ITCHING PILLS—Symptoms and Cure.

The remedy is medicine, like penicillin, increase itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, when it is impossible to get any rest, and the patient, the private part, is some times affected. If allowed to run its course, it will result in a permanent "SWAYNE'S OINTMENT" is a pleasant, sure, and safe remedy, for Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Barbers' Itch, Hives, all kinds of eruptions, Stomach, Skin, and all other diseases. Price, 25 cents. Address, Dr.
J. H. McLean, 100, Philadelphia, Pa., Sold by all druggists.

A Successful Result.

Mr. Bloomer, of Hamilton, Ont., suffered for many years with a painful itching eruption upon the neck of his leg, which baffled all attempts to heal, until he used Burlock Blood Bitters, which speedily wrought a perfect cure.

An Agreeable Surprise.

Those who try Burlock Blood Bitters as a regulator of the bowels, or to purify the blood, all digestion, regulate the liver, and all kidney, strengthen the liver, and are agreeably surprised at the prompt benefit derived.

Prompt Measures.

Prompt measures should be used to break up sudden colds and cure coughs in their early stages. Hagar's Pastoral Balm does this most speedily and effectively.

Quinine Tonic is called the King of Blood Purifiers.

Letter from Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.,
Oct. 9th, 1884.

Well, the anteas are all up and the game has begun in earnest. A day or two ago Capt. W. L. Ellsworth accepted the nomination for President of the United States, tendered him by the American Political Alliance—whatever that party may be.
He is the sixth candidate, and will at once enter upon a "stumping tour" of Louisiana, Tennessee, and Maryland. The political situation is very uncertain just now and daily grows more so. It is impossible to even guess at the result. Blaine is making a vigorous personal canvass, and if the reports of Republican newspapers are to be depended upon, his progress through Ohio is one continuous triumph. It has been the wish of many influential Republicans that he should not take the stamp himself, and that course had,

Letter to Senator Morrill, of Ohio.

The Senator, who was a famous Republican leader, has been dead two or three years, and the letter was opened by his widow. Mrs. Morrill stated that her husband knew Mr.
Blaine well, and believed him to be thoroughly corrupt; that he held damaging evidence against Blaine's character, and that Blaine had several times begged on his knees to be given possession of this evidence.
She concludes by saying that she thinks Providence her husband did not live to see the Republican party brought to power, and to offer her damaging evidence against Blaine's
character, and that Blaine had several times begged on his knees to be given possession of this evidence.

character, and that Blaine had several times begged on his knees to be given possession of this evidence.

Letter to Senator Morrill, of Ohio.

The Senator, who was a famous Republican leader, has been dead two or three years, and the letter was
opened by his widow. Mrs. Morrill
stated that her husband knew Mr.
Blaine well, and believed him to be thoroughly corrupt; that he held
damaging evidence against Blaine's
character, and that Blaine had several times begged on his knees to be given possession of this evidence.

Odds and Ends.

—When the Vassar girls want to swear they say "buy gum."
—A Justice's pantaloons can hardly be called breaches of the peace.
—There is a running horse called "Spiral." Wonder if it belongs to the shirt-stud?

—What is the big corner in pork I hear about?" asked Laura, across the cherry tea-table. "The big corner in pork," replied Tom, "is the ham."

—Professor (to class in mineralogy): "Can you recall a mineral occurring in the liquid form?" Philosophical Student: "Milk; because it comes in quarts!"

—Will Mrs. Lockwood, candidate for President, admit that she is thirty-five years old? If so she will admit what no woman ever did; if not, she is ineligible for the office.

—"Fish" asked the waiter of a country visitor at a seaside hotel. "Wall, I dunno," was the reply. "Wait till I get suthin' ter eat, and then I'll talk with yer about goin' fishin'."

—At a Sunday-school in this city, a teacher asked a new scholar, a little girl, what her name was. She replied: "Helen." "Helen?" "Yes, urchin in an adjoining seat sang out: "What is it in English?"

—"Are you looking over the range of prices?" asked a customer of a store dealer, who was studying the market reports. "No; not exactly that," was the reply. "But I am looking over the price of ranges."

Mail Contract.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the Postmaster General, will be received at Ottawa until noon, on 21ST OCTOBER, 1884, for the conveyance of Her Majesty's Mails, on a proposed Contract for four years, thirty times per week each way, or more or less frequently, as may be required, between Montreal, Post Office, and the Railway Station from the 1st January next.

The conveyance to be made in a suitable vehicle drawn by one or more horses. The Mails to be conveyed from the Post Office to the outgoing trains five times per day, or more or less frequently, as may be required, and at such hours as the Postmaster General may from time to time direct. Mails are also to be conveyed from the incoming trains to the Post Office five times per day, or more or less frequently, as may be required, and at such hours as the Postmaster General may from time to time direct. At the Station, the Mails are to be delivered to and received from the Post Office in Postal Car, or the Baggage Master on train, as required.

Printed notices containing further information as to conditions of proposed Contract may be seen, and blank forms of Tender may be obtained at the Post Office at Montreal.

