"A GOLD LADEN DERELICT" OR The Impecunious Adventuress.

CHAPTER VI.
A LEGAL DECISION.

"What! At the price of more than a million sterling? Your own home, and practically everything that you possess, except what your son's talents win for you? Surely, my dear Mrs. Markham, you are pushing altruism a little too far when you say that," exclaimed Sir Edward, sitting upright under the stimulus of his outraged professional instincts. "Surely, in what you will forgive me for calling your mistaken charity, you are forgetting that which begins at home."

"What do you think, my lord?" he continued, turning to Lord Overbury, who was sitting at his right hand side. "I think you are perfectly right, Sir Edward," replied his lordship, whose own experiences had made him a little sore on the subject of speculative investments. "It would be nothing less than an encouragement of this kind of gambling to throw away a million or so, to pay the losses of a lot of people who, I dare say, at this very moment are calling our late friend, who was as honorable a man as ever walked the earth, all the hard names they can lay their tongues to. I quite agree with you that charity—no, I will go further, and say that justice begins at home."

"I hope there will be no need for charity, my lord," said Kenneth, a trifle dryly, "at least, not at home; but you and Sir Edward must excuse me if I say that in this particular case there seems a good deal of necessity for justice abroad."

"Certainly there is," added Kate, with a quick flash in her eyes. "Poor papa did not, could not have known what he was lending his name to; but he did lend it—he gave it, and we must stand by what he did. Come, now, Mr. Hodgson, you have scarcely said anything yet. What is your opinion?" "Personally," replied Mr. Hodgson, in the low, clear, even voice which had spoken promise of life or sentence of death to so many schemes, good and bad, "I never believed in this particular group of companies, and I did my best to dissuade Mr. Markham from having anything to do with them; but honor is honor, just as business is business, and I take it that the name of my late chief is worth more to his family than a good many millions."

"Just what I knew you would say, Mr. Hodgson!" exclaimed Kate, looking with eyes which were, for the moment, radiant, at the square-cut, homely features of the man of business; "and so, of course, you advise us to act on the second will?"

"Pardon me, Miss Markham," he replied, after a moment's pause, "I do not. You see, although there are a great many honest investors in this concern—people who really did put their money into these companies believing that because Mr. Markham was at the head of them they were sound, and would succeed—there were also others who, in my opinion, schemed to get him into them, knowing them to be unsound, so as to get the money from the others on the strength of his name."

"And, therefore, my lord," said Mr. Hodgson, "if I were in Mr. Kenneth Markham's place, in order to protect myself and my mother and sister, and also those who really deserve to be repaid their losses, I should prove the first will, and so give myself liberty to act at my own discretion on the second."

"Yes," said Kenneth, "I think, looking at the matter not only as my father's son, but as a lawyer, you are quite right. If we were dealing only with the honest investor, or even the honest speculator, it would be quite a simple matter; but when we have to do with people like Mr. Redman and Mr. Montagu, and people of that sort, I don't think we can be too careful; so I think we cannot consider that settled. I shall prove the first will."

A further exchange of opinions, and then every one agreed with this decision.

After he had taken leave of Mrs. Markham and Kate, Lord Overbury put his hand on Kenneth's shoulder as they were standing on the porch, and said, with a little tremor of emotion in his voice:

"Kenneth, if you will allow me, I am going to look upon you as my son after this. You saved my honor, and very possibly my life, and to-day you have done an act—you, and your mother and sister, I should say—which ranks you with the noblest of men and women; and before long there will be thousands of homes in which your name and your father's will be blessed. Your own genius will take you far in this world, but you will never again do anything equal to what you have done to-day. Good-bye, my boy, good-bye!"

"Thank you, sir," replied Kenneth, taking the hand which the old peer held out to him. "I appreciate your kindness, your generous praise; but I can't take any credit for to-day's action. Whatever credit there is belongs to my mother and Kate. Now," he continued, "you have been very kind in helping us as you have done, and I am going to ask you to grant me one more favor, just for business reasons."

"Certainly, my dear Kenneth. What is it?"

"Simply that you will not say anything about the decision we have come to until the will is proved and the companies are wound up."

Lord Overbury looked at him keenly for a moment, then he nodded and smiled.

"Yes, yes, I see that is both modesty and good policy," he answered, as he departed. "We will let the world think as it pleases till the time comes to prove that it is wrong, as it usually is when it pokes its nose into the private affairs of honest folk. You may rely upon it that people shall not hear a whisper from me. And, now, good-bye again!"

In a little over a month Mr. Markham's will was proved, and the Markham companies were wound up in bankruptcy. A howl of execration rang from one end of the financial world to the other, and it was echoed in many a home whose breadwinner had been crippled by what he believed to be the utter loss of the money which he had invested on the security of the dead financier's unblemished honor.

The day after the proving of the will there appeared in all the financial and leading daily papers a copy of the unsigned will which Kenneth had drawn, with a short letter from him, explaining the circumstances and stating that, despite the will which had been proved, he had decided to carry out his father's wishes to the letter.

Arthur Ashley read this over a late breakfast in his flat in Drayton Gardens. When he had finished it, he leaned back in his chair, and said to himself:

"Curse the fellow! Then he is honest, after all, and—oh, confound the beastly luck!—I have forged that infernal thing for nothing!"

CHAPTER VII.

A WEALTHY HUMAN WRECK.

On the afternoon of the same day, a day in mid-June, when that section of London whose eastern boundary is a line drawn north and south from Norfolk Street, Strand, to Mudie's Library, was at its fullest and its gayest, a man and a woman met by the merest accident outside the Regent Street entrance to Swan & Edgar's.

The man, dressed in faultless taste and perfectly groomed, obviously was or had been a soldier, for he had that peculiar carriage and bearing which can never be successfully imitated by the civilian, try he ever so hard. His age was about thirty-six, and he was distinctly good looking. Indeed, he might truthfully have been called handsome but for a strange weakness about his mouth, and a dull, wavering expression in his gray-blue eyes.

There was also a reddish, unnatural flush under the tan of his cheeks and about his nose, which told its own tale, and anything but added to the attractiveness of his features.

The woman, who was dressed in what may be called the second stage of the mourning of widowhood, was so beautiful that even the best-mannered of the passers-by looked at her longer than they did at any one else on the pavement. Others stopped and stared at her in frank, if hardly well-bred, admiration.

This open and obvious survey on the part of so many strangers was apparently a matter of course, an inevitable and daily homage that was far from unwelcome to her. Indeed, you might say it was a tribute to her extraordinary beauty. She was just a trifle above the average height of women, but her figure was so exquisitely proportioned that this was not noticeable. Her face, an almost perfect oval, had an expression of absolute tenderness and purity which gave it even more charm than the exquisite regularity of her features. It was half framed in soft, wavy hair which shone like gold in the sun, and was lighted up by as bewitching a pair of big, soft, pearly eyes as ever looked out from under long, black, curling lashes.

In a word, she was a woman on whom the fatal gift of beauty had been so lavishly bestowed that it gave her a power for good or evil, which, as some who knew her said, ought never to have been placed at the disposal of that somewhat uncertain despot—a woman's will.

"Lillias, is it possible!" exclaimed the man, as he stepped in front of her and raised his hat, becoming in that same instant the envied of every man within reach.

"Why, Captain Eversley, can this really be you?" said a voice, whose low, clear sweetness seemed to send a sort of hush through the rattle and clatter of the street. "But since it is you, good afternoon. I am delighted to see you back again, and looking so—so well."

"But come inside for a moment," she continued, with a half-veiled, half-amused sweep of her eyes over the loitering crowd. "Aunt Gerty is there, up to the eyes in the delight of bargain hunting. I really couldn't stand it any longer, and so I came out to get a breath of fresh air; but it's quite time, for her own sake, to get her away somewhere for tea, or she will faint, or spend the last half crown we are keeping for the cab."

"Most delighted," he replied, pulling the swing door open. "That will be a work both of pleasure and—and, well, yes, of duty. Let us deploy the besieging forces in flank and rear and rescue her."

When Aunt Gerty was found, after about a quarter of an hour's search, and extricated from a tightly packed group of bargain hunters, she proved to be a well-preserved maiden of about forty, stylishly but not quite well dressed. She had a fresh complexion, which was evidently well taken care of, or, in brutal terms, was the result of more art than nature; brown hair, which was also made the subject of artifice; rather hard, blue eyes, and well-shaped nose, mouth, and chin, which agreed in expressing keenness and determination, rather than delicacy and refinement.

She greeted the soldier with a well-blended mixture of dignity and cordiality, and he returned her greeting with warmth, tempered with obvious respect.

A few minutes later they were seated at a table in a cozy corner of the Cabin, on the southern side of Piccadilly, with a pot of tea, cups and saucers, buttered scones, toasted cakes and short bread, and the rest of the appurtenances of afternoon tea awaiting their enjoyment.

Lillias, or, to give her her full title, Mrs. Lillias Ashley, poured out tea, while her aunt, still flushed with the labors and triumphs of the day's campaign, devoted her attention to Captain Eversley's selection of eatables; and when Mrs. Ashley had satisfied herself as to his tastes in the direction of milk and sugar, she handed him his cup, with a look and a smile which sent a long, unwonted thrill through his sluggish veins and fever-racked nerves.

"And, now, Captain Eversley—"

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made
Here's an easy way to cure it, and you have the best remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will tickle your ears. It's a permanent place in your home. Into a 16-oz. bottle, pour 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth); then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the bottle. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you 16 ounces of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for five times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial catarrh. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments. Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "Pinex" or "Pinex" with full directions. And don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute relief, or your money promptly refunded. Girls' West End Club.

A pleasant evening was spent by the members of the West End Club on Thursday last, when Miss Southcott gave a most interesting talk on plant life, after which a social hour was enjoyed. Understanding not only plant life, but human life as she does, and being so deeply interested in both, she was able to make her talk both entertaining and profitable. This Club has really only been organized since the first of January, and already there are about seventy members names on the roll. Each evening, with the exception of Saturday the rooms are open in Buchanan St. School from seven to ten o'clock, where work, amusements, writing material, etc., are provided for the members. The rooms have been made as attractive as possible, and the committee extends a cordial welcome to any young girl, especially those away from home, who may wish to become a member. On Sunday, from four to five, a Bible Class is held, and at the close the girls who are without friends in the City, remain for tea, and then attend their respective churches. This is a work that is greatly needed, and the girls fully appreciate the effort that is being made to bring a little more sunshine into their lives. As we see the bright, happy faces of the girls who meet evening by evening, and know they are safe while there from the many temptations which surround them, we cannot help feeling that the effort is certainly worth while. Refreshments are frequently served, and the social hours thoroughly enjoyed. The members are busy now preparing for a sale, which they hope to hold in about a fortnight, and this will be advertised later in the press.

