CHAPTER VI.
A Strange Request.

As a weather prophet Masters proved more reliable than those who fill the mission on the daily papers. It rained heavily all the afternoon. His handily when she brought in his hat, remarked that it was pouring and dogs—the latter, presumably, of the Skye terrier breed.

A temporary clearance of the weather came about in the evening. Masters was glad; he went to Ivy Cottage. The bungalow-like building was curiously situated in its own square piece of grass land, fronting the sea. The back of the house looked on to the road leading to the railway station a little distance away. The house agent entrusted with the letting of the place had described it as possessed of advantages not to be missed over lightly. There was one—unappreciated convenience in the matter of not missing a train—that certainly was undeniable and evident. So close was the back of the house to the railway that from the windows an approaching train could be seen in time enough to allow of easy waiting to catch it. Masters walked up the gravel path to the front door. Touched the push of the bell. A trim maid-servant responded. He enquired—

"Miss Mivvins—is she within?"

The girl started. Hesitated as she looked at him closely—doubtfully—for a moment. Then opened a side door in the hall, requesting him to enter and be seated.

It was a charmingly arranged room in which he was thus introduced. Evident woman in every insignificant little detail; her gentle touch was visible in all things. He thought of the touch of one woman in particular.

Her gentle touch was visible in all things. He thought of the touch of one woman in particular.

Miss Mivvins' spirit seemed to have impressed itself in every fold of the curtains; in all the quiet harmony of colouring; in the inexpensive simplicity of the whole—as distinct from cheapness.

Expensive simplicity often stamps the quality of a room; it was not to be seen here. There was nothing cheap about the furnishing; nothing ostentatious; nothing to catch the eye. Nothing of the enamel paint and varnish description; all in that apartment was plainly and simply what it represented itself to be; its note, truth.

Masters was astonished, because he had had no idea that such signs of refinement existed in Weymouth. But then he knew his lodging houses only where the great god is Aspinall and an uneasy chair the only attempt at comfort.

He sat some moments waiting. What doing so he thought again of the curious way in which the maid had looked at him. Perhaps Miss Mivvins was in a less comfortable place than he had thought. He had judged by the freedom she enjoyed, that no possible harm could result from his visit to her. Was he wrong?

Perhaps that accounted for her hesitation, when he had suggested calling with the books. What a fool he had been, not to think of that! Perhaps she would get into trouble by reason of his visit to her employer's house.

The more he thought of this the more uncomfortable he became. As a result of his deliberations determined that he would make his stay a short, and formal one. There could surely be no harm accruing to her from that.

The rattle of a woman's dress warned him of her approach. Presently she entered. The moment his eyes rested on her he was amazed; she was dressed so perfectly. No scrap of colour; no scintillation of a jewel.

He had a mere man's eye for a woman's dress—sensible of the tout ensemble, not of detail—but he did not cease to be amazed. It seemed fitting to him that graceful women should be gracefully attired.

All harmony was grateful to his soul; it did not seem unnatural for Miss Mivvins to be groomed in accordance with her beauty. Still he experienced astonishment, grave astonishment, when she entered.

For the life of him he could not have defined the impression which she held of him. But he knew that her gown was of some soft, rich, silken, costly texture. Resultant upon that was the belief that her place must be an easier one than he had begun to think it.

The extension of her hand to him, once more with it in his own, he felt thrilled. That feeling and his previous resolve to hurry away did not blend well. The thrill remained; the resolve faded.

He produced the books he had promised to bring with him. On the fly-leaf of each he had written her name; beneath it had appended his signature. So many people bothered him for autograph copies of his books, that it was a pardonable view if he had begun to think there was something around his signature which enhanced the value of his works. So he had penned the words between her name and his own.

At sight of what he had written she laughed. At first, gently; a gentleness which passed into real hearty mirth. Then, catching sight of his face, the laugh died away ashamedly! Had she whipped him he could not have looked more hurt. His hyper-sensitive nature was suffering.

That laughter acted on Masters as if the ceiling had opened and a shower of cold water had fallen—his face showed it. To be the subject of mirth was a novelty to him. He was glad that that was so. Felt that it was not a pleasant sensation to experience. That a very little of it went an extremely long way.

