoffible; not only from the fatigue of the troops, but from the necessity rai, 5:of delivering fresh ammunition and provisions.

The loffes in the action were uncommonly fevere. Sir Francis Clarke, my aid-decamp, had originally recommended himfelf to my attention by his talents and diligence : as fervice and intimacy opened his character more, he became endeared to me by every quality that can create effectn. I loft in him an uleful affiftant, an amiable companion, an attached ftiend : the flate was deprived by his death, of one of the faireft promifes of an able general.

The fate of Colonel Ackland, taken prifoner, and then supposed to be mortally wounded, was a fecond fource of anxiety-General Frafer was expiring.

in the course of the action, a flot had passed through my hat, and another had torn my wailtcoat. I fhould be forry to be thought at any time infenfible to the protecting hand of Providence; but I ever more particularly confidered (and I hope not fuperfititionally) a foldier's hair-breadth efcapes as incentives to duty, a marked renewal of the truft of Being, for the due purposes of a public station ; and under that reflection to lofe our fortitude, by giving way to our affections; to be diverted by any pofilible felf emotion from meeting a prefent exigency with our beft faculties, were at once difhonour and impiety.

Having therefore put alide for a time my private fendations, it has been flewn that Lord Balcar-I effected an entire change in the polition of the army before day-light. The plan will Lord Harfhew the new ground taken up. Early in the morning of the 8th, General Frafer rington, 66. breathed his last-and with the kindest expressions of his affection, his last request was Plan, No. VI. brought me, that he might be carried without parade by the foldiers of his corps to things on the great redoubt, and buried there. The whole day of the 8th of October was correfpondent to this inaufpicious beginning. The hours were meafured by a fuccefilon of immediate cares, encreasing doubts, and melancholy objects. The enemy were formed in two lines. Every part of their disposition, as well as the repeated attacks upon Lord Balcarras's corps, and the cannonade from the plain, kept the troops in rington, 67, momentary expectation of a general action. During this fufpenfe, wounded officers, fome upon crutches, and others even carried upon hand-barrows by their fervants, were occasionally ascending the hill from the hospital tents, to take their share in the action, or follow the march of the army. The generals were employed in exhorting the troops.

About fun-fet the corpfe of General Frafer was brought up the hill, attended only Gen. Frafer's by the officers who had lived in his family. To arrive at the redoubt, it paffed with-funeral. in view of the greatest part of both armies. They who were ignorant that privacy had been requefled, might confirme it negled. We could neither endine that reflection, nor indeed reftrain our natural propentity to priv our laft attention to his remains. The circumflances that enfined cannot be better deferibed than they have been by different witheffes.* The inceffant cannonade during the follomity; the fleady autitude and unaltered voice with which the chap han officiated, though frequently covered with duff, which the flot threw up on all index of him; the mute but expective mixture of fentibility and indignation upon every countenance : thefe objects will remain to the laft of life upon the minds of every man who was prefent. The growing duffkinets added to the feetery, and the whole marked a charafter of that juncture that would make one of the fineft fulgefts for the pareil of a matter that the field ever exhibited—To the canvas and to the faithful page of a more important hiltorian, gallant friend! I confign thy memory. There may thy falents, thy manly virtues, their progrefs and their period, find due diffication; and long may they furvive;——long after the frail record of my pen thall be forgetten.

Night march of the 8th. The reflections ariting from thefe feenes gave place to the perplexities of the night. A defeated army was to retreat from an enemy fluthed with fuccets, much fuperior in front, and occupying flrong polls in the country behind. We were equally liable upon that march to be attacked in front, in flank, or rear. The difportion or march had been concerted as much as circumflances would admit; and it was executed by the officers and the troops in general with a precifion that experience in critical fituations can only teach. The baggage, which could only move in one column, and in a narrow road, fell into the confution which it is impoffible for caution to guard againft in the dark, becaufe a fingle accident of an overturn or a broken wheel, or even the flupidity or drunkennets of a driver, may flop and often confute the motion of the whole line. Care was taken that no fuch accident floudd break the order of the troops; or, if occafion were, of taking a polition to give them time to form.

Lord Harrington, 50, and from 112 to 118,

Continuance of the march on the oth. At day-break the next morning the army had reached very advantageous ground, and took a polition in which it would have been very defirable to receive the enemy. A halt was needflary to refreth the troops, and to give time to the bateaux, loaded with provisions, which had not been able to keep pace with the troops, to come a-breat. A portion of provisions was delivered allo from the bateaux, not without apprehension that that delivery might be the laft : for there were parts of the river in which the boats might be attacked from the other fide to great advantage, notwithflanding the correspondent movement of the army.

* Particularly Lieutenant Colonel Kingdon, 85.

The

The above purposes being effected, the army proceeded in very levere weather, and through exceeding had roads.

Befide- the continuation of difficulties and general fatigue, this day was remarkable for a circumflance of private diffrefs too peculiar and affecting to be omitted. The circumflance to which I allude is Ludy Harriet Ackland's pallage through the enemy's army, to attend her wounded hufband, then their prifoner.

The progrefs of this lady with the army could hardly be thought abruptly or full transition perfluoufly introduced, were it only to for the purpole of authenticating a wonderful renew of the flory .- It would exhibit, if well delineated, an intereffing picture of the fpint, the one deline . enterprize, and the diffrefs of romance, realized and regulated upon the chaffe and foher principles of rational love and connubial duty.

But I beg leave to observe belides, that it has direct reference to my subject, to fhew what the luxuries were with which (as the world has been taught to believe) the army was encumbered ; what were the accommodations prepared for the two toor, Col. thouland reomen that are gravely supposed, in the cross examination, to have followed with the baggage. An idea fo prepoflerous, as well as falle, would have been a fitter fubject for derifion than refutation, but that it was malicioufly intended ; not, I am confident, by the member who alked the queftions, but by the perfons who imposed upon him, to effect by prejudice what they defpaired of effecting by fact.—Not content with cavilling at our pretentions of having fought hard, they would not allow the army even the claim upon the good-nature of the action, of having fared hard for its fervice.

I thall however confider part of this flory as fo far unconnected with the immediate bufinefs I was upon (purfuing the line of evidence upon the retreat to Saratoga) as to give it in the margin. It may well fland by itfelf; and I venture to think that this one example of patience, fuffering, and fortitude, will be permitted to pafs without centure or obloguy. *

* Lady Harriet Ackland had accompanied her hufband to Canada in the beginning of the year 1276, In the course of that comparing the had traverted a variation of country, in different extremities of teadon, and with difficulties that an European traveller will not eafily conceive, to attend, in a poor hut at Chamblec, upon his fick bed-

As foon as he recovered, Lady Harriet proceeded to follow his fortunes through the campaign, and at Fort Edward, or at the next camp, the acquired a two-wheel tumbril, which had been conflructed by the artificers of the artiflery, fomething fimilar to the carriage ufed for the mail opon the great roads of lengland. Major Ackland commanded the Brouth grenadiers, which were attached to General Frager's corps; and confequently were always the most advanted post of the army. In the opening of the campaign of 1777 fle was reftrained from offering herfelf to a fhare of the fatigue and hazard expected before Ticonderoga, by the politive mountains of her hubrand. The day after the conquest of that place, he was hadly wounded, and the croffed the Lake Champlain to join hun.

When the army was upon the point of moving after the halt defcribed, I received a meffage from Lady Harriet, fubmitting to my decifion a propofal (and exprefling an earneff folicitude to execute it, if not interfering with my defigns) of pailing to the camp of the enemy, and requefling General Gates's permiftion to attend her hufband.

Though I was ready to believe (for I had experienced) that patience and fortitude, in a fupreme degree, were to be found, as well as every other virtue, under the molt tender forms, I was aftonifhed at this propofal. After fo long an agitation of the fpirits, exhautled not only for want of reft, but abfolutely want of food, drenched in rains for twelve hours together, that a woman fhould be capable of fuch an undertaking as delivering hertfelf to the enemy, probably in the night, and uncertaking as delivering hertfelf to the enemy, probably in the night, and uncertaking of what hands the might first fall into, appeared an effort above human nature. The affittance I was enabled to give was finall indeed; I had not even a cup of wine to offer her; but I was told the had found, from fome kind and fortunate hand, a little runn and dirty water. All I could furnish to her was an open boat and a tew lines, written upon dirty and wet paper, to General Gates, recommending her to his protection.

tent, in which the major and Lady Harriet were affeep, fuddenly took fire. An orderly ferjeant of grenadiers, with great hazard of inification, dragged out the init perion he caught hold of. It proved to be the major. It happened, that in the fame inflant the had, unknowing what flie did, and perhaps not perfectly awake, providentially mide her etcape, by erceping under the walls of the back part of the tent. The first object the taw, upon the recovery of her fentes, was the major on the other fide, and in the time inflant again in the dire, in tearch of her. The ferjeant again tayed him, but not without the major being very feverely burned in his face and different parts of the body. Every thing they had with them in the tent was confirmed

This accident happened a little time bet ire the army patied the Hudion's River. It neither altered the teichution nor the chearfulnets of Lady Harriet; and the continued her progrets, a pattaker of the fatgues of the advanced corps. The next call upon her fortunde was of a different nature, and more duriesful, as of longer impenfe. On the murch of the tork, the grenadiers being liable to action at every dep, the had been directed by the major to follow the route of the attillery and baggage, which was not expoted. At the time the action began the tonad herfelf near a final unnhabited har, where the alighted. When it was found to eaction was becoming general and bloody, the furgeons of the bound to be possible to action was becoming general and bloody, the furgeons of the bound to be action was becoming and and bloody, the furgeons of the bound to be possible to action at the more different nature, for four hours together, with the prefimption, from the poll of her hubband at the head of the grenadiers, that he was in the mol expoted part of the action. She had three female companions, the "arousts of Reidetel and the wives of two British officers, Major Harnage and Lieutenant Reynell" but in the event their prefence areved but little for comfort. Major Harnage was foon brought to the furgeons, very b div woonded; and a hitle time after came intelligence that Lieutenant Reynell was the dead. Thoughation will want no helps to figure the flace of the whole groupe

From the date of that action to the 7th of October, Lady Harriet, with her ufful ferenity, flood or oppored for new trials 1 and it was her lot that their feverity calculated with their numbers. She will agona exposed to the heating of the whole action, and at last received the flock of her individual matteriane, mixed with the inclligence of the general calamity, the troops were defeated, and Major Ackland, defperately wounded, was a prifoner.

The day of the 8th was paffed by Lady Harriet and her companions in common anxiety, not a tent, nor a thed being flanding, except what belonged to the Hofpital, their refuge was among the wounded and the dying.

REVIEW OF THE EVIDENCE.

Mr. Brudenell, the chaplain to the artillery (the fame gentleman who had officiated fo fignally at General Frafer's funeral) readily undertook to accompany her, and with one female fervant, and the major's valet-de-chambre (who had a ball which he had received in the late action then in his fhoulder) fhe rowed down the river to meet the enemy. But her diffreffes were not yet to end. The night was advanced before the boat reached the enemy's out pofls, and the centinel would not let it pafs, nor even come on fhore. In vain Mr. Brudenell offered the flag of truce, and represented the flate of the extraordinary paffenger. The guard, apprehenfive of treachery, and punctilious to their orders, threatened to fire into the boat if it Rirred before day light. Her anxiety and fuffering were thus protracted through feven or eight dark and cold hours ; and her reflections upon that first reception could not give her very encouraging ideas of the treatment the was afterwards to expect. But it is due to juffice at the clofe of this adventure to fay, that the was received and accommodated by seneral Gates with all the humanity and refpect that her rank, her merits and her foot mes deferved.

Let fuch as an iffected by their circumflances of alarm, hardfhip and danger, recollect, that the indject of them was a woman; of the moll tender and delicate frame; of the gentleft manners ; habituated to all the foft elegancies, and refined enjoyments, that attend high birth and fortune; and far advanced in a flate in which the tender cares, always due to the fex, become indiffership necessary. Her mind alone was formed for fuch trials.

I now return to the army, which arrived in the night at Saratogi, in fuch a flate Arrival of of farigue, that the men for the most part had not firength or inclination to cut wood and make fires, but rather fought fleep in their wet cloaths upon the wet ground under the continuing rain, and it was not till after day-light that the artillery and the laft of the troops paft the Fifh Kill, and took a pofition upon the heights and in the redoubts formerly conftructed.

The interval between taking that polition, and the conclusion of the treaty, is Intervil bethe folemn crifis in which I confider myfelf as peculiarly accountable to my country. And if all the circumflances mentioned by me, in my own vindication, in ratoga and my Letters, or my Narrative, are not effablished, and many of them firengthened figning the by politive proof; if every furmile of a furrender on my part, while there was a poffibility of avoiding it by fight, by manœuvre, or by retreat, is not done away; if even in the laft extremity, it does not appear I was ready and forward to prefer death to difhonour; if the evidence I have adduced is not clear, diffinct, and direct to these points, the public odium, piercingly as it affects a fensible breast, would be far fhort of the punifhment I deferve.

I cannot but confider it as one encouragement under this appeal, and it is no finall one, that though very few parts of my preceding conduct have eleaped the ferutiny of crofs and fince much improved on at home. My fuperior officer in America, with the approbation of government, had treated upon different occafions with General Wafhington. The British government in its higheft collective authority, the King in Parliament, has fince committioned five members of that Parliament, the one a peer, the others of eminent flation in military and civil capacities, to treat with rebels. I had almost faid to fue to rebels for peace, by the furrender of almost every principle for the maintenance of which they had profecuted the war.

Thus highly justified in creating with rebels, I am at a loss to differer by what poffible mode of defence I could have acquitted myfelf to God or my country, when the brave and intelligent officers of my army unanimoufly refolved, upon military principle, precedent and reafon, that the treaty was expedient, and the terms honourable, if I had delivered them up to certain deflruction, or even to be prifoners at differentian.

If the informed and difpatfionate part of mankind fhould agree in fentiment with the unanimous voice of the army, upon the convention of Saratoga, furely to impute to it the final lofs of the army is too palpable an injuffice long to remain upon the minds of the moft prejudiced. The convention expressly preferved the army for the fervice of the flate. According to that convention a truce was made during the war, between that army and the enemy, in America, and it now might have been afting against the House of Bourbon in any other part of the world. The army was loss by the non-compliance with the treaty on the part of the Congress; and that violation of faith no man will ever be found to juffify.

I will not decide how far it was encouraged in America, by the perfuation that the minifly of Britain had neither power nor fpirit to redrefs the wrong; and that they had funk the nation fo low, in point of refpect, that the world would overlook, where fhe was concerned, an action that would have excited, in any other cafe, univerfal cenfure and indignation. But whatever motives the Congrefs may have had, the tamenels and filence with which the Britith miniflers have borne this outrage, is aftonifhing. That men fo conftant and fo prodigal in their anger againft the Congrefs, as never before to have failed in expreffing it, even in cafes where it bordered upon being ridiculous, fhould on a fudden become cold and mute, and dead to feeling, in a cafe where refentment was juftly founded, can hardly be accounted for, except upon the principle that it was better to fupprefs the jufteft cenfure upon a power they detefted. than that even a particle of unmerited odium fhould be wanting to load the man whom they were refolved to deprefs.

CONCLUSION.

AM not aware that in the preceding Review of Evidence I have neglected any part effential to my defence. I do not reckon as fuch, that part which applies to the management of the public purfe. The calumny defigned to wound me upon that head was too grofs to fucceed : it perifhed in its birth, and form is the only fentiment excited by the remembrance of its momentary exiftence. In regard to the more plaufible objections pointed againft my conduct, I have not only endeavoured to meet them in the crofs-examination, but have fearched for them in every place where I could fuppofe them to originate or be entertained. If fome have efcaped, I fhall ftand excufed, when it is recollected how they have grown and changed from one fhape to another, and the state is never been my fortune to be confronted with an avowed and regular accufer—I defpair of ever being for: but I defire it to be underflood, that although I am earneft in this mode of defence, I am fo far from declining another, that I fhall think it one very happy circumflance of the paft enquiry, if any thing contained in it fhould have effect hereafter to produce an enquiry by court-martial.

It would not be an ungrateful tafk to follow the defence of the campaign with a detail of the occurrences which happened between the time of figning the convention and my leaving America. Many of them would be found curious; and the cares and perplexities in which I bore a principal and most painful part, would create a new interest in the minds of my friends: but I de not think myfelf at liberty, upon the plan I laid down at my outfet, to enter into matter where no blame is imputed or implied. If my proceedings during that interval deferve any credit, I am content with that testimony of it, which I may affume from the filence of my enemies.

I have not the fame reafons for paffing over the transactions in which I have been engaged fince my return to England, because blame, and of a very atrocious nature, has been imputed to me. But as the principal of these transactions are already before the public, I shall mention them very briefly; and merely to introduce connectedly such further thoughts upon them as could not with propriety be flated upon any former occasion.

Immediately after my arrival, a board of general officers was appointed to enquire into the caufes of the failure of the expedition from Canada. This enquiry was made the foundation of an order against my appearing at court.

The board reported, that they could not take cognizance of me being under parole—the prohibition from the King's prefence nevertheless full remained in force.

I had

I had recourfe to parliament for enquiry; and openly, and repeatedly, and firenuoufly called upon the minifters to join iffue with me before that tribunal. Objection was taken against immediate enquiry, becaufe Generals Sir Guy Carleton and Sir William Howe who might be parties were abfent; but it was evidently the difpolition of the houfe, that an enquiry fhould be inflituted the enfuing feffion.

I pledged myfelf zealoufly to profecute that meafure; I accufed minifters of injurious treatment towards myfelf; and it became my duty, upon occalions with which my own affairs had no connection, to express deeper refertments of their conduct towards the public.

In this flate of things parliament was prorogued on the 3d of June. On the 5tb of June, I received the first order to repair to Bofton as foon as I had tried the Bath waters. The order and my answer, representing the hardflip of being fent back unheard, and the fecond conditional order, with entire flight of my representations, are too well known to require repetition : but there are two circumflances attending the dates of thefe orders with which I was not acquainted till long after, and which have never yet been taken notice of.

The one is, that at the very time I was told that my prefence was material, and (as the fecond letter from the fecretary at war expressed) of fo much importance to the troops detained prifoners in New England, that it must not be difpenfed with-at that very time, it was determined to ratify the convention, according to the requifition of the Congress; and to transmit the ratification through other hands, and without any participation with me, or employment of me, in carrying it to a conclusion. It was very possible, the troops might have been failed for England before I had reached America, had I even complied as early as the condition of either order could possibly be construed to preferibe. But at all events, the circumstance could not but ferve to mark to me the true intent and meaning of the order beyond a poffibility of miftake-that it was an order of vindittive punishment; and my prefence with the troops, if I reached America in time, was material and important to mark to them the degree of difgrace to which I was reduced. The terms are a mockery, and an infult upon common fenfe, if applied, in the fituation in which I was placed, to the fervice of the King, or the confolation of the troops. Such a difplay of vengeance might indeed be intended to apply to their prudence, and to act as a caution and warning how at their return they fhould fupport a General under the extremity of the King's difpleafure.*

The other circumstance attending these dates is not less remarkable, viz.

* In times when the maintenance of the confliction in its purity is the ruling principle of an adminification, the King's name is introduced by office only to denote an act of the executive part of the flate. In times when an administration mean to rule by the influence of monarchy, the language of office is to connect the royal perfon with the act, and to give him attributes of paffion and differature, from which in his political character he is held exempt. I difclaim language and ideas fo unconflictutional and difference of justice and never mean to allude to my Sovereign perfonally, but in acts of justice and mercy.

The determination of changing the nature of the war, as afterwards declared by the commissioners in America, must have been taken at this time.

I am very much difinclined to believe, that the confideration of my perfon as a proper victim upon that occafion was ever regularly and formally debated in the cabinet: but I cannot think it uncharitable to the individual advifer of the Crown, whoever he was, who could project fuch an order, to fuppofe, that if upon the firft exercise of the extremes of war on the one fide, and in the ardour of retaliation on the other, it had to happened, that an object fo well to be fpared as an obnoxious and difgraced Lieutenant General, had opportunely prefented itfelf to the enemy's rigour, and had been detained in their prifons, the order for the voyage would not have been thought, by that individual, quite thrown away. Detention, with or without the troops, of a troublefome and bold complainant, could not be immaterial or unimportant to fuch a perfon, and the order was of an import " -To make affurance double fure-

" And take a bond of fate-

" That he might tell pale-hearted Fear it lied."

The living prefence of an injured man is, perhaps, more offenfive and infupportable to the fight of a mean injurer, that the fpectre of him would be after death.

But to return to the facts I was recapitulating.

I remained under the conditional order in England.

The enfuing feffion, the parliamentary enquiry now laid before the public took place. It ended, as has been flated, in July, 1779.