This is no mere namby-pamby movement for sentimental dreamers. It is an honest effort of the Church of Jesus Christ to meet existing conditions. It will not be an easy effort. What MAN asks for ease in a MAN'S job? The Church appeals to men of good red blood, of brawn and brain, of intellect and capacity. The Church gives to such a MAN'S task.

The Call is for THANKSGIVING for your own blessings, and for the help given by the strong arm of Him in the Great Victory.

The Call is for JUSTICE to our venerated Ministers who after toiling for thirty or forty years with inadequate salaries, have been retired from active work on a pittance that cannot keep body and soul together. The sum of $1,500,000 is required as a capital amount, not so much to increase the pensions as to ensure that retired Ministers shall receive in full the amount which the Church sets down, and towards which they have themselves contributed during every year of their active work, instead of that amount discounted 20 per cent.

The Call is for BUSINESS CAPACITY, in the great Missionary Movement, and if you are a follower of John Wesley you believe in Missions. We have been merely playing at the business so far, but the present effort marks a new era. At the last meeting of the General Mission Board it was found that the requirements amounted to $1,407,000.00, to meet which the Board had $939,000.00 only. Present-day developments offer a better chance both in the Home and Foreign Fields for successful work. The World is calling aloud for Jesus Christ in its Religious, Social, Political, and Economic life.

The Call is for EDUCATION so that our Ministers and people may be fitted for the various spheres in life to which they have been called. Nothing is more needed in Newfoundland to-day than Education. Help is required by our seventeen Educational Institutions with over Five thousand students.

The Call is for LOYALTY—Loyalty to one's self, to the highest ideals, to the Call of the Church, and to Jesus Christ. Newfoundland Methodists have ever been loyal, and there are sufficient REAL MEN amongst us to provide that Newfoundland's part in this great movement will be achieved.

A Mother of Journals and Journalists.

How a Commercial Traveller Has Revolutionised British Journalism—A Big Output from a Tit-Bit.

The two-thousandth number of Tit-Bits has just been published. Writing in that periodical on the occasion, Sir Frank Newnes, Bart., says:

"It is thirty-nine years since my father, the late Sir George Newnes, issued the first number. The two-thousandth issue must be a great event in the history of any periodical, and particularly in the history of a periodical like Tit-Bits, whose birth marked the beginning of a new era in journalism, the creation of one man's determination, faith, and original genius.

How it Began.

"When my father started Tit-Bits he had no experience whatever of the newspaper business. He was a commercial traveller, with next to no capital. But he was certain that he had hit on an idea that had in it the assurance of success. The Education Act of 1870 had added enormously to the number of people who wanted 'something to read.' This great public wanted to be interested and amused. They wanted to know things. And my father's idea was to produce a weekly paper that, in his own words, would 'elevate, instruct, and amuse.' He walked about Manchester for weeks, endeavouring to obtain the capital that he wanted with the offer of a half-share of all the profits that might be made. But his idea was new, and capitalists were shy. My father was undaunted. He knew that he was right. Others might be sceptical. He was sure. He believed in himself.

"No one would help him. So he determined to bring the paper out by himself. With considerable difficulty he scraped together £200, and the first number of Tit-Bits appeared. He printed 5,000 copies, and organised his own gang of newsboys to sell them in the streets of Manchester. All the copies were sold in two hours, and the boys were clamouring for more. Another 5,000 were printed, and these were sold as quickly."

A Rapid Success.

"In one afternoon the success of Tit-Bits was assured. My father had been right. He did know what the public wanted. Within six months eleven rival papers were started, most of them only to die. Within a year he was offered £30,000 for his paper! From the beginning my father was eager to get into touch with his readers, and to this end he always gave his special personal attention to the Answers to Correspondents, which he regarded as one of the most important features of the paper. For over twenty years he read all the letters received from his readers, and dictated replies, and he thus became a helpful friend to thousands."

Two Young Men.

"Among the early contributors to Tit-Bits was a clever young journalist, then known as Mr. Alfred Harmsworth, now Viscount Northcliffe, the creator of the Daily Mail, the chief proprietor of the Times. He also noticed the immense popularity of the Answers to Correspondents in Tit-Bits, and he started a paper called 'Answers to Correspondents,' now known as Answers.

"Another great career began in Tit-Bits' office. Original prize competitions have always been a feature of the paper, and have unquestionably been one of the chief reasons of its success. A position on the staff, with a salary of £100 a year, was once offered as a prize for the most accurate answers to a series of questions on miscellaneous subjects. The prize was won by Cyril Arthur Pearson, a young man who had just left Winchester.

"Mr. Pearson showed such ability and energy that he was very soon manager and assistant editor of the paper. Then he left my father to control a business of his own. He is now Sir Arthur Pearson, Bart., the Chairman of the Company that owns Pearson's Weekly, Pearson's Magazine, and a host of other periodicals, and he has earned the nation's gratitude for his wonderful work for soldiers and sailors blinded in the war."

Some Famous Competitions.

"Another famous competition was the offer of an eight-roomed house to the person who sent in the best short story, original or otherwise. The prize was won by a private soldier, and the house is still known as Tit-Bits Villa. Many will remember the 'Hidden Treasure' schemes that were so popular some fifteen years ago. Tit-Bits was the first paper to give its readers the chance of finding 500 sovereigns. The clues were given in a serial story, and Mr. Arthur Morrison, the writer, and I were the first men to hide money for this purpose. It makes one a little proud to recall how Tit-Bits has been the pioneer of new journalistic developments.

"Some years ago a woman wrote to my father that her husband had been killed in a railway accident, and that a copy of Tit-Bits had been found on his body. The man had been a regular subscriber to the paper, and his widow suggested that my father might do something to help her. The suggestion set my father thinking, and he evolved the idea of making every copy of Tit-Bits equivalent to a life insurance of £100. The idea has been adopted by dozens of other papers. The Tit-Bits insurance has since increased to £1,000.

"Many famous writers have helped to make the great reputation of our paper; and, as I have already said, three of the most distinguished modern journalists, the late Sir George Newnes, Lord Northcliffe, and Sir Arthur Pearson, have been intimately connected with its history. And to them I must add another well-known name—that of Lord Riddell—who for more than ten years has given the paper the advantage of his unrivalled journalistic knowledge and experience."

What Do You Think of This?

A grocer whom we asked to buy Del Monte Baked Beans said: "I have a lot of beans in stock which I can't sell and I won't buy any more until I get rid of what I have." Don't you think this grocer is unwise? He proposed to send his customer to his competitor for Del Monte Beans. He admits that his customers won't buy the beans he has, he admits that they would buy Del Monte Beans if he had them in stock, and consequently when his customers want Del Monte Beans they will go elsewhere to get them. What will happen to this grocer if his customers buy ALL their groceries elsewhere?

Colin Campbell, Ltd.

The Editor of Tit-Bits. One should not forget that the present Editor of Tit-Bits, Mr. Galloway Fraser, has occupied that post for some 25 years, and has thus made a record in London journalism which perhaps is only exceeded by Sir William Robertson Nicoll, the Editor of the British Weekly. Sir Arthur Pearson's Two Young Men Sir Arthur Pearson recalls two young men who have since achieved fame. "At about the same time," says Sir Arthur, "I made the acquaintance of two very interesting young men. They called at the office one afternoon, and each handed me a manuscript for consideration. I can recall these manuscripts quite clearly. Both were written on ruled copy-book paper. One in very distinctive handwriting, not too legible, was called 'Some Curious Butterflies,' and its author was Alfred Harmsworth, now known the world over as Lord Northcliffe, and soon to start the publishing business which grew to such colossal dimensions.

"The other manuscript, written with almost copper-plate neatness, was called 'Oddities of the Post Office,' and its author was Max Pemberton, whose brilliant books have been enjoyed by millions. Both articles were accepted and printed in Tit-Bits, and both authors were for a while regular contributors. Alfred Harmsworth wrote for the firm a most interesting and instructive hand-book entitled 'A Thousand Ways to Earn a Living,' which had a large sale."

Mr. Max Pemberton has just become Director of The London School of Journalism.

JUST A SUGGESTION.

One cold day last week I was out walking with a friend. I had made the foolish mistake of gauging the weather, and what I wanted to wear, by consulting a thermometer which was too optimistic because it was comfortably basking in a sheltered corner in the sun. When we got there we found there was a cold wind, and I was cold. My friend immediately offered me her scarf. Of course I insisted that she should not deprive herself for my sake, and she said "But I'm not cold." "You must be," I shivered. She wasn't going to insist. "I'm not," she said. "This dress is very warm. I'm telling the truth and you can have it just as well as not. But I'm not going to insist. I hate people who are always urging things upon you. I can perfectly well spare it and you need it. Will you take it or won't you?" Faced by such sincerity, I made up my mind to rise to her level. "I will," I said, "for I am cold and I do need it. And since you put it that way, I hate protestations too and I'm not going to keep asking you if you are cold, but when you are, I expect you to tell me and to take the scarf back." She promised. And on that happy basis we made the exchange.

But I Cannot Tell a Lie. To make this complete, I should say that she later asked for the fur back. As a matter of fact she didn't. I hope and believe because she wasn't cold. And, much as I wanted to, I did restrain myself from asking her (more than once) if she were cold. Protestation and urging are a nuisance, aren't they? A measure of sincerity and honesty between friends ought to be possible and would make things much smoother and less tiresome a great many times.

People Who Are Hard to do Things For. There's nothing more annoying than people who are hard to do things for, and the worst of it is that they make themselves hard with the idea that they are doing the right thing. To accept things graciously and simply is a courtesy to those who offer them, presumably with the wish to have them accepted. To protest and demur and make them urge you is to make them give, not only the service or gift, but the further gift of their energy. Learn to accept graciously when you accept at all.

Household Notes.

Rice pudding frozen is a delicious dessert. A pretty salad dish is very important. Rice griddle cakes are an agreeable change. Put paper napkins between fine China dishes. Flour and salt sacks make excellent dishcloths. Liquor from boiled meat should be used for soup. Canned blackberries make a delicious shortcake. Cold roast pork makes delicious chicken salad. Careful measurements are the secret of good cakes. Cereals are very important for the winter breakfast. Sorrel soup is a wholesome delicacy in early spring. Don't just throw a salad together—it requires thought. All growing plants indoors should be kept away from gas.

Essex,

THE CAR OF THE FUTURE. Even though you may have never ridden in the ESSEX, you must have heard of its qualities that make it a favorite with both those who have owned light weight economical cars and those who use large costly automobiles. The reason is readily understood. It lies in the fact that ESSEX combines the advantages of both. It is light in weight, moderate in cost and economical in maintenance and operation. Those are the advantages of cars of its weight class. But it also is finely finished. Its endurance matches the costliest cars. In performance very few excel it in either speed, acceleration, nimbleness or hill climbing. Why not get acquainted with the ESSEX now? G. G. PHILLIPS, Distributor. Phone 507. c/o E. EVANESCENT.