She flushed with annoyance at her own rudeness, with shame for having wounded the feelings of her visitor. He had not the faintest idea why she laughed; of course, want of knowledge so often leads to misunderstanding. She said hurriedly—

"I hope you do not—oh, how can I explain what I was laughing at? Mr. Masters, don't, pray don't—beg of you—think I was rude—intended to be rude—or that I was laughing at anything even remotely connected with these books which, believe me, I shall always value, always prize."

That earnest humble little speech of hers did not sponge away the look from his face. In her eagerness to acquit herself she placed her hand on his arm—it was for the second time that day. It was a habit of hers when moved. Was quite an innocent gesture, but there was—in his estimation, anyway—a distinct piquancy about it.

"Oh—Mr. Masters?"

She got as far as that. Then stood at a loss for words. She had spoken in such dead earnest tones that it would have been absurd to think her lying. Finding her tongue again, she continued—

"Pray, pray believe me! I was stupid, I know, but don't be so hard as to think me capable of insulting you. Don't! Please, don't!"

His forgiveness was hers that moment. The wonder remained—that she could have laughed at—but all else was forgotten. She had looked into his eyes; a pretty woman's trick, mostly always successful. When performed with such eyes as Miss Mivvins' failure was absolutely impossible.

"I don't think you rude. Don't think you insulting. I could not think any ill thing of you if I tried."

She had badly wanted to hear some just such thing. But there was that in the tone in which he spoke it that made her flush again. She knew in her breast she was a little.

"I am so glad!"

Miss Mivvins spoke impetuously—personally. She is nervous! And that, too, in speaking to such a boyish, ingenious individual as was Masters! It was quite too absurd! She continued—

"I should not like you to think badly of me."

She was obviously ill at ease—the obviousness was the worst part of it. She knew that herself; knew quite well. It was because he believed in her. Because he trusted her so implicitly; had an almost childlike faith in her.

With all the other men she had known, on whom she had exerted the power of her fascination, her woman's ways and wiles seemed fair and fitting. They were part of the game and understood by both sides of it. The men had been men of the world—her world—armed and armed against her coquetry and charms.

Flirtation in those instances had been carried to the point of a fine art—it was part of the life she lived. But it had been flirtation, pure and simple. Though it was amusing enough, while it lasted, it had been fencing with blunt points.

No one had any wounds—not a scratch. Experience had taught them all to play the game skilfully. No one had been deceived into taking things seriously. No soul was a scrap the worse.

But Masters was of another world than hers. Superficially seemed unknown to him; he put his heart into what he said and did. Playing with him was evidently a thing unknown to him; he was in earnest; always would be; that was his temperament. Honest himself, he believed her to be likewise.

"What a character! Of course it appealed to her—she would not have been a woman if it had not. He would face her woman's weapons—ever her most innocent little deception—unsuspecting, unarmed. To shower on him the full force of her artillery would be grossly unfair."

She was constrained to throw off the conventional. To don the mantle of guilelessness—such as he wore himself. He made it impossible for her to act otherwise. But the experiment was quite a new one to her; it was the novelty that made her nervous. To be trusted—implicitly—was delightfully disconcerting.

Her manner filled Masters with wonder. The key to the mysterious nervousness was not in his possession. Again there fitted across his mind the idea that it arose from his visit to her employer's house.

His resolution to stay but a little time occurred to him. It would be best to go. Yet he abhorred the idea of a speedy parting; if only he could—He paused. Thought. The rain has ceased. It is damp below but bright above.

A pause. His reference to the weather seemed out of place. She did not know the difficulty he was experiencing in screwing his courage to the sticking place. He continued—

"I am walking to the end of the parade and back."

Having voiced as much, his talking works seemed to run down. He somehow hoped that she would suggest joining him in his walk. That his ignorance of women was of vast magnitude was evidenced by the nature of that hope.

He was very transparent—so much so that there was no difficulty in guessing his thoughts; she smiled. Ingenuities were scarcely the word for him! He should have known the impossibility of her offering to accompany him—however much she might desire to do so. As she did not speak he went even further, saying, with nervous awkwardness—

"It is a warm evening—will you walk with me?"

The smile left her face and her eyes opened wide. She was startled at the suddenness of his request. Still more at the nature of it. Then remembered the nature of the man. Felt too that there was owing to him something for that unkind laugh of hers. Then there was the trend of her tossed declaration to the winds; said—

"I shall be glad to if you wish it!"

