Safe, Clean Cooking

Safe, because the oil tank is away from the heat, and because the height of flame cannot vary. Clean, because there are no wicks to smoke or need trimming.

Burners can be regulated to give degree of heat desired, and when not in operation are left completely up out of oil contact. The asbestos lining and dead air space, and glass door of "Success" oven ensure heat retention and visible baking.

An economical cooker and baker, beautiful in appearance.

2404 Persons Sign Registration Cards

1,169 Males and 1235 Females Over Sixteen In Newcastle—Aged Persons Register

Saturday was Registration Day throughout Canada, when all persons over sixteen years of age were required to register, but at the local registration places, there was only a very small number called to fill in the cards, as the majority of the population had taken time by the forelock and registered during the week preceding the 22nd.

In all 2404 persons registered with the local registrars. Of this number 1,169 were males and 1235 females. The privileges allowed unregistered persons are, very few, as a citizen who overlooked the matter, found, that when he endeavored to purchase a Railway ticket, he could not do so, and promptly hid himself to the proper party to sign his card and secure his certificate. Another citizen was refused work by his employer, because he failed to produce the necessary piece of paper.

The Government allow thirty days grace to persons, who for good reasons were unable to present themselves or before the 22nd to the Registrar and fill out a card.

In the Douglstown—Nordin—Ferry Road District there were 559 persons registered—248 males and 301 females.

Among those registered on Saturday by Deputy Registrar Allan A. Saunders, of Upper Nelson, was Mrs. Nancy Vanderbeck of Millerton, who as the age of 93, wrote her name in a clear legible hand and did not have to wear glasses either. Mrs. Vanderbeck is in good health with the possession of all her faculties, and does much knitting for the boys overseas.

Mrs. Ellen Aharon of Newcastle did the same, she is 89 years of age past.

T. I. L. Want Better Streets

Committee Appointed To Interview Town Council on Matter—Officers Elected

Newcastle Town Improvement League met on the 25th inst, J. E. Ander in the chair, and the largest attendance of actual members for some time.

Mr. E. A. McCurdy of the Greater Production Co. Ltd., reported that at the joint public meeting of the T. I. L., Town Council and citizens, the plan of a Joint Stock Company had been adopted. A company had been organized, and its provisional directors had rented, free of charge, four acres in the heart of the town from George Watt. While seed had been high, the work had been done systematically, with little inconvenience to anyone. The company expected some 500 or 600 bushels of potatoes in the fall.

If this year's crop be successful, more people will join in and extend the work next year. $11.00 of the League's funds was voted to the secretary of the Northumberland County Temperance Alliance to help defray his expenses incurred in the recent campaign for repeal of the local Act in this county. The expenses of the N. T. A. in the campaign were $119.14, receipts $53.00, deficit $66.14.

Following officers were elected for year ending March next:
President—J. E. Ander;
1st Vice-President—C. E. Fish;
2nd —Geo. Stables;

Austrians Routed In Italy

20,000 Drowned in Piave River—50,000 Taken Prisoners—Austrian Losses Enormous

The Austrian army, which about the middle of June crossed the Piave river to drive the Italians further back, was itself defeated and on the 23rd driven back to the east bank with great losses in men and guns. The enemy had hoped to put Italy out of the war. The Italians claim 50,000 prisoners, and that 20,000 Austrians were drowned in the river.

The lull on the western front has continued nearly a fortnight, indicating heavy german losses in their last drive there. The American troops stationed in the Belleau Wood, northwest of Chateau Thierry, France, followed up their recent attack as a result of which they occupied the wood in its entirety, and have advanced their positions materially northwest of the wood and made prisoners of 264 of the enemy in addition to inflicting heavy losses in men killed and wounded.

Always Had Headaches

Liver Was Torpid and Bilious Spells Brought Sick Headaches—Lost Much Time, But is Now Completely Cured.

Here is convincing evidence that however much you may suffer from liver trouble and consequent biliousness there is cure in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Overeating is the most common cause of sluggish liver action. You lose your appetite, have distressing bilious spells, usually accompanied by headaches and vomiting, the bowels become irregular, constipation and looseness alternating, digestion is upset and you get irritable and down-hearted.

No treatment so quickly awakens the action of the liver and bowels as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For this reason this medicine is wonderfully popular and has enormous sales.

Mr. Charles R. Tait, Newtown, N.B., writes: "I was nearly always troubled with headaches, and would often have to stop work for a day or two. I lost many a night's sleep every month with bilious sick headaches, and although I tried doctors' medicines, and also many other patent medicines, it was without success. When I had these headaches I would vomit, and could keep nothing on my stomach."

"I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills from G. M. Fairweather, druggist, of Sussex, N.B., and after taking one box I was so much relieved that I continued to take them until I am now completely cured. My advice to anyone suffering from sick headaches is to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and be completely cured."

Mr. A. S. Mace, J.P., endorses the above statement, and says:—"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Charles R. Tait, and believe his statement in every way to be true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Substitutes will only disappoint. Insist on getting what you ask for.

"No—not unless some of the men strayed down the gully, which they were told not to do. The breakers would drown the noise of the engines and screws."

There was a slight pause.

"Will you tell them?" she went on. "Why not?"

This time the pause was more eloquent than words. Quite unconsciously Iris replied to her own question.

"Of course, as you said a little while ago, we owe our lives to Dom Gorrda de Sylva," she murmured, as if she were reasoning with herself.

By chance, probably because Hozier stooped to help her to her feet, his arm rested lightly across her shoulders.

