ROOSEVELT WILL VISIT NEW ORLEANS.
Left This Morning on His Southern Trip.
Will Call at the Plague-Stricken City Before he Returns—Will Come Back in a Warship.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—In redemption of a promise given more than a year ago President Roosevelt started today an extended trip through the states of the south. He will visit in the course of his tour all of the south Atlantic coast states, Alabama, Arkansas and Louisiana. On the completion of his trip he will have visited, during his administration as president, every state in the union.
After tentative arrangements for the trip had been completed the epidemic of yellow fever in New Orleans, one of the principal points of the president's visit. He was advised by many of his friends that he ought not to visit New Orleans at the time scheduled, lest he be exposed to the fever. To the people of New Orleans the president suggested that if they preferred he would postpone his visit to that city until a later date. Assurances were given him, however, by Mayor Behrman and by officials of the Marine Hospital that at the time of his proposed visit to New Orleans danger from fever infection practically would be out of consideration. The quarantine of other southern states against Louisiana and New Orleans is still in force, however, and in order not to violate the quarantine regulations the president changed his itinerary so as to make New Orleans the last place he should visit. It is his intention, after spending the day of the 26th in the city to board the armored cruiser West Virginia and make the return trip to Washington.

KING OPENS NEW LONDON THOROUGHFARE.
New Street Through the Heart of Congested London—Slums Eradicated—Cost $30,000,000.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The fine new thoroughfare formed by Kings Way and Aldrich, connecting the Strand and Holborn through the heart of congested London, was opened today by King Edward, with considerable ceremonial. Queen Alexandra and other members of the Royal family were present. The route was lined by troops, the decorations were on a pretentious scale and immense crowds gathered to participate in the event.
The new street is considered to be the most important improvement carried out in the metropolis since the construction of Regent street, in 1820. The work occupied the region, cost over $30,000,000, of which it is estimated that two thirds will be recovered by the sale of building sites. The thoroughfare is three quarters of a mile in length and a hundred yards wide. The notorious slums of the neighborhood have been eradicated. Underground trolley cars run beneath the new street.

SUCCESSFUL ECLIPSE PHOTOS.
ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 18.—Prof. J. Huxley, the new head of the department of astronomy has just arrived here from Egypt, where he went to photograph the recent total eclipse of the sun.
When the eclipse came, fifteen pictures were secured. They were made on plates giving the sun's diameter a scale of four and three-tenths inches. "Contrary to our expectations the eclipse did not cause complete darkness. Owing to the dust in the air reflecting light from the region, outside totality it was from six to ten times brighter than full moon."
The negatives made by Prof. Huxley have been sent to Lick Observatory. There they will be studied before the results obtained by the expedition will be made public.

LEADING PHILADELPHIA WOMEN WILL HELP IN COMING ELECTIONS.
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 18.—A new feature in political campaigning in Philadelphia was the appointment yesterday by William A. Tilden, chairman of the city party campaign committee of 29 women, wives of prominent men of the city, to take a prominent part in the present political battle. They will make a special effort to get out the stay-at-home voters.

ADEQUATE REFERENCES.
In her book, "A Southern Girl in '61," just published, Mrs. D. Girard Wright tells a capital story about Gen. John C. Breckenridge, of Kentucky. He was invited by a certain lady of rank in London to luncheon. The lady had just advertised for a footman. Mistaking the hour, Gen. Breckenridge reached the house before the appointed time, but by some accident was ushered into Lady Blank's presence without being announced. The day was in June. Owing to the heat the blinds were drawn, letting in subdued light. Lady Blank, glancing at the advancing figure to the astonishment of the visitor, greeted him thus: "Have you a reference from your last place?"

BREACH OF PROMISE CASE IN WOODSTOCK.
Wronged Girl Sues Faithless Lover for $2,000.
Defendant's Lawyer, Mr. Carvell, Refused to Conduct His Case—Evidence Shows Heartless Misconduct.

(Special to the Star.)
WOODSTOCK, N. B., Oct. 18.—This morning in the circuit court, a case of breach of promise, was taken up. Annie H. Tomkins is suing Murray Ellis, both being residents of this city, for $2,000 on a breach of promise to marry.
It was set forth in the opening of counsel for the plaintiff that these two were keeping company and were engaged to be married and that while so engaged the defendant seduced the plaintiff. A child was eventually born. The mother and child were in court and a very good looking infant it was, including in a good deal of baby talk during the progress of the case.
The defendant did not appear on the later and before the jury was called William Carvell, who was attorney for the defendant stated that he had advised his client that he would not appear for him so that the case was really undefended. Hon. W. P. Jones, solicitor general, represented the plaintiff. She gave her testimony setting forth the facts already summarized, and was corroborated by her father and other details. The case was on at noon adjournment.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL GATCHES ON IN U. S.
Big Intercollegiate League to be Formed—Leading Colleges and Athletic Societies are Interested.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—The visit of the English Pilgrim Association football team to America to introduce the association game to colleges and leading clubs in this country has received a boost from the Metropolitan Association Football League Association, which has elected a committee to advance the game in all other prominent eastern colleges with the ultimate object of establishing a big inter-collegiate league, says the Times.
The project will be under the direction of the English ambassador, Sir Ernest Cochrane, who sails for England this morning made the offer last night for a trophy for inter-collegiate games. He is very much encouraged with the progress of Association football in this country and predicts a great future for it. He expects to return to America in a few weeks.

INTERESTING SESSIONS OF S. S. CONVENTION.
(Special to the Star.)
MONCTON, N. B., Oct. 18.—The first order at the Provincial Sunday School Convention this morning was the pastor's conference, which was a season of unusual power. Serious phases of the relationship of pastors to Sunday school work were discussed by Revs. Camp, Fotheringham, Ganong and others.
A round table and superintendent's conference followed, Messrs. Reid and Trumbull Oulton, Wallace and Hayes taking leading parts. The primary institute as arranged by Mrs. Barnes, of New Jersey, also met this morning. This afternoon there will be joint conference of superintendents and pastors. The meetings are all followed with much interest.