The words spoken, she was amazed at their utterance. Her ready acquiescence pleased him. It voiced that honesty he thought so precious in her which was so sadly lacking in other women. He suspected that, another member of her sex would have raised scruples, merely that he might flatter himself that he had overcome them.

Roumanian Prince Predicts Doings Among Albanians—Says Great Britain May Take a Hand.

Rome, Feb. 4.—Prince Ghika, of Roumania, who was elected by the Albanian committee "supreme head for Albanian independence," when interviewed here yesterday regarding the plans and purposes of the committee said his election meant the inauguration of a general revolution in Albania and a bitter struggle to achieve the liberty of that country. He said he would in person assume command of the Albanian forces which he asserted would be reinforced by 10,000 European volunteers. The committee, Prince Ghika further stated, have at their command all the means necessary for the prosecution of the war for independence and only ask to be left free in the fight for liberty. Those enlisted in the movement, he added, are determined to achieve their purpose, or die to the last man.

"Should Austria intervene to prevent the execution of the committee plans, he declared she would be opposed by Italy, Russia and Great Britain."

James Johnston, who was recently removed from the position of foreman of the I. C. It is said Mr. Johnston has been offered Nos. 1 and 2 between St. John and Moncton if he desires to go back driving, but it is understood he would prefer not to go out driving again, after being off the road for so long. He would much prefer to remain in Campbellton, where he has lived for many years, if that could be arranged. It is difficult to say at present what position Mr. Johnston will be given.—Moncton Times.

TRAINING CHILDREN.

Sermon on Duty of Parents to Their Little Ones

Preached by Rev. Father Owen-Jones in the Mission Church Last Evening—Obedience—Early Rising—Simple Habits—Religious Teaching.

Rev. Father Owen-Jones, priest in charge of the Mission Church of St. John Baptist, preached an instructive sermon at yesterday evening's service, taking for his subject "The Importance of Childhood's Training."

He based his discourse on 1st verse of the second chapter of St. Luke's gospel. "And He went down with them to Nazareth, and was subject unto them."

Of often come in contact with children who lead luxurious lives, who are allowed to remain up late at night and are permitted to interest themselves in many matters which are the older members of the household, and thus the mental development is considerably retarded.

And so, today parents would do well to cultivate in their children habits of industry and obedience, to see that they have definite duties to perform, and look to it that their instructions in this particular are carried out to the letter.

The preacher referred to obedience as a special virtue of childhood, and as the foundation of the moral life. It leads to self-restraint and self-control, and in the spiritual life enables the will to control other powers.

It is also of the greatest importance that the child be taught habits of religion. Most of us, have no doubt, learned to pray at our mother's knee. This however, is not sufficient.

ST. JOHN, N. B., FEBRUARY 6, 1906. The St. John Evening Times is published at 19 and 21 Canterbury Street every evening (Sunday excepted) by the St. John Times Printing Co. Ltd. A company incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Act. A. M. BELDING, Editor.

THINK IT OVER. If the next St. John city council should prove to be less intelligent, less experienced and less able to deal with important civic problems and the general administration of civic affairs than the present council, the fault will lie entirely with the citizens. Think it over.

AT REST. The Times on Saturday published the tributes of clergymen of various denominations in this city to the memory of the late Rev. John D. Soyars. These, added to the tributes from clergymen of the Church of England, tell how many-sided was that apostolic character, and how wide the influence for good wielded by him who has gone from us forever. From the office whose walls had often echoed the eloquence of the living preacher, his remains were today borne to the halls of silence; but the influence of his example and his work will not perish, nor his memory fade from the minds of those who have known his friendship, or felt the inspiration of his words and his example.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS. How many of those who will be candidates in the next city election are among the large taxpayers of the city, and to how many will they owe the two hundred dollars per year he is a moving consideration? These are pointed questions, but are they not perfectly proper? It is not claimed that only large taxpayers should be members of the council, but no one will deny the assertion that they should be well represented. Will they be well represented in the next council? Are they taking any steps to secure such representation? If not, and if a policy is pursued that will add to their burden of taxation—whose fault will it be?

A good city council would contain representatives of both the large and the small taxpayers, intelligent, clear-headed, progressive and yet cautious men. The city council will have some very large questions to deal with during the next year. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are to be expended. What kind of council will control that expenditure?