In September, I received a fevere reprimand, a denial of a court-martial, and a prohibition of ferving my country in its exigence, though other officers precifely in my fituation were employed—I refigned.

The blame laid upon me for the part I took in thefe transactions is, that intemperately and factiously I engaged in opposition; that I was guilty of disobedience to the King's orders; and it has been added in a late publication, that even my defence of my conduct is a libel upon the King's government.

I think I have perceived, that the first part of these charges, a rash engagement in opposition, is not combated by some who wish me well so strenuously as other imputations have been. It may possibly have appeared to friendly and prudential observers, as a palliating plea for a restitution to favour upon some future occasion, to have to fay, that I had acted upon the fudden impulse of passion; and the sequel might be, that I had repented, and would offend no more.

Without doubting the kindnefs which fuggefts thefe excufes, I have been impelled by principles too forcible, and have taken my part too decidedly, to look for a refource in those or any other fubterfuges. It would be inconfistent and difhonourable in me to withhold a public declaration upon this occasion, in addition to those I have made upon others, that I engaged in refiftance to the measures of the court upon mature reflection; that after collecting in my mind all the lights upon men and things which my experience and observation could furnish, I believed that the constitution of England was betrayed: and neither blaming or sufpecting any men who conceived different opinions, and acted upon them, I thought it a point of time in which a man believing as I did was called upon to facrifice to his country. The test of this motive, it is true, must refl between God and my confeience: but let it not be supposed that I acted blindly—the path of interest, a broad and beaten track, lay clearly before me from the time I arrived in England. Supple joints, and an attentive eye, always giving way to power, on one fide, and fometimes pushing my friends into the dirt on the other, would have carried me fafely through. I even believe, that the adviser of the letters I lately alluded to would rather have feen me in that track, than in the other which he preferibed for me across the Atlantic.

As little would I be fuppofed to want different of the path I took: for the barefaced preferences, rewards and punifhments held forth for parliamentary conduct, were among the moft glaring parts of the fyftem I had contemplated. And it was impoffible to doubt, that as a delinquent there, I fhould be preffed both by art and vengeance to the end the enemies I had provoked forefaw—the lofs of my profeflion and the impoverifhment of my fortune. I truft it will be an innocent revenge on my part, to fhew them I can bear my condition firmly; and that I am incapable of redeeming what I have loft, were it ever in my option, by the difavowal of a fingle principle I have profefled.

I come now to the fecond charge, difobedience of orders; and in a point that fo nearly touches the very effence of military character, I truft I shall not trefpass upon the patience of the reader, if I treat it a little more at large than I have done in my correspondence with the fecretary at war.

I admit that fubordination and implicit obedience, as applied to the operation of arms, are primary principles in the military fyftem. An army is a mere name without them. The officer who hefitates to meet certain death upon command, deferves to receive it from the hand of the executioner.

But there are poffible exceptions to thefe general principles, effectially out of the field, in the moft abfolute fervices; and in the Britifh fervice they are known and marked, and co-exiftent with the military eftablishment itfelf, in the mutiny act, which confines obedience to legal commands. An array muft again be garbled like the army of Cromwell (which God avert !) before an order could be executed, hke that of Cromwell, for garbling the parliament.

A high fpirit will contract the limits of obcdience fill more; with illegal, he will reject diffonourable commands; and he will follow the reafoning I have already premifed, and flate it as a maxim thus: he cohe obeys at the expense of fortune, comfort, bealth and life, is a foldier; be who obeys at the expence of honour is a flave.

But I may be afked by fome difciplinarians, who is to be the judge in thefe nice definitions of obedience? It is uncommon military doctrine, I may be told, to reafon upon the King's orders—I confefs it is fo. Since the reign of James the Second, in the Britifh fervice it never has been neceffary. We have been ufed in this age, to fee the King's name give wings and infpiration to duty. Difcipline, in this country, has been raifed upon perfonal honour—a firmer bafis than fear or fervility ever furnifhed : and the minifter who firft fhakes that happy confidence; who turns military command to political craft; who dares to ufe his gracious Sovereign's name at an engine of flate, to glut his own anger, or to remove his own fears, he is amongft the worft enemies to that Sovereign. But fhould his purpofes go further (a confideration of far greater magnitude to the public) and fhould it be feen that the royal name was brought forth for the difcipline of parliament, the minifter fo ufing it would be not only an enemy to his Sovereign, but a traitor to the conflitution of the flate.

I will close the defence of my principles respecting military fubordination by reference to an anecdote well authenticated and not very remote.

An officer in a neighbouring nation, for fome error he had committed in a day of battle, received a blow from his prince who commanded in perfon. The officer drew a piflol, and his first movement was to point it at his mafter; but the next (and it was instantaneous) was to turn the muzzle, and discharge the ball into his own heart. Though my cafe differs both in the provocation and the confequence, in many circumstances my conduct may justly be supported upon the fame principle. I receive an affront that a liberal spirit cannot endure; and in a name, against which no perfonal reference (if I may be allowed the phrafe) is preferable to the state in which the affront placed me. In one instance only I renounce the parallel— God forbid I should be thought, even in a buss of passion, to have pointed at my Sovereign ! It was not from his hand I received the blow.

I shall solicit the reader's attention very little further : but I feel the necessfity of repeating my application to the candour of the public, both as a writer and an appellant. Defence, and imputation of blame to others, are naturally interwoven in my cause: it required a more distinct conception, and an abler hand than mine, to keep them always apart, and open to feparate view. In fome parts my defence may be weakened by this deficiency of skill: but I have no right to offer the fame excuse for fuffering any blame to reft upon others beyond what I thought mysclf justified to support.

Upon this principle, I think it just, at taking leave of the fecretary of state for the American department, briefly to enumerate the only facts and propositions reget fpecting fpecting the plan of the expedition from Canada, that I think clearly maintainable against him.

First fact. It is clear that the plan of a junction of the greater part of the forces in Canada with the army of Sir William Howe, was formed in the year 1776, when Sir William Howe was in full success; when his whole force was in the neighbourhood of New York, or in the Jersies, and Mr. Washington was beaten, and at the weakest.

Second fact. This plan of a junction was continued (and upon juft reafoning) in the clofe of the year 1776, when Sir William Howe's first proposal of operations for the enfuing campaign arrived. Those proposals were made upon the datum of a number of troops, fufficient to furnish, besides the main army, an offensive army of 10,000 men, rank and file, to act on the fide of Rhode Hand, by taking possession of Providence, and penetrating from thence into the country towards Boston; and another offensive army, not less than 10,000, to move up the North River to Albany, exclusive of 5000 for the defence of New York.

In either of the above cafes, the plan of junction could hardly have failed of fuccefs. Third fact. On the 23d of February, Sir William Howe's alteration of the first plan was received, and he then proposed to act with the greater part of his force on the fide of Philadelphia, at the opening of the campaign, and to enable him to to do, to defer the offensive plan from Rhode Island till the reinforcements should arrive, and to define only 3000 men to act defensively upon the lower part of the Hudson's River.

Fourth fact. On the 3d of March, the fecretary of flate fignified his Majefly's entire approbation of this deviation from the plan first fuggested.

From thefe facts arifes my first proposition, that at the time the change of plan for Sir William Howe's operations was adopted, by which no offentive force was to remain upon the Hudfon's River, nor a diversion probably to take place from Rhode Island, the plan of my operations, the fuccess of which would probably depend in a great degree upon co-operation and diversion, ought to have been changed likewife: instead of that, it was enforced and made positive by the refusal of the latitude I had proposed of acting upon the Connecticut, or, in case of exigency, embarking the troops and effecting the junction by fea.

Fifth fact. On the 19th of March, a letter from Sir William Howe, by the fecretary of ftate, acquainting him, that a brigade of British and fome companies of brigadiers and light infantry had been withdrawn from Rhode Island, which made the force left there merely defensive. The fame letter mentions the prospects the enemy had of bringing 50,000 men into the field.

Sixth fact. I did not leave England till the beginning of April, by which time the fecretary of ftate muft have known, or ought to have known, that no dependance could be placed upon reinforcements from England arriving at New York in time for Sir William Howe to refume the intention he had deferred, viz. a diversion from the fecrees of brimade the the enehich time to depenv York in diverfion from from Rhode Island, or of making the force upon the Hudfon's River adequate to offenfive operation.

Hence arifes my fecond propolition, that the latitude I had propoled, or other expedients of precaution, ought then at leaft to have been adopted: inflead of which, I was fuffered to fail, ignorant of Sir William Howe's plans, and ignorant of the defalcation or the delays in the reinforcements deflined for him. The confequence was, that neither his letter to Sir Guy Carleton, put into my hands after my arrival in Canada, nor his letter to me of the 17th of June, informing me of his deftination for Penfylvania, removed my expectation of co-operation, becaufe I was to fuppole, that fublequent to the dates of either of those letters, he would receive orders from the fecretary of flate respecting the junction, and alfo a timely reinforcement.

Seventh fact. The fecretary of ftate makes no mention of the northern expedition in any of his difpatches to Sir William Howe at the end of March, when my orders were fixed, nor in the month of April. And it is a further fact, that I am perfuaded will not be contefled, that he did not mention any orders or recommendations relative to co-operation verbally to Sir William Howe's aid-de-camp, or any other confidential perfon who failed about that time.

The first mention made of the necessity of co-operation was in the fecretary of state's letter of the 18th of May, wherein his Lordship "Trusts that whatever he [Sir William Howe] may meditate, it will be executed in time to co-operate with the army ordered to proceed from Canada."

The proposition clearly justified by these facts is, that if the fecretary of state had thought proper to fignify the King's expectation of a co-operation to be made in my favour in the month of March or beginning of April, as in confistency he ought to have done, it would have arrived before Sir William Howe embarked his army, and in time for him to have made a new disposition : but instead of that, this very material injunction was not dispatched till it was almost physically impossible it should have any effect. And so indeed it happened, for Sir William Howe received it on the 16th of August, at a distance from Hudson's River too great for any detachment from his own army to be made in time, could it even have been spared; and the reinforcement from England, upon which Sir William Howe depended to strengthen Sir Henry Clinton, was much later still—too late (as it has been shown) to enable that general with all his activity and zeal to give any effectual support.

Indeed the conduct of the fecretary of ftate, in inferting this paragraph, in his letter of the 18th of May, when it could not avail, after omitting it when certainly it would have been timely, feems fo prepofterous, that it can only be explained by one fact. It transpired about that time, that Sir William Howe's army was defined for Penfylvania, and people who had confidered the force of the enemy to be collected from the northern provinces began to be alarmed for my army. It is well known (though (though I cannot afcertain the date) that an officer of very great ability, and a perfect knowledge in the country through which I was to pafs, as foon as he heard no difpolition was made for a fupport from New York, foretold to the fecretary of flate, or his near friends, the fall of my army. Under this apprehenfion it might appear to the fecretary of flate a proper caution, that an expectation of co-operation flould exift under his hand.

If plaus fo inconfifently formed, and managed by the fecretary of flate with fo much feerning confidence, as to miflead his generals, and fo much real referve as to deftroy them, fhould be defended by that infatuated belief then entertained of the inability of the enemy to refift, I fhould beg leave to flate, as one proposition more, that after the experience of their actions at Trenton, and many other places, and the intelligence of their new levies received from Sir William Howe, fuch confidence was an additional fault, and perhaps a more pernicious one than any I have ftated.

Thus much for the noble Lord in his public capacity. What fhare of the perfecution I have fultained (more than I have directly expressed in different parts of my defence) are imputable to his private councils, is not within my knowledge: but if in fpeaking of my perfecutors in general, I may be thought formetimes to have used ftrong terms, I have only to fay, that having advanced no fact which I am not able and refolved to maintain, I have not felt myself called upon, in applying those facts for any further attention, than to preferve the language of a gentleman, which is an attention due to myself as well as to the public. It is open and manly enmity alone that unites respect with refertment.

I wifh I could as eafily apologife for all the other faults with which this undertaking abounds as a composition. At a time when fo many pens are employed, I must not expect to be spared. I shall treat with fi'ent respect any comments that are fairly founded and delivered with liberality; and with contempt, equally filenr, the common invectives of the political prefs. This appeal is not to rest upon literary criticism, or party disputation, but upon the broad equity of my country. I know that prejudice and malice will vanish before the man who dares to submit his actions to that test—If acquitted there, I feel I am not degraded; and I have not a fensation within my breast which does not at the fame time affure me, I cannot be unhappy.

My Lord,

WY phyfician has preffed me to go to Bath for a fhort time, and I find it requifite to my health and fpirits to follow his advice: but I think it a previous duty to affure your Lordship, that should my attendance in town become necessary, relatively to information upon the affairs of Canada, I shall be ready to obey your fummons upon one day's notice.

Your Lordship being out of town, I submitted the above intentions a few days ago personally to his Majesty in his closet, and I added, "That as the arrangements for the next campaign might possibly come under his royal contemplation before my return, I humbly laid myself at his Majesty's feet for such active employment as he might think me worthy of."

This was the fubstance of my audience, on my part. I undertook it, and I now report it to your Lordship in the hope of your patronage in this pursuit; a hope, my Lord, founded not only upon a just fense of the honour your Lordship's friendship must reflect upon me, but also upon a feeling that I deferve it, in as much as a folid respect and fincere perfonal attachment can constitute such a claim.

I leave in the hands of Mr. D'Oyley fuch of the memorandums confided to me by General Carleton as require difpatch, fhould your Lordship think proper to carry them into execution.

I also leave in that gentleman's hands the copy of an application relative to boats for the artillery, and which I take the liberty to fubmit to your Lordship as well worthy of confideration, upon the fupposition that the enemy should arm upon Lake George, and that any operation should be adviseable by that route.

I likewife leave the difposition of winter quarters, which I received by the last ship from Canada. I find no difpatch is come to your Lordship by that occasion, and I conceived those papers might be of use.

His Majefly, in appointing you commander in chief of his forces in Canada, was ple ifed to extend your commission to the frontiers of his provinces bordering thercupon, wifely forefeeing, that it might be necessary for the compleating your plan of operations, that you flould march your army beyond the limits of your own government. I truth, before this letter reaches you, that you will, by your fpirit and activity, have cleared the frontiers of Canada of all the rebel forces, and will have taken the proper meafures for keeping pofferfion of the lakes. That fervice being performed, his Majefly commands me to acquaint you, that there fill remains another part of your duty to be undertaken, which will require all your abilities and the thricteff application, the refloring peace, and the effablishing good order and legal government in Canada. It is an object of the greateft importance to this country, the difficulties attending it are immenfe; but his Majefly depends upon your zeal, and upon your experience, for carrying it into execution. His Majefly, ever anxious for the happinets of his fubjects, commands me to inform you, that no time should be lost in beginning to important a work, and that you do therefore return to Quebec, detaching Lieutenant-General Burgoyne, or fuch other officer as you thall think molt proper, with that part of your forces which can be spared from the immediate defence of your province, to carry on fuch operations as shall be most conducive to the fuccels of the army acting on the fide of New-York; and that you direct the officer fo detached to communicate with and put himfelf, as foon as poffible, under the command of General Howe, you will order fuch artillery as you fhall judge neceffary to proceed with this detachment; and as a great quantity of heavy cannon and military flores were fent, upon the supposition that Quebee might have been in the hands of the rebels, you will, upon requisition from General Howe, supply him with such cannon and flores as may not be wanted for the protection of Canada,

Ey Lieutenant-General Burgoyne.

WHFN the laft fhips came from Quebec, a report prevailed in Canada, faid to have been founded upon politive evidence, that the rebels had laid the keels of feveral large veffels at Skenefborough and Ticonderoga, and were refolved to exert their utmost powers, to confiruct a new and formidable fleet during the winter.

I will not, however, give credit to their exertions, in fuch a degree as to imagine the King's troops will be prevented pafling Lake Champlain early in the furmer, but will fuppole the operations of the army to begin from Crown Point.

But as the prefent means to form effectual plans is to lay down every possible difficulty, I will suppose the enemy in great force at Ticonderega; the different works there are capable of admitting twelve thousand men.

I will fuppofe him alfo to occupy Lake George with a confiderable naval firength, in order to fecure his retreat, and afterwards to retard the campaign; and it is natural to expect that he will take measures to block up the roads from Ticonderoga to Albany by the way of Skenesborough, by fortifying the firong ground at different places, and thereby obliging the King's army to carry a weight

The enemy thus difford upon the fide of Canada, it is to be confidered what troops will be neceffary, and what difpolition of them will be moft proper to profecute the campaign with vigour and effect.

I humbly conceive the operating army (I mean exclusively of the troops left for the fecurity of Canada) ought not to confift of lefs than eight thousand regulars, rank and file. The artillery required in the memorandums of General Carleton, a corps of watermen, two thoufand Canadians, including hatchet-men and other workmen, and one thousand or more favages.

It is to be hoped that the reinforcement and the victualling flips may all be ready to fail from the Channel and from Corke on the laft day of March. I am perfunded that to fail with a fleet of transports earlier, is to subject government to lofs and difappointment. It may reafonably be expected that they will reach Quebec before the 20th of May, a period in full time for opening the campaign. The roads, and the rivers and lakes, by the melting and running off of the fnows, are in common years impracticable fooner.

But as the weather long before that time will probably have admitted of labour in the docks, I will take for granted that the fleet of laft year, as well bateaux as armed veffels, will be found repaired, augmented, and fit for immediate fervice. The magazines that remain of provision, I believe them not to be abundant, will probably be formed at Montreal, Sorel and Chamblée.

I conceive the first business for those entrusted with the chief powers, should be to felect and post the troops defined to remain in Canada; to throw up the military flores and provision with all possible dispatch, in which fervice the abovementioned troops, if properly pofted, will greatly affift; and to draw the army deftined for operation to cantonments, within as few days march of St. John's as conveniently may be. I should prefer cantonments at that feafon of the year to encampment, as the ground is very damp, and confequently very pernicious to the men, and more effectially as they will have been for many months before used to lodgings, heated with stoves, or between decks in ships; all these operations may be put in motion together, but they feverally require fome obfervation.

I should with that the troops left in Canada, fuppoling the number mentioned in my former memorandum to be approved, might be made as follows.

My reation for felecting the 31ft regiment for this duty is, that when I faw it laft it was not equally in order with the other regiments for fervices of activity.

I propole the 29th regiment as it is not at prefent brigaded.

I propole Maclean's corps, because I very much apprehend defertion from such parts of it as are composed of Americans, should they come near the enemy.

In Canada, whatloever may be their difuofition, it is not to eafy to effect it.

And 1 propose making up the refidue by detachment, because by selecting the men least calculated for fatigue or least accustomed to it, which may be equally good foldiers in more contined movements and better provided fituations, the effective strength for operation is much greater and the defensive strength not impaired.

I must beg leave to flate the expeditious conveyance of provision and flores from Quebec, and the feveral other depositaries, in order to form ample magazines at Crown Point, as one of the most important operations of the campaign, because it is upon that which most of the rest will depend. If failing vessels up the St. Lawrence are alone to be employed, the accident of contrary winds may delay them two months before they pass the rapids of Richelicu, and afterwards St. Peter's Lake; delays to that extent are not uncommon, and they are only to be obviated by having a quantity of small craft in readiness to work with oars. From the mouth of the Sorrel to Chamblée, rowing and tacking is a fute conveyance if sufficient hands are found. From Chamblée to St. Therefe (which is just above the Rapids) land-carriage must be used, and great authority will be requisite to supply the quantity necessary.

A bufinets thus complicated in arrangement, in fome parts unufual in practice, and in others perhaps difficult, can only be carried to the defired effect by the peremptory powers, warm zeal, and confonant opinion of the governor; and though the former are not to be doubted, a failure in the latter, vindicated, or feeming to be vindicated, by the plaufible obftructions that will not fail to be fuggefted by others, will be fufficient to crufh fuch exertions as an officer of a fanguine temper, entrufted with the future conduct of the campaign, and whofe perfonal interest and fame therefore confequentially depend upon a timely out-fer, would be led to make.

The affembly of the favages and the Canadians will also entirely depend upon the governor.

Under these confiderations, it is prefumed, that the general officer employed to proceed with the army will be held to be out of the reach of any possible blame till he is clear of the province of Canada, and furnished with the proposed fupplies.

The navigation of Lake Champlain, fecured by the fuperiority of our naval force, and the arrangements for forming proper magazines fo established as to make the execution certain, I would not lose a day to take posses for Grown Point with Brigadier Fraser's corps, a large body of favages, a body of Canadians, both for fcouts and works, and the best of our engineers and artificers well supplied with intrenching tools.

The brigade would be fufficient to prevent infult during the time neceffary for collecting the ftores, forming magazines, and fortifying the pofts; all which hould be done to a certain degree, previous to proceeding in force to Ticonderoga; hen I faw it activity.

