ARTHUR CULLIGAN M.L.A. WINS

IN LIBEL SUIT AGAINST GRAPHIC

Jury Find Defendant Company Guilty of Publishing Libelous Statements and Assess the Damages to Mr. Culligan at $500.00

Mr. Culligan, M. P. of Restigouche County instituted a suit against the Graphic Limited, a newspaper published in Campbellton, for having put a letter in its columns, in which Mr. Culligan claimed that he was libelled. The letter in question was a letter purporting to be written by a "Ratepayer" from Durham who stated certain alleged facts which Mr. Culligan claimed did him damage.

The trial was held at the Circuit Court at Dalhousie on Tuesday the 29th inst. and occupied the entire day running into the second day—Wednesday.

Mr. Hugh A. Carr, Barrister of Campbellton was Attorney for the Prosecution and Honourable Attorney General Baxter was Counsel. Mr. A. T. LeBlanc, Barrister of Campbellton conducted the defence. Mr. M. A. Kelly, Barrister of Campbellton was present in the interest of Mr. Anslow, proprietor of the Graphic. Mr. Justice Barry was the presiding Judge and a Jury was empanelled. A jury of seven was selected with some difficulty, there being the full number of challenges made. The jury were as follows:—Ebenzer Ferguson, Robert L. Duncan, Wm. McKinnon, Joseph I. Arsenau, Russell McWhinney, Harry McKenzie and H. Diethe.

Mr. Carr made the opening address to the Jury in which he stated the facts of the publication of the letter, signed "Ratepayer", which letter, as follows, he read:

To Editor of Graphic, Campbellton, Dear Sir:

I wish to inform the good honest ratepayers of the Parish of Durham who are not aware of the way our money is being spent on roads and bridges in the parish. We will refer first to a bridge called the McGregor bridge, on the road leading into the Beckettville settlement, where a great amount of money is being spent this season. Any person who will not accept orders on the Culligans, where they are supposed to take goods out of their store in payment, are not allowed work on the job. A short time ago some of the men working on the job wanted some advance, and applied to the boss for money or an order, and who agreed to give them orders on the Culligans, but the men refused to accept any order on the Culligan store, but said they would take orders on the Miss Ulligan's store or on Melanson's store. However, one man in particular was put off the job just as soon as Arthur Culligan, M. L. A., heard of it. He went to see this particular man and told him that if he would accept orders on their store he could go back to work and work as long as he liked.

Then gentlemen, what about the great amount of money that is being spent giving private jobs, building private roads into back fields and back farms in certain parts of the parish, and a hundred and one such like ways is our money being spent for party purposes.

(Signed) RATEPAYER.

Then he enlarged upon the crime of assailing public men in such a way, and the great damage it was to men in public life to be thus assailed—was also commented upon. He then spoke of the tendency of the times being to assail men with too harsh a criticism—not only Mr. Culligan, but others and he claimed that Mr. Culligan was damaged by such an utterance as this letter.

After proving the service of the writ upon Mr. Anslow of the Graphic, Mr. Anslow, manager of the Graphic, was put on the stand. The evidence sought by the prosecution from Mr. Anslow was largely to obtain the name of the person who wrote the article complained of, who called himself "ratepayer." This demand was objected to by Mr. LeBlanc, Counsel for the Defence, most successfully for a considerable length of time, there being a great amount of discussion as to the right of the Attorney General to demand an answer to this question. Mr. LeBlanc contended that the Attorney General had no right to insist upon this name being divulged, and the Attorney General insisted it should be answered. After a lengthy argument, (there being no written authority in Court upon this question) in answer to the Attorney General's demand for the disclosure of the name, the Judge decided that Mr. Anslow should answer. Mr. Anslow then gave evidence that no particular person had been named to him as the author, but that Mr. John Kerr of Durham had conferred with him respecting the matter of the publication of this letter. Court soon after took recess.

After recess, and at the opening of the afternoon session of the Court, Mr. Justice Barry declared that it was a mistake to demand of Mr. Anslow the divulgence of the name, and that he was surprised that Counsel should not have known that the name should not have been divulged, and stated that he was sorry that it had been so demanded. He said that it really did not concern the decision in the case.

Mr. Arthur Culligan was then put on the stand, whose evidence in the main was that he had never at any time promised work to persons on any public job or work, with the understanding that in order to secure such they would be required to trade at his Company's store. He also stated that he had never ordered that any man should be put off the job, because that he bought his goods elsewhere than at Culligan's store. On cross-examination, he stated that public money had been expended on the McGregor bridge—about a thousand dollars—but Mr. Culligan was unable to tell how big the bridge was, or whether it had a railing or not; but he was positive that he never required a man to deal at the Culligan store in order to get a job on the work. After this evidence, prosecution closed their case.