I've known all kinds of grief and care that this world has in store, and I have torn my brinded hair, and walked the well known floor. And sometimes now I look behind upon the bygone years, when I, with vexed and troubled mind, shed cataracts of tears. And all the griefs look piffing now, which made my nights a frost, and dug these furrows in my brow regardless of the cost. I wonder why I used to weep, and 'neath my burden bend, and why cheap troubles spoiled my sleep for weary nights on end. I recollect some nights of pain when life was spiced with gall; but what the grief that seared my brain, I do not now recall. I recollect one evening large, when I was sorely tried, and stood upon the river's marge, and thought of suicide. I must have had a load of care, a ton or two of woe; but what it was that drove me there, I'm dinged if I know. And now that I am old and wise, at care I lightly glance; I know that every sorrow flies, if given half a chance. But if you take it to your breast, against your starboard lung, 'twill in your bosom make its nest, and there produce its young.

Connolly Labor College, Dublin.

(By special correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor.)

Dublin, Ireland.—A correspondent writing to the Irish Times gives interesting details about the Labor College that has been founded in Dublin as a memorial to James Connolly, and to carry on his work. This college, says the correspondent, is a bona fide organization for dispensing education, and not as some have chosen to assume, an ingenious method of disseminating Bolshevik propaganda. It should be said, however, that the organizers are themselves partly to blame if they have been misunderstood.

A series of classes for workmen, held under the auspices of the trade unions, were started in 1919; and these classes having been found a permanent national organization. A constitution was adopted, control being vested in a conference of delegates of trade unions and other Labor organizations. The conference elects a chairman, secretary, and treasurer, and a committee of management of six, while at the first meeting of classes in every year, the students elect six of their number to act on the committee jointly with the appointed members.

For the spring session of 1920, three courses of lectures are to be given: on economics, on industrial history, and on law as it relates to workers. One lecture a week is given in each course, and a nominal fee of 2s. 6d. is charged for the course. Weekly lectures are also given on public speaking, and the conduct of public meetings.

The director of studies is Mr. J. M. MacDonnell, who states that the college is founded on the same idea as the Scottish Labor College, of which the moving spirit is John McLean.

While the teachings of Karl Marx may be said to be the foundation of Irish Labor's economic faith, a slavish adherence to his teachings is not invited by the college, which prescribes the reading of the works of G. O'Brien, Sidney Webb, and others who are not disciples of Marx. The course on law includes the study of the workmen's compensation acts, truck acts, status of apprentices, factory acts, and trades disputes acts. The college is supported by contributions from the trade unions.

THE EQUAL CHANCE.

"I've never had a chance," said he. How often do we hear it said "By men whose every hope is dead? No chance the world has given me To come to fame and force ahead."

No chance! the very breath of life Is all the chance which God bestows On men from birth unto the close. He who has strength to face the strife Has all his happier brother knows.

He who has strength to work and wait Is well-equipped for every care. He can do all that he will dare. Man's will determines off his fate, And every man must do his share.

Yet some are born to riches here, And some unto a round of ease, But judge not by the lives of these. The truly great in any sphere Are toilers in life's industries.

Life is itself the only chance Which God bestows upon a man. We are all equal by His plan. Strong men can master circumstance 'Twas as a toiler Christ began.

Why Clowns Paint Their Cheeks.

All pantomime clowns paint their cheeks, and mostly they do so according to certain designs handed down from generation to generation. But as to the why and the wherefore opinions differ.

According to one authority the scarlet triangles, red fish-tail and half-moon, originated from dabs of vermilion placed here and there on the cheeks at haphazard to represent a naughty boy who had been at the jam-pot.

Another says that the pantomime clown's reddened face is intended as a burlesque of the rouge-tinted cheeks of the pantomime columbine. While yet a third has it that the crimson patches are a survival from the early mystery plays, when the clown was a demon, and red all over.

The theory has also been held that the modern clown in pantomime is a direct descendant of Momus, the god of mockery of the earliest mystery plays and masques, who was always represented with a huge gaping mouth. The red fish-tail is merely the survival of that part of the medieval make-up which aimed at producing an apparent enlargement of the mouth.

The curious scarlet symbols are only found on the cheeks of pantomime clowns. The ordinary circus clown does not paint his cheeks.

Duty of a Newspaper.

There may be many opinions of what the duty of a newspaper is, but no one will deny that its primary obligations are the purveying of news. Its very name suggests the like. As a matter of fact the newspapers of the world are divided into two classes. Those may be known, for the sake of convenience, as the American and the English. In America the ideal newspaper is the one which supplies most news and supplies it quickest. This being the object which every paper of the Continent must ever keep before it, the competition becomes terrific and all other considerations are sacrificed to that of catering to an abnormally developed thirst, on the part of its readers, for news. The more sensational it is the more newsy. For that reason the average American and Canadian newspaper makes no pretence at literary excellence. News is its god and nothing else counts.

In Great Britain and France, however, the other extreme is reached. There the newspaper ideal is the very opposite to that of the American. Papers there do attempt, with great success, to impart a literary style to the contents of their issue. Even the news is written in that style, with the result as a matter of fact, that there is very little distinction drawn between news, editorial and contributed matter. Of late years, in London, the gradual relinquishment of that semi-literary style in writing pure news has been browing, particularly with such newspapers as the Daily Mail and the Daily Express. The same sensational tone is being incorporated by those papers with success, and other papers, in a smaller way, are following the lead. After all, when news is written in the heavy, ponderous style peculiar to the typically English newspaper, it does not possess the freshness and originality which should be always present.

As a matter of fact, neither style—English nor American—is admirable. The sensational method has the (often) dangerous result of creating an unnatural craving for the exaggerated and the distorted. The literary style succeeds in imparting an insipid tone which subtracts from the vivacity which should characterize news.

Can there be any doubt that there should be a happy medium? One treatment for editorial articles and another for news should be the ideal of the newspaper, and one should not trespass on the domain of the other. News should never be tainted nor colored to suit evigencies and editorial comment should adhere to a fixed habit of impartial and sincere observation. Unfortunately the departure from such ideals—particularly the latter—on the part of some papers has the unfair result of placing the legitimate newspaper in the same light.

Cheap, flashy methods may have the effect of giving temporary popularity. But the journal which will ever brave the storm of adversity and misfortune is the one which preserves its integrity and impartiality above the many temptations which are sure to offer.

THE POLICE AT HARVEY'S.—We wish to state, in justice to the carmen, that there was no disorder amongst them at A. Harvey & Co.'s premises. Owing to the great rush for coal, the police were sent there to regulate the traffic.

Placentia's Gallant Dead

PLACENTIA, March 26. The material parts of the marble memorial monument to be erected to the memory of Placentia heroes, were landed from the S. S. Clyde this morning and hauled by a large crowd of men to the site in front of the Church. Some pieces being over three tons weight required careful handling. The Committee appreciated the courtesy of the Reid Company in having the steamer come inside the Gut to facilitate landing safely this heavy material. Messrs. Murrin and Madden of Muir's Marble Works, contractors, are here the past few days making the final preparations for immediate erection of the monument and expect to have all finished within the coming week. Due notice will be given as to the date of the unveiling of the memorial.

Methodist National Campaign.

AND THE INTER-CHURCH FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Among the objectives of the Financial Campaign, and one that should appeal to the liberality of the Laymen of the Church, is the Superannuation Fund for Aged Ministers and Ministers' widows and orphans. The following is a synopsis taken from the Toronto-Globe of an address delivered by Rev. R. J. D. Simpson, Secretary-Treasurer of the Superannuation Fund. "The Church, Mr. Simpson declared, had always waged war against men who neglected to pay a living wage to their employees, and yet in this respect the Church itself was the greatest sinner.

"Mr. Simpson appealed to the people to make the Forward Movement a success. The Superannuation Fund was asking for $1,500,000 to endow its work so that it would be possible to fulfill the Church's obligations to the men who had spent their lives in its service. Unless this sum could be obtained unless the people contributed generously toward the Forward Movement, he said.

Dependent on the Superannuation Fund were 900 persons. Of these 400 were ministers, 400 widows and 100 orphans. Some of these men, Mr. Simpson declared, had worked for more than 30 years for an average salary of $450 a year. One minister had been 45 years in the Toronto Conference, and his average salary amounted to $430.

Mr. Simpson told stories of ministers so poor that they had not the money for the common necessities of life. One man, who had preached for 39 years, had not enough money to bury his wife, and the Church owed him $4,980 in unpaid stipends.

When ministers began their work, Mr. Simpson said, they agreed to give wherever they were sent, to give all their time to the work of the Church, and to quit when they were told to quit. They agreed to this on the understanding that the Church would provide adequate salaries and adequate old age pensions. The ministers, the speaker said, had fulfilled their side of their agreement, but the Church had woefully fallen down.

For the past 12 years, years of the greatest prosperity in Canada, the Methodist Church owed its pastors $760,000 in unpaid salaries. The Church simply defaulted that amount, Mr. Simpson said, and wiping the slate clean, proceeded to forget all about it. Since the time of the union the tremendous sum of $2,500,000 had accumulated in unpaid ministers' salaries.

The man who made a moral contribution to the life of the nation probably made the biggest contribution any man could make, Mr. Simpson said. The easiest way to kill Christianity he declared, was to starve the preachers.

Next week (D.V.) we hope to give synopses of addresses delivered by J. H. Gundy, a Methodist Layman, and Canon Cody, of the Anglican Church, to a group of business men at the Empire Club in Toronto, dealing with the important subject of Christian Stewardship. M. F.

Over the Top at St. Thomas's.

With the Rector in the chair, and Rev. Canon Bolt, Rev. Canon Smart, Rev. W. R. J. Higgett and several members of the Vestry present, the final meeting or "wind-up" to the recent campaign among the parishioners of St. Thomas's, took place last night. The various teams, numbering 21, reported on their progress during the past four days, in which time they had canvassed all the members of the congregation for the amount needed, $18,000, to meet all the expenses of the Parish for the year. They succeeded in "going over the top" with the splendid total of $23,000. The Leading-Team, No. 9, was captained by Mr. C. E. Hunt, while Team No. 21, from the Boy's Club, and captained by Mr. James Raines, proved a close second. The ladies of the parish provided light refreshments, after which the reverend gentlemen present gave short addresses which were heartily applauded. Being the Lenten Season it was decided to hold an official supper in honor of the event some few weeks hence.

Union Lenten Services.

In harmony with a resolution of the Clerical Round Table, there will be a series of religious meetings in the Board of Trade Building on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of next week. These meetings will begin promptly at twenty minutes to one. Each meeting will be conducted by a clergyman of each of the following churches, Anglican, Congregational, Methodist, and Presbyterian, who will give an address of 10 minutes suitable to the occasion; the order of worship will be uniform and the meetings will not be more than half an hour long. It is hoped that these meetings will be utilized by the people, and prove our fraternity and unity in the bonds of a common faith.