The Reign of Autumn.

The rust is over the red of the clover,
The green is under the gray, And down the hollow the steel-winged swallow
Is flying away and away.

In place of summer, a dread newcomer His solemn steps renews;
A crimson splendor, instead of the tender Daisy, and darling dews.

But oh! the sweetness, the full completeness
That under his reign are born!
Russet and yellow in apples mellow,
And wheat and millet and corn.

His frosts, so hoary, touch with glory Maple and oak and thorn;
And, rising and falling, his winds are calling Like a hunter through his horn.

No thrifty sower, but just a mower, That comes when his work is done, With warm a-beaming, and gold a-gleaming.

And while fair weather and frost together Color the woods to gray, We must remember that chill December Has turned his steps this way.

And say, as gather the woods together,
And pile the logs on the hearth, Help us to follow the light little swallow, Even to the ends of the earth.

THE WEED IN THE WHEAT.

There never was such a funeral in the town of Jefferson as that of John Thomas Galley, LL. D. He was buried with all the honors which Christian people could show to one of the most eminent laymen in the sect to which he belonged. The clergyman of every Protestant denomination went to the funeral in a body, charitable organizations throughout the State sent resolutions of sympathy, learned men and scientific bodies in this country and in Europe noted his death as a loss to humanity.

There is said Dr. Finlay, when he preached his funeral sermon, "in which this sincere and zealous man had not been a leader, whether it was in church government, in sanitation, in temperance, or in the management of paupers, criminals, or the wounded and the sick. All the weak and helpless children of God have lost a friend to-day who will not soon be replaced."

The town was filled with strangers of distinction who had come to the funeral.

They crowded the aisles of the Second church to hear the sermon.
Dr. Finlay preached with fervor.
There was something elevating in the mere recital of such great services to the cause of religion; and besides, the young clergyman felt certain natural exhilaration in the consciousness that all these dazzling virtues had belonged to one of his own flock.

It was a gray, murky day, and as he led the procession to the grave, he rehearsed himself sharply that his feelings were not also depressed. In his secret soul, while he was pronouncing the eulogy on his chief helper, he had remembered the countless little traits which had made him one of the most disagreeable of men. De mortuis, he reminded himself again and again.
What would have become of prison reform, the temperance cause, and Dr. Galley had not worked for them?
Nisi vis bonum, he whispered, even as he leaned over the grave.

Yet in spite of his horror at the thought, there could be no doubt that he heard the harsh taunt of the coffin on the coffin with a sigh of relief. He fancied that the pall bearers (all leading members in the church walked out of the graveyard with lighter steps, as if some heavy weight had been loosened from their necks.

One of them, Mr. Mansell, who had been also the legal adviser of Dr. Galley, joined the clergyman on his way home. They both walked with measured pace and downcast faces, as if controlled by the gloom within them.

"I can tell you, confidentially," said the lawyer, "that the church will lose no thing, pecuniarily, by this death. I drew up your friend's will, you know.
His yearly contributions will remain the same."

Dr. Finlay's heart gave a sudden thump. One third of his salary Dr. Galley had paid to this wealthy member; and, really, to lose so much just now with the boys at college and the girls to educate.

"No. The church," continued the lawyer, "lost a really composed voice, "will only lose his personal presence and counsel."

There was a profound silence.
Neither man looked at the other. As they passed the church which old Fowler, the sexton, was closing, they both passed involuntarily. There was nobody now to forbid the alter-cations which they both had been urging for two years. A square tower of gray stone—now! The tower was in both their minds, but they did not say a word.

Fowler looked the gate and looked back, shutting one eye, meditatively.
"Things is likely to be tore up this spring, considerable. I reckon?" The congregation was all set on building except—

"Fut! It is no time to talk of that, Fowler," said Mr. Mansell, sharply.

"That's true. In the midst of life we are in death," the sexton replied with a groan, which he felt to be proper to the occasion. But the old man went home to his dinner with a good appetite; indeed, he bought some tarts on the way, making quite a feast for himself and his women folks. The death of such a great man was a sort of holy day, and, besides, there would be no more now to nag and bully him, perpetually about the heat in the church and the sweeping and the coal bills. "A man come to my age," he said to his wife, "don't like to be watched as if he'd be a thief, Joshua."

Dr. Finlay, and it's the same landlord, "go down to my father to-day.
Finlay, and be measured for a new suit at my expense." I pitied the minister; but that was his way. He thought every man poorer than himself was a beggar that he could throw a penny to.

"Hush! He's dead, Joshua." Joshua was silent, and devoted himself to his tarts, but with a sense of comfort now to him.

To tell the truth, Dr. Finlay felt something of the same novel sense of freedom as he sat down to his larger board.

Three or four of the visiting clergy dined with him that day. Dr. Galley had always made it a rule to be present when the clergyman had guests, and had always led the conversation, bringing to some of his ponderous, inflexible ideas of natural reform, as a man might produce an elephant in a barn-yard. They occupied all the space there was, putting to flight all the domestic little parochial plans or hobbies of the others. He was domineering, ir