At this stage, Mr. LeBlanc moved that the case be withdrawn from the Jury for the alignment he given in and Mr. Anslow, who was called in favour of the defendant, on several grounds, chief of which were that the words complained of were not actionable per se; also that the words complained of are not actionable and that no circumstances had been proven making them actionable. This the learned Judge refused and ordered the case to proceed.

The first evidence called by the Defendant was Mr. Adelard Bertin of Durham neighborhood, whose evidence mainly was that Mr. Culligan had promised him a job on the road—the railroad—if he would trade at the store, but he was unable to state the date of this conversation. He also said that Mr. Culligan had spoken to him a second time later when he was seeking a job on the road about a "little bill" that the witness owed at Culligan's store, in which conversation Mr. Culligan said "You will now be able to pay that little bill since you are working on the road." Mr. Bertin seemed laboring in the giving of his evidence. He, as did all other witnesses for the defence, stating that after service had been made upon him of a subpoena for attendance at trial, he had been interviewed by Mr. Culligan personally who spoke of their expected attendance at Court and of their being subpoenaed for attendance.

Mr. Lapointe was the next witness, who amongst other things in his evidence, stated that after he had been served with subpoena by the Defence, he had been waited upon by Mr. Culligan on the same afternoon of the service of the subpoena. He had heard Mr. Culligan state particularly that he could trade wherever he (the witness) liked, or in words to that effect. Mrs. Guitier, another witness for the Defence, knew that her husband had lost his job on the road, but stated that it was because the job was wanted for another man in order to give others a chance. She denied that Mr. Culligan required that they (the Guitiers) should deal at the Culligan store. When asked by Mr. LeBlanc as to how she had been brought to Court, the witness seemed determined not to tell and it was only with great pressing that she did tell, and stated that she had been driven in an automobile by Mr. Devereaux. Her husband, Mr. Guitier's evidence was of the same nature as that of his wife. He had not been put off the work because of his not trading at Culligan's store, but he said he had been let off the work. All these witnesses were handled very gently in the cross-examination by Mr. Baxter. Mr. Ned Legacy had been sought for by subpoena in the Defence, but when the Defence ascertained that Mr. Legacy had been subpoenaed by the Plaintiff, he was not subpoenaed by the defence. Mr. Legacy was later called by the Defence, but was not asked a single question. The Defendant closed their side of the case upon the hearing of Mrs. Guitier's evidence.

John McGregor was then called by Mr. Baxter in rebuttal of any points made by the Defence, whose evidence corroborated that of Mr. Culligan. Mr. McGregor spent a few uneasy moments under cross-examination by Mr. LeBlanc, but nothing of importance was given out in answer to either Mr. Baxter or Mr. LeBlanc. With this the case was closed.

Mr. LeBlanc addressed the jury at considerable length, reviewing all the case and with its management in Court; followed by Mr. Attorney General Baxter who spoke lengthily upon the evidence and took occasion to refer to the too prevalent criticism of

NAME A VICTIM

No Man in County Big Enough For Undertaking, So Quebec Man Chosen

For the second time the unfortunate Tories of Bonaventure County have had a Quebec candidate imposed upon them in the person of Mr. Philip Furois. This man was chosen last spring to run against Mr. F. J. Bugeaud, the Liberal M. L. A., but courage failed him at the last moment and he never turned up at all on Nomination Day and Mr. Bugeaud was returned by acclamation. This caused very general dissatisfaction among the Tories of the County who had thus been betrayed and now the same man is again imposed upon them in spite of the majority. On Tuesday, August 22nd a Tory Convention was called at short notice to be held in the Town Hall at Maria. The voters of each poll were invited to send four delegates. As there are thirty-six polls in the County, there should have been one hundred and forty-four delegates; only eighty-seven put in an appearance. It has been expected that Hon. Mr. Chase Casgrain, Postmaster General would be present, but he also failed to turn up.

When the vote was taken it was found that Furois had forty-one votes, John Daigneau, Postmaster, Inspector of Weights and Measures and Mayor of St. Omer had twenty-three votes and Mr. Alex. Pratt, lumber merchant and prominent contractor also had twenty-three, making forty-six in all against Furois 41.

Furois, who was then in a minority in the total vote, was thereupon declared chosen to the great discontent of those who had voted against him.

Hon. Charles Marcell, who has represented the County for sixteen years and whose majorities have always increased in the four general elections through which he passed, is being congratulated upon the weak man which has been brought out against him.

The Tories of this County are somewhat ahead of time in selecting their candidate, as it is not by any means sure that there will be an election this year.

Hon. Mr. Marcell, who spent the summer at Carleton at his country residence with his family, has returned to Montreal. He will not tour the county until the writs are issued.

He is again chosen as the Liberal standard bearer in the constituency. Bonaventure has not elected a Tory in twenty-seven years.

public men, referring very scathingly to the "Graphic" for so doing. Mr. LeBlanc interjected a remark about the "Standard" which seemingly touched Mr. Attorney General Baxter, who in reply spoke very forcibly about the St. John Telegraph and Times and referred to some libellous writer who had been horsewhipped in the streets of St. John for libelling innocent people, and he seemed to class the Graphic and its editor and manager in some class.