"I will not pretend to misunderstand you," he said. "If the Brazilians do not mean to play the game it would be a just punishment to let them rush on their own doom. But De Sylva may not agree with this fop of an officer, and, in any event, we must go straight with him until he shows his teeth."

"You seem to dislike Captain San Benavides," she said inconsequently.

"I regard him as a brainless ass," he exclaimed.

"Somehow that sounds like a description of a dead donkey, which one never sees."

"Mademoiselle!" came a voice from the lip of the ravine.

"One can hear him, though," laughed Hozier, with a warning pressure that suspiciously resembled a bug. These two were children in some respects, quicker to jest than to grieve, better fitted for mirth than tragedy.

They moved out from their niche, and San Benavides blustered into vehement French.

"We are going to the landing place before it is too dark," he muttered angrily. "We must not show a light. In a few minutes the path will be most dangerous. Please make haste, mademoiselle. We did not know where you had gone."

He took her hand. Philip followed. He was young enough to long for an opportunity to tell San Benavides that he was a puppy, a mongrel puppy.

After a really difficult and hazardous descent they found the others waiting there in a rock-strewn cove. The barest standing room was afforded by a patch of spongy and detritus. Alongside a flat stone lay three broad planks tied together with cowhide. The center plank was turned up at one end.

This was the catamaran, which De Sylva had dignified by the name of boat.

"Were 'ave you bin?" growled Coke. "We've lost a good ten minutes. You ought to 'ave known, Hozier, that it's darkest just after sunset?"

"We could not have started sooner, sir."

"Why not? We were kep' waitin' up there, searchin' for you."

"That was our best slice of luck today. Had any of you appeared on the ledge you would have been seen from the launch."

"We launch?"

"The launch that visited us this morning. Ten minutes ago she was standing by at the foot of the rock."

Philip spoke slowly and clearly. He meant his news to strike home. As he anticipated, De Sylva broke in.

"You saw it?" he asked, and his deep voice vibrated with dismay.

"Yes. I even made out, by actions rather than words, that the darkness alone prevented the soldiers from coming here tonight. The skipper would not risk it."

De Sylva said something under his breath. He spoke rapidly to San Benavides, and the latter seemed to be cowed, for his reply was brief. Then the ex-president reverted to English.

"I have decided to send Marcel and Domingo ashore first," he said. "They will select the safest place for a landing. Marcel will bring back the catamaran and take of Mr. Hozier and the young lady. Captain Coke and I will follow, and the others in such order as Senhor Benavides thinks fit. The catamaran will only hold three with safety, but Marcel believes he can find another for Domingo. Remember, all of you, silence is essential!"

CHAPTER IX.
THE RIGOR OF THE GAME.

In obedience to their leader's order, Marcel, the tactician, and Domingo, from whose lips the Britons had scarce heard a syllable, squatted on the catamaran. Marcel wielded a short paddle, and an almost imperceptible dip of its broad blade sent the strangely built craft across the pool.

Once in the shadow it disappeared completely. There was no visible outlet. The rocks thrust their stark ridges against the sky in a seemingly impenetrable barrier. Some of the men stared at the jagged crests as though they half expected to see the Benavides making a portage just as travelers in the Canadian northwest had done up a river obstructed by granite.

"Well, that gives me the monkey's paw," said the young lady, who so much she hated the rigging of the catamaran. "I say, mister, 'ow is it done?"

"It is a simple thing when you know the secret," said De Sylva. "Have you passed Fernando Noronha before, captain?"

"Many a time."

"Have you seen the curious natural canal which you sailors call the Hole in the Wall?"

"Yes; it's near the 'stubbard end.'"

"Well, the sea has worn away a layer of soft rock that existed there."

be called on to face, and her anguish was made the more bitter by the necessity that they should go from each other's presence without a spoken word.

Nevertheless she forced herself to extend a hand in farewell. Her eyes were blinded with tears. She knew that Hozier drew her nearer. With the daring of one who may well cast his words to the winds he gathered her to his heart and kissed her. Then she uttered a little sob of happiness and sorrow and fainted.

It was not until she was lying helpless in his embrace, with her head pillowed on his breast and an arm thrown across her shoulder, that Philip understood what had happened. He loved her, and she, the promised wife of another man, had tacitly admitted that she returned his love. Stumbling through the gloom he carried her until the Brazilians left him and went on alone toward a wreathed but.

A dog barked. Marcel whistled softly, and the animal began to whimper. The Brazilian vanished. Hozier still held Iris in his arms. His heart was beating tumultuously. His throat ached with the labor of his lungs. His presence was a comfort, a refuge among the grass and rock, but otherwise a solemn peace brooded over the scene.

Then Marcel came and aroused him from the stupor that had settled on him, and together they entered the boat, where a dark-skinned woman and a comely girl awaited them.

The sympathetic sound when Iris was laid on a low trestle and Hozier took a farewell kiss from her unheeding lips.

Two weary hours elapsed before the little army of the Grand-pere rock was reunited on the shore of Cotton Tree bay. Then the war a further delay while their indefatigable scouts brought milk and water, some coarse bread and a good supply of fruit from the but. It was part of their scheme that they should give their friend's habitation a wide berth. If their plans miscarried he was instructed to say that he had found the English lady wandering on the shore soon after day-break.

About midnight there was a bright moon sailing overhead, and De Sylva gave a low order that they were to form in Indian file. Marcel led; the ex-president came next, with San Benavides, Coke and Hozier in close proximity. Domingo brought up the rear in order to prevent straggling and assist men who might stray from the path. It was barely a mile to the village, convict settlement and citadel. Some few lights shone from the shore, but the exact whereabouts of the inhabited section. Another mile away to the right lay Fort San Antonio, which housed the main body of troops. Watch fires burning on South point, whence came the shells that disabled the Andromeda, revealed the presence of soldiers in that neighborhood. De Sylva explained that a paved road ran straight from the town and landing place to the hamlet of Suesate and an important plantation of coconuts and other fruit-bearing trees that adjoined South point.