But though there would be only one brigade at Crown Point at that time, it does not follow that the enemy should remain in a state of tranquility. Corps of favages, supported by detachments of light regulars, should be continually on foot to keep them in alarm, and within their works to cover the reconnoitering of general officers and engineers, and to obtain the best intelligence of their strength, position, and defign.

If due exertion is made in the preparations flated above, it may be hoped that Ticonderoga will be reduced early in the fummer, and it will then become a more proper place for arms than Crown Point.

The next measure must depend upon those taken by the enemy, and upon the general plan of the campaign as concerted at home. If it be determined that General Howe's whole forces flouid act upon Hudfon's River, and to the fouthward of it, and that the only object of the Canada army be to effect a junction with that force, the immediate poffeffion of Lake George would be of great confequence, as the most expeditious and most commodious route to Albany; and fhould the enemy be in force upon that lake, which is very probable, every effort fhould be tried, by throwing favages and light troops round it, to oblige them to quit it without waiting for naval preparations. Should those efforts fail, the route by South Bay and Skenetborough might be attempted, but confiderable difficulties may be expected, as the narrow parts of the river may be eafily choaked up and rendered impaffable, and at beft there will be necessity for a great deal of of land carriage for the artillery, provition, &c. which can only be fupplied from Ganada. In case of success also by that route, and the enemy not removed from Lake George, it will be neceffary to leave a chain of pofts, as the army proceeds, for the fecurities of your communication, which may too much weaken fo fmall an army.

Left all these attempts should unavoidably fail, and it become indispensibly necessary to attack the enemy by water upon Lake George, the army at the outset should be provided with carriages, implements, and artificers, for conveying armed vessels from Ticonderoga to the lake.

These ideas are formed upon the supposition, that it be the fole purpose of the Canada army to effect a junction with General Howe, or after co-operating so far as to get possible of Albany and open the communication to New-York, to remain upon the Hudson's River, and thereby enable that general to act with his whole force to the southward.

But fhould the ftrength of the main American army be fuch as to admit of the corps of troops now at Rhode Island remaining there during the winter, and afting feparately in the fpring, it may be highly worthy confideration, whether the moft important purpole to which the Canada army could be employed, fuppoling; it in posseffion of Ticonderoga, would not be to gain the Connecticut River.

The extent of country from Ticonderoga to the inhabited country upon that river, opposite to Charles Town, is about fixty miles, and though to convey artillery and provision fo far by land would be attended with difficulties, perhaps more than than those above faggefled, upon a progrefs to Skenefborough, flould the object appear worthy, it is to be hoped refources might be found; in that cafe it would be advifeable to fortify with one or two flrong redoubts the heights oppofite to Charles Town, and effablish pofls of favages upon the patlage from Ticonderoga to those heights, to preferve the communication, and at the fame time prevent any attempt from the country above Charles Town, which is very populous, from molefling the rear or interrupting the convoys of fupply, while the army proceeded down the Connecticut. Sould the junction between the Canada and Rhode Ifland atmics be effected upon the Connecticut, it is not too fanguine an expectation that all the New England provinces will be reduced by their operations.

To avoid breaking in upon other matter, 1 omitted in the beginning of thefe papers to flate the idea of an expedition at the outfet of the campaign by the Lake Ontario and Ofwego to the Mohawk River, which, as a diversion to facilitate every proposed operation, would be highly defirable, provided the army should be reintoreed fufficiently to afford it.

It may at first appear, from a view of the prefent firength of the army, that it may bear the fort of detachment proposed by myfelf last year for this purpole; but it is to be confidered that at that time the utmost object of the campaign, from the advanced featon and unavoidable delay of preparation for the lakes, being the reduction of Crown Point and Ticonderoga, unless the fuccets of my expedition had opened the road to Albany, no greater numbers were necessary than for thole tirst operations. The cafe in the prefent year differs; becaufe the feason of the year affording a prospect of very extensive operation, and confequently the eftablishment of many polts, patroles, &c. will become necessary. The army ought to be in a flate of numbers to bear thole drains, and still remain fusificient to attack any thing that probably can be opposed to it.

Nor, to argue from probability, is fo much force neceflary for this diverfion this year, as was required for the laft; becaufe we then knew that General Schuyler with a thoufand men, was fortified upon the Mohawk. When the different itmations of things are confidered, viz. the progrefs of General Howe, the early invation from Canada, the threatening of the Connecticut from Rhode Ifland, &c. it is not to be imagined that any detachment of fuch force as that of Schulyer can be fupplied by the enemy for the Mohawk. I would not therefore propole it of more (and I have great diffidence whether fo much can be prudently afforded) than Sir John Johnfon's corps, an hundred Britifh from the fecond brigade, and an hundred more from the 8th regiment, with four pieces of the lighteft artillery, and a body of favages; Sir John Johnfon to be with a detachment in perfon, and an able field officer to command it. I thould with Lieutenant Colonel St. Leger for that employment,

I particularize the fecond brigade, becaufe the first is proposed to be diminished by the 31st regiment remaining in Canada, and the rest of the regiment drafted for the expedicion being made also part of the Canada force, the two brigades will be exactly squared.

Should it appear, upon examination of the really effective numbers of the Canada army, that the force is not fufficient for proceeding upon the above ideas with a fair prospect of fucces, the alternative remains of embarking the army at Quebec, in order to effect a junction with General Howe by sea, or to be employed separately rately to co-operate with the main defigns, by fuch means as flould be within their Brength upon other parts of the continent. And though the army, upon examination of the numbers from the returns here, and the reinforcements defigned, should appear adequate, it is humbly fubinited, as a fecurity against the possibility of its remaining inactive, whether it might not be expedient to entruft the latitude of embarking the army by fea to the commander in chief, provided any accidents during the winter, and unknown here, flould have diminifhed the numbers confiderably, or that the enemy, from any winter fuccefs to the fouthward, flould have been able to draw fuch forces towards the frontiers of Canada, and take up their ground with fuch precaution, as to render the intended measure impracticable or too hagardous. But in that cafe it muft be confidered that more force would be required to be left behind for the fecurity of Canada, than is fuppofed to be neceffary when an army is beyond the lakes; and I do not conceive any expedition from the fea can be fo formidable to the enemy, or fo effectual to clofe the war, as an invalion from Canada by Ticonderoga. This laft meafure ought not to be thought of, but upon politive conviction of its neceffity.

Hertford-Street, Feb. 28th, 1777.

J. BURGOYNE.

Extract of a Letter from Lord George Germain to General Carleton, dated Whitehall, 26th March, 1777.

MY letter of the 22d Augufl, 1776, was intrufted to the care of Captain Le Maitre, one of your aid-de-camps; after having been three times in the Golph of St. Lawrence he had the mortification to find it impoffible to make his paffage to Quebec, and therefore returned to England with my difpatch; which, though it was prevented by that accident from reaching your hands in due time, I neverthelefs think proper to transmit to you by this earlieft opportunity.

You will be informed, by the contents thereof, that as foon as you fhould have driven the rebel forces from the frontiers of Canada, it was his Majefty's pleafure that you fhould return to Quebee, and take with you fuch part of your army as in your judgment and different appeared fufficient for the defence of the province; that you thould detach Lieutenant General Burgoyne, or fuch other officer as you fhould think most proper, with the remainder of the troops, and direct the officer fo detached to proceed with all possible expedition to join General Howe, and to put himfelf under his command.

With a view of quelling the rebellion as foon as possible, it is become highly neceffary that the molt speedy junction of the two armies should be effected; and therefore, as the fecurity and good government of Canada absolutely require your prefere there, it is the King's determination to leave about 3000 men under your command, for the defence and duties of that province, and to employ the remainder of your army upon two expeditions, the one under the command of Lieutenant General Burgoyne, who is to force his way to Albany, and the other under the command of Lieutenant Colonel St. Leger, who is to make a diversion on the Mohawk River.

As this plan cannot be advantageoufly executed without the affiftance of Canadians and Indians, his Majefty ftrongly recommends it to your care, to furnish both expeditions with good and fufficient bodies of those men; and I am happy in knowing that your influence among them is fo great, that there can be no room to apprehend you will find it difficult to fulfil his Majefty's expectations.

In order that no time may be loft in entering upon thefe important undertakings, General Burgoyne has received orders to fail forthwith for Quebec; and that the intended operations may be maturely confidered, and afterwards carried on in fuch a manner as is most likely to be followed by fucces, he is directed to confult with you upon the fubject, and to form and adjust the plan as you both shall think most conducive to his Majetty's fervice.

I am alto to acquaint you, that as foon as you shall have fully regulated every thing relative to these expeditions (and the King relies upon your zeal, that you will be as expeditious as the nature of the business will admit) it is his Majesty's pleafure that you detain for the Canada service

You will naturally conclude that this allotment for Canada has not been made without property weighing the feveral duties which are likely to be required. His Majefty has not only confidered the feveral garrifons and pofts which probably it may be neceffary for you to take, viz. Quebec, Chaudière, the dilaffected parifhes of Point Levi, Montreal, and pofts between that town and Ofwegatche, Trois Rivieres, St. John's, Sele aux Noix, La Prairie, Vergere, and fome other towns upon the fouth flore of St. Lawrence, opposite the ile of Montreal, with pofts of communication to St. John's, but he hath alfo reflected that the feveral operations which will be carrying on in different parts of America must necefiarily confine the attention of the rebels to the refpective fcenes of action, and fecure Canada from external attacks, and that the internal quiet which at prefent prevails is not likely to be interrupted, or if interrupted, will foon be reftored by your influence over the inhabitants; he therefore trufts that 3000 men will be quite fufficient to anfwer every poffible demand.

It is likewife his Majefty's pleafure that you put under the command of Lieutenant General Burgoyne Cepy of a Letter from Lieutenant General Burgoyne to Lord George Germain, dated Quebec, May 14, 1777.

My LORD,

[Private.]

I TAKE the opportunity of a veffel difpatched by Sir Guy Carleton to England, to inform your Lordfhip of my arrival here the 6th inflant. And though my prefent fituation, as acting under a fuperior upon the fpot, may make an official correspondence unneceffary, I cannot perfuade myfelf I shall not appear guilty of impropriety in atfuming the honour of a private and confidential one, relatively to the objects of my defination.

From my prefent information, I have reafon to expect the preparations for opening the campaign to be very forward on our part. Due exertions were used in the course of the winter, and the uncommon mildness of the weather greatly favoured them, to convey provisions to Chamblé and St. John's. One large victualler arrived after 1 left the St. Lawrence laft November; all refidues of other victuallers have been collected; 1 am in hopes of finding a fufficiency of provision to enable me to cross the Lake Champlain at least, without the arrival of the Corke fleet. 1 hope also to find artillery stores enough to feel the pulse of the enemy at Ticonderoga. Should their fituation and refolution be such as to make great artillery preparations requisite, I thall certainly be under the necet 'ty of waiting at Crown Point the arrival of the ordnance stores from Fingland. A good body of the Indians I am assured are ready to move upon the first call, and measures are taking for bringing them forthwith to proper redezvous.

I cannot fpeak with fo much confidence of the military affiftance I am to look for from the Canadians. The only corps yet inftituted, or that I am informed can as prefent be inftituted, are three independent companies of 100 men each, officered by Seigneurs of the country, who are well chofen; but they have not been able to engage many volunteers. The men are chiefly drafted from the militia, according to a late regulation of the legiflative council. Thofe I have yet feen afford no promile of uie of arms—aukwark, ignorant, difinclined to the fervice, and fpiritlefs. Various reafons are affigued for this change in the natives fince the time of the French government. It may partly be owing to a difufe of arms, but I believe principally to the unpopularity of their Seigneurs, and to the poifon which the emiffaries of the rebels have thrown into their minds. Should I find the new companies up the country better composed, or that the well affected parties can be prevailed upon to turn out volunteers, though but for a flort occasion, as they did laft year, I shall move Sir Guy to exert further measures to augment my numbers.

The army will fall fhort of the ftrength computed in England; the want of the camp equipage, cloathing, and many other neceffary articles, will caufe inconvenience; I am neverthelefs determined to put the troops defined for my command immediately in motion; and, affifted by the fpirit and health in which they abound, I am confident in the profpect of overcoming difficulties and difappointments.

Having fettled all measures with Sir Guy Carleton, both for this purpose and for the expeditious transport of the stores as they may arrive, and having already dispatched instructions to Captain Lutwidge, who commands the sleet upon Lake ChamChamp I fhall I arrange I fho without was any ly to be effect to I fhall t ecceding

Champlain, to fecure the navigation, in which I clearly fee he will find no trouble, I fhall proceed in perfor this afternoon for Montreal, and from thence make my final arrangements for purfuing the King's orders.

I thould think myfelf deficient in juffice and in honour, were I clofe my letter without mentioning the fenfe I entertain of General Carleton's conduct; that he was anxioufly defirous of leading the military operations out of the province, is eafily to be diferented; but his deference to his Majefly's decifion, and his zeal to give effect to his measures in my hands, are equally manifefl, exemplary, and fatisfactory. I thall take every pollible means to transmit to your Lordfhip an account of my proceedings from time to time, and have the honour to be, with perfect refpect,

Your Lordfhip's most obedient and most humble fervant,

J. BURGOYNE.

Xj

P. S. I have mentioned nothing of intelligence concerning the enemy, concluding that Sir Guy Carleton will transmit the material part of it, and in a manner more full than in my power to do. I understand they have laboured hard to strengthen Ticonderoga, and threaten a vigorous resultance there, and that they have built fome vessels on Lake George, as your Lordship may remember I had forefeen.

Copy of a Letter from Lieutenant General Burgoyne to Lord George Germain, dated Second Montreal, May 19, 1777.

My LORD,

I HAD the honour to write to your Lordship the day I left Quebec, having reafon to imagine this letter may reach that place in time to be dispatched with my former one, I cannot omit the occasion to inform your Lordship, that the hopes I expressed of being able to put the troops in motion without waiting the arrival of the fleets from England and Ireland, are confirmed.

The only delay is occafioned by the impracticability of the roads, owing to late extraordinary heavy rains, and this difficulty will be fpeedily removed, by exerting the fervices of the parifhes as foon as the weather clears. In the mean time, I am employing every means that water carriage will admit for drawing the troops and ftores towards their point. I truft, I shall have veffels fufficient to move the army and ftores together, and in that cafe, will take post at once, within fight of Ticonderoga, and only make use of Crown Point for my hospital and magazine.

A continuation of intelligence from different fpics and deferters, confirms the defign of the enemy to difpute Ticonderoga vigoroufly. They are also building bowgallies at Fort George, for the defence of that Lake, &c. fortifying on the road to Skenesborough.

It is configned to the New England colonies, to furnish supplies of men and provision to oppose the progress of my army, and they have undertaken the task, upon condition of being exempt from supplying Mr. Washington's main army.

It is my defign, while advancing to Ticonderago, and during the fiege of that post, for a fiege I apprehend it must be, to give all possible jealously on the fide of Connecticut. If I can by manœuvre lead the enemy to suspect, that after the reduction of Ticonderago, my views are pointed that way, the Connecticut forces will be Substance of the Speech of Licutenant-General Burgoyne to the Indians in Congress, at the Camp upon the River Bouquet, June 21, 1777, and their Answer, translated.

[In Lieutenant-General Burgoyne's, June 22, 1777.]

CHIEFS and WARRIORS,

THE great King, our common father, and the patron of all who feek and deferve his protection, has confidered with fatisfaction the general conduct of the Indian tribes from the beginning of the troubles in America. Too fagacious and too faithful to be deluded or corrupted, they have obferved the violated rights of the parental power they love, and burned to vindicate them. A few individuals alone, the refue of a fmall tribe, at the firft were led aftray, and the mifreprefentations, the fpecious allurements, the infidious promifes and diversified plots, in which the rebels are exercifed, and all of which they employed for that effect, have ferved only in the end to enhance the honour of the tribes in general, by demonstrating to the world, how few and how contemptible are the apostates. It is a truth known to you all, that these pitiful examples excepted, and vhey probably have before this day hid their faces in shame, the collective voices and hands of the Indian tribes over this vast continent, are on the fide of justice, of law, and of the King.

The reftraint you have put upon your refentment in waiting the King your father's call to arms, the hardeft proof, I am perfuaded, to which your affection could have been put, is another manifeft and affected mark of your adherence to that principle of connection to which you were always fond to allude, and which it is mutually the joy and the duty of the parent to cherifh.

The clemency of your father has been abufed, the offers of his mercy have been defpifed, and his farther patience would, in his cyes, become culpable, in as much as it would withold redrefs from themoftgrievous oppreffions in the provinces thatever difgraced the hiftory of mankind. It therefore remains for me, the General of one of his Majefty's armies, and in this council his reprefentative, to releafe you from those bonds which your obedience imposed.—Warriors, you are free—Go forth in might of your valour and your cause; ftrike at the common enemies of Great-Britain and America—difturbers of public order, peace, and happiness—deftroyers of commerce, parricides of the ftate.

The circle round you, the chiefs of his Majefty's European forces, and of the Princes his allies, efteem you as brothers in the war; emulous in glory and in friendfhip, we will endeavour reciprocally to give and to receive examples; we know how to value, and we will firive to imitate your perfeverance in enterprize, and your confiancy to refift hunger, wearinefs, and pain. I. Copy of a Letter from General Burg , ne to Lord George Germain, dated Skenefborough, July 11th, 1777.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordship, that the enemy, disloged from Ticonderoga and Mount Independant, on the 6th instant, and were driven, on the same day, beyond Skenetborough on the right, and to Humerton on the left, with the lots of 128 pieces of cannon, all their armed vessels and bateaux, the greatest part of their baggage and ammunition, provision, and military stores, to a very large amount.

This fuccefs has been followed by events equally fortunate and rapid. I fubjoin fuch a detail of circumftances as the time will permit; and for his Majefty's further information, I beg leave to refer your Lordship to Captain Gardner, my aid de camp, whom I thought it neceffary to difpatch with news fo important to the King's fervice and fo honourable to the troops under my command.

Journal of the late principal Proceedings of the Army.

Having remained at Crown-Point three days to bring up the rear of the army, to establish the magazines and the hospital, and to obtain intelligence of the enemy, on the eft July.

I ordered the advanced corps, confifting of the British light infantry and grenadiers, the 24th regiment, fome Canadians and Savages, and ten pieces of light artillery, under the command of Brigadier General Frafer, to move from Putnam Creek, where they had been encamped fome days, up the west shore of the lake to Four-Mile-Point, to called from being within that distance off the fort of Ticoderoga. The German referve, confisting of the Brunswick chasseurs, light infantry and grenadiers under Lieutenant Colonel Breyman were moved at the fame time to Richardfon's farm, on the east shore, opposite to Putnam Creek.

The whole army made a movement forward. Brigadier Frafer's corps occupied the ftrong poft called Three-Mile-Point, on the weft fhore; the German referve the east-fhore opposite : the army encamped in two lines, the right wing at the Four-Mile-Point, the left wing nearly opposite, on the cast fhore.

The Royal George, and Inflexible frigates, with the gun-hoats, were anchored at this time just without the reach of the enemy's batteries, and covered the lake from the well to the east flores. The reft of the fleet had been fome time without guns, in order to affift in carrying provisions over Lake Champlain.

The enemy appeared to be posted as follows. A brigade occupied the old French lines on the height to the north of the fort of Ticonderoga. These lines were in good repair, and had several intrenchments behind them, chiefly calculated to guard the north-west flank, and were further furtained by a block-house. They had, farther to their left, a post at the faw-mills, which are at the foot of the carrying-place to Lake George, and a block-houfe upon an eminence above the mills, and a blockhouse and hospital at the entrance of the lake.

Upon the right of the lines, and between them and the old fort, there were two. new block-houfes and a confiderable battery clofe to the water edge.

It feemed that the enemy had employed their chief industry, and were in the greateft force upon Mount Independence, which is high and circular, and upon the fummit, which is Table Land, was a flar fort, made of pickets, and well supplied with artillery, and a large fquare of barracks within it. The foot of the hill, on the fide which projects into the lake, was intrenched and had a ftrong abbattis close to the water. This intrenchment was lined with heavy artillery, pointed down the lake flanking the water battery, above defcribed, and fuftained by another battery about half way up the hill. On the weft fide the hill runs the main river, and in its paffage is joined by the water which comes down from Lake George. The enemy had here a bridge of communication, which could not at this time be reconnoitred. On the eaft fide of the hill the water forms a finall bay, into which falls a rivulet after having encirculed in its courfe part of the hill to the fouth eaft. The fide to the fouth could not be feen, but was described as inacceffible.