Court adjourned to resume the following day—Wednesday morning. At this time Mr. Justice Barry addressed the Jury speaking of the nature of a libel and of what constituted a libel and of its defamatory character, and of this particular article. After discussing very learnedly upon the term libel and endeavouring to show its nature, he told the jury that he would have to leave it to them to decide whether this article was a libel upon the plaintiff or not; they had to decide whether the article was libellous or not. He asked the Jury to separate themselves from any political leanings that they might have and very earnestly stated that, as honourable men, they must not bring their political tendencies (if such they had) into the judgment of this case; and he left the matter with them with the understanding that if they found that the defendant was guilty of having libelled Mr. Culligan, that it would be their right to bring in a judgment of "Guilty", the question of damages could be settled later and that they were not necessarily required to give large damages, but in proportion to the amount of damage that they conceived that Mr. Culligan had sustained.

The Jury were out about an hour and returned the verdict of "guilty" on the part of the defendant, assessing the damages at Five Hundred dollars ($500.00).

Previous to the retiring of the Jury, Mr. LeBlanc asked permission of the Judge to submit certain questions to the Jury, but was refused. The Judge, however, allowed the questions to go on the trial record by placing them in the hands of the Court stenographer, for insertion in the records.

GERMANS HELD RED CROSS NURSES AS PRISONERS AND SERVED THEM JAIL FOOD ONLY

British Nursing Sisters Tell of Incredible Treatment Given Them by Huns after Teutons' Success in Serbia.—Seventeen Nurses Compelled to Occupy Room Seventeen by Sixteen Feet in Size

There recently arrived in Berlin a band of 60 or more Red Cross nurses, who had gone out to Serbia from Scotland last September to fight typhus. They were taken prisoners by the German authorities at the head of the Austrian forces which invaded Serbia, kept prisoners for three months in Hungary, and were on their way home. Dr. Alice Hutchison, the tiny medical woman in charge of the expedition, at the head of her band of nurses, reached Salonica some time in September, 1915, and was immediately moved on to Nisch, where they all went to work. Their orderlies there, it seems, were Echeques, great, willing good-natured fellows, who grew greatly attached to them. Three weeks of nursing the wounded—for the typhus epidemic was practically over when they arrived—and then the place was taken by the Austrians. Gloomy days, these, with the hospital in German hands, and taciturn German surgeons silently watching them as they continued to take care of their wounded, though expecting every day to be told to pack up and start for the frontier.

Given Prison Fare
It seemed strange as time went on that they were not returned to the Allies, but were taken away from their duties, put on prison fare, and restricted as to their movements. At last there was no doubt about it—they were prisoners. This seems an unthinkable state of affairs. Red Cross sisters as prisoners of war. They were finally told to get themselves ready to go. A cart took their luggage, the big pieces, the smaller pieces they carried in their hands.

"We trekked eight miles," said one of the nurses in the big reception room of the Bernerhof, where the British Legation was entertaining them. "And don't you think it awful to make us walk and carry our own bags?"

"And they hooted us, too. They said, 'Good-bye; we'll see you again in London.' Fancy that now!"

The jeer is not hard to fancy. The suggested meeting rather more so! "And we had to march through the town of Nisch under military escort, with Germans yelling at us on all sides," said another nurse. "What do you think they shouted to us from the front—and they took a big megaphone to be sure we'd hear it?"

"What?"

"There will be no room in Heaven for you!" and we yelled back. "Well, if you're going to be there we'll be willing to go somewhere else!"

At one time they were told they would be interned until the end of the war.

"That did discourage us!" confessed one nurse, an Irish girl. "But it was only a part of the pack of lies they told us. Oh, the Germans! I never in my life imagined anything as devilish as they are!"

"O Paddy! O Paddy!" came laughing protests from all sides. The nurses' spirits were high, and climbing higher. Their troubles were behind them.

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES"—The Wonderful Fruit Medicine—will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the kidneys and skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes indigestion, loss of appetite and disturbed stomach. It may produce headaches and sleeplessness. It may irritate the kidneys and bring on pain in the back, rheumatism, gout, and rheumatic pains. It is the chief cause of eczema—and keeps the whole system unclean by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure auto-intoxication or self-poisoning—as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. and were they not on their way home? "Didn't a German officer give you a tea-cake, and didn't you eat it?"

"True for so," assented Paddy, and passed on, and someone told the story:

One Decent German

When they had arrived at a little unpromising place in Hungary, they were quartered in rooms 17 by 16 feet in size, 17 women to the room. They had straw pallets, which they rolled up in the daytime and spread out at night. Their water they had to draw from the well outside, and one day, as "Paddy" and her chum were fighting with the well-rope, two German officers passed by. One of them turned and came back, saying, in perfect English:

"Aren't you English Red Cross nurses?"