It was imperative to strike into that road immediately. A little more to the right there was a track leading to the curral, or stockyard. If they headed for the latter place the men could obtain some stout cudgels. The convict peons in charge of the cattle should be overpowered and bound, thus preventing them from giving an alarm, and it was also possible to avoid the inhabited hillside overlooking the main anchorage until they were close to the citadel. Then, crossing the fort road, they would advance boldly to the enemy's stronghold, first making a dash for the beach, where the beach was still in her accustomed station in the roadstead beneath the walls. San Benavides would answer the ex-president's questions, there would be a combated rush for the guardroom on the right of the gate, and if they were able to master the guard as many of the assailants as possible would do the soldiers' coats, shakos and accoutrements.

Granted success thus far, there should not be much difficulty in persuading the men in charge of the launch that a cruise round the island was to be undertaken forthwith.

Marcel would remain with them until the citadel was carried. He would then hurry back to bring Iris across the island to an untroubled beach known as the Porto do Concuco, where he would embark her on a catamaran and row out to the steamer, which by that time would be lying off the harbor out of range of the troops who would surely be summoned from the distant fort.

BOAT STILL HELD THIS IN HIS ARMS.

Marcel had brought the catamaran ashore on the shingle so gently that not a pebble was disturbed. He rose, a gaunt coarseness, stepped off and drew the shallow craft somewhat farther up the sloping beach. Then he helped Iris to her feet and indicated that she was to come with him. At once she shrank away in terror. Though in some degree prepared for this parting, she felt it, however, as the cruellest blow that fortune had dealt her during a day crowded with misfortune. In all likelihood these two would never meet again. She needed no sailing to see the risk he would be in the course of centuries a channel has been cut right across the 200 yards of land. Owing to the same cause the summer rains have excavated a ravine through the crater up above, a similar passage exists here, only it happens to run parallel to the line of the cliff. It extends a good deal beyond its apparent outlet and is defended by a dangerous reef. Marcel once landed on a rock during a very calm day and saw the opening. He investigated it, luckily for me—luckily, in fact, for all of us."

Thus the minutes sped until a dim shape emerged from the opposite blackness. It came unheeded, growing from nothing into something with ghostly subtlety. Iris, a prey to many emotions, managed to stifle the exclamation of alarm that rose unbidden. But Hozier read her distress in a hardly audible sob.

"It is our friend Marcel," he whispered. "So Domingo has made good his landing. Be brave! The sea is quite calm. This man has been to the island and back in less than a quarter of an hour."

The catamaran swung round and grated on the shingle. Marcel was in a hurry.

"Are you ready?" asked De Sylva, bending toward Iris.

"Then you had better kneel behind Marcel and steady yourself by placing your hands on his shoulders. Yes, that is it. Do not change your position until you are ashore. Now, you Mr. Hozier."

"Ah, good!" cried De Sylva softly. "Domingo, too, has secured a catamaran. He is bringing it at once in order to save time."

A second spectral figure emerged from the gloom. Without waiting for further instructions Marcel seized the paddle, and the one craft passed the other in the center of the pool. Iris felt Hozier's hands on her waist. He obeyed orders and uttered no sound, but the action told her that she might trust him implicitly. When the narrow craft was traversed and she saw the open sea on her right there was ample need for some such assurance of guardianship.

Viewed from the cliff the swell that broke on the half submerged reef was of slight volume, but it presented a very different and most discouraging aspect when seen in profile. It seemed to be an almost impossible feat for any man to propel three narrow planks, top heavy with a human freight, across a wide channel through which such a sea was running. Indeed, Hozier himself, sailor as he was, felt more than doubtful as to his power of doing so. But Marcel paddled ahead with unflinching energy once he was clear of the tortuous passage, and, before the catamaran had traveled many yards, even Iris was able to understand that the outlying ridge of rocks both protected their progress; track and created much of the apparent turmoil.

At last the raft, for it was little else, bore sharply out between two huge bowlders that might well have fallen from the mighty pile of Grand-pere itself. Pointed and angular they were and set like a gateway to an abode of glass. Beyond there was a shimmer of swift moving water, with a silver mist on the surface, though from a height of a few feet it would have been easy to distinguish the bold contours of Fernando Noronha itself.

Marcel held up a warning hand even while he brought the catamaran ashore on the shingle so gently that not a pebble was disturbed. He rose, a gaunt coarseness, stepped off and drew the shallow craft somewhat farther up the sloping beach. Then he helped Iris to her feet and indicated that she was to come with him. At once she shrank away in terror. Though in some degree prepared for this parting, she felt it, however, as the cruellest blow that fortune had dealt her during a day crowded with misfortune. ## High-Topped Shoes Barred Next Year

U. S. Government Limits Women's Footwear to Eight Inches.—Few Pockets in Men's Clothing

A Washington despatch says, The War Industries Board assumed the role of arbiter of fashions in making public regulations which shoemakers and manufacturers of men's clothing are expected to follow in planning for the offerings for next spring. The rules are established to conserve leather and the materials which go into clothes.

The high shoes which women affect when they shortened skirts were hit by the orders sent out, and hereafter manufacturers of women's shoes must not make them more than eight inches high, when laces are used, and buttoned shoes stop at six and a half inches from the ground. Overgarters are restricted to the eight and a half inch level.

