[G. N. W Special to The Advertiser.] Komoka, Ont., March 13.-Thinking to escape the dangerously flooded roadway, a young man named McPherson, belonging to Delaware, drove into the fields about a mile west of here vesterday afternoon, and attempted to urge his horse through the water at a seemingly safe point. The animal entered the stream, but backed out again. The young man was warned by an onlooker not to attempt the passage, but disregarding the warning and the animal's instinct, he applied the whip. The swife current upset the rig, and threw him into the water. Nothing could be done to save his life. The body has not vet been recovered.

THAT WREATH

Which Sir John Thompson's Colleagues Haven't Paid For.

[C. P. R. Special to The Advertiser.] Ottawa, Ont., March 13.-A. H. Barrie, consul for Mrs. W. B. Davidson, of Montreal, writes to the press refuting statements made by the Citizen that the late W. B. Davidson, of Montreal, was guilty of extortion in demanding the price of the floral wreath supplied at Sir John Thompson's funeral by ministers who were his colleagues. After quoting from the evidence of Mr. wreath for the ministers, Mr. Barrie quotes Sir Mackenzie Bowell as saying in his sworn statement the other day at Belleville as follows: "I don't hesitate to say that if I had the remotest idea that as members of the government, we were personally responsible for what was done, I would at once have tried to have it settled up. That woman (Mrs. Davidson) ought to be paid whatever is proper and just." Sir Mackenzie, however, denies that the ordering of the wreath was an act nearly knocking down an Englishman for which, individually and personally, the members of the cabinet were re-

THE GROWING TIME

Business Prospects All Over the Dominion Are Bright.

Toronto, March 12. - Bradstreet's weekly review of Canadian trade says in part: There has been quite a marked improvement in business at Montreal this week. The general condition of trade is healthy, and payments throughout the country are reported by the wholesale people to be much better than this time last year.

Wholesale trade at Winnipeg the past week or ten days has been retarded somewhat by cold weather, but retailers are more inclined to stock up. The arrival of settlers is having a good influence on business, and the outlook Business prospects in the Pacific province were never as encouraging as they are now. The past ten days has been busiest in the wholesale trade at Toronto since the first of the year.

Boulogne-Sur-Mer, March 13. - Immense crowds awaited the arrival in the harbor of the special steamer bearing the Queen, while the town and all the vessels in the port were decorated with bunting, and the route was lined with troops. A brilliant gathering of military and naval officers and prominent civil officials boarded the steamer, and were introduced to the Queen, who, speaking in French, cordially thanked them for the welcome extended to her. When passing through Toulon, her Majesty summoned the subprefect, and expressed to him her sympathy with the families of the victims of the explosion of the naval powder magazine at La Goubran, promising to send a donation to the relief fund. All the customary honors were paid her Majesty on her arrival. The Daily Graphic, in commenting upon the announcement, says: "Coming immediately after the emperor's reception of Mr. Cecil Rhodes, it makes the complete reconciliation of Great Britain and Germany.' The Berlin correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "I am informed that Emperor William displayed great interest in the conference with Mr. Cecil Rhodes, asking many questions as to the latter's schemes, without, how-ever going into details or revealing his own views. He was especially keen regarding the telegraphic portion of Mr. Rhodes' project, and it is understood Coste, chief engineer of public works, he has not yet abandoned his hope or that Sir Mackenzie Bowell ordered the visiting Egypt to see the work that has been accomplished there with his own eyes.

RUNAWAY AUTOMOBILE. An exciting incident occurred on Friday at Nice, on the Promenade des Anglais, Prince Lubomirski's automobile, which had been left momentarily outside the Hotel Beaurivage, ran away. The machine tore along past the public gardens, and ran into a carriage and pair belonging to the late Baron de Reuter. Finally, after and his wife, it crashed against one of the pillars at the entrance of the Hotel des Anglais. The automobile was ruined, and the driver is in the hospital.

FRENCH VERSION

The Paris Eclair publishes details supplied by the Duc de Castres concerning the Mahdist attacks on Major Marchand's mission at Fashoda, de-claring that Marchand's fighting greatly assisted Gen. Kitchener's advance to Omdurman. The reappearance of the khalifa, the paper adds, proves that the sirdar's reported victory was a gigantic bluff.

The Filipinos Make a Feeble Response.

A Gunboat in Action-Pasig Captured by Gen. Wheaton's Forces With Small Loss to the Americans. Manila, March 13-4:50 p.m.-Gen. Wheaton attacked and captured the city of Pasig, East Ominila, this afternoon. The enemy made a stand for an hour, but at the end of that time were forced to retreat. The loss of the Filipinos was 30 killed and 16 wounded.

THE FIGHT. At daylight today Brigadier-General L. Loyd, Watton's divisional brigade, consisting of the Twentieth United States Infantry, the Twenty-Second Infantry, eight companies of the Washington Voluntters, seven companies of the Oregon Volunteers, three troops of the Fourth United States Cavalry and a mounted battery of the Sixth Artillery was drawn up on a ridge behind San Pedro Macati, a mile south of the town. The advance was sounded at 6:30 a.m., the cavalry leading the col-umn at a smart trot, across the open to the right, eventually reaching clump commanding the rear of Guada-loupe. Supported by the Oregons the advance opened a heavy fire on the rebels. THE RESPONSE WAS FEEBLE and desultory, apparently coming from a handful of men in every covert. While the right column was swinging towards the town of Pasig, the left advanced, pouring volleys in the bush. A small body of rebels made a determined stand at Guadaloupe Church, but The police authorities in Lon- the enemy was unable to withstand the assault. At 7:30 a river gunboat started towards Pasig. The rebels were first encountered by this vessel in the jungle near Guadaloupe. Steaming slowly the gunboat poured

A TERRIFIC FIRE from her Gatling guns into the brush. For all of an hour the whirring of the rapid-fire guns alternated with the becoming of the heavier pieces on board. In the meanwhile, Scott's battery ashore was shelling the trenches, and driving the enemy back. The artillery then advanced to the ridge of bamboo and drove a few of the enemy's sharpshooters away with volleys from their carbines. The artillery then advanced and met with little opposition.

In the meantime the infantry had been sent forward in extended order, the Washington regiment resting on the bank of the river, each regiment deploying on reaching its station, and furnishing its own supports. The entire column then wheeled towards the river, driving the enemy towards his supports, and then advanced on Guadaloupe. The artillery moved to a ridge, commanding Pasig and Parteros.

ON THE RUN. By this time the enemy was in full flight along a line over a mile long, and the firing was discontinued temporarily in order to give the troops a rest before making the attack on Pasig. The enemy's loss was believed to be severe, but only eight Americans were wounded. At this stage of the engagement it was raining heavily.

A RUMOR. London, March 13.-It was reported from Manila that Gen. Otis has ordered discontinuance of the negotiations hetween Spanish General Rios and Aguinaldo for release of Spanish prisoners on payment of a heavy indemnity. Such payment would strengthen the Filipino cause by replenishing the insur-

Tacoma, Wash., March 13.-Oriental papers brought by the steamship Victoria contain the following extract from the Republica Filipino, the insurgents' paper: "A splendid demonstration was made by Cavite women, without distinction of class or age. They unani-mously requested, with enthusiasm, to if the men perish in the struggle against the Americans for the defense f the independence of the Philippines. Amherstburg, Ont., March 13.—A meeting of tobacco growers of South Essex was held here Saturday afternoon to receive the report of F. N. Wigle, who has just returned from Europe as a delegate from the Tobacco Growers' Association, to look up a market for the native leaf. Mr. Wigle recommended that a guarantee fund be subscribed to pay the expenses of representatives of English firms to this country. One hundred and fifty dollars was subscribed. The meeting pledged the tobacco growers to provide suitable buildings for a warehouse and stripping factory for the English tobacco firms, should they decide to locate one of their factories at onto since the first of the year.

Not Expected to Live Beyond Easter Owing to a Cancer.

The Hurricane's Death Roll Increasing -411 Persons Were Drowned - Three Schooners and 80 Luggers Lost

Rome, March 13.-Although the pope is alleged to be so far on the road to recovery that no more bulletins are issued concerning his health, it is learned from a prelate high in office at the Vatican that the utmost anxiety continues to prevail among the papal entourage concerning the condition of the aged pontiff. It now turns out that the growth, or tumor, removed from the pope's hip, was of a cancerous character, and many people, especially those in a position to know the true facts of the case, look upon the amazing vitality displayed by the pope since his last illness as the final flicker of the candle. The pope's physician, who until the operation lived in the city, has not left the Vatican since the day it took place It is asserted that the pope sustained a shock by the operation from which he is unable to recover, and his moments of vitality and cheerfulness are followed invariably by the most intense depression, the latter becoming more and more acute as time goes by.

TERRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE. Brisbane, Queensland, March 13 .- A search steamer, which has just returned here from Cooktown on the Endeavor River, this colony, reports that three schooners and eighty luggers were lost, and that 400 colored persons and 11 whites were drowned during the recent hurricane that swept the northeast coast of Queenslana. DOG AS A BEAST OF BURDEN. London, March 13. - The practice of making the dog a beast of burden is nowhere so common as in Belgium, and gross cruelty results. The council at Antwerp has adopted resolutions which make curious reading. No dog under one year or twenty inches shoulder height may be used for draft purposes. The weight of the cart and contents must be adjusted to the strength of the animal. No adult, except a cripple, may be drawn by dogs.

AGAINST DEPARTMENT STORES. Berlin, March 13. - The government has undertaken a remarkable experiment in taxation in a bill compelling the large shops to contribute a larger proportion than the small ones to Germany's revenue. The bill provides that three factors are to determine the taxation-the number of branches, the number of employes and the amount of rent. It divides the branches into five groups-food and drugs, clothing, furniture, glass and jewelry. Establishments trading in two or more of these groups, and employing more than 25 persons, come under the new law. Those engaged in two groups pay 10 per cent of their profits in taxation; three, 15 per cent; four, 20 per cent; five, 25 per cent. Shops engaged in three groups, and employing 25 persons, pay an annual tax of 20 marks ($5) for each one of the 25, and 10 marks for each additional employe. Stores with branch establishments will be treated as if all were under the same roof. Co-operative stores will not be taxed under the new law.

Apparent Imminent Collision Between Great Britain and Russia Warded Off-The Bear Shows a Conciliatory Tendency-Good Pros. pect for the Success of Rhodes' Pet Railway Scheme-Medals for Brave Men.

London, March 13.-The government | was among those who listened to the has got itself into financial straits. The publication of the naval estimates completes the various items of national expenditure, which totals £112,185,200 ($560,926,000), being an increase of £4,471,200 ($22,356,over the estimates. It is probthat there will be a deficit of over £4,000,000 ($20,000,000). It is expected that the chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, will meet it by a reimposition of the former tobacco duty and an increase of the income tax to ninepence. A ray of sunshine in the financial situation is seen in the apparently booming state of trade, as shown by the board of trade returns. The imports since December show an increase of £1,-100,000 ($5,500,000), as compared with 1898, indicating that the purchasing power of the country is still growing. These satisfactory figures help the chancellor of the exchequer in taking a hopeful view of the revenue for the coming year, but they will not avert the necessity of new taxation. The Liberal press, naturally, makes the most of the government's financial difficulties, which are attributed to the government's policy of "doles to squirearchy," and to extravagances.

