THE FAIR IMPOSTOR.

But for the actors, the scenery, the properties and the supers, murmured Dawson Slade. 'Yes, I know,' and he groaned.

'There hasn't been such a brilliant affair at the Towers for I don't remember when,' went on Mrs. Jones. 'The country's quite a sight. Half the saloons here, sir, and they are wearing feathers and laces as if it was a royal drawing room!'

'What a narrow escape I have had,' murmured Slade. 'One hour earlier and I should have been let in for this. Well, Mrs. Jones, don't let me keep you away from this grand entertainment. Go and enjoy yourself, and, mind, not a word to anybody that I'm in the house!'

'Very well, sir; but I must, indeed, see about something for you to eat,' said Mrs. Jones, and she hurried out.

'Let me go to bed, Louis,' said Dawson Slade, with a sigh. 'I fancied they might be out, or had dined, or that a ball might be on; but amateur theatricals! nothing so awful crossed my mental presentiments. I wonder what they will end up. Go and see, Louis. A cup of chocolate and a rusk will suit me.'

The faithful Louis went down, and returned in about half an hour with Mr. Flitters himself, and bearing—vast condescension; a small but dainty little dinner, which the chef had achieved as an impromptu.

'I told Monsieur Egalite it was for you, sir,' said Flitters, 'and he threw his soul into it. Mr. Slade can appreciate an artist's efforts, and will make allowance for shortness of time,' he said, sir.

'Take my compliments to Monsieur Egalite,' said Slade, as they lifted the covers, 'and my best thanks. Good-night, Flitters, good night! Mind, not a word to anyone!'

'Rely on me, sir,' said Flitters, and then Slade and his valet were left alone. Arrayed in his dressing gown, he ate his dainty dinner daintily, smoked a cigarette and sipped the small bottle of old Lafitte, then leaned back in his easy-chair, musing over yesterday's singular incident in the park, and wondering whether he would ever see that pale, beautiful face again.

He had almost forgotten that he was at the Grange, had quite forgotten the dreaded theatricals, when an indistinct thunder of applause greeted his ears.

Then he laid down the end of his cigarette, and looked round for Louis. Presently that faithful domestic entered.

'Where have you been?' he asked.

No more Torture from Eczema.

Relief Quick and Cure Certain When DR. BOVEL'S HERB AND GUM SALVE is used.

There is no form of itching skin disease which can defy the extraordinary curative powers of Dr. Bovel's Herb and Gum Salve.

This is a strong statement, and is only made after years of experience with the use of this preparation in the most horrible cases of eczema which you could imagine.

Relief from the terrible itching comes with the first few applications and then it is a question of patiently applying the salve and watching the natural process of healing which is set in operation by this great healer.

There are lots of cures to refer to, but what you want is actual trial in your own case, when you will soon realize that there is no disputing its wonderful healing power.

If you have Eczema or any form of itching skin disease don't let an hour pass before sending for this treatment. Dear Sirs—I feel it my duty to make you some endorsement of the excellent healing qualities of your Herb and Gum Salve, which I have used for eczema and skin eruption. It has also been used in my household for scalds, burns, etc., and I find it unsurpassed as a curative agent for such troubles. Yours, W. DUFF, St. Lambert, P.Q.

SAFE EVEN FOR CHILDREN

There is not a Trace of Opium or Morphine in 'Father Morriscy's No. 10' (Lung Tonic.)

A cough is merely a symptom of an irritated, inflamed or diseased condition of the air passages or the lungs themselves.

Many cough mixtures are simply preparations containing enough Opium, Morphine or similar drugs to deaden the irritation. They relieve the cough but they do not remove the unhealthy condition that caused it. Moreover any medicine containing morphine or opium is unsafe unless prescribed by a competent physician.

'Father Morriscy's No. 10' (Lung Tonic) contains absolutely no drugs of this character. It relieves a cough by removing the cause. Made of Roots, Barks and Balsams, Nature's own remedies, it clears the mucus from the passages, soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, and strengthens the lungs and whole system so that they can throw off the disease entirely. Thousands have proved it. Trial bottle 25c. Regular size 50c. At your dealer's, or from Father Morriscy Medicine Co. Ltd., Chatham, N.B.

'Just look into the saloon, sir,' said Louis, with a smile. 'Shouldn't have known it from a theater. A great success, sir. Wonderful number of people there; quite a dress affair, too.'

'And all bored to death; hiding their yawns behind their fan.' 'No, sir; the thing seems to be going very well. Not at all like amateurs; one young lady—very small and fair, Miss Warner, I think they said—is playing very well, sir.'

'Ah! that's the remark. I'm out of it. I hate amateur theatricals. I'll go to bed soon, Louis, and you can go back to the festive scene. Mind! don't let the duke or anybody who knows you see you, or they'll know I am here, I don't mean to put in an appearance till to-morrow.'

Ten minutes afterward Dawson Slade was in bed, and Louis was about to take his departure on tiptoe, when there came a hurried knock at the door, followed by another; then the door was opened and Lord Gerald appeared.

With a hurried 'How do you do, Louis?' he limped—it could scarcely be called limping—to the bed.

'Slade, my dear fellow! Is it really you?'

Slade sat up, Gerald seized his hand and held on to it. 'Lilian—Miss Woodleigh, I mean, 'And who may Miss Woodleigh be?' asked, with a yawn.

'Sir Talbot's daughter; she was to play Juliet—is to play, rather—for her sake you'll oblige me. It's for her I feel so cut up. I am so proud of her, and his lips quivered. Slade turned over and looked at him.

'Oh! he said, 'the future marchioness, I suppose—' 'Slade!' exclaimed Gerald, in a low, reproachful voice.

'Well, what else can I think? You don't care a fig for a large and intelligent audience, exasperated beyond endurance, but center all your grievance on her disappointment! Miss Woodleigh—didn't know Sir Talbot had a daughter! Well, good and promise her that she shall play Juliet next week, next year, whenever Rayburn turns up.'

'You won't come!' said Gerald, despairfully. 'Ah, if you knew her, if you had seen her—' 'But that's just it!' said Slade, exasperated. 'If it had been a professional lady, as it usually is, I might say I might have been simple enough to yield to your persuasions and play the fool—Romeo, I mean; but to play up to some insane young lady, who has no more idea of acting than a stick, but who thinks she can play Juliet better than Patti or Neilson! No, Gerald, it cannot be did,' as the Yankee says. 'Good-night!'

Gerald turned away. 'Good-night!' he said, and there was something so bitter and sorrowful, so intense a disappointment, that it went straight to Slade's heart.

With something that sounded strangely like an oath, he sat up in bed.

'Here, Gerald!' he called, with his white forehead puckered into an exasperated frown, 'Come back! Confound it! Look here—' turned up. There was an accident, you say? Then he was in the train, and if you took the only fly—' 'The only fly,' said Slade, with grim satisfaction.

'He's left behind at the station and won't get here till the play is half over. And, I say, Slade, you must get up. I want you to play Romeo.'

'What?' exclaimed Slade, sitting up in bed and staring at him. 'I want you to play Romeo,' repeated Gerald, 'I know you can act. Don't you remember playing it at Lady Brown's years ago? You played Romeo, didn't you?'

'I murdered that immortal character?' said Slade, drowsily. 'And I've heard you speak of your good memory; I say, Slade, do wake up.'

'But I don't want to, my dear Vasavous; I'd rather not. Do go away!'

Gerald groaned, and his small fingers clasped and unclasped the broad shroud, nervously.

'If you don't know what a fix I'm in—' 'I never knew a man who went in for amateur theatricals that wasn't in a fix,' murmured Slade. 'It will be a lesson for you, my dear boy. Once bit twice shy. You won't want any more of this thing anyhow.'

'It's real horrible,' went on Gerald, disregarding the interruption. 'It isn't the people I care about, though they'll be horribly disappointed, but her.'

'Her—who?' asked Slade, from beneath the clothes, and with suppressed irritation.

'Lilian—Miss Woodleigh, I mean, 'And who may Miss Woodleigh be?' asked, with a yawn.

'Sir Talbot's daughter; she was to play Juliet—is to play, rather—for her sake you'll oblige me. It's for her I feel so cut up. I am so proud of her, and his lips quivered. Slade turned over and looked at him.

King Edward VII.

An Outdoor Man.

(BY FRANK HYDE.)

