PICNIC PARTIES

Pleasure Exeursionists wishing to spend a delightful day's outing should visit the Crosskill Lake—only half an hour's drive from Bridgetown—situated on the top of the North Mountain, as the surroundings are all that could be desired. However, the inducement of the surroundings are all that could be desired. Beautiful bath, almong the inducement of the surroundings with the inducement of the surroundings with talless for the spread of refreshments; swings in abundance; shady groves, and a pavilino for those who wish to trip the "light fantastic;" pure springs of water; stoves for Fundy breeze to cool the atmosphere. The spot is the banner picnic ground of the county, and has already received a large patronage this season.

For further particulars address a post card to CAPT. T. W. TEMPLEMAN, the lessee, at WE HAVE BEEN VERY BUSY.

And before the poor woman was fair-ly aware of his intention, he had her out on the platform of the station with her bag, and

As luck would have it, the station agent was sick and his sixteen year-old boy was running things. The conductor had said, "That woman's got small-pox, get her a doctor or send her somewhere." It was a hard place for anyone and especially for a young fellow under such circumstances. Except the station and his father's house there were no other houses within two miles. No board to send the woman to; and on the other hand, his father sick at home, and his mother too worried to be troubled, much less exposed to an awful disease. And only the facthat it was a very cold night kept down a human desire to get out of the way himself. His mother could not get along without his help, and after he was exposed, how could

The hopes of his friends, however, were scarcely realized and Roseberry went down in the first election held after he became premier. He then quite naturally became leader of the opposition in the House of Lords and retained the leadership of the party at large. The Eastern question has, party at large. The Eastern question has owever, caused so great a difference of opinion between Roseberry and Mr. Gladstone that the former has resigned. At a public meeting held last week at Scotland's capital he gave his reasons for resignation, and his opinion on the Armenian question. Mr. Gladatone thinks England is bound by the Cyprus convention to interfere on behalf of Armenia, while Roseberry holds that this convention is no longer binding on England, as neither she nor Turkey have found it practicable to carry out some of its most important provisions, while the danger to such a course arises from the fact that there is or was up to a very recent date an agreement among nearly all the European powers to resist any interference by England in Eastern affairs. Roseberry is of the further opinion that was invoked by England would result only in the extermination of the Armenians themselves rather than their preservation, so that the success of such a war would be the defeat of its prime object.

"Such a war," said Roseberry, "would transcend twenty Flodden Fields and the ghastly phantom of the death angel, which legend says appeared over Edinburgh on the eve of the battle of Flodden, would appear to every hamlet, village and town of the kingdom to summon the flower of our youth and manhood to sacrifice their lives in a public of the county on the county on the county conducted on the same lines from the word of the battle of Flodden, would appear to every hamlet, village and town of the kingdom to summon the flower of our youth and manhood to sacrifice their lives in a public of the county of the co public meeting held last week at Scotland's

British lion. England and America have sent missionaries to labor among the Armenians and Turkey has butchered them and the people they went to labor amongst and it is not to be wondered at that there is a desire among the people of England to deal out justice to the miscreants. But, if England moves she will be charged with an attempt to gobble Turkey as other powers gobbled Poland. This will be a pretext for a declaration of war by the other European powers sgainst Britain, and as Roseberry remarks "you can see the eloquent commencement but nobody living can see the catastrophe or the end." In the meantime the Sultan is allowed to lord it over the Armenians and all Europe turn their backs on the sufferers and glare fiercely at each of the from the Boof of a House feelings of deepest regret by his search with feelings of deepest regret by his search with feelings of deepest regret by his search present freelings of deepest regret by his suppressonal friends and the community at large. The opinion is generally expressed that it would be a good thing if the day for this celebration was changed from that usually appointed. If, instead of Thursday, Monday was chosen it would give greater facilities for people to go abroad and provide two successive days' holiday, and for many two days and a half. The statute provides that "any day may be appointed and the government will be doing the public a great service if it name Monday as the next Thanksgiving Day."

At seems quite a large order for seven weeks, especially as these weeks are the time of all the year when the English homegrown summer fruit is at its zenith.

The apples seem to represent about a thousand barrels, yet during the period-we are considering (which is one must admit somewhat early in the apple season) the other ports put very nearly fifty-seven thousand barrels to their credit, of which by the by three hundred and one came from New York and twenty-two from Montreal.

It may interest our Bear River friends to learn that the above twenty-two barrels were accompanied by seven packages of cherries which arrived in Liverpool a fortnight after the cherry season; so that if they were good fruit in good order the returns would no doubt be satisfactory.

As to Hull, it will be interesting as the season progresses to see how far she remains contour with her early as the season progresses to see how far she remains season progresses to see how far she remains content with so small a supply of seaborne apples.

Despite enormous expenditures every year for new ships, Great Britain is steadily paying off its public debt. In 1817, at the close of the French war, the total debt was $4,-433,360,185, and since that date various wars have caused additional indebtedness amountains. have caused additional indebtedness amounting to $1,834,033,765, making a grand total of $6,267,393,950. At present, however, the debt is only $3,273,948,510, showing a reduction since 1817 of $2,993,445,440, or nearly $38,000,000 a year. Before the great increase of naval expenditure was decided upon, it was reckoned that this year would see the debt diminished by at least $25,000,000. Seeing that most of the other powers are increasing their debts, this may partly explain their intense jealousy and dislike of England.

To Kill Weeds.

Inquiries are constantly coming to us con cerning the best method of getting rid of noxious weeds, eepecially perenials. Begin by sowing the infested fields to eats in the spring, or wheat or rye in the fall. Soon after these small grains have been harvested plow under the stubble, thus checking the development of the first crop of weeds. When the second crop has started on the plowed ground, go over it with a disk harrow, corn cultivator, or any other farm implement that will kill the young weeds. Last season one-quarter acre of strawberries, producing 1000 quarts, placed ten years past one acre of berries average culture and yield has produced more real profit than ten average acres of ordinary farm crops. Intelligent farmers are noting these facts, and berry growing in a small way is becoming an important factor with many farmers.

How to Treat Manure.

The manure intended for the garden that contains the seeds of weeds should be piled up and allowed to ferment until the whole mass is thoroughly rotted. By this means the seeds in it will be killed. But in order to rot manure to the best advantage it should be forked over occasionally when well warmed up by fermentation, and the whole turned over, with the outside of the pile thrown into the centre. If dry, it should be watered enough to enable fermentation to continue, and to prevent firefanging. It is seldom advisable to use fresh manure in the garder and manure should only be applied in this condition when free from weeds and then only for some late maturing crops, in which case there will be time for it to rot before the crops need it. All early crops need well-rotted manure, and require it in much larger quantities than do the late maturing

-Farmer Slack's conscience sometim troubles him about the condition of his home premises, and at such time he always makes a brave effort to slick up a little. These spasms of reform appear about once in six months and continue for several hours; says Massachusetts Ploughman. This is the explanation of Slack's unusual actions one cloudy day last week. The first thing he did was to put another prop against the easterly side of the barn, which is bulging worse than ever, since the new hay was put in. Then he fixed a gate post by rolling an old plough against it. Next he mended one of the barn doors, which had been split off at the bottom, by propping it with a wide slab. The rest of the forenoon was spent in nailing old laths and strips of board on the garden fence in hopes of keeping out some of the chickens. When the last available piece of wood was nailed on there was still quite a gap, but Slack fixed it by rolling an old cart wheel against it. After dinner Slack felt so well satisfied with himself, that he decided to spend the afternoon fishing.