About nine in the morning a fmoke was observed towards Lake George, and the July 24 Savages brought in a report that the enemy had fet fire to the further block-house and had abandoned the faw-mills, and that a confiderable body were advancing from the lines towards a bridge upon the road which led from the faw-mills towards the right of the British camp. A detachment of the advanced corps was immediately put in march, under the command of Brigadier Frafer, fupported by the fecond brigade and fome light artillery, under the command of Major General Phillips, with orders to proceed to Mount Hope, which is to the north of the lines, to reconnoitre the enemy's pofition, and to take advantage of any post they might abandon or be driven from. The Indians under Captain Fraser, supported by his company of markimen, were directed to make a circuit to the left of Brigadier Frafer's line of march, and endeayour to cut off the retreat of the enemy to their lines; but this defign mifcarried through the impetuolity of the Indians, who attacked too foon, and in front; and the enemy were thereby able to retire with the loss of one officer and a few men killed, and one officer wounded. Major General Phillips took poffeffion of the very advantageous post of Mount Hope this night, and the enemy were thereby entirely cut off from all communication with Lake George.

Mount Hope was occupied in force by General Frafer's whole corps. The first July 3-British brigade, and two entire brigades of artillery. The fecond brigade, British, encamped upon the left of the first, and the brigade of Gall, having been drawn from the east shore to occupy the ground where Fraser's corps had originally been; the line became compleat, extending from Three-Mile-Point to the weftermost part of Mount Hope ; on the fame day, Major General Reidesel encamped on the east shore in a parallel line with Three-Mile-Point, having pushed the referve forward near the rivulet which encircles Mount Independence. The enemy cannonaded the camps of Mount Hope and of the German referve during most part of this day, but without effect.

The army worked hard at their communications and got up the artillery, tents; July 4. baggage and provisions; the enemy at intervals continued the cannonade upon the camps, which was not in any inftance returned.

The Flata Icrer Radeau, carrying the battering train and flores, having been warped up from Crown Point, arrived this day, and immediately began to land the antillety.

Leutenint Twife, the commanding engineer, was ordered to reconnoitre Sugar II il, on the fouth fide of the communion from Lake George into Lake Champlain, which had been patietifed in the night by a party of light infantry. It appeared at fird to be a very advantageous path, and a is now known that the enemy had a counet fome time ago upon the expediency of pollefting it; but the idea was rejected, upon the fuppointion that it was impollible for a corps to be eftablished there in force. Lieutenant Twife reported this hull to have the entire command of the works and buildings both of Ficorderoga and Mould Independence, at the ground might be levelled fo as to receive cannon, and that the road to convey them, though difficult, might be made practicable in tweity-four hours. This hill alfo commanded, in reverfe, the bridge of communication; faw the exact fituation of their verifels; nor could the enemy, during the day, make any material movement or preparation, without being diffeovered, and even having their numbers counted,

It was determined that a battery fhould be raifed on Sugar Hill for light twentyfour pounders, medium twelves, and eight inch howitzers. This very arduous work was carried on fo rapidly that the battery would have been ready the next day.

It is a duty in this place to do fome juffice to the zeal and activity of Major General Phillips, who had the direction of the operation, and having mentioned that most valuable officer, I trust it cannot be thought a digreffion to add, that it is to his judicious arrangements and indefatigable pains, during the general fuperintendency of preparation which Sir Guy Carleton entrusted to him in the winter and fpring, that the fervice is indebted for its prefent forwardnets. The prevalence of contrary winds and other accidents having rendered it impoffible for any necetilaries prepared in England for the opening of the campaign, yet to reach the camp.

6th July.

Soon after day-light an officer arrived express, on board the Royal George, where in the night I took up my quarters, as the most centrical fituation, with information from Brigadier Frafer that the enemy were retiring, and that he was advancing with his piequets, leaving orders for the brigade to follow as foon as they could accoute, with intention to purfue by land. This movement was very differnible, as were the British colours, which the Brigadier had fixed upon the fort of Ticonderoga. Knowing how fafely I could trust to that officer's conduct, I turned my chief attention to the purfuit by water, by which route I underflood one column were retiring in two hundred and twenty bateaux, covered by five aroued gallies.

The great bridge of communication, through which a way was to be opened, was imported by twenty-two funken piers of large timber, at nearly equal diflances; the fpace between were made of feparate floats, each about fifty feet long, and twelve feet wide, flrongly failened together by chains and rivets, and also failened to the funken piers. Before this bridge was a boom, made of very large pieces of timber, fattened together by rivetted bolts and double chains, made of iron an inch and an half iquare.

The gun-boats were inflantly moved forward, and the boom and one of the intermediate floats were cut with great dexterity and difpatch, and Commodore Lutwidge, with the officers and feamen in his department, partaking the general animation, a paffage was formed in half an hour for the frigates alfo, through nonpediments which the enemy had been labouring to conflruct fince laft autumn.

During this operation Major General Reidefel had puffed to Mount Indepen dence, with the corps, Breyman, and part of the left wing. He was ducted to proceed by land, to full ain Brigadier Frafer, or to act more to the left, if he faw at expedient fo to do.

The 62d regiment Britifh, and the Brunfwick regiment of Prince Frederick, were flationed at Ticonderoga and Mount Independence, in the place of the parties of Frater's brigade, which had been left in poffetion of the artiflery and flores, and the reft of the army was ordered to follow up the river as they could be collected, without regard to the place in the line.

About three in the afternoon I arrived with the Royal George and Inflexible, and the beft failing gun-boats at South Bay, within three miles of Skenefborough, at which latter place the enemy were pofted in a flockaded fort, and their armed gallies in the falls below.

The foremost regiments, viz. the 9th, 20th, and 21ft, were immediately difembarked, and afcended the mountains with the intention of getting behind the fort, and cutting off the retreat of the enemy; but their precipitate flight rendered this manœuvre ineffectual. The gun-boats and frigates continued their course to Skenefborough Falls, where the armed veffels were poffed. Captain Carter, with part of his brigade of gun-boats, immediately attacked, and with fo much fpirit, that two of the veffels very foon ftruck; the other three were blown up, and the enemy having previoufly prepared combuffible materials, fet fire to the fort, mills, ftoreboufes, bateaux, &c. and retired with the detachment left for that purpole, the main body having gone off when the troops were afcending the mountain. A great quantity of provisions and fome arms were here confinned, and most of their officers' baggage was burnt, funk, or taken. Their loss is not known; about 30 prifoners were made, among which were two wounded officers

During these operations upon the right, Brigadier General Fraser continued his purfuit to Cattletown till one o'clock, having marched in a very hot day from four o'clock in the morning till that time. Some ftragglers of the enemy were picked up, from whom the Brigadier learned that their rear guard was compoled of choten men, and commanded by Colonel Francis, one of their beft officers. During the time that the men were refreshing, Major General Reidefel came up, and arrangements for continuing the purfuit having been concerted, Brigadier Frafer moved forward again, and during the night lay upon his arms, in an advantageous firuation, three miles nearer the enemy.

At three in the morning he renewed his march, and about five his advanced 7th July. fcouts difcovered the enemy's centries, who fired their pieces and joined the main body. The Brigadier observing a commanding ground to the left of his light infantry, immediately ordered it to be poffeffed by that corps; and a confiderable body of the enemy attempting the fame, they met. The enemy were driven back to their original poft; the advanced guard under Major Grant was by this time engaged, and the grenadiers were advanced to fuftain them, and to prevent the right flank from being turned. The Brigadier remained on the left, where the enemy long defended themfelves by the aid of logs and trees, and after being repulfed, and prevented getting to the Caftletown road by the grenadiers, they rallied, and renewed the action; and upon a fecond repulse, attempted their retreat by Pitsford Mountain. The grenadiers fcrambled up a part of that afcent, appearing almost inacceffible, and gained the fummit before them, which threw them into confusion; they were fuil greatly superior in numbers, and confequently in extent, and the brigadier, in momentary expectation of the Brunfwickers, had latterally drawn from his left to fupport his right. At this critical moment General Reidefel, who had preffed on, upon hearing the firing, arrived with the foremost of his columns, viz. the chaffeurs company and eighty grenadiers and light infantry. His judgment immediately pointed to him the course to take; he extended upon Brigadier Fraser's left flank. The chatteurs got into action with great gallantry, under Major Barner. They fled on all fides, leaving dead upon the field Colonel Francis and many other officers, with upwards of 200 men; above 600 were wounded, most of whom perished in the woods, attempting to get off, and one colonel, feven captains, ten fubalterns, and 210 men were made prifoners; above 200 ftand of arms were alfo taken.

The number of the enemy before the engagement amounted to 2000 men. The British detachment under Brigadier General Fraser (the parties left the day before at Ticonderoga not having been able to join) consisted only of 850 fighting men.

The bare relation of fo fignal an action is fufficient for its praife. Should the attack againft fuch inequality of numbers, before the German brigade came up, feem to require explanation, it is to be confidered that the enemy might have efcaped by delay; that the advanced guard on a fudden found themfelves too near the enemy to avoid action without retreating; and that Brigadier Frafer had fuppofed the German troops to be very near. The difference of time in their arrival was merely accidental. The Germans pufhed for a fhare in the glory, and they arrived in time to obtain it. I have only to add, that the exertions of Brigadier Frafer on this day were but a continuance of that uniform intelligence, activity and bravery, which diftinguifh his character upon all occasions, and entitle him to be recommended, in the most particular manner, to his Majefty's favour.

The officers and foldiers of this brigade have prevented any diffinctions of individuals by a general and equal difplay of fpirit.

The country people about Skenefborough having reported that part of the enemy were ftill retreating, the oth regiment was detached, with orders to take poft near Fort Anne, and observe the enemy's motions. This was effected, but with great difficulty, as the roads were almost impracticable, and the bridges broken. The other troops were employed all that day and night in dragging fifty bateaux over the carrying place at Wood Creek, to facilitate the movement of the rest of the first brigade to Fort Anne, to diflodge the enemy.

Sth July.

A report was received from Lieutenant Colonel Hill (oth regiment) that the enemy had been reinforced in the night by a confiderable body of fresh men; that he could not retire with his regiment before them, but he would maintain his ground. The two remaining regiments of the first brigade were ordered to quicken their their march, and upon fecond intelligence of the enemy, and firing being heard, the 20th regiment was ordered forward with two pieces of artillery, and Major General Phillips was fent to take the command. A violent florm of rain, which lafted the whole day, prevented the troops from getting to Fort Anne fo foon as was intended; but the delay gave the 9th regiment an opportunity of diffinguifiing themfelves, by flanding and repulsing an attack of fix times their number. The enemy finding the polition not to be forced in front, endeavoured to turn it; and from the fuperiority of their numbers that inconvenience wis to be apprehended; and Lieutenant Colonel Hill found it necessary to change his position in the height of action: fo critical an order was executed by the regiment with the utmost steadinel's and bravery. The enemy, after an attack of three hours, were totally repulsed, and fled towards Fort Edward, fetting fire to Fort Anne, but leaving a faw-mill and a block-houfe in good repair, which were afterwards poffeffed by the king's troops.

The 9th regiment acquired, during their expedition, about thirty prifoners, fome ftores and baggage, and colours of the 2d Hampshire regiment.

One unlucky accident happened, to counterbalance, in fome degree, this fuccefs. Captain Montgomery, an officer of great merit, was wounded early in the action, and was in the act of being dreffed by the furgeon when the regiment changed ground; being unable to help himfelf, he and the furgeon were taken prifoners. I fince hear he has been well treated, and is in a fair way of recovery at Albany.

The army very much fatigued (many parts of it having wanted their provisions 9th and for two days, almost the whole their tents and baggage) assembled in their prefent 10th July. pofition. The right wing occupies the heights of Skenetborough in two lines ; the right flank to the mountains, covered by the regiment of Reidefel's dragoons, en potence; the left to the Wood Creek.

The Brunfwick troops under Major General Reidefel upon Caftletown River, with Breyman's corps upon the communication of roads leading to Putney and Rutland; the regiment of Heffe Hanau are posted at the head of East Creek, to preferve the communication with the camp at Caftletown River, and fecure the bateaux.

Brigadier Fraser's corps is in the centre, ready to move on either wing of the army.

The fcattered remains of the enemy are at Fort Edward, on the Hudfon's River, where they have been joined, as I am informed, by General Putnam, with a confiderable corps of fresh troops.

Roads are opening for the army to march to them by Fort Anne, and the Wood Creek is clearing of fallen trees, funken ftones, and other obstacles, to give passage to bateaux for carrying artillery, ftores, provifions and camp equipage. These are laborious works; but the fpirit and zeal of the troops are fufficient to furmount them. Some little time must also be allowed for the supplies of provisions to overtake us. In the mean time all poffible diligence is using at Ticonderoga to get the gun-boats, provision veffels, and a proper quantity of bateaux into Lake George. A corps of the army will be ordered to penetrate by that route, which will afterwards be the route for the magazines; and a junction of the whole is intended at Fort Edward.

Copy of a Letter from Lieutenant General Burgoyne to Lord George Germain, dated Skenetborough, July 11, 1777. [Private.]

My LORD,

HAVING given your Lordship a detail, in my public letter of this date, of the late transactions, I now do myfelf the honour to state to your Lordship, such circum-stances as appear to me successory or for a private communication.

Mr. Peters and Mr. Josling, who came over to Canada last autumn, and proposed to raife battalions, one from the neighbourhood of Albany, the other from Charlotte county, are confident of fuccets as the army advances. Their battalions are now in embryo, but very promifing ; they hav fought, and with fpirit. Sir Guy Carleton has given me blank committions for the officers, to fill up occationally, and the agreement with them is, that the committions are not to be fo effective, till two thirds of the battalions are raifed. Some hundreds of men, a third part of them with arms, have joined me fince I have penerated this place, profeffing themfelves loyalits, and withing to ferve, fome to the end of the war, fome for the campaign. Though I am without influctions upon this fubject, I have not befitated to receive them, and as fait as companies can be formed, I shall post the officers till a decision can be made upon the measure by my superiors. I mean to employ them particularly upon detachments, for keeping the country in awe, and procuring cattle; their real use 1 expect will be great in the prefervation of the national troops : but the imprefion which will be cauted upon public opinion, thould provincials be feen acting vigoroully in the caule of the King, will be yet more advantageous, and, I truth, fully julify the expence.

The manifetto, of which I enclosed your Lordship a copy in my last dispatches, and herewith fend a duplicate, has great effect where the country is not in the power of the rebels; where it is, the committees turn all their efforts to counteract it. They watch or imprison all suspected perfons, compel the people in general to take arms, and to drive the cattle, and to burn the corn, under penalty of immediate death. Great numbers have been hanged. Should these wretches succeed to make a defert of the country, by fire and matlacre, it will at least be a pleasing reflection, that while advantages are reaped from the element part of the manifelto, they, and not the King's troops, are the executioners of its threats.

Your Lordthip will have obferved, I have made no mention of the Indians, in the purfuit from Ticonderoga. It is not possible to draw them in many respects from the plunder of that place, and I confidentially acknowledge this is not the only inflance in which I have found little more than a name. If, under the management of their conductors, they are indulged, for interested reasons, in all the caprices and humours of spoiled children, like them they grow more unreasonable and importunate upon 2 dians, in the ects from the only inftance ment of their and humours rtunate upon every every new favour ; were they left to themfelves, enormities too horrid to think of would enfue, guilty and innocent, women and infants, would be a common prey.

This is the character of the lower Canadian Indians, who alone have been with the army hitherto. I am informed the Outawas, and other remote nations, who are within two days march of joining me, are more brave and more tractable ; that they profets war, not pillage. They are under the directions of a M. St. Lue, a Canadian gentleman of honour and parts, and one of the belt partizans the French had laft seand of one Langlade, the very man who projected and executed with thefe very tetions the defeat of General Braddock. My first intention was to turn this will be corps to the Connecticut immediately, to force a fupply of provisions, to intercept reinforcements, and to confirm the jealoufy I have in many ways encleavoured to excite in the New England provinces ; but finding that the enemy are labouring to remove their magazines from Forts George and Edward, and every where deftroying the roads, and preparing to drive and burn the country towards Albany, I have determined to employ them, to prevent, if poffible, by their terror, the continuance of thofe operations. And after arriving at Albany, they may be employed to renew the alarm towards Connecticut and Bofton.

Your Lordship will pardon me if I a little lament the my orders do not give me the latitude I ventured to propose in my original project for the campaign, to make a real effort inflead of a feint upon New England. As things inve turned out, were I at liberty to march in force immediately by my left, inflead of my right, I should have little doubt of fubduing before winter the provided where the rebellion origiginated.

If my late letters reach Mr. Howe, I fill hope this plan may be adopted from Albany; in the mean while my utmost exertions flast continue, according to my inflructions, to force a junction.

I have fent fome Indians through the woods, in the hope of their reaching St. Leger, with the account of my progrefs; now is the critical time for his puth upon the Mohawk. I have certain intelligence that all the country round Fort Stanwix is in alarm : but I imagine it proceeds from the appearance of fome Savages detached by Colonel Butler, not apprehending St. Leger can be got quite to forward.

Camp near Saratoga, August 20, 1777.

Second No. VIII.

To Lord George Germaine.

My LORD,

IN my last diffatch (a duplicate of which will be inclosed herewith) I had the honour to inform your Lordship of the proceedings of the army under my command to the 30th of July.

From that period to the 15th of August every possible measure was employed to bring forward bateaux, provisions, and ammunition from Fort George to the first navigable part of Hudson's River, a distance of eighteen miles, the roads in some parts steep, and in others wanting great repair. Of the horse surnished by contract in Canada not more than a third part was yet arrived. The delay was not imputable to neglech, but to the natural accidents attending to long and intricate a combination or land and water carriage. Fifty team of oxen, which had been collected in the country through which I had marched, were added to affift the transport; but thefe informing a magazine at the fame time. Exceeding heavy rains augmented the impedaments. It was often neceflary to employ ten or twelve oxen upon a fingle bateau; and after the utmost exertions for the fifteen days above flaned, there were not above four days provision before hand, nor above ten bateaux in the river.

Intelligence had reached me that Lieutenant Colonel St. Leger was before Fort Stanwix, which was detended. The main army of the enemy oppofed to me was at Sullwater, a place between Saratoga and the mouth of the Mohawk.

A rapid movement forward appeared to be of the utmoft confequence at this period. The enemy could not have proceeded up the Mohawk without putting themfelves between two fires, in cafe Colonel St. Leger flould have forceeded and at beft being cut off by my army from Albany. They mufl either therefore have flood an action, have fallen back towards Albany, or have paffed the Hudion's River, in order to fecure a retreat to New England, higher up. Which ever of thefe meatures they had taken, fo that the King's army had been enabled to advance, Colorel St. Leger's operations would have been atlifted, a junction with him probably tecured, and the whole country of the Mohawk opened. To maintain the communication with Fort George during fuch a movement, to as to be supplied by daily degrees at a diffance, continually increasing, was an obvious impossibility. The atmy was much too weak to have afforded a chain of polls. Efforts for every feparate transport would have been a flill greater drain; nor could any have been made to firong as to force their way through fuch politions as the enemy might take in one inglu's march from the White Creek, where they had a numerous militia. Had the enemy remained fopine, through fear or want of comprehending fo palpable an advantage, the physical impossibility of being supplied by degrees from Fort George was thill in force, becaute a new necetity of land carriage for nine miles arifes at Stillwater : and in the proportion that carriages had been brought forward to that place, the transport must have ceased behind.

The alternative therefore was flort $_{4}$ either to relinquish the favourable opportunity of advancing upon the eveny, or to attempt other refources of fupply.

It was well known that the enemy's fupplies in live cattle, from a large trach of country, pathed by the route of Mancheffer, Arlington, and other parts of the Hampfhire Grants, to Bennington, in order to be occationally conveyed from thence to the main atmy. A large deposit of corn and of wheel carriages was also formed at the fame place, and the usual guard was militia, though it varied in numbers from day to day. A scheme was formed to surprise Bennington. The possession of the cattle and carriages would certainly have enabled the army to leave their diffant magazines, and to have acted with energy and difpatch : success would also have answered many secondary purposes.

Lieut. Col. Baume, an officer well qualified for the undertaking, was fixed upon to command. He had under him 200 difmounted dragoons of the regiment of Riedetel, Captain Frafer's markfmen, which were the only Britifh, all the Canadian volunteers, a party of the Provincials who perfectly knew the country. 100 Indians, and two light pieces of cannon; the whole detachment amounted to about 500 men. The influctions were pointive to keep the regular corps poffed while thelight troops felt their their way, and not to incur the danger of being furtounded, or baying a tetreat cut off.

In order to facilitate this operation, and to be ready to take advantage of its fuccefs, the army moved up the eafl those of Hudton's River. On the 14th, a bridge was formed of rafts, over which the advanced corps pathed and encamped at Saratoga. Lieutenant Colonel Breyman's corps were polled near Batten Kill, and upon intelligence from Colonel Baume, that the enemy were flyonger at Bennington than expected, and were aware of his attack, that corps, confitting of the Brundwick grenadiers, light infantry and chaffeurs, were fent forward to foftain him.

