(Under the Patronage of Lady Bannerman.)

THE New Temperance Hall in this Town being fearly completed it has become necessary to provide the requisite Funds for saitably furnishing the same. A Bazaar will therefore be held, for this purpose, in the said Building, on

The 16th and 17th days of December next. The projectors of this Bazaar doem it essential to the prosperity of cause in which they are engaged, to render the Hall as comforde and attractive as possible—to make it at once a rallying point the Sons and their friends, and a credit to the community. To complish this object, however, from the Funds of the several Town visions, was found to be totally impracticable, without causing ions embarrassment thereto. An appeal to the liberality of the blic has, therefore, been determined upon; and it is hoped that sos friends who feel disposed to further this object, but who have a promote this object, not only by working for it themselves, but o by directing the attention of their friends towards it, and solicing their side. na promose conalso by directing the attention of their promose also by directing the attention of their promose also by directing their aid.

Sin,—We have arrived at an age of reforms, Temperance performs, Agricultural reforms, Political reforms. Being as instruct. or of youth, I hope it will not be considered arragence in me to look for an Educational reform, which ought to precede all reforms, to be the basis of all reforms. You are aware, that the education of the people, should be the primary chiest of those who are at the helm of affinit; for, if there is not further encouragement given to tachers, the people of this fair Colony must continue to be branded with ignorance, and incompetant to appreciate wholesome laws. It is true, that a considerable sum is appropriated for the encouragement of education; but its pragues has been retarded by many obstacles. To whom shall we attribute the defect? EDUCATION OF CHILDREN.

Educate your children well with wisdom, from regard to principles; with a view to their future respectability and happiness, and you can never labour in vala. Begin with them carrly; not in a rigorous, precipitate, and unwise manner, but with the tact, sobriety, and good sense of one who knows his own heart, and who wishes to produce deep and permanent, valuable impressions on their minds and hearts. Employ no force; that is characteristic only of the ignorant and unfeeling parent, not of the intelligent and efficient instructor. With young children avoid overburdening the memory with lessons, lest the brain be injured by unduly tasking the mind. Take your children by the hand, walk with, show and explain to them the different objects of nature and art that meets your eye. Encourage their simple and artless inquiries, and endeavour to reply to them in the plainest and clearest manner possible. Never disregard nor despite the current question of a child; for in this way you may often read the minds and character of your children, penetrate their hearts, and he enabled, by the Divine blessing, to clicit and improve their understandings, to draw out their juvenile faculties, and to impress and benefit their hearts. Let their education be practical; not loose, general, indefinite, as is so often the case; not merely theoretical and insperative, but let it have an object, clear and broadly defined; let it regard great principles, while pursuing great and uniformly important end. Strive to make your children value the instruction they receive. And, finally, let the education of your children he decidedly religious in its character and tendency. Let no soutiments be inculented, so lessons given, no discipline exercised, no habits recommended, no spirit breathed, but such as are in unison with the Word of God, and amply sustained by if. Educate your children, not only for this world, but especially for another and a better; not only for this feeting, dying scene, but for the enduring scenes and canadeas angagements of

COTTON AND LINEN SAILS.

COITON AND LINEN SAILS.

A naval surpass, writing in the Times, says:—
The America is worked by a very small crew, because her sails being made of cotton, are much lighter than those of our yacotts, which are made of corfusy lines sail-cloth. New Sir, I have repeatedly unged upon my executive measurates the advantage of cotton over lines nails, and the roply her always been, "Oh, they spell in no time from damp and midlow." Yet a large majority of merchantnen in the Mediterranean use cotton axile, at Maita. Some years since, an application was made to Government, by persons interested in the progress of Maltese manufactures, to allow the sails of men-st-war employed in the Mediterianean to be made of Maltees cotton sail-cloth, and a calculation was made strong that the proposal, if accepted, would effect a considerable awing of public money. The objection still was made strong that the proposal, if accepted, would effect a considerable awing of public money. The objection still was a strong that the proposal, if accepted, would effect a considerable awing of public money. NEW AND OLD CLOTHES.