CORRUPT LEGISLATORS. The state of Illinois has a political sensation. Speaking before the students of the Illinois College of Law a few days ago, Representative Frank D. Comerford is reported to have made the following assertion: "The Illinois Legislature is a great public auction, where special privileges are sold to the highest bidder, and that without respect to party affiliations. The grafters seem to be in the majority." The assembly has appointed a committee which is empowered to summon Mr. Comerford and call upon him to tell what he knows. Evidently excitement is running high at Springfield, for a dispatch says: "For the first time in the history of the legislature of Illinois in many years members of the general assembly are walking about armed. Threats have been made against Mr. Comerford, who acknowledges that he has a revolver in his pocket to defend himself in an emergency." And yet Mr. Comerford is only saying what others are saying, not of Illinois alone, but of other States. Mr. McClure's Magazine for February, Mr. Lincoln Steffens has an article of some 17 pages on "Rhode Island: A State For Sale." He charges that the voters sell themselves for cash at the polls. Then he goes on: "Other states know the practice. In Wisconsin, Missouri, Illinois and Pennsylvania workers are paid to get out the vote, but this is only preliminary; the direct and decisive purchase of power comes later, in conventions and legislatures. In these states the corrupt politicians buy the people's representatives."

In a country where colossal undertakings are continually being promoted, it is but natural to assume that those interested would use every influence in their power to secure favorable legislation, and they would not hesitate to corrupt the members of the legislature if that were possible. Mr. Comerford says it is possible and Mr. Steffens agrees with him. It is also said to be cheaper to buy a majority in a legislature than to buy up a majority of the voters of a state, and a much simpler task.

ENGLAND'S CHIEF PROBLEM; THAT OF THE UNEMPLOYED.

Even Chamberlain's Campaign Dwarfs to Insignificance Beside This Greater Question Which Affects Every Man, Woman and Child in Great Britain.

(Mail and Empire.) England's problem of the unemployed dwarfs all other problems at the present time, and quite overshadows even Mr. Chamberlain's Imperialist propaganda. It is especially momentous, and extraordinary measures are advocated to deal with the situation. In the meantime people are starving to death. Free trader and Protectionist are fiercely quarrelling one trying to convince the other that a certain set of theories is responsible for the distress. The papers bulge with contradictory statistics. Veteran disputants take pen in hand. The clamor is loud and increasing. As has been said, there are people dying of starvation in the meantime. The first cause as we look to unravel the dreary tangle of all this suffering and despondency is lack of work. There are millions of people in the British Isles who want employment, but cannot get it. A large percentage of these millions, as we have pointed out, are small wage-earners at the best of times. When they work, all their wages go to buy them food so that they may have strength to work to earn them more food so that they may keep on working. There is no surplus. When work stops, simultaneously stops the eating, and here we have the obvious explanation. The following table we cannot vouch for, yet it professes to contain an unexaggerated synopsis of the situation regarding the unemployed:

Table with 2 columns: Location and Unemployed population. London 750,000, Scotland 200,000, Wales 40,000, In the country 2,200,000, Deaths from starvation 100 per week. Text continues: To account for the unusual distress of the unemployed millions we can cite the crop failure in Ireland which has had the effect of making the necessities of life scarcer, and therefore, harder to buy, and the unusually severe weather of early winter. To account for the unemployment of these millions, we are referred to generally bad state of trade, and here we find ourselves in the wrangle between Free Trader and Protectionist. The trade returns of England for the past 11 months show that never before were there so many unemployed as at present. The corresponding period of 1903. Nor has the expansion of trade been confined to a few months, but has on the contrary, been spread evenly over them all. Strangely enough, trade appears to have been better than the distress of the unemployed has increased. There is no contradiction in this, for it is obvious that people who are neither producers nor consumers can have absolutely nothing to do with trade. It is only in those cases where they participate in trade, as parasites, that they are able to cling to it. Charity blindly and nobly shushes its ears to the cry of the distressed, but the cry of the destitute people, and rubs to the rescue. In the 28 boroughs of London the Government has established 100 free public schools. Outside of London many municipalities have established

MAKE ROOM FOR ALL. The Conservative Club is to devote an evening to the discussion of civic politics. This is creditable to the club, but it is not broad enough. Those who are not conservatives, in a city where party lines in federal politics are pretty sharply drawn, will object to the label. It is well to discuss civic politics, but a voters' league or a civic reform club would be more effective than any number of separate organizations; although there is certainly no reason why these also should not discuss civic matters, to the fullest extent. The more discussion the better. But why not have a distinct and non-partisan organization for the consideration of civic affairs?