"Yes," said Paddy.

"Well, what on earth are you doing here?" he pursued.

"We are your prisoners," she answered.

"Prisoners? Nonsense. Red Cross nurses can't be prisoners," he insisted.

"So I suppose," she answered, drily. "Nevertheless, here we are!"

"Are you well treated?" he asked.

"No," she answered, frankly. "They give us prisoners' fare, and it is very bad."

The officer seemed very much disturbed about it, and, walking on, joined his companion. The well-rope was particularly bulky that day, and before the nurses got their water the officer was back with a big paper parcel, which he held out saying: "Here's a tea-cake; I don't like to think you're hungry."

"All Germans Not Alike"

Paddy's fingers "trimbled," she confessed it, for she was hungry, but she said:

"No, I thank you," and started off with the water.

"Nurse, nurse," he begged, "take the cake."

"I won't take anything from a German," she answered.

The officer was plainly distressed. "Nurse," he protested, "don't be like that. Here, take the cake, and remember that—well, all Germans are not alike!"

Whereupon Paddy's heart melted, and taking the cake, they separated.

INTERNED HUNS BREAK PLEDGED WORD OF HONOR

Germans on Parole in United States Disregard Honor and Steal Away

Nine of the 14 German officers and sailors who escaped from interned warships in American jurisdiction remain unaccounted for. Two have been caught or returned to those vessels, two managed to reach Germany, and one is a prisoner detained at Edinburgh Castle in Scotland, according to information disclosed in diplomatic papers issued as part of the American white book on the European war.

Two parole violators who managed to find their way back to Germany are Dr. Krueger-Kroneck, the staff surgeon of the German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich, and Otto Brauer the second officer in command of the Prinz Eitel. Dr. Kroneck is the man who supplied the money for the purchase of the small yacht Eclipse by six officers of the Kron Prinz Wilhelm, a German auxiliary cruiser interned at Norfolk. These six officers made their escape in this yacht on October 10, 1915 and though nearly a year has elapsed no word of their whereabouts has reached Washington.

Dr. Krueger-Kroneck and Lieutenant Koch were allowed on September 29, 1915, to leave the cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich on a visit to Niagara Falls and New York City. They never returned. The German government admits that Dr. Krueger-Kroneck has returned to Germany, asserting that he would be instructed to return to the interned German ship from which he escaped at Norfolk, "as soon as the American government had obtained safe conduct for him from the hostile government."

British Caught One

The correspondence also shows that Lieut. Henry Koch was taken prisoner by the British and lodged in Edinburgh Castle. Lieut. Koch left New York in the Danish steamer Tyskland with the expectations of reaching Germany via Denmark. His capture took place a month after the day on which he had given his promise to return to the interned steamship at Norfolk.

The six officers who escaped in the yacht Eclipse on October 10, 1915, have not been found. They were Heinrich Hoffman, Heinrich Reude Busch, Wilhelm Forstner, Erich Beiermann, Julius Lustfeld and Walter Fisher, all of the German cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm. Dr. Nolte had leave of absence to go from the Prinz Eitel Friedrich to Newport News and return to the vessel. This he never did. On June 14, 1915, Herman Dieke, engineer officer of the Locksun, a German steamer interned at Honolulu, left his ship in violation of his parole and never returned.

In a note dated December 16, 1915, from Secretary Lansing to the German ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, calling his attention to the various escapes of German officers and men from their interned German warships, the statement was made that "in view of the apparent disregard of the members of the complements of the interned vessels at Norfolk for their word of honor while on parole, the Navy Department, on October 14, 1915, was under the necessity of ordering that no officers or men be allowed to leave the ships until the absent officers and seamen had returned."

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION

Toronto

Aug. 26th to Sept. 11th.

A great, natural park 264 acres in extent, a veritable garden spot with wide paved streets and walks, vistas of velvety green sward enriched with a profusion of shrubs, trees and flowers blended into harmonious effects. Stately permanent buildings, graceful and rich in architectural detail, valued in the aggregate at $2,500,000. Beautiful grounds valued at a similar sum, models of landscape artistry, sloping picturesquely from the blue, scintillating waters of Lake Ontario along which they stretch for 1½ miles. This is the magnificent setting that adds so tremendously to the charm of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, the greatest short-time exhibition in the world. QUALITY STANDARD FOR 30 YEARS

From a small beginning thirty years ago, but with a fixed purpose—and that was that the product of the "Kent" mills should be the finest flour that the finest of Canadian wheat could produce—the output of Kent Flour has increased from a few barrels a day by the old millstone process to an output of over two hundred thousand barrels a year by the most improved machinery known to millers to-day.

In a generation the demand for Kent Flour has increased from a most limited local sale to a trade that includes all Canada; from the time when all customers could be supplied in a short haul by the local mill delivery to a sale in 1916 that means train loads east, west, north.