When the tailor brings yos hone your new coat, he brings with it some pieces of the cloth that remain over, that you may have something to mend it with when it is necessary. As long as your coat is new, or in good condition, the pieces of cloth are just at hand, very easy to be found; but as soon as it gets old, and wants mending, you cannot find the pieces for the life of you. You have quite lost them; and now you must either go in rags, or have your coat mended with a piece that does not match, or put it away altogether. Now, is not this very much like what happens in human life? As long as we are young, we have a superfluity of material to supply any want or injury, or even to waste; but when we are old, and want our strength and our powers, we find them gone, wasted lost. Therefore in your youth preserve carefully your strength, for a time may come when you will want it. I have yet another simile about clothes. You have an old coat; you are very comfortable in it; and -yet it is exceedingly shabby, all in rags, perhaps, and not at all fit for you to wear, much less for you to to ba seen in at charch or in the masket; but you keep wearing it on, saying to yourself, "Oh, it will do!" At length you really leave it of!; you give it to somehody else to wear; and now, at last, you see, what you ought to have seen long ago, that it is diagracefully shabby. Now, are not there many old, prejudices, many worn aut opinions and habits, that are very like this old coat of yours? You do not readily see their enormities in yourself, but put thim on another person's back and you can see them plain enough, Think about this.

CURIOUS PHENOMENON.

CURIOUS PHENOMENON.

The following statement of a curious phenomenon in vegetable life, must, I think; prove valuable to every fruit-grower and agriculturist, as it is certainly interesting, to every investigator of vegetation. About the first of July, I observed in a small pear-orbard, a short distance from our village, some six or eight large and healthy looking trees, entirely divested of the bark, from the lower limbs to the ground, a space of more than six feet.

I inquired of the owner, who, with a neighbouring farmer was standing by, whether he desired to kill those trees?" He replied that he did not; but that he had removed the bark in order to improve their fruit and general health. This, with my views of the vegetable economy, appeared so absurdly ridiculous, that I laughingly remarked, "he might just as well cut off a man's head, and expect him to live on in renewed and vigorous health." He told me that he once thought so also, but he now knew that when the bark was entirely stripped from the body of a tree, during any of the three or four longest days of Jane, it would be replaced with new bark, and the tree would be altogether more thrifty. I started on my horse, and with a very significant gesture, inquired, "if he saw any thing particularly verdant besides the trees." His neighbour then interposed, and assured me, that all I had been told was serious truth, and that if I would go with him to his orchard, he would show me healthy and flourishing trees, that had been barked in the same way some years before, the bark now perfectly enewed. I did not go to see them, but a few days ago I examined those first mentioned, and found the denuded trenk to overed with a new growth of bark more than an inch thick. I have passed these trees almost daily, since the commencement of this process, and could not discover that the maturation of the fruit had been at all retarded, or that the vedure underwent the slightest change.

In the publication of this case, it is my desire to call the attendenage.

this process, and could not discover that the maturation of the fruit had been at all retarded, or that the verdure underwent the slightest change.

In the publication of this case, it is my desire to call the attention of some one of your readers, acquainted with this phenomenon and its rationale, to the subject, and ask for its explanation. In my inquiries thus far, I have met with but three intelligent individuals who were willing to believe the srory, and none that could explain, by any rational process, the theöry upon which the physiological rationale is based. For my own part I have none to offer, for this is a branch of natural science that I have never given the given the careful study it deserves. I simply submit the statement, vouching for its truth, and would suggest, that whoever undertakes its explanation, will endeavour to answer the following queries:—How is the circulation carried on after the bark is removed? What is that peculiar influence of season, exerted within those three or four days in June, at which time, it is said, the experiment is only successful, that causes the restorative process in the renewal of the bark? and how is this renewal effected?

