MILBURN'S HEART & NERVE PILLS

Are just what every weak, nervous, run-down woman needs to make her strong and well.

They cure those feelings of smothering and sinking that come on at times, make the heart beat strong and regular, give sweet, refreshing sleep, and banish headache, nervousness, and general debility.

They cure Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Nervous Prostration, Brain Fag, Faint and Dizzy Spells, Lislelessness, After Effects of La Grippe and Fever, Anemia, General Debility and all troubles arising from a run-down system.

Price 50c. per box or 5 for $2.25 all druggists or mailed by THE T. MILBURN CO. LIMITED, Toronto, Ont.

MISCELLANEOUS

If you can't sleep on account of a raging toothache, Low's Toothache Gum will stop the ache and give you ease. Price 10c., all medicine dealers.

Stage Manager (to lessee of theatre).—Our scene-shifter wants a holiday. He says he hasn't been away for three years.

Losser.—Well tell him he cannot have one. He gets change of scenery enough for anybody.

Sore Throat. Mr. Chas. Johnston, Bear River, S. N. says: "I was troubled with hoarseness and sore throat and after taking three bottles of Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I was entirely cured."

"We're glad to welcome you into our little family, Mr. Newman," said Mrs. Sarvem. "Our boarders almost invariably get fat."

"Yes," replied the new boarder, who was not, however, new to boarding. "I've noticed the same in most boarding-houses. Its cheaper than most isn't it?"

Minard's Liniment cures Distemper. "I reckon you won't believe it," remarked Farmer Hayriz, "but that old rooster that just crow'd is more'n twenty years old."

"Oo, I believe it all right enough," replied the summer boarder, "and I am also willing to believe that the old hen we had for dinner was his grandmother."

Cures Biliousness. "I have tried Laxa Liver Pills, and find them an excellent medicine for Indigestion and Biliousness. J. McCallum, Stouffville, Ont.

Algy.—Gwace has a hawid father. When I awaked him for her hand I said: "Love for your daughter has driven me half away."

Cholly.—And then, dash boy? Algy.—Then the old brute said: "Has she? Well, who completed the job?"

Worms are dangerous, often bring on convulsions and death. If your child is suffering from them, administer Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup which is safe and always effectual. Price 25c.

Keep Minard's Liniment in the House. An old negro was complaining about losing his dog when his employer asked him why he did not advertise for the animal in the news-papers.

"Dat would'n do no good," replied the old man.

"Why not?" asked his employer. "Well, sah, dat dog kain't read," responded the old negro.

Burdock Blood Bitters

It acts promptly and effectually and permanently cures all derangements of digestion.

Notes From England.

In announcing the appointment of Bishop Bourne, as successor to the late Archbishop Vaughan, "The Universe" of London, says:—

Archbishop Bourne, as he will be officially when the brief of appointment arrives from Rome, has not it is true, attained venerable years, he is still young, and only just over the borderland of forty.

But looking at his career of one purposefulness, the uplifting of men, especially Catholics, to a higher ideal, his rapid rise in ecclesiastical and episcopal ranks marks a man and a priest far beyond the ordinary.

Ever a student in advance of his years, when nearing the completion of his ordinary course he had, as it were to be kept back to wait the canonical age for ordination, and was able in consequence to prosecute his studies in unusually varied degree.

St. Cathbert's Ushaw, and St. Edmund's Old Hall, the twin offspring of Donay, each at different times had Francis Bourne on his list courses St. Salpice, Paris, a trainer of many holy priests, and Louvain, hold him in honor.

Ordained priest in 1884. Father Bourne served, of course, his chosen diocese, Southwark, in which at Clapham, he had been born on March 23, 1861. His missionary life was begun at Blackheath, and he afterwards worked at Mortlake, West Grinstead, and Henfield, in Sussex, so that he had had experience as a simple priest in each county of his diocese of Southwark.

The work on which the foundation of his dignity in the Church was built was his organization and rectorate of St. John's Seminary, Womersley, which he made a model of his class. That work it was which no doubt prompted Dr. Butt, then Bishop of Southwark, to seek his assistance in the administration of the diocese, and led to Monsignor Bourne being consecrated Bishop of Epiphania in May, 1896, and to his appointment as coadjutor to Dr. Butt, with the right of succession, a truly remarkable dignity for a priest who had not yet passed his sixteenth birthday.