LION VS. BEAR. The British lion and the Russian bear came to uncomfortable close quarters last week over the Chinese embroglio, but the diplomatic switchmen again camp in Kordofan. succeeded in warding off a collision on the subject of the Northern Railroad, a conflict being averted by jingoes, and by a compromise, according to more impartial observers.

AN EXPLANATION.

The real explanation of the affair appears to be that Russia made a protest against the British railroad contract, partly as a feeler and partly as a warning. If the British premier had shown weakness, Russia would have persisted; but in any case, Russia, by her protest, elicited a ministerial statement in the House of Commons that the conditions of the loan did not constitute foreign con-Thus Russia obtained a pledge no such interpretation would be placed on the contract in the even of default, which is a further substantial concession to the Russian claims in Northern China. RUSSIA CONCILIATORY.

The Times thinks Lord Salisbury achieved a considerable success, which must unquestionably strengthen Great Britain's position at Pekin. The paper, however, also sees in the adjustment of the dispute a triumph for the pacific and conciliatory elements of Russian statesmanship, and, above all, a practical expression of the czar's determination to meet Great Britain half-way in the removal of all the regrettable misun-derstandings which have hitherto kept Great Britain and Russia apart. The Times adds that it is sure the British Government is prepared to give fuller the northern Chinese provinces to assist Russia in regularizing her position on the basis of reciprocity. This remark of the Times shows that the British now accept the Russification of Manchurla as an accomplished fact, and that they only expect their government to secure compensation in other directions.

THE ELEMENTS OF SAFETY. On the same subject, another correspondent cables: Russian prestige in China has declined, and British prestige has risen more quickly and decisively than was anticipated, when it, was cabled a few days ago that such would be the result, if Lord Salisbury maintained his resolute attitude. Salisbury's diplomatic victory over Russia at Pekin has been won by a direct threat of war. The situation, of course, is only temporarily improved by Russia's yielding in the matter of the railway loan. This surrender is at least a confession that Russia is not ready for a trial of strength. It is clear that Great Britain now has a year, perhaps two, in which to recover, without serious fear of forcible resistance, the ground lost during the past eighteen months. There is a strong probability that Russia will give way, as France has done all along the line. Russia knows, if France does not, that it would be the height of folly to allow Great Britain to incite her into premature hostilities. The strongest element of safety is the undoubted fact that Russia and France are anxious to avoid present war at almost any cost. It would be unjust and untrue to say that England either desires war or is willing to engage in war if she can honorably avoid it, but it would not be unjust or undiscreditable to England to affirm that if war is inevitable, sooner or later, she would prefer it now rather than at the time of her enemies' choosing. Therein lies the key to the present situation.

Still another correspondent, on the same subject, says: The proposals of the government for an increase of the are not likely to be seriously opposed in parliament, though some hostility Stomach and Liver are out of order. to the growing expenditure for warlike All such should know that Dr. King's services is evidenced by a services is evidenced by a service is evidenced by a service of the story of the services is evidenced by a service of the services of services is evidenced by a section of the preached morning and evening, and the large congregations that assembled heard a masterly discourse on each occasion. In the morning the reverend gentleman took for his text the words found in John's Gospel, iv., 24: "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." After stating that in these words Jesus gave a description of God, the preacher went on to show the materialistic and gross conceptions of the deity that prevailed among the heathen, the ancient philosophers, and even the Jews. The latter defined him as a stay-at-home God-a deity of narrow aims and passions. God does not exist in relation to space. Matter cannot hinder him or determine his actions. Matter wears and weakens by the lapse of time, while God is ever-lasting and ever instinct with life. In speaking of God as a spirit, the preacher said that in him man had a sense mystery-sublime and fascinating, dominating his feeling. He combatted the statement made by some teachers that the supernatural and mysterious is repulsive, and held that if the religion of Christ were robbed of its sublime mystery, men would naturally turn to systems more base and crude. The theory of Christian Science, he claimed, had been made attractive on account of its element of mystery. The heart of the ordinary man turns to the mysterious. Because God is a spirit, men's hearts go out to him in awe, if not in love. Our worship, said the preacher, must be spiritual. God is not mocked. Ritualism and empty formality do not deceive him; he demands the homage of the heart. It is claimed by many that all the worship of God is the worship of good deeds. So far as good deeds are the expression of devotion, they are valuable. We are reprobates if we do not feed the hungry and help the needy, yet these deeds have no value in themselves. God as a spirit values that which proceeds from the spirit.

God is everywhere-he is on Gerizim as well as on Mount Moriah. He is like the sun, whose beams find man wherever he may be. God, as a spirit, comes to the secret of our need, and until he come to the secret need of the soul we are unsatisfied. He pervades and fills immensity, he is stirred by every pulsation of our hearts; he knows all our cares and sorrows, weighs every burden we bear. If we would flee from him we run into his arms. In him we live, move and have our being. To us he is light, life, peace "Father, hold my hand." The loving Father takes our hand and we are content. In the evening Chancellor Wallace preached from Romans viii., 38, 39, his theme being God's great love for man. Incidentally the preacher spoke of these two verses as Paul's exuberant outcry, forming one of the most elo-quent passages in all literature. The speaker set for that Jesus was the disclosure of God's love to the world.

Nature furnishes evidences of God's power and wisdom, but neither nature nor the history of the world disclosed his love. Christ alone is the manifestation and measure of God's love to

REV. DR. WALLACE WENT FOR THE COUNCIL

Rev. J. W. Pedley Speaks Pointedly to the Municipal Board.

He Donounces the Ward System and Proves That by the Decrease of Licenses There Has Been a Decrease in Drunkenness.

"O Lord, our God, bless those who rule over us. Give to them all the wisdom that may ben ecessary to enable them to discharge their duty and the great responsibility that devolves upon them. O Lord, purge the city council of everything that is wrong, and grant, O God, that those men who are there, may have a high sense of their duty and their responsibility, and that they may remember that they are accountable unto God, and not only unto man." These were the words of supplication by Rev. J. W. Pedley, at the First Congregational Church last night.

The reverend gentleman took as his theme "The City Council and the Hotel," and choose as his text, Matt., xviii., 7-"Woe unto the world because of offenses, for it must needs be that offenses come, but woe unto that man (or men, said the preacher) by whom the offense commeth." It would be difficult, he said, to find a more compact statement. It was one that always struck those who were interested in the well-being of the world. The world is not an easy place to live in, if a man wants to do right. It is full of trouble, full of cares and sorrows. Human life was a serious problem, and no one ever looks upon his child, boy or girl, without serious thought of how they will grow up. We are temptable creatures, and temptations are right over us. Christ was aware of this, and uttered the words of the text, and while he recognized that offenses must needs come, he denounced those by whom these temptations came. manifold temptations, strictly human in their origin-the result of carelessness and thoughtlessness, and there are temptations multiplied and exaggerated by authorized or unauthorized instruments of the devil. "Better for that man had he never been born, or that he had a mill-stone round his neck and drowned in the depth of the sea." We are temptible in all things. the pure all things are pure, but we are not pure. We are like so many powder flakes ready to blaze and explode into passions at the first spark of temptation. The preacher dwelt upon the responsibility of those who had it in their power to put temptation out of the way, and took up the drink question, illustrating and ing by official figures that with the decrease in the number of licensed liquor places there was a proportionate crease of drunkenness. In 1874 in Ontario there were over 6,000 licensed places where people could obtain liquor; in 1897 there were a little over 3,000. In 1876 in Ontario nearly 4,000 people were put in jail for drunkenness, and last year there were only a little over 1,700. The vast majority of people who dring, drank much more than they want to, simply because the places are near at hand to get it. People never start to drink because they like it—unless the desire is inborn; but God for-bid, because then the thirst is hot as hell, and just as hard to satisfy-but because one says, have one with me, and another says have one with me, in a social way. But why, he asked, go out of London for proof of the argument? In this city in 1890, 944 people were arrested for being drunk; last year there were 416, less than half. In 1890 there were 56 taverns, and today there are 34. In 1890 31 people in every thousand of the population were arrested as drunks, last year only 11 in every thousand. For the last 25 years there has been a growing sentiment rising up against drunkenness. There is nothing respectable in being drunk in these The law is being enforced as it

Referring to the delegation of temperance people who went before the council, he said: "When I read the report in the papers I was greatly sur-prised. I know there are good men in the council, but if the council had their own way we would have two more saloons in London. Are they blind, or stupid, or immoral? Don't they understand the sentiment that is piling up in this country, threatening to overthrow all these places. The pulpit should speak out upon this question now—the proper time. There is no more need for taverns in West London than there is in South London, where the people wouldn't have them at any price. What are we doing in our ward? There is a man who represents our ward in that council, that I didn't Brock nobly fell, Midst carnage of battle, of shot, and

I don't know this to be a fact, though people say it is, and if it is true it is infamous Think of it—a city of this size and beauty, and intelligence, that cannot find decent, respectable men as representatives. To me this downs the ward system. A man by means of little circles of his cronies, tipplers and saloon-keepers, might easily be elected, who would stand no chance at all ed, who would stand the vote of the of being elected by the vote of the What would people over all the city. We must have a liquor traffic and taverns and liquor shops, which destroy the homes and break the hearts, and damn the souls, but woe unto him by whom these things come. I would not like to stand in his position on the judgment day. May the day soon come when Mr. Gladstone's idea of government will be consummated." He said, "It is the right of the state to govern; it is the business of the govern-ment to legislate that they may make it easy for a man to do right and very difficult for a man to do wrong. hoped that the license commissioners would checkmate the city council's ac-

As the Germans read Kipling and know his pedigree as well as we do, this is the only explanation we can offer for their otherwise inexplicable unanimity in blundering. It must be a singular experience, even for Kipling, to wake up from a serious illness and find that two great peoples have been interested in his fate, that an emperor has grieved for him in words having the weight of a political manifesto, and that his value to publishers has been increased

Big Four Hockey League, it was agreed that each of the competing clubs—Toronto Rowing Club, Water-loo, Stratford and Wellington—would each deposit with Treasurer Rowland $45 for the purchase of medals emblematic of the championship. Up to date the T. R. C. and Wellingtons have not paid up, and because of this fact Capt. Seagram, of the Waterloos, notified the T. R. C. that his team would not play. This explains the de-claring off of the last game scheduled. The Toronto Rowing Club claims the championship.

to play with Reading.

Pitcher Foreman has been released from London's reserve list. Third Baseman McDade, formerly of Hamilton, is looking for a contract for this season.

Boston has secured Catcher Clarke from Baltimore, the consideration being $1,500. The Washington club has sold Jud Smith and Al Wagner to Toronto. Among other reforms is the change made in league laws relating to "farming." Hereafter no team may hold more than 18 players on its reserve list, and before a club can "farm" a player to a minor league that player must be offered to all the other league clubs at the drafting price of the league to which the club wishes to send him. Charlie Zimmer has signed with the Cleveland club for next season, with the understanding that should the team be transferred to St. Louis he will remain in Cleveland. The Cincinnati club has offered $5,000 for the release of Catcher McGuire, of the Washingtons. Pittsburg is also anxious to secure this excellent player.

DAM BROKEN

When the Cove Bridge Ice Jam Moved Out.

A Considerable Loss to the City-Possibility of a Sluice-Way Now Being Built-Ice Fight Feet Thick.