BROTHER JONATHAN

The origin of this term, as applied to the United States, is given in a recent number of the Norwich Courier. The editor says, it was communicated by a gentleman, now upwards of eighty years of age, who was an active participator in the scenes of the revolution. The is a recent number of the Norwich Courier. The editor says, it was communicated by a gentleman, now upwards of eighty years of age, who was an active participator in the scenes of the revolution. The story is as follows:

"When General Washington, after being appointed commander of the army of the revolutionary war, came to Massachusetts to organise it, and make preparations for the defence of the country, he found r great want of ammunition and other means necessary to meet the powerfiel for he had to contend with, and great difficulty to obtain them. On one occasion at that anxious period, a consultation of the officers was had, when it seemed no way could be devised to make such preparations as we necessary. His Excellency Jonathan Trumbull, the elder, was then governor of the state of Connecticut, on whose jadgment and aid the general placed the greatest reliance, remarked, "We must consult Brother Jonathan on the subject." The general did no, and the governor was successful in supplying many of the wants of the army. When difficulties afterwards arose, and the army was spread over the country, it became a by-gord, "We must cousilt Brother Jonathan." The term Yankee is still applied to a portion, but "Brother Jonathan has now become a designation of the whole country, as 'John Ball' has for England."—Journal of Americanisms, by John Russell Bartlett, 1849.

ROMANCE-WRITING.—I trust every romance-writer in the pre-sent day proposes to himself greater objects than the mere telling of a good story. He who, in the coarse of a well-conceived and interesting tale, excites our good passions to a high and noble as-piration; depicts our bad passions so as to teach us to abhor and govern them; arrays our sympathies on the side of virtue, benevo-ience, and right; expands our hearts, and makes the circle of our follows and affections more comprehensive; storess our imaginations govern them; arrays out sympathies on the saw.

Indeed, and right; expands our hearts, and makes the circle of our feedings and affections more comprehensive; atores our imaginations with images bright; and sweet, and beautiful; makes us more intimately and philosophically acquainted with the character of our fellow-men; and, is short, causes the reader to rise winer and with a higher appreciation of all that is good and great, attains the grand object at which every man should aim, and deserves the thanks and admiration of mankind. Even he who makes the attempt, though without such success, does something, and never can write altogether is vain.—G. P. R. James.

NOVEL MODE OF DUELLING. A pleasing take is told by Valvasor, in his work La Glorie du Duche de Curniole, Liu. 11, p. 684—of Andrew Eberhard Rauber, a German Knight, and Lord of the fortress of Petronel. Mani-milian II, Emperor of Germany, had a natural daughter, Helen CLOSING OF THE EXHIBITION.

[Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in London to his friends in Charlottetown.]

[Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in London to his friends in Charlottelown.]

"I went on Saturdy to witness the termination of the last public day at the Exhibition. There was no concerted ceremony, but the public were unwilling to allow it to close without some tribute to its memory. It was a glorious sunshining evening, which never fails to caliven the always cheerful scene below the glass roof. The visitors were to depart at five, and up to nearly that hour, streams of people were still wending their way to see the last of it. At half-past four, the crowd within the building began to exhibit signs of expectation. The galleries and centre sake were crowded, but the mass was motionless and comparatively mute. As it drew near five, the feelings of the immense multitude seemed afraid to speak above his breath. The reflections of the moment chid most tongues, every eye was directed towards one or other of the numerous clocks which were slowly telling out the remaining moments of the greatest wonder of the age; the setting sun shone in through the western window, as if he too would like to have something to dream about during the night, and was well aware he should not find the same the next morning. As the hour approached, a slight murmur like the wind among the trees, was the only indication, sweethat of sight, that you were surrounded by thousands. At last the first stroke of five was heard, the second was drowned by the music of every organ in the building pealing out the National Anthem, which was caught up by the hitherto silent muss with an enthusiasm beyond description. Every foreigner for a moment seemed to consider and feel himself an Englishman, and with head uncovered, shouted out, if not the sords, at least, the music and the spirit of "God aver the Queen," then more of the greatest sundry deep-toned bells made themselves heard above every thing, proclaining in a tongue intelligible to every nation, that the Great Exhibition of 1851 was no more."