In paying tribute to the many excellent qualities of our late Sovereign, and in reviewing the many sides of his life, while Prince and King, the orator or scribe would inadequately fill his mission if he failed to give due consideration to his late Majesty's innate love of all good sport. Born to be a Monarch of the most virile and intrepid people that ever formed a nation, his influence as an active participant or patron of many sports and pastimes not only increased the popularity and vogue of each particular form of recreation but exerted a certain control on the conduct of those lines of sports, which to-day are enjoyed in Great Britain as they are no other place in the world. His days spent in England's great universities gave him an appreciation of athletics and field games, and later years he took particular pride in the achievements and the glories that came to Great Britain through the prowess of her sons. His fondness for yachting led him into earnest competition for the Queen's cup, which he won more than once at Cowes. As a huntsman, stalking deer and shooting game on his own and other preserves in England and Scotland, and as an expert big game shot in India and elsewhere, he had few equals. He enjoyed golf and played it much and well. His encouragement of football and particularly the game of cricket was especially gratifying to the upholders of these games. But of all the sport that stood first in his estimation and nearest to his heart, that of horse-racing was the one indulgence in which he was most deeply interested and withal most successful. The racing stables he maintained were for size and quality of product quite the best in England; his horses have time and time again carried off the highest honors of the turf. And it must be said of him that as King and good sportsman, he was ever concerned in maintaining the splendid traditions of an English gentleman's most popular sport. In the passing of Great Britain's most beloved and popular ruler, not only does the world lose the most ideal Sovereign that history records, but the nobler side of life sustains the loss of a sympathizer, and sport loses one of its most potent advocates and enthusiastic exponents. Matters of state, court and public functions and the social calls upon kingship permit but brief spells in which a King may follow, unhampered, the inclination of his mind. The wonder is that King Edward gave of such time as he could spare, so much to the free enjoyment of outdoor life and the evincing of a desire for peaceful pursuits. He has truly been called the prince of good sportsmen. If ever there was a human embodiment of British fair play and if ever a creator of non-militant spirit engendered in a nation's people by adherence to the pleasures of sport, then well entitled is our late King to the noblest title of King or subject, that of Peacemaker.

It is earnestly hoped that his son and successor, King George the Fifth, inherits King Edward's love of nature as well as the art of man and that British sport will have in our new Sovereign as zealous an upholder of the ideals of many games and as jealous a respecter of the traditions of all British recreations and outdoor sports as was that father who was the trust of monarchs and the frat of fine sportsmen. No other nation will more appreciate the fondness for outdoor life in its ruler than that which has carried good sports, into Dominions on which the sun never sets.—'Outdoor.'

The Evening Chit-Chat
By RUTH CAMERON

A gift—wedding, Christmas or any other kind—that shows no thought or individuality, seems to say, "I must give something. I don't want to bother to think about it and so I have just gotten this to cover the law."

And what a lot of that kind of gift every wedding calls out. And how comparatively few of the other kind that are the result of real thoughtfulness and real attempts on the part of the donors to put themselves in the recipients' place and imagine what they would like best.

I visited one of the June brides in her new home the other day.

In her dining room cabinet she had thirty-nine pieces of cut glass. Eleven of them were bon bon dishes. She also had several dozen odd pieces of silver of many of which she confessed she did not know the use.

Her walls on the other hand were almost bare. There had been but four pictures among her wedding gifts. A china pitcher pressed into service to hold the roses I brought her, showed her lack of vases or flower bowls. There was but one clock in the house and the only lamp was one she had just bought.

There are so many things, both expensive and inexpensive, that would just fit into niches in the new household, and make the bride bless you every time she used or looked at them, that it is simply incomprehensible to me that so many people seem unable to think of anything except the conventional little things of which there are sure to be a surplus.

Pictures, for instance, are a splendid gift and one that is next to impossible for a bride to have too many of.

"But I am not a good judge of pictures and I don't know just what to get," protests someone.

I anticipated that protest, having made it in times past myself. My artistic friend has furnished me with a list of several that are thoroughly safe and desirable.

"The Hanging of the Crane" heads the list, of course. I know a man who gave over a dozen copies of that to different brides of his acquaintance and he used to say he was afraid to get married for fear they would retaliate in kind and he would have to furnish his home with the "Hanging of the Crane."

The Madonnas are always beautiful pictures to give. The Sistine Madonna, the Madonna of the Chair, and the Madonna of the Arbour are particularly beautiful ones. Sir Gala had, any of the Corot or Inness landscapes. Millet's "Angelus" or "The Sowers." "The Death of the First Born," a magnificent animal picture are all prints that you would be safe in giving to the most exacting.

Flower vases and bowls are another beautiful, eminently desirable gift. A tall crystal vase, a quaint Japanese jar, or a bowl of some of the new potteries would not represent very much expense and would mean a good deal of utility and beauty.

Nice linen is always acceptable—a fine tablecloth and a dozen napkins to match was one of the most thoroughly appreciated gifts that one of the June brides I know of received and I am glad to notice that fine linen and even inexpensive blankets and sheets are beginning to appear on many of the bride's gift tables.

A carving set, a sewing tray, a pair of brass candlesticks, a half dozen frappe glasses, a fern dish with a fern in it, a good thermometer—would no any of these and a dozen more little niche fillers make a more acceptable gift and one more personal and individualized than a conventional bit of silver or cut glass or any similar bric-a-brac?

Fortune Telling

Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but brass.

Womanly health when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 40 years, been curing delicate, weak, pain-wracked women, by the hundreds of thousands and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to indelicate questionings and offensively repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as sacredly confidential. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. PIERCE'S GREAT FAMILY DOCTOR BOOK, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in Plain English hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. Sent free, in plain wrapper to any address on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Rubbing the hands over with a cut tomato once a day will not only remove all stains, but will serve to whiten the hands as well.

A soft rag moistened with lemon juice and then dipped in silver whitening will be found excellent for cleaning piano keys.

To keep the soreness out of a painful soft corn, try binding it up each night with baking soda, moistened with a little water.

A thick paste of litharge and glycerine will stop up holes and cracks in tinware. It should be allowed to stand a week before using.

It will save time if a frying pan or griddle is wiped with a piece of old newspaper to remove the surplus grease before it is washed.

A spoonful of sugar added to the water for basting meat, will give it a rich brown color, and the flavor will be much improved.

If your soup is found too salty, add a few slices of raw potatoes, and cook a little longer. The potato will absorb the surplus salt.

To kill fleas on a pet dog, if the animal is small, place it in a small bathtub of water and comb the hair with a fine comb; water drowns these pests.

Place a heavy and deep skillet over the irons, and be surprised how much hotter the irons will get and how much longer they will retain their heat.

If seams are pressed over a broomstick or any rounded edge with care in keeping them straight, there will be no shining streak to mark their length.

A large bunch of sweet clover in a closed room will drive flies away when the room is opened later. A few drops of lavender will serve the same purpose.

To clean plaster of paris figures and plaques, make a strong solution of scleratus in water, stand the figure in and dash the water over it, touching every crevice.

When a large bottle of olives is opened and part of them used, pour about two tablespoonfuls of olive oil upon the brim to prevent the rest from becoming soft.

To test tea, burn a small quantity on a metal plate. With good tea the Sutton's Body Found. Was There Foul Play?

A message was received in town from Sydney last night saying that the body of the missing man, John Sutton, of this city, had been found near the Bruce wharf at Sydney floating on the water. The discovery was made in the afternoon as the s.s. Tyrian was backing out from the pier. Our despatch from North Sydney today also gives some further particulars, including an incident that reflects credit on the Mayor of Sydney for his humane and charitable act. The report of Sutton being missing appeared exclusively in the Telegram a few days ago. His wife, who is working at Jackman's tailoring department, was so upset by reading the report of the fact that her husband was missing that she was unable to come down to work for two days. The deceased left St. John's about 78 months ago for Canada to seek employment. He drifted out to Alaska and went to Nome, where it is supposed he made considerable money. His wife had not heard from him since he left home and did not expect that he would return. Besides her own support she has two small children to provide for. The Sydney despatch would indicate that there had been foul play. It is as follows:

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., July 19. The mysterious disappearance of John T. Sutton, belonging to St. John's, who was returning home from Nome, Alaska, some 12 days ago, caused much anxiety among his friends here yesterday. The Mayor took up a subscription with the result that Tucker Tread made a thorough search for the supposed drowned man, but to no avail, and friends had to come to the conclusion that he had met foul play. Particularly probable did the last solution seem to be very likely, as he had a large sum of money during the day of his disappearance. This afternoon, however, as the steamer Tyrian was backing out of her berth, a body was seen to rise from below the steamer's propeller and on investigation was found to be that of John T. Sutton.

The Anglo Burglary.

Police officers Noseworthy and Byrne arrested J. Lindstrom, 38, machinist, New Gover Street, and A. Noonan, 38, clerk, King's Road, last night at their homes and took them to the lockup. They are charged with entering the office of the Anglo-American Telegraph Co. Monday night and stealing therefrom a sum of $315. The report of this affair was published exclusively in the Telegram yesterday. The police believe they have the men who did the deed and that they have evidence sufficient to convict them. They will be brought before the Court on a preliminary hearing to-day. The police deserve great credit for the promptitude and ardour with which they are investigating the deed.