It fince appears that Lieutenant Colonel Baume, not having been able to complete his march undiffeovered, was joined at a place called Sancoix Mills, about four miles thort of Bennington, by many people protecting themfelves to be Loyalitts. A provincial gentleman of confidence who had been lent with the detachment, as knowing the country and the character of the inhabitants, was fo incautious as to leave at liberty fuch as took the oath of allegiance.

His credulity and their profligacy caufed the first misfortune. Colonel Baume was induced to proceed without fufficient knowledge of the ground. His defign was be trayed; the men who had taken the oaths were the first to fire upon him; he was attacked on all fides. He shewed great perfonal courage, but was overpowered by numbers.

During this time Lieutenant Colonel Breyman was upon the march through a heavy rain; and fuch were the other impediments flated in that officer's report, of bad roads, tired horfes, difficulties in pafling artillery, carriages, &c. that he was from eight in the morning of the 15th to four in the afternoon of the following day making about twenty-four miles.

He engaged, fought gallantly, and drove the enemy from three feveral heights; but was too late to fuccour Colonel Baume, who was made prifoner, and a confiderable part of his dragoons were killed or taken. The failure of ammunition, from the accidental breaking to pieces of a tumbril, unfortunately obliged Lieutenant Colonel Breyman to retire conquering troops, and to leave behind two pieces of cannon, befides two which had been loft by Lieutenant Colonel Baume. The Iodians made good their retreat from the first affair, as did Captain Frafer, with part of his company, and many of the Provincials and Canadians.

The loss, as at prefent appears, amounts to about 400 men, killed and taken in both actions, and twenty-fix officers, molly prifoners; but men who were differfed in the woods drop in daily. A correct return shall be transmitted to your Lordship the first opportunity.

This, my Lord, is a true flate of the event. I have not dwelt upon errors, becaufe in many inflances they were counterbalanced by fpirit. The enemy will of courfe find matter of parade in the acquifition of four pieces of cannon: but that apart, they have finall caufe of exultation; their lofs in killed and wounded being more than double to ours, by the confeffion of their prifoners and deferters, and of many inhabitants who were witneffes to the burial of their dead.

The chief fubject of regret on our fide, after that which any lofs of gallant mennaturally occasions, is the difappointment of not obtaining live cattle, and the lofs of time in bringing forward the magazines.

[Private.]

My LORD,

(Signed.)

I NEED not enlarge upon the concern I have in communicating any finifier events. I am perfuaded your Lordship will give me credit for partaking every featiment that your Lordship, or any other man warmed with principle and zeal in this contest, can feel.

In regard to the affair of Saintcoick, I have only to add to the public account, that if ever there was a fituation to juffify enterprize and exertion, out of the beaten track of military fervice, it was that in which I found myfelf. Had I fucceeded, I fhould have effected a junction with St. Leger, and been now before Albany. And I flatter myfelf, I need only mention thofe views, to fhew that in hazarding this expedition I had the foundeft principles of military reafoning on my fide, viz. that the advantages to be expected from fuccefs were in a great degree fuperior to the evils that could attend mifcarriage. The fecondary purpofes, to which I alluded in the public letter, were to try the affections of the country; to complete the Provincial corps, many recruits for which were unable to efcape from their villages without a force to encourage and protect them; and to diffract the councils of the enemy, by continuing their jealoufy towards New England.

Major General Reidefel has prefied upon me repeatedly the mounting his dragoons, the men were animated with the fame defire, and I conceived it a moft favourable occafion to give into their ideas and folicitations, becaufe in exerting their zeal to fulfil their favourite purpofe, they neceflarily would effect the greater purpofe of my own. The reft of the troops were felected from fuch as would leaft weaken the folid fitrength of the army, in cafe of ill fuccefs; and I thought it expedient to take a little trial of the Provincials and Canadians before I might have occafion for them in more important actions.

The original detachment could not have been made larger without opening roads, and other preparations of time, nor fhould I have thought it juftifiable to expose the bett troops to loss upon a collateral action. Had my inftructions been followed, or could Mr. Breyman have marked at the rate of two miles an hour any given twelve hours out of the two and thirty, fucces would probably have enfued, misfortune would certainly have been avoided. I did not think it prudent, in the prefent crifts, to mark these circumstances to the public fo strongly as I do in confidence to your Lord-ng roads, expose the owed, or en twelve hisfortune ent crifis, to your LordLordihip; but I rely, and I will venture to fay I expect, becaufe I think juffice will warrant the expectation, that while, for the fake of public harmony, that neceffary principle for conducting nice and laborious fervice, I colour the faults of the execution, your Lordihip will, in your goodnefs, be my advocate to the King, and to the world, in vindication of the plan.

The confequences of this affair, my Lord, have little effect upon the firength or fpirits of the army; but the profpect of the campaign in other refpects, is far leis prosperous than when I wrote last. In spice of St. Leger's victory, Fort Stanwix holds out obflinately. I am afraid the expectations of Sir J. Johnson greatly fail in the rifing of the country. On this fide I find daily reafon to doubt the fincerity of the refolution of the profetting loyalifls. I have about 400, but not half of them armed, who may be depended upon ; the reft are trimmers, merely actuated by intereft. The great bulk of the country is undoubtedly with the Congress, in principle and in zeal; and their meatures are executed with a fecreey and different that are not to be equalled. Wherever the King's forces point, militia, to the amount of three or four thoufand affemble in twenty-four hours; they bring with them their fubfiftence, &c. and, the alarm over, they return to their farms. The Hampfhire Grants in particular, a country unpeopled and almost unknown in the last war, now abounds in the most active and most rebellious race of the continent, and hangs like a gathering florm upon my left. In ali parts the induffry and managment in driving cattle, and removing corn, are indefatigable and certain; and it becomes impracticable to move without portable magazines. Another most embarrafling circumflance, is the want of communication with Sir William Howe; of the mellengers I have feat, I know of two being hanged, and am ignorant whether any of the reft arrived. The fame fate has probably attended those dispatched by Sir William Howe; for only one letter is come to hand, informing me that his intention is for Penfylvania; that Wafhington has detached Sullivan, with 2500 men to Albany; that Putnam is in the Highlands, with 4000 men. That after my arrival at Albany, the movements of the enemy must guide mine; but that he withed the enemy might be driven our of the province before any operation took place against the Connecticut ; that Sir Henry Clinton remained in the command in the neighbourhood of New-York, and would aft as occurrences might direct.

No operation, my Lord, has yet been undertaken in my favour : the highlands have not even been threatened. The confequence is, that Putnam has detached two brigades to Mr. Gates, who is now ftrongly pofted near the mouth of the Mohawk-River, with an army fuperior to mine in troops of the Congress, and as many militia as he pleafes. He is likewife far from being deficient in artillery, having received all the pieces that were landed from the French flips which got into Bofton.

Had I a latitude in my orders, I thould think it my duty to wait in this polition, or perhaps as far back as Fort Edward, where my communication with Lake George would be perfectly fecure, till fome event happened to affilt my movement forward; but my orders being politive to "force a junction with Sir William Howe," I apprehend I am not at liberty to remain inactive longer than fhall be necetlary to collect twenty-five days provision, and to receive the reinforcement of the additional companies, the German drafts and recruits now (and unfortunately only now) on Lake Champlain. The waiting the arrival of this reinforcement is of in differible necefficy, because from the hour I pafs the Hudfon's River and proceed towards Albany, all fafety of communication ceafes. I muft expect a large body of the enemy from my left will take poth behind me. I have put out of the queftion the waiting longer than the time neceffary for the foregoing purpofes, becaufe the attempt, then critical, depending on adventure and the fortune that often accompanies it, and hardly juftifiable but by orders from the flate, would afterwards be confummately defperate. I mean my Lord, that by moving foon, though I fhould meet with infurmountable difficultics to my progrefs, I shall at least have the chance of fighting my way back to Ticonderoga, but the feasion a little further advanced, the diffance encreased, and the march unavoidably tardy, because furrounded by enemies, a retreat might be shut by impenetrable bars or the elements, and at the same time no possible means of existence remain in the country.

When I wrote more confidently, I little forefaw that I was to be left to purfue my way through fuch a tract of country, and hoils of foes, without any co-operation from New-York; nor did I then think the garrifon of Ticonderoga would fall to my thate alone, a dangerous experiment would it be to leave that poft in weaknefs, and too heavy a drain it is upon the life-blood of my force to give it due firength.

I yet do not defpond.—Should I fucceed in forcing my way to Albany, and find that country in a flate to fubfift my army, I thall think no more of a retreat, but at the worft fortify there and await Sir W. Howe's operations.

Whatever may be my fate, my Lord, I fubmit my actions to the breaft of the King, and to the candid judgment of my profettion, when all the motives become public; and I reft in the confidence, that whatever decifion may be patied upon my conduct, my good intent will not be queftioned.

I cannot close fo ferious a letter without expressing my fulleft fatisfaction in the behaviour and countenance of the troops, and my compleat confidence that in all trials they will do whatever can be expected from men devoted to their King and country.

I have the honour to be, &cc.

J. BURGOYNE.

P. S. Upon re-perufing this letter, I am apprehensive that the manner in which I have expressed myself, respecting the reinforcement being only upon Lake Champlain, may feem ambiguous.—I do not mean to impute the delay to any thing but accidents, nor do I mean to contest Sir Guy Carleton's reasoning upon not complying with my requisitions to garrifon Ticonderoga, I only lament it.

DEAR SIR,

I have received yours of the fecond inflant on the 15th, have fince heard from the rebel army of your being in pofleffion of Ticonderoga, which is a great event, carried without lofs. I have served your two letters, viz. from Plymouth and Quebec, your laft of the 14th May, and fhall observe the contents. There is a report of a mellenger of yours to me having been taken, and the letter discovered in a double wooden canteen, you will know if it was of any confequence; nothing of it has tranfpired to us. I will observe the fame rules in writing to you, as you propose, in your letters

My intention is for Penfylvania, where I expect to meet Washington, but if he goes to the northward contrary to my expectations, and you can keep him at bay, be assured I shall soon be after him to relieve you.

After your arrival at Albany, the movements of the enemy will guide yours; but my wifhes are, that the enemy be drove out of this province before any operation takes place in Connecticut. Sir Henry Clinton remains in the command here, and will act as occurrences my direct. Putnam is in the highlands with about 4000 men. Succefs be ever with you.

SIR,

Quebeck, November 12, 1777.

I received your letter of the 20th of October, with your public difpatches by Captain Craig, the 5th inflant, and heartily condole with you upon the very difagreeable accounts they contain, all which I fincerely lamented, both on the public account and your own.

This unfortunate event, it is to be hoped, will in future prevent minifters from ptetending to direct operations of war, in a country at three thousand miles diitance, of which they have fo little knowledge as not to be able to diftinguish between good, bad, or interested advices, or to give positive orders in matters, which from their nature, are ever upon the change; fo that the expedience or propriety of a meafure at one moment, may be totally inexpedient or improper in the next.

Having given over all hopes of being relieved this fall. I determined upon fending home Captain Foy, to furnish his Majesty's confidential fervants, and my successor, with the best information in my power, of the state of affairs in this province, that they may form the better judgment of what they have to do.

I am, &c.

First Application from Major General Phillips relative to Horfes. Dated Montreal, June 4, 1777.

SIR,

I TAKE the liberty of informing your Excellency, that there has yet been no arrangement made for marching the field artillery by land, should the corps of troops upon an expedition under your command in the course of the campaign quit the lakes Champlain and George, and the rivers.

I have, upon the first eff information which could be produced, reafon to believe, that neither carriages nor horfes will be to be had nearer than Albauv, fhould the route of your army be that way, and even in that country, it will neceffailly require a confiderable time before any can be got; all which must neceffailly delay the operations of the campaign, after the reduction of Ticonderoga. I therefore fubmit to your Excellency's confideration whether horfes and fuch asimunition-carriages as may be wanted thould not be produced for the fervice of the campaign, for the field artillery attached to the corps of troops your Excellency is to command this campaign?

I have the honour to be Sir,

I HAVE the honour of your Excellency's letter to me of yefferday, in answer to one I wrote on the fubject of the field-artillery being fupplied with horfes, &c. &c.

You are pleated, Sir, to order me to give an opinion upon the mode of procuring horfes and carriages from this country, combining the confideration of difpatch, fufficiency, and accommy towards government.

There are but two modes of procuring horfes for the fervice, fuppofing the country is not to furnish them upon Corvées, the one is by purchasing of horfes upon the account of government, the other by contract.

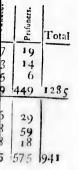

The firth of thefe modes has always appeared to me difficult, uncertain, and full of openings for every fpecies of impofition, and the expence uncertain.—Government muft truft various people to buy horfes, and in this country it will not be poffible to procare any perfons who will not immediately purfue the views of gaining money to themfelves with a confideration for the King's fervice. Add to this, that it will become fuch a charge, that many commiffaries muft be appointed, and various other officers of that fort, &c, which being a mixture of infpectors into the purchafes of horfes, and neceffarily allo at times the being purchafers, it will be difficult ever to afcertain the price, and feldom that the goodnefs of horfes can be depended on.

I have feen in my fervice this mode attempted, but it has to my knowledge failed. I muft allow, that could it be carried into execution complete, it would be the cheapeft for government: but taking into confideration the various impositions which will arile, and that the fetting out on a plan of this nature will require a very large fum of moin Canada. Cepy ney, perhaps from 2.500 d. to 30,000l, to be intruffed into various hands, I freely give it as my opinion that it is not a perfect plan. The contracting for a certain number of hortes at a fixed price for the hire by day reduces the whole to a very fing le, and therefore generally a certain plan. It depends in the fetting out, by making as cheap, as flar, and juil a bargain on the part of government as can be. And being to made, that the inducary and evil others do their duty, by attending to the receiving of hortes only as they are fitting for fervice. The contractor has his interest to directly connected with fulfilling his contract, as upon failore it ceafes, that he will exert all means to do it, and the care of government will be that it be done honeffly and compleatly.

I have thus obeyed your Excellency's orders, and given an opinion which I fubruit entirely to your confideration.

Extract of a Letter to Nathaniel Day, Efg. Commiglary General, Se dated Montreal, June 4th, 1977.

HAVING had the honor to reprefent to your Excellency the necessary of being provided with a certain number of horfes and carriages for the artillery, stitual, and other inditpentible purpofes of the army, when it thall be obliged to quit 'e borders of the lakes and rivers; and having underflood from your excellence that is proposed without compulsion upon the country the effect would be precarisous, dilatory, and expensive; I have the honour now to lay before your Excellency propotals for contracts for an expeditious supply of horfes for the artillery, and 500 carts, with two horfes each, for the other purpoles.

I am too ignorant of the prices of the COUNTY to offer any judgment upon the reafonablenets of these proposals a nor have I any long acquaintance with Ma. Jordan, or other motive for withing him the preference, if other perforts can be found equally capable, responsible, and expeditious. I have only thus far interfered, upon a conviction, after confidering the route the King's orders direct, and taking all possible methods of information upon the supply to be expected as we proceed, that to depend upon the country altogether would be to hazard the expedition.

Your Excellency will oblerve, that in order to fave the public expence as much as pollible, I have reduced this requifition much below what would be adequate to the fervice, and I mean to truth to the refources of the expedition for the refl ; 500 earts who barely carry fourteen days provisions at a time, and Major General Phillips means to demand as few horfes as poffible, fubject to whatever future augmentations future fervices may require; the prefent number wanted will be about 400; there will then remain unprovided for (for expeditious movement) the transport of bateaux from Lake George to Hudfon's River, and the carriage of the tents of the actuy, and many other contingencies that I need not trouble your Excellency to point out to you.

Extract of a Letter to General Harvey.

Montreal, May 19, 1777.

YOU have permitted me, as formerly, to write to you confidentially. I take the first conveyance to renew a correspondence to pleafing and honourable to typelf, and that may, in fome cales, become beneficial to the public fervice. It thall never be employed but to convey muths, to do juffice to facts and perfors, and to fecure mylelf in the continuance of an effective to valuable to me as yours againft appearances and mitrepretentations.

I have reafon to be exceedingly fatisfied with all that has been done, and with moft things that are doing : exercises have been made during the winter, which was remarkably favourable, in all the departments, and preparations are very forward; thofe that have been committed to the directions of General Phillips have been executed with a diligence, prevision, and forefight, that entitle ham to the fulleft praife. The troops are in a flate of health almost unprecedented, and their fpirits and general improvement are equally objects of great pleafure and promife. To this agage able reprefentation I have the happinels to add, that Sir Guy Carleton has received me and the orders. I brought in a manner that, in my opinion, does infinite honour to he public and private charafter.

That he fhould have withed for the lead in active and important military operations, is very natural. That he thinks he has fone caufe of refentment for the general a porof treatment he has received from fone of the immillers is differmible; but neither has diffappointment nor his perfonal feelings operate against his duty; and I an convinced he means to forward, the King's measures, entrulled to my hands, with all the zeal he could have employed had they refled in his own.

My intention is, during my advance to Treonderoga, and fiege of that poll, for a fiege I apprehend it mult be, to give all pollible jealoufy on the fide of Connecticut It I can by maneuvre make them fulpedt that after the reduction of Treonderega my views are pointed that sway, it may make the Connecticut forces very cautous of leaving their own frontiers, and much facilitate my progrep to Albany. I trention this intention only to Lord George and yourlelf, and I do not firm any intelligence of my motions that may reach England indirectly, it thous be fuppofed I have furfered myfelf to be diverted from the main object of my orders. The King and has Majeffy's minifters may reft affored that whatever demontants I may endergo or to impole upon the enemy, I thall really make no movement that can procratinate my progrets to Albany.

One thing more occurs. I had the furprile an mortification to find a paper handed about at Montreal, publishing the whole defign of the campaign, almost as accurately as if it had been comed from the Secretary of State's letter. My own cau-

Sir Guy Carleton's, I am confident, has been equal; I am therefore led to doubt whether imprudence has not been committed from private letters from England, and with you would afk my friend D'Oyley, to whom my very affectionate compliments, whether there is any perfon within the line of minifterial communication that he can fufpect to be fo unguarded? It is not of great confequence here, except as far as regards St. I eger's expedition; but fuch a trick may be of molt prejudicial confequence in other cates, and thould be guarded againft.

Camp on the River Barquet, near Lake Champlain, June 22, 1777. I HAVE had to contend againft wet weather that rendered the roads almoft impracticable at the carrying places, and confequently the paffage of the bateaux and exceedingly dilatory, bandes a great deal of contrary wind. Indeed the combination of land and water movement, bad roads, inactivity and fometimes difobedience in the country, and a thoutand other difficulties and accidents, unknown in other fervices, diffeoncert all arrangements. I do not mention this upon my own account, as I do not hold myfelf refponfible for delays within the province of Canada; but I mention it to do julice to others, who, I really think, have infinite merit in overcoming the obfructions we have met with, and who ought to be juffiled againft fome acquaintances of yours and mine, who travel acrofs a map very fatt, and are very free in their comments, when others, who have ten times their knowledge and refources, do not anfwer their predictions and expectations.

I have been exceedingly diffrefled in regard to the brigadiers of this army. Sir Guy Carleton, the day I took leave of him, put into my hands an extract of a letter from the Secretary at War, approving the appointment of those gentlemen, but observing, that whenever any of them thould leaw their brigades out of the province of Canada, in order to join the troops under General Howe, there would be a necessity for their command cealing as brigadiers, &c.

Were this to be put in execution, according to the letter of the order, and the geographical limits of Canada, and fuppoling Major General Phillips at the fame time to be employed folely in the artillery, 1 flould find ny felf at the head of an army to undertake a fiege, and after vards purfue objects of importance, and poffibly of time, without a fingle intermediate British officer between the Lieutenant General, commanding pro tempore in chief, and a Lieutenant Colo.el. It would be prepoflerous and impertinent in me to fay one word more to you a an officer, upon the impofibility of methodizing or conducting such an army with such a total deficiency of staff. Hal Lord Barrington condefeended to have communicated his intentions to me in London, I think I could have convinced him of the impropriety. As it is, I muft conclude that the fpirit of the order goes only to prevent those gentlemen bearing a higher rank and pay than fenior lieutenant colonels ferving in the fame army; and that therefore there can be no fault in keeping it dormant till the junction takes place. In other words, I look upon mine to be the Canada army till fuch time as I am in communication with General Howe, to as to make part of his force, and confequently without

I am perfuaded, my dear General, you will fupport me in this liberty, if fuch it is to be called, not only as the abfolute order and method of the fervice depends upon it, but allo to avoid to thefe gentlemen, who have really great merit, the vexation and the ridicule of being deprived of their rank and pay in the hour of that very fervice, with a view to which their appointment was originally made. I think I can answer, that the junction made, and the reasons for reverting to their former ranks, become obvious, they will fubmit to his Majesty's pleasure without a murmur.