Shoe manufacturers for the next six months also are forbidden to purchase or use new style lasts, and all shoes are to be restricted to four colors, black, white and two shades of brown. Leather linings are discouraged.

Men's clothing, after the present stock is depleted, will be conservative in design and limited as to length of coat. Not more than ten models of sack suits are to be put out by manufacturers who are now planning for next spring's stocks. Men's coats will have fewer pockets, the government possibly feeling that they will not need as many by 1919.

Four Fishermen Drowned at Caraquet

Schooner Filled With Water and Men Were Swept From Deck by Waves

During a heavy storm at Shipagan Wednesday last, four fishermen, who were endeavoring to make the harbor lost their lives. The boat was beating against the wind when a sudden gust caught the sails, and the boat stood directly on end, spun around like a top for a few moments and then broke in two, the four occupants being thrown into the water and immediately sunk. The dead men were Captain Joseph DeFron, James DeFron, his brother, Pierre Hebert and George Maillet. The first three being married men. All the above men are well known on the Miramichi having for several seasons brought cod fish to this place.

Lemons Whiten And Beautify The Skin

Make this beauty lotion cheaply for your face, arms and hands

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quart of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the best skin softener, whitener and beautifier. Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any drug store and make up a quart pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It is marvellous to smoothen rough red hands.

A Dominion Express Money Order for five dollars costs three cents.

It Works! Try It

Tells how to loosen a sore, tender corn so it lifts out without pain.

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing Iroquois, the ether discovery of a Chittani man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers. Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of Iroquois, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rise one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so softened that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which when applied and never influences or even irritates the softening tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of doctor visits and from feeling the excruciating tortures of corns. The smallest bottle of Iroquois costs...

The Career Of Captain Kidd

Famous Pirate was Hanged at London May 23rd. 1701—His Supposed Treasure Cause of Many Searches

Captain William Kidd was born, probably at Greenock, Scotland, in 1695, on the recommendation of Robert Livingston, a colonist, Richard Coote, Earl of Bellamont, governor of Massachusetts Bay, placed Kidd in command of a privateer with a special commission to suppress piracy. Bellamont, Orford, Somers, Romney and Shrewsbury were to pay the greater part of the cost. His ship, the Adventure, sailed from Plymouth for New York, May, 1698, and from New York to Madagascar, a favorite resort for pirates at that time.

It was soon reported, however, that Kidd had become a pirate himself, and when he returned to Boston, July, 1699, he was arrested. He pretended that he was overpowered by his crew, that acts of piracy had been committed against his will and that other ships had been taken under French. He failed, however, to give a satisfactory account of the Queda Merchant, his last prize. Kidd and several of his crew were sent to England, tried at Old Bailey, London, and executed on May 23, 1701. A portion of Queda Merchant's treasure was supposed to have been buried on Gardner's Island, New York, but has never been recovered.

It has been a favorite and fascinating pastime in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia and, no doubt, other lands, for many years, to dig and search for gold pieces buried along the sea coast by Kidd and his companions. More than one expeditionary party has narrated with bated breath a weird story of the singular and untoward event that frightened all of the crowd as hands were being stretched out to clutch the precious foreign gold. It was said on these occasions that young men practising for the Marathon races never showed steeper speed than the night seekers after the hidden and elusive treasures of the notorious pirate of the closing day of the seventeenth century.

Time and again has it been repeated down the centuries that silence is golden, yet it has been told in vain to one or more members of treasure hunting parties. Absolute silence, it is said, is required about the time the treasure is within reach, and should any one utter a word, it spirited away or becomes immovable and the disappointed seekers have to return home with their experience enlarged, if not richer men.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Loyal Orange Lodge No. 79, Redbank, N. B., 14th June 1918
To Mr. and Mrs. Allan Matchett, Sillikers

Dear Friends: The Orange Lodge of Redbank, of which he was a member, beg leave to express to you our deep sympathy in the loss you are enduring through the death in battle of your son Sydney who was killed in France.

Your grief is softened we are sure by the happy consciousness that your son died in the discharge of his duty, a duty that which in these times there is none holier, none more sacred. Sydney was fighting for us, and, with confidence we also say, for God. He has done all he could to save your home, and ours, from despoliation and dishonor at the hands of the godless huns. His works do follow him.

The holy cause for which he gave his life is not to be abandoned. We shall send forward more men and yet more, until it is victorious, until the principles of righteousness, freedom, and truth are fully indicated.

Be pleased to accept this expression of sympathy, and at the same time, of admiration for your heroic son, who we are happy to repeat, was a brother Orangeman with us.

In behalf of the Lodge,
FRANK A. MENZIES, Wor-Master
STAFFORD MULLIN, Rec-Sec.

Solve The Fuel Problem

With a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove

BOTH Summer and Winter The New Perfection Oil Cook Stove will do more work than a Coal or wood Stove of twice its size.

THE Long Blue Chimney New Perfection Burners are the latest type of oil cooking burners. They were adopted after years of experience.

The long chimney creates a draft, furnishes the flame with enough air for perfect, clean combustion and makes every drop of kerosene do all the work in its power. All the oil is turned into heat. No smoke—no odors. No soot to blacken pots and pans.

THURSDAY, JUNE 27th, 1918

CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE

The other day one of Newcastle's policemen found three sharp-pointed large-headed nails lying on the street. The consequences had an automobile or bicycle run upon them, might have been tragic. Whether the nails were dropped by accident or deliberately placed where they were found cannot now be determined; but the possibilities of harm were the same in either case. As a people we are too inclined to be careless of what we throw around and where we throw it. Broken glass can be found on nearly every street, many children, apparently unchecked by their parents, having the habit of breaking every bottle they see and leaving the pieces strewn over the ground. This is not only wasteful—criminally wasteful, for bottles have a value—but dangerous to the life of the community as well. We should neither waste anything of value nor throw any valueless article where it may do harm.