Such progress, however, did Bishop Bourne make in his episcopal charge that the next year Dr. Butt, feeling the growing infirmity of ill-health, proved the first trust he had in his coadjutor by resigning. Thus on April 9, 1897, at the age of thirty-six years, Dr. Bourne received full charge of one of the chief dioceses of England, which after his rule has shown a progress entitling it to rank still higher.

For a long time past Bishop Bourne, in spite of the growing importance and work of his great diocese, which for a less energetic man might have taken all his care, had also much to do with certain details in the archdiocese, when the late Cardinal Vaughan's health began to fail, so that his translation to the higher dignity will be, as it were, but the extension of a temporary work into a permanent.

We have for months regarded it as most likely that the successor of Cardinal Vaughan would be his colleague over the water, and the long stay Bishop Bourne made at Rome early in the year but strengthened our opinion, which was based not so much on the wonderful success of his administration of the Southwark diocese as on the fact that the master of the southern half of London would be better qualified than any other to succeed to the administration of the northern, where Catholicism requires such another stimulus as Southwark has received, and honorably.

It is said that there is not a Catholic Church in Southwark where Bishop Bourne has not preached in his seven years of rule, and the records of the Catholic Press show in many ways the zeal of the departing Bishop. The only great voicing of London on the education question was that of Bermodesay early last year, when Dr. Bourne presided, the number of conversions in the diocese has been great, the number of new churches founded—on one occasion two in a day—has been without parallel, and yet, in his strenuous life Dr. Bourne has seemed to look for more work.

That his latest appointment gives him. To rouse the Catholics of London north of the Thames to a sense of their power when awakened, and of their inglorious action, these, which limited Catholic society on the education question, and contents itself with what may be given instead of what should be by right, which allows priests attending public institutions to be paid like porters, or not at all, and which is proud of a handful of figure-head representatives in public bodies, who fear to do anything vigorously lest they may be styled "bigots." There is plenty of room for a change of attitude here.

There is room for a little improvement, too, in the archdiocese, in a matter which especially affects the Catholic Press, namely, the bottling up of Catholic official news so that the secular papers may receive it fresh, and the drafts be left to the Catholic papers. To our mind, and we will not allow we are influenced by self-interest, the Catholic Press, which Heaven knows has had a hard fight for the support of the faith, should receive prior consideration to that given to secular papers, which, not, are openly hostile.

But however these things may be, and however they may go on, we doubt there is none of our readers who will not full heartedly welcome as Archbishop the prelate who has in his diocese of Southwark been known as the poor man's Bishop. Than that there is no prouder title, and no surer passport to a generous Catholic heart's welcome. Long Live the Archbishop-Elect!

Religious Maxims.

Sunday. Patience is chiefly concerned in perfecting the virtues. It perfects both the workman and the work. Nature is hasty and inclined to hurry; light and grace, like their Divine Author, are calm and deliberate.

How shalt thou bear the cross that now So dread a weight appears? Keep quietly to God, and think Upon the Eternal Years.

Monday. With our Christian light, we ought never to be victims of that delusion so common in the world, that only things of a certain bulk, show, and dignity are worthy of patient care and solicitude. For the perfection of the workman is far more than the perfection of the work.

Set hours and written rule are good. Long prayer can lay our fears; But it is better calm for thee To count the Eternal Years.

Tuesday. The greatest thing for us is the perfection of our own soul; and the saints teach us that this perfection consists in doing our ordinary actions well. But we do them well when we do them patiently and lovingly, a method which though at first laborious, with custom becomes delightful.

Brave quiet is the thing for thee, Ouiding thy scrupulous fears. Learn to be real, from the thought Of the Eternal Years.

Wednesday. The first rule for acquiring the virtue of patience is to hold its value in great estimation, and to have a great desire of it. Another help will be to observe how much we fall from our best intentions and best endeavors after the virtue, solely because of our want of patience.

One cross can sanctify a soul; Late saints and ancient seers Were what they were because they mused Upon the Eternal Years.

Thursday. We must begin the exercise of patience with our own interior, and direct our chief attention to the controlling of our interior powers. The whole secret of patience lies in the government of the will: if the will is patient the whole man will be patient.

Bear gently, suffer like a child, Nor be ashamed of tears; Kiss the sweet cross, and in thy heart Sing of the Eternal Years.

Friday. The soul that is wisely disciplined should observe a well-regulated order everywhere and in all things. To the well-regulated mind the beauty of order is not only most becoming but delightful. To be careless about the order of external things is the sign of an ill-regulated mind. But who does not know that to keep to this good order is the work of patience. To lose patience is the beginning of disorder.