Sociable at British Hall

St. Patrick's Amusement Club will have a sociable at the British Hall on the 27th in aid of the Fund for completing the St. Patrick's Church. The Ladies committee will cater on the occasion. It is expected that the event will be a success.

HOP BEER CASE.—The postponed hop beer case is on for hearing at the Magistrate's Court to-day.

MINARD'S LIMENT CURES DISTEMPER.

We Say, No!

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me through the medium of your paper to express my opinion and the sentiment of a large number of taxpayers on the subject advanced by "Citizen" in last evening's issue. I heartily concur with "Citizen" in one respect, that is, the summer is slipping away. Therefore no radical change should be made this season. Our City Fathers should be given time and opportunity to procure and sample the advice of other citizens on this subject, and after careful consideration of the pros and cons of the proposed change, give their decision.

The City Fathers will and must decide. If we are to recognize them as fathers, they in return must be just and kind to their children. There are scores of boys and girls who, during their vacation, are endeavoring to augment the small income of a widowed mother and trying to help support their smaller sisters and brothers, and who in return seek recompense in attending the band concerts periodically furnished at the expense of the city and through the generosity of some of the brigades and navy hands. Are those future taxpayers and those who are past their labor to be deprived and debarrated from a two hours' pleasure by the imposition of an entrance fee? We say no! The rights of a liberty-loving people must not be usurped by any one individual. I hope that wise counsel will prevail among our City Fathers and the proposed change be rejected. In a subsequent letter I shall submit for consideration a form of change, if a change has to be made, without infringing on the rights of any one.

Yours truly, E. K.

Here and There.

The local arrived from Carbonear at noon.

GOOD GATE RECEIPTS.—The gate receipts of last night's match, C. L. B. vs. C. C. C., were $58.14.

The schr. Empire, Capt. Smith, arrived here yesterday from Oporto after a tedious run of 38 days. She had head winds all through, and came out in sand ballast.

ALMOST RECOVERED.—Cyril Ford, the boy who was accidentally shot some weeks ago by another lad on the South Side, is now out of danger, and will be leaving the hospital tomorrow.

Special announcement.—Grand Regatta Sociable in the Prince Wales Rink, Regatta Night. Music by C. C. C. Band. Tickets at usual popular prices. Double, 70 cts.; Ladies, 40c.; for sale by the Shamrock Amusement Club.—July 20, 11.

LOST MOUTH PIECE.—One of the M. G. B. lads in Sunday's funeral parade lost the mouth piece of his trumpet between the Armoury and Parade Rink. He would be thankful to the finder to return it to the Armoury.

GROUND FOR REGATTA.—Secretary J. L. Noonan, of the Regatta Committee, has had an answer from the Council about the ground for our Annual Derby Day, and the committee and public as usual have been given the use of it.

St. Mary's Church Extension Fund Garden Party at Brookfield, Wednesday, 20th inst. C. L. B. Band in attendance. The Buckboard will leave the Cross Roads every hour from 3.30 p.m. Ice Cream, Strawberries and Cream and Teas served on the grounds.—July 19, 21.

Bled to Death.

The young man Leo Moore, who had his arm terribly lacerated, and whose death at Bell Island the Telegram exclusively reported, was a married man and had a wife and three children. He had bled to death practically before the doctors reached him. The main artery and all the veins in his left arm were severed when he jumped through the window and when the physicians arrived it was found impossible to get these veins to secure them. He was a fine type of manhood and was considered to be a splendid workman.

Personal Notes.

Rev. Fr. McNamara arrived here by the Portia yesterday to spend a holiday with his friends.

Mr. Patrick Berrigan, of Baird's office, who with his little boy had been spending a holiday at Trepassy, returned here by the Portia, having enjoyed himself well.

Master Walter Horwood, son of Mr. William Horwood, of the Horwood Lumber Works, arrived here on Saturday on a visit to his parents after an absence of 7 years in Montreal. For that period he has been working as head of the coupler and steel departments of the Montreal Steel Works. He is yet quite a young chap, and is a Terra Novan who is making good.

Bruce Passengers.

The Bruce arrived at Port aux Basques at 7.30 a.m. to-day bringing R. E. Thorne F. H. Russell, Miss Billiard, Mrs. W. Day, A. L. Robbins, C. H. and Mrs. Wright, C. W. Hunman, C. Tyler, E. E. Stuckless, J. and Mrs. Roberts, R. D. McRae, F. W. and Mrs. Devanna, J. W. and Mrs. Morris, Mrs. T. Buffett, Mrs. H. H. Halliburton, Mrs. G. M. LeDrew, Mrs. M. Forsey, Miss A. Poole, Dr. T. J. The Bruce arrived at Port aux Basques at 7.20 a.m. to-day.

The Clyde left Herring Neck at 6.10 p.m. yesterday bound inward.

The Dundee left Salvage at 7.30 p.m. yesterday bound inward.

The Glencoe arrived at Placentia at 3.30 p.m. yesterday.

The Home is leaving Bay of Islands this afternoon.

The Invermore is still north of Twillingate.

Automobile owners should visit the "WEST END GARAGE." Cars are stored, kept clean, and in constant readiness for a telephone call, relieving the owner of all the annoyance of cleaning and looking after the car himself.

CHARLES VEY, Licensed Chauffeur and Expert. Phone No. 152. July 19, w.s.

SHAMROCK SOCIABLE.—A sociable will be held at the Prince of Wales Rink on Regatta Night, by the Shamrock Amusement Club. The C. C. C. Band will furnish the music.

The incoming express left Port aux Basques at 8.30 a.m. to-day.

Notes From Harbor Grace.

Mr. L. Chafe is making some improvements to his pretty residence on Victoria Street. A very handsome glass porch is being put up by Mr. James Simms, carpenter. A concrete wall and steps have just been put in by Messrs. John and Raymond Downing. When completed the residence will be one of the prettiest in town.

Messrs. J. and R. Downing have lately taken the contract to paint the Harbor Grace Boat and Shoe Factory.

The time for the Guy celebration is drawing near and great preparations are being made; but there is just one thing to our mind that should not be forgotten, and that is a light at the top of Garland Street and another in the centre. This street is now wholly used by cabmen and others going to and coming from the railway station, and it would be a poor last view of our beautiful town were visitors to arrive on a dark night. What a dreary place they would think Harbor Grace was to be sure. Let us have more lights, if only for the celebration.

A football match was played in Shannon Park last evening between an eleven from Carbonear and a Harbor Grace team. The result was a victory for the former team by one goal to none. Better luck next time, Harbor Grace!

Mr. H. W. Thomey, the popular cabman, returned from St. John's on Saturday last with a very fine looking horse for his work. Mr. Thomey is now ready for the Guy celebration, and expects to have his share of the cab driving, at least.

A number of ladies and gentlemen intend going out by to-morrow morning's train to Peddleton, where the party will go in camp for a couple of days. Quite a number of family excursion parties, are spoken of as going to the above place shortly, and the only drawback to pleasure is the danger in boarding the train at night. We hope Conductor Lee, who is always on the alert for the comfort of the passengers, will represent to the Reid Co. the need of a suitable platform. We believe that only for the carefulness of the genial conductor accidents would have occurred there ere this.

CORRESPONDENT. Harbor Grace, July 19, '10.

Seaman Arrested.

Yesterday afternoon some Scotch seamen who came here on the Scotia, by the run, were half tipsy on Water Street. One of them was going about trying to sell bed clothes and blankets, and the police arrested them for drunkenness, and also on suspicion that the material might have been stolen. At Crossbie's it was found that the men were paid off from the ship, and as they found their own bedding, the clothing was theirs.

Good Salmon Fishing.

Mr. Caines and five others who were with him at Phinset's Falls arrived here by last night's train, having secured 60 salmon between them. After recent rains there is too much water in the river for successful work.

Messrs. P. C. O'Driscoll, F. J. Morris, D. Barron and Martin White are having fine sport.

First New Fish.

Quite a quantity of new fish caught this summer is stored at Torbay, Outer Cove, Pouch Cove, Flatrock and Logy Bay. It would have been shipped to the city by "steamers" on Monday, but the weather was too damp to send it along. A deal of it will come to hand the first fine day.

Donna Forget.

Friends are reminded that the garden party at Mount Dorset held by the ladies of the Presbyterian Church takes place this afternoon, weather permitting. The ladies have made careful preparation and all hope they will be vouchsafed a fine afternoon. Should the weather be too inclement for an outdoor gathering, it is decided that the event will be held in the Presbyterian Hall. A specially good programme is prepared by Miss Strang. The train will leave for Waterford Bridge at 4 p.m., returning at 8 p.m.

Train Notes.

By the Bruce express at 6 p.m. yesterday there went Mr. Stephens, Rev. W. T. D. Dunn, wife and family, Rev. Mr. Willey, Miss Brown, Miss Whiteaway, James Moores and about fifty second class.