"Quality" has been the keynote to a success and reliability and uniformity that have made Kent Flour a household word.

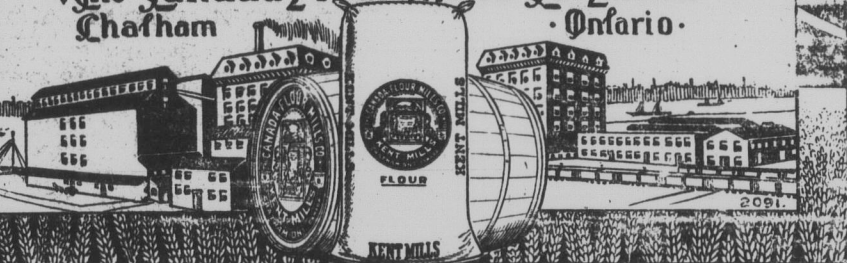

Kent Flour has always been ground from the finest blends of Canadian wheat—and always will be—and that is why it produces bread, cakes and pastry, that are a delight to the housewife.

A Story Comes From Toronto in Connection with Enlisting of the Troops

The following is an absolutely true enlistment story, given with a slight change of names:—

Mrs. Campbell's son had enlisted for the war, much to his mother's dismay, but her troubles were intensified a short time afterwards by her husband also joining the Colours.

Rushing breathlessly into a neighbor's house the other day, she exclaimed:—

"Do ye ken what's enlisted noo, Mrs. Kyle?"

"No, your gudeman, I hope, Mrs. Campbell," replied the neighbor, "for he's past the military age lang syne."

"Ye've guessed right, Mrs. Kyle; the daft loon joined the — battalion this mornin', and that's as sure as death."

"Guidsake, Mrs. Campbell! And hoo did your man come to make sic a full o' himsel', a man past fifty years of age?"

"Weel, you see, Mrs. Kyle, this mornin' when he was waitin' for his breakfast he picked up a copy of the mornin' paper, and there he sat reading the news of the war. Andrew never said anything to me, but went out at his usual time, and as I thought, he was gaen to his work, but loosh! about ten o'clock in he comes wi' a bundle under his arm the size o' the family washin'."

"What have ye there, Andrew?" says I. "And what's wrang that brings ye hame at this 'oor?"

"What's wrang?" says he. "Every-thing's wrang. Have ye no' read the mornin' paper, wumman? 'Did ye no' see that the Germans had dropped bombs on Scotland from their Zeppelins? I tell ye, Maggie,' says he, 'they can bombard England as much as they like, but I'll no' stan' for their layin' a han' on Scotland, so I've enlisted, and this is my uniform.'"

BRITAIN HAS FAST

AEROPLANE WHICH LEADS THE WORK

New Sopwith Exceeds Everything in Speed Except a Projectile

A new type of aeroplane now being used by the British at the front, has already accounted for twenty-seven Fokkers, according to a statement made by Baron Montagu, C. G. Grey, editor of The Aeroplane, gives the following description of this new aerial "destroyer."

"The small fighting machines are distinctly a British product, first being introduced by the Sopwith firm a year or so before the war, and from that first experiment they have been developed and fitted with more and more powerful engines until today the British scout plane is the fastest thing in the world, except a projectile from a gun. The German fokker monoplane is a fast destroyer, but its success is limited to some extent."

Mr. Gray concludes as follows: "The improvement in the British aeroplanes may eventually have a considerable effect on the air defenses of this country, for the improvement in aeroplanes must necessarily be more rapid than the improvement in airships, and, consequently, it is quite probable that now aeroplanes may be produced which will make it more impossible for airships to get away from this country, if they ever reach it. Speed and power of aeroplanes have been so greatly increased that they can now be considered able to outclimb airships."

"With these improvements in the organization of the defense stations, it is not unlikely that even the most improved German airships may find it too expensive to continue to annoy the British Isles."

PLACING THE BRIDGE SPAN

Great Engineering Feat to Be Accomplished

During the second week in September a tremendous and spectacular engineering feat will be performed on the St. Lawrence. The centre span of the Quebec bridge, 600 feet long, 100 feet wide and 65,000 tons in weight, will be floated to its place between the two big cantilevers 160 feet above the water and gently sunk into its place, thus connecting up the two sides of the river and making a through route from Prince Rupert to Montreal. The operation will be performed between the 14th and 16th of September, at a time when tidal conditions are favorable to the big hydraulic feat.

There are engineers living to-day who say it cannot be done, but those in charge of the work claim that every inch of the great span has been tested, and that it will rise along the guides of the cantilevers without a hitch, providing tide conditions are favorable. If they are not favorable the operation will be postponed until they are.

The two great cantilevers, which are the longest in the world, now reach out towards each other from either side of the river. It only requires the centre span to join them. The span is being completed at Silery, three miles down the river, and will be brought down on huge pontoons, from which it will be hydraulically jacked to its place 160 feet above the water.