Pass not from flower to pretty flower Time flies and judgment nears. Go, make thy honey from the thought Of the Eternal Years.

Saturday. The due order of the interior soul is to keep her centre recollected in God, and so to use her powers and her corporal members that they may be the instruments for the performance of her duties. If we lose that calm and collected centre for a time, it must be recovered as soon as possible.

A single practice long sustained A soul to God endears: This must be thine—to weigh the thought Of the Eternal Years.

Items of Catholic Interest.

"We are well pleased," says the Western Watchman, "over the project of a college for the education of journalists. Specimens of the rare are now rare, and anything that may be done to save it from utter extinction will meet with our hearty sympathy. The laws of morality as well as in the counting room, and in the manner or speed of place in a newspaper a parlor. Great editor posts are born, not they should be baptised Christianity like other people."

Pope Pius X. has always been an earnest champion of Gregorian music. As Patriarch of Venice, he concerned himself actively with the reform of Church music. He was an industrious patron of Abbe Perosi, who was leader of the choir in the St. Mark's Chapel, encouraging him in his duties. "Religious music," he said, "must, through melody, incite the faithful to devotion, and it must possess these three qualities—holiness, artistic worthiness and universality. For this reason any light, trivial or theatrical music, which, either through its form or the manner of its performance, could be designated as profane, must be forbidden in the churches." Cardinal Sartorio urged that the music of the Church be combined in one system and not left to individual caprice. He believed that the highest qualities of Church music were to be found in the Gregorian chant. The Church music was denounced by Cardinal Sartorio as serving only to charm the senses.—S.H. Review.

The jubilee congress of the Catholics of Germany at Cologne which opened on Sunday, August 23, has proved a great success. There was a very large attendance throughout the proceedings. One great event was the procession of the Catholic workmen. The number that took part in it could not have been less than 25,000. It was a splendid spectacle this vast array of toilers all well marshaled. The Rhine and Westphalian industrial workers occupied the chief place. The general remark of those who witnessed the procession was that the Catholic Church was sure to flourish so long as it could proudly point to such fine labor battalions. A great meeting was held in the Festhall, Cardinal Fischer, Archbishop of Cologne, spoke and said he was delighted with the procession. It afforded a noble proof of the power of religion amongst the working classes. The Holy Father, continued the Cardinal, blessed the efforts of the toilers to improve their condition. He had a sympathetic heart for the worker. After the Cardinal's remarks a telegram expressive of homage was despatched to his holiness. On the subsequent days a large number of public and private meetings were held, at which the leading questions of the day in so far as they affect the interests of the German Catholics, were discussed.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't eat and can't find your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach, are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia for years, and tried every remedy I heard of, but never got anything that gave me relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. I cannot praise this medicine too highly for the good it has done me. I always take it in the spring and fall and would not be without it." W. A. NISSEY, Bellefleur, Ont.

LONDON advises say that Attorney-General Finley is to be appointed Lord Chancellor in place of Lord Halsbury, who resigns on account of ill health. The Attorney-General is now engaged in conducting Canada's case before the Alaska boundary arbitration at present going on in London.

A dispatch from St. John's, Nfld., says that the Steamer E. H. Graham, with the Newfoundland Supreme Court aboard, ran on the rocks near Little Bay on Sunday last week. The judges and court officials were rescued by boats from the shore, and the vessel was taken into St. John's Harbor where she will be repaired.

The ball at Government House on Friday night was a most enjoyable social function. His Honor the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Molayre left nothing undone to promote the pleasure of their guests. The floor was in splendid condition and the music furnished by the superb orchestra of the Aristons was superb. Admiral Douglas and some twenty-five officers of the ships were in attendance. The guests numbered about one hundred and twenty-five.

Dr. and Mrs. Courty returned from New York on Thursday evening last, where the Doctor had been under treatment in the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital for four weeks. His many friends will be pleased to know that he has safely passed through the necessary trying operations and is now quite recovered from his illness and has resumed practice.

The manufacturers' Association of Toronto on Friday last devoted a good portion of their session to a discussion of the tariff. The discussion resulted in emphasizing the Association's expression of condemnation of any attempt to accomplish a reciprocity arrangement with the United States. Chairman McNaughton aroused great applause by a plea for a severance of the Tariff from politics. The new president is Geo. E. Drummond.