Dr. Lehr's New Quarters

Yesterday afternoon a Telegram reporter had the pleasure of being shown through the new quarters of Dr. A. B. Lehr, the Senior Dentist of Newfoundland. They are even superior to the old stand, and certainly are more elaborately fitted and equipped. The stand is without doubt the best that could be selected, i.e., the Strang Building, Water Street, near Adelaide Street. Dr. Lehr has the whole Strang Building, with the exception of the ground floor. His first flat is used for extraction and plate work, in which he specializes, and three dental chairs are installed. Thus, no time is lost and the maximum of satisfaction is guaranteed. Everything is spotlessly clean and the visitor cannot but be struck with it. The next flat is for chloroform and other cases and here special care has been exercised to secure efficiency and satisfaction. The three operating rooms are painted pure white and present a hospital-like appearance. White enamel steel hospital furniture, imported specially from Canada and the States, has been installed and the very best that could be procured was selected. The advantage of having three chloroform rooms will be seen when it is explained that they permit of patients remaining there for as long as it takes to recuperate. A friend may be brought and kept for company. The attendance, also, is a special feature of Dr. Lehr's Dental Establishment, and its peer cannot be found. Dr. Lehr has practiced in Newfoundland for 28 years and his name is perhaps the most widely known of any professional man in the country. That he will succeed in building up an even greater clientele is assured.

Grand Rally George Street A. B. C.

To-morrow the last shot in the contest between the Red and Blue divisions will be fired. So far the enthusiasm has been running higher every Sunday, and it is hoped to-morrow will be a fitting climax. The Associate teacher, Mr. I. C. Morris, will give an address on "Civil Problems," and how to serve them, giving some ideas from the outside world regarding the same. Visitors are cordially welcomed.

On Thursday past the Women's Christian Temperance Union met in the Ladies parlour of Gower Street Church for the regular meeting, which was presided over by the President, Mrs. Hunter. The various Committees reported favourable on the work of the past fortnight. The service held in the Penitentiary on Sunday last was conducted by Mrs. Soper. Addresses were presented by the members. Miss Clouston sang and played in an appreciative manner. The W.C.T.U. meets again on Thursday the 8th of April.

The Silver Jubilee

OF HIS GRACE ARCHBISHOP McNEIL.

The Catholics of Toronto Archdiocese are preparing to celebrate in a fitting manner the Silver Jubilee of their beloved Archbishop. The date fixed is October 20th, the twenty-fifth anniversary of his consecration as Bishop of St. George's, Newfoundland. Solemn High Mass will be offered in the Cathedral and addresses read from the clergy and laity. Preparations are already assuming a somewhat definite form, a committee of fifteen priests and two laymen from each of the seventy-eight parishes of the Archdiocese have been named to arrange the festivities of the Jubilee. His Grace Archbishop McNeil, who is a native of Cape Breton, was first nominated Bishop of the See of St. George's, Newfoundland, in 1895, was transferred to Vancouver Archdiocese on February 11th, 1910, and to Toronto on April 10th, 1912. In the eight years spent in the capital of Ontario, Archbishop McNeil has endeared himself to the Catholics of the Archdiocese, and has a host of friends among all classes of the community.—Catholic Register.

Cochrane Street Centennial Church.

The Sunday services at the above Church will be of more than usual interest. It is the Missionary Anniversary and the esteemed Pastor, Dr. Bond, with his congregation, have ever shown the liveliest interest in the work of Missions. On Wednesday, this week, there was held in the Lecture Room, a mass meeting of men, who spent a very pleasant social evening, and who considered the question of their responsibility in regard to this great movement. Rev. Oliver Jackson, Pastor of the Methodist Church of Brigus, has been invited as the chief speaker for the day, and he will set forth the whole matter in his sermon in the morning, and his address in the evening. The Committee have been honored in obtaining the presence of Mr. Chas. P. Ayre, M.B.E., who will act as Chairman. The Choir have prepared special music, and the soloist will be Miss Curtis. It is hoped that the spacious and beautiful Church will have a large congregation, and the ushers will give a welcome to everyone.

Young Men of City to Hold Mass Meeting in Methodist College Hall To-morrow Evening. Prohibition to be Discussed.

At 8.30 to-morrow evening, in the Methodist College Hall, there will be a grand rally of young men between 15 and 25. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss Prohibition, which has of late come in for a large amount of discussion. Resolutions supporting Prohibition and protesting against Modification will be brought forward. In addition to the discussion of the subject, it is likely that a Young Men's League will be organized. The purpose of this organization will be, primarily, the support of Prohibition. To-morrow, in the Churches and Bible Classes, the meeting will be announced, while an advertisement appears on the front page of this issue. The meeting does not begin until after church, and those who want to gain sitting room should get there as soon after church as possible.

A young woman was charged with vagrancy. A week ago this girl was before court and ordered to be sent to the train by a policeman and her passage paid. This morning at 2 o'clock the police on duty discovered the girl at the railway premises with a number of hooligans. She was remanded for eight days, when she will be sent home under escort.

Two men who were charged with loose and disorderly conduct, i.e., throwing coal and stones at each other, were fined $2.00 or 7 days.

Rush on Coal.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—In a news item headed, "Rush on Coal," which appeared in your paper yesterday, I find the following:—

"So great was the rush that a number of policemen had to be kept on the coal premises, fearing disorders among the carters." I beg to contradict flatly that last statement. There was no disorder among the carters—no trouble of any kind and no quarrelling. The police were there; but as far as I can learn, they were there to keep the customers in order. It is not fair that decent men like ourselves should be misrepresented in the press, when the trouble was with a class that included many who look down on us poor toasters. As the N. I. W. A. representative of these men, it is my duty to make a protest. Yours truly, RICHARD O. HEARN. St. John, March 26, 1920.

To Motor Car Owners.

The students at the Engineering School of the Civil Re-establishment Committee will be glad of the experience of overhauling and repairing a small number of cars. The students are under competent instructors, and I think that owners may rest assured that proper care will be taken of their cars. The school can take two cars at a time. Application for admission of the cars to the school should be made to Lieut. J. K. Bemister, head instructor, with whom arrangements can be made as to the date on which the cars can be admitted. Owners must provide insurance on the car against fire while it is in the Engineering School as a condition of acceptance of the same. mar25,31

LONDON, March 27. The Polish Government was removed on Thursday from Warsaw to Bromberg, in Polish Posen, twenty-five miles northwest of Thorn, according to a Berlin despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., quoting rumors in that city.

IMPORTANT BOLSHEVIK SUCCESS.

LONDON, March 27. A Bolsheviki communication, received by wireless last night from Moscow, says: "During the occupation of Kholmikaya we took more than one thousand prisoners and fourteen guns, and scores of machine guns. These were captured mainly by a Uhlan regiment which only the previous day had passed to our side. Two thousand Kuass Cossacks have joined us near Smolenskaya. We entered Grosny on March 24. The oil wells had not been damaged."

"Safety First" To Be Enforced.

Public safety does not alone concern the operation of railways, street cars and motor cars. It lies deeper. It lies in the health of the people. One of the greatest causes to health is kidney trouble. If the kidneys don't filter from the blood the uric acid and other poisons, the general health declines, and all manner of ailments—rheumatic, sciatic, and neuralgic pains, lambo, spots in the bladder, headaches, constipation, lassitude. There is certain relief for these ailments. GIN PILLS help where other remedies fail. They build up the debilitated system, bring the kidneys and bladder back to normal action, and by removing the cause, make impossible the evil results. GIN PILLS do not contain any alcohol, but all the valuable diuretic properties of the GIN together with other diuretics and antiseptics which have a signal effect on the bladder and kidneys. All druggists and dealers sell GIN PILLS under a guarantee to return your money if they do not bring relief. If you have backache, constant headaches or pain in the sides, begin treatment at once with GIN PILLS. 50c a box. Free sample on request. SUMMARY.

MINERS' STRIKE NOW APPEARS UNLIKELY.

London, March 27.—By a large majority the conference of miners' delegates, held to-day, passed resolutions instructing the Executive Committee to continue negotiations with the Government. As soon as the Premier was notified of the decision he invited the Executive to meet him again and a further conference takes place this evening at the Premier's residence. Added importance is lent the miners' decision, since it means their acceptance of the principle of payment on the percentage basis. It is understood that the Government conveyed a hint to the Miners' Executive Council that, by accepting the principle of percentage, they might obtain better terms than twenty per cent, already suggested, and that this was in the minds of those who advocated acceptance of the percentage scheme at the delegates' conference.

WONDERFUL ADVANCE IN WIRELESS TELEPHONY.

London, March 27.—Experiments in wireless telephony were made in London yesterday. A Handley-Page aeroplane, equipped with a wireless telephone apparatus, was sent up with a party of journalists. They exchanged words with their editors, the voices being heard quite distinctly. By use of direction finders in three land stations they were informed by voice of their exact position. The value of this apparatus in fog is unlimited, as an aviator can be informed of his position and of conditions on ground when he is too high to see them. Experiments were conducted yesterday in a radius of one hundred miles. Further developments in the new scheme is a pocket wireless set, which will be exhibited at the London Wireless Institute to-night. A large pocket book contains the receiving apparatus. One must be earthed first, when it can be fixed to an open umbrella, tree or even a bedstead. With the telephone one can pick up messages from local stations, while by attaching the hook to a suitable aerial, a station may be tapped. This wonderful "toy" is to cost about £1. (Note.—Lieut. A. V. Robb, of the Marconi Wireless Company, who was one of the original experimenters in Wireless Telephony, being one of the two to converse across the Atlantic Ocean, was in Fr. Grace last summer while the Handley-Page aeroplane "Atlantic" was there. A Telegram reporter who was there at the time was personally acquainted with him, and described him and his work in this paper.)

a large army unless she plans an offensive against her neighbors, while the ships of war which she has owned for the last half century have been nothing but a load on her shoulders. Turkey is in a sullen and vindictive mood, and the military occupation of her capital and the despatch of war vessels to its guardian straits is a wise move. The Turkish Cabinet recently resigned, and the Sultan made a wise move in calling upon Isat Pasha, an anti-German and an opponent of the Young Turk party, to form a ministry which will be entrusted with the difficult task of assenting to the terms which the Allies will impose.

Turkey's disillusionment must be complete. At the close of a war which she entered upon at the dictates of her sultan lord she finds herself stripped of her choicest territory. The crescent flies no more over Arabia, Mesopotamia, Syria, Armenia and Palestine, while recent Turkish excesses in Cilicia have probably robbed the Sultan of that rich province. His tenure of Constantinople seems hazardous, and it is evident that if he is permitted to remain there, his opportunities for misgovernment will be curbed by the controlling power of the other nations. It is to be hoped that the Peace Treaty will insist upon the surrender of Enver Pasha, who has made such an unenviable record as leader of the Young Turks, for there can be no settlement and stability in Turkey while this fire-brand continues his career of intrigue and revolution. Turkey's only claim on Thrace is the right of the conqueror to the lands he has annexed, and the record of the Sultanate in Armenia and Cilicia point to the fact that Turkey is unfit to be the guardian of alien nations.—Montreal Star.