Extract of a Letter from Lieutenant General Burgoyne to General Harvey.

Head Quarters, Skenesborough, July 11, 1777.

THE mere compliment of fervice I have given to the troops in orders, and in the relation defigned for the Gazette, is not doing them fufficient juffice. It is a duty in me further, through you, and I know I shall impose a pleasing task on you, to assure the King that their behaviour is as uniformly good in the camp as in action.

After what I have publicly mentioned of Frafer I am fure I need not prefs you in his favour. I cannot but feel confident in the hope that his Majefty's grace will find its way through all obftacles to prevent fo difcouraging a circumftance as the return of this gallant officer to the mere duty of lieutenant colonel, at the head of one battalion, after having given afcendancy to the King's troops, and done honour to his profeffion, by the most fpirited actions in critical periods of two fucceflive campaigns.

You will obferve, Sir, both in the public letter and in the order of battle, which Captain Gardner will put into your hands, that Major General Phillips is occasionally employed feparately from the ftrict line of his department. This does not proceed from inattention to the explanation of his Majefty's pleasure two years ago; but from abfolute neceffity. The ftaff being composed without any British major general, Brigadier Frafer being posted where he is of infinite use, at the head of the advanced corps, the fervice would fuffer in the most material degree if the talents of General Phillips were not fuffered to extend beyond the limits of the artillery, and I hold myself fully jultified in continuing the great use of his affistance under this extension, by what I understand to be the fignification of the King's pleasure to Sir Guy Carleton, viz. That this measure must not be made a precedent, but not forbidding it during the prefent exigency.

I flatter myfelf the King will be fatisfied with the diligence ufed in taking the field, as well as with the fubfequent operations; if not, my dilappointment can only proceed from my own deficiency in flating the embarrafinents I found, notwithflanding previous preparations and cordial affittances. Remote fituations of the troops, currents, winds, roads, want of materials for caulking the veffels, inactivity and defertion of the Canadian corvées, were all against me. A great difficulty lay in providing horfes and carriages for the bare transport of provisions and tents, when we should arrive at Fort George, or any other place where the army should have no refource of water carriage. I found an active, and I think a reasonable contractor, who supplied this necessity at a much cheaper rate than it could have been done any other way.

I in-

I inclofe a copy of the contract to the treafury, to which I refer you. You will obferve that I have limited the number to the mere indifpenfible purposes of provisions and tents, trusting to the country for the further affittance of officers baggage and the other attirail of an army. Experience already shews me that I judged right in not trusting to the country for more; for had this precaution been omitted, I should be bound fast to the spot where I am, or obliged to return by water to Ticonderoga.

I avow also to you my advice to General Carleton to grant commissions to two provincial battalions, to be raifed from Albany and Charlotte County, by a Mr. Jeffup and a Mr. Peters, upon condition that the commissions should not take place uilt two thirds of the corps should be effective, provincial corps, acting zealously in the King's cause, must have great impression upon public opinion, and will, besides, in fact he of singular use to the ease and prefervation of the regular troops.

Upon this principle, therefore, I have not hefitated further to receive and to pay fuch loyalifts as have come in with their arms fince the fuccefs of Ticonderoga, and with to be employed. Though I have not power to grant committions, I polt the officers, and form them into companies till the measure can be decided by those who have more authority.

I hope all these articles of expence will meet with the fupport of your opinion; and have only to add, that as no job shall be done myself, so will I use all efforts to prevent fuch being done by others.

I am indifpenfibly obliged to wait fome time on this polition, to clear roads and make bridges, which is great labour in this country, and to bring up a flock of provision, and also to give time to the gun-boats, bateaux, and provision verifels to be put into Lake George to fcour that lake, and fecure the future route of the magazines. I propole to pollefs Fort Edward at the fame time that the force is ready to move down the lake, by which means, if the enemy do not evacuate Fort George, the garrifon mult inevitably be caught. In the mean while I have ordered Reidelet to make roads, reconnoitre the country, and make all other pollible feints of a march to the Connecticut, and by fome other measures I hope to give alarms that way.

As you will have with you perfons perfectly acquainted with the abilities of the country, it may perhaps be advifeable to tax the feveral districts with the portions of the feveral articles, and limit the hours for their delivery; and should you find it necesceffary to move before such delivery can be made, hostages of the most respectable people should be taken, to secure their following you the ensuing day. All possible means are to be used to prevent plundering.

As it is probable that Captain Sherwood, who is already detached to the fouthward, and will join you at Arlington, will drive in a confiderable quantity of cattle and horfes to you, you will therefore fend in this cattle to the army, with a proper detachment from Peters's corps, to cover them, in order to difencumber yourfelf; but you must always keep the regiments of dragoons compact.

SIR,

Batten Kill, 12th August, 1777.

I HAD the honour of acquainting your Excellency, by a man fent yefterday evening by Colonel Skeene to head-quarters, of the feveral corps under my command being encamped at Saratoga, as well as of my intention to proceed the next morning at five o'clock; the corps moved at that time, and marched a mile, when I received a letter from Brigadier General Frafer, fignifying your Excellency's order to poft the corps advantageoufly on Batten Kill, till I fhould receive frefh inftructions from your Excellency; the corps is now encamped at that place, and wait your Excellency's orders. I will not trouble you, Sir, with the various reports which fpread, as they feem rather to be founded on the different interefts and feelings of the people who occafion them.

I have the honour to be, moft refpectfully, Your Excellency's moft obedient and humble fervant, F. BAUME.

The reinforcement of fifty chaffeurs, which your Excellency was pleafed to order, joined me laft night at eleven o'clock.

General Burgoyne.

SIR,

Cambridge, 13th August, 1777.

IN confequence of your Excellency's orders I moved this morning at four o'clock, with the corps under my command; and after a march of fixteen miles arrived at Cambridge at four in the evening. On the road 1 received intelligence of forty or fifty of the rebels being left to guard fome cattle. I immediately ordered thirty of the provincials and fifty favages to quicken their march, in hopes to furprize them. They took five prifoners in arms, who declared themfelves to be in the fervice of the Congress; yet the enemy received advice of our approach, and abandoned the house they were posted in. The provincials and favages continued their march about a mile, when they fell in with a party of fifteen men, who fired upon our people, and immediately took to the woods with the greatest precipitation. The fire was quick on our fide, but I cannot learn if the enemy fuftained any lofs. A private of Captain Sherwood's company was the only one who was flightly wounded in the thigh. From the many people who came from Bennington they agree that the number of the enemy amounted to 1800. I will be particularly careful, on my approach at that place, to be fully informed of their itrength and fituation, and take the precautions necessary to fulfil both the orders and inftructions of your Excellency.

I cannot afcertain the number of cattle, carts, and waggons taken here, as they have not been as yet collected. A few horfes have been alfo brought in, but am forry to acquaint your Excellency that the favages either deftroy or drive away what is not paid for with ready money. If your Excellency would allow me to purchafe the horfes from the favages, ftipulating the price, I think they might be procured cheap, otherwife they ruin all they meet with, their officers and interpreters not having it in their power to controul them. Your Excellency may depend on hearing how I proceed at Bennington, and of my fuccess there : praying my respectful compliments to General Reidesel,

I am, moft refpectfully, Sir, Your moft obedient and humble fervant,

F. BAUME.

P. S. The names of the men taken in arms are as follows. George Duncan, John Bell, David Slarrow, Matt. Bell. Samuel Bell, Hugh More, a noted rebel furrendered himfelf yesterday evening. The express left Cambridge at 4 o'clock on the morning of the 14th of August.

SIR,

Sancoick, 14th August, 1777, 9 o'clock.

I have the honour to inform your excellency, that I arrived here at eight in the morning, having had intelligence of a party of the enemy being in poffeffion of a mill, which they abandoned at our approach, but in their ufual way fired from the bufhes, and took their road to Bennington; a favage was flightly wounded; they broke down the bridge which has retarded our march above an hour, they left in the mill about feventy-eight barrels of very fine flour, 1000 bufhels of wheat, 20 barrels of falt, and about 10001. worth pearl and pot afh. I have ordered thirty provincials and an officer to guard the provision and the pafs of the bridge. By five prifoners taken here, they agree that 1500 to 1800 men are in Bennington, but are fuppofed to leave it on our approach; I will proceed to far to-day as to fall on the the enemy to-morrow early, and make fuch difposition as I think neceffary from the intelligence I may receive. People are flocking in hourly, but want to be armed; the favages cannot be controuled, they ruin and take every thing they pleafe.

I am,

Your excellency's most obedient, humble fervant,

F. BAUME!

Beg your excellency to pardon the hurry of this letter, it is wrote on the head of a barrel.

General Burgoyne.

Instructions to Colonel Skeene, upon the expedition to Bennington.

SIR,

I requeft the favour of you to proceed with Lieutenant Colonel Baume, upon an expedition of which he has the command, and which will march this evening, or to-morrow morning.

The objects of his orders are to try the affections of the country; to difconcert the councils of the enemy; to mount the regiment of Reidefel dragoons; to compleat Lieutenant Colonel Peters's corps, and to procure a large fupply of horfes for the ufe of the troops, together with cattle and carriages.

Some hours before the corps marches for Arlington, Colonel Peters with all his men are to fet forward for Bennington, and afterwards are to join at Arlington.

Receipts are ordered to be given for all horfes and cattle taken from the country.

Lieutenant Colonel Baume is directed to communicate to you the reft of his inftructions, and to confult with you upon all matters of intelligence, negotiation with the inhabitants, roads, and other means depending upon a knowledge of the country for carrying his influctions into execution.

I need not recommend to you to continue the requifites of the fervice with every principle of humanity in the mode of obtaining them; and it may be proper to inform the country that the means to prevent their cattle and horfes being taken for the future, will be to refift the enemy when they fhall prefume to force them, and drive them voluntarily to my camp.

Extract of a Letter from Lieutenant General Burgoyne, to Sir Guy Carleton, dated Head-Quarters, at Skenesborough House, 11th July, 1777.

I REQUEST your Excellency to take into confideration the expediency of fupplying from Canada, a garrifon for Ticonderoga.

My communication will widen fo much as I proceed, the drain upon the army for pofts will be fo confiderable, not to fpeak of detachments and fafe-guards to protect and to awe the country, that if that first diminution is not replaced, my effective ftrength may become inadequate to the fervices intended. My prefers intelligence is that Putnam is collecting an army to oppofe me at Saratoga. Fort Edward is alfo talked of to fultain a fiege.

Your excellency will, I am fure, agree with me that Ticonderoga, or fome other fortified polt on the South part of Lake Champlain, ought to be confidered on the frontiers of the province of Canada. I am aware of the difficulties that arife from the manner in which the Secretary of State's orders are penned; but I fubmit to your Excellency, whether, under the principle laid down in the beginning of the order, and afterwards repeated, that 3000 men were held fufficient for the defence of that province, you would not be juftified in fparing for the purpose of this garrifon, the overplus of the 3000 that may remain after compleating my army.

And notwithstanding the corps for the Canada fervice are precisely named by the Secretary of State, I would further fubmit whether, upon my prefing requisition, the garrifon might not justifiably be furnished by detachment, even though there was no overplus, under the following words of the order; after baviug fecured to bim, (Lieutenant General Burgoyne) every affiftance which it is in your power to afford and procure. Your Excellency's zeal for the fervice and favour towards me, will be better interpreters for the latitude I propose, than any thing I can further fuggeft; my prefent purpose, Sir, is to get a fufficient number of gun-boats upon the Lake George to fcour that lake as expeditionfly as possible, to fupport them with a proper force to attack Fort George on that fide, while with the main of the army as foon as refreshed and fupplied, I attack Fort Edward from hence, and therebycut off the communication from Albany to Fort George, and consequently prevent the fuccour or retreat of that garrifon.

Extrast of a Letter from Lieutenant General Burgoyne, to Sir Guy Carleton, Head-Quarters, near Fort Anne, July 29th 1777.

THE conftruction your excellency puts upon the orders of the Secretary of State, is too full and decifive for me to prefume to trouble you further upon the fubject of a garrifon for Ticonderoga from Canada, I muft do as well as I can, but I am fure your Excellency, as a foldier, will think my fituation a little difficult. A breach into my communication muft either ruin my army entirely, or oblige me to return in force to reflore, which might be the lofs of the campaign. To prevent a breach, Ticonderoga and Fort George muft be in very reflectable ftrength, and I muft befides have pofts at Fort Edward and other carrying-places. Thefe drains added to common accidents and loffes of fervice, will neceffarily render me very inferior in point point of numbers to the enemy, whom I must expect always to find strongly posted. I ask pardon for dwelling fo much upon this subject, and have only to add my request to your Excellency to forward the additional companies as expeditiously as may be.

Copy of Lieutenant-General Burgoyne's Letter to Colonel Baume.

Near Saratoga, August 14, 1777. Seven at Night.

SIR,

THE accounts you have fent me are very fatisfactory, and I have no doubt of every part of your proceeding continuing to be the fame.

I beg the favour of you to report whether the road you have paffed is practicable, and if to, if it is convenient for a confiderable corps with cannon.

Should you find the enemy too ftrongly posted at Bennington, and maintaining fuch a countenance as may make an attack imprudent, I wish you to take a post where you can maintain yourself till you receive an answer from me, and I will either support you in force, or withdraw you.

You will pleafe to fend off to my camp, as foon as you can, waggons, and draft cattle, and likewife fuch other cattle as are not neceffary for your fublithence.

Let the waggons and carts bring off all the flour and wheat they can that you do not retain for the fame purpofe. This transport must be under the charge of a commission officer.

I will write you at full to-morrow in regard to getting horses out of the hands of the favages.

In the mean time any you can collect from them, fit to mount the regiments, at a low price, shall be allowed.

I am with great efteem, Sir,

Your most obedient humble fervant.

Colonel St. Leger's Account of Occurrences at Fort Stanwix.

A MINUTE detail of every operation fince my leaving La Chine, with the detachment entrufted to my care, your Excellency will permit me to referve to a time of lefs hurry and mortification than the prefent, while I enter into the interefting fcene before Fort Stanwix, which I invefted the 3d of August, having previously pushed forward Lieutenant Bird of the King's reignent, with thirty of the King's troops and two hundred Indians, under the direction of Captains Hare and Wilson, and the chiefs Joseph and Bull, to feize fast hold of the lower landing-place, and thereby cut off the enemy's communication with the lower country.—This was done with great address by the lieutenant, though not attended with the effect I had promised myself, occasioned by the flackness of the Messages. The brigade of provision and ammunition boats I had intelligence of, being arrived and difembarked before this party had taken post.

On the 5th, in the evening, intelligence arrived by my difcovering parties on the Mohawk River, that a reinforcement of eight hundred militia, conducted by General Herkimer, were on their march to relieve the garrifon, and were actually at that inthant at Orifka, an Indian fet:lement, twelve miles from the fort. The garrifon being apprifed of their march by four men, who were feen enter the fort in the morping, through what was thought an impenetrable fwamp, 1 did not think it prudent to wait for them, and thereby fubject myfelf to be attacked by a fally from the garrifon in the rear, while the reinforcement employed me in front. I therefore determined to attack them on the march, either openly or covertly, as circumflances flould offer. At this time, I had not two hundred and fifty of the King's troops in camp; the various and extensive operations I was under an absolute necessity of entering into, having employed the reft; and therefore, could not fend above eighty white men, rangers and troops included, with the whole corps of Indians. Sir John Johnson put himself at the head of this party, and began his march that evening at five o'clock, and met the rebel corps at the fame hour the next morning. The impetuofity of the Indians is not to be deferibed on the fight of the enemy (forgetting the judicious difpolition formed by Sir John, and agreed to by themfelves, which was, to fuffer the attack to begin with the troops in front, while they should be on both flanks and rear) they rufhed in, hatchet in hand, and thereby gave the enemy's rear an opportunity to elcape. In relation to the victory, it was equally complete, as if the whole had fallen; nay more to, as the two hundred who efcaped only ferved to fpread the panic wider; but it was not fo with the Indians; their lofs was great (I muft be underflood Indian computation, being only about thirty killed, and the like number wounded, and in that number fome of their favourite chiefs and confidential warriors were flain.) On the enemy's fide, almost all their principal leaders were flain. General Herkimer has fince died of his wounds. It is proper to mention, that the four men detached with intelligence of the march of the reinforcement, fet out the evening before the action, and confequently the enemy could have no account of the defeat, and were in possellion only, of the time appointed for their arrival; at which, as I sufpected, they made a fally with two hundred and fifty men towards Lieutenant Bird's post, to facilitate the entrance of the relieving corps, or bring on a general engagement, with every advantage they could wifh.

Captain Hoyes was immediately detached to cut in upon their rear, while they engaged the lieutenant. Immediately upon the departure of Captain Hoyes, having learned that Lieutenant Bird, mifled by the information of a cowardly Indian, that Sir John was prefied, had quitted his poft to march to his affiftance, I marched the the detachment of the King's regiment, in fupport of Captain Hoyes, by a road in fight of the garrifon, which, with executive fire from his party, immediately drove the enemy into the fort, without any further advantage than frightening fome fquaws and pilfering the packs of the warriors which they left behind them. After this affair was over, orders were immediately given to compleat a two-gun battery, and mortar beds, with three flrong redoubts in their rear, to enable me, in cafe of another attempt, to relieve the garrifon by their regimented troops, to march out a larger body of the King's troops.

Captain Lernoult was fent with 110 men to the lower landing place, where he eflablished himfelf with great judgment and strength, having an enclosed battery of a three-pounder opposed to any fally from the fort, and another to the side of the country, where a relief must approach; and the body of his camp deeply entrenched and abbatised.

When by the unabating labour of officers and men (the fmallnefs of our numbers never admitting of a relief, or above three hours ceffation for fleep or cooking) the batteries and redoubts were finished, and new checks and axle-trees made for the fix-pounders, those that were fent being reported rotten and unferviceable.

It was found that our cannon had not the leaft effect upon the fol-work of the fort, and that our royals had only the power of teizing, as a fix-inch plank was a fufficient fecurity for their powder magazine, as we learnt from the deferters. At this time Lieutenant Glenie of the artillery, whom I had appointed to act as affiftant engineer, proposed a conversion of the royals (if I may use the expression) into howitzers. The ingenuity and feafability of this measure ftriking me very strongly, the business was set about immediately, and foon executed, when it was found that nothing prevented their operating with the defired effect but the distance, their chambers being too small to hold a sufficiency of powder. There was nothing now to be done but to approach the town by fap to fuch a distance that the rampart might be brought within their portice, at the fame time all materials were. preparing to run a mine under their most formidable bastion.

In the midft of these operations intelligence was brought in by our scout., of a fecond corps of 1000 men being on their march. The fame zeal no longer animated the Indians; they complained of our thinnefs of troops and their former loffes. I immediately called a council of the chiefs'; encouraged them as much as I could; promifed to lead them on myfelf, and bring into the field 300 of the beft troops. They liftened to this, and promifed to follow me, and agreed that I should reconnoitre the ground propereft for the field of battle the next morning, accompanied by fome of their chief warriors, to fettle the plan of operations. When upon the ground appointed for the field of battle, fcouts came in with the account of the first number fivelled to 2000; immediately after a third, that General Burgoyne's army was cut to pieces, and that Arnold was advancing, by rapid and forced marches, with 3000 men. It was at this moment I began to fufpect cowardice in fome, and treaton in others; however I returned to camp, not without hopes, with the affiftance of my gallant coadjutor, Sir John Johnfon, and the influence of the fuperintending colonels, Claus and Butler, of inducing them to meet the enemy. A council, according to their cuftom, was called, to know their refolutions, before the breaking up of which I learned that 200 were already decamped. In about an hour they

I had no other party to take, and a hard party it was to troops who could do nothing without them, to yield to their refolves; and therefore proposed to retire at night, fending on before my fick, wounded, artillery, &c. down the Wood Creek, covering them by our line of march.