CASE DIAGNOSED AT ONCE.
One of America's greatest physicians was called to the bedside of a grand dame of distinguished name and many millions, who is a leader of American society. But now the grand dame groaned and grunted in her silken bed like any washerwoman. The physician examined her carefully. Then he said: "You must get up every morning at 6 o'clock. Take for breakfast a cup of weak tea and two pieces of dry toast. From 9 to 11 exercise, either walking or sweeping or dusting. At noon lunch on a slice of cold meat, filtered water and stale bread. Don't sleep in the afternoon; exercise again. For dinner take nothing but a little meat, a vegetable and toast. No sweets, no wines, no social dissipation of any kind."
The eyes of the grand dame flashed fire as she said:

"But, doctor, do you comprehend my position? Do you know who I am?"
"Perfectly, madam," answered the physician. "You are an old woman with a sour stomach."

FRENCH WARSHIP FOR VENEZUELA.
France is Tired of Castro's Fooling.
One Cruiser Has Started and Others are Ready—No Immediate Violence is Contemplated.

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The French armored cruiser Desaix, understood to be bound for Venezuelan waters, did not put in to Brest after leaving Cherbourg, October 16th, as it was announced she would do, but passed the Island of Usant, heading direct for the French Antilles. For the present the cruiser Levoletier and Chase Louis Leboeuf will be held at Brest, as the situation may not require their presence in West Indian waters.
The officials here say that the published report that the French squadron intends either to bombard some coast point such as Cumana or Barcelona, or else seize Venezuelan shipping, is an exaggeration, as the only decision arrived at is to have ships in readiness, the nature of the demonstration being determined on later on if the attitude of Venezuela requires a resort to force. At the same time the officials are sincerely anxious to avoid the necessity of adopting force.
In any event the United States will be fully advised in advance concerning the nature of any coercive measures.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 18.—News has arrived here of the killing at Marshfield yesterday of Mrs. J. S. Steenes and her daughter. Both were married and had families. ### NEWFOUNDLAND FISHING SITUATION RELIEVED

American Registered Vessels are Allowed to Fish off Newfoundland Coast Under Certain Conditions.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 17.—The feeling over the Newfoundland herring fisheries, which has been quite intense since the arrival last week of the cruiser Flora at the Bay of Islands, was much relieved tonight by a telegram from Bond, A. Smith, who with Congressman Augustus F. Gardner, has been in Washington for two days conferring with the state department, stating that American registered vessels have the right to fish on the treaty coast of Newfoundland, provided the owner, master and mate are Americans.

The herring fishing fleet, the greater part of which has been held in the harbor pending the settlement of what was believed to be a very delicate question, will leave in a day or two for the west coast of Newfoundland.

The telegram is as follows: "Vessels of American register have the right to fish at any point, bay, harbor or inlet on the treaty coast of Newfoundland, with or without entering at local Newfoundland custom houses for any kind of fish in any quantity they think best, provided owner and master and mate are American citizens, irrespective of nationality of crews or of locality where crews are shipped, except Newfoundland crews shipped in Newfoundland territorial waters within the three-mile limit."

"If Newfoundland has local laws which I do not think is the case, forbidding her citizens to ship in foreign ports or on the high seas for the purpose of fishing in her own waters, your rights may not be so clear as far as Newfoundlanders shipped at Sydney are concerned."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, had another conference with Secretary Root this afternoon regarding the Gloucester Newfoundland fisheries controversy. A telegram was received today from the Captain of the U. S. S. Grampus, the fish commission's boat now in Newfoundland waters, stating that vessels of American register are not permitted to catch herring.

Through Sir Mortimer Durand, the British ambassador, the secretary was informed that the governor of Newfoundland denied that American fishing vessels were forbidden to catch herring.

Anything for which men and women spend money can be successfully exploited, if you go about it in the right way.—T. W. Cresby, in Advertiser.

NEW BRUNSWICK S.S. ASSOCIATION.

Twenty-first Annual Convention Now in Session.

MONCTON, Oct. 17.—The 21st annual convention of the New Brunswick Sunday School Association met here this evening in the Central Methodist church, which was crowded to the doors. Vice-President Robert Reid of St. John presided in the absence of President Spurgeon. After devotional exercises led by Rev. Dr. Gates of St. John Vice-President Reid delivered an address, in the course of which he stated that in 1885, just two years ago, this association had a visit in Moncton and again in 1888. Of the officials of the association twenty years ago only one was present tonight, T. S. Simms, who was the first president. In 1885 there were only 600 schools, no teachers in the training department, no home department, no cradle roll. Today there are over a thousand schools, of which nearly 700 are even-ers, with over 6,000 teachers and 60,000 scholars. Mr. Reid proceeded to speak of the advanced methods along Sunday school lines of the present day as compared with the past. At the close the chairman announced the meeting and appointing a nominating committee consisting of Rev. A. Lucas, Mrs. R. A. O'Connell, H. S. Denier, Russ Colwell, Roy E. H. Noble, S. McLean, J. E. Vanwart, D. C. Fritter, R. M. Currie, J. V. Lynn, Resolutionist—Rev. C. W. Hamilton. Rev. E. Glover, J. N. Harvey. Addresses were then given by Mrs. J. W. Barnes, international superintendent of New Jersey, on primary department work and by C. C. Trumbell of Philadelphia on what is Sunday School. The active work of the convention opens tomorrow morning.

DR. GAMBLE TELLS OF ALLIANCE WORK.

Rev. Dr. Gamble was heard by a small audience in Kemptown street school room last evening. Dr. Gamble lectured upon the Lord's Day Alliance work, and judging by the number who attended, interest in this field is not widespread. The lecture itself was interesting and contained much information. An outline of the alliance work was given, and the speaker warned all those who wish to save the Sabbath from desecration that they must be active in their work. Purges are being set in motion to stop all legislation which in view the maintenance of the Sabbath as a day of rest. The necessity of this purges from daily toll for the working man was well shown by the speaker, and he dwelt upon the fact that the alliance was working to conserve the rights of the poor man. Dr. Gamble instanced a manner in which opponents of this alliance seek to annul its efforts. Petitions are often circulated, calling upon the government to annul any legislation forcing a man to spend the Sabbath in any way other than that his conscience wishes or he desires. Many thousands of Christians sign these believing them to be in the interests of the Sabbath, and they are followed by appropriate addresses delivered by Hon. C. H. Lablache, Charles Marcell, M. P., and John Hall Kelly, M. P. A banquet was held immediately after the speech making. The bridge is known as the Mercer bridge. Every speaker made reference to the great necessity of now all the interprovincial bridge at Matapedia to permit of the highway farmers reaching the Campbellton market.