Mrs. Charles T. Lannon, formerly of Summersville in this Province and now of Roxbury, Mass., recently paid a visit to Rochester, N. Y., to his sisters, Mary and Nellie, of Nazareth convent, and known in religion as Sisters Mary Febronia and Mary Georgina respectively. These two young ladies formerly taught school here. They have been joined this summer by their cousin, Miss Emma and Winnie Edwards of Ellsworth, King's County, who also intend joining the community. They are of the order of St. Joseph's of Nazareth, and their work is all in the teaching profession.

The large laundry in connection with the monastery of the Good Shepherd Hall, was destroyed by fire last Wednesday afternoon. A blaze was discovered in the drying room at 3.30 o'clock by one of the sisters and an alarm was immediately sent in, but in five minutes the whole place was in flames and in less than an hour it was in ashes. There is no theory as to the origin of the fire; at least the mother Superior can afford no explanation. Thirty girls were at work when the fire broke out. These all escaped. Two firemen fell from a ladder and were badly hurt, having to be taken to the hospital. There was $6,000 insurance, divided between the Northern and the Alliance.

LAST Friday night Patrick Regan and Frank Martin, compressed air workers on the Hillsboro bridge, halting from New York, creating disturbance on the public streets were arrested by the police. Regan was arrested while on the way to the Police station in charge of the others, his companion, Martin, interfered with the officers and tried to affect a rescue. Other officers appeared on the scene and took Martin into custody. Saturday morning they were up before his Honor the Squire when Regan was fined $15.00 or two months imprisonment and Martin was sent to prison for four months, without the option of a fine.

SUNDERED.

BY E. BECK.

It is not the mountains high and grand With the sunshine crowned or snow, Nor is it the wastes of arid sand, Or the valleys long and low, Nor is it the rivers swift or wide, Nor the sea without an end O'er whose crested wave the tall ships ride, That can sever friend from friend. But mistrust and doubt and suspicion wrong, The glance of a scornful eye, The bitter words of an angry tongue, And the angering, quick reply, Can end the friendships of many a year, Can sunder heart from heart, And can leave the friends that were near and dear As far as the poles apart. —Ave Maria.

A Talk With the Brother of Pius X.

(Salvatore Cortesi in the Independent.)

Every Italian, away down in his heart, would much rather be Pope of the world than King of Italy, and the position, like that of President of the Republic, has the additional advantage of being open to the ambition of the humblest person.

Pius X. is little known to the Romans, although a familiar figure in Venice, where he was almost worshipped for his charity and benignity, and equally in his native village, because when he rose to the dignity of Cardinal and Patriarch he did not forget his origin, but treated his family with affection and took his sisters—who were so far parents that they have never worn hats—to live with him at the famous Cathedral of St. Mark.

The Pope is the elder of two brothers, the other being Angelo, the most important member of the Sarto family, which by universal admission is a model of virtue and of that physical and moral health which only the country, the open air, the "innocence of the fields" seem to produce. No one could speak with more authority or with greater appreciation of his brother than Signor Angelo; so having occasion to meet him, I utilized the talk in the interests of the readers of the "Independent," finding him a good-looking old man, handsome perhaps than the Pope himself, with fine manners and a cordial way with him which wins all hearts and makes him the most popular man of his district.

To my discreet questions he began at once:

"You want to hear of Beppi?" (Beppi is the Italian diminutive for Giuseppe always used by the Sarto family.) "From what I have always understood our family has from the first been humble, although at one time it rose somewhat. My grandfather, who was a commercial agent, is as far back as I can remember. He lived to be almost eighty, and adored us children, although we gave him little peace. My most distinct recollection of him is that he used to sit at the door of our house, smoking a pipe, dressed in a coat with very long tails, which Beppi and I would surreptitiously pull, and he would send us round bits of licorice (a most beautiful treat) while mamma was looking. His third son was Battista, our father, commercial agent like our grandpa, who married Margherita Sanson, a pretty little dressmaker of Riese. A country dressmaker fifty years ago meant very few svazichie (dimes) and a large amount of work. In those days inch measures were unknown here, so she measured her customers with a piece of string, tying knots in it for the required lengths. They had two sons and six daughters—the present Pope and me (Angelo), Teresa, Rosa, Maria, Antonia, Lucia and Anna; three of the girls married and three remained maids and lived with Beppi at the Patriarchate in Venice.

"Antonia married a tailor, Francesco D.-Bel, and had five children; Lucia married the sacristan of the Church of Salzano, Luigi Boschini, and had two children; Teresa married the innkeeper of Riese, Giovanni Battista Parolin, and had nine children, one of whom is parish priest and monsignor, and we expect great things of him. Many of this younger generation are married to persons in their own class, while I have had two daughters and have three grandchildren."