NEW BRUNSWICK WHEAT CROP

The publication of statistics by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, showing that the acreage under wheat in New Brunswick has increased forty-four per cent over last season, causes the Fredericton Mail to highly commend the Foster Government, and give it the credit for the increased interest taken in wheat raising in the Province. While not desiring to take away any of the honor conferred by the Mail upon Premier Foster and his colleagues, we desire to draw attention to the fact that the Foster Government had such little success in handling the seed wheat situation in 1917, that they passed it over this year to the County Councils, to whom much of the credit for the increased acreage is due. That New Brunswick is to have the greatest wheat crop in its history must be most gratifying to the members of the Municipal bodies all over New Brunswick, who are to be congratulated upon the able manner in which they handled the Seed Wheat problem this year.

HASTENING PUBLIC OPERATION

An exchange tells of a district in Canada where the farmers, sore over the result of last Dominion election and indignant at the calling of sons of their sons to the colors, refuse to listen to anything on Greater Production or Food Control and declare they will put in less crop this year than usual. They may out manoeuvre the government and their neighbors—and themselves—this season, but no longer. If any considerable part of the population should take this sulky attitude this year, the government, as soon as the results are apparent, will be compelled to seriously consider the expropriation of lands improperly used. In this crisis, no man may do what he likes with his own. He has no absolute title to anything as against the community in need. If necessary for the public good, the public has the right to take over the operation and control of all public utilities. The United States government has taken over the management of all railroads, allowing the owners a certain rental but no word in the management. The Canadian Government has taken over nearly all the railways in this country but the C. P. R. at a fixed valuation, and the C. P. R. is also under control as to the rates it charges and how it operates its lines. Nothing being more valuable or necessary to the Dominion good than land, the Government may soon have to take over and cultivate all unused land—on its own terms, too, not for what the owners may value it. When the life of the nation is at stake, no petty individual interest must be allowed to endanger the public safety.

The Advocate To Issue on Tuesday

Commencing on July 9th The Union Advocate, which for the past two years has been issued on Thursday afternoons will change its day of issue to Tuesday and will be issued at noon on that day in future.
The change in the day of issue has been under consideration by the Management for some time, as we believe it to be in the best interest of the town that the two local papers should be issued on different days, thus giving the citizens of the town, as it were a semi-weekly paper.
While the paper will reach its readers much earlier in the week, we will as in the past always endeavor to give a full and accurate account of the happenings of the town and county and we ask the co-operation of our advertisers and subscribers in making The Union Advocate, what we desire it to be—The Home Paper of Northumberland County.

was fairly successful. In all, forty-six American sportsmen visited Newnham, and for their labors not counting the sport they obtained, shipped home forty-two deer, eight caribou, twenty-nine moose and fourteen bear, not to mention the small game, such as ruffed grouse (partridge), ptarmigan, quail, and snipe, which would number in the thousands. All the way from Palm Beach, Florida, to Brownville, Me., came hunters. The gentleman from the former city, Mr. F. M. Balford, secured a fine moose and a bear, while the latter townsman, Mr. George Matthews, was satisfied with a partridge, which, by the way, was from (Newnham) to Newnham, Me., and especially in the big game regions reached from Newnham.

Great Salmon Fishing There are no trout-fishing clubs in this district, game being too plentiful to offer much sport in that line, and during the summer season, when game is forbidden to be shot, fishing offers an invitation to the lovers of the wild. The most popular of these sports is the salmon fishing, which is not only a healthy, but a very profitable one, from 5 to 40 pounds rise readily to the fly and offer battle royal before they are landed. Trout in several species are also very plentiful, while striped bass and cod offer rare sport to the lover of deeper water fishing. Curious are taken in such large quantities that little sport is offered in their fishing. To the trout, bass, and cod, the Miranichi offers a world of new life far away from the bustling city, where the only noise is the murmur of your slumbers is the only noise calling to their mates with an occasional bark from a fox. Guides are available at all times and arrangements can be made through The Union Advocate, which will supply outfit names and addresses to all sportsmen.

UPPER CANADA MAGAZINE PRAISES NEWCASTLE PRINTER

Printer and Publisher, of Toronto, Highly Praises Work of R. A. N. Jarvis of The Union Advocate

Under a heading, "R. A. N. Jarvis, Printer, has made Progress"—Printer and Publisher, a monthly Magazine, devoted to the Printing Industry, and published at Toronto, in its March issue says:

Eastern Canada assuredly has many very good typographers—men who have studied printing as an expression of thought, intention and desire in every serious way. But many of these men have emerged from the obscurity which is apt to envelope all men who do little or nothing to lift themselves up and out of their enshrouded state.

One of the compositors of Eastern Canada, by which is meant the Maritime Provinces, who has endeavored to do superior work, and who has succeeded notably, is Robert A. N. Jarvis, now business manager of the Union Advocate, Newcastle, N. B., and who probably owes his present honorable and responsible position to the quality of initiative possessed by him, and to purposeful preparation for higher service. Concerning Mr. Jarvis's history, Printer and Publisher provides the following sketch:

Mr. Jarvis was born at Fredericton in 1891. He began his career as a printer in that city at the age of 13. After a period of wandering, after the manner of printers, but wandering upward all the time, he became manager of the Union Advocate, Newcastle. Later he went to Ontario, working as foreman in the office of the Warton Echo. In 1912 he returned to the Union Advocate, with which paper he has remained, eventually to become its business manager. The printing end of the business appeals to him strongly, and as a consequence, Mr. Jarvis has developed the job printing end of the Union Advocate to a very satisfactory degree.