The waterworks dam was considerably damaged yesterday morning, when the ice-jam at the cove bridge gave way. Huge cakes of ice from six to eight feet thick had been formed, and as they were carried over the dam, they pounded with terrific force on the the great cakes shivered the sloping planks, and the dam was undermined. About 1 a.m. 50 feet of the crown near the pumping house gave way. The gap is 30 feet from the south side of the dam, and is about five feet in depth. It is not likely any more will give way. Today two feet of water was passing over the dam where it is uninjured. The loss to the city is considerable, not only on account of the cost of repairing the structure, but also because of the loss of water power for the pumping station. To run the pumps by steam will cost from $10 to $12 a day. The repairs cannot be commenced for a couple of months, when a coffer-dam will have to be built, and the work proceeded with during the summer months. Engineer Moore, of the waterworks department, roughly estimates that to replace the structure as it originally was will cost about $4,000. It is possible, however, that a greater outlay will be decided upon. Last year, the council discussed the advisability of a sluiceway in the dam, and this matter may be again considered.

The breaking of the cove bridge icejam was due to the warm rain on Saturday night, and when it became known that the ice had moved out, residents of West London felt relieved. The river is now free of ice, but large quantities are piled along the banks.

meeting, and said he had heard almost every week from some young men who had received their early instruction from the Empress Avenue Sunday school. Some were ministers, some doctors, some dentists, and some in other responsible positions.

During the afternoon the choir rendered some choice music, especially a solo by Mr. Russel Collins, of the Wellington Street Methodist Church, and quartet by Messrs. W. Spence and Charles Berry, and Misses F. Ware and Mantell.

In the evening the Rev. C. G. Corneille, B.A., of Windsor, occupied the pulpit, and took for his text Ephesians iv., 15: "But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ." The speaker handled the text in a masterly manner. He is a young preacher, and has an eloquent delivery, and holds his hearers in rapt attention from first to last.

The singing in the evening did credit to those taking part, and especially the solo by Mr. Knowles, of the Wellington Street Methodist Church, and a quartet by Messrs. C. Berry, W. Spence and Misses F. Ware and Lydia Rossi-

A runaway attended by fatal results took place in Washington on Wednesday. Frederick Henneberg, of that village, was driving a horse attached to a light sleigh, when the animal took fright at something and ran away. The sleigh swayed too far and struck the fence bordering W. Gammon's farm. Mr. Henneberg was thrown out with great violence and seriously injured. He was conveyed to his home and medical assistance was immediately summoned, but he died at 9 o'clock in the evening.

His right arm was taken off about midway between the elbow and shoulder, and what was left was badly crushed and bruised.

In getting off the load deceased stepped on a fence post and slipped. He lost his balance and fell to the ground, lighting on his head, and breaking his neck. Mr. Elliott immediately summoned a doctor, but nothing could be done for the unfortunate man. Death was instantaneous. The accident is unprecedent d. He only fell a distance of five or six feet.

Crime and the Law

Hon. David Mills Addresses the been best met by a punishment less severe than that of the execution of the accused? South London Liberal Club.

the Work of His Department.

Duties of the Minister of Justice in Relation to Criminal Cases.

History of Noted Murder Trials and Their Developments.

The Exercise of the Pardoning Power and the Law Pertaining Thereto-English Opinions-A Very Compre hensive Address.

Hon. David Mills addressed an enthusiastic meeting in Trebilcock's Hall, South London, on Saturday evening, and was listened to with deep attention by an audience which filled the hall. It was graced by the presence of ladies. The meeting was held under the auspices of the energetic Liberal Club of the sixth ward, and the president. Mr. Philip E. Mackenzie, was chairman. He introduced the speaker of the evening in a neat speech. The address of the minister of justice, as will be seen, was out of the ordinary run, and of unusual interest. As Mr. J. B. Mc-Killop pointed out, it gave a vast amount of information, which could be obtained in no other way. It was conceded by those present to be most thoughtful as well as interesting. At its conclusion Mr. J. B. McKillop moved and Mr. F. E. Leonard seconded a resolution of thanks, which was car- fined, and you have the jury declarried enthusiastically-

Mr. Mills said: Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen, -I regret very much that I had not an opportunity of speaking to you at an earlier period. The session of parliant is at hand, and it would be, perhaps, inopportune for me to undertake the discussion of the ordinary topics that are at present engaging the attention of the country. There are, however, two or three questions that suggest themselves on the present occasion. One is the relation of Canada to other portions of the Empire, and the growth of the dominions of the crown into a species of imperial federation, to which the principles of Engparliamentary government are being applied, and which must have a constitution the result of growth, and not the contrivance of statesmen. There is also the question of SECOND CHAMBER

Upon this subject hostile opinions are confidently expressed in proportion as they are unsupported by history, and are opposed to settled principles. second chamber is a necessity under the English parliamentary system, and the probability is that without it, that system could not be maintained. We have had that system attacked in this country recently by the Patron organization, the ideas of which were borrowed from the political institutions of the neighboring republic, and which, if adopted, would be found, in many respects, incompatible with the continuance of the parliamentary system here. But, on the present occasion, I shall not invite your attention to either of these topics, interesting though they may be, and important as their consideration is to the people of Canada. OFFENDERS AGAINST THE LAW

It occurred to me that I could not make better use of an hour this evening than by addressing myself to some topic in connection with my own department, in which the public take a very great interest, and in respect to which there is no small degree of misapprehension. I am about to speak to you upon the question of the prerogative of the crown in relation to offenders against the law, which may be exercised for their pardon or for the commutation of sentences which have been pronounced against them. I observe by the character of the criticisms which are sometimes addressed to the public, by certain newspapers, that there is, so far as they are concerned, mistaken views with regard to my duty in reference to those matters. The notion promulgated in certain quarters is, that the exercise of the power of pardon is purely arbitrarythat it is an arbitrary discretion which tion, regulated by law and usage, but that it is an arbitrary discretion that the minister may exercise in any way he may deem proper. There can be no greater error than this. It is true that a minister may recommend the crown to discharge all the convicts from the penitentiary. There is certainly no legal limitation placed upon the crown in this regard, just as there is no legal limitation placed upon the crown in reference to the vetoing of bills car-ried through parliament. It is true that his excellency the governor-general, at the end of a session, might re-fuse to give his sanction to every measure that had been carried through the two houses. He might render the session completely abortive of any legislative results. But no one supposes that any such thing will happen. No one supposes that even a single measure will be disallowed.

THE PREROGATIVES OF THE CROWN

are exercised upon the advice of responsible ministers, and no one looks for any unusual departure from those convictions of the constitution which usage, and the tendencies of the age, have established, and which are as strong as the law itself.

It is sometimes said that a verdict of a jury and the sentence of a judge, under the law, ought never to be disturbed-that the deterring effects of punishment, are weakened by the pracice of commutation, and that a minster is highly censurable if he advises any interference. But those who make a statement of this sort are mistaken as to the principles of our system. The sovereign, at his or her coronation, takes the oath to administer justice in mercy, and so while the attribute of ustice is present at the trial and guides the deliberations of the court on behalf of the sovereign, it is only after the sentence is pronounced, that the attribute of mercy is heard on behalf of the culprit, and every extenuating circumstance, to which reason and usage has attached a value, have due

Interesting Resume of consideration given them by the responsible minister, in order that the doctrine of the coronation oath may have full force and effect, and in order that the law, which can only move in direct lines, may be so molded as to meet the requirements of each case. The sovereign, says Lord Hale, is assumed to be constructively present in the court for the purpose of administering Justice. Upon the sentencing of the prisoner by the court, the crown is complying with the first part of the coronation oath, but only with the first part. Further than this, the action of the court does not proceed. It is through the proper executive officers of the crown that the second part of the coronation oath is observed. Report is made upon the condition of the prisoner; any representation which may be brought to the notice of the proper adviser of the crown is carefully considered and inquired into; all mitigating circumstances are duly weighed, due weight is given to every new fact disclosed, and every extenuating cir-cumstance brought to light. It is by what is done through the proper executive authority that the > STRICT JUSTICE of the case which has been ascertained by thec ourt tempered with mercy; so that by the proceedings before the judicial department, and by the subsequent action of the executive department, that full effect is given to all the words of the coronation oath in respect to the trial of offenders. To propose, then, to treat the question of the execution of the convict as a matter lying within the arbitrary discretion of the home secretary in United Kingdom, or of the minister of justice and his colleagues here to totally misapprehend the administration of criminal justice under the English criminal law. in many countries, today, the crime of murder is divided into murder of the first and murder of the second degree. In murder of the first degree you have evidence of deliberation, of a settled purpose on the part of the culprit to take away the life of another person. Under their system each offense is deing, by their verdiet whether the accused is guilty of murder in the first degree or in the scond degree. This division is not made with us. Nevertheless, in practice, it exists; but it does so without any legal division being set forth. There are considerations as well understood nere as elsewhere, which may reduce the guilt of the offender, and which may lead to the commutation of the sentence. The law with us, instead of undertaking to classify homicides by a statutory provision, which a jury is alone to aprly, leaves the matter entirely in the hands of the responsible advisers of the crown, who, after a careful examination of the evidence, and the charge of the judge, and after receiving his report, decide whether a convicted offender stands in the first or second class, and whether the extreme penalty of the law shall be applied to his case as found, or whether, falling short of the highest degree of guilt, a less severe punishment shall be awarded. Now, the minister upon whom this duty devolves is not acting in any arbitrary or capricious manner. work which he undertakes is no selfimposed task. He is engaged in discharging a duty which the law contemplates, which settled usage has imposed upon him. And, aided by officers of long experience, I have no more doubt than I have of my existence, that the principle is more ac-curately applied, and far fewer mistakes are made under the royal prerogative, than if the matter were left to a jury, who would be without the legal training, or the legal experience which would enable them to apply the spirit and principles of the law, to I have stated to you that the crown is required to

and I have pointed out to you the two distinct steps existing in the case of a criminal offender. The one is the proceedings, in the case before the judge, and the other is the consideration of the case by the responsible ministers of the crown. Both steps, under the law, are necessary. There is the trial of the offender, the evidence submitted to establish his guilt or his innocence, the verdict of the jury upon the evidence, aided by the judge, and the sentence of the judge in case the accused if found guilty. After this, the case is considered, in England, in the home office, to which the law officers of the crown belong, and in this country, in the department of justice, the functions of which are, in this regard, much the same. No one convicted of a capital offense is executed without the sanction of the sovereign or the sovereign's representative. The ministers must advise, and if it was intended, as a matter of course, to carry out the sentence, all these subsequent proceedings which the law requires, in order to prevent an innocent man being put to death, or one not guilty of homicide in the highest degree, from being subjected to the extreme penalties which the law attaches to the offense, then all these proceedings by the executive government might have been dispensed with and so much of the coronation oath as requires mercy to be heard in the dis-pensing of justice could be repealed. It is clear from what I have stated to you that the law is not what those who criticise assume it to be. It is less unrelenting in its demand for blood, in point of theory, at least, than if no executive proceedings were had. I do not think that those who maintain that everyone convicted of murder should be executed, if they had their way, would perhaps find a larger percentage of executions than at present, for the jury, in many cases, would in that event, knowing that the verdict of guilty would invariably be followed by execution, acquit where they felt that there were mitigating circumstances, which ought on moral ground to be taken into consideration.