This did not fall in with their views, which were no lefs than treacheroufly committing ravage upon their friends, as they had loft the opportunity of doing it upon their enemies. To effect this they artfully caufed meffengers to come in, one after the other, with accounts of the nearer approaches of the rebels; one and the laft affirmed that they were within two miles of Captain Lernoult's poft. Not giving entire credit to this, and keeping to my refolution of retiring by night, they grew furious and abandoned; feized upon the officers' liquor and cloaths, in fpite of the efforts of their fervants; and became more formidable than the enemy we had to expect. I now thought it time to call in Captain Lernouit's poft, retiring with the troops in camp to the ruined fort called William, in the front of the garrifon, not only to wait the eneny, if they thought proper to fally, but to proteet the boats from the fury of the favages, having fent forward Captain Hoyes, with his detachment, with one piece of cannon, to the place where Bull Fort flood, to receive the troops who waited the arrival of Captain Lernoult. Most of the boats were efforted that night beyond Canada Creek, where no danger was to be apprehended from the enemy. The creek at this place bending from the road, has a deep cedar fwamp between. Every attention was now turned to the mouth of the creek, which the enemy might have poffeffed themfelves of by a rapid march by the Oneyda Caffle. At this place the whole of the little army arrived by twelve o'clock at night, and took post in such a manner as to have no fears of any thing the enemy could do. Here we remained till three o'clock next morning, when the boats which could come up the Creek arrived, or rather that the rafeally part of all nations of the Indians would fuffer to come up; and proceeded across Lake Onevda to the ruined fort of Brereton, where I learnt that fome boats were ftill labouring down the creek, after being lightened of the best part of their freight by the Meffafagoes. Captain Lernoult proposed, with a boat full of armed men, to reparts the lake that night, to relieve them from their labour, and fupply them with rovifion. This transaction does as much honour to the humanity as to the gallantry of this valuable officer.

On my arrival at the Onondago Falls I received an answer to my letter from your Excellency, which shewed, in the clearest light, the scenes of treachery that had been practifed upon me. The messenger had heard indeed on his way that they were collecting the same kind of rabble as before, but that there was not an enemy within forty miles of Fort Stanwix.

Soon after my arrival here I was joined by Captain Lernoult, with the men and boats he had been in fearch of. I me in immediately to fend off, for the ufe of the upper garrifon, all the overplus provision I shall have, after keeping a fufficiency to carry my detachment down, which I me in to do with every expedition in my power the moment this bufinefs is effected, for which purpofe I have ordered here the fnow. The floop is already gone from this with her full lading.

Ilis Excellency General Burgoyne.

Copy of a Letter from Lieutenant-General Burgoyne to Lord George Germain, dated No. XIV. at Albany, 20th October, 1777.

My Lord,

NO poffibility of communication with your Lordship having existed fince the beginning of September, at which time my last dispatch was fent away, I have to report to your Lordship the proceedings of the army under my command from that period : a feries of hard toil, incessant effort, stubborn action ; till disabled in the collateral branches of the army by the total defection of the Indians ; the defertion or timidity of the Canadians and Provincials, fome individuals excepted ; disappointed in the last hope of any timely co-operation from other armies ; the regular troops reduced by loss from the best part to 3500 fighting men, not 2000 of which were British ; only three days provise is upon thort allowance in store ; invested by an army of :6,000 men, and no apparent means of retreat remaining, I called into council all the generals, field officers, and captains commanding corps, and by their unanimous concurrence and advice, I was induced to open a treaty with Major General Gates.

Your Lordship will see, by the papers transmitted herewith, the difagreeable profpect which attended the first overtures; and when the terms concluded are compared, I trust that the spirit of the councils I have mentioned, which under such circumstances dictated instead of submitting, will not be refused a share of credit.

Before I enter upon the detail of these events, I think it a duty of justice, my Lord, to take upon myself the measure of having passed the Hudson's River, in order to force a passage to Albany. I did not think myself authorised to call any men into council, when the peremptory tenor of my orders and the season of the year admitted no alternative.

Provisions for about thirty days having been brought forward, the other neceffary ftores prepared, and the bridge of boats completed, the army passed the Hudson's River on the 13th and 14th of September, and incamped on the heights, and in the plain of Saratoga, the enemy being then in the neighbourhood of Stillwater.

The whole army made a movement forward, and incamped in a good polition in a 15th; place called Dovacote.

It being found that there were feveral bridges to repair, that work was begun under 16th. cover of ftrong detachments, and the fame opportunity was taken to reconnoitre the country.

The army renewed their march, repaired other bridges, and encamped upon ad- 17th. vantageous ground about four miles from the enemy.

The enemy appeared in confiderable force to obstruct the further repair of bridges, 18th. and with a view, as it was conceived, to draw on an action where artillery could not

The pathques of a great rivine, and other roads towards the enemy, having been recommuned, the army advaaced in the tollowing order.

Bugadier General Frafer's corps, fuffained by Lacutenant Colonel Breyman's corps, inside a circuit, in order to patythe rayine commodioutly, without quitting the heights, and atterwards to cover the much of the line to the tight. Thefe corps moved in three columns, and had the hubbans, Canadians, and Provincials upon their froms and danks. The Bunth line led by me in perton pathed the rayine in a direct line fourb, and threed in order of battle as full as they gained the fuminit, where they waited to give time to Frater's corps to make the circuit, and to cuable the left wing and attillery, which, under the commands of Major General Phillips, and Major General Phillips, hep the great road and meadows near the river in two colutions, and had bindges to repair, to be equally ready to proceed. The 47th regiment guarded the bateaux.

The figual guns, which had been previouily fettled to give notice of all the columna being ready to advance, having been fired between one and two o'clock, the march continued. The feouts and flankers of the column of the Britith line were foon fired upon from finall parties but with no effect. After about an hour's march, the propues, which made the advanced guard of that column, were attacked in force, and obliged to give ground, but they foon rallied and were fuffained.

On the first opening of the wood I formed the troops. A few cannon that diflodged the enemy at a house from whence the piequets had been attacked, and Brigadier General Frater's corps had arrived with fuch precition in point of time, as to be found upon a very advantageous height on the right of the Britifh.

In the mean time, the energy, not acquiainted, with the combination of the march, had moved in great force out of their intrenchments, with a view of turning the line upon the right, and being checked by the difficution of Brigadier General Frater, countermatched, in order to direct their great effort to the left of the Britith.

From the nature of the country, movements of this fort, however near, may be effected without a possibility of their being differenced.

About three o'clock the action began by a very vigorous attack on the Britith line, and continued with great obtlinacy till after funitt. The energy beag, continually tupplied with fresh treops, the threis lay upon the 20th, 21fl, and 62d regargints, molt parts of which were engaged near four hours without intermiftion; the 9th find been ordered early in the day to form in referve.

The grenadiers and 24th regiment were fome part of the time brought (10) action, as were part of the light infantry, and all thefe corps charged with their utilat (1), it,

The rithemen, and other parts of Breyman's corps, were also of fervice; but it was not thought advitable to evacuate the heights where Brigadier General Frater was posted otherwise than partially and occationally.

Mejor General Phillips upon first hearing the firing found his way through a difficult part of the wood to the feene of action, and brought up with hum Major Williams and four pieces of artillery, and from that moment I flood indebted to that gallant and judicious fecond, for inceffant and most material fervices, particularly for reftoring the action is a point which was critically prefled by a great fuperiority of fire, and to which he led up the 20th regiment at the utmost perioral hazard.

Major General Riedefel exerted himfelf to bring up a part of the left wing, and time to charge the enemy with regularity and bravery. arrive.

Juft a. a. light cloted, the enemy gave ground on all fides, and left us completely matters of the field of battle, with the lofs of about five hundred men on their fide, and, as fuppofed, thrice that number wounded.

The darkness preventing a purfuit, the prifoners were lew.

The behaviour of the officers and men in general was exemplary. Brigadicr-General Frafer took his pofition in the beginning of the day with great judgment, and fullained the action with conflant prefence of mind and vigour. Brigadier-General Hamilton was the whole time engaged and acquitted himfelf with great honour, activity and good conduct.

The artillery in general was diffinguifhed, and the brigade under Captain Jones, who was killed in the action, was confpicuoufly fo.

The army lay upon their arms the night of the 19th, and the next day took a polition nearly within cannon flort of the eacmy, fortifying their right, and extending their left to the brow of the heights, fo as to cover the meadows through which the great river rurs, and where their bateaux and holpitals were placed. The 47th regiment, the regiment of Heffe Hanau, and a corps of Provincials incamped in the meadows as a further fecurity.

It was foon found that no fruits, honour excepted, were attained by the preceding victory, the enemy working with redoubled ardor to firengthen their left : their right was already unattackable.

On our fide it became expedient to creft ftrong redoubts for the protection of the magazines and hofpital, not only againfl a fudden attack, but also for their fecurity in cafe of a march to turn the enemy's flank.

A meffenger arrived from Sir Harry Clinton with a letter in cypher, informing September: me of his intention to attack Fort Montgomery in about ten days from the date 21. of his letter, which was the 12th inflant. This was the only meffenger of many that I apprehend were difpatched by Sir William Howe, and him that had reached my camp fince the beginning of Augufl. He was fent back the fame night to mform Sir Harry of my fituation, and of the neceffity of a diversion to oblige General Gates to detach from his army, and my intention to wait favourable events in that polition, if pollible, to the 12th of October.

In the courfe of the two following days, two officers in difguife, and other confidential perfons, were diffatched by different routes with verbal meffages to the fame effect, and I continued fortifying my camp and watching the enemy, whole numbers increafed every day.

I thought it advitable on the 3d of October to diminifh the foldiers' ration in order to lengthen out the provisions, to which measure the army submitted with the utmost chearfulnefs. The difficulties of a retreat to Canada were clearly forefeen, as was the dilemma, fhould the retreat be effected, of leaving at liberty fuch an army as General Gates's to operate against Sir William Howe.

This confideration operated forcibly to determine me to abide events as long as poflible, and I reasoned thus. The expedition I commanded was evidently meant at first to be hazarded. Circumstances might require it should be devoted. A critical junction of Mr. Gates's force with Mr. Washington might possibly decide the fate of the war; the failure of my junction with Sir Harry Clinton, or the loss of my retreat to Canada could only be a partial misfortune.

In this fituation things continued till the feventh, when no intelligence having been received of the expected co-operation, and four or five days for our limited flay in the camp only remained, it was judged advifable to make a movement to the enemy's left, not only to different whether there were any possible means of forcing a paffage should it be necessary to advance, or of diffedging him for the convenience of a retreat, but also to cover a forage of the army which was in the greatest diffress on account of the fearcity.

A detachment of fifteen hundred regular troops with two twelve pounders, two howitzers, and fix fix-pounders, were ordered to move, and were commanded by myfelf, having with me Major-General Phillips, Major-General Reidefel, and Brigadier-General Frafer.

The guard of the camp upon the heights was left to Brigadier-General Hamilton and Specht, the redoubts and the plain to Brigadier General Gall; and as the force of the enemy immediately in their front confifted of more than double their numbers, it was not possible to augment the corps that marched, beyond the numbers above flated.

I formed the troops within three-quarters of a mile of the enemy's left, and Caprain Frafer's rangers, with Indians and Provincials, had orders to go by fecret paths in the woods to gain the enemy's rear, and by flewing themfelves there to keep them in a check.

The further operations intended, were prevented by a very fudden and rapid attack of the enemy on our left, where the British grenadiers were posted to support the left wing of the line. Major Acland at the head of them fuftained the attack with great refolution; but the enemy's great numbers enabling them in a few minutes to extend the attack along the front of the Germans, which were immediately on the right of the grenadiers, no part of that body could be removed to make a fecond line to the flank, where the ftrefs of the fire lay. The right was at this time engaged, but it was foon obferved that the enemy were marching a large corps round their flank to endeavour cutting off their retreat. The light infantry and part of the 24th regiment which were at that post were therefore ordered to form a fecond line, and to fecure the return of the troops into camp. While this movement was proceeding the enemy pushed a fresh and strong reinforcement to renew the action upon the left, which, overpowered by a great fuperiority, gave way, and the light infantry and 24th regiment were obliged to make a quick movement to fave that point from being entirely carried, in doing which, Brigadier-General Frafer was mortally wounded.

The danger to which the lines were exposed becoming at this moment of the most ferious nature, orders were given to Major-General Phillips and Reidefel to cover the retreat, while fuch theops as were most ready for the purpose, returned for the defence of them. The troops retreated hard prefied, but in good order; they were obliged to leave fix pieces of cannon, all the horses having been killed, and most of the artillery-men, who had behaved as usual with the utmost bravery under the command of Major Williams, being either killed or wounded.

The troops had fcarcely entered the camp when it was ftormed with great fury, the enemy rulning to the lines under a fevere fire of grape-flot and finall arms. 4

The post of the light infantry under Lord Balcarras affisted by fome of the line, which threw themielves by order into the intrenchments, was defended with great fpirit, and the enemy led on by General Arnold was finally repulfed, and the General wounded; but unhappily the intrenchments of the German referve, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Breymann, who was killed, were carried, and although ordered to be recovered, they never were fo, and the enemy by that misfortune gained an opening on our right and rear. The night put an end to the action.

Under the difadvantages thus apparent in our fituation, the army was ordered to quit the prefent polition during the night and take post upon the heights above the heipital.

Thus by an entire change of front, to reduce the enemy to form a new difpolition. This movement was effected in great order and without lofs, though all the artillery and camp were removed at the fame time. The army continued offering battle to the enemy in their new polition the whole day of the 8th.

Intelligence was now received that the enemy were marching to turn the right, and no means could prevent that meafure but retiring towards Saratoga. The army began to move at nine o'clock at night, Major-General Reidefel commanding the van-guard, and Major-General Phillips the rear.

This retreat, though within mulquet-fhot of the enemy, and encumbered with all the baggage of the army, was made without lofs, but a very heavy rain and the difficulties of guarding the bateaux which contained all the provisions, occafioned delays which prevented the army reaching Saratoga till the night of the 9th, and the artillery could not pass the fords of the Fish-kill till the morning of the 10th.

At our arrival near Saratoga, a corps of the enemy, between five and fix hundred, were difcovered throwing up intrenchments on the heights, but retired over a ford of the Hudson's River at our approach, and joined a body posted to oppose our passage there.

It was judged proper to fend a detachment of artificers under a ftrong efcort to repair the bridges and open a road to Fort-Edward on the weft fide of the river. The 47th regiment, Captain Frafer's markfinen, and Mackoy's Provincials, were ordered for that fervice, but the enemy appearing on the heights of the Fifh-kill in great force, and making a difpolition to poss and give us battle : the 47th regiment and Frafer's markfinen were recalled ; the Provincials left to cover the workmen at the firft bridge run away upon a very flight attack of a fmall party of the enemy, and left the artificers to efcape as they could, without a poffibility of their performing any work.

During these different movements the bateaux with provisions were frequently fired upon from the opposite fide of the river, and fome of them were lost, and feveral men were killed and wounded in those which remained.

The attacks upon the bateaux were continued, feveral were taken and retaken, October but their fituation being much nearer to the main force of the enemy than to ours, it 11. was found impossible to fecure the provisions any otherwise than by landing them and carrying them upon the hill: this was effected under fire, and with great difficulty.

The poffible means of further retreat were now confidered in councils of war, composed of the general officers, minutes of which will be transmitted to your Lordship.

The bulk of the enemy's army was hourly joined by new corps of militia and volunteers, and their numbers together amounted to upwards of 16,000 men. Their polition, which extended three parts in four of a circle round us, was from the nature of the ground unattackable in all parts.

In this fituation the army took the beft position possible and fortified, waiting till the 13th at night, in the anxious hope of fuccours from our friends, or the next defirable expectation, an attack from our enemy.

During this time the men lay continually upon their arms, and were cannonaded in every part, even rifle-flot and grape flot came into all parts of the line, though without any confiderable effect.

At this period an exact account of the provisions was taken, and the circumflances flated in the opening of this letter became complete.

The council of war was extended to all the field officers and captains commanding corps of the army, and the event enfued which I am fure was inevitable, and which, I truft, in that fituation was honourable, but which it would be fuperfluous and melancholy to repeat.

After the execution of the treaty, General Gates drew together the force that had furrounded my polition, and I had the confolation to have as many witheffes as I have men under my command, of its amounting to the numbers mentioned above.

During the events ftated above, an attempt was made againft Ticonderoga by an army affembled under Major General Lincoln, who found means to march with a confiderable corps from Huberton undifcovered, while another column of his force paffed the mountains between Skenefborough and Lake George, and on the morning of the 18th of September a fudden and general attack was made upon the carrying place at Lake George, Sugar Hill, Ticonderoga, and Mount Independence. The fea officers commanding the armed floop flationed to defend the carrying place, as alfo fome of the officers commanding at the polts of Sugar Hill and at the Portage were furprifed, and a confiderable part of four companies of the 53d regiment were made prifoners; a block-houfe, commanded by Lieutenant Lord of the 53d, was the only poft on that fide that had time to make ufe of their arms, and they made a brave defence till cannon taken from the furprifed vefiel was brought againft them.

After flating and lamenting fo fatal a want of vigilance, \overline{I} have to inform your Lordship of the fatisfactory events which followed.

The enemy having twice fummoned Brigadier General Powell, and received fuch anfwer as became a gallant officer entrufted with fo important a poil, and having tried during the courfe of four days feveral attacks, and being repulfed in all, retreated without having done any confiderable damage.

Brighdier General Powell, from whole report to me I extract this relation, gives great commendations to the regiment of Prince Frederick, and the other troops flationed tioned at Mount Independence. The Brigadier also mentions with great applause the behaviour of Captain Taylor of the 21th regiment, who was accidentally there on his route to the army from the holpital, and Lieutenant Beecroft of the 24th regiment, who with the artificers in arms defended an important battery.

On the 24th inftant, the enemy, enabled by the capture of the gun-boats and bateaux which they had made after the furprife of the floop, to embark upon Lake George, attacked Diamond Ifland in two divisions.

Captain Aubrey and two companies of the 47th regiment, had been pofted at that ifland from the time the army paffed the Hudfon's River, as a better fituation for the fecurity of the flores at the fouth end of Lake George than Fort George, which is on the continent, and not tenable againft artillery and numbers. The enemy were repulfed by Captain Aubrey with great lofs, and purfued by the gain boats under his command to the eaft flore, where two of their principal vefiels were reta¹, en, together with all the cannon. They had juft time to fet fire to the other bateaux, and retreated over the mountains.

I beg leave to refer your Lordship for further particulars to my aid-de-camp, Lord Petersham, and I humbly take occasion to recommend to his Majelly's notice that nobleman, as one endued with qualities to do important fervices to his country in every station to which his birth may lead. In this late campaign in particular, his behaviour has been such as to entitle him to the fullest applaule, and I am confident his merit will be thought a sufficient ground for preferment, though deprived of the eclar and fort of claim which generally attends the delivery of fortunate dispatches.

I have only to add, my Lord, a general report of the killed and wounded; I do not give it correct, the hurry of the time and the feparation of the corps having rendered it impoffible to make it fo. The Britifh officers have bled profulely and molt honourably; those who remain unwounded have been equally forward, and the general officers from the mode of fighting have been more exposed than in other fervices. Among the reft of this flation, I have had my escapes. It depends upon the fentence his Majefty the II pass upon my conduct; upon the judgment of my profession, and of the impartial and respectable parts of my country, whether I am to esteem them bleffings or misfortunes.

I have the honour to be,

(Signed.)

Copy of a Letter from Lieutenant-General Burgoyne to Lord George Germain, dated Second Albany, 20th October, 1777. No. XIV.

My Lord,

[Private, by Lord Peterfham.]

I HAVE little to add to my public letter refpecting the courfe of unfuccetsful events, therein detailed. I reft my confidence in the juffice of the King and his councils, to support the General they thought proper to appoint to as arduous an undettaking, and under as positive a direction, as perhaps a cabinet ever framed. It will, I am sure, be remembered, my Lord, that a preference of exertions was the only latitude given me, and that to force a junction with Sir William Howe, or at least a paffage to Albany, was the principle, the letter, and the spirit of my orders.

Indeed the appearances at the time I paffed the Hudfon's-River, though fubject to doubt in fome inflances, as I then wrote your Lordfhip, were upon a general view, fuch as I am perfuaded would have rendered inaction centurable, had my orders, inflead of being peremptory, been differentiationary. Promifes of the proteffing loyalifts were not then brought to the teft; the fpirit of the enemy, in combat againft regular Britifh troops, had only been tried at Ticonderago, at Huberton, at Skenefborough, and Fort Anne; in all which places it had failed; the total diffupointment of effectual cooperation, could not be foreigen or fuppofed; and fine I am, had I then made fuppofition that any thing like what has happened, might have happened, and remained cautioufly poffed, no exertion attempted, my conduct would have been held indefenfible by every clafs and diffinction of men in government, in the army, and in the public.

The expediency of advancing being admitted, the confequences have been honourable misfortunes. The Britifh have perfevered in a firenuous and bloody progrefs. Had the force been all Britifh, perhaps the perfeverance had been longer; but as it was, will it be faid, my Lord, that in the exhaulted fituation deferibed, and in the jaws of famine, and invefted by quadruple numbers, a treaty which faves the army to the ftate, for the next campaign, was not more than could have been expected ? I I call it faving the army, becaufe if fent home, the ftate is thereby enabled to fend forth the troops now defined for her internal defence; if exchanged, they become a force to Sir William Howe, as effectually, as if any other junction had been made.