Mr. Jarvis, still in his mid-twenties, is a real citizen, and gives much time to local affairs and to local welfare activities. His brother, William C. Jarvis, is foreman of the Fort Fairfield (Me.) Review. Printer and Publisher reproduces several examples of typographical work done by Mr. Jarvis in this issue.

It would be saying too much of his work to describe it as perfect. Masters like Harry W. Leggett and Joe W. Short, of Ottawa, will find much lacking in it, yet it is hoped much to commend. Mr. Jarvis's work is shown for the encouragement of other compositors in better circumstances than he was and is for self-improvement.

Mr. Jarvis says: "I am one of the younger class and have all to learn yet. You know that in a country weekly office we never have very much time or type and here I have only one straight series of type and that is why it is used in almost everything. Also the variety of work to do is never very great, but it is a source of satisfaction to me to be able to sell my work at from 15 to 25 per cent higher than my competitors and never hear a complaint."

Printer and Publisher has at various times shown examples of work done by Mr. Jarvis, and has pleasure in showing more. In the light of Mr. Jarvis's comments, his work takes on added interest.

Behold the successes of Mr. Jarvis is his spirit. He has had ambition and the will to improve. He has not been content to be discovered, but has contributed by his own enterprise to his proper recognition. Printers, as a class, are an overmodest company, but modesty should not prevent any man from seeking his true level or higher pay. Mr. Jarvis, still a young man, has twice as many years ahead of him as are behind him. One feels safe in saying that his career will continue to be a progressive and expanding one if not as a compositor, then a Manager, and perhaps as a publisher. Printer and Publisher very cordially wishes Mr. Jarvis large success in the years ahead.

(The Union Advocate is indebted to Printer and Publisher, for the use of the cuts used in connection with this article—Editor.)

"THE FIGHTING TRAIL"

NOW SHOWING AT THE HAPPY HOUR

"Get the men together," Gwyn ordered.

"Arm them all. I'm going to phone to Hogan to watch at his end!"

He ran toward the superintendent's office for the telephone, while Casey started off to get the miners together so that they could give chase over the railroad. Gwyn got his number without delay and was relieved to know that the connections had not been interfered with.

"This Hogan!" he said over the wire "This is Gwyn. Von Bleck said his bunch have got Nan and they're going head on for town. Yes; they're on horseback. Get a posse together and meet them. We're going to follow along the railroad and get them from the back. You'd better have the people barricade the streets. I know it sounds foolish, but they seem to have gone mad, and Lord knows what they'll do if they ever get loose in Lord Mine. They've killed a couple of men here, and they can't afford to be caught. You can count on meeting a more desperate Von Bleck now than ever before. His neck is at stake and he'll do anything to avoid arrest." Hogan's voice came back over the wire with assurance that he would do his share as directed, and Gwyn hung up the receiver. When he went out again Casey had already assembled the men and they were waiting in a train of cars, all armed, to rush along the rail to the town.

As the bridge over the river came into sight Casey urged the engine on its utmost speed. The men in the cars behind were watching closely now, for they would soon come into sight of the road and they were anxious to encounter the men who had endangered their lives at the mine.

Had Casey or Gwyn, however, been able to see into the woods at the opposite side of the bridge, neither would have been so desirous of dashing their train onto the trestle. For screened from view by the trees and undergrowth, a man had been left there by Von Bleck but a few minutes before. In his hand he held a detonator, from which ran a wire attached to something hidden among the sleepers of the bridge. His eyes were fixed steadily, maliciously, at the fast approaching train from the mine.

Just as Casey drove the engine onto the bridge, the man's fingers rested lightly on a button of the detonator. He waited a moment, until the whole train was well out on the structure over the river. Then, with a nervous twitch, his finger pressed down on the button. Almost simultaneously there came a loud, rumbling sound, which terminated in a sharp and mighty explosion, which resounded and echoed in the mountains. A cloud of smoke and debris rose into the air like a geyser, and mingled with the splintered beams and bodies of a score of men thrown high into the air, only to go hurtling down again into the river.

If the finger of the bandit on the button of the detonator had twitched a fifth of a second sooner every man on the train would have perished instantly. But in this brief space the speeding engine had reached the other side of the bridge, and in that engine were Casey, Gwyn and the dog. Gwyn crashed the throttle shut and leaped to the ground before the engine came to a halt. Followed by Casey, he made his way with all haste, to the foot of the gorge below, where the burning, broken train was almost invisible in a spreading cloud of smoke and dust.

His men were dead! Gwyn felt Casey's steady hand on his shoulder or as he turned away convulsively from the scene. The men, his men, were dead, in his service! Climbing the hill back to the engine a stern resolve took form in Gwyn's agonized brain. He would make of himself an instrument of vengeance. An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth!

Filled with a cold hate that froze all other emotions into inaction, he assaulted the engine cab and opened the throttle. As they swung into a wide curve alongside the road he watched with grim satisfaction a long line of horsemen riding to meet him, with Hogan in the lead.

"The devils have killed every man on the train," he said as they came up, and the words were dry and hard. "Blow up the bridge—murdered them like rats, without a chance!"

"Von Bleck is on his way to the town," continued Gwyn. "The storehouse there is filled with cinnabar, and that is his goal. Nan, God pity her, is with them. It is a race between us. You take the road and Casey and I will go on in the engine."