THE EMERSON CASE. You had, not very long ago in this city, one man shooting another down in a theater. There was no doubt that the one man deliberately took the life of the other. There is, however, grave doubt whether it was done to save his own life. I express no opinion upon the evidence, or upon the verdict, in that case. I say this much, however, that the jury exercised, upon the evidence before them, a pretty wide discretion, and they found the accused not guilty. Let me suppose that their verdict had been the other way. Let me suppose that some of them hesitated as to whether the verdict should net have been one of guik, could it be seriously argued that if such had been the case, and the sentence had been pronounced accordingly, that the ex-ecutive government, aided by men of long experience in the consideration of those matters, ought not to be intrusted with seeing whether the spirit and principles of our law would not have

I have noticed in two or three newspapers criticisms of the government for having taken into consideration the sanity of a prisoner. In one case, it was reported to me by a clergyman that a prisoner was undoubtedly in-sane, and he asked that experts should be appointed to inquire into his mental condition, and to report upon his case before the time fixed for his execution. I acted upon this very earnest advice as it was my duty, when it was announced to me that the accused party was insane. I exercised the function imposed by the common law, in strict conformity to the imperial statute. The government appointed two experts to inquire into the prisoner's condition. They reported that there was not the least doubt that the prisoner was insane, and his sentence was, upon this report, commuted to one of imprisonment for life. Now, this was not the exercise of any arbitrary discretion. It was not the giving way to some

to save a ruffian from the consequences of his crime. I dare say that at the time the man committed the crime, some years before, he was in the full possession of his faculties. He was confined in the penitentiary for another offense. While there, he confessed to a murder, about which he had not been even suspected. He was put upon his trial, and on his own confession, and upon cororborative testimony, that was produced, he was convicted. It may be that at the time of his confession his reason was giving way, but at all events it is absolutely certain that after his conviction, and while in jail, he was insane, as it was well possible for any human being to be. Now, the common law in respect to matters of this kind is well set out by Lord Chief Justice Hale, in his "Pleas of the Crown," in which he says that if a man in his solutely mad, he ought not to be arraigned during his frenzy, but he must be remitted to prison until that incapacity may be removed. The reason is because he cannot advisedly plead to he confessed to the offense, if, after his plea, and before trial, he becomes insane, he shall not be tried. If after his trial, and before judgment, he becomes insane, he shall not receive judgment. If after judgment he becomes insane, his execution shall be spared, for if he were of sound mind he might be able to allege something that would stay the judgment or the execution. So much with regard to the law in respect to persons of sound mind, when the offense is committed, and who subsequently become insane. But if the person was insane at the time homicide was committed, and continued so until the time of his arraignment, he must be neither arraigned nor tried, but, as a matter of prudence, an inquest may be appointed to inquire touching his mental condition, to determine whether his madness was real or feigned, and if by any oversight he pleads to the understanding.

THE PAUL BROWN CASE. Now, in a recent case at Winnipeg, one Paul Brown, who had been confined for attempt at taking the life of a man, for three years in the penitentiary, was discharged, and given a certain amount of money to take him whither he wanted to go. He was no sooner out of the penitentiary than he bought a revolver, and seeing another colored man on the outskirts of the city, just after sunset, drew the pistol and shot him. The man's wife, who was with him, ran away, and the discharged convict shot at her. Immediately after loading his revolver again he shot a young woman whom he met on the street, though not fatally. He was committed to prison. He was put on his trial for murder. He was without counsel, and the judge appointed two young lawyers to defend him. They knew nothing of his history, beyond what had happened in the vicinity, and he was careful not to give them any information. When they proposed to plead on his behalf, insanity, for his criminal conduct seemed without motive, he became very angry, and wanted to plead guilty, but the court entered a plea of not guilty in order that the evidence in respect to the crime of which he was accused might be regularly given. The jail physician and many others were of opinion that he was in the full possession of his faculties. The superintendent of the asylum was inclined to hold the contrary view, but stated that he had not sufficient time in the two interviews which he had with the prisoner, to form a decided opinion upon the subject. Neither the surgeon nor the warden of the penitentiary at Stoney Mountain, in which he had been confined, were called. The young woman whom he had wounded was not called. I do not know whether she was in the city at the time or not. But there was no evidence whether she had any dispute with him or not, or whether his shooting was wholly without motive. He was found guilty. After his conviction, he desired to communicate with a party residing at Cleveland, Tenn., which for the first time, made it possible to make any inquiry in respect to his antecedents. It was learned that he had

FOR SOME TIME BEEN INSANE; that he had attempted to murder his sister; that he had been found insane by competent authorities; that he had been put in charge of the keeper of the county poorhouse; that he had at-tempted to kill the keeper and certain members of his family, and that to protect themselves against the possibility of being murdered, they had kept him chained to the wall of the poorhouse for two years, which fully explained why he dreaded being found insane, and preferred to confess to being guilty of murder. Experts were appointed to inquire into his mental condition, and they pronounced him insane. It was found, upon inquiry at the Manitoba penitentiary, that he had attempted to take his own life while he was confined there, and that his fellow-prisoners were afraid to work with him in the same room. I inquired of the warden of the penitentiary in respect to him, and he reported that he had no doubt whatever as to his mental condition. Now, in bearing in mind that the law forbids the execution of an insane man that it makes it the duty of executive authority to inquire into his condition, when insanity is alleged, is it not preposterous to say that it is the duty of a minister of the crown to disregard his oath of office, and the provisions of the law, and to permit the execution of a man whom the law says, by reason of his mental incapacity, is incapable of felonious intent, which is as essential as the act itself to stamp upon it the character of criminality?

Let me take another instance, which has been the subject, in some degree, of adverse criticism. I mean the com-mutation of the sentence of young Guillemain, in the Province of Quebec, who was charged with the murder of his uncle, and who was convicted of that offense. Guillemain was a young fellow about 17 years of age, but small for his age, who had removed from the Province of Quebec to the State of Maine with his father and mother some two years before. He had returned to his uncle, one Lapointe, at the village of St. Liboire, with whom he resided while visiting his old acquaintances, and he did occasional work to pay for his board. Lapointe had gone to the city of St. Hyacinthe, some 12 miles distant, to collect $1,200 that was due to a brother in the United States. It was on Saturday. When he went thither, he was unable to obtain the money, but he procured with the assistance of his father, from the Eastern Townships Bank $200, which, with some other money, made $214 that he had uphis person when he took evening train to return on return the home. That train arrived in the village at 6:05. When Lapointe's wife heard the locomotive whistle, she told her nephew, young Guillemain, to go out and catch the horses and put them in the stable, for his uncle would be angry if he found them still out. The boy went out about 6 o'clock, and returned some fifteen minutes later, stating that he was unable to find the horses. He sat down for ten or fifteen minutes talking to a cousin, who had come in from the adjoining house, and they were engaged talking and telling stories. Mrs. Lapointe again urged her nephew to get the horses, and put them in the stable. He took a lantern and went out, Lapointe's boy, about 12 years of age, accompanying him. hey obtained the horses and brought them back. It was subsequently proved by those who walked over the ground, that it would take fifteen or seventeen min- turn to the Province of Quebec for utes to accomplish this task. This would make the time of Guillemain's sound memory commits an offense, return about a quarter to seven and before he is arraigned becomes ab- o'clock. A few minutes later a man came to the door, and said that there was a person dead or drunk lying in the street a few yards away—about 50 feet—and asked for a light. A little delay arose in trying to light a lantern, his indictment. Even though he was of sound mind when examined, and when into an adjoining house to get a light. When he came out Lapointe's boy was standing by the corpse with a lantern. Blood was running from it. It was liquid and smoking. Two doctors, who were examined in the case, said that the man's death could not have occurred more than five minutes previously. Three boys who were taking a load of straw into the town said that they met Lapointe. He was walking towards home, and, at a short distance, a man was walking behind him in the same direction. The boys went but a little way when they met three men in a butcher's wagon-two sitting in the seat, and the third man standing up on the back seat behind them, and they threw them out. They stopped and saw the body of a man LYING IN THE ROAD. Now, this was certainly within five horses, when he was alone; and the minutes of the time Lapointe was met second time he went out with Laindictment and the judge observes on the trial that he is insane, he may disthe trial that he is insane, he may disthe trial that he is insane, he may dis-When Lapointe's body was examined, it was found the back of his skull was to jail, to await trial on recovery of his broken. It had been broken by a blow given upwards, and the question arose was the small man walking behind him? Was he a party who knew Lapointe was to obtain a considerable sum of money that day, and who had made up his mind to commit murder in order that he might make a suc-cessful robbery? Or was Lapointe killed by the point of the shaft and by being driven over by the men in the butcher's wagon? They say they did not strike him; they would have felt a his pocket. If the man was killed by shock if they had. They say that their horse did not step upon him. One of the theories as to the cause of his death was that he had been struck on the back of the head by the point of the shaft of the rig and killed. Another theory was that the boy Guillemain, knowing that his uncle would obtain money, had gone out to meet him, and came back behind him, and had struck him a fatal blow from behind. A third theory was that a blacksmith of a not very good reputation, who lived a short distance away, who had driven to St. Hyacinthe with a horse and buggy left St. Hyacinthe before Lapointe left by train, so as to return home before Lapointe. He traded horses by the way, and thus was not likely to be recognized in the evening while driving a strange animal. It was alleged that he left his horse at his shop, and it was suggested that he might have armed himself with a hammer, and thus had

The boy Guillemain, a few days later, borrowed $3 from his aunt to return home, as he stated he had not sufficient money for that purpose. When he reached his home he had a large number of $10 bills of the Eastern Townships Bank upon his person; and when the report went abroad of Lapointe's murder, the boy was suspected, and a warrant of extradition was about to be issued, but when the boy discovered this, he seemed to be anxious to retrial, and he did return. The fact that money was found on him of the denomination which his uncle possessed was accepted as conclusive that the deed was committed by him, and he also told several stories with regard to the matter to the detective who examined him, which were inconsistent with each other. In one of these he accused the little blacksmith of having suggested the robbery of his uncle. Upon the strong suspicion, from having the money in his possession, he was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. Now, I have no hesitation in saying, upon the evidence produced, that conviction ought not to have taken place. It was shown most conclusively that the uncle, Lapointe, had made three calls on his way home-at the hotel, at the postoffice, and at a grocery, where he stopped to buy a small quantity of tea; that apart from these calls it would have taken 25 minutes to have walked from the station to his house. If you allow five minutes for each of the calls which he made, this would be 40 mirutes which would bring him to the place where he was found dead at 6:45. Now, it was physically impossible that Lapointe could have been at the place where his body was found during the first period occupied by Guillemain in looking for They went to the stables and thence directly to the field, and returned, putting the horses in the stable, and then went into the house, so that if there was any respect paid to this testimony -and all the surrounding circumstances fit into it—the boy could never have murdered his uncle. He knew his uncle was to receive money, and it may be that after the uncle was killed by the shaft of the butcher's wagon, or by the horse running over him, the boy, knowing that his uncle expected to obtain money, may have taken it from the party who was by some suspected, and whom the boy said suggested rob-bery, it is clear that the butcher's on the part of the government to have allowed the law to take its course and the more especially as the difficulties of the case, which impressed themselves strongly upon my own mind, and upon the mind of my acting deputy, who also read the evidence had equally impressed the mind of the judg who presided at the trial in the same wav.