CIRCUIT COURT AT WOODSTOCK.

WOODSTOCK, N. B., Oct. 17.—Circuit court opened here this morning. Mr. Justice McLeod presiding. There was only one criminal case, the King v. Harry Fisher, indicted for indecent assault. The grand jury found a true bill. Addressing the jury, the judge made a touching reference to the loss sustained in the death of the late Mr. Fisher, stating that he had studied in George Fisher's office. The late Mr. Fisher was unexcelled in the province as a practicing barrister, and he joined with the people of Woodstock in their regret over the loss sustained in the removal of such a talented and prominent citizen. The trial of the criminal case occupied most of the day, the jury finding a verdict of guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy. The judge sentenced the prisoner to two months' imprisonment in jail. The solicitor general prosecuted, and the defendant was represented by T. C. L. Ketchum. The court then adjourned until tomorrow, when the only civil case to be tried, one involving breach of promise and seduction, will be taken up.

IRVING'S BODY WAS CREMATED

LONDON, Oct. 18.—At an early hour this morning the body of Sir Henry Irving was removed in great ceremony to the crematorium, the name of which is not given, where it was cremated. The ceremony surrounding the event was due to the desire of the family to avoid publicity. Tomorrow night the ashes will be taken to Westminster Abbey, where in accordance with custom they will lie in St. Faith's chapel until the funeral ceremony is held. The funeral cortege will consist from the residence of Baroness Burdett-Coutts in Stratton street, Piccadilly, which the Baroness has placed at the disposal of the family. ### MAN AND WIFE FIGHT ABOUT SOME LAND.

Family Quarrel Aired in Equity Court.

Beverly W. Evans and His Wife Have Not Spoken to Each Other for Two Years.

Yesterday afternoon the case of Beverly W. Evans against his wife, Sarah E. Evans, was heard before Judge Barker in the equity court. The parties have figured in the police court recently, where the wife sued her husband for lack of support. It is now being brought to the equity court to recover a piece of land at Cole's Island, the deed of which was given to his wife. Mr. Evans, however, alleges that the land was bought with his money and that his wife got the deed simply as a matter of convenience. He asks the court to declare that she holds the land in trust for him and to order a reconveyance. It seems that the land was originally owned by James Vincent, brother of Mrs. Evans. His mortgage in 1881 to John S. Murray of Cole's Island for $235. There was an agreement made between the plaintiff and Mr. Vincent, whereby he should pay the mortgage off and get a deed of the land in his own name. The money was paid in instalments, some by Mrs. Evans and some by the plaintiff. It was said that the plaintiff was the first witness. He said he and his wife were now separated. He lived with her eighteen years, but for the last two years they had not spoken to each other. While he was working at Tapley's he had a passbook with which he drew money. He gave this book to his wife and allowed her to draw money when he was away. She had drawn part of this money, and he told her to open a joint account in the bank, which she had done. All the money she paid for the land belonged to him and was paid by his direction. The reason the deed was in his wife's name was because he was not well at the time, and said she could take the deed so as to give all trouble and expense of having anything should happen to him. At that time he had full confidence in his wife. John S. Murray, the mortgagee, told of receiving payments on the mortgage, and discharging the same in accordance with his agreement. For the defense Mrs. Evans took the stand. She claimed that her husband had given her the money which she paid off the mortgage. He had over-extended himself and had sold over the land and had only been on the property once. She was now living at Cole's Island, and had been there the last eighteen months. Asked why she wanted to sell the land, she said she was sick and desired to have the money to pay her $10 a month, but had broken the agreement and paid nothing since last April. On cross-examination she admitted she was trying to sell the land while her husband was still paying her this money. She had never told her counsel, Mr. Wallace, that this money was given to her as present, but she had not been so bothered by him as she was by Mr. Trueman, the lawyer cross-examining her. When pressed on certain points, she broken down and wept, but recovering, would express herself with great vigor. The case was adjourned until Thursday morning at 10.30. A. J. Trueman, K. C., and Walter Trueman for the plaintiff; Wm. B. Wallace, K. C., and E. S. Ritchie for the defendant.

Supreme Court AGAIN ADJOURNED.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—The supreme court adjourned again today until Monday. Justice Gauthier has arrived from Exeter and desires a few days' rest after a rough passage from England. Judge Sedgewick is much improved in health. The legal profession, however, is complaining over the repeated adjournments. Solicitor General Lamont will appear before the judicial committee of the Privy Council shortly, on behalf of the dominion, in the appealed case arising out of the deportation of Pere Marquette railway officials under the Alien Labor Act. Appeal is from a decision of Mr. Justice Anglin. Another case he will argue is against the appeal of the railway companies regarding the constitutionality of the federal act forbidding railway companies to connect themselves out of liability for injury to employees.

"A RUNAWAY GIRL."
The Pollard Opera Company returned to the Grand last night, opening a two-weeks' engagement in "A Runaway Girl," which was brought out first in this country at Augustin Daly's theatre, after a couple of seasons of London success.

It toured the large cities of the East for a season and created favorable comment for the way in which it was done, and particularly for several of the catchy tunes that sent people to the sidewalk, whistling. One of these was the rousing "Oh, listen to the hand" chorus, which was afterwards borrowed so often by so many other theatrical attractions, that it lost much of its identity as a part of "The Runaway Girl."

Last night, however, it won for itself three or four recalls, and "Follow the Man from Cooke's" had the audience in a roar, as long as there was energy enough left to applaud.

All of the youngsters were in good voice last night, and Roy Smith's solo in the first act, won recognition in the two encores that were given him.

The Helms family were much in evidence, and the diminutive comedians, the roles of Prof. Tamarind and Boccio, contributed much to the humor of the many comedy situations. Miss Daphne Pollard, as Carmenita; Miss Olive Moore, as Alice, and Miss Eva Moore, as Winnifred Gray, were conspicuous and entirely good in their juvenile work, which is much of the real quality of attractiveness attaching to the Pollard performances.

Teddy McNamara, as the jockey Pippin, carried the larger part of low comedy, and it was he who led the funny stunts in "Follow the Man from Cooke's."

The Pollards are appearing to large audiences, a very substantial gauge upon theatrical popularity. It also furnishes proof that the company are firmly established as Seattle favorites.

PENSIONS FOR TEACHERS.