The local arrived at 9.25 last night bringing Mr. Bremner, Mrs. Cotter, Mrs. Wood, Rev. Dr. Whalen, E. Davey, H. Blentis, Rev. J. Ashley, Mr. Caines and party and 20 others.

Our Anglers' Competition.

We offer Three Prizes for the LARGEST TROUT of the following species caught on the Half Holiday, Wednesday, July 20th:

One Prize—For the largest "Local Mud" Trout.

One Prize—For the largest "Rainbow" Trout.

One Prize—For the largest "Brown Trout."

REGULATIONS:—

No. 1—Customers purchasing any portion of Tackle from Our Store from the 16th to the 20th inclusive are eligible to enter this competition.

No. 2—Trout to be sent for inspection any time Thursday, the 21st, up to 2 o'clock p.m., when Competition closes.

Interesting Occasion.

Employees of Messrs. Archibald Brothers Present the Senior Partner With a Handsome Gift.

The employees of Messrs. Archibald Bros., Ltd., had been secretly at work for a week or so collecting and arranging for a suitable gift to convey their hearty congratulations, in a concrete form, to one of their employers, Mr. H. H. Archibald, B.Sc., and his wife, on the event of their wedding, and to wish them much pleasure in the many years it is hoped will follow.

Their efforts in this direction proved to be a splendid success. They collected a sum of money amongst themselves and spent it in a hall stand, which is a very handsome and serviceable piece of furniture.

At closing time on Monday evening all the employees met in one of the spacious rooms of the factory and produced from his hiding place this present.

Mr. Archibald was sent for and told that he was wanted upstairs in the factory, where he went, and was not a little surprised at the sight that confronted him.

All the men, boys and young ladies were standing apparently waiting for something. It is very probable that at this stage he began to feel that he was in for some kind of a serenade or other.

However, whether this is so or not, he did not have long to wait, for the employees, represented by Mr. G. G. Christian, undertook to enlighten him.

Mr. Christian extended to Mr. Archibald the sentiments of the employees in some very well chosen words; and in spite of the fact that he looks on himself as a novice in the art of speech-making, his remarks were very well rendered indeed. He touched on everything that he felt would show Mr. Archibald the kindly feelings and good fellowship that existed between his employees and their employers. He laid special stress on the loyalty and interest of everyone to the concern; pointing out the genuine and determined efforts of each and all to make the products of their factory and tannery the very best possible.

Then came the presentation of the very beautiful hall stand, which has been mentioned before; he closed his remarks with some very sincere wishes for the happiness of the wedded couple, asking Mr. Archibald to convey the same to his wife.

Mr. Archibald, though altogether taken by surprise, handled the situation very well indeed.

He began by telling them that he was completely taken by surprise, as he said he had not the faintest idea that anything of this kind was afoot. He then thanked them on behalf of himself and his wife. He spoke at some length on the relations of employers and employees and vice versa, showing his audience the value of everyone pulling together with the one aim of building up their business, for, as he pointed out, the possibilities of the concern rested as much with the help as with the heads. In this connection he pointed out the advantages accruing to the town by the joint help of every citizen to build up business; and in particular he showed that as they, the managers and help, applied themselves to the shoe business, so they were putting their energy into the building up of their town. He told them, then, that the managers were very anxious to make the work easy and enjoyable, for said he "a man spends most of his time working, and if that time is not pleasurable, then a man spends most of his life without pleasure."

Mr. Archibald then went into the very interesting and almost romantic history of his concern, starting with a concise but very attractive history of his father (the great pioneer of shoemaking with modern machinery in Newfoundland), before the establishment of this business. He showed how his father came to Harbor Grace in his teens and started at the cobbler's bench, which in the short time of 15 years by his skill and determination developed into the splendid business he left behind him when he died at the very early age of 33 years. He went on to follow the concern through the years that have elapsed between that time and the present, showing forth the many changes in the shoe and leather industry during that period. His father, no doubt, had the very best machines that were in being in his day, and asserted that now he and his brothers as their father's successors felt it their duty to make, and have succeeded in making, their plant in this connection second to none in America for the class of work they are doing.

He went into the development of the concern since his connection with it and pointed out what they all had already known, namely, the very rapid strides that have been made; saying that the present output of the factory and tannery is the very largest in their line regularly manufactured in the town. After again enlisting the continued good feelings from the employees, he closed his remarks by reiterating his thanks for the unexpected kindness, and told them that they were just as good at keeping secrets as he was himself—H. G. Standard.

BEGIN EARLIER.—Before the match concluded last night it was almost too dark for spectators to see the players or the ball. The League should start the matches earlier.

Bankmen Days Adrift.

By the s.s. Portia yesterday there arrived here a young chap named Wentzell, of the American banking schr. Atlanta, who was four days and three nights in an open dory, having got astray from his vessel on St. Pierre Bank. He went out single handed in his dory to fish Saturday week and rowed back in the afternoon to where he thought his ship lay, but lost her in the dense fog. To the Telegram on arrival Wentzell said that he was only 16 years old and that he suffered terribly. He had little water in his dory but absolutely no grub, and after the second night out he feared that he would die of hunger. Tuesday it blew heavily and a big sea ran, so that it was often feared by him that his boat would swamp. He bravely kept at the oars, however, and he says that Tuesday of last week the Commander passed him close by, and though he waved his cap to the vessel and made other distress signals they were unheeded. He never attempted to render the poor, famishing young chap the slightest aid, but passed along in his vessel in a most inhuman manner. Later Wentzell rowed on board a little jack owned by John Kavanagh, who looked after him and gave him every attention and landed him at Fox Cove, off Burin. Wentzell says he hardly could have survived another night and day in the dory. He suffered terribly from hunger and thirst. He is being looked after by the American Consul here.

Two French bankmen arrived here also by the Portia yesterday. They were landed there, we learn, yesterday by the Lunenburg banker Mariner, which picked them up after being quite a while adrift from their vessel. They were landed at Cape Broyle, and on arrival here were looked after by the French Consul.

Random Regatta Remarks.

The Central truckmen were at practice in the Doctor last evening and did good time. They will row the Pink-Un and are the same crew who won the truckmen's race in 1908.

Bowings' lower premises are represented in the laborers' race by a crew of young chaps, the oldest of whom is not yet 18. They are all good oarsmen, however, and should give a good account of themselves.

Another crew of laborers of Bowings will row the Nina. Four of them rowed in the brigade race last year with the C.C.C.

Four of the laborers who rowed the Blue Peter to victory for Job Bros. house the past four years have succeeded from the old crew and will row the Guard this year. They are Messrs. Downey, Holwell (stroke), Williams and Anthony.

The Star football crew which the Telegram named yesterday were out for their first practice in the Bob Sexton yesterday evening. Though most of them are new to the work they should get make excellent oarsmen.

The C.C.C. will row the Pink-Un this year. Their crew are Messrs. Morgan, Hynes, Sullivan, Jackman, Caul and O'Toole; Wm. Brown, coxswain.

The People's Club will compete in the Society race. The team will be: Pettigrew, Downs, Brown and Messrs. Healey (3), of Blackhead.

The C. L. B. crew in the Blue Peter will be hard to beat. They are: S. Ebsary, coxswain; Ebsary, stroke; Goudie, Bishop, Boone, Hackett, and White.

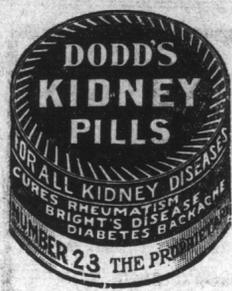

A lad named Johnson of Grand Falls, aged 15 years, wrote Secretary Noonan of the Regatta Committee for a place in the swimming contest. He was sent a favorable answer and will enter the swimming race. He is a splendid swimmer and will make a hard fight for the trophy.

GLENCOE'S PASSENGERS. — The Glencoe reached Placentia at 3.30 p.m. yesterday bringing E. H. Davey, W. B. Smith, F. H. Hue, H. Goss, Capt. Moulton, Mr. Bishop, Miss Bradshaw, Miss Hardigan, Miss Connors, Miss Green, Miss Power, Miss Shea and Miss Wood.

BRIGADE RELAY RACE.—A hard competition is expected among the Brigades for the H. D. Reid Cup at the Relay Race in the Mount Cashel Sports.

ST. MARY'S GARDEN PARTY. — The garden party in aid of St. Mary's Church extension fund will be held at Brookfield this afternoon. The C. L. B. band will be in attendance and teas will be served throughout the afternoon.

Two Fishermen Drowned.