The Quebec bridge was commenced about 1905. In 1907 the Dominion was shocked by the news that one of the great cantilevers had collapsed, hurling to death 90 employees and causing a damage estimated at several millions. There will be a gathering of public men present when the connection is made.

THINKS PROHIBITION WILL IMPROVE HOTELS

Mr. Newton Wylie Discusses Plans to Provide Accommodation

Mr. Newton Wylie, Secretary of the Committee of One Hundred, predicts that after the referendum is taken in Ontario the hotels in the Province will be in a better position than to-day. He adds that "from the standpoint of temperance this should be one of the great bulwarks. We are getting a good deal of co-operation from hotel-keepers who are going to endeavor to meet their new conditions." Mr. Wylie stated that in some quarters the suggestion was being well received that they build their own hotels to meet the travelling public, as had been done in about twenty places under local option.

"Bang" went the rifles at the manoeuvres. "Oo-oo!" screamed the pretty girl—a nice, decorous, surprised little scream. She stepped backward into the arms of a young man.

"Oh!" said she, blushing. "I was frightened by the rifles. I beg your pardon."

"Not at all," said the young man. "Let's go over and watch the artillery."

DOES THIS? SCREAM YOU?

Are you one of the many who are suffering with eczema, obstinate sores, ulcers or any other skin trouble? If so, lose no time in trying Zam-Buk, and you will be amazed at its curative powers.

The healing power of any ointment is in proportion to its medicinal ingredients. Ordinary ointments being composed chiefly of animal fats, with only a small percentage of medicinal ingredients, have not sufficient healing power to overcome a bad case of skin trouble. Zam-Buk, on the contrary, is purely herbal, and is all medicine, which explains its superiority over other ointments, and its many marvellous cures.

Besides being best for eczema, ulcers, and skin diseases of all kinds, it is equally good for blood-poisoning, piles, burns, cuts, heat rashes, sore and blistered feet, insect bites and sunburn. The box contains all directions, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send 1c. stamp for postage on free trial box.

TO CIVILIZE MOROS

ON CURATIVE PLAN

Medical Relief Ship to Be Sent on Five Years' Mission to the Islands

A plan to civilize the still wild Moros of the Zulu archipelago by giving them medical relief from the many diseases rampant in their native islands was announced recently by the Rockefeller Foundation. Co-operating with the International Health Board of the Rockefeller Foundation, the Philippine government will send a hospital ship to the island group inhabited by the Moros and kindred tribes. The ship is now being equipped and will be maintained for a period of five years under the joint supervision of the government and the Foundation.

The scope of the plan are given in the announcement made by the Foundation:

For more than two hundred years the Moros, who were the famous Malay pirates that devastated the northern Philippine islands, have resisted all attempts by Spain and the United States to pacify them by military force. Since their entrance into history they have been a people apart. On the large number of small islands comprising the southern group of the Philippines, about 200,000 of the tribe still lead a semi-nomadic life. They are of the Mohammedan faith. Investigation has shown the Moros to be suffering from skin disease of severe form, malaria, hookworm disease, dysentery and other venereal infections. The Ingots and other head hunters of northern Luzon were civilized largely by the men who brought them medical relief, and it was decided to reach the Moros in the same way.

Dr. Simon Hartington, chemical and food expert, said in a lecture in Chicago:

"Hanging or ripening is good for certain food. Pheasant is dry and tough without a little hanging. Pork is the better for being hung. Even beef must hang a little."

"But not too much. I don't believe in any such overhanging as the Gorgonzola cheese had."

A grocer found that two of his Gorgonzola cheeses were ripe to rottenness, so he put them outside the shop one night in the hope that somebody would steal them.

"In the morning one was gone, and the grocer was glad. That night he put the other out again. Then the next morning his wife heard him cursing and swearing as he opened the shop."

"What's the matter, Jim?" she asked. "Isn't it gone?"

"Not only it ain't gone, but the other one has walked back."

THE ACTION FOR LIBEL

The libel case Culligan vs. the Graphic has aroused considerable interest throughout the country.

Witnesses for the defendant company, The Graphic Limited, proved very unsatisfactory. As is the case in small country districts, they talked freely among themselves and made statements with respect to the Plaintiff, Mr. Arthur Culligan, M.L.A., in the conduct of certain works on the Beckettville road that they would not confirm under oath.

A number of the principal witnesses which were subpoenaed for the Plaintiff, and which would have thrown some light on the subject, did not put in an appearance and further witnesses for the defendant had left the country.

Defendant witnesses even under oath, proved very reluctant to state what they knew of the matter, and it was only after painful examination that they were induced to speak, although previous they were very positive in their statements.

When upon the witness stand, Mr. Arthur Culligan, M.L.A., made the statement that never at any time did he make it a condition that men should deal at his store in return for a government job, he no doubt thought he had settled the matter. But Adelaide Bertin under oath, stated that one spring he interviewed Mr. Arthur Culligan for a job on the section and Mr. Culligan asked him if he would deal at their company's store if he got the job. When assured that he would so deal, he got the job and dealt at the store for a time. The witness proved a most reluctant one and stated that as he was under oath he had to tell the truth.