A Nova Scotia school teacher has prepared a plan for the establishment of a pension system for retired and disabled teachers which has been approved by the members of the profession throughout the province and is now being considered by the Halifax School Board. The proposed system is based in part on the methods that underlie mutual benefit societies, though the teachers themselves are not required to furnish the whole beneficiary fund. It is proposed that teachers whose salaries are $400 or less shall contribute 2 per cent. of their salaries; those receiving between $400 and $800, 3 per cent., and those over $800, 4 per cent. To this is to be added an annual grant approximating the total amount contributed by the prospective beneficiaries. This is to be the foundation of a fund to be distributed to teachers forced by age or ill-health to retire after long service, in proportion to the salaries received during the last five years of their work and not to exceed the half of that average salary.

On the surface the plan seems feasible, especially since it is acceptable to those most concerned. Certainly something of the kind is needed, not only in Nova Scotia but in every province in Canada. With the single exception of good homes nothing is more essential to the welfare of the state than good school teachers and nothing is more certain than that under existing salary conditions the quality of the teaching class is bound to decrease.

For men, especially, the rewards are ridiculously inadequate to the value of service rendered, especially when considered in comparison with what a capable man may attain in other professions with no great ability nor effort.

Not only are larger salaries urgently needed to draw into the profession men and women of the calibre required, but something of the nature of this pension system should be provided to keep them there. A teacher increases in value with every year of experience. Under present conditions, when few receive enough to enable them to provide for the inevitable rainy day, and there is nothing save the loss of position awaiting them when their usefulness has passed, not many remain in the profession as long as the interests of society ask. The prospect of a comfortable pension at the end of the working days would undoubtedly tend to increase the length of the average teaching service and would, in this way, return the community good value for the money which such a system would cost.

An exchange, appropriately but rather unkindly at the time printed, following extract from a speech made by Sir William Mulock while in opposition: "To regard Parliament as presently a stepping-stone to office is calculated, in my judgment, to lower the dignity of Parliament. I do not deny that members of Parliament, after the lapse of a proper period of time, may have an equal claim with others to public office; but it will be a deplorable state of affairs if the idea comes to prevail that the best way to secure public office is to be a candidate for Parliament or a member of Parliament. Men will come here, not to serve their country generally, but the Government of the day, in order that they themselves may profit, and the interests of their constituents will only take a very secondary position."

CARNEGIE AND PEACE.

Andrew Carnegie proclaims that he has discovered a way to end all war.
If five or even three nations, he declares, would bind themselves together in bonds of permanent peace and arrange to themselves the authority to prevent all others from fighting, the age when war shall be no more would arrive and continue.

The plan is a good one, for it has been advocated by this paper more than once. We noticed no great upheaval of international acquiescence follow this advocacy at the time, but if Mr. Carnegie be more successful in arousing the interest of kings and parliaments we will hold no envy.

If the action and co-operative interest of the leading powers can be awakened the leading difficulty in the way of an alliance that would ensure permanent peace would undoubtedly be removed. It is self-evident, so much so that it seems absurd for any one man to claim the honor of evolving the scheme, that if Britain and France and the United States for instance were to bind themselves to submit all their differences to the Hague Tribunal or a similarly constituted international court, and to use their combined force to induce all other nations to adopt a similar policy, there would be no armed contests between any of the powers so long as that alliance lasted. And if such an alliance were once formed the chances are that it would be lasting.
Disarmament would not immediately follow, but as soon as the co-operation of all nations of dangerous strength was secured it would undoubtedly begin and, once begun, the nations felt the lifting of the burden of militarism.

Mr. Carnegie's address was devoted entirely to the desirability, necessity and even the possibility of putting an end to war.

the progress would be rapid.

Mr. Carnegie seems to think that if the allied powers would simply boycott any who refused to join them or who, having joined, violated the agreement, nothing more would be necessary to maintain international peace. The permanence of such a union, however, would be more thoroughly guaranteed by the existence of the nucleus of a sort of international armistice, and by military police force and the agreement by the contracting powers to jointly contribute men and money enough to quell any possible disturbance.

But, though the scheme seems feasible were the first step undertaken, and the end is so greatly to be desired, there is that first step. And there is little prospect, even with Carnegie showing behind, of that step being taken for a long time yet.

MR. TARTE'S THOUGHTS ON SIR WILLIAM MULOCK.

After all is said and done, Mr. Tarte, who has been in the cabinet with Sir William Mulock, is not satisfied with the statement of his reasons for retiring from the cabinet. "It is always very difficult," says Mr. Tarte, "for those who are not thoroughly posted in the political situation to understand the true reasons why a minister gives up his seat in the cabinet."

Three-quarters, and part of the time "half the other quarter of the official and public reasons are only for the purpose of deception. In politics and in diplomacy the truth comes out very late. It is certain that Sir William Mulock had not twelve months ago the least intention of leaving the government. On the other hand, Sir William is impulsive and impetuous, and contradiction annoys and irritates him. Fatigue growing out of his long years of labor may have led him to a sudden resolution to mount the bench, without a disagreement with his colleagues. The nationalization of telegraphs and telephones in the face of the recent Scottish debate on the Intercolonial, are sufficient to make Sir William feel that his colleagues reflect on him."

CONTRASTS.

I see the tall church steeples, They reach so far, so far; But the eyes of my heart see the world's great mart Where the starving people are.

I hear the church bells ringing Their chimes on the morning air; But my soul's sad ear is hurt to hear The poor man's great despair.

Thicker and thicker the churches, Nearer and nearer the sky; But alack for their creeds while the poor man's needs

Grow deeper as years roll by.

CARNEGIE HAS PLAN TO END ALL WAR

If Britain, France and United States Combine They Could Bring About Universal Peace.

LONDON, Oct. 17.--"Five nations, and three banded together in a league of peace and inviting all other nations to join them could banish all war in the future." This opinion was expressed today by Andrew Carnegie in his address to the students of the University of St. Andrew, Scotland, in outlining the plan for the league for peace, Mr. Carnegie said:

"If the principal European nations were not free, through conscription, from the problem which now disturbs the military authorities of Britain, we should soon have the demands for men of sufficient numbers, willing to engage in the man-making profession, to send their representatives to consider the question of forming a league of peace among all nations."

"Five nations co-operated in quelling the recent Chinese disorders and rescuing their representatives in peril. It is perfectly clear that these five nations could easily form a league of peace among all nations. This league would be a civilized world affects all nations, and often seriously, no nation shall go to war, but shall refer international disputes to the Hague Conference or other arbitration bureau for peaceful settlement. The league agreement to declare non-intercourse with any nation refusing compliance."