MRS. M. MAGNANT GIVES THE CREDIT TO DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Her Back Ached and She Was Always Tired, But She States She Found the Relief She Longed For in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

St. Lina, Alta., Mar. 26.—(Special).—"Thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills I can now do my work." So says Mrs. M. Magnant, a well known and highly respected resident of this place. Mrs. Magnant was a sufferer from that terrible weariness so many women know. "My back ached," she says, "and I felt so tired all the time." But she used Dodd's Kidney Pills. She persevered with them, taking sixteen boxes in all, with the result given in the glad words of the opening paragraph. Other women in all parts of Canada make the same statement. They were weighed down with weakness, sickness and pain, and found the relief they longed for in Dodd's Kidney Pills. For sick kidneys are the cause of the great majority of the ills from which women suffer. To treat them the kidneys must be strengthened so they will strain all the impurities out of the blood. Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills do not help sick kidneys.

New Overland Four

The IDEAL Five Passenger Car.

It has required only a few weeks for our new five-passenger Overland to establish itself as one of the most popular cars on the Newfoundland market.

The Overland is a tremendous success—there can be no doubt about that. It has won its way into the hearts and minds of the Motoring World almost over night.

It has made more real friends, in a shorter space of time, than any other model ever produced by this Company. If you are at all familiar with Overland history, you will appreciate the significance of this statement.

There is, of course, a very definite reason for such universal endorsement of our new car. You will find it in the single word, Performance, as expressed through a strictly modern power plant and chassis.

The Overland is not a racing car, though it is easily capable of fifty miles per hour. What is vastly more important, it is an utterly dependable car—one of the most thoroughly satisfactory motor vehicles that has ever been developed for the road.

A Wonderful Test of Strength.

At the Denver Horse and Stock Show recently, the New Overland Four five-passenger Touring Car leaped a 5 ft. hurdle. The Car was called the "Gasoline Horse" and performed after the jumping horses had cleared the 4 ft. hurdle. To clear the 5 ft. hurdle the Car leaped 18 ft. in the air and sustained a blow calculated to be 40,000 foot lbs., without breaking or showing the slightest evidence of coming through this terrible leap.

The car used was chosen haphazardly from the lot of regular stock cars, and was not especially prepared in any way. This should convince anyone of the reliability of the New Overland to stand up to any strain required of it on the Newfoundland roads.

For the out-of-town man it is an especially good car, a load of 700 cwt. of any material may be carried in the rear seat, after the upholstery has been removed, which can be done in a few seconds, and after the load is removed the upholstery is snapped back into place and the car is again ready for passengers.

The new three-point Cantilever Spring System, which gives the 100-inch wheel base an additional 30 inches of Spring Base and easy riding qualities, is a new departure in Motor construction, and is without doubt the greatest invention yet.

Drop into our Showrooms any day and examine this car. We will be pleased to take you for a trial run any day.

THE roof is an important item—it "makes" or "mars" the whole structure. In shingle-roofed houses it is even more necessary to see that it is in good regular repair, because once a roof commences to decay a general deterioration of house-value is the immediate result. To ensure a permanent durability, as well as an added appearance, use either as a mixture in which shingles are dipped or as a stain to apply to the completed roof. It comes in all colors, and gives a tough, durable "seasoning," besides contributing largely to the artistic effect of your home. A Refrigerator for the Automobile.

It is not too early in the year to consider next summer's automobile trips and luncheons, since the equipment for such little festivities can frequently be used in the home most conveniently. Particularly does this apply to the little refrigerators which, intended for use in an automobile, fit in admirably with the furnishings of a small apartment.

This refrigerator is distinctly fortunate in its ice chamber, since this keeps ice unmelted for 24 hours. The chamber can be slipped along in the ice box so that it can be placed either at one end or elsewhere, thus making the packing of the food a simple task. The refrigerator may be had with either a zinc or a white enamel lining; the enamel is perhaps prettier to look at, but the zinc is more practical, since it remains unscratched when the ice chamber is moved. The refrigerator is of convenient size—about two feet long and 18 inches across—so that it can be easily strapped on the running board of an automobile by means of its heavy straps, or placed on a small shelf outside an apartment window. For those who indulge in housekeeping on a miniature scale, it is an admirable contrivance, and its size makes possible the storing of as much food as one cares to keep on hand in such a place.

The long-handled dustpan is a great help to the housewife. As a rule an inexpensive cut of meat has little or no waste. Fondant may be used as filling for dates and cooked prunes. Run fresh coconut through the food grinder instead of grating it. Try dipping the french fried potatoes in oilmeal before frying. After a rather heavy dinner, fruit is the most desirable dessert. A well-ventilated house is a great factor in the health of the family. A good dandelion salad has the leaves sprinkled with grated cheese.

PRINCES AND MOTOR-CYCLING.

The King and Queen refused to allow Prince Albert and Prince Henry to have a motor car while at Cambridge. "Too expensive and detrimental to discipline," was the parental opinion, and so the Royal Undergrads have motor cycles. Officially these are to carry them to and from lectures. Actually they tear about all over the place on them. They are capable drivers, Prince Albert particularly so, his experience in the Flying Corps having given him every confidence. The Prince of Wales never was keen on the motor bicycle, and when quite a youngster aspired to the motor car. He now owns several. At the front the Prince of Wales had every opportunity of using the motor bicycle, but he preferred the ordinary "push bike," and never used the motor cycle. The side car was also a pet aversion of his.

EX-KAISER FOR JAVA.

For two whole days the energies of the Supreme Council, the "Big Three," reinforced by the Belgian Premier and the Japanese Ambassador, have been taken up by the question of the war-guilty ex-Kaiser and his lieutenants. In respect of Wilhelm II, the Allies are so far agreed that he cannot be suffered to remain in Holland in dangerous proximity to his former Reich, but their new representations to The Hague tend rather to leave the Dutch Government the finding of, and responsibility for, a solution. The removal of the ex-Kaiser to one or other of the Dutch Colonies is distinctly suggested, although not precisely demanded. The parallel of Elba—or St. Helena—is obvious, and deemed regrettable in a good many quarters. It would be, as a Belgian diplomat put it the other, "an elegant way out." Elegant, if rather spectacular, not necessarily safe.

GERMANY'S FIRST DIPLOMAT.

Dr. Sthamer, the German Charge d'Affairs, who has come to London to take over the palatial Embassy in Carlton House Terrace, overlooking the Mall in St. James' Park, will present his credentials to Lord Curzon this week. That done, Germany technically becomes a friendly nation once more. For a long time it is to be feared the friendliness will be very frostily official. That Dr. Sthamer, an elderly, dapper, but actually efficient personality, thoroughly appreciates. He has no intention of seeking the limelight more often than is strictly necessary, but he has been spending the past few days picking up the threads of old acquaintance and revisiting scenes of which he has many pleasant pre-war memories. Dr. Sthamer typifies the new Germany. He is a commercial man rather than a professional diplomat, and the niceties of politics will interest him less than the industrial recovery of his country. He has rather disappointed curious crowds by neglecting to hoist his flag, and by showing a disposition to make backdoor exits from his house. He visited the Hyde Park church parade on Sunday, however, and confessed afterwards that English people did not seem so chic as before. He thought the dresses were not nearly as smart as in the old days.

AN ICE-SKATING CLUB.

London is worse off than several cities in the North of England in the matter of ice-skating. The old Prince's Club, Knightsbridge, has gone through many vicissitudes, and is now put permanently to a quite different use. A meeting is being arranged to discuss the formation of an ice-skating club. Lord Lytton, whose gyrations on the ice in Switzerland have been beautifully supplied by the illustrated papers to an admiring public here, will be chairman. It is proposed that the rink of the club shall be open to the public during certain stated hours. Once the club is established there will be no longer a valid reason for ice-skaters refusing to come to London.

Bricklayer Claims Title.

WANTS SEAT IN HOUSE OF LORDS AND RENT ROLL OF $180,000.

If John G. Rackstraw, erstwhile bricklayer of Sunderland, can establish his claim to the peerage of Dumbarton and estate of Burnbrae, carrying with it the title of Lord Lennox, he will give up his trowel and sit on the House of Lords, with a top hat cocked a bit on one side of his head in the accepted House of Lords manner. No women having as yet got into the House of Lords, the peers can still comfortably wear their toppers.

But Rackstraw the bricklayer has a long way to go before it will be decided whether or not he is Lord Lennox, especially as there has been an eleventh-hour claimant to the title in the person of Mrs. Margaret Jones of Birkenhead. It is reputed that an annual rent roll of $180,000 goes with the title, and with it all the accustomed prestige of a peerage.

Rackstraw tells his story thus:

"I remember as a lad that every night when I came home from school my old grandmother, who brought me up, used to tell me that I should be a nobleman one day. Her story was that my great-great-grandmother was a descendant of the Douglas family of Scotland, and that we were really related to Mary Queen of Scots. She had had little money, but she made many sacrifices to keep me at school in order that I might get some education to fit me for the position to which I was entitled. For a time, I acted as a school teacher, but I fell out with the headmaster and gave it up, and learned the trade of bricklaying, at which I have worked ever since."

One day when Rackstraw's life seemed just one brick after another, he saw an advertisement in a London paper which flashed vividly on his mind and screen the story told him by his grandmother.

There was something else that gave Rackstraw a "hunch" that he was the man who, despite his proficiency in bricklaying, was destined to rightfully take his place in the nobility. Mrs. Rackstraw, his wife, had dreamed just about this time that she had been walking through a castle and a big estate in Scotland along with her elder brother.

Rackstraw immediately began collecting evidence in support of his case.

Owing to shortness of money, Rackstraw said, he has been hard put to it to pursue his claim, but one of his sons, a draughtsman, has helped him. He estimates his cost up to date at $4,000. Rackstraw, who is a hale and hearty man of sixty, is optimistic about his claim.

"I am the heir, and there is no doubt about it," he declares. "I can trace my ancestry back to 1581, and I think I shall win."

Rackstraw's solicitor, John Anderson, of Edinburgh, has informed him that the three women who are the present holders have withdrawn their defence, but that he must contest the claim of Mrs. Margaret Jones, who says she is a direct descendant of the Lennoxes and Grahams, and therefore more closely related in blood descent to the last Lord Lennox of Dumbarton than the Hays, from whom, it is asserted, Rackstraw traces his forebears on his mother's side.

Broke Away From Poverty.