But the race was lost before it began. Von Bleck, re-enforced by another contingent from Brown's, was already attacking the town. A barricade of tables and ends of furniture, together with all manner of boxes, wagons and loose timber, had been thrown up across the road, and behind it the old men and women of the town were fighting desperately. Such unequal odds, however, could have but one result. Leaving most of his men to carry on the fight before the barricade, Von Bleck led a flanking party through the woods to the left and broke in upon the defenders from the rear. Caught between the double fire the townspeople were forced from their barricade and driven through the village, fighting around street corners and making a good defence. Slowly, reluctantly, they retreated till they reached the fringe of forest bordering on the road up the mountain. Here a desultory fire continued for a short time, but Von Bleck had captured his objective and most of the bandits were recalled.

The first act of the victors was to set the storehouse afire. With oil and gasoline from a nearby garage Rawls soaked the wooden structure at all four corners and applied the match himself. It was blazing merrily as Hogan's men topped the nearest ridge and advanced to the attack.

As soon as the rout of the inhabitants of the town was assured, Rawls had left the battle and gone back to Nan, who was still tied in the saddle. The repulsive fellow picked her up in his arms and carried her through the gate of the jail, kicked open a door and descended to the cellar. This was a small, high-ceilinged room lit only by a tiny broken window set high up against the rafters out of reach. As he cut the ropes from her wrists and ankles she sprang away and faced him like a hunted thing at bay. But Rawls only smiled.

"Now, my pretty one," he smirked ironically, "you shouldn't be afraid of a nice little boy like me." She shuddered at the emotion portrayed in his muddy eyes. "Come, come!" he added roughly, "you needn't be so fancy. Give me a kiss."

Nan dodged as he came toward her, but he caught her hand and pulled her back. Infuriated, desperate, she fought as only a woman can fight when she herself is at stake. Scratching and kicking like a wild-cat she fairly drove Rawls back. He was in a mean temper now, and it was fortunate indeed that an interruption turned his mind to other things.

For Hogan's men were advancing toward the barricade, and the first shots found Rawls looking the collar door in haste and rushing off to the fight. Hogan had deployed his men in a long line facing the entrance to the town, and the struggle was bitter and persistent. Protected by the breastworks erected by the townspeople, Von Bleck's men were at a distinct advantage, and Hogan made little progress. Gwyn came up for a consultation, and one of the posse was called aside.

"A troop of United States cavalry arrived last night at Pinkton," said Gwyn, "and we want you to find a telephone and send a call for help. Tell them it's the cinnabar mine."

By the time the fire from the storehouse had spread so rapidly that the whole end of the town was ablaze. Sparks were falling even on the barricade itself, and soon a flame shot up. A man rushed forward with a bucket, but a rifle ball dropped him in his tracks. As the fire spread along the flimsy shelter the advantage turned to Hogan. Rawls's men, blinded by the smoke, retreated cautiously toward the unburned section.

"Charge!" shouted Gwyn, and the posse led by Hogan leaped over the burning barrier and carried the fight straight into the heart of the town. Again the advantage changed hands, for Hogan, with the flames at his back, was forced to drive the bandits back as they approached. Already the jail in which Nan was imprisoned, was burning furiously, and Gwyn, ignorant of her plight, was leading several men up a side street for a flanking movement when Rawls suddenly appeared around a fence corner and fired.

"Lie down," commanded Gwyn to his followers. Crouching his rifle he stopped behind an open gate and took careful aim. Several minutes passed, and then a hat was shored around the corner. Gwyn waited, and a moment later Rawls dashed across the street opening to escape. As Gwyn fired the bandit whirled on one foot and fell headlong, a bullet through his breast. In an instant Gwyn was bending over him.

"Where is Nan?" he asked anxiously.

"Ah!" breathed Rawls, a certain cruel pleasure showing on his face in spite of the pain. "You win the mine, but the girl—look!" He tried to point to the flaming jail, gasped, and fell back. But Gwyn understood "You—" he stopped. Rawls was dead. With Hogan's dog, who had followed, close at his heels, he dashed toward the jail and flung himself at the door. A swirl of heat and flame forced him back. Grasping a burning plank he broke open one of the windows, but the room was like a furnace. And then he suddenly realized that the dog was barking furiously at the rear of the building. As Gwyn turned the corner the faithful animal gave one look, thrust his muzzle through the broken cellar window and jumped. Gwyn looked down. In the far corner, face to the wall, lay Nan.

A Good Appetite A Great Blessing

The Occasional Use of a Tonic
Will Ensure a good Appetite and Good Health

Loss of appetite during the summer months is a common trouble, and indicates that the digestive system is out of order. Lacking a healthy appetite many people—especially women—go too long without food, or eat sparingly because food seems to distress them, and it is no wonder they complain of being constantly tired and unable to stand the hot weather. All this simply means that the digestive system is not doing its proper work and that the nutriment that should come from the food is not being distributed to the various organs of the body. In other words the blood is growing thin and watery. In such cases what is needed is a summer tonic, and among all medicines there is no tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Take a short treatment with these pills and notice how promptly your appetite returns and your power to digest food improves. Your food will then do you good, your strength will return and you will no longer complain that the hot weather tires you out. Mrs. M. Kelly, Windsor, Ont., says:—"I suffered from indigestion for several years, and although I was constantly taking doctor's prescriptions they did not cure me, and the result was that I was greatly run down, and always feeling poorly. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as I soon found they were helping me I continued their use until I was fully cured, and am now able to properly digest any food I take. As a tonic and blood-builder I know of no medicine to equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I recommend them to all in need of a medicine."