By the Portia we learn that two fishermen overturned their boat off Pass Island on Saturday, the 7th inst., and one of them, a man named James Pierce, was drowned. The boat was heavily ballasted and this was confined, and immediately she capsized she sank. Pierce's companion kept himself afloat possibly by seizing oars or other gear which floated out of the boat as she went down, and was rescued by shore folk in an exhausted condition. Pierce sank quickly after the accident occurred. The drowned man was only 22 years old and single. His body sank in deep water where there is a strong current and it is not believed it will be recovered.

Passengers who came down by the Glencoe and arrived here by last night's train say that a man named Richard Brushett was drowned near Burin, Monday evening. He was taking a load of fish from one of Hollett's schooners to Port au Bras, and the first intention of an accident was had when some oars and other gear belonging to his boat was found floating in the water. No sign of the man or boat was to be had, and the belief is that she was overloaded and sank, bringing the unfortunate fisherman down with her. Brushett was a young unmarried man and leaves a widowed mother to mourn him.

Another Draw.

There was a big gathering of spectators at St. George's Field last evening to witness the Inter-Brigade Football match between the C. L. B. and C. C. C.

Both teams seem to be evenly matched and anticipations for a fast and stubbornly contested game were realized. The evening was cool and pleasant and a slight breeze from the E. N. E. blew. The C. L. B. defended the western goal, and the teams lined up:—

C. C. C.—R. Walsh, goal; Hynes, J. Walsh, backs; J. Murphy, W. Hart, Byrne, halves; B. Hart, Caul, Rodgers, Murphy, Jackman, forwards.

C. L. B.—Marshall, goal; Skeans, Barnes, backs; Bishop, Stevenson, Stick, halves; Bartlett, Hunt, Hayward, White, Oliver, forwards.

When the ball was put in play the C. L. B. started in to rush matters and for a while kept the Cadets busy defending their territory which, however, they ably did. After about five minutes play the Church Lads got the leather down field, when Barnes from a foul throw, took charge of it, and passing to Hayward he drew "first blood" for his side.

The C. C. C. now worked like Trojans to equalize, and after a short while got the sphere up field when Hart sent a beauty from mid-field, and passing Marshall it dropped into the net, and the teams were now equal.

Both teams had now repeated visits to each others goal, and Hart again narrowly escaped beating Marshall by one of his famous long shots. Several fouls were given, for a while play was all over the field, and the half time whistle found both combines working overtime to score another goal. They crossed one goal each.

When the ball was once more kicked off the fast work of the previous half was resumed, corners were conceded each, and several attempts at scoring were frustrated by both Walsh and Marshall. Murphy here took a fine shot from up field, and spectators say it went fully a foot inside the net, but was driven out by the goal keeper, Marshall.

The Cadets now kept the ball well down on their opponents goal, when Jackman captured the ball, passed to Murphy from the centre, and he did the necessary, scoring No. 2 for the C. C. C.

The game now waxed faster than ever and it looked like a Cadet win, when the C. L. B. about 2 minutes before the final sigo got the ball up on the left wing and scored the equalizer amidst great applause, and the game closed:—C. L. B., 2 goals; C. C. C., 2 goals. Mr. W. J. Higgins refereed.

EVENTS FOR TO-DAY.—The principal events for this afternoon are garden party at Littlefield, St. Mary's garden party at Brookfield, St. Andrew's garden party at Mount Dorset, Cochrane St. Epworth League picnic, Congregational Sunday School picnic and Rifle Club competition for senior and junior medals.

The Portia Arrives.

The s.s. Portia, Capt. Fitzpatrick, arrived here at 6 p.m. yesterday from the westward. The ship left here on Friday, the 8th inst., and had it fine until leaving Fermeuse at 6 p.m., after which dense fog set in until Trepassey was reached at 4 a.m. Saturday. She got to Placentia at 11 that night and had to work slowly along in the fog. She left Placentia at 1 a.m. Sunday. The fog lasted until the ship arrived at Harbor Breton at 8 a.m. Tuesday. The ship then had fine weather to Bonne Bay, which she reached at 7 p.m. Thursday. Leaving there at 2 a.m. on Friday, the 15th, the ship stopped that night off Channel Head in a dense fog and remained there laying about near the horn until daylight. She left Channel at 6 a.m. and the fog was in evidence until she reached St. Lawrence at 6 a.m. Monday. She had fine weather and warm until Monday, when the ship struck the cold E. wind. Her passengers were: Messrs. Robinson, Cook, Way, Berrigan, Master Berrigan, Rev. MacNamara; Mesdames Reddy, Keough, Rev. Mother Ita and Sister Teresa; Misses Murphy, B. Conway, N. Roach, Brien, Farrell and 22 steerage.

Very Successful Demonstrations.

The Fleischmann Co. after a very successful and interesting series of demonstrations to the ladies in the East End of the city through their demonstrator, Mrs. S. Anna Peacock, have decided to continue these lessons free in the West End in the schoolroom just back of the Methodist Church, Buchanan Street, commencing July 21st, and continuing till August 4th, on every afternoon at 2.30. Mrs. Peacock is a Domestic Science Teacher of much experience, and will explain how easy and simple it is to make good bread in 4 or 5 hours with Fleischmann's Yeast; also other baked goods made and explained. Samples and refreshing drinks served. To add to the interest a Gas Stove will be given away. Each one attending has an equal chance. Come and learn particulars; each day something different. Menu for one week:

- Thursday — Bread, Rolls, Currant Tea Ring, Strawberry Short Cake.
- Friday — Graham Bread, Clover Leaf Rolls, Lemon Merangue Pie and Lemon Sticks.
- Friday Night — All night Bread, Clover Leaf Rolls and German Coffee Cake.
- Monday — Milk and Water Bread, Parker House Rolls, Walnut Bread.
- Tuesday — Whole Wheat Bread, Maple Nut Ring, Moulded Snow.
- Wednesday — Raisin Bread, Dinner Rolls, Pastry and Lemon Sticks.
- Friday — Plain Bread, German Coffee Cake, Salad.
- Friday Night — The same.

Manufacturers Meet.

A meeting of the General Committee of the Manufacturers, who are working in connection with the organization of the Fall Fair, took place at the Board of Trade rooms last evening. The reports of the sub-committees on amusements, advertisements, decorations, floor space and finance were received and adopted. All are well pleased with the progress made. The Finance Committee will meet next Friday night to decide on the question of ways and means. Meeting closed at 9.30.

Keep the Park Free.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—It is to be hoped that the Park Committee will not allow Mr. Burke, or anyone else, the use of the Park for moving picture shows, even though the city should share in the profits. The plea that the Park is poorly attended is not a good one to urge in favor of vaudeville or picture shows, when it is a notorious fact that the Park is well patronized and seats cannot be obtained by many who visit the place to while away an hour after a hard day's work. The Park is the only place in the city where our people, and especially the poorer class and young people, can go without money and without price, and they ought not to be deprived of that right by being taxed with an entrance fee. I am glad that Messrs. Mullaly and Myrick are on the Park Committee, and that the Council as a whole were so anxious about our young people, by reason of the great lack of recreation grounds, because they will see the wisdom of not allowing this, the only resort to be closed against them. By all means, if it can be done, throw music into the bargain, but let the admission be as ever, free to all who care to raise the latch. I am glad to see that the Council has made a move towards a much needed improvement, and indeed it would be well if they could extend their idea to other places in the city. But as I am not accustomed to writing for the newspapers, and this is the only word I am likely to have to say on this matter, I hope, sir, some abler pen may take it up and show the injustice of allowing the Park for the purpose which is now engaging the attention of the Committee, viz., the letting of the Park for moving picture shows and drawing from our already too limited police force to guard Bannerman Park and leave the city to take care of itself.
Yours truly,

Fishery News by the Portia.

To the pressmen last evening Capt. Fitzpatrick said that, generally speaking, at present there is no fish up along the coast, and lobster people have their gear mostly taken out of the water, having given up fishing. This fishery is about equal to that of last year at the other side of Cape Ray, but from that point down to Burin it is not equal at all to last year's catch which was also small, so that this season's pack is an extremely poor one. Herring are numerous along the coast from Cape Ray to Fortune Bay particularly, and can be had as bait whenever wanted. There is a lot of squid to be seen "breaching" around the waters, but it will not jig yet. Here it may be remarked that hundreds of craft of all sizes are waiting for this bait all along the coast. Jigging is the original method of catching squid and the law forbids that it be taken in any other way. Such a legal provision, Capt. Fitzpatrick thinks is senseless for it serves no good purpose but is detrimental to the fishery and a great loss yearly to those who prosecute it. It is absurd because these fish need no protection, and each year are propagated in myriads. If the men were allowed to trap them now they could get all they required and be at work catching cod with them. Two Lunenburg bankers are at Burin waiting for squid bait. There are, however, only a dozen or so bankers on the coast waiting to bait. There are as yet no arrivals from the Straits. The shore fishermen along the coast there are doing very little. From Cape Ray to Fortune Bay the fishermen along the coast are doing fairly well with hook and line, and two handed boats get 1 to 2 qts. daily. From Fortune Bay to this port there is practically nothing doing for boats or traps since Saturday last. Larder's wrecking tug, Amphitrite, is at Cape Broyle discharging material, and their sailing schooner is at Fermeuse loading old iron.