Mr. Walpole, when secretary of state for the home department, testified before a committee that inquired into the manner in which the power of pardoning was exercised, that while they sometimes disregarded the advice of a judge against the prisoner, in no case did they disregard the advice of a judge to spare the life of the prisoner. In the year 1866 the whole subject of the manner in which the power to pardon was exercised by the home office was made the subject of discussion, and several ex-secretaries of state for the home department, and under secretaries were examined, and their testimony upon the subject is of the greatest value. There were also examined many distinguished judges, who were familiar with the principles upon which considerations of mercy modify the sentences pronounced by the courts of justice. Lord Cranworth was one of the witnesses examined, and he observed that a large percentage of the persons convicted of murder were not punished capitally, but are either pardoned or have their sentence commuted to imprisonment for life. He observes that no matter what changes may be made in the law, resort must always be had in the end to the crown for the purpose of deciding whether a sentence shall be carried into execution or whether some modification in the direction of lessening the punishment shall be made. He gave it as his opinion that the advisers of the crown would not be justified in taking the ground that they would in all in-stances abide by the verdict, and that mercy should be exercised upon the assumption that the verdict was al-ways right. In his opinion, such a principle cannot be maintained. When the home secretary was convinced that the evidence was not sufficient to have warranted a conviction, and where the doubt was sufficiently strong to justify the interposition of the crown, it was rather a ground for pardon than for commutation. Now, this is a kind of case that seldom arises, but it sometimes does arise, and the minister of justice and his deputy, or acting deputy, are compelled to consider it. Let me suppose that a judge declares that, in his opinion, the evidence in the case is as consistent with innocence as with guilt, and if he had been a juryman he would not have concurred in the verdict of a jury who found the accused guilty of murder, what course is minister to advise in such a case? If the jury, according to the view of the presiding judge, had come to a right conclusion, they would have said

"Not guilty," Is it not clear, in such case, that

THE ONLY PROPER COURSE to adopt is that suggested by Lord

Cranworth-that pardon, and not commutation, should be recommended? Then you have, at times, cases in which a party is put upon his trial for murder. The evidence, on the whole, shows that the person acted from sudden impulse; that he had received great provocation; that he was put in jeopardy, and that, in fact, a verdict for manslaughter, and not for murder, ought to have been rendered. Nevertheless, the jury has found the accused guilty of murder. The evidence, along with other proceedings of the court, are sent to the department of justice. It is read with great care. It is submitted along with the report made by the judge. Does anyone suppose that a minister would discharge his duty, if, in such a case, he did not recommend the commutation of the sentence. and that such a degree of punishment be awarded as would have been ordered by the judge, in case a verdict of manslaughter had been found?

Mr. Baron Martin, in the inquiry to which I have referred, said no matter how many courts of appeal you may establish, you must come to the secretary of state at last, where the prisoner may get the benefit of any fair doubt which may have arisen at the trial. And Lord Wensleydale also observed that no matter how many trials take place, there must always, in the last resort by an appeal to the mercy of the sovereign, and so the consideration of the home office, in the end, must come, and, in his opinion, no more satisfactory arrangement could

Mr. Justice Wills, in the same inquiry, said that in every system of criminal justice, there must be some one in whom the power is vested to save the life of a condemned man, even at the last moment, if circumstances appear to warrant it. And this prerogative of mercy must remain, and the crown must intrust it to some responsible functionary.

Sir George Grev, in discussing this question, when the JESSIE MACLACHLAN CASE

was before the House of Commons, declared the principles upon which thought the home secretary was bound to act. In this case, the murder took place in the house of a Mr. Fleming. while the family were away at the seaside. Mr. Fleming, a man of 87 years of age, and a housekeeper, were the only persons in the place. The housekeeper was murdered, and there were indications of a desperate struggle. Mr. Fleming had gone to bed. and had left the deceased woman in the kitchen. Towards morning he was awakened by a cry of distress, but as he was old and feeble he did not ascertain the cause. The next morning he found the door of the deceased's room locked, and he thought she had gone out. Saturday and Sunday passed, and it was not until Monday afternoon that the door was broken open, and the body found, and it was discovered that silver plate and other articles had been stolen. The plate was discovered at a pawnbroker's, where Jessie Maclachlan had pawned it. She was committed to prison, and was tried in September. She was indicted for robbery and murder, and pleases "not guilty." After twenty minutes' deliberation, the jury found her guilty, and the judge sentenced her. After the verdict, and before the crown moved for sentence, the counsel for the prisoner read a statement by her, charging the old man with the murder, and that he had bribed her to silence with the gift of the plate. The judge pronounced sentence, declaring that the accusation only aggravated her crime, and stating that he fully concurred in the verdiet of the jury. The whole country was divided-one portion believing that the woman alone was guilty, and others believing the woman's story. A petition, numerously signed, was sent to the home secretary, asking for commutation. The jury held a private meeting to consider the woman's statement, and to decide whether they should join in the appeal for mercy. Fourteen jurymen attended, all of whom disbelieved her story, and resolved not to interfere. The petition was forwarded to the home office. In Scotland, the practice is to send a petition for mercy to the head of the criminal court, and not to the judge (Continued on page 7.)

to take steps with a view to incorporation, held a meeting at the Board of Trade rooms on Saturday afternoon, and decided to await until the act under which they will apply for incorporation is framed. Their object is to protect themselves against abuses of the buyers, in connection with the inspection and sale of cheese. The pros and cons of the matter were discussed. The action of the factorymen in no way affects the cheese board, and in some of the members pointed out that the sellers were themselves to blame for any injustice at the hands of the buyers. Instances were known where the maker had instructed the salesman that the cheese was first-class when he knew it wasn't, and as his reputation was at stake, the buyer was given $50 or $75 to take the cheese and say nothing about it. One of the committee men pointed out that the seller never could control the buyer by legislation; terests. Good cheese often went wrong because of the lack of storing facilities, and poorly-equipped curing rooms. If the cheese was right the seller should be in a position to make the buyer meet him, but as matters were now in the majority of factories, the buyers could force the factorymen down to a ridiculously low figure, knowing that if the man didn't sell his cheese it would spoil. The committee have been given to understand that there is a likelihood of the call system being done away with on the local board, and that several factories in this district will agents ship in consignment

Their hand bell ringing is a feature in itself. One of them plays a trombone solo, using his feet to manipulate the slides. ROLAND REED TOMORROW NIGHT Roland Reed, as has been his custom for a number of years, will present a new play at the Grand tomor-row night. This season the piece se-lected is a farcical play from the pen of that clever writer Sydney Rosenfeld, who has already been highly successful in his efforts for Mr. Reed. His "Lend Me Your Wife," "The Club Friend," and "The Politician," will be pleasantly remembered as being high-ly successful plays in Mr. Reed's re-pertoires. The new comedy is called "His Father's Boy," and has some of the wildest complications ever laughed at. Mr. Reed is seen in a character that is particularly well adapted to him, and he thinks it is one of the best roles he has had in years. The story of the play is most interesting, and is sure to entertain Mr. Reed's many admirers. The play will be prostockers; the general demand was fair duced here in Mr. Reed's usual careful manner, as he has associated with him this season perhaps the strongest company that has ever accompanied him on any of his tours. Good seats are yet to be had, and as the prices are quite popular, there is no doubt that they will all be gone when the doors open on Wednesday night. "A perfect pianist," "A musical hero" describes Rosenthal, and yet the phrase has a properly discreet and modest ring. To the alertness of legerdemain and the strength of a blacksmith he adds the art and his instrument with the ferocity of a tiger and the industry of a beaver during the past eight years, in consequence of which the piano, a hard beast to subdue—has learned to know his master, trembles in his clutch, roars at his command, or emits the feeblest, humblest, pianissimos at his caressing touch. His interpretations speak of the present—of fulfillment, not of promise, of realization, not of regret. He is a player of the "now," but great, splendid, useful, and beneficent as the present moment always roars at his command, or emits the beth; John Crinklaw, White Oak; S. Probable Loss of the Allan Steam er Castilian

Yarmouth, N. S., March 12.-News of the stranding of the handsome new Allan liner Castilian on Gannet Rock Ledge, off the coast of Yarmouth, arrived in town tonight by telephone from Tusket Wedge.

The Castilian left Portland, Maine, at 1 o'clock yesterday for Liverpool, with a cargo consisting of 100,000 bushthe only way to force the buyer was tons of general Ontario provisions, such by competition. This could be done if the factorymen were alive to their inhorses, 382 head of cattle and 400 sheep. There were 20 cabin passengers, 8 intermediate and 22 steerage. During the night the weather was hazy, and they proceeded slowly and cautiously, carefully looking out for buoys or other signs of land. Suddenly breakers were seen, and at once she struck forward ness and promptness. The engines were

THE OLD WAY.

Of Treating Dyspepsia and Indigestion by Dieting a Dangerous and Useless One.

We say the old way, but really it is very common one at present time, and many dyspeptics and physicians as well consider the first step to take in attempting to cure indigestion is to diet, either by selecting certain foods and rejecting others, or to greatly di-minish the quantity usually taken; in other words, the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essen-

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but still the moment dyspepsia makes its appearance a course of dieting is at once advised All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting or starvation to a man suffering from dyspepsia, because indigestion itself starves every organ and every nerve and every fiber in the body.

What the dyspeptic wants is abundant nutrition, which means plenty of good, wholesome, well-cooked food and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it. This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted, and this is the method by which they cure the worst cases of dyspepsia; in other words, the patient eats plenty of wholesome food and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest it for him. In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. One of these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat or eggs.

Your druggist will tell you that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the pur-est and safest remedy for stomach The sale for seats, which began this aroubles, and every trial makes one morning, for the eminent pianist, Rostion. #### STILL IMPROVING.

New York, March 12.-Rudyard Kipling passed a restless night, suffering a good deal of pain. Today, however, he was a good deal better, but not yet in a condition to have friends admitted refinement of a woman and the sincerity of a faithful and humble apostle of art. From this extreme measure of praise it seems hardly worth while to substract anything new, since facts temperature is very little above the prove that Rosenthal has worked at his normal, and he is able to take a considerable amount of solid food. Today Mr. Kipling saw his two children for a short time. His little girl, Elsie, is now sufficiently recovered from her sickness to run about. New York, March 13.—Rudyard Kip-

YOU CAN FIND OUT If Kidneys Are Deranged Without a

Doctor's Examination-You Can Be Cured of Kidney Disease by Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Just three questions are usually required to find out if a person has had bad kidneys. If you answer in the affirmative you should begin at once to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, the most successful treatment for kidney disease ever offered to the public.
First. "Have you backache, or a weak, lame back?"

Second. "Do you have difficulty in urinating, or a too frequent desire to urinate?"

Third. "Are there deposits like brick dust in the urine after it has stood for 24 hours?"

In its earlier stages, kidney disease is readily cured by a few boxes of this great prescription of Dr. Chase, who is celebrated throughout the world for his wonderful cures of diseases of the kidneys.

In the last stages of Bright's disease there is no cure possible, as the cells of the kidneys waste away and can never be restored. If you have the symptoms of kidney disease you can take Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with perfect confidence that what has proved an absolute cure in so many thousands of cases will not fail you. #### WHATEVER IS IS BEST

How Some of the City Fathers Regard the Break in the Waterworks Dam-City Hall Notes.