The crush was intolarable; however, with a little

CHEAP FARES TO AMERICA.

The competition that is now going on between the various lines of Atlantic steam ships, both British and American, having already benefited the public by a considerable and gradual reduction in the length of passage across the ocean, by reason of the increased speed introduced, and the superior class of vessels employed when contrasted with those in use some years since, now promises to be additionally advantageous to the travelling community by the reduction of fares between Europe and the United States. Both the Canard and Collina-lines of mail ships have recently advertised that, after November next, the fares from Liverpool to New York will be at the rate of £30 each first-class passager, being a decline of £5 each passenger from previous rates. This proceeding has been followed by a similar movement on the part of the proprietors of the American steam ships Washington and Hermann, who have lowered their first class fares between Southampton and New York, from £31 10 to £28, from £26 5 to £24 for the lower deck, and in the second-class, from £16 16 to £15. It is understood also, that in the month of November next, the rates of passage-money by the Havre. Southampton, and New York steam-ships Franklin and Ilamboith, will fall to the same level as the Canard and and Collins's lines. There is no doubt that, eventually, the great competition that will exist among these four lines of steamers, added to the opposition they will experience from the numerous lines of serow steamers between Liverpool and Glasgow, and New York, Philadelphia, and Bostof, will have the effect of still further low ering the rates of passage-money by the paddle-wheel lines. It will, therefore, remain to be seen, if with these reduced rates of passage money, the operations will yield remunerative results to the various Companies, and, if the increased traffic will keep pacowith, and compensate for the decreased tariff of passager fare. Whatever may be the effect on the finances of the respective Companies, it is q

A LADY LECTURER.—On Wednesday evening, Mrs. Catherine Winter gave an entertainment, in the form of a lecture, at the Music-hall. She stated, that she had pleaded her own cause in three different Irish courts; and the professed object of her lecture was to give lessons to ladies "how to be called to the bar." She spoke with great fluency, and much quiet humour, professing her intention, if she could find a free and independent borough, to enter parliament. But, notwithstanding the apparent attractiveness of the subject, there was a very small audience.—Liverpool Journal.

NATURALIZATION OF IRISHMEN.—The naturalization of Irishmen is now being carried on this city on a large scale. In almost every ward of the city they have their quarters, and frequent ly in the basement of the Parchase-street Church, they hold mass ings. It is stated, that they intend to throw 4000 votes, and it ran their own ticket in Ward seven (Fort Hill), and to get severa Irishmen into the City Council. Several leading Irishmen are engaged in asturalizing.—Traveller.

INTEMPERANCE.—Dr. Howe, of Boston, commissioned to prepare a system for the education of idiots, estimates their numbe in Meanchusetts at "over 1,200, and that three-fourths of the are born of intemperate parents." Think of this, parents, yo who are in the habit of quaffing the intoxicating howl. Fonder well, for you are sowing the seeds of lunacy, idiotey, and death, it your unborn children.

ENGLAND.

Komuth is certainly a great man. The fame which precoded him has not exaggarated his talents. His speeches in Hampshire this week are the most extraordinary efforts ever made by a foreigner to place the politics of a distant country in an English dress. With such command over a language which must necessarily he new and strange to him, we can readily imagine the effect which his amagic voice, when speaking his own tongue must have had on his own race. "Therefore the threathe nod words that burn" is an illustration which feeled trypting the powers of such an orator rousing the patriotism of Hangary against the wrongdoer.