You Blame the Stomach

But chronic indigestion will disappear when the liver, kidneys and bowels are set right by DR. A. W. CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS
You are skeptical. For you have tried many medicines and still suffer from indigestion with all its annoying symptoms. Take a new line. Leave the stomach alone, for the source of trouble is in the intestines, and healthful digestion can be restored by the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills.
Mr. C. D. Bennett, Maple Grove, Megantic Co., Que., writes:—"I had dyspepsia very bad. The food would sour, my stomach would swell up. I suffered a great deal and could not sleep. As the result of using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I am now entirely cured and can eat any kind of food. They have made a new man and a younger man of me and I cannot say too much in their praise."

Patient Ran From Operating Room.

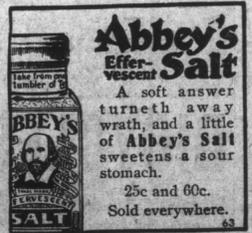

London, Ont., July 13.—Mrs. Mary Bartlett, colored, formerly of St. Antoine street, Montreal, died in St. Joseph's hospital yesterday from heart failure under peculiar circumstances.

Last week she was removed to Victoria hospital for an operation for stomach trouble. While on the operating table, and partially under the influence of chloroform, she heard the doctors arguing regarding the advisability of not operating immediately. She made a dash for the door, succeeding in escaping, and ran to her home where she barricaded the windows and nailed up the doors for two days.

She finally became helpless from weakness, when neighbors had her removed to St. Joseph's hospital, where she died.

WEAR A DOROTHY DODD

And forget your foot troubles. You will no longer feel that drag to your step, that dead weight, that tired feeling.

THE ELEGANCE
—OF—
Gold Medal SHOES
IS THE RESULT OF BOTH BEAUTY OF DESIGN and BEAUTY OF FIT.

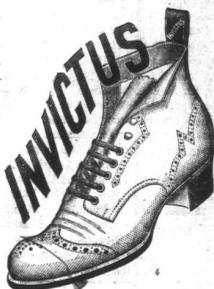

MOST SHOES SIMPLY COVER THE FEET.

Both Dorothy Dodd and Gold Medal Footwear support, brace and aid the feet. One well fitted pair will prove this.

Geo. A. Slater's Famous Invictus Shoes are Flexible.

The foot feels as if it is rested on a cushion instead of a hard leather bottom.

The most thing about breaking in New Shoes is the hard stiff feeling of the soles. Every step is an effort to make the leather bend. You instantly notice the difference when you put on a pair of G. A. Slater's Invictus Shoes.

MARSHALL BROS.

A. P. C.

The following are some extracts from reports received from Mr. M. C. Roberts, the A. P. C. Lecturer, who is at present working in Trinity Bay, in the interests of the A. P. C., giving lectures, etc.

Report written from Britannia Cove, dated June 29th:—

Monday morning at 8 o'clock I arrived at Hickman's Harbor and immediately arranged for a public meeting in the school room. At 8 o'clock we had a good audience, including a large number of women who came along, some of them with babies in arms, and a couple of times during the evening it was a matter for decision who had the floor, the babies or I. However, we had a very successful meeting, and they all appreciated it, enjoying all the views, as well as what was said. Unfortunately, Dr. Leslie, who did all he could to make the meeting go well, was called away and was therefore unable to be present.

We had a very successful meeting in Britannia Cove last night. The women and men who were home came along and were very attentive. I talked for two hours, and then the people did not seem in a hurry to go home. I understand there is quite a good deal of Tuberculosis here. Mr. Soper acted as chairman and gave all possible aid to make the meeting go well. He also managed the lantern of some. Mr. Currie had previously arranged to go to Trinity to meet the Prospero. He couldn't get away on account of high wind so he came along to the meeting. He and I spent considerable time yesterday afternoon trying to plan a route for the meetings. He is certainly doing all in his power to make good come from the visit in Trinity Bay.

This evening, Wednesday, I have made arrangements for a meeting in Burgoyne's Cove, across the Sound. I expect to try and arrange another meeting for this week also.

Extracts from report written from Clarendville, dated July 3rd:—

It was blowing a good breeze Wednesday afternoon, but we crossed Smith's Sound from Britannia Cove to Burgoyne's Cove and had a very successful meeting. Mr. Tulk, the school teacher, acted as chairman, and his son, Rev. Andrew Tulk, from Burin, managed the lantern and made some appropriate remarks at the end. Mr. Wm. Soper, of Britannia Cove, came across and spoke briefly at the end. Thursday Mr. Currie took me in his boat to Foster's Point, a distance of about 25 miles. I landed here and made arrangements for a meeting. We had a good audience in the church Friday evening. Saturday I got Mr. Gulliford to put me to Elliott's Cove, and last evening we had a meeting here. I think about everyone in the Cove came along. We also had had the meeting advertised in Snook's Harbor and Apey's Brook, a distance of about 4 miles, and we had representatives from each place. From all that I can here and see, Consumption is around here, not in small amounts either. I hear many words from time to time, all in favor of such work as the A. P. C. is doing.

This morning I got put across from Elliott's Cove to Clarendville. Just as I was coming in the harbour I saw a horse and carriage leaving here. The thought presented itself that it was the minister. I immediately got my car out, and the man and I soon had the boat to the wharf. I jumped out and ran (much against my principles) and caught the carriage at the top of the hill. I puffed pretty hard but eventually got enough breath to deliver my message. The minister was just driving to Shoal Harbor. He promised to-night in church to advertise a meeting there for Tuesday night, and Tuesday he is going to George's Brook, and he is announcing a meeting there for Wednesday night.

I am announcing a meeting in the church to-night to be held to-morrow night. You can see by this that my programme is full, in fact rather too full, and I do not expect to be able to keep such a pace up. However, I find it pays to rush when the opportunity offers and ease off when there is nothing to lose.

Mr. Currie and Mr. Soper did all they could to aid me. Mr. Currie said if I couldn't get a boat he would try and give me a couple of days with his, so that I could get landed out in the Arms. It is absolutely impossible to accomplish the work and gain our end and reach the much needed places without a boat.

I really believe that in those small places a great deal of good can be done by those meetings, and I can see they realise the necessity of doing something towards improving Public Health.

No More Workhouses.

All About the New Era that is Dawning for England's Poor.

A brighter, better, more hopeful day is about to dawn for England's poor. The workhouses are going to be abolished, the poor law, as at present administered, is to be broken up.

This has been recommended by a Royal Commission, and their recommendations will shortly be put into practice. It will constitute a momentous change, the most tremendous of this or any other age. Our rulers have come to realise at last that the treatment which the nation has been meting out to its poor is too bad for the good and too good for the bad, and it is going to alter it all.

No longer will the respectable workman, in temporary low water through no fault of his own, who goes to the workhouse, be herded with outcast vagrants, and put to the prison tasks of oakum picking and stone-breaking.

On the other hand, authority will deal sternly with the able-bodied loafer and the wastrel. For him, gaol first; and, if this fails to cure him, then the penal colony. But such stern measures will be reserved for the incurably vicious. To all others a helping hand is to be extended.

The schools in a few places have been anything but what they should be—old buildings and badly cleaned. However, in three of the places new and very good schools are being erected, one at Shoal Harbor, one at White Rock, and another at Trinity.

At Shoal Harbor Rev. E. Taylor and Mr. Tuck did all possible to make the meetings successful. Mr. Tuck is greatly interested. He was chairman at Shoal Harbor. Mr. Taylor acted in that capacity at George's Brook. At the latter place Mr. Currie landed Rev. Mr. Hutchinson, from North Dakota, and he gave a very enthusiastic at the end.

At White Rock Mr. Josiah Frampton acted as chairman, and Mr. Dalton lent good assistance. They all follow the work of the A. P. C., and were glad to see me give them a meeting. One man counted up the deaths in one of the places I visited, and during the past ten years just half of the deaths have resulted from Tuberculosis.

Except for Mr. Currie I could not have done the work I have accomplished. He called for me in the boat several times, at some inconvenience to himself. If I had a boat like his I could accomplish a great deal.

Municipal Matters.

MR. MULLALY'S MOTION.