The damage caused to the waterworks dam yesterday is regarded by some of British Army and Navy Officers at the city fathers as little short of providential. Now that something will have to be done, says the mayor, gates can be built in the dam, so that they can be opened in the time of a freshet and relieve West London of the danger of being flooded. The gates will also the officers of the Twelfth and Sevenserve the purpose for cleaning out the river when necessary. Thus, it is claimed, the construction of the gates will settle the breakwater problem, and materially alter the sewage disand materially alter the sewage dis-posal question. If the river has a free course at Springbank a small filtration or other system, for use in the summer months, is all that will be needed, it is

On the other hand, it is argued by some experts that the waterworks dam never caused a flood in West London. These experts hold the cove bridge and dyke to be responsible for the floods. They say the water passes through a very narrow channel at that point, and when the river is swollen the water backs up there, and not at the waterworks dam, as is commonly supposed. The whole question will be thoroughly discussed in the near future. course to be taken practically rests with the water commissioners, it is said.

The aldermen are reticent concerning the caucus held by the city council on Saturday night. They assembled at the city hall with fire in their eyes, but, it is understood, the fire died out gradually, and an hour was quietly spent in discussing municipal ethics

The waterworks dam was built 21 years ago, under the direction of City Engineer Robinson.

Mr. R. J. Wood, of Wellington street, will erect a one and a half story brick residence on the west side of Waterloo street north.

THE CAR SHOPS

Fair, with stationary or higher Two Elegant Coaches and a Baggage Car on Exhibition.

> A Credit to the Manufacturers-The Order When Completed Will Total 26 Coaches and 10 Baggage Cars.

Two first-class coaches and a baggage car, products of the Grand Trunk car shops here, attracted much attention at the Grand Trunk station this afternoon. They were turned out of the shops about noon today, and

The coaches are numbered 820 and 821, and are marvels of elegance and comfort. They are 69 feet long, of magnificent appearance, fitted with vestibules of new design, extending the full width of the car, and arranged with end windows, making it very convenient as an observation room. The outsides are painted G. T. R. standard invisible green, and ornamented with gold. Over each window is fitted a the six-wheel type, with steel tires, and are mounted on axles 41/4x8-inch journals. The truck frames are heavily bound together with steel plates, making them very strong and massive.

The inside arrangement is unsurpassed anywhere. Each coach is finished in carved mahogany throughout, and is fitted with a smoking-room for eight persons, and "Hale & Kilburn" walkover seats, all upholstered in crimson plush. The veneer ceilings are painted olive green, and most artistically decorated with gold. The cars are equipped with the "Forsyth" patent window shade, elegant parcel racks, and the floor is provided with Brussels carpet. The proper ventilation of these cars has not been overlooked, as the deck-sash are pivoted in such a manner as to make the ventilation perfect. They are lighted with "Acme" lamps, and heated with steam from the locomotive. The baggage car, numbered 965, is 61 feet 6 inches long, without platforms, and provided with vestibule diaphragms, and mounted on G. T. R. standard four-wheel trucks of great strength and endurance.

These three cars, which reflect so much credit upon Master Car Builder King and his staff, are but an installment of a large order which, when completed, will total 26 coaches, and 10 baggage cars similar to those described.

incendiaries. On Saturday they set fire to valuable property, causing a loss of $20,000, and early this morning they fired the large public school building. The building was entirely destroyed, together with two dwellings. Loss, $25,000; insurance, $14,000. Eleven teachers were employed in the building, and 600 children are without school accommodations. A mass meeting of citizens has been called to take action. Waverly, N. Y., March 13.-A hold-up in true western bandit style occurred about 2 o'clock this morning. At that hour eleven masked and armed men entered the power house of the Waverly, Sayre and Athens Traction Company, and, ordering the three employes to hold up their hands, bound them securely and placed them in an empty dren's Aid Society, went to St. Marys mirror, embossed in gold. Then, leaving one man to guard them, they blew upon the three safes in the office and secured $175 in cash. Nothing but money was taken. About 4 o'clock one of the men succeeded in freeing his hands, and all were quickly cut loose. The police were summoned, but there is no clue. To judge by their work, the robbers were professional cracksmen,

CHANGING WIVES

Mr. James Brown Potter to Wed Another Woman.

New York, March 13.-James Brown Potter has decided to divorce his wife, Cora Urquhart Potter, who is now playing Milady in "The Three Musketeers," in London, in which part she has achieved the triumph of her life.

The impending divorce proceedings become all the more interesting in view of a story which lately has been made the rounds of society, concerning a new Mrs. James Brown Potter.

Last summer Mr. Potter leased a handsome villa on Cliff avenue, in Newport. The woman in question is said to be wealthy, and is credited with having refused persons of title both in England and on the continent.

Mrs. Potter might easily forget James Brown Potter, but unfortunately she has a daughter, Miss Fifi Potter, now 19 years of age, and who lives with her

This daughter shares all the bitterness of her father, concerning her mo-ther. When Mrs. Potter was in New York last, she begged her to leave her father. Miss Potter refused, and, turn-ing her back upon her pleading parent, walked away.

The gulf between mother and daughter is not only wide, but perhaps permanent, for the will of Howard Potter, the millionaire father of James Brown Potter, cut off Mrs. Potter, but remembered the daughter.

BURNED TO A CRISP

Terrible Fate of Two Little Children.

Marshfield, Wis., March 13.-A shocking tragedy has occurred at Milladore. Mrs. Erhard, a widow, left her home to call on a neighbor, and locked her two children, a girl and boy, aged 3 and 5 years, in the house. The little girl went to bed and complained of being cold. Her little brother thereupon went to the stove, scraped a few live coals together and laid them on the bed beside his sister. The bedclothing ignited and burned the little one to a crisp. Omer, Mich., March 13.—Little Lottie Frizzle, aged 7 years, met a terrible death here. She attempted to assist her mother by lighting the kitchen fire, and before help could reach her, child was charred from her waist to her head, and her hair all burned off. She suffered great agony for nine hours be fore death relieved her.

BETTER BAY.

Chicago, March 13 .- More than 3,000 employes of the roadway department of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad are to be made happy by an increase in pay. Vice-President and General Manager Parker, of the company, gave notice on Saturday that, commencing at once, every sectionhand and employe of the roadway department on every line of the 3,600 miles of the big system would have his wages advanced from 5 to 10 per cent.

NORWEGIANS NOT SATISFIED. A dispatch from Christiana says: Norwegians are not pleased with the temporary government of the crown prince, who is much stricter than his father, and has now shown that he will not allow Norwegians any little demonstrations of "independence." He has decided that Sweden and Norway will send only one representative to the peace congress at The Hague. The representative will probably be a Swede. Some days ago war between Sweden and Norway was hinted at during a debate in the storthing, and Colonel Bassoe took the opportunity of pointing out that the Norwegian fortresses were good for nothing in case of war. The minister of war hotly contradicted the statement, and several other members also criticised Colonel Bassoe, but the whole affair is causing great uneasiness here, as the mere suggestion of war between the sister countries in parliament is proof of the jealousy that exists.

Springbank Line Open.

A trial trip was made to Springbank on the trolley line this morning, and the road was found to be in first-class shape. A regular car service on the line will be restored, commencing tomorrow. In the morning a car will leave the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets at 7:30 o'clock, and in the evening at 5:30. This will be welcome news to residents of Byron and vicinity. And it will also afford citizens a splendid opportunity of seeing the broken dam at the waterworks-quite an interesting sight. The opportunity thus afforded of seeing the effect of the tremendous ice floe while the river is at its height is one that should not be

Mr. Chapelle incriminates his wife and Wm. Wise, an employe of a planing mill. The woman is 44 years old and has a family of seven children living at Bradford. #### NILESTOWN.

Nilestown, March 11.-Following is the result of the weekly exams in the Nilestown school, John D. Milne, teacher. The names are in order of merit: Effie Byers, Emily Brownlie, Albert James, Walter McClary, Maud Palmby and Fred Pearson.

On Monday evening, March 6, about 75 residents of Nilestown and vicinity took possession of the house of Mr. James Groat to give him and his family a "send off" previous to their de-parture to Athabasca, in the Canadian Northwest, where two of Mr. Groat's sons are at the present time. The family were taken completely by surprise, not having the least knowledge of the affair until guests began to arrive. Hardly had they recovered from their first surprises when order was called and a very suitable and touching address was read, after which each member of the family was presented with a handsome present. A suitable reply by Mr. and Mrs. Groat, in which they expressed their sincere thanks to their friends for such kindness, was made, after which an excellent supper was served. Supper over, games, etc. were indulged in, all enjoying themselves exceedingly until the small hours of the morning revealed the dawn of the morrow. Mr. Groat and family will be greatly missed in Nilestown, as they always took an active part in every good work. They carry with them to their western home the good wishes of a large circle of

THORNDALE.

Thorndale, March 11.-The superintendent of press work for the W. C. T. U. of Thorndale writes: The work is still in progress, and a manifest interest is being taken by the members at the monthly meetings which are held the first Tuesday in the month. Some new and helpful members have joined our ranks recently. A bale of clothing for the needy has been forwarded to the address of J. S. Leckie, Huntsville, Muskoka, many friends outside contributing to this charitable work. On Friday evening, March 10, a temperance meeting was held under the direction of the Epworth League. Mrs. J. Dawson, formerly president of our union, gave an address on the subject, "Great Reforms that Need Our Help." A very impressive and timely address was given, in which individual responsibility was made very clear. A discussion followed, quite a number taking part, among others, Rev. R. Steele and Rev. R. Thompson, the latter speaking forcibly against the action of the government and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's reply to the Dominion Alliance on the plebiscite vote. Two resolutions were carried, one from the W. C. T. U., another from the league, to the effect that these societies disapprove of the de-Detroit, March 13.-Nearly all points cision of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that the plebiscite was not sufficient to warrant temperance legislation.

FINANCE AND THE INDIAN EMPIRE.

"It is finance which lies at the base of every difficulty connected with our Indian Empire," is the sapient remark of Sir Charles Dilke. And at the base of the financial difficulty lies the penury of the people. Great Britain is not prepared to administer the affairs of state in India from the same motives as keep in operation its Christian missions-from a self-denying benevolence. Nor does it seem that a much cheaper administration would be either good or economical. She must find a quid pro quo; and the large number of men of fine training, integrity and administrative power whom she sends out to this far off tropical land must be paid adequately, if not handsomely, for their toil, danger and exile. It is a very doubtful question whether, beyond a reduction in the army, and a lessening of the high salaries of native officials, England could safely bring down the expenses of the present regime. And yet it is true that the country is groaning under the burden, and can ill afford so expensive a government. It is a well known and lamentable fact that one-fifth of the whole population, say 60,000,000, or a total nearly equal the population of the United States, are insufficiently fed, even in ordinary years of prosperity. They are the everready prey of the first drought, distress or famine that may happen.—North American Review for March.

"THE ACT OF GOD."

Detroit, March 13. - One contention of the defendants in the damage suit of Bertha Tessner vs. The Citizens' Street Railway Company, now on trial before Judge Carpenter, is that the accident was caused by a thunderstorm, and was therefore an act of God, for which they cannot be held responsible. The plaintiff will contend that the trolley should have been removed and the car stopped until the storm was over. Miss Tessner alleges that her engagement to marry was broken off as a result of her injuries.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health ex-cellent." This shows what thousands have proved-that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils, and running sores. ## To Whom She Said

Eden sighed, and let her hood fall back, as she murmured her thanks and adieux. Seen through the soft shadows of the night her face looked so sweet, so pure, that the susceptible Frank could scarcely tear himself away.