"Imagine a man cut off today from the world. The league also might reserve to itself the right where non-intercourse is in fact or has been declared to prevent war, to use the necessary force to maintain peace, each member of the league agreeing to provide the needed force or money in lieu thereof in proportion to her population or wealth."

"The emperor of Russia called the Hague Conference, which gave us the international tribunal. Were King Edward or the emperor of Germany or the president of France acting for their governments to invite the nations or send their representatives to consider the wisdom of forming such a league the invitation would no doubt be responded to and probably prove successful."

"The number that would gladly join such a league would be great, for the small nations would leap to the opportunity."

"The relations between Britain, France and the United States today are so close, their arms so similar, their territories and fields of operation so clearly defined, and so different that these powers might properly unite inviting other nations to consider the question of such a league as has been sketched."

"It is a subject well worthy the attention of rulers, for of all the modes of hastening the end of war this appears to be the easiest and the best. We have no reasonable doubt that arbitration in its present optional form will continue its rapid progress and that it in itself contains the elements required finally to lead us to peace, for it conquers wherever it is tried, but it is none the less gratifying to know there is in reserve a drastic mode of enforcement, if needed, which would promptly banish war."

Mr. Carnegie's address was devoted entirely to the desirability, necessity
and even the possibility of putting an end to war.

weeks, Della, eldest daughter of

HARD LUCK.
(Harpers Weekly.)

Two Irishmen, employed in the building of a skyscraper in lower New York, were rival strong men, and seized every chance to prove superiority in physical prowess. There was a difference of opinion among their fellow laborers as to which was the stronger of the two, and after much discussion Riley believed that the contest should be held on the sixth story of the building.
The bet was accepted, and in the presence of an excited crowd, Riley began his laborious task. He ascended the ladder safely until he reached the fifth story, when, the consternation of the spectators, he was seen to stagger, almost dropping his burden. By a great effort, however, he recovered himself, and finally deposited McGinnis on the sixth floor.

"I've done it, McGinnis!" he exclaimed, triumphantly.

"That yes did, Riley," answered Mc-Ginnis, in a disappointed voice; "but I had great hopes when 'yes' stumbled at the fifth story."

DIAMOND ADVICE.

PUT YOUR MONEY INTO DIAMONDS.
Diamonds in your possession represent money--more money than you pay for them after you have worn them a while, for the advance in price is very marked and there is positively no danger of diamonds depreciating in value in our time. Of course it is always necessary to choose wisely and pay the right prices when you make your selection; therefore it is essential that you should choose the gems at a responsible house and I have a record and a reputation I think enviable, and my very large stock of set and unset gems allows for the best selection in this city or province.

Respectfully yours

Brewster's Millions

Copyright, 1904, by Herbert S. Stone & Company

By GEORGE BARR M'UTCHEON (RICHARD GRAVES)

Nevertheless the dinner to be given by the grandson of old Edwin Peter Brewster was the talk of the town, and not one of the sixty invited guests could have been persuaded to miss it. Reports as to its magnificence were abroad long before the night set for the dinner. One of them had it that it was to cost $3,000 a plate. From that figure the legendary price needed for a mark as low as $500. Montgomery would have been only too glad to pay $3,000 or more, but some mysterious force conveyed to his mind a perfect portrait of Seward's Jones in the act of putting down a large black mark against him, and he forbore.

"I wish I knew whether I had to abide by the New York or the Montana standard of extravagance," Brewster said to himself. "I wonder if I ever see the New York papers."

Late each night the last of the grand old Brewster family went to his bed-room, where, after dismissing his man, he settled down at his desk, with a pencil and a pad of paper. Lighting the candles, which were more easily managed, he found, than lamps and much more costly, he thoughtfully and religiously calculated his expenses for the day. Nipper Harrison and Elton Gardner had the receipts for all money spent, and Joe Bragdon was keeping an official report, but the "chief," as they called him, could not go to sleep until he was satisfied in his own mind that he was keeping up the average. For the first two weeks it had been easy—in fact, he seemed to have quite a comfortable lead in the race. He had spent almost $100,000 in the fortnight, but he realized that the greater part of it had gone into the yearly and not the daily expense account. He kept a "profit" and loss entry in his little private ledger, but it was not like any other account of the kind in the world. What the ordinary merchant would have charged to the "profit" side, and he was continually looking for opportunities to swell the total.

Rawies, who had been his grandfather's butler since the day after he landed in New York, came over to the grandson's establishment, greatly to the wrath and confusion of the latter's Aunt Emmeline. The chief came from Paris, and his name was Debut. Ellis, the footman, also followed to "look" berth with Monty, though he had had in the house on the avenue. Aunt Emmeline never forgave her nephew for these base and dishonorable acts of treachery, as she called them.

One of Monty's most extraordinary financial feats grew out of the purchase of a $15,000 automobile. He blandly admitted to Nipper Harrison and the two secretaries that he intended to use it to practice with only, and that as soon as he learned how to run an "auto" as it should be run he expected to try a good, sensible, durable machine for $7,000.

His staff officers frequently put their heads together to devise ways and means of curbing Monty's excess extravagance. They were worried.

"He's like a sailor in port," protested Harrison. "Money is no object if he wants a thing, and—hang a server—no more complex simplicity. This is what he wants to see."

"It won't last long," Gardner said reassuringly. "Like his namesake, Monte-Christo, the world is his just now, and he wants to enjoy it."

"He wants to get rid of it, it seems to me."

Whenever they reproached Brewster about the matter he disarmed them by saying: "Now that I've got money I mean to give my friends a good time. Just what you'd do if you were in my place. What's money for, anyway?"

"But this $3,000 a plate dinner is a little going to give a dozen of them, and even then I can't pay my just debts. For years I've been entertained at people's houses and have taken cruises on their yachts. They have always been bully to me, and what have I ever done for them? Nothing. Now that I can afford it, I am going to return some of these favors and square myself. Doesn't it sound reasonable?"