Dear Sir,—The explanation which Mr. Mullaly has given you of his motives in asking for an audit of the Council's financial affairs during the last four years is wholly unsatisfactory. He states that he has no wish to reflect upon the official audit or upon the late Councilors. Then why apply for a new audit? And if he does not desire to reflect upon the integrity of the late Council, why does he ask that the new audit shall extend over the precise period of the late Council's control of our Municipal affairs? The truth is that this suggestion of a new audit is associated in the minds of every man except Mr. Mullaly himself with a well-grounded belief in the dishonesty of our late civic administration. Of course I accept Mr. Mullaly's disclaimer of such an intention, but a man must not complain if the public imputes to him the intention which his conduct reasonably suggests. We are now told that certain suspicions are alive in the public breast and that they must be quieted. There can be no valid objection to this. But the point is that the holding of an audit is not the proper method of achieving this end. If there are matters requiring investigation, let the Council or a committee of its members hold an enquiry concerning the points which are shrouded in doubt. If this enquiry develops facts which warrant a new audit, let the audit then take place. But before any audit is resolved upon Mr. Mullaly will have to satisfy the public, first, that doubts are entertained; second, that they are entertained by persons whose doubts are worthy of consideration; third, that these doubts are fairly well grounded, and fourth, that they are of such an important nature as to warrant the Council in taking so invidious, so dangerous, and so expensive a step as the institution of an enquiry into the finances of the city during the extended period of four years. Mr. Mullaly may have the best of intentions, but he has made it very plain that he does not know the proper way to carry them into effect. He has rejected the simple and obvious course and adopted one which, at this time and under the present circumstances, is repugnant to the most elementary sense of justice and propriety. His first official step, well intended though it may be, has discounted very seriously his whole future usefulness as Municipal officer. Meanwhile I shall wait until Mr. Mullaly makes a more definite explanation of his motives and intentions.

Yours truly,
REFORM.

New Telephone Cable.

An interesting engineering work was recently carried out, namely the laying of a new telephone cable across the English Channel. The vessel employed for that purpose was named the "Faraday," which is fitted up expressly for that service, and has already laid about 25,000 miles of cable, and has had on board as much as 2,000 miles at one time.

This new form of cable, the invention of Mr. Dieselhorst, is a vast improvement on all other submarine telephone lines, for despite the fact that so much of it is under water, it will be possible to speak from Glasgow to Paris. In other words, this invention makes it possible to speak over more than twice the distance than was formerly possible, so that it is now practicable to "ring up" Holland, Dublin, or Paris from England.

The speaking efficiency of the ordinary submarine cable limits considerably the distance over which speech is commercially possible, but the new cable has what are called "pupin" or "loading" coils made of iron. It has been found that these introduced at intervals in a telephone circuit improve the speaking conditions to the extent stated above. This cable has been laid by the English Government, and the French are about to lay another.

Important Submarine Invention.
The invention of an entirely new system of submarine and wireless telegraphy by Mr. Hans Knudsen, the well-known Danish inventor, is likely to have effects of world-wide importance, bringing the cost of cablegrams down to a rate within the reach of everybody. Applicable to existing lines, without as in the former cases affecting the wires, the invention quadruples the speed at which messages may be sent to any part of the world, and by so augmenting the present capacity of cables will make it possible to send messages to any part of the world at one-third the present paying rates.

The invention, which seems destined to revolutionize the present system of submarine telegraphy, is simplicity itself. The slow cumbersome Morse code signals, now generally employed, is entirely dispensed with, messages being transmitted in ordinary language by an operator at the one end pressing the lettered keys of a keyboard. At the other end the message is received instantaneously, and automatically printed in the original text by a typewriting machine, so that anybody who can read may act as cable operator or receiver. The advantages of this in times of emergency, such as a strike of telegraphists, is obvious.

In war time it is impossible to tap the cable, as unlike the Morse system of dot and dash, every impulse sent by Mr. Knudsen's system is alike and, therefore, meaningless to those who are not acquainted with the keyboard of the instruments, while should the copies of the latter be stolen the position of the letters of the alphabet on the keyboard would be immediately changed, such alteration being recorded automatically at the other end without the possibility of being tapped en route. Before long a cheap cable letter rate that will bring the cablegram within reach of the man in the street will be established, when it will be possible to send and receive family and social messages at a small outlay. — Shipping Illustrated.

EVENING TELEGRAM FASHION PLATES.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

8567. Charming Neglige.

No more graceful home jacket could be devised than this pretty model developed in figured China silk. The simple shaping is developed by shoulder and underarm seams, the fulness falling in soft folds from below the tucks that are taken upon each side the centre front. The tucks in the back extend to the waist line, and a belt of the material encircles the waist giving that trim look, so essential to a garment of that kind. If preferred the sleeves may extend to the wrist, completed by straight cuffs. Lawn, flowered dimity, cotton crepe, cashmere and albatross are all suitable for reproduction. For 36 inch bust measure 3/4 yds. of 36 inch material is required. Sizes from 32 to 42 inches bust measure.

A pattern of this illustration will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in stamps or silver.

Famous Rushes for Gold Romance of the World's Richest Mines.

"Stewart went mad. Walters dropped their trays, workmen their tools, drivers their reins, and stamped." Thus a daily paper, in its description of the excitement created in Stewart, British Columbia, when the report came that seventeen miles distant, at a place called Bitter Creek, a great discovery of gold had been made. It is the old, old story of human avarice and greed. Reason disappears when the gold fever seizes on man.

Two years ago three mining prospectors tried their luck in the Nevada Hills, 200 miles northeast of San Francisco, where they discovered a wealthy deposit of gold. They told some acquaintances at the nearest town, whereupon 200 railroad laborers dropped their tools and began the mad rush for gold. The news spread like wildfire, and in a few weeks the camp of the three prospectors, which had been named Rawhide, had a population of 10,000 people, and miners were arriving at the rate of 200 a day. Lots were sold at anything from £1,000 to £5,000, while some mining magnates purchased one claim, which had been staked out by a syndicate of twenty miners, and had made a phenomenal yield, for £160,000.

Hundreds Died on the Way.

The story of Klondyke is even more amazing. The first find of gold of any importance was made in 1897—not by gold prospectors, but by a fisherman—at the junction of the Klondyke and Yukon rivers. Immediately the news of the rich deposits of gold which were to be found got abroad, there was a mad rush, not only from all parts of America, but also from Europe. Soon 30,000 people were on their way to the diggings, many destined never to return; for some 500 miles of the roughest Alaska country had to be traversed, and the route was literally paved with the bones of those who had joined in the mad rush without stopping to consider the difficulties the journey presented.

Husbands deserted their wives, while clerks, merchants, doctors and lawyers sold all they possessed to pay their way to Klondyke. But where one unpractical man succeeded in enriching himself, scores of American professional miners came away, worth hundreds of thousands. In spite of the warnings issued, however, and the fact that it needed a capital of something like £300 to get from England to Klondyke, hundreds of people went from this country, only to return wrecked in health and pocket.

A Shrewd Prospector.

It is a curious fact that when Harry de Windt, the well-known explorer, returned from Klondyke, in 1897, he said, during the course of an interview published in The Strand Maga-

Children Had Eczema

Treatment prescribed had no effect—DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT made thorough cure. Mrs. Oscar Vancoit, St. Antoine, Sack., writes:—"I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment to be a permanent cure for Eczema and other skin diseases. One son, while nursing, broke out with running waters all over his head and around the ears. Many salves were prescribed to no effect. The child's head became a mass of scabs and he suffered agony untold. He became weak and frail and would not eat and we thought we would lose him.

"Provisionally we heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment and it soon thoroughly cured him. He is seven years old now and strong and well. An older boy was also cured of eczema by this Ointment and we hope more people will learn about it so that their little ones may be saved from suffering."

As a cure for eczema and itching skin disease there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment, 50 cents a box, at all dealers of Edman, Bates & Co., Toronto. Dr. Chase's Recipes sent free.

zine, that the Stewart region was richer even than Klondyke. And after a dozen years there comes the recent romantic corroboration.

The fact is not generally known, perhaps, that it was the discovery of gold in California in 1847 which led to the discovery in Australia. Within four years the annual output from the fields of California reached £12,000,000, and it was a Mr. Hargreaves, who went as a miner to California, who first discovered gold in Australia. He was struck by the resemblance of the rocks near his home in Australia to the gold-bearing rocks of California. He systematically searched for signs of gold, and on February 12th, 1851, he found some of the precious metal for the first time.

Big Nuggets.

The excitement created by the discovery was intense. Towns grew up as if by magic. Even police left their employment to try their luck at the diggings, while sailors deserted from their ships as soon as they arrived at a port near the fields. Men flocked in their thousands to Ballarat and Bathurst, and it was at these places where the world's biggest nuggets were found. Fifty miles north of Bathurst three quartz blocks containing 112 lbs. of pure gold were discovered, and the famous "Victoria Nugget," a single mass of pure virgin gold weighing 340 oz., was brought from Bendigo. But the largest nugget of all was that christened the "Welcome." This was found at Ballarat on June 4th, 1858, weighed 2,516 oz., and was valued at over £9,582. Within ten years gold to the enormous value of £96,000,000 had been brought to England from the two colonies of Victoria and New South Wales.