That Kossuh should be the object of attack, need excite little surprise. Every men of switch is so. But since he has caised his manly voice in this land of the free, it is amusing to observe how his aumiliants, the advocates of despotism, have, as the phrane gues. "drawn in their horas." Before his arrival, the criticisms on his conduct by that portion of the press which always lears to power, however basely achieved, were fierce and incessant. Since it has been found that the great Magyar has a tongue to defend his reputation, as he had a sword to oppose oppression, his literary autaganists seem to have vanished, like the witches in the play, into thin sir, and left him in quiet possession of the field. The leading morning journal, dropped in the early part of the week, the notes it had sounded as loudly before Kossath's arrival in England; but yesterday, maddened by the choere which accompanied him to the city on Thursday, and the reverberation of which, must have been distinctly heard in I rising-house square, it returned to the attack with all the desire to be powerful, when in point of fact, it was simply malignant.

distinctly heard in I cinting-bouse square, it returned to the attack with all the desire to be powerful, when in point of fact, it was simply malignant.

The speech at Winchester was a resume of the infamous treatment which Hangary has received from the Howe of Hapsburg, treatment which fully justified an appeal to arms, and which was stamped throughout by treachery and cowardize. The narrative, from a man in Kossuth's position, was warm, but not inflated, and there were portions of it which rose to the highest order of eloquence. This stocients and extraordinary explanation will dispellike mists before the morning sun, the mass of misrepresentations and shander which have been advanced to the projectice of Kossuth and the Hungarian patriots. There is little in it that is positively new, for Lord Palmerston, two years ago, went over nearly the arms ground, when he was arraigned in Parliament on account of his foreign policy; but as a whole, the case of the Hungarians against the Austrian dynasty has never been so fully and tersely put, and the impression which this recital of rights withheld and wrongs inflicted will make in this country and in America, to which the illustrious exile is going, cannot fail to be as deep and abiding as it evidently was upon these who listened to it.

Not the lenst interesting feature of the Southampton entertainment to Kossuth, was the American elequence with which it sparkled. The speeches of Colonel Lawrence and the Hon. Mr. Walker, will be read with delight by every Englishman, and in the heart of the particular interesting feature of the Southampton entertainment to Kossuth, was the American elequence with which it sparkled. The speeches of Colonel Lawrence and the Hon. Mr. Walker, will be read with delight by every Englishman, and in the heart of the Dartott himself, they must have must have found a trilling response. Meeting on ground like this, in a mutual detestation of tyranny, the free institutions of our own country and those of the United States appear or genial and

Mr. Hawes is about to resign his office of Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, upon his apprintment to that of Deputy Secretary at War, in place, of the Right 'Hon. Mr. Hawes is succeeded to the Colonial Department by Mr. Frederick Peel has consented to join the present Ministry foreshadows an early junction of the Whige with the party which his father established. In this there is little to accide surprise, for the ministerial interreguum in the early part of the present year showed that the analy harrier which than separated them was the Ecclesistical Titles Bill, which has sizes become the law of the land. This union of strength, which may be looked for at no distant day, is the heat a carity that the country passesses for the continuance of the Free-trole policy which the late. Premise established, which his dissiples have honesty suggested, and respecting which, it must be said, the present Ministers have never filtered. The meet rising statemen of the age are to be found amongst the Peelites, to whose promising the least and actions, no doubt, to serve their country in sustaining the Conservative but pregressive policy of their late leader.

Mr. Frederick Peel enters the Colonial-office as the substitute of Mr. Hawes, who is raised a step in the official indice. The young aspirant for honour begins his career medity, for there is not an office under the Growe which is in worse door at the present moment. He must, therefore, have made up his mind for hard work and considerable oblequy, and if he can contrive by business habits and a mastery over the details of the office its acquit himself with ordinary credit, the result will be emblemitical of success. The name of Peel has a kind of faccination in the popular mind. No man of his age had a stronger hold on the business classes, which constitute the strength and intelligence of the country, than the late for business have under the foreward of the hospital present of the successor t