Somewhere in the obituary of almost every successful American you will find this sentence: "He began life a poor boy."

Our great men seem to have had a positive genius for picking out poor parents. Although poverty at birth is looked upon as an asset rather than a liability, most successful Americans, notwithstanding the tremendous advantage poverty gave them, began to hustle for riches before their milk teeth had fallen out.

Being born poor may be an asset, but it becomes a liability if you stay that way. When you are a pink, stub-nosed baby being carried around on a pillow and exhibited to the neighbors you are fortunate if poor, but a great deal more unfortunate if you remain so.

Most of the men who have succeeded in getting their names in the United States histories, in public libraries and on cigar labels selected parents who were constantly bumping into people on the street to whom they owed money, but the greatness of these men was displayed in the neatness and despatch with which they succeeded in leaving something more substantial for their own children than pink complexions and waiting lists of creditors.—Thrift Magazine.

Queen Victoria's Faithful Attendant.

Over a grave in the old kirkyard at Craithie stands a block of native granite, on the pedestal of which is a Scotch thistle, the inscription stating that John Brown, "personal attendant and beloved friend of Queen Victoria" was born at Craithie, December 8, 1826; died at Windsor Castle, March 27, 1883. "That friend on whose fidelity you count, that friend given to you by circumstances over which you have no control, was God's own gift. Well done, good and faithful servant." The Queen had erected a large house for John Brown, who however, was destined to rest in it for but one night, and that the night he was in his coffin, for on the morrow he was carried to the quiet kirkyard, and it is a remarkable coincidence that John Brown's successor, his cousin "Francis" Clark, who also was honoured by the Queen with the gift of a house, was in it for only one night, and he too, was in his coffin, preparatory to burial in Braemar kirkyard on the following day. When, in 1873, the young madman O'Connor, rushed up to the Queen's carriage in Buckingham Gardens with a pistol in one hand, and a pistol in the other, it was appropriate that the faithful retainer John Brown, should seize and disarm him. For this act Brown was presented by Her Majesty with a medal which is shown on a life-size bronze statue by Boehm, which stands in the Balmoral grounds. It was while visiting the Balmoral stables that the Prince Consort saw a rough country youth whose father occupied the Bush, a farm in the immediate vicinity of Balmoral, on the north side of the Dee. Prince Albert found that in his stable boy he had no sycophantic courtier, but a lad who spoke unaffectedly to himself and the Queen, with the ease that sits so well upon the Highlander. He was selected to attend upon the Queen's carriage, and John Brown dared to do what almost every man would have shrunk from. One day, while driving, the Royal party was overtaken by a heavy shower of rain. The carriage was stopped, John Brown got down, and suggested to Her Majesty that she should put a plaid round her shoulders. The Queen declined the offer, and asked him to mount and let the drive be continued. "Hoops lassie!" said Brown, taking the plaid, and putting it in position, "tak' the plaid round yer shoulders (shoulders) or ye'll get a wat skin."

Golden Trawling.

It was stated in the Grimsby Police Court recently that skippers are earning as much as $7,000 per annum, and that many are in receipt of an annual income of $25,000.

This, of course, is well known in the trade, but to the mere landlubber such huge incomes are mystifying. As a matter of fact, "trawling" is one of the most profitable businesses under the sun.

Vessels bought for $12,000 have earned double their cost in twelve months. The financial results are staggering even to those "in the know." This boom is shared by all in the trade—owners, skippers, and deck hands are reaping a valuable golden harvest from the sea. How is the money earned?

To use the phraseology of the ship's articles, a fishing trip is a "voyage of adventure." Skippers and second-hands are "partners" in the "venture." They "sign on" to give their skill and service without any fixed remuneration, and are therefore partners in the voyage. The due proportion of the profits (if any) derived from the trip are duly set forth in the agreement.

Under these articles the skipper receives $10 and a second-hand $7 10s. per every $100 of the net proceeds of the sale of the catch. If no net profit is made, these two have worked for nothing.

Under this share system a premium is put upon skill. A skipper who has studied fish—that is, their migratory habits, the breeding grounds, and the seasons—is what the ignorant call "lucky." In reality he is a man who knows when to search and what to do in the varying circumstances.

Within a circle of two miles there may be two vessels—one drawing up huge quantities of fish every four hours, the other an almost empty net. The skipper with a "mind" is reaping his reward; the other, the misfortune. Both are working equally hard, with the difference that when they reach port the one will draw a cheque for $400 and the other one for $40. There is no such thing as luck in fishing. Success depends upon knowledge.

Roughly speaking, a skipper who sails regularly will earn an average income of $3,000 per annum, and the second-hand $2,000. The fishermen—and the term comprises the various classes in a trawler—are also participating in the "boom," their average earnings being from $8 to $10 per week, plus their food.

There are two distinct classes of skipper North Sea and Icelandic. The North Sea is shallow water and mostly abounds in flat fish. In Icelandic waters the depth may reach two miles, and the currents and rocks require special understanding.

Compared with the hardship of Icelandic trawling, North Sea boats are always in a haven. From October to March blizzards of snow and sleet sweep the Icelandic regions, and from December to the end of January there is only an hour or two of daylight. Icelandic vessels are much larger than North Sea trawlers, and so marked is the difference between the two operations that an Icelandic skipper rarely works the North Sea and vice versa.

A Barnyard Story.

The farmer said unto his son, yes, Willie was his name, "Here is a calf for you, my boy, to educate and scrub, to water it and diet it upon the wholesome grub."

The boy looked pleased at such a start, a tear came to his eye, he told his dad he'd do his best, he'd make an honest try.

The calf it had a bright career, it grew to beat the band, it was the finest looking scud that grazed upon the land. He gave it water, fed it hay, put bran into its feed, that cow had everything by heck, a cow could ever need. It was along in fall, the boy, with an important air, put ribbons on the critter's tail and led it to the fair.

And there it stood everything from all the land around. It was a cow right from the horns to where it touched the ground.

A drover came around one day to buy some milking stock, and then the boy who fed the stock received one awful shock. The buyer pulled a long green purse that never could go smash—the boy he sold the cow all right, but father took the cash.

It's just such things as that, they say, that work a heap of harm, and makes it most almighty hard to keep boys on the farm.—ARK.

Just Sawing Wood.

In a grassy paddock adjoining a great cavalry barracks in England are more than a score of four-footed heroes of a hundred fights. They browse in the lush grass "eating their heads off" in the content that comes from well-earned idleness. Ordinary wayfarers clad in the garb of "the trivial round the common task" of daily life do not perturb these sleek-coated gentlemen a whit. But let the regiment pass by in serried rank, and let the bugler sound the advance or the note to deploy, and there is a whizzing and a champing of the turf that tells of coursing blood. They have smelled, once again, the scent of battle.

Outside one of the largest cities of the middle-west of America, many acres have been set apart for the grounds and buildings of a Soldiers' Home, in which sturdy veterans of the Blue and Gray "husband out life's taper at the close and keep the flame from wasting to repose." As a rule, their talk is of mundane things, of old-fashioned winters and party politics, of "cabbages and kings." Yet every once in a while some erstwhile warrior is caught by the spell of his most glorious memories, and there is a clarion note of "McClellan and Antietam," of "Lee and Spotsylvania." In an instant a group gathers and pulses throb again and tongues run high. The noise of battle hurries through the air.

Sixteen months ago, William Hohenzollern, fleeing from a duped and angry people, sought refuge in Holland and began the humdrum task of sawing wood. Occasionally an old retainer or some still-trustful crony came to "fight the battles o'er again," but the world knew nothing of what happened behind the closed doors of his asylum. Every day he kept on sawing wood. Sometimes he paced the grounds in a fruitless effort to escape from the nemesis that blood-guiltiness would not allow him to flee from, but as a rule he hacked and hewed great timbers until one wondered if the forests of his host were not denuded.

Then one day there was a revolution in his old hunting grounds, and all the hopes of past years, and all the dreams of past months, were renewed in a moment. Was it possible that the crown was again to be set on his consecrated brow? Was the old war horse again to hear the noise of battle?

The sound of the bugle died away, and the vision of the splendid uniform of the Prussian Guards fell from him, and he was back again in the old woodman's garb. Once more he drinks the cup of disappointment, once again there is nothing left in the cup but the leaves of despair. The sword has vanished, and so

He keeps on sawing wood.—Montreal Star.

Writing With the Toes.

An apparatus has been invented which will enable an armless man to feed himself, wash his face, use a typewriter, use a knife and fork, or light his pipe or a cigarette.

This invention is worked with the toes, and consists of a few steel wires set in a frame, with arms like two of the legs of an enormous spider, attached to a table after the principle of a Bowden brake.

The inventor, who has also perfected a machine for writing with the toes, is a Mr. George Thompson, a gatfitter, of Edinburgh.

These appliances will be tested in one of the training schools, and if approved will be supplied to men rendered armless by the war.

Golden Draughts.

Probably the most extraordinary draughtboard in the world was constructed at St. Leonards, Sussex, in 1891. This peculiar draughtboard was made of solid blocks of concrete. It was three feet thick, and its surface covered an area of 625 square feet.

Another draughtboard of gigantic proportions is to be seen in the grounds of a military convalescent hospital near Argyll. The pieces are square and of iron, and are moved about by hooked iron rods.

A draughtboard which at one time belonged to Prince Bismarck is estimated to have cost more than £19,000. The squares are made of solid gold and silver.

This board is declared by experts to be the most valuable draughtboard in existence. A set of draughts-men, twelve of gold and twelve of silver, were presented to the Prince. In the centre of each golden draught was a beautiful ruby, while inlaid in the centre of each silver one was a peerless diamond.

A quaint old draughtboard is still to be seen hanging as a sign outside the Chequers Inn, Osmotherley. Its interest lies in the fact that neither the original painter of the sign, nor the landlord of the inn, was a draughts player. The board has fifty-eight squares, whereas a real draughtsboard contains sixty-four.

Nature's Greatest Washers

The sea washes the world—Pears' Soap washes its inhabitants!

For over a century, Pears' has been making its way round the world. Ask for it in your local store; it is there! From the Cape to Cairo, in the bazaars of India, throughout Australia, Canada, the U.S., and South America Pears' has made its way with civilization,—on merits!

Pears' Soap is transparent because it is pure; it is the most economical soap because it wears but does not waste. It cleanses and purifies the skin and freshens up body and mind.

Pears'

is not heavily scented. Its delicate perfume comes from pure natural ingredients; the difference is important,—it means again that Pears' soap is pure.

The Day.

Of all the days in all the week There's only one I care to speak; Sunday is a day divine, A restful day for me and mine. Monday is a day of yawning, A boring day right from the morning, Tuesday's just an aggravation, Like an old and poor relation, Wednesday's not so bad, you see, Someone takes me out to tea, Thursday, I am well-nigh stony,

Have to go on Shanks' pony, Friday I begin to smile, I may be broke but for a while, Saturday, oh, blessed pay day, Bright and cheerful, happy, gay day! Of all the days in all the week, 'Tis Saturday I love to speak.