HUDSON BAY ROUTE. J. W. Tyrell, the well known explorer and surveyor, who has been in the north for the greater part of the last three years, has great faith in the Hudson Bay route. He has made four trips through Hudson Straits and crossed the bay five times, besides journeying in the interior. In an interview last week he said: "Since my first experience in the Hudson Bay, I have been strongly impressed with the great value of Hudson Bay and the Strait route, and I am firmly convinced that it is bound to be in the very distant future the great outlet for the produce of the Canadian Northwest. This is by no means the first time I have said this, as I have written many letters on the subject." The necessity for providing municipal sanatoria for the care of consumptives was strongly urged by Dr. C. A. Hodgetts in his quarterly report to the Provincial Board of Health, of Ontario, last week. A stigma, he said, rested upon the municipal authorities of the province for their failure to show any inclination to grapple with the question. The general impression in Ottawa is said to be that only slight changes will be made in the tariff this session pending an investigation by a tariff commission next summer. (Gazette.) Our Lady of the Snows has given the city council many fine days in which to have the streets cleared, but her indulgence is not appreciated at its true value by the city fathers.

FROM SACKVILLE. Perished in a Snow Storm—A Successful Carnival—Choir Leader Resigns. Sackville, Feb. 3.—The skating carnival, under the auspices of the Citizen's Band, was held in Coppas' rink, last evening, and was a greater success than in previous years. The attendance was larger than usual and the costumes were much more original than formerly. The following were awarded prizes: Gents—E. B. Snarr, gold plated fancy clock; Ladies—Daisy Fawcett, opera glasses in case; Boy—James Calkin, watch; Girls—Mildred Tracey necklace and locket. The judges were Mrs. F. B. Black, Mrs. Fred Ryan, and Mrs. C. B. Copp. Mrs. J. J. Anderson, wife of the collector of customs, met with a painful accident a few days ago. While going down stairs in her own home at Middle Sackville, she slipped and fell, fracturing one of her ribs. An interesting lecture on "Woman and her mission," and the "Woman of the Bible," was given in the vestry of the Methodist church last evening by Miss Jessie Archibald. Alexander Ford who bought the Wry House, last autumn, reports a flourishing hotel business, having his house steadily full of guests, parties, and commercial travellers, who find the central locality of the place admirably adapted for their purpose. Mrs. Leitch, wife of John Leitch, while in a demoted state, wandered away from her home on Thursday night's storm and perished. She was missed about 11 o'clock at night. Search was made but her whereabouts

URNS MURDERER. Pittsburg Streets Were the Scene of an Awful Tragedy Yesterday.

Pittsburg, Feb. 5.—Maddened by jealousy and what he believed to be the infidelity of his wife, James C. Kennedy, foreman at the Plant of the Union Spring and Mfg. Company at New Kensington, sent several bullets into the body of Howard M. Ebner, a young telegraph operator today. Kennedy gave himself up immediately after the shooting. Mrs. Kennedy was also arrested and is being held as an accessory. Kennedy stood still and fired the three remaining bullets the shots taking effect but failing to stop Ebner. Kennedy then started in pursuit reloading as he went. Ebner had by this time reached the back door of his boarding house where he fell face downward. Kennedy advanced and man sent two more bullets into his head. Leaving his victim lying where he had fallen, Kennedy strode to the police station and surrendered.

PULPIT TRIBUTES TO REV. JOHN DE SOYRES.

Universal Appreciation of His Great Qualities of Mind and Heart, and Sorrow at His Death-- Church of England Clergymen Tell of His Work.

In nearly all the churches in the city yesterday, irrespective of creed, feeling reference was made to the late Rev. John de Soyres. His scholarly attainments, his eloquence in the pulpit and on the platform, and his ready sympathy with all cases of sorrow, suffering or poverty which came under his notice received universal recognition. In St. John's church Rev. R. P. McKim officiated in the morning, and Rev. Canon Richardson in the evening.