And so preparations for Monty's dinner went on. In addition to what he called his "official corps of gentlemen," he had secured the services of Mrs. Dan DeMille as "social mentor and utility chaperon." Mrs. DeMille was known in the papers as the leader of the fast young married set. She was one of the cleverest and best-looking young women in town, and her husband was one of those who did not have to be "invited" too. Mr. DeMille lived at the club and visited his home. Some one said that he was so slow and his wife so fast that when the invited him to dinner he was usually two or three days late. Altogether Mrs. DeMille was a decided acquisition to Brewster's campaign committee. It required just her touch to make his parties fun instead of funny.

It was on Oct. 18 that the dinner was given. With the skill of a general Mrs. Dan had seated the guests in such a way that from the beginning things went off with zest. Colonel Drew took to Mrs. Valentine, and his content was assured. Mr. Van Winkle and the beautiful Miss Valentine were side by side, and no one could say he looked unhappy. Mr. Crowell went in with Mrs. Savage, and the same delicate tact in some circles it was almost delicate was displayed in the disposition of other guests.

Somewhere they had come with the expectation of being bored. Curiosity prompted them to accept, but it did not prevent the subsequent inevitable lull. Society Monty Brewster had yet to make himself felt. He and his dinner were something to talk about, but they were accepted hesitatingly, half-timid. People wondered how he had secured the co-operation of Mrs. Dan, but then Mrs. Dan always did go in for a new toy. To her was inevitably attributed whatever success the dinner achieved, and it was no small measure. Yet there was nothing startling about the affair. Monty had decided to dine conservatively. He did the conventional thing, but he did it well. He added a touch or two of luxury, the faintest aroma of splendor. Pettigill had designed the curiously wayward table, with its comfortable atmosphere of companionship, and arranged its decoration of great lavender orchids and lacy butterfly festoons of white ones touched with yellow. He had chosen for his guests a room with many rich shades, from pale yellow to orange and deep red, but Monty held out for orchids. It was the artist, too, who had found in a rare and happy moment the massive gold candelabra—ancient things of a more luxurious age—and their opalescent shades. Against his advice the service, too, was of gold—"rank vulgarity," he called it, with its rich meaningless ornamentation. But here Monty was obdurate. He insisted that he liked the color and that porcelain had no character. Mrs. Dan had prevented a quarrel by suggesting that several courses should be served upon Sevres.

Pettigill's scheme for lighting the room was particularly happy. For the benefit of his walls and the four lovely Monet's which Monty had purchased for his collection he had designed a ceiling screen of heavy rich glass in tones of white that grew into yellow and dull green. It served to conceal the lights in the daytime, and at night the glare of electricity was immensely softened and made harmonious by passing through it. It gave a note of quiet to the picture which caused even these men and women, who had been here and there and seen many that night, to draw in their breath sharply. Altogether the effect manifestly made an impression.

Such an environment had its influence upon the company. It went far toward making the dinner a success. From far in the distance came the soft strains of Hungarian music, and never had the little band played the "Valse Amoureuse" and the "Valse Bleue" with the spirit it put into them that night. The soft clamor in the dining room instantly ignored the emotion of the music. Monty, bored as he was between the two most distant dainties at the feast, wondered dimly what invisible part it played in making things go. He had a "vagrant" thought that without it there would have been no zest for talk, no noisy competition to overcome, no hurdle to leap. As it was, the talk certainly went well. Mrs. Dan inspected the result of her work from time to time with smiling satisfaction. From across the table she heard Colonel Drew's voice: "Brewster evidently objects to a long siege. He is planning to carry us by assault."

Mrs. Dan turned to Subway Smith, who was at her right—the latest addition to her menagerie. "What is this friend of yours?" she asked. "He is a very simple, uncomplex simplicity. This is what he wants to see. He is breaking it and find out what it is made of and some thing will happen when he discovers the sawdust."

"Oh, don't worry about him," said Subway easily. "Monty's the best of good sportsman. He won't complain, whatever happens. He'll accept the reckoning and pay the piper."

They were only toward the end of the evening that Monty found his reward in a moment with Barbara Drew. He stood before her, squaring away intruders, and she smiled up at him in that bewitching fashion of hers. But things were not as simple as they seemed. A terrible din from the dining room, followed by the clamor of crashing glass. The guests tried for a moment to look on with polite indifference, but the noise was so startling that their politeness became farcical. The host, with a little laugh, went down to the place of crashed orchids and spluttering candles. Frightened servants rushed into the room from one side just as Brewster entered from the other. Satisfaction halted them. After the first purposeless moment of horror exclamations of dismay went up on all sides. For Monty Brewster the first sensation of regret was followed by a diabolical sense of joy.

"Thank the Lord!" he said softly to the lull.

The look of surprise he encountered in the faces of his guests brought him up with a jerk.

"That it didn't happen while we were dining," he said, with serene thankfulness. And he recalled how he had seen him in the idle game he was playing.

CHAPTER VI.

MONTY BREWSTER'S butler was surprised and annoyed. For the first time in his official career he had been unobtrusively so far as to manifest a personal interest in the welfare of his master. He was on the verge of assuming responsibility which makes any servant intolerable. But after his interview he resolved that he would never again step his position. He made sure that it should be the last offense. The day following the dinner Rawies appeared before young Mr. Brewster and indicated by his manner that the call was an important one. Brewster was seated at his writing table, deep in thought. The exclamation that followed Rawies' cough in consequence of which they were so unobtrusively so sharp and so unmistakably direct that all oth-

BUTTE, Mont., Saturday.—Every man who has lived in Southern Montana any length of time has heard of the "phantom moose," that makes his home at the head of Wise River, and not one of the hundreds of hunters who have sworn to slay him has ever had the satisfaction of seeing the animal falter in his step, no matter how many shots might be fired at him, how near the distance how deadly the aim.

"I came to report, but unfortunately condition among the servants, sir," said Rawies, stiffening as his responsibility became more and more weighty. He had relaxed temporarily upon entering the room.

"What's the trouble?"

"The trouble's headed, sir."

"Then why bother me about it?"

"I thought it would be well for you to know, sir. The servants were going to ask for 'higher wages today, sir.'"

"You say they were going to ask? Aren't they?" And Monty's eyes lighted up at the thought of new possibilities.

"I convinced them, sir, as how they were getting good pay as it is, sir, and that they ought to be satisfied. They'd be a long time finding a better place and as good wages. They haven't been with you a week, and here they are striking for more pay. Really, sir, these American servants!"

"Rawies, that'll do," exploded Monty. "The butler's chin went up, and his cheeks grew redder than ever."