"Must I say good-night already? But you'll not refuse to acknowledge that you share my regrets at parting? and this time you will freely say au revoir, will you not? And before I go, answer me one little question, will you, Eden? Was the person the wizzard named in connection with your future a rela-

"The Wizard? Ah! now I recollect.
A relative? Oh! no. Why do you ask?"
"But it was a person in whom you you," he persisted. "Is it someone whom you like very much—like, in fact, well enough to marry?" The idea of finding a lover in the abrupt, sallow, middle-aged Monsieur Valmont, struck Eden as so absurd, that she burst into a merry laugh. The light moved in the window. Mrs. Aubrey had heard the sound, and was coming to admit her, and with one more hurried farewell, she ran up the garden

Eden's anger and mortification had been banished by that tete-a-tete stroll homeward, and she could smile as she confessed that her reception at Mrs. Merstham's had not been all she could wish; but her mother, who was fatigued, sent her to her room at once, and, on the morrow, Lottie was so fretful with pain and the tedium of lying so long in the one position, that in soothing and amusing her, the subject of the soirce was almost forgotten.

"I thought you had forsaken us, Frank," Mrs. Merstham said, blandly, when her cousin re-entered her draw-

'I have been escorting Miss Aubrey home," he replied. "I did not think it right that she should go alone."

"Have you? How kind!" she said, controlling herself so well, that only Capt. Vinson, who was leaning on the back of her chair, saw her clench her hands, as if seized with a spasm. "I did not know till she was gone, that the poor child's head ached so much that she could not bear the motion of the carriage. Don't you think Eden Aubrey very pretty, Capt. Vinson?" "Prettier than country damsels generally are; but I do not admire rustic beauties at all." was the answer. Major Halliss did not answer in so disparaging a tone when I put the conflict with each other, when convictions clash and tastes differ, then both "I wish he would not encourage the poor child's tendency to flirt. Not that there is any harm in it, only it might reach the ears of a certain some one who would feel himself aggrieved. It would be a thousand pities if any injury were done to her prospects.

"Do you mean by that," said Frank Lyssendon, speaking for the first time, 'that Miss Aubrey is engaged to be married?"
"I believe so," was the evasive re-

"Were you Mrs. Merstham's informant, Vinson? You seemed the other day to be well up in Miss Aubrey's affairs."

"I have never named the young lady to Mrs. Merstham; but I happen to know that a countryman of her mother is greatly interested in her, that is all, the captain replied. "But I daresay I can learn more if you very much wish

The sneer with which this was said caused Frank Lyssendon to fiercely gnaw his mustache; but before he could make any rejoinder, Verna had interposed, saying, languidly:

"Haven't we talked enough about these Eastham people? Some day, Frank, you must come and see a picture-you know I always had a passion for dabbling in the fine arts-a picture of mine in which this little Eden Aubry figures. Did you know that she ekes out her mother's earnings by sometimes sitting as model to an artist?" She saw the red blood rise to the darkening brow of the fastidious officer, who shrank with horror from the idea she was insidiously presenting to him. Eden Aubry in a painter's studio, paid by the hour for permitting her girlish beauty to be transferred to canvas, and commented on by low-minded picture-dealers! Impossible!

He knew not how to believe it.

"Are you sure of this, Verna?"

"Of what?" she asked, in affected

"I'll leave with you, my lad. It's time I went, for these dear little ducks are beginning to question my veracity. Slip out, and I'll join you directly I've said my adieux."

Perhaps the major found cause to regret this sacrifice to friendship, for Frank Lyssendon proved such an unsociable companion, that not half-a dozen words had been interchanged when they arrived at their quarters, As they were separating the major commented on this.

"Confound all women!" was the irascible retort. "Why do you pester me about Mrs. Merstham?"
"Thunder and lightning!" ejeculated the impurturbable Jimmy, with a grimmace, "what a storm I have brought upon my head by my simple remarks! But in spite of your bad language, young fellow, I say again that it will be your own fault if you lose the finest chance-- There he goes, slamming his door behind him; so it would be a waste of breath to say any more; but it will be such a disgrace to the regiment if the greatest sneak in it carries off the widow, that I would enter the lists myself if I thought it would be of any use. The widow to whom he was thus alluding looked strangly haggard and weary when her guests had departed, and she sat over the fire of her dressing-room, brooding on the occurrences of the night. Had Frank's passion for this detestare interested, or who is interested in you," he persisted. "Is it someone was a question she could not ask her-self without catching her breath, and pressing her hands to the heart, that swelled as though it would burst.

Was this to be the punishment of the sin she committed when she rejected the passionate boy, who adored her that she might wed an old man for his money? She had thought it would be so easy to forget Frank Lyssendon, and yet in the midst of her splen-dor his image had haunted her, till she pined for freedom that she might

And now she was free; but her power over him was gone. He looked coldly at her; he resisted her efforts to lure him back to her feet; and why? Was it because a pretty stranger had come between them? Would he be so

Verna Merstham set her teeth together, and, fetching her desk, wrote, after many efforts, a letter that satisfied her—a letter that the first post of the more convict. of the morrow carried to that quiet country rectory Frank had been describing a few hours earlier to the deeply interested Eden Aubrey.

CHAPTER XV.

But she was tolerably contented, for in the intervals of amusing Lottie, and practising her vocal exercises, she could sit at a window that commanded the lane leading towards Mrs. Merstham's, and recall, with blushes and smiles, all that her chivalrous escort had said. Or hum Flip's one only waltz while she read or worked, and, closing her eyes, imagine herself still floating around Verna's drawing-room, supported by the very best and handsomest partner that a happy girl could have.

Still Eden watched the weather, and longed unspeakeably for a fine day, that she might be able to trip as far as.
The Beeches, where she should be certain to hear something of her hero, if she were not so fortunate as to en-counter him. But when the sun did disperse the clouds, and a brisk wind began to dry up the mud, and render the roads passable, Mrs. Aubrey took advantage of it, and instituted a spring cleaning, which for a couple of days kept Eden a prisoner to the house, sorely against her will.

Still, she was too dutiful a daughter not to do her best to please her mo-

In Woman's Interest

Home.

"In the first months of married life, love is so sufficient, and loving so simple that there seems no other need in life," writes Helen Watterson Moody in the March Ladies' Home Journal. "But by-and-bye, when care begins to shadow them, when duties present themselves, and, strangely enough, conflict with each other, when convichusband and wife begin to realize that back of love must stand what I have called 'steady and sturdy moral qualities'-justice, patience, honesty, sincerity and magnanimity. Indeed, on these depends the very continuance of love in marriage, for it is not possible to go on loving unless that is found which is worthy of love. I say this advisedly. I know the world is full of men and women who think, either because they like to think so, or sadly, because they must, that one can love where one does not respect. It seems to me that this does not ennoble one's ideal of love. One may pity, have an infinite yearning tenderness over what one cannot respect, but love is of royal birth, and recognizes only what is as royal as itself. The way, then, to keep love secure in married life is not so much to be anxiously watching and guarding lest it should escape, or crying that love has spread its wings because the first holiday romance is replaced by graver feeling, but by living along simply and honestly, and frankly together, on a high plane, looking most and always towards whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report. Then Love will be not a captive, but a most willing guest."

who tried the case. The secretary of state, however, was not satisfied, and so he instructed Mr. Young, a very able member of the Scottish bar, to investigate the circumstances. Mr. Young carried on his investigation for three days, with closed doors, but without the examination of witnesses upon oath. The prisoner was reprieved during the investigation. She persisted in the statement that the old man was guilty of the murder, and that she was a mere bystander. The investigation before Mr. Young seemed to confirm her statement, and the secretary of state, being in doubt, remitted her sentence. Mr. Stirling, a member of the House of Commons, desired to know whether the prerogative of mercy extended thus far. Did it confer on the ministers of the crown the power to review any capital sentence? Mr. Fleming was not put on his trial, and Jessie Maclachlan was informed that if the investigation did not confirm the truth of her statement, she must not hope for commutation, and the sentence of death was respited until further orders. Complaint was made of these communciations, but it was answered that Sir George Grey was satisfied that the whole of the case had not submitted to the jury at the trial, and that there was sufficient doubt to justify him in recommending a commutation of the sentence to penal servitude for life. Sir George Grey, among other things, in his own defense, said: "The duty of the secretary of state would be easy if in all cases he refused to receive any appeal for mercy founded upon facts that were not brought out at the trial, but he HE CANNOT SHRINK.

from the performance of the duty which is imposed upon him, however painful it may be. In this case, the murder could have been committed but by one or two persons. Fleming was arrested in the first instance on suspicion, but was afterwards discharged, and his evidence was admitted at the trial of Jessie Maclachlan. I was distinctly advised, without doubt or hesitation, by those to whom I was entitled to look for a correct exposition of Scotch law, that Fleming, having once been admitted as a witness, was incapable of being put upon his trial for murder. Eventually, Jessie Maclach-lan was tried and convicted, and I think the jury could not honestly have come to a different verdict. The evidence was conclusive as to her guilty participation in the murder and no doubt has ever been entertained by me upon that subject. The defense was a general defense of 'Not Guilty,' and the agents and counsel for the prisoner put the crown to its proof, hoping to obtain an acquittal. They failed; but no sooner was the verdict returned than the counsel for the prisoner read, with the sanction of the judge, a long statement which was afterwards proved had been taken down from her own lips five or six weeks before the trial, and was not framed, as had been alleged, with the knowledge of the evidence laid before the court, and which she had urged her agents to rest upon to make use of. Before the sentence was pronounced, the statement was which, according to English law, would have made her an accessory after the fact, but which, under Scotch law, rendered her guilty as a principal. I laid the statement before the lord justice clerk. The lord justice, after took, no doubt, conscientiously, a very strong view of the woman's guilt at verdict was right. I also think it was number of men could have found any other verdict on the evidence before them. But I believe if the defense of the woman had been at the trial rested on the statement which she made, that a different state of facts would have been laid before the jury. The conclusion at which, under these circumstances, they might have arrived, it is of course impossible to tell, but I think the case would have assumed a different aspect, and that the verdict, however right, as the case actually stood, might have been modified. I communciated with the lord advocate as to the expediency of an inquiry. Mr. Young, an eminent counsel of the Scotch bar, was intrusted with the investigation. The impression left upon make it expedient that the capital sentence should be executed." THE THEORY OF PARDON. I beg to call you attention to the view expressed by Sir George Gray as to what he thought his duty was, in a case of this sort. New evidence was produced which was not before :he jury at the time which, in his opinion, if it had been submitted, it might have led to a different proceeding and a different result, and that being so he did not feel himself warranted in allowing the law to take its course, although the conclusion reached by the jury, was one perfectly just upon the evidence submitted to them at the trial.

It is contended by some persons that the whole theory of pardon is wrong as it now stands, and that if any proceeding for the modification of a tence which has been pronounced by a judicial authority is to be had, it ought to be regulated by law. I beg respectfully to differ from this view. There have been many contentions put forward by Beccaria, Bentham and others, who think that if capital punishment were superceded by some other and milder form of punishment there would be fewer applications for commutation of sentence; but this, I am sure, is not the experience of the home office of the United Kingdom nor of the department of justice here. This, however, is too large a question for me to venture upon this evening.