Rev. Joseph Smith. "You know your former pastor is dead," said Mr. Smith, in part, "yet he still lives and speaks. His labors will abide in your hearts. You have enjoyed the blessings and benefits of his enlightening ministry for seventeen years, and for some time have been privileged to hear, with you his discourses and lectures. We mourn together."

Rev. R. P. McKim. Rev. Mr. McKim said he realized that out of this life had gone one of the best friends he had ever known. When he first came to the city, no man had extended a warmer welcome than Mr. de Soyres, and the friendship formed then had grown with the years. In all things the late rector was loving, generous, helpful. The speaker regretted that he had not better cultivated such a friendship, for it was worth more to him than he was capable of appreciating.

Canon Richardson. The speaker said he thought of him who for seventeen years had been the beloved rector of Stone church, whose rich but refined eloquence had charmed his hearers, whose life had entered so fully into the life of the community, whose name was a household word among men of eminence who had learned to value truth for truth's own sweet sake, to whom all looked for sound scholarship and enlightened instruction. No one more clearly recognized the church's breath than the late rector, and in this connection the speaker quoted from an address delivered by Mr. de Soyres at Cambridge University seventeen years ago.

Apostleship meant the preaching of the truth, and the dead clergyman would also be remembered with love and reverence for his truth. He was never a specialist save so far as his breadth of scholarship made him an authority in various branches of learning. The church, he believed, was large enough to welcome truth no matter from where it came.

How close were these needs to the late rector? All knew and appreciated or advised his services were ever available. In Trinity church in the morning, the speaker had the pleasure of hearing the late rector's words, and the church had met with a great loss. The loss to the church could hardly be estimated. Few in any in the Canadian church had the ability of Mr. de Soyres--a man of such wide intellectual and brilliant scholarship that the loss could not be realized at present. As time passed on it would be borne in upon them.

When a man was being sought to represent the church upon the public platform, or when someone was required who would be a worthy representative in some enterprise where scholarship and tact and eloquence were needed, then they would realize the loss they had sustained.

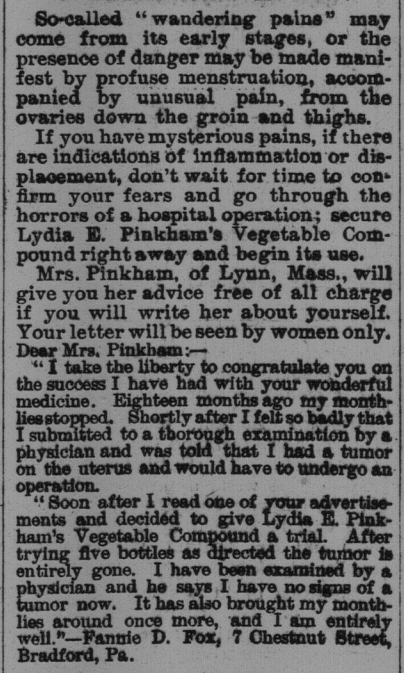

Rev. Mr. Dicker. Rev. Mr. Dicker, rector of St. Paul's church, said that in Mr. de Soyres the city had lost a public spirited citizen and real orator, the church in Canada had been bereaved.

Rev. Dr. Raymond. Last evening, Rev. Dr. Raymond in St. Mary's church said that Mr. de Soyres always had a warm place in his heart for the people of St. Mary's. For a short time he had been his and their rector, and it was owing very largely to his energetic advocacy of a division of the old parish of St. Mark and St. Mary's was an independent church today. All must, however, feel that when Mr. de Soyres ceased to be their rector he did not cease to be their friend. He had continued to manifest the most sympathetic interest in everything that concerned their welfare, and liked to visit the church and to speak to them in his study. He had shown his interest in the church in very many ways, and was always ready to help them in his power to do so.

G. T. R. DISCRIMINATES AGAINST SAINT JOHN. Freight Traffic Manager John McCloud Admits That Railway's First Interest Lies in Portland, Me.—Canadian Ports Cut No Ice.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—It seems obvious from the evidence taken thus far before the arbitrators appointed to adjudicate certain differences between the Grand Trunk Railway and the Intercolonial Railway, arising out of the interpretation of an agreement made between the former corporation, that the Grand Trunk has discriminated against Canadian ports in favor of the port of Portland.