Learning Journalism.

Can journalism be taught? Mr. Max Pemberton, who has just started the London School of Journalism at 110, Great Russell-street, London, says: "Yes and No. We can't teach anyone that has an aptitude that way; we can show him where he goes wrong; we can put his feet upon the right path. But there are many whom we should never attempt to teach. We have already turned away a number of applications although we have only been open for ten days." It is the old, old dispute over again: "Can an artist be taught?" Of course it is impossible to supply the unimaginative with imagination, yet all the famous artists have been taught. The capacity for expression must be there, but the means of expression can be and indeed must be acquired.

"What the journalist needs," says Mr. Max Pemberton, "is observation, resourcefulness, readiness of wit. These it is possible to develop. If there are no signs of them, then we say No. We shall not waste our time on 'duds'."

Mr. Pemberton is best known as a novelist and writer of adventure stories. But he began as a journalist and he has never ceased to be one.

His beginning was instructive. It was at the time when Sir George Newnes had just started 'Tit-Bits' and was offering a guinea a column for contributions. Pemberton, just down from Cambridge, called at the office in Farringdon-street and found the proprietor-editor in a long shed of an office with a plate before him and on the plate a pork chop for his lunch.

"What do you want?" he asked. "I want to write for you," was the reply.

"What about?" "This was a facer. Pemberton had not thought about a subject. But he looked round and in that instant proved himself a journalist. He noticed that the building was going to pieces. Evidently it had been creepily built.

"I want to write," he said, "about Jerry-building."

He was told to send in an article as soon as he liked.

Then he had a piece of luck. He went home and found there a lawyer who happened to be full of the subject of Jerry-builders' iniquities. Pemberton pumped him and wrote three columns. A few days afterwards came three guineas. That was the first money he earned.

As to the method of teaching, he explains that it is based on practice, not on theory.

"The only way to learn to do anything is to try, with someone to tell you where you go wrong and to correct your mistakes. We set our students to work, and their work is examined by none but men who are journalists and successful journalists. No 'duds' there either. Every journalist knows that it is possible to teach journalists. Most of them have done it. There must be teachable boards. But how did we all learn? By trying. That's what our pupils will do."

Even the knock of the short story can be imparted if the learner has any gift at all in that direction. But the signs of a gift will be carefully looked for first. Was it Mr. Pemberton in one of his previous ventures who received a letter which read thus: "Dear Sir—My wife is very noisy in the house. Do you think you could keep her quiet if I paid for her to learn short-story writing?" No applicants of that kind need trouble the London School of Journalism. It is out to make journalists, not for "easy money."—F. H. in Daily Mail.

SAGE PHILOSOPHY.

Minneapolis News: It is a grievous fault to refuse to love a man because you do not approve of him entirely. No mother ever loved a son less because of his faults. No man should love his fellows less because of their weaknesses.

THE INCENTIVE TO SAVING.

Kansas City Star: In all the lamentations that the dollar will buy so little, consider this fact, usually overlooked! Every dollar saved now will buy two dollars' worth of stuff a few years from now when the currency begins its value.

THE PENDULUM SWINGS BACK.

Portland Oregonian: The communist finds that the only salvation of Russia is to return to one of the distinctive characteristics of what they call "capitalism." After they have done all they can to knock out the brain of Russia by massacre of the bourgeoisie, they turn to the survivors of that class only to find an "insufficient number of trained executives and technical experts available for the industrial machine" and to find most of these antagonistic to them.

MANHANDLED ENGLISH.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Never before, perhaps, was the tendency to manhandle the English language so mighty and so general. For the sake of the coming generation parents, at least, should resist the temptation to talk in the new vernacular. If good English is heard at home it will be spoken on the playground. If it is not heard at home the playground will hear linguistic offences scarcely dreamed of by the too careless elders.

SHORTSTORY ROMANCES.

London Morning Post: Cattle are taking the place of ships in the making of sudden fortunes. At the recent short-story sales in Scotland a small farmer who took up breeding only a year ago got £400 for two bull calves; a crofter entered his solitary calf of the year and got third prize and 1,000 guineas in the sale ring; and another small farmer who paid 45 guineas for a calf nine months ago sold it for 1,100 guineas.

A DROP IN THE BUCKET.

London Daily News: As members elected to Parliament who do not take the Oath forfeit their deposits, the Treasury must receive £118,800 from the Sinn Feiners, according to their membership of 72. But it will really be more than that, because only one £150 is returned to a candidate who contests more than one constituency. De Valera "sets" for two constituencies, and contested a third unsuccessfully. So the Treasury will net £450 from him. He has cost it.

A "BAG AND BAGGAGE."

Westminster Gazette: To leave the Turk in power in Constantinople is to gain a purely temporary ease at the certain cost of future wars, when the rival ambitions that have centred upon the great gateway between East and West will have revived. So long as Turkish rule remains at Constantinople that city will be a centre of intrigue and international conflict. Nobody dreams at this hour of expelling all the Turks from Europe. But it will be the bitterest and deepest disappointment of a disappointing peace if the Turkish flag still floats above Constantinople and if Turkish rule continues to blight what might well be one of the fairer portions of European soil.

AN ELUSIVE MULLAH.

London Daily Chronicle: Mahommud Abdullah, "the Mad Mullah," has proved even more elusive than Osman Digna. Since he went into the Mahdi business in 1898 Abdullah has been a constant thorn in the side of the Somaliland Administration. There have been many attempts to round him up, but though his followers have been heavily defeated he has always escaped. Some years ago we captured his mother-in-law; but that, far from distressing him, seemed to give him a new lease of life. In 1914 the Colonial Office reported that he was suffering from an incurable disease and was physically immobile. Since then he has made several raids, and the expedition just ended, though equipped with aeroplanes, has drawn another blank as far as the Mullah is concerned.

Household Notes.

The lightness of pancakes depends on their beating. Bacon fat is almost as good as butter on baked potatoes. If a door hinge squeaks, rub a little laundry soap on it. Lettuce spinach can be served cold with salad dressing. If the sandwich has a rich filling it does not require butter. A pinch of powdered sage leaves gives a relish to cold pork. Currants for jelly should be picked on a dry, sunny day.

SUNLIGHT IN THE MORNING, SUNLIGHT ALL THE DAY.

START washing-day well with Sunlight Soap. Have the clothes on the line early, and the meals ready to time. The afternoon is then yours to spend at your own sweet will.

Pleasure follows in the wake of efficient work. With Sunlight Soap the housewife does her work most efficiently, most easily. There is no mystery. You get out of soap just what the makers put into it. The cream of soap materials go into Sunlight Soap.

The Sunlight environment is in keeping with its mission of cleanliness and efficiency—no soap is better fitted to serve the British housewife than Sunlight Soap. Prove this to-day.

C. L. B.

The Brigade's various departments were all busy this week. On Monday night Bandmaster Morris and his musical combination were busy practicing some extra music for the Easter Monday Concert in the Methodist College Hall, and we hope the public won't forget to secure their tickets at Gray & Goodland's. On Tuesday the Battalion had its usual drill under the Regt. Sergt. Major and the Lieut. Col. Commanding and officers met in their mess room and had a social evening—holding a "Ping-Pong" tournament. The Colonel winning the championship. A pleasing feature was the presentation to Captain C. Waring Hayward from his Battalion officers on the eve of his departure for British Columbia. Capt. Hayward was one of the original officers and founders of the Brigade in Newfoundland some 28 years ago. He has been in the Canadian West and has been very successful in his line of work as a surveyor on the International Boundary Survey & Canadian Government Surveys. Capt. Hayward expressed his great satisfaction to see the Brigade comfortably housed in such a fine Armory and out of debt, owning a big brass band and carrying on Ambulance and Educational work. The Brigade's great help in the war and the gallant lads of the "first 600", however, has justified the Brigade's existence all these years. We wish Capt. Hayward "an revoir" and a speedy return to Newfoundland headquarters. Lieut. Reeves and Sergt. Major Dewling, M.M. were on hand last night lecturing on Ambulance work. Lieut.

Emerson's "Brigade College" was also busy. The lads are learning to write rapidly and showing great improvement. Next week another officer will likely be added to the College staff to lecture and instruct the lads on commercial subjects, such as keeping of accounts, banking, cash keeping and ordinary office routine. The Lieut. Colonel Commanding announced with pleasure the receipt of a bequest of three hundred dollars from the Executor of the Estate of the late Hon. John Harvey. The late Hon. John Harvey since the inception of the Brigade was a generous contributor to the funds, and attendant at the Brigade exhibitions of drill and a man who helped in no small way in every good work in the community, and the loss of his passing cannot be replaced and his memory will live for years to come in the grateful hearts of those who are left to mourn his passing. The Old Comrades met last night and arranged a dance for April 14th in the gymnasium. The battalion band will supply the music. The armory had a visit last night from Mr. L. B. Moore, the representative of Messrs. Sherwin Williams Co. of Montreal. Mr. Moore is an old C.L.B. member and was glad to see his old regiment flourishing. The Rev. Capt. Clayton, C.F. of St. Thomas's Church was on duty and at the close of parade addressed the battalion and gave the lads some sound advice. Next week Lieut. Mott will be orderly officer and P. Co. duty company, with Rev. Captain Clayton as Chaplain. In future every Tuesday an officer will command the Battalion Parade. Last Tuesday night the Brigade had a hockey match at the Prince's Rink, Old Comrades challenging the N.C.O.'s mess and went down to defeat by their younger opponents. Evidently the "Old Men" are getting out of practice, as the N.C.O.'s won by 12 goals to 6. The Old Comrades team was: Gordon Philipps, R. Chafe, R. Voisey, A. Lawrence, E. Hennebury, and E. Chafe, whilst those playing for the N.C.O.'s were Lance Corp. Curns, C.S.M. Bendell, Corp. Feaver, Lance Corp. J. Piercy, Corp. Barlett, Lance Corp. E. Rees, whilst Mr. Harry Mews was referee. The Finance Committee met last night to discuss the past year's accounts and to plan a budget for this year's high cost of living.

Sudden Fortunes.

HAPPY MOMENTS IN THE LIVES OF MEN AND WOMEN WHO THOUGHT THEY WERE POOR.

A bargeman on the Medway, who is sixty-eight, and who has been a wielder of the long sweep all his life, has just come into an unexpected fortune of £70,000. He thinks of retiring now, and trying to live on the interest of his money, but so accustomed has he been to earning his bread by the sweat of his brow, that he feels a little anxious about the risk of throwing up his job. As he says: "You never can tell."