The standard which different judges apply to the consideration of cases of exactly the same kind, is often very different. Sometimes a state of lawlessness may suddenly spring up in a locality, among persons inclined to go wrong, of such a character that a judge pronounces a sentence of very great severity to make a strong deterring impression, and so put an end to threatenede depredations and disorder. It accomplishes its object, and he does not expect, in most instances, that the party will be kept in the penitentiary until the time expires for which he has been committed. The impression has been made, the purpose has been served, and the degree of punishment at once falls within the ordinary cate-gory. Now, it is not possible where a discretion is given to those who judiclously adminster the law, to secure uniformity. It is impossible that the

The subse-quent life of the prisoner, while in confinement, must be taken into consideration, in order that the crown may be advised, upon the petitions that are from time to time received as to whether, with a due regard to the deterring influence of punishment, and the safety of society, mercy can be extended to the petitioner or not. Now, in this discharge of those duties, the services of many officers concur, in furnishing the material for a safe clusion. The minister is always aided, under the English system, by permancommunicating with Lord Deas, who ent officers, whose long experience, and whose daily dealings with the cases, make their judgment and opinion of the the trial, was still of opinion that the greatest value, and with few exceptions he is aided, when necessary, by right, and that no fifteen or any other the personal advice of the judge before whom the party was tried, by whom he was sentenced, and who having refreshed his memory by an examination of the papers, does not hesitate to express his opinion.

All these proceedings, and the principles upon which action is had, are as well settled as the criminal law itself. If the power to pardon was vested solely in the judges, there would be far greater variation in its application than there is when it is intrusted to the crown. The strict rules necessary to the proper administration of justice up to the time of judgment have no place for the exercise of mercy. Each judge would begin his work with all his experience to acquire; but the minister is not so placed. No doubt, ministers frequently change, but the under secretary continues for a long series of years, and when he retires or dies, there is another officer who has a similar training immediately under him, ready and capable of rendering as-There is a continuity with sistance. regard to the principles to be applied. There is uniformity of proceeding. The duty is an executive function of the government, and as many executive functions do, involve legal considerations. In my opinion, there is no place where this power can be so safely tocated as with the crown, and its con-stitutional advisers. Of course, the manner in which the duty is discharged is often criticised by persons who have but a very inadequate opportunity of considering the merits of the case upon which they pass judgment. The amount of discussion upon the subject is not very great, and, it may be, that there is little ground to complain; but I must say that the minister must be surrounded by very incapable men, and must himself be very dull indeed, if he is not likely to arrive at a more just conclusion, than any person who without his opportunities, subsequently criticises the official proceedings in the

Forcible Address by President Mahone,

Of the Amalgamated Street Railway Employes' Union of Detroit-Good Work Done by Organized Labor.

President Mahon, of the Amalgamated Street Railway Employes' Association, Detroit, spoke on "Labor and the Church" in the Grand Opera House vesterday afternoon, immediately following the Munhall meeting. The large audience that attended the first meeting remained, with the exception of a few persons, whose places were taken as quickly as they were vacated. Rev. Robert Johnston presided and spoke edge the following donations for February: Check for $39 from Mr. Ginge, a few words, as did also Rev. Messrs. manager Canadian Packing Company; Pedley and Ford. Rev. Dr. Saunders basket buns, Mr. Bradford; two botlet in prayer. Mr. Mahon is a fluent tles emulsion, Lawrence & Davies; and forcible speaker, and he was listhree boxes fancy biscuits, Mr. John tened to with deep interest for an hour and a half, his remarks clearly show--On Wednesday, March 8, Mr. and ing the grand work being accomplished by unionism throughout Canada and the United States.

"Some say," remarked Mr. Mahon, "that the question of labor is insignificant; but to a large part of humanity it is the burning question of the day. The true church cannot help being interested in the labor problem. founder of the church was a poor man, assisted by twelve poor fishermen. The church therefore does not belong to wealth, though they may have captur-It belongs to the workingman. The church can interest itself in the work of labor, without fear of offending God. Poverty is the cause of more sin than anything in the world.

"Labor organizations are founded upon the Golden Rule, 'Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you.' What is the labor movement? It is the business organization of the toiler. It is the poor man's organization. We live in a commercial age, where cold-hearted business principles predominate in all parts of life. Business men organize, and why not the What would an individual toiler amount to in this world? He wouldn't amount to as much as one of the snowflakes that fell here today. 'In union there is strength.' We have got to organize labor and go into the commercial world as a business concern, and tell that that we propose to sell our labor to the highest bidder. The times and conditions that make labor unions necessary is at hand-the time to uplift humanity. It has been said that the only way to escape the gigantic trusts of today is to die. Now we are told of a coffin trust, with a capi-tal of millions behind it! There is no escape from them. The trust is an organization just as the thief is a man. It is the cruelest kind of robbery. They set conditions which men must bow to, and control all produce which comes in their power. Then they tell us that labor organizations are wrong. Have we not a right to meet them? Have we not a right to set a price on manhood and womanhood, as well as they have in the whisky trusts on their

Having been brought "When I see the multitudes of little children who come out of the factories these portraits suggest to Dr. Bucke when the whistle sounds the hour for closing, I wonder where we, as people, many phases of the poet's character, sonal acquaintance with this remark-able genius. "I have met many men are drifting to. The children are those upon whom the future rests. They will have to do the Christian as well as in several countries," says Dr. Bucke, other work, when this generation has men of deservedly world-wide repupassed away. Unionism demands that an able-bodied man be put in the factation; but I have never met another such man as Whitman, and I do not believe that there has walked the grassy floor of the earth in my day tory, at a fair wage. If this were done the children could be sent to school, and allowed to play and grow up into another man so godlike and at the same a grander and greater manhood and womanhood. The voice of labor is de-manding these better conditions. I of Grass." "-Warren F. Kellogg, 5 Park am sorry to have to say it, but the church has stood almost silent as regards these conditions. and the average remuneration he gets in return is $1 35 per day. If we haven't sume to destruction. Live unclean and a right to demand a change in this or- unholy, if you want to, but the judgder of things, I don't know what Christianity is. "People say that unionism would be all right if we did not strike or boycott. The trusts do more boycotting than all organized labor combined. When organized labor practices a boycott it is in the interests of downtrodden humanity, but the trust practices it to coerce labor. Politicians tell us that if we would vote right and let our organizations go, we would accomplish more good. The Republican party always championed and used the labor cry, but labor has learned that this party never protected an individual worker in the United States. They brought in outside, cheap labor from foreign lands, while preaching protection to American labor. If there is anything antagonistic between labor unionism and Christianity, I cannot see it. Every Christian should be in sympathy with an organization that is working in the interests of humanity. It was the labor organizations that freed the Michigan barbers from Sunday labor, and the voice of a single minister was not heard in this move for Sabbath observance. Some say that labor organizations lead to socialism. What we do know is that it tends to better the condition of humanity. It tends to a condition that would make the human family happy." The speaker was tendered an ovation on taking his seat.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Street Railway Employes Union of this city.

TALK TO MEN

Rev. Dr. Munhall Addresses a Large Audience at the Grand Opera House.

Rev. Dr. Munhall spoke to young men in the Opera House yesterday afternoon, and it is doubtful if ever that building was more densely packed in every part than on this occasion. Many had to be turned away for lack of accommodation, and many others stood throughout the entire meeting. The address was a forcible and strong one, and was listened to with the greatest attention, A large male choir and orchestra was present to look after the musical part of the programme. Mr. W. H. Hewlett prepresided at the piano.

Dr. Munhall was tendered a hearty ment taken by the New York board of health, to wipe out some of the "sweat he stated," that the church does not want the workingman. Now the church does want the workingman, and if it does not it is not the true Church of Christ. The minister is the workingman's friend. The young men of today have many advantages. Look at the Y. M. C. A., with its worthy secretary and officers doing all they can to help them. This advantage was denied me in my earlier life. Drop around to the association and they will do you good.
"Man can do right or wrong; he can go to heaven or to hell. God doesn't coerce, but sets before you the advantages of becoming a believer in his own holy name. But, remember, God sees all our actions, and will bring us to the seat of judgment. He leaves you to choose which path you will follow-the right or the wrong. If a young man sets his head on getting rich, and does it honestly, I say, may he have millions; but if he gets it dishonestly, may he end up in the poorhouse. young man can steal, lie, cheat, or be guilty of any other evil, but God will bring him to judgment for it. 'Do unto others as you would that others should do unto you. Young men, 'Look not upon the wine when it is red.' The liquor we get today is in the largest part poison. I doubt if any man could buy one glass of pure distilled whisky in any barroom in Canada. When a man of today gets filled up with whisky he wants to go home and kill his mother-in-law, or do some other desperate deed. Go on making slop-pails of your stomachs, if you want to, the Lord won't stop you. I never knew whisky to do any man good. People go on wondering at the alarming spread of Bright's disease and diabetes. Making your stomachs a slop-pail is the cause, in many instances. Many socalled deaths from heart disease, are really due to the effect of alcohol on the liver. It is said that 100,000 die annually in Canada and the United States from alcohol, but this does not tell half the story. Have nothing to do with this cursed stuff that brings sorrow and woe.

"Now, the devil has lots of devices to catch the passions of the young man. The obscene literature and pictures which flood the country; the theater, where the more filth you can crowd on the larger the crowd, especially the man with the bald head, who sits in the front row. They should be ashamed of themselves. They are like the moth that flies into the flame. It would be better that young men play with forked lightning than with im-ment day will come. France, one the most wicked nations on earth, will be blotted out from the great nations of Europe unless she comes to God. "We, as Yankees, over the border, love England as our mother country, and respect her as the greatest nation on earth, and for the high moral stand she has taken. Licentiousness is doing more harm than intemperance. It is better to sit down to a dinner of crusts than to have meat at the expense of conscience. There is no young man in this city so poor as the one without a good name. If a man gets wealthy at the expense of conscience, he can't take his ill-gotten gains with him when he dies. If he could it would be sure to melt.

"Stand up for God, and live a pure and manly life, and he will lengthen your years. Have convictions of what you should do, and carry them out. Young man, accept God, and you will have health, wealth and happiness. Accept him today to be your saviour." At the conclusion of Mr. Munhall's remarks, he asked those who had came to the meeting sinners and were saved, to rise. About 150 responded.

Dr. Munhall will remain at the Dundas Center Church all this week, and will hold another meeting in the Opera House on Sunday next, at the same

LIMITS OF LEGISLATION

Rev. W. J. Clark in First Presbyterian Church.

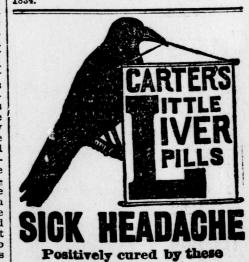

At the First Presbyterian Church, last evening, the pastor dealt with the section of Matthew's Gospel in which the Pharisees ask Christ as to the Mosaic legislation permitting the divorce of a wife. In discussing the matter, Mr. Clark referred incidentally to the answer of the Dominion premier concerning the matter of prohibitory legislation; and said that while he was not going to discuss the question of prohibitory legislation, he wished it to be noted that we had the teaching of both Moses and the Master, that while for the individual the highest should ever be the rule of life, when it came to the matter of legislation, it should be framed with a view to the state of the whole people. Legislation was not for the best or for one class of people alone, and the body politic consisted of total abstainers, of so-called moderate drinkers, and of immoderate drinkers. We could not, therefore, legislate, demanding the absolutely ideal in this or any other moral matter; but should seek the highest law practicable, and with advancing moral sentiment should also advance the demands of the law. Our representatives in government must decide as to what was practicable, and were, of course, answerable to the people for the stand they should take. But in the growth of a people it was not a possible thing that laws should be ideal while the people were imperfect.