The local government party heeler of Durham were in attendance in force from the guardian of public morals of Durham to the road workers, and after a somewhat rowdy demonstration at a remark by one of the defendant's witnesses, the judge called them to order, and stated if such demonstration were repeated, he would clear the courtroom. They were brought promptly to order and much to their discomfort found that it was not an opposition political meeting they were attending.

We want our readers to understand that this suit for libel was brought against the Graphic Limited at the instigation of Mr. Arthur Culligan, M.L.A., who objected to statements contained in a certain letter published August 26th, 1915, in our columns and signed "Ratepayer".

When the letter was published, the writer assured the Graphic that the statements contained therein were true and we know that the matter was common talk in the parish, even Mr. Culligan's close family connections vouching for the truth of the assertions. The letter was published in good faith and in the interest of the public welfare.

This letter was published last August, and the matter became public property at once. Durham neighborhood is not very extensive, and as soon as Mr. Culligan started out in the matter of prosecution, he also started out to win back again disgruntled followers. It was an easy matter for him to know who the witnesses would in all probability be and he set himself to the task of soothing their injured feelings, which he evidently succeeded in doing. Then the trial was brought on. It might have been brought on last March, but plainly friendship was not fully restored amongst his supporters at that time.

An approaching election places this class of people on the alert and no doubt Mr. Culligan's friendly visit of Monday afternoon amongst his constituents was only one of several. Peace and harmony being brought about among the dissatisfied, then the expected witnesses are cheered upon their way to the trial, they having been induced to forget their former irritation. Doubtless Mr. Culligan rejoices over a satisfied constituency and time alone will tell just how securely those enthusiastic supporters are secured.

The case will undoubtedly be appealed to a higher court.

OTHER DAMAGES

The Graphic has been found guilty at a trial in the Supreme Court of having libelled Mr. Arthur Culligan. Elsewhere in our column will be found a report of the trial held at Dalhousie on August 29th and 30th. The Attorney General of the Province of New Brunswick found time to come to Campbellton, a town in the remotest corners of the Province to be present. The Manager of the Graphic, for publishing a letter written by a correspondent under the name of "Ratepayer" in which letter the writer wished in his homely way to express his estimation of the management of Public Affairs in his neighborhood, was taken to court. The writer evidently failed to dress his ideas in the graceful manner of the Standard or of such papers, but who expressed not a title of the bitterness of feeling that such papers express. Nevertheless the Attorney General advises his client and supporter Mr. Culligan, that he has been libelled and deserves damages, and under the able management of the case by the Attorney General succeeds in securing a verdict from a jury of seven impartial—of course impartial—jurymen of "guilty" and this verdict carries with it a penalty of $500.

The words five hundred dollars bring to his mind a sound heard in the political atmosphere. Can it be possible that this sum was arrived at because of a haunting echo of some other claim heard in the air. If Mr. Culligan has been damaged to the extent of $500, because of the publishing of this obscure letter written by a man in the county who feebly wishes to voice his own protest and of that of his neighbors of conditions that he feels is around him, what sum will answer the damages that Mr. Culligan is doing to himself and to his cause by the prosecution of this suit.

THAT PUBLIC CHARITY

Honourable Attorney General Baxter when addressing the Jury at the Culligan-Graphic trial, in speaking of the enormity of the offence committed by an obscure "Ratepayer" in the Parish of Durham in libelling Mr. Culligan by referring to what the ratepayer understood to be his actions in the neighborhood, evidently desired to impress the jury with the certainty that they would return a verdict in favour of the Plaintiff.

A minor chord, however, seemed to be struck in his memory at the same time, and presumably he thought of the large sum of money that would accrue as damages because of such finding; and then, what would Mr. Culligan do with this award of damages? and in hastily thinking out what ought to be done with money received in this way, he referred in a suggestive manner that perhaps Mr. Culligan would donate it to some charity as there were many such.

The Graphic would respectfully suggest that in disposition of this money a new charity might be instituted—as perhaps the old ones are pretty well looked after—and in looking round for such a worthy object, the thought arises, Would it not be well to institute a home for retired political colonists?

SLIGHT MISTAKES

In reporting the verdict of the Jury in the Culligan vs. Graphic libel action, the foreman stated that the jury returned a verdict of "guilty" and awarded the "Defendant" five hundred dollars damages. It was not until the Attorney General had asked him if he meant damages for Mr. Culligan and he replied yes that the court knew what the jury's verdict was.

Another member of the jury in discussing the case after the verdict was rendered stated that they arrived at the amount of damages as follows: "Well Culligan asked for $5000 damages, so we cut it down pretty well. Possibly if Mr. Culligan had asked $50,000 damages, he would have been awarded $5000 by the jury."