"When I had had this interesting account of the family of the Pontiff, I thought I would like some details of his Holiness from a familiar point of view. "Now that your brother has been elevated to such a dignity, will you continue to be postman—an employee of the King of Italy—and shopkeeper in your little village? Have you no desire to live near Pius X.?" I asked. Signor Angelo replied:

"Of course, I will follow the will and desires of my brother, but Rome is not home; I do not hear my language (Venetian dialect) and everything is strange. We have made no plans. O. fairly my poor brother must need some dear one near him; he was not made for that lonely post at the Vatican, and is so accustomed to being taken care of by my sisters that he must long for them."

Signor Angelo may be quite right. I am sure he is; but what is certain is that his three sisters (now no longer young) lament from morning to night the separation from their favorite brother, fearing for his comfort and realizing with a kind of despair that separation is as final almost as though he had died.

Signor Angelo seemed to take great pleasure in recalling early days and stories of Pius X.: "We had our house, a little ground and some furniture, that was all, and little enough it was for a family of ten, so we were obliged to live carefully, very carefully indeed. Papa was most religious, like Beppi, and taught us the rudiments of religion; but we could only sign our names and could read fluently enough, while Giuseppe devoured whatever came in his way. When he began to go to school he took all the prizes, made such progress that he (and I, too) was sent to Casellfranco to school, a donkey being bought at considerable sacrifice to take us there, we boys quarreling regularly every day as to who should drive it, Beppi always conquering, as he was older and stronger than I. Poor beast," he added, with a twinkle in his eye; "those were not pleasant days for him, but he died at a green old age and was very fond of us both.

"Papa died in 1852. So as our mother could not send us to school any longer, she had Giuseppe recommended to the Patriarch of Venice, Mgr. Monseco, who got him into the seminary at Padua. He was ordained priest in 1858, and from that time it was clear sailing. Beppi forged ahead to some purpose, as you see. Ah! by the way, Giuseppe was recommended to the Patriarch by an uncle who was Mgr. Monseco's servant. How little any of them thought at that time that he would some day not only be master there, but at the Vatican!"

As the good, big Angelo seemed inclined to lose himself in dreams of the family's grandeur, I recalled him to reality by asking for a few stories about his brother. "Ma che vuole!" he replied, "what can I say? Things happened and we thought no more of them. When they took place they did not strike us in the light of anecdotes to be remembered."

However, I kept the conversation in the proper channel and learned that Pius X. always had the simplest habits. He retired early, rising at the most unearthly hours; ate little, without much regard to what it was, and worked indefatigably without his working upon him. Apropos of early rising, Signor Angelo recounted that one day when Giuseppe was parish priest at Tombole he (Angelo) was an interested witness of the following conversation. His brother had risen at 5 a. m. and, as had happened before, finding that the sacristan was still in bed, himself opened the church for an early worshiper who, somewhat shocked, proposed to call the sacristan, when Sarto replied: "No, no! let him alone. Don't you think I am able to open a door by myself? When I shall be old and ill he will open the door and I shall stay in bed."

Another interesting fact which I gleaned was, to use Signor Angelo's own words: "Beppi was at my house when the news that he had been made Cardinal arrived. We had all been together, and he had been joking us on what he called our aristocratic habits. We went out together to the post office, and he said: 'I think the moment for you to carry out your great desire to go to Rome has come.' 'Then you are really to be a cardinal?' I asked, delighted. 'Yes; have you the money to go?' 'Ah, Beppi, things are going badly; I do not think I can put forty dollars together.' 'Forty dollars! Why, you are a rich man; with forty dollars one could go to the ends of the world!' Angelo continued with a shake of his head: 'Beppi is charitable, and so never has a cent in his pocket; but he has the best heart in the world. Once, after he was Cardinal, he came to see me, I being in bed with pneumonia. When he entered the room he said: 'I hear that you want to die, and I have come to see what you are going to leave me, as my affairs are at a low ebb.' And he stayed with me until I was better. 'What a pity our mamma is not alive. When he was created Cardinal he came to see her and said: 'See, mamma, do I not look handsome dressed in red?' and indeed he did, so that she cried for joy at having such a son. What would she have said if she had seen him in white?"

With these words Signor Angelo went his way.

Monks Compiled the Early Dictionaries.