ACCIDENT TO THE STRAMSHIP AFRICA.—The royal mail steamship Africa sailed from the Mercey at 11-13 a. m. on Saturda with the usual mails and 132 passengers, discharged the pilot ab us hour afterwards, and pursued the North Channel course. She by after the pilot 10. with the usual mails and 132 passengers, discharged the pilot about an hour afterwards, and parased the North Channel course. Shortly after the pilot left a dense fog set in.—ao dense, indeed, that it was impossible to see half the length of the vessel. Under these examinates, Capt. Ryrie deemed it pradent to slacken speed, and proceeded slowly on his course; but, notwithstanding the precaution taken, the Africa struck on a reof of rocks near the Copeland Islands, situate near the entrance to Belfast Lough, at about ten o'clock on Saturday night. From the easy rate at which the Africa was steaming at the time, the concussion was but slight. Though the engines were immediately reversed, the tide, which was running at a rapid rate, carried her some distance on the rocks, and render-the backward movement of the engine fruitless. After every effort had been made by Capt. Ryrie and his crew to liberate the ship, and the tide ebhing fast, signal gons were fixed for assistance; but it was sine o'clock next morning before any arrived, when three steamers came from Belfast. At low water, the Africa, from 'mid-ships forward, was high and dry. The see being very smooth at the time, she did not strain much, and it was found that she made scarcely any water. As soon as the tide commenced to flow, prespirations were made to get her off. Ropes were made fast to the three steamers; and, being aided by the engines of the Africa, succeeded in getting her into deep water. After she had been released Capt. Ryrie deemed it pradent to return to Liverpool, where he arrived at a quarter-past seven o'clock on Monday morning. No blame can be attached to any one on board the ship. The Africa, succeeded in faith the reverse of the passengers on board the Africa, succeeded in faith the passengers on board the Africa, succeeded in faith the reverse of the passengers on board the Africa, succeeded in faith the reverse of the passengers on board the Africa, succeeded in faith the greater of the passengers on board the Africa, succeeded in fai

The practicability of a profitable unsurfacture of Bestraet Segur in Ireland, is to be brought to a test shortly. About 500 statute acres of heertout have been grown in the Queen. SER,—I now proceed to finish my remarks on the Micmae Mission.

Mr. Rand tells a long and tedious tale about his visit to the Indian

he would have been as much astonished and amazed at seeing a

THE closing of the exhibition at the Crystal Palace, would appear to have a more solemn, if a not more imposing ceremony, than its opening. PRINCE OF WALES'S BIRTH DAY .- Sunday the 9th instant being the anniversary of the Birth of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor gave an invitation to the young gentlemen of the Central Academy, about 90 in number, to celebrate the occasion on the following evening (Monday) at Government House, where arrangements were made, under the superintendence of His Excellency, for a magnificent display of Fireworks, which shed their sparkling and brilliant lights from between the hours of six and eight o'clock.

OR, ARTIFICIAL SLATE.

THIS admirable article has been tested for some years and proved very valuable, becoming a perfect slate, as hard as marble in a few months, completely protecting whatever is coated with it from the action of the weather and fire—a better fire-proof than tin or zinc. Several insurance Companies certify they will insure buildings covered with it at a cheaper rate, than if covered with those metals. It is of two colors, the black is best for coofing—the chocolate the best thing ever discovered for sides of either brick or wood, forming a perfect stone coating of a handsome stone or chocolate color, can be easily changed by a little white lead or other coloring matter to sait the taste. There is nothing equal to it for resumbout and car decks, and all kinds of iron as it formore a coating nearly as hard as the iron itself, and never cleaves off.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS COUNTERFEITS.

As the popularity of my paint has induced scores of unprincipled individuals to grind up, and offer as fire-proof paint, all kinds of worthless stuff, much of it nothing but rotten stone that has no cohesive attraction, is held on only by the oil with which it is applied; consequently as soon as the action of the atmosphere destroys the oil, it will wash or rul off like Chalk or Whiting, nothing can yet be known of its lasting qualities, as it is but little over a year since they got them up, whereas mine has been tested about seven, and where first applied is now like a stone.