Two years ago one of the discoverers of the famous Kalgoolie goldfield in Western Australia passed away in the person of an Irishman named Daniel Shea. He and a compatriot named Hannan, while prospecting for gold, camped on the site of Kalgoolie when it was a wilderness. Hannan, in searching for a horse, kicked a nugget of gold. The news spread, a rush set in, and the wealth of the place soon became apparent. Hannan and Shea as the pioneers were awarded pensions of £100 a year—not a great sum when one considers that the annual output of the Kalgoolie goldfields is between £2,000,000 and £3,000,000 sterling.

More Mines to be Found.

There are, however, no gold mines so rich as those of the Transvaal. Since 1884—the year the world's greatest goldfield, Witwatersrand, was discovered—until June, 1908, the total of the gold production of the Transvaal amounted to no less than £211,535,995. It was a prospector named Arnold who first discovered that gold lay among the bare and lonely hills of Witwatersrand. In this case there was no great rush, for the simple reason that there was no chance for the miner without capital. The Rand's pre-eminence amongst goldfields is not due to the exceeding richness of its deposits, for in their percentage of the yellow metal they do not compare with the mines of California, for instance. But while its ores are of low grade, they are found in much more extensive bodies than those of any other fields, much machinery and many workers being required to unearth the gold.

There are still more chances, however, for prospectors, like Croesus, the first really rich man known to fame, who is said to have discovered a gold mine of his own, to find one for themselves; for, according to authorities, the world contains several unworked goldfields quite as rich as any yet discovered. Parts of Siberia are alleged to be richer in gold than Klondyke, while Sir Martin Conway some time ago that along the eastern slope of the Andes run many rivers rich in gold.

Perhaps, however, in these days of oil booms it would be more profitable to search for oil rather than gold. For, after all, it must be borne in mind that it was oil, and not gold, which made the world's richest man—John D. Rockefeller, master of many millions.—Tit-Bits.

Construction Camp Burned.

Kingston, Ont., July 14.—News of a disastrous fire in a construction camp on the National Transcontinental has just reached here. P. Courtney, one of O'Brien's contractors, situated at about 100 miles west of Cochrane, was burned out last Sunday by a forest fire. The entire camp was destroyed, amounting to $25,000 damage, partly covered by insurance.

The men sought refuge in the Valentine river and had to stand in water up to their necks to keep from being burned to death. One man, Dan Egan, suffered severe burns on the arms and face and had to be taken to the hospital at Missarable river, 100 miles away.

The powder house, containing five tons of dynamite and five hundred cases of powder, was saved through the foresight of Courtney in having it banked with two feet of clay.

Socializing the Church Parlor.

Sitting one day last summer at his study window, the Rev. W. L. Armstrong, of the Metropolitan Methodist Church, Toronto, noticed that a large number of young women were seated on the lawn during the noon hour. It struck him that these young people would have nowhere to go at noon during the winter, so he proposed to open the church parlors for their accommodation.

The first day the experiment was tried four young women came in. Within a week the number had increased to fourteen, and in a short time the average attendance had grown to fifty. At present about seventy make use of the privilege.

It soon became evident that a rest-room met only a part of the need. An inexpensive lunch is therefore provided daily. The girls are supplied, practically at cost price, with nourishing food, and they can find rest or recreation, as they please, in the rooms, which are provided with an abundance of chairs, lounges, a piano, games, newspapers and magazines.

The pastor's assistant is in attendance also to assist strangers and others seeking employment or lodgings. The rest department is under the charge of one of the deaconesses, assisted by the Ladies' Aid Society.

This is a sample of what may be done by city churches, and it is an example which might profitably be followed by many. The criticism of the church with doors closed against the needs of men is not always unfounded.

But it appears to me that the need in the evening hours is quite as great as at noon. Our churches might provide a cheery meeting place for many a lonely roamer, and they might help to draw from the dangers of the street and the moving picture show and theatres large numbers of young men and maidens who drift aimlessly along in search of something to do.

This has all been said before, but may bear saying again. There is a social use for the church parlors that stand too often empty and dark—dead capital sunk in service that does no service efficiently.—Christian Endeavor World.

In Case of Invasion.

What Britain Must Do to Protect Her Shores.

Not long ago, when British naval manoeuvres were in progress, one of our admirals was instructed to consider that he was in command of a squadron which was conveying transports containing 70,000 soldiers. He was also directed to land those troops, if he could, at a certain Scottish port. The Admiral's area of operation was the North Sea. Now and uncertain weather, and is particularly susceptible to fogs. It happened that the Admiral had fog nearby all the way across that famous stretch of water, and the result was that in theory he managed to reach his port and land his men, that is to say, if he had been in reality an enemy, he could have invaded Scotland.

His performance negatives the assertion which has been so often made that invasion of Great Britain is impossible. Nothing is impossible in war, when the unexpected so often happens, and on several occasions these imaginary descents on our own shores have been carried out with great success.

If in the next naval war the fight for sea supremacy takes place on the North Sea, as most authorities believe it will, no Englishman can escape from the depressing feeling that on any morning he may awake to learn that the country has been raided by a foreign horde, and that his own life and property are in peril, and that his fellow countrymen have been plunged into the worst horrors that humanity can know. During very recent years the possibility of invasion has been recognized, and, as I have already pointed out, the British fleet has been completely reorganized and redistributed with the view to meet such attempts to land on our shores. So heavy will be the strain and responsibility on the heads of our fleet in such times that it is scarcely possible for an ordinary person to realize the immensity of the burden.

When the conflict does come it will be such as the world has never known on the waters, because there have never been such powerful fighting machines afloat.

Let us assume that hostilities suddenly break out between ourselves and a powerful European nation, one possessing a fleet almost equal in strength to our own, or, at least, equal to any fleet that we can put against it without weakening our naval power in other parts of the world. We know that everything depends on our smashing the enemy at sea, and making it impossible to cover a landing force. Once he gets a footing he has achieved his main purpose for while we are desperately striving to destroy him he will claim our attention elsewhere in the world.

War has been declared and the Dreadnoughts and super-Dreadnoughts of both powers meet and fight for mastery. The whole forces of both nations it seems, have been assembled for the combat, and when the rival fleets encounter each other there ensues a contest of unparalleled ferocity.

The huge steel monsters fire at each other from almost incredible distances. Here a lucky shot from a 12-inch gun creates such a havoc that one of the opposing ships is put out of action and promptly starts away to try salvation in flight. After her however goes a powerful modern British cruiser, a ship as formidable almost as the disabled battleship. She pursues her crippled antagonist, hanging on with ease and pounding her with her big guns. There is no help for it—the wounded leviathan must either surrender or be destroyed, and the captain, having done his duty, determines to lose no more lives and so he strikes his flag.—London Scraps.

MR. REDMOND AND IRISH HABITS.

"A wave of temperance had swept over Ireland," said Mr. J. Redmond, M.P., in the House of Commons. "The habits of the Irish people were changing. In this country, it was said, the people were drinking less whisky and more beer. That was not the case in Ireland. The change of habits was due to a great wave of temperance which had passed over the land."

KEEP MINARD'S LINIMENT IN THE HOUSE.

Dressed in Men's Attire

Los Angeles, Cal., July 11.—A new note of independence was struck at a "ladies' stag party," given at the Ranshaw by Mrs. May Monical, of Kansas City. When the guests arrived the hostess was surprised, for instead of being in gowns, they had forsaken skirts and in men's attire were striding about "with an independent air." Not a man was present.

Digby, N.S. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen.—Last August my horse was badly cut in eleven places by a barbed wire fence. Three of the cuts, (small ones) healed soon, but the others became foul and rotten, and though I tried many kinds of medicine they had no beneficial result. At last a doctor advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and in four weeks time every sore was healed and the hair has grown over each one in fine condition. The Liniment is certainly wonderful in its working.

Dastardly Plan to Wreck Train.

Ottawa, July 13.—An attempt to wreck the Gatineau train of the Canadian Pacific Railway near Kirk's Ferry, four miles from Ottawa, was made last night.

An inspection of the track showed that horseshoes had been cleated to the track for a distance of 30 feet. Fortunately a piston rod broke and the train was delayed an hour. Meanwhile section hands discovered the obstruction and removed it in time to prevent an accident.

The down coming train had 500 excursionists returning from an Orange celebration. A deep rock cut was chosen for the location of the obstruction.

Montreal, July 14.—While a passenger train bringing immigrants from the steamer Royal Edward at Quebec to this city by the Canadian Northern was nearing Cape Rouge today, a little above Quebec, two cars left the rails and at once caught fire. The passengers, so a report says, all escaped except one man, whose name is not given, and his injuries are very slight. He was taken back to Quebec and treated and as soon as the road was cleared the immigrants were brought on to Montreal. The loss will not be very large.