Dr. J. A. H. Murray, editor of the New English Dictionary, told his hearers a great many interesting things about dictionaries in the course of a recent lecture. The word dictionary, he said, appeared first in 1225 and though "dictionary" was used in its modern sense in 1542, it had not then ousted either the more correct word "vocabulary" or the fanciful titles which early compilers liked to enjoy. The contents of the earliest dictionaries were not arranged in alphabetical order, but under subject headings; it is only since the end of the sixteenth century that the alphabetical arrangement has become universal in Europe, an arrangement which is responsible for the wonderful application of the title "dictionary" to any work treating of subjects—e. g. cabinet-making or national biography—in alphabetical order. A dictionary is properly a book about words.

The average person seems somehow to think of dictionaries as the invention of Dr. Johnson and an altogether modern project. Dr. Murray corrected that idea. They were not the work of one or several men, he told his audience, but a growth developed through the ages. They began with the glosses—that is, the explanation in easy Latin or English—of hard Latin words written by the monks between the lines of the manuscripts. The glosses grew into translations, and collections of glosses by this monk or that from all the sources available to him made glossaries or dictionaries. Little by little English supplanted the easy Latin explanations, and the words were arranged in a rudimentary alphabetical order, thus forming a long ago as 2000 A. D., Latin-English dictionaries.

The first book with the title of "An English Dictionary" was published in 1623. Such works were mainly compiled for the use of "women and other unskilled persons." In the year 1721 appeared Hagyard's Yellow Oil is a good remedy for man or beast. It reduces swelling, allays inflammation, takes out pains and cures cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, quinsy, sore throat, etc. Price 25c.

A small boy living with his aunt and grandma noticed on one occasion that the regular black pepper shaker was filled with red pepper. This aroused no little concern on the part of the lad, and, turning to his aunt, who sat next to him at the table, he said: "You better not eat any of that red pepper, Aunt Harriet; grandma says that red pepper kills ants."

Fatal Automobile Accident.

While Barney Oldfield's racing automobile was running nearly 60 miles an hour at the Grand Point track Detroit last Wednesday afternoon, in the tenth mile open event, one of the tires burst through and exploded throwing the car into the fence and injuring Frank Shearer, a spectator, so badly that he died in ambulance en route to a hospital. The car went fifty feet through the air, and Oldfield, who kept his seat, had a marvelous escape from death. He received several cuts about the body and had one rib broken. It was an afternoon of accidents at the track, two other high speed machines, those driven by Harry Cunningham and Henri Page, the Parisian, coming to grief, because of the tires. Fortunately no one was hurt in either of these accidents. As Oldfield was turning later on his seventh mile the friction on the upper front tire burned it through and it exploded. The car with its tremendous momentum, shot for the outer edge of the track, which is six feet above the ground beyond. Oldfield has just time to twist his brake and head for a root between two trees. Shearer was standing against the fence at this point and the car struck him, splitting his head, both legs in several places and fracturing his skull. He was thrown seventy five feet and never recovered consciousness. Oldfield had presence of mind enough to throw himself backward on the flat neck of the car which went crashing through a low tree and landed a wreck, fifty feet beyond.

Cheese Board Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Cheese Board was held Friday afternoon, 11th, and was fairly well attended. The following cheese were boarded: Lakerville 120; St. Peter's, 120; East River, 85; Red House, 90; New Dominion, 100; New Glasgow, 225; New Perth, 150; Haselbrook, 150; Hillsboro, 150; Gowanus, 145; Cornwall, 117; Dundas, 125; Gowanus, 85; Winnet, 100; Summerside, 165; Mt. Stewart, 170. The buyers were Dillon & Spillet and John Wheatley. The prices paid were 11 1/2c and 11c. The following cabinet agents were present: quiet but steady: English market steady; Montreal 11 1/2c to 11c; Brookville 11; London 52 to 53.

Prof. Zelt delivered an instructive address in which he stated that he had visited all the factories on the island but one and found them all fairly well equipped and better than a great many in Ontario. Our dairy men this summer have been favored with cool nights for curing cheese and can therefore turn out a better article than otherwise. In factories near the shore the cheese has a moist flavor. This is "the P. E. Island flavor" and is largely caused by pasturing near the shore in marsh land. This is being largely overcome of late, however. One thing struck him regarding the manufacturing of cheese here, and that is the large quantity of rennet used. He believed that if less were used more body could be produced. It would be worth investigating to see if the change would not improve the goods.

"Remember," admonished the minister, "when you begin to notice the mole in your neighbor's eye there is pretty certain to be a beam in your own."

"That's right," replied Sinnickson. "I make the average man's whole face beam to find a mole in his neighbor's eye."