I fhould now hold myfelf unjuftifiable if I did not confide to your Lordfhip, my opinion, upon a near infpection, of the rebel troops. The flanding corps which I have icen, are disciplined. I do not hazard the term, but apply it to the great fundamental points of military inftitution, fobriety, fubordination, regularity and courage. The militia are inferior in method and movement, but not a jot lefs ferviceable in woods. My conjectures were very different after the affair of Ticonderago, but I an convinced they were delufive; and it is a duty to the flate to confefs it.

The panic of the rebel troops is confined, and of fhort duration; the enthulialim is extensive and permanent.

It is a jultice to Major General Phillips, to inform your Lordfhip, that when the crifis of our fituation at Saratoga arrived, he very handfomely offered to hazard his perfon by making a circuit through the woods, and attempt to throw himfelf into Ticonderago, to defend that place, fhould it be the object of the enemy to endeavour the retaking it.

In regard to myfelf, I am funk in mind and body; but while I have a faculty of either, it fhall be exerted for the King's fervice. I fhall wait in the neighbourhood of Bofton, the orders of Sir William Howe.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Minutes of a Council of War, beld on the Heights of Saratoga, Oct. 12.

PRESENT.

Lieutenant General BURGOYNE, Major General REIDESEL,

Major General PHILIPS, Brigadier General HAMILTON.

THE Lieutenant General flates to the council the prefent fituation of affairs.

The enemy in force, according to the beft intelligence he can obtain, to the amount of upwards of 14,000 men, and a confiderable quantity of artillery, are on this fide the Fifh-kill, and threaten an attack. On the other fide the Hudfon's River, between this army and Fort Edward, is another army of the enemy, the numbers unknown but one corps, which there has been an opportunity of obferving, is reported to be about 1500 men. They have likewife cannon on the other fide the Hudfon's River, and they have a bridge below Saratoga church, by which the two armies can communicate.

The bateaux of the army have been deftroyed, and no means appear of making a bridge over the Hudfon's River, were it even practicable from the polition of the enemy.

The only means of retreat, therefore, are by the ford at Fort Edward, or taking the mountains in order to pass the river higher up by rafts, or by any other ford which is reported to be practicable with difficulty, or by keeping the mountains, to pass the head of Hudson's River, and continue to the westward of Lake George all the way to Ticonderoga; it is true, this last passage was never made but by Indians, or very fmall bodies of men.

In order to pais cannon or any wheel carriages from hence to Fort Edward, fome bridges muft be repaired under fire of the enemy from the opposite fide of the river, and the principal bridge will be a work of fourteen or fifteen hours; there is no good position for the army to take to fultain that work, and if there were, the time stated as necessfary, would give the enemy on the other fide the Hudson's River an opportunity to take poss on the strong ground above Fort Edward, or to dispute the ford while General Gates's army followed in the rear.

The intelligence from the lower part of Hudfon's River is founded upon the concurrent reports of prifoners and deferters, who fay it was the news in the enemy's camp, that Fort Montgomery was taken; and one man, a friend to government, who arrived yelterday, mentions fome particulars of the manner in which it was taken.

The provisions of the army may hold out to the 20th; there is neither rum nor foruce beer.

Having committed this flate of facts to the confideration of the council, the General requests their sentiments on the following propositions.

1ft. To wait in the prefent polition an attack from the enemy, or the chance of favourable events.

2d. To attack the enemy.

3d. To retreat repairing the bridges as the army moves for the artillery, in order to force the paffage of the ford.

4th. To retreat by night, leaving the artillery and the baggage; and fhould it be found impracticable to force the paffage with mufquetry, to attempt the upper ford, or the paffage round Lake George.

5th. In

In case the enemy, by extending to their left, leave their rear open, to march rapidly for Albany.

Upon the first proposition refolved, that the fituation would grow worfe by delay, that the provision now in flore not more than fufficient for the retreat, should impediments intervene, or a circuit of country become necessary; and as the enemy did not attack when the ground was un ortified, it is not probable they will do it now, as they have a better game to play.

The fecond unadvifable and defperate, there being no poffibility of reconnoitering the enemy's pofition, and his great fuperiority of numbers known.

The third impracticable.

The fifth thought worthy of confideration by the Lieutenant-General, Major-General Phillips, and Brigadier-General Hamilton; but the pofition of the enemy yet gives no opening for it.

Refolved, that the fourth proposition is the only refource, and that to effect it, the utmost feereey and filence is to be observed; and the troops are to be put in motion from the right in the still part of the night, without any change in the disposition.

N. B. It depended upon the delivery of fix days provision in due time, and upon the return of fcouts, who had been fent forward to examine by what route the army could probably move the first four miles undifcovered, whether the plan should take place on that day, or on the morrow.

The fcouts on their return reported, that the enemy's polition on the right was fuch, and they had fo many finall parties out, that it would be impoffible to move without our march being immediately difcovered.

Minutes and Proceed. gs of a Council of War, confifting of all the general Officers and Field Officers, and Captains commanding Corps, on the Heights of Saratoga, October 13.

THE Lieutenant-General having explained the fituation of affairs, as in the preceding council, with the additional intelligence, that the enemy was intrenched at the fords of Fort Edward, and likewife occupied the ftrong polition on the Pineplains between Fort George and Fort Edward, expressed his readiness to undertake at their head any enterprise of difficulty or hazard that flould appear to them within the compass of their flrength or fpirit. He added, that he had reason to believe a capitulation had been in the contemplation of some, perhaps of all, who knew the real fituation of things; that upon a circumstance of such consequence to national and personal honour, he thought it a duty to his country, and to himself, to extend his council beyond the usual limits; that the assembly prefent might justififiable in taking any step in so ferious a matter, without such a concurrence of fentiments as should make a treaty the act of the army, as well as that of the general.

The first question therefore he defired them to decide was, Whether an army of 3500 fighting men, and well provided with artillery, were justifiable, upon the principles of national dignity and military honour, in capitulating in any possible situation?

Refolved, nem. con. in the affirmative.

Queftion 2. Is the prefent fituation of that nature ?

Refolved, nem. con. That the prefent fituation justifies a capitulation upon honourable terms.

The Licutenant-General then drew up the meffage, marked No. 2, and laid it before the council. It was unanimoufly approved, and upon that foundation the treaty opened.

October 14. Major Kingfton having delivered the meffage marked No. 2. returned with the proposals marked No. 3, and the council of war being affembled again, the Lieutenant-General laid the proposals before them, when it was refolved unanimoufly to reject the 6th article, and not to admit of it in any extremity whatever.

The Lieutenant-General then laid before the council the answers to Major-General. Gates's propolities, as marked in the fame paper, together with his own preliminary propolals, which were unanimously approved of.

October 15. The council being allembled again, Major-General Gates's answers, to Lieutenant-General Burgoyne's proposals were laid before them, whereupon it was resolved, that they were fatisfactory, and a fufficient ground for proceeding to a definitive treaty.

No. 2. Major Kingston delivered the following Message to Major-General Gates, October 14.

AFTER having fought you twice, Lieutenant-General Burgoyne has waited fome days, in his prefent polition, determined to try a third conflict against any force you could bring to attack him.

He is apprifed of the fuperiority of your numbers, and the difpolition of your troops to impede his fupplies, and render his retreat a feene of carnage on bothfides. In this fituation he is impelled by humanity, and thinks himfelf juftifiable by eftablished principles and precedents of state, and of war, to spare the lives of brave men upon honourable terms. Should Major-General Gates be inclined to treat upon that idea, General Burgoyne would propose a cellation of arms during the time necessary to communicate the preliminary terms by which, in any extremity, he and his army mean to abide.

No. 3. Major-General Gates's Propofals; together with Lieutenant-General Burgoyne's Anfwers.

I. General Burgoyne's army being exceedingly reduced by repeated defeats, by defertion, ficknefs, &c. their provisions exhausted, their military horses, tents, and baggage, taken or destroyed, their retreat cut off, and their camp invested, they can only be allowed to furrender prisoners of war.

Anfwer. Lieutenant-General Burgoyne's army, however reduced, will never admit that their retreat is cut off, while they have arms in their hands.

II. The officers and foldiers may keep the baggage belonging to them. The generals of the United States never permit individuals to be pillaged.

Cc

Ш,

III. The troops under his Excellency General Burgoyne will be conducted by the most convenient route to New England, marching by easy marches, and sufficiently provided for by the way.

Anfwer. This article is answered by General Burgoyne's first proposal, which is here annexed.

IV. The officers will be admitted on parole; may wear their fide-arms, and will be treated with the liberality cuftomary in Europe, fo long as they, by proper behaviour, continue to deferve it; but those who are apprehended having broke their parole, as fome British officers have done, must expect to be close confined.

Anfwer. There being no officer in this army under, or capable of being under the defcription of breaking parole, this article needs no anfwer.

V. All public ftores, artillery, arms, ammunition, carriages, horfes, &c. &c. must be delivered to commission appointed to receive them.

Anfwer. All public ftores may be delivered, arms excepted.

VI. There terms being agreed to and figned, the troops under his Excellency General Burgoyne's command may be drawn up in their encampments, where they will be ordered to ground their arms, and may thereupon be marched to the river fide, to be paffed over in their way towards Bennington.

Answer. This article inadmissible in any extremity. Sooner than this army will consent to ground their arms in their encampment, they will rush on the enemy, determined to take no quarter.

VII. A ceffation of arms to continue till fun-fet, to receive General Burgoyne's anfwer.

(Signed)

Camp at Saratoga, Oct. 14.

Major Kingston met the Adjutant-General of Major-General Gates's army, October 14th, at fun-fet, and delivered the following message :

If General Gates does not mean to recede from the 6th article, the treaty ends at once.

The army will to a man proceed to any act of defperation, rather than fubmit to that article.

The ceffation of arms ends this evening.

QUESTION.

General Gates having, in answer to General Burgoyne's meffage, given a solemn affirmation on his honour, that no detachment has been made from his army during the negociation of the treaty, is the treaty, in its resent stuation, binding on this army, or is the general's honour engaged for the figning it?

[Here follow the names of the officers as they voted.]

The lieutenant general's opinion being clear, that he is not bound by what has paffed, he would not execute the treaty upon the fole confideration of the point of honour, notwithftanding the respectable majority against him.

He is likewife far from being convinced that this army, by great exertions and by great enduring in point of provifions, might not yet be relieved; but he is compelled to yield on the following confiderations.

The treaty was generally thought a most advantageous one before the intelligence arrived. That intelligence is refuted, and ocular demonstration of its falsity pledged as far as relates to General Gates's force; the other parts are only founded on hearlay, and not to be depended upon.

Should General Clinton be where reported, yet the diftance is fuch as to render any relief from him improbable during the time our provisions could be made to laft.

figned, he apprehends there will be confiderable defertion.

- - - - - fays he thinks the 47th regiment not to be depended on.

- - - - - - is of the fame opinion.

---- thinks the 62d regiment is diffeartened by the fituation of their poft, and not equal to their former exertions.

Several officers think the men in general feem to have got the convention in their heads as defirable.

Many of the best officers are absent by fickness and wounds from all the corps.

Though the other officers at the head of the British corps think they can answer for the spirit of their men, is attacked on their present ground, it is evident the most fanguine do not think any part of the army in that elevation and alacrity of spirit neceffary for undertaking desperate enterprizes.

To break off the treaty now renders a future renewal of it hopelefs, as our condition muft every hour grow worfe.

A defeat is fatal to the army. A victory does not fave it, as they have neither provisions to advance nor retreat against an enemy who by experience we know are capable of rallying at every advantageous post.

And that the life and property of every provincial and dependant of this army depends upon the execution of this treaty.

POSTSCRIPT to the APPENDIX.

[Though the following Letters are not referred to in any Part of the Defence, it is hoped they will not be deemed fuperfluous.]

Extract of a Letter from Major General Phillips, to Lieutenant General Burgoyne, dated Cambridge, September 29, 1778.

My Dear Sir,

THE Bofton news papers, have given extracts from English and New York papers, wherein you are mentioned; your arrival, your speeches in parliament; and a variety of other matters concerning you. I do not always give credit to news papers, and therefore, the publishers at Boston will excuse me, if in the instance of news I do not give them, in my opinion, more veracity than I allow the news compilers at London.

I will not plague you about our fituation, as you will know it, by my affuring you it is almoft exactly as you left us; fo no more about it. The troops here depend upon you their chief, in whatever may relate to them; their intereft; their honour. It is not doubted but you will exert yourfelf, that the officers may gain preferment in common, with other parts of the army. That you will have the goodnefs to exert yourfelf in behalf of their fituation, refpecting the very great expence of living, and endeavour to procure the allowance of forage money. And in fhort, that you will ufe all your powers of perfuasion and intereft for thefe troops, which have ferved under you with zeal, and with honour; and endeavour, by ferving their fituation and promoting their honour, to alleviate misfortunes which nor fortitude nor valour could prevent, and which they fuffer, however, with refignation aud patience. I am moft perfectly convinced of your affectionate, I will fay your grateful regard for us all; and I leave myfelf and the troops to your friendly care; to your humanity; to your honour.

You cannot expect a letter of entertainment; I have not even a power of making it one of intelligence. It shall be however, a letter of perfect fincerity, and in the fullest fense of it I profess to be,

My dear Sir,

Your very fincere Friend, and faithful Servant,

(Signed)

W. PHILLIPS.

P.S. I enclose you the Copy of a Memorial to the Secretary at War, I am fure you will affift it.

Copy of a Letter from Lientenant General Burgoyne to Lord Amherft, inclosing the Mamorial referred to in the above, dated November 6, 1778.

MY LORD,

THE heavy misfortune I fuftain in being precluded the King's prefence, touches me in no point more nearly, than in the prevention of doing juffice to the various and extensive merits of the army I had the honour to command. That the confequences of my fupposed, or real errors, should involve pretensions and interests of fo many gallant officers is a painful reflection; and it can only be alleviated by the trueft fense of the trust to be reposed in your Lordship, for the general protection of the fervice. The inclosed memorial was accompanied with expressions of reliance, in the name of the whole army, upon my efforts to support it. The officers in New England little conceive my prefent fituation : I take the first opportunity to transmit their cause to your Lordship's happier auspices, with this solemn: declaration, which I have mentioned upon different public occasions, and which I can omit no occasion to repeat, that there is not a British officer who ferved under me during the campaign of 1777, to whom I can impute blame; that the inftances are very numerous wherein particular diffinction is due; and as a body,. they have a claim to my fincereft refpect for their zeal in the King's fervice, and to my utmost gratitude for their attention to me perfonally.

I have the honour to be, &c. &c. &c.

J. BURGOYNE.

In Plan IV. the third and fourth politions of the army in the engagement of 19th of September may appear upon a curfory view to want precision. The inequalities of the ground could not be distinctly marked upon to fimall a fcale; and the continual shift of the positions of separate corps, as they were attacked by corps of the enemy, which frequently, from the thickness of the wood, they did not see, made it equally difficult to mark regularly the position of the whole at any one time.

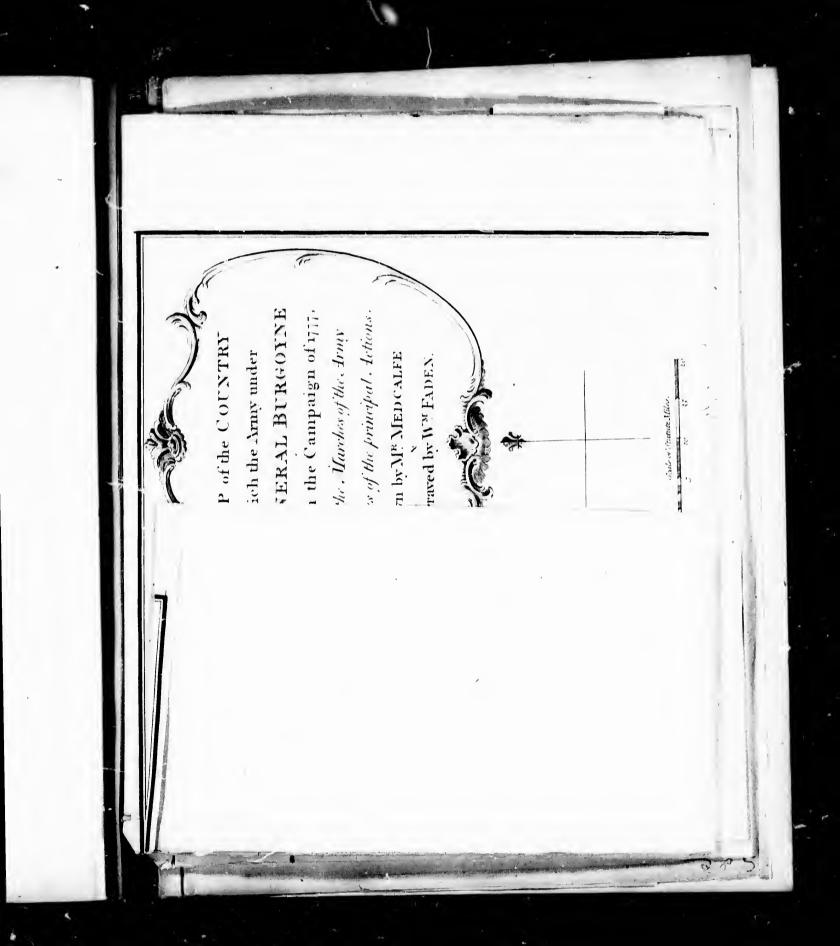

The polition of the arries on the 8th of September in Plate V. requires alfo fome explanation. From the fmallnefs of the fcale, the polition of the enemy could only be shewn upon the plain near the river; but it is to be observed, it extended over the ground of General Burgoyne's former encampment, and in front of the redoubts upon the hill.

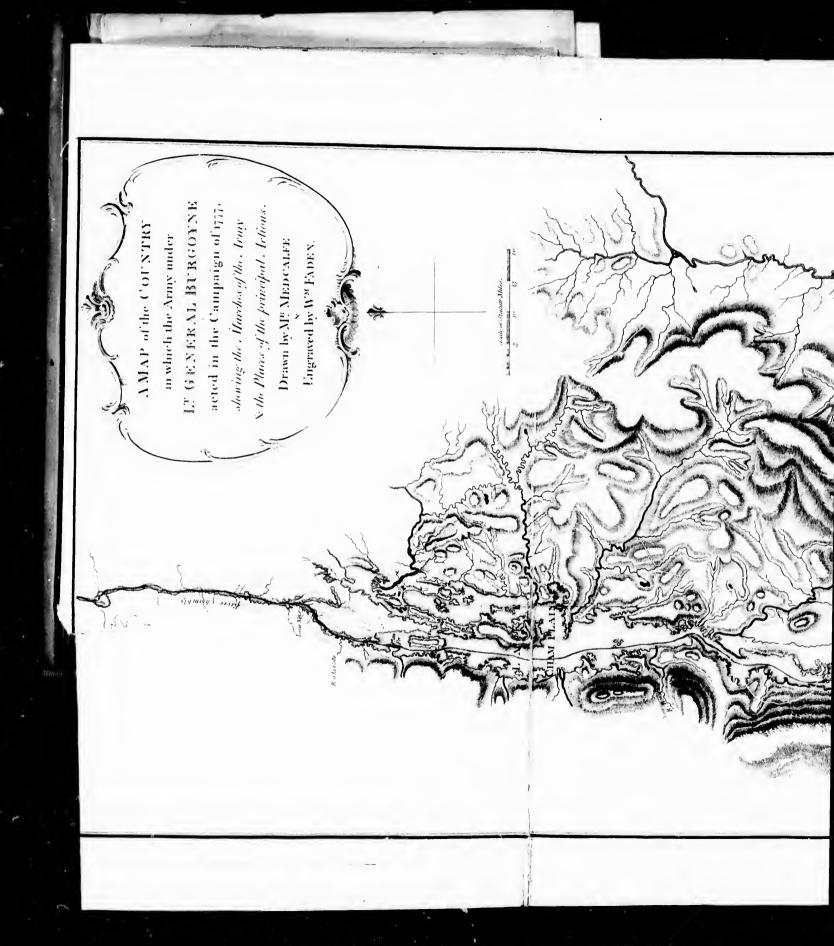

N. B. The papers respecting the expedition to Bennington, referred to by miltake, under No. IV. page 103, will be found in the Appendix under No. XII. after Lieutenant Colonel Baume's instructions.

The account of the expedition of Lieutenant Colonel St. Leger, referred to alfo, by miftake, under No. V. will be found in the Appendix under No. XIII.