"I beg pardon, sir," he gasped, with a respectful but injured air.

"Rawies, you will kindly not interfere in such matters again. It is not only the privilege but the duty of every American to strike for higher pay whenever he feels like it, and I want it distinctly understood that I am heartily in favor of their attitude. You will kindly go back and tell them that after a reasonable length of service their wages—I mean wages—shall be increased. And don't meddle again, Rawies."

Late that afternoon Brewster dropped in at Mrs. DeMille's to talk over plans for the next dinner. He realized that in no other way could he squander his money with a better chance of getting it worth than by throwing himself boldly into society. It went easily, and there could be only one aspect arising from it in the end—his own sense of disgust.

"So glad to see you, Monty," greeted Mrs. Dan glowingly, coming in with a rush. "Come upstairs and I'll give you some cigar and a cigarette. I'm not at home to anybody."

"That's very good of you, Mrs. Dan," said he as they mounted the stairs. "I don't know what I'd do without your help."

"You'd be richer, at any rate," turning to him from the top of the upper landing. "I was in tears half the night, Monty, over that glass screen," she said after finding a comfortable place among the cushions of a divan. Brewster dropped into a roomy, lazy chair in front of her as he responded calmly to her question.

"It amounted to nothing. Of course it was very annoying that it should happen while the guests were still there. Then he added gravely: 'In strict confidence, I had planned to have it fall just as we were pushing back our chairs, but the confounded thing disappointed me. That's the trouble with these automatic climaxes—they usually hang fire. A still bolder queer sort of fall of Babylon effect, you know.'"

"Splendid! But like Babylon, it fell at the wrong time," he said.

For a lively quarter of an hour they discussed people about town, liberally approving the slandered and denouncing the slanderers. The confounded thing that had happened when they were making up Monty's list. The diners were not here, and she could afford to do as she pleased with him. He was broad and tall and she was not slow to see that he was indifferent. He did not care who the guests were or how they came; he merely wished to make sure of their presence. His only blunder was the rather distant recommendation that Barbara Drew be asked again. If he observed that Mrs. Dan's head sank a little closer to the paper, he attached no importance to the movement. He could not see that her eyes grew narrow, and he paid no attention to the little catch in her breath.

"Wouldn't that be a little—just a little pronounced?" she asked, lightly.

HUNTING AMBERGRIS

ON CAPE ANN SHORES

Fragments of the Precious Substance Have Been Picked Up by Six Searchers—Big Profits

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 14.—Is Cape Ann strewn with ambergris? This is the question that is agitating young and old in this city, and visions of untold wealth have loomed up in the eyes of many.

Julius Wenneberg, Nels Engstrom, Joseph Rice, Henry O. Nelson, Henry D. Corlies and John Harris have in their possession quantities of the substance, which they guard with care until they are able to dispose of it. They have sent samples to various parts of the country, and say that of $50 to $100 a pound have been received. The last of the "shores" to relinquish their hold until they have obtained all the profits possible.

But they were not discouraged by this ridicule and enlisted the sympathies of four others. Every day for weeks they have explored the shores of Cape Ann from end to end, the visiting the beaches and picking up now and then scraps of the same substance, which, in many cases, looks like dynamite. Carefully treasured were these finds, each man taking what he found. Now each has two to four pounds of the "ambergris," and they are still keeping up the search. Mr. Rice, one of the party, has been over every strip of beach from Manchester to Rockport, and has found much of the "ambergris." Mr. Rice says if the substance is as much formed by seaweed it would not burn.

Mr. Wenneberg took a piece of the stuff about the size of a small egg to Boston and showed it to Theodore Metcalf, an authority on ambergris. He says that Mr. Wenneberg's specimen for the small piece, but that he declined to part with it for less than $500. A dead whale was cast upon the shores last year, and it is supposed that the ambergris has come from that, as it is produced by the spermatoceti, while being a mild secretion in the intestinal canal. But if it came from the whale the wonder is that it is found all over the Cape instead of on the beach nearest where it was cast up.

Several times have vessels of the local fishing fleet brought home quantities of what was supposed to be ambergris, but in each case analysis showed that the conclusions of the fishermen were wrong. One vessel some years ago found a quantity of the ambergris floating. The crew insisted it was the genuine article and the captain to break up the whale's age that they might realize the fruits of their find. Their day dream was short, for they had only about thirty pounds of valueless blubber, and the vessel's owners were so much out on the voyage.

3,000 MINERS FOLLOW

BOYS IN STRIKE

HAZLETON, Pa., Oct. 17.—The strike of the driver boys in the Jeddco collieries of G. B. Markle and Co., which occurred a few days ago, resulted today in the strike of 3,000 employees of the Markle Co. The boys quit work because they claimed that the wages were being reduced. The superintendent of the company and asked that they quit work before properly lodging their complaint, thereby violating one of the awards of the strike commission.

A mass meeting was held last night, and it was decided by the miners to suspend all work today.

PAT CROWE HAD ANOTHER PLOT

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Wm. A. Pinkerton declared today that Pat Crowe, the alleged kidnapper of the New York City school teachers, was a well organized plot to kidnap and hold for $50,000 ransom the child of a prominent New York railway magnate. The name of the magnate was refused by Mr. Pinkerton, but he had considered the plot of sufficient importance to notify the railroad man.

The Cudahy kidnapping occurred at Omaha several weeks after the New York plot was discovered, and, as the plan followed there was along exactly similar lines, Crowe's name was never entirely removed from the investigation. According to Pinkerton investigation tended to show that Crowe had threatened to assassinate General Counsel Spencer, of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company at Hamilton St. Joseph, Mo., and then kidnap a member of Mr. Spencer's family.

TICKET SCALPERS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 17.—The first case of conviction and imprisonment for a ticket scalper has just been made through the activities of the Western Passengers' Association Protective Bureau. Edwin Goodman was tried and convicted in Judge McLean's court on a charge of having fraudulently used a pass of the Great Western Railway, and having changed the date of its termination. He has appealed to the supreme court, thirty days having been granted in which to perfect his appeal. Goodman had been renting out a pass which was issued to a member of the Great Western Railway, and having changed the date of its termination. High school commenced today in all the only have the one final examination.

Elmer of Oak Point, who have been visiting Mrs. R. G. Wilcox of 11 St.
James street, returned home to-day.

A's lasted only an hour and a quarter this morning. There were 360 blankets in the lot.