St. John? asked Mr. Shepley, one of the arbitrators. "No sir," replied Mr. Loud. "For probably thirty or thirty-five years Portland was the only winter port that the G. T. R. had available for its winter business other than Boston, and before the port of West St. John was opened by the C. P. R. it was only some five or six years about that the C. P. R. opened West St. John, and it is only within the last year or two that the I. C. R. has taken any active interest in getting export business for their road to St. John. It has Mr. Loud referred to the contract with the Intercolonial, and the G. T. R. to compete at Portland with either the C. P. R. at West St. John or the I. C. R. at St. John. I consider that having our own line to Portland and our own steamers out of Portland, and the Intercolonial route, if the shipper desires to send anything via Lennoxville and the C. P. R. to West St. John, we would accept it when sent that way. In connection with the I. C. R. we take it on the export rates governing to St. John, but we have drawn a difference between the ports of Liverpool and Glasgow to which we have our own lines of steamers. I have always understood that it was the purpose of the agreement with the Government, when entered into that we were to take care of Portland primarily, and if we gave anything to other ports we would take it.

JIMMY PRICE'S SPEED WON BIG HONORS AT MONTREAL.

St. John Skater Leads All Other Flyers Over the Tape in a Championship Race--Thistles Win From St. Andrew's Curlers.

SKATING.

Price A Winner.

James Price the speedy skater from St. John, was the only Canadian to win a speed event at the championship races held at Montreal Saturday. It was in the one mile race that Price by a great burst of speed left Morris Wood, the American champion four yards in the rear. Price qualified for the final by coming in after Wood in the second heat. In the first heat Logan, of St. John, won easily from a good field in fast time, 2.56 2-5. After this Logan was picked as the man to give Wood the fight in the final, but a stumble on the last turn interfered with his chances. Logan, however, finished third. He also captured third in the three mile.

In the professional events Norval Baptie, of North Dakota, wrestled the honors from Johnny Nilsson, who has been unbeatable since he won the world's championship in Montreal in 1897. Baptie won the half and mile after the hottest of finishes but Nilsson was on his mettle in the two mile and would not allow Baptie to pass him in the finish apart as the Dakota skater did in the two previous events. Harley Davidson and Peter Simirud, the Terrible Swede, also competed in the professional events. Davidson showed fine form and almost beat Nilsson out in the mile. Simirud fell in the first event and made a poor showing afterwards. Besides Price and Logan, Merritt, of St. John, wearing the colors of the Verona Lake Club, and Daley and Hagen, formerly of St. John, competed. Daley and Hagen were outclassed, but Merritt was usually well up at the finishes. In three events he had falls. Price also fell in two events. Merritt was second in the second heat of the 220 yards but not placed in the final. Price fell in a preliminary of the half mile when he and Merritt went down together. Price also fell in the three mile race.

Gold and wind made the conditions unfavorable for record breaking. The only mark lowered was by Ernest Lamy, the boy wonder from Saranac Lake, who skated the mile in 3.03 2-5 and left a field of 26 competitors half a lap in the rear. Following is the summary--220 yards (amateur)--Morris Wood, Verona Lake, 1st; Fred Robson, Toronto 2nd; G. Finlayson, Montreal, 3rd. Time 20 2-5.

Pain Across the Kidneys For Three Years. Suffered Great Agony. Could Not Stoop or Bend.

No disease is so quiet and stealthy in its approach as kidney disease. That is why it is so dangerous. It may become deep-seated before you realize the danger. It is therefore of great importance to recognize the early warning symptoms, because in its early stage kidney disease is easily curable. Pain or dull ache in the back is one of the first signs. So are bladder pains, burning-down pains, smarting sensation when urinating, frequent or suppressed urination, and gravel or sediments in the urine, etc. You cannot be well if your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. In all ordinary cases of any derangement of the kidneys, a few doses of TONIGHT'S SPORTS. Tonight the people of this city will have a chance to see some great speed skating, for nearly all the local flyers are entered and it is expected that records will be smashed to pieces. Merritt, Logan, Dalton and Dully as well as other local speeders have been entered, and there should be something doing. The Queen's rink will probably be taxed to the utmost to contain the crowd that will want to see these men perform.