A young girl went to her work as a typist in an aeroplane company's office in New York the other morning, and found a letter awaiting her on her desk, from a firm of lawyers, telling that she is one of ten heirs to a fortune of 7,000,000 dollars. She had just taken her coat off to begin when she read her letter, and the manager and assistants were amazed to see a steady-going, sedate typist, doing a wild fandango down the room with one arm in and one arm out! When they heard the news, and the promise to give the whole staff a "regular bust-up," they joined her in the impromptu jig.

That Brother in Australia!

A shoemaker is advised as a rule to "stick to his last," but a certain plover of the cobbler's wax, who lives down Portsmouth way, has made up his mind to the fact that he has used his last for the last time. The trouble is that his brother died lately and left him something in the neighborhood of a hundred thousand pounds—not pence! It seems, he had, like the man in the story, come out to Australia, years and donkeys' years ago, and hardly ever been heard of till he died and left all his wealth to his brother.

There was almost a had accident a few weeks ago, when a house-painter nearly fell off his ladder with surprise on hearing that an uncle in New Zealand had left him £16,000. The fact is, that years ago on his sheep-run, where he had six or seven thousand head. They had some misunderstanding, and parted, and had never corresponded since. The painter thinks the old man thought better of the matter on his death-bed, and concluding his nephew was right, made reparation in the best way he could by leaving him a nice little pile. It was the house-painter's wife who brought the news. The letter had arrived by mid-day post, and, like an inquisitive little wife, she had opened it and then raced off to tell John the glad tidings.

His Luck Held Good.

A Talk With Lord Morley

THE VENERABLE JOURNALIST, WRITER AND STATESMAN NOW IN HIS 82nd YEAR.

Lord Morley, who is in his eighty-second year, has, for some time now, withdrawn himself from public affairs, and not even an echo of his views on the New World has found its way into print. His silence will remain unbroken. But all middle-aged students of politics and literature will read with special interest some recent thoughts and reflections of the veteran statesman as they are set down in the following striking interview which "The Evening News" is privileged to publish.

"It was with but slight hopes of seeing Lord Morley and having a word with him that I called at his quiet home in Wimbledon with a request that the veteran statesman and writer should give us his opinion on a question of high national importance.

"I was shown to the spacious library, bright and light this sunny morning. I reached it through rows of rows of books. A short passage-way, either side lined with bookshelves that began on the floor and rose to the ceiling, led down into this temple of Peace."

"'All I can say is,' was the comment. 'That it's a very bad form of investment.' And again he smiled rather sadly."

"With a deprecating wave of his hand, turning half round to the crowd of shelves all about him, he said in almost penitent tones, 'Look there!'"

A THOUGHT ON IRELAND.

"Lord Morley rose from his basket chair as I entered this book-lover's paradise.

"'Well,' he said, 'and what did you want to see me about?'"

"I came at once to the point.

"He smiled again, and speaking with a faint quaver in his voice said: 'I have nothing to say, I can give you no opinion on the matter.'"

"But Lord Morley was evidently not unwilling for a brief crack. He asked me to take a seat, and sat down himself.

"I recalled an eloquent sentence from one of his early speeches at Newcastle: 'We may yet see the dawn of high contentment rising from out the sunset of Middlethian.'"

"Not a very comforting thought this morning," was Lord Morley's reaction on his optimistic words of long ago. And there was a note of disillusionment in his voice.

"I had the delight of the heroworshipper in telling Lord Morley of the many times I had heard him on Ireland in his great days in the North. At the veteran statesman was not to be drawn on Ireland, at any rate.

"I blurted out, still in the role of heroworshipper, that I had in my hand a book which had been a book buyer, had it his own words among the rest.

"JOE" COWEN AND JOHN BRIGHT.

"I told Lord Morley how I had followed his career since the days when he entered Parliament as one of the members for Newcastle—the colleague and not comrade of his fellow Radical and bitter opponent, "Joe" Cowen. These oratory was a revelation to the ears of Commons of his day.

"There is no bitterness in Lord Morley's memories of "Joe." "I could never understand Cowen," he said. "I want to know, accepted Home Rule, of which he was a strenuous advocate at a time when Home Rule had not been taken up by the Liberal Party. I talked over questions with him in the House afterwards, but it was all no use. He was determined not to accept me as a fellow member."

Lord Morley was too generous to contest the truth. He must have known well enough that Cowen would not be a rival near his throne. "Cowen, I said, never forgave Gladstone for the remark he was said to have made after one of "Joe's" great speeches in support of Disraeli's East-India policy—that it was an eloquent speech, but had obviously been prepared for some other occasion. Lord Morley capped the story with a bright smile.

THREE FINEST WRITERS.

"The talk drifted to the subject of modern English writers. Sir Robert Nicoll, I said, in an article naming the first three, had not included Lord Morley. He put Mark Rutherford first. Lord Morley was surprised at the preference. He sees no such distinction in Mark Rutherford as entitled him to be ranked so high, though he readily admits his merits.

"But the question of the three best writers of the day had awakened Lord Morley's keen interest. When there was a pause in the talk a little while after he came back to it.

"Who were the other two," he asked, "that Nicoll classed with Rutherford?"

"Flattered to have aroused his curiosity, I regretted I could not quite satisfy it. 'I can't remember both of them,' I said, 'but one was Goldwin Smith.'"

"The very name roused him like a trumpet call. 'Ah,' he exclaimed, 'Goldwin Smith,' adding, with striking emphasis: 'He was a writer.' He glowed with a touch of the old fire at the recollection of how the Toronto professor used to let himself go.

"But will he live? Wasn't too much of his work merely polemical?"

"Lord Morley was inclined to agree. 'Yes,' he said, 'I'm afraid it was largely polemical, but what a master he was!'"

"It was an excusable transition to Lord Morley's own books. I respectfully suggested that possibly his Essay on Voltaire was his best work.

"MY BEST BOOK.

"Lord Morley confessed that he had not made any definite choice in this matter. 'But if you ask me,' he said, 'which of my books I consider the best I should say "Cromwell."'"

"Going back for a moment to the question of finest passages, Lord Morley said, 'George Meredith used to say that the two passages marking the high-water mark of English prose were a page or two in Charlotte Brontë's "Villette" and a chapter in Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Marble Faun.""

"From Contented Cows"

Colonel Fraser, R.E., writes of a case in India, which is even more extraordinary. During a bad storm at the beginning of the monsoon, the keeper of the lighthouse at Mangalore was killed by lightning in his room within the lighthouse. Yet the window was closed, and there was no sign at all how any flash or branch-flash had reached him. The building itself was quite unaffected.

Disobeying Every Rule.

There was no doubt about the damage being done by lightning, for at the same moment that the keeper was killed, a native outside the door was also killed.

No one can prophesy what lightning will or will not do. It is generally supposed that you are safer if standing at a moderate distance from some conductor, yet here is a case which quite upsets that idea.

On a warm afternoon in May some years ago, a sharp storm burst over Hampstead, and a flash was seen to strike in a garden at Windmill Hill.

Afterwards it was found that a good-sized hole had been cut by the lightning right through the thick brick wall of the garden. The odd thing is that the wall at this point was overgrown by a young beech-tree, while exactly opposite, and only a few feet away, was an iron lamp-post. The latter, by all rules, should have attracted the flash, yet it was untouched, and so was the tree.

Bad storms travel down the valley of the East Dart. During one of these a house at Dartmeet was struck, but without doing any great harm. But the same flash smashed a tree near by, turned up a flagstone in a cottage opposite, and this is the extraordinary part of it—struck into the ground some two hundred yards up-hill, and affected the spring that supplies the cottage. For hours afterwards this spring, which is piped down, ran red with iron oxide.

Make Your Fire Last.

When a steady fire is required—one that will burn all day without feeding or poking—lay in the grate a piece of paper, the thicker the better, and on it pile up small fresh coal more than half-way up the grate. The larger pieces should be towards the front bars, and the smaller ones at the back.

Then place a liberal supply of paper, shavings or sticks on the coal and scatter old cinders on the top, finishing off with a layer of good but small lumps of coal.

Light the paper at the top half of the fire, not the fitting piece at the bottom, and the flames will soon light the centre of the fire. The fire spreads downwards, and the smoke cannot help but come to the top and pass through the upper layers of burning coal. This method makes for perfect combustion, as the gassy, smoky fumes are thoroughly consumed.

A fire built up in this way will burn for at the very least six to eight hours without being mended. It not only saves coal, but does not make an untidy hearth, or require the services of the chimney-sweep. Sometimes the top part of the fire will cake, and it must then be stirred with the poker at the top; but if the bottom part is touched with the poker it will cause it to burn away very quickly.

BRANCH LINES OPERATING.

The Southern Shore line is now open as far as Renew's; a train left for that point at the regular hour this morning. The branch line to Bay de Verde is again in operation after being shut down since December, owing to the snow blockade.

established a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Cabbages.

Lightning on the Lose.

December last saw some queer freaks of weather. At Dalton-Furness a snow storm and thunder storm got mixed up, and during this storm lightning struck the winding-rope of a coal-pit, and ran along the bottom of the pit for two hundred yards.

This is not the first time that Lightning has performed similar extraordinary pranks. Some years ago lightning melted a gas-pipe in a cellar at a house at Wavertree, and set fire to the gas. Yet the house itself was uninjured, and the only possible way in which the electric charge could have reached the cellar was by way of the gas-main.

not care to preach to empty pews. And I'm afraid that with the temper of the nation as it is at this moment, anything I might have to say from a public platform would be so little in harmony with the popular opinion that I should find myself addressing empty benches.

"I made a last half-serious appeal for a word on the purport of my errand. Lord Morley was not to be tempted.

"I've had enough of glory," he said with an air of humorous resignation. "So we shook hands and parted."

Cabbages Dislike Being Boiled.

By means of the crescograph, a device invented by Sir Jagadis Chandra Bose, an Indian savant, a number of scientists in London were able recently to watch a plant growing, and study the beating of what in vegetable life corresponds to the heart of an animal.

An average plant grows at the slow rate of one-millionth part of an inch per second, yet the crescograph so magnifies this that, thrown upon a screen, the increase is easily seen.

The crescograph shows us that plant life does not differ greatly from animal life. Place the roots of a plant in boiling water, it struggles and dies and its struggles are the same as in the animal.

There is something rather alarming in this to the sensitive housewife. A cabbage dislikes being boiled as greatly as would your pet dog. The only difference is that the cabbage is dumb and cannot protest, but it squirms and wriggles and writhes. Possibly we may even yet see es-

"I give you that," he added, with a playful smile. "I may take it," I asked, as I prepared to leave, "that you have done with public speaking?"

More than one best?

When you ask your grocer to send you the best flour, he sends you—his best. When you know the best flour and order by the name, the choice is not left to the grocer. Many grocers handle

Royal Household Flour as their leader. They have found it the safest flour to recommend because its results are sure and its purity is unquestioned. If your grocer's best is not Royal Household, insist on his getting it for you. The benefit will be mutual.