George Faulkner of Brantford, Ont., High Secretary of the Canadian Order of Foresters, is in the city and will attend a meeting of Court Yukon in Simonds street hall this evening.

Rev. G. M. Campbell left for Moncton at noon, where he will lecture tonight before the Sunday School Convention on "The Bible, Its Need and Its Power."

McCart's house on Queen street, this morning to elect Mrs. Spelman, who was drunk on the premises. The woman was ejected and then arrested for being drunk.

The steamer Aurora has come off the blocks after undergoing some extensive repairs and looks spick and span in a new coat of paint. She is now at Walker's slip and will probably go on the Grand Manan route the latter part of this week.

The programme of St. George's Society smoker has now been definitely arranged. The two principal speakers for the evening will be Mayor White and Recorder Skinner. A good programme of patriotic songs will be carried out.

There has been quite a demand for old militia great coats, and about all that have been available have been placed with members of the various companies. These coats while not outworn are out of style from a militia standpoint, but are very comfortable and are in much demand by teamsters.

The will of the late Harriet Bennett was yesterday afternoon admitted to Hill, Albert county, probator.

afternoon of Mrs. Margaret Price, wife of John L. Price, from her late resi-mail clerk, who has been confined to his house by illness for some weeks is able to be out again for a few hours each day and his numerous friends

Mr. Hipwell expects to be able to resume his duties in the course of three

A report which has appeared in other papers to the effect that Capt. Cole, of the wrecked schooner Viola, has been given the position of commander of the schooner Arthur M. Gibson, now at New York, is without foundation. J.
Willard Smith, the managing owner of the vessels, said this morning that Captain Cole is at Vineyard Haven looking after his wrecked schooner and to the reshipment of the schooner's cargo of lumber. Capt. Milberry is still in command of the Gibson. It is said that a Moncton paper was first responsible for the error.

STEAMER SENLAC IN TROUBLE.

The steamer Senlac that runs on the South Shore route is again in trouble and will be off the route for a few days. A telegram was received here yesterday by Messrs. Wm. Thomson & Co., to the effect that she had broken all the blades off her propeller in the vicinity of Lockport, N. S. Last evening the tug Lord Wolsey left here to tow the steamer to Yarmouth where the new blades will be fitted to the propeller. The steamer carries two extra blades and the other will be sent to Yarmouth by express. After the steamer arrives at Yarmouth it will take but a short time to complete the repairs.

STMR. HAMPTSTEAD WAS ABOARD.

had broken her rudder and run ashore near McDonald's Point at the head of the Bellisle. The tug Selma E. was sent immediately to her assistance, and arrived at Indiantown shortly after noon, having no trouble in pulling the disabled steamer off the mud bank on which she stuck. Repairs will be effected as soon as possible.

A LEAP FOR LIFE

IN THE FALLS

Boat Smashed to Bits in Collision With Tug Waring—Boatman Saved by Presence of Mind.

Yesterday afternoon a boatman named Coram only saved his life in the falls by having presence of mind enough to jump from his boat to safety on the bow of the steam tug Waring, while an instant later the small boat was ground to pieces under the tug.
The tug Waring, in charge of Capt.
McLean, was towing a scow loaded with coal through the falls, bound to Indiantown. Boatman Coram, with a few logs in tow, was rowing towards the city. Just after the tug turned into the falls the boat was seen, but there was no chance of getting clear of it while it had the logs in tow. If the boatman had cast clear of the logs he might have been able to clear the tug without danger to the latter, the tugboat's owners say. Seeing that a collision was unavoidable the man dropped his oars, and, standing on the gunwale of the boat, made a desperate yet successful spring for his life.

He caught hold of the tug's fender and crawled on deck, uninjured and happy to be alive. But he claims it was the fault of the tug that he is the loser of a boat and his tow of logs.
He is trying today to have the owners of the tug pay him for the damage done.

The captain of the tug claims that if he had varied in his course much to save the small boat there would have been danger of the tug and scow running ashore.

QUOTE THROWING CHALLENGE.

For some time past the quoting championship has been a matter of dispute between the Carleton club and that doughty aggregation from the Newman Brook district, in the North End, but now a third group of aspirants for the title springs up. The Star is requested on behalf of the "Unknowns" to challenge the Carleton quoting team to a match for the local championship on Thanksgiving Day morning. The "Unknowns" are in dead earnest and are by no means poor quotters. One of their number in particular is a crackjack. The mysterious four are willing to pitch for fun, money or marbles. An answer through the Star is respectfully requested.

BANKRUPT SYRIAN

UNDER EXAMINATION

(Special to the Star.)
HAMPTON, N. B., Oct. 13.—John Sayre, of Sussex, a Syrian, in jail here since the 15th inst., on a bailable capias issued out of the supreme court at the suit of Vassie & Co., Ltd., is before Commissioner G. O. D. Oddy to disclose the state of his affairs and possible possessions. He was examined by F. M.
Sproule, who has W. B. Jonah associated with him.
He swore that he owns no real estate in this or any other country and no personal property whatever outside of his wearing apparel. Everything he owned was destroyed by fire on the night of June 8th, in a store kept by him at Buctouche, Kent county. His book debts were very small and as the book in which they were kept was burned he has no means of knowing what they are. He had no insurance.
He has not put any property out of his hands nor paid any creditors since his arrest or given precedent to any other creditor.

He is being put through a close cross-examination by A. H. Hamilton, who has secured a pretty full account of his family and their doings since they came to this country, but up to the present nothing detrimental to his direct statement has been elicited. The defendant is also subject to a bailable capias, issued at the instance of Floods (Ltd.), St. John, which case will come on after the present is concluded.

POLICE COURT.

There were eight prisoners recorded on the police book this morning. Two were boys who had escaped from the Industrial Home at Silver Falls. They are Ernest Dixon and Aubrey Connelly and they will be sent back to the home as soon as they are called for.

John Watts the English pugilist was fined $5 for being profane on the north side of the King Square about 11.40 o'clock last night. Watts pleaded not guilty to the charge. Policeman Perry who made the arrest said that Watts with others were trying to get a man to take them driving, and when ordered to move on Watts became profane.

There were five drunks on the bench. Two were fined $5 each and the other three were fined $4 each. One of those who was fined $5 was George Adams who was spoken of in a morning paper as choking his wife. He was only charged with drunkenness this morning.

teal Shirt and Overall Company, and