OF INTEREST TO SKATERS. J. C. Littgow, honorary secretary M. P. A. A., writing to K. J. Macrae in regard to the latter's inquiry about local skaters and their standing, says in part--"Any of the skaters suspended from the 19th ult. need not send in a caveat unless you consider the standing of any of them doubtful, in which case it is better to get the suspicious to do so otherwise their suspension is removed automatically after the thirty days."

A Popular Victory. It was a source of much pleasure to Price's numerous friends about the city when the news came over the wire Saturday that he had won the principal event of the championships, namely the one mile event. To his friends at the Y. M. C. A. it came as a joyous surprise, for considering that the crack Canadian and U. S. flyers were pitted against him it was thought that he would do well to get a second or third place. Jas. J. Price is about twenty years of age, and son of Capt. John Price, whose home is at the head of the Mistake (Upper Greenwich), on the river. He is a student in the Syllabic shorthand institute, in this city. As a skater he first came into prominence a couple of winters ago in Victoria's rink in competition with some lesser lights, whom he easily disposed of. He made an instant hit as a speeder and knowing ones foretold great things for his giant stride and killing stroke. His next performances were in company with the acknowledged fast ones of the community, and first and second place were his usual winnings. Last winter he beat Champion Parker in a 440 yard dash, and also in a half mile with a wonderful burst, but in justice to Parker it must be said he but a short time before that same night had broken a rink record in a wonderful exhibition.

Another source of gratification to St. John folks were the performances of young Logan, who won his heat in the mile to the tune of 2.56 2-5, besides crossing the line in the three mile event and showing up so strongly in the one mile, in which he is reported to have stumbled when near the finish. This lad is another St. John boy with the title of champion almost within his grasp. He has shown wonderful development of late and no doubt his racing at Lake Saranac previous to the Montreal meet did him a lot of good. The time, 2.56 2-5, is excellent speeding, though large tracks usually mean small minutes. Had not Logan stumbled in the mile event he and Price may have shared the honors. As it was, he and the north end lad covered themselves with glory.

THE TROJANS ON TOUR. On Wednesday next the Trojans of Fredericton will play the Sackville boys at the latter place. On Thursday the Moncton boys will be played in the railway town. These should prove to be interesting games as these three teams are the leaders of the league.

THE NEXT GAME. The Mohawks and Neptunes will meet next Friday evening at the Queen's rink in the provincial league series. It will be remembered that in the opening match of the league the Mohawks were beaten by a score of 2 to 1. The Mohawks feel somewhat sore over their defeat, which is the first time they have been downed by a local team since 1896, and they are determined to turn the tables will put the patient right; in old or chronic cases, the treatment should be persisted in. Mr. Michael A. McInnis, Woodbine, Marion Bridge, N. S., tells of his experience: "For the last three years I suffered great agony with pain across my kidneys, and was so bad that I could not stoop or bend. next Friday night. On the other hand the Neptunes who feel much elated over their success are determined to repeat the trick if it is at all possible, and they think it is. The contest between these two teams should be one of the most interesting of the season and will no doubt draw a crowded house.

THE THISTLES ARE CHAMPIONS.

The Thistle curlers defeated the St. Andrew's club Saturday with hands down. Only three rinks of the St. Andrew's curlers showed to the front. --Maggie, M.C.A. Stewart, and Thomas. The Thistle curlers seem to have things all their own way. It is wonderful what practice will do. Some curlers never take any practice but still are taken on a game in preference to those who could do better. Saturday's game tells the whole story itself, without going into details. Practice makes perfect. No 14 rinks

RELIGION AND HEALTH.

The Intimacy That Exists Between the Two--What the Presbyterian Says. (The Presbyterian.) Spiritual feelings are more affected by one's physical condition than many persons imagine. A healthy body is a great aid to clearness of vision and to spiritual enjoyment. A deranged liver is the enemy of a joyous and hopeful piety. Dyspepsia has much to do with Christian despondency. Hostile disarrangements interfere with the highest experiences in the divine life. It becomes spiritual guides to take into greater consideration this factor in dealing with soul-maladies. A good tonic will often relieve spiritual depression when other remedies fail.

Both Christian biography and practical observation show how doubts and difficulties and depressions in the divine life rise or fall with the state of health in the given case.