The best time to begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the moment you feel the least bit out of sorts. The sooner you do so the sooner you do so the sooner you will regain your old time energy. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 10 cents a box or six boxes for $1.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Military Service Act, 1917.

Men 19 and 20 Years of Age.
Harvest Leave.
Leave of Absence on Ground of Extreme Hardship.
Procedure to obtain Leave of Absence.

Men Nineteen and Twenty Years of Age.

It has come to the attention of the Government that there is a widespread impression that young men of nineteen years, and those who became twenty since October 13, 1917, as well as those who may become nineteen from time to time and who have been or will be called upon to register under the Military Service Act, are to be immediately called to the colours.

This impression is quite incorrect. No date has yet been fixed for calling upon such men to so report for duty, nor has the question been brought before the Cabinet for decision. In view of the need of labour on the farm, it is most unlikely that consideration will be given to the matter until the harvest is over, although of course the Government's action must be determined primarily by the military situation.

There is no further obligation incumbent upon young men of the ages above mentioned who have registered or who do so hereafter, until they receive notice from the Registrars.

Harvest Leave.

Some enquiries have been received as to the possibility of granting harvest leave to such troops as may be in the country at that time. No definite assurance can be given on this point as advantage must be taken of ships as they become available. On the other hand, harvest leave will be given if at all possible.

Leave of Absence on Grounds of Extreme Hardship.

It is desired that the Regulations respecting leave of absence in cases of hardship should be widely known and fully understood. Such leave will be granted in two cases:—(a) where extreme hardship arises by reason of the fact that the man concerned is either the only son capable of earning a livelihood, of a father killed or disabled on service or presently in service overseas, or in training for such service, or under treatment after returning from overseas; or the only remaining of two or more brothers capable of earning a livelihood (the other brother or brothers having been killed or disabled on service, or being presently in service overseas, or in training for overseas or under treatment after his or their return from overseas); brothers married before 4th August, 1914, living in separate establishments and having a child or children not to be counted, in determining the fact that the man is the "only" remaining son or brother; (b) where extreme hardship arises by reason of exceptional circumstances such as the fact that the man concerned is the sole support of a widowed mother, an invalid father or other helpless dependents.

It is to be noted that in all these cases the governing factor is not hardship, loss or suffering to the individual concerned, but to others, that is, members of his family or those depending upon him.

Procedure to obtain leave of absence.

A simple system for dealing with these cases has been adopted. Forms of application have been supplied to every Depot Battalion and an officer of each battalion has been detailed whose duty it is to give them immediate attention. The man concerned should on reporting to his unit state that he desires to apply for leave of absence on one or more of the grounds mentioned, and his application form will then be filled out and forwarded to Militia Headquarters, Ottawa. In the meantime, if the case appears meritorious, the man will be given provisional leave of absence for thirty days so that he may return home and continue his civil occupation while his case is being finally disposed of.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

ANOTHER SIDE TO THE STORY
Sergt. Stackhouse, who has charge of enforcing the Military Service Act, in this county informs the Advocate that the charge made in our last issue that a young man from Neguac had been placed in the lock-up here and given no food for twenty-four hours, was not correct. According to Sergt. Stackhouse, the man arrested was Edmund J. Savoy, aged 26 years, and the man was arrested at 8 o'clock on Sunday evening for refusing to show his papers and assaulting an officer in the local discharge of his duties. It necessitated taking three persons to place the man under arrest and he was brought to Newcastle and given over to Sergt. Stackhouse, who had him placed in the lock-up here at 11 o'clock on Sunday night. In the morning Sergt. Stackhouse was called to Rogersville and before leaving instructed a constable to look after the man, but the constable was unable to obtain admittance to the prisoner at 8 o'clock in the morning when he went to take his breakfast, consequently the man did not receive his breakfast, but was supplied with his dinner at 12 o'clock by the constable, who also states that he had his supper at Neguac before he was arrested.

The Advocate is pleased to publish the above in consideration of the circumstances, and the story told by the man and which was published in this paper last week may have been told to excite sympathy.

(Vancouver Sun)
The funeral of the late Alexander Stewart, of 1795 Eighth Avenue west, was held at 2 o'clock on Monday from the parlors of Messrs. Harrow Bros. ### Red Cross Work Why the Society Cannot Allow Certain Entertainments Under its Auspices

Many requests have been made to the Newcastle Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society by persons or societies wishing to give entertainments, dances, etc., under the auspices of the Red Cross Society. Since 1918 the society has had to refuse all these appeals, regretting to most cases their inability to cooperate with the generosity of the parties interested. For the enlightenment of the friends and sympathizers of the Newcastle N. B. Branch the following article is being published.

In 1917 the Dominion Government took over all war relief societies under the War Charities Act for the purpose of regulating and controlling the collection of money and materials from the public. The Act is not intended by the Government to hinder in and way the fine generosity of the Canadian people towards all branches of war relief work, but unfortunately this generosity sometimes falls off its full effect through fraud and through lack of business methods. Instances have been known where money has been improperly directed from its intended channel and on the other hand entertainments have been held for patriotic purposes where heavy receipts have been eaten up by unnecessary and unregulated expenses.

All societies under the War Charities Act must be registered, have regular officers and constitutions and all accounts must be audited by properly qualified persons. Under section 3 (1) (b) provides that any registered society such as Red Cross society can authorize the collection of money, the holding of entertainments and other means of procuring funds for that charity. For instance if a church organization desires to hold an entertainment to obtain funds for the Red Cross Branch a written permit signed by one of the officers of the local Red Cross, may authorize the holding of that entertainment subject to the obligation that the funds from this enter-