John Alden Smith, an aspirant for the position of Chairman of the Committee of naval affairs in the United States, became famous at the matter of the "Titanic" investigation by his interest in the question as to "what icebergs were made of." It is to be hoped that he got his answer more easily and with a greater degree of certainty than did Mr. Attorney General Baxter at the Culligan-Graphic trial who sought with the most determined pertinacity to require for a victim, the name of the person who wrote the letter published in the Graphic and signed "Ratepayer." Like many other selfishly determined people, the answer seemed to fail to give either satisfaction or certainty.

PROMPTLY REPORTED

A bright young lady in Ward I saw a man with a knife cutting the shade trees in that Ward. She spoke to the man about it, but as she did not desire, she telephoned the police. Policeman Perry immediately responded and easily found the offender, which proved to be Chairman Patterson of the Public Properties and Streets, who was pruning the trees. After a laugh over the matter the policeman allowed Mr. Patterson to proceed with his work. However the young lady is to be commended for her promptness in notifying the proper authorities, when she thought the young trees were being damaged.

POLICE COURT

One auto speeder was before the court on Friday last and was fined $5.00 and costs.

There were only two drunks arrested during the week. One was fined and other allowed to leave town.

Chief Mann was called to Richardsville by Mr. James Evans to take charge of a man on the charge of assault. He appeared before His Honor and was fined $7.00 and costs.

BICYCLE RECOVERED

The young man who stole the bicycle from the warehouse at the McLennan Foundry recently, saw the adv. in the Graphic last week and returned the wheel promptly. However, he retained some of the equipment, and when the police called he had skipped.

HOW THE BRITISH

ARMY ADVANCES
Curtain of Fire Their Protection—Forces Follow Shell Fire With Rapid Advances

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE.—The artillery commander drew his patent curtain of fire, and never in all the seven weeks of the Somme battle has the correspondent witnessed anything equal to the "show," as the officers call every action, in the taking of one of the spurs of Thiepval Ridge on Aug. 22nd. Ever since July 1, when the British failed in their effort to storm it, Thiepval Ridge has glared at the British, who had kept hammering it with gun fire. The Germans need to set the same store by it as they did by the heights of Ginchy and Guillemont on their other flank.

In front of the position conquered, the British infantry had been decimated by machine gunfire on July 1. The trenches were just as strong as then, with deep dugouts, the result of two years' building. Prisoners taken early in the offensive said the British never could obtain a foothold on that ridge.

Those taken yesterday who had been at Verdun said they suffered nothing there at all equivalent to the deluge of British shells, and that it was impossible for human beings to endure such torments.

On a thousand yard front, both the first German line and the support trench was taken. One pair of eyes could not see more details than the correspondent saw. The British and Germans engaged were outlined as clearly as a play around the second base could be seen from a grandstand. A home company of the National Guard, doing skirmish drill in camp, could not be more distinct when seen from the side lines. It was the very essence of war.

With the clear air of a bright afternoon over his shoulder, one looked across the tiny valley toward a slope. There the bare ground was cut with the slash of a new British trench and beyond that, across an area of dead grass and wavy maize, was the first line German trench. A Niagara rush of whishing screams from capsules of concentrated hell tore through the air and began bursting over it. Their flashes hugged it in an infernal ecstasy, sweeping it with myriads of bullets and fragments, shooting forked tongues of death into its burrows. To show a head and escape being hit and hit more than once was as hopeless as to stand up in a thick hailstorm without being hit by an ice pellet.

Some Germans who had trusted in flight rather than sticking to a dugout, when the first dash of projectiles came, were seen running toward the open way from this swath of destruction. Now, out of the British trench appeared a row of khaki tinted mushrooms, the steel helmets the British soldiers wear, then their heads and shoulders and full forms as the weeds went over the parapet. Every man was in full equipment with all its details visible, every figure uniform with all others to the last item, as they moved across the field of dead grass briskly and steadily.

No ominous, wicked staccato of German machine guns coming into action was heard. No machine gunner could live at this post in that trench. The British line opened to go around shell craters or other obstacles and then closed up. Occasionally a figure dropped and was lost in the grass. Right into the fact of that curtain of death from shells going only a few feet over their heads they were moving. Then, suddenly as it was laid, the curtain of shell fire lifted. Not a single shell out of the thousands had burst short.

Now the British were going over the German parapet, their bayonets glistering in the sun. As they descended into the trench the earth seemed to have swallowed them up. Little clouds of smoke from bursting bombs rose from the trench. There was shot work proceeding out of sight in the burrows. One after another, as though they were coming to the top of stairs, heads and shoulders appeared out of the trench. Each German had his hands up and in file the prisoners moved past a Briton standing on the parapet. These Germans, who had not waited to be bombed out of their dugouts, but had surrendered, came legging it at top speed back toward the British first line trenches.

Now British helmets rise from the German, first line and start on with another charge to the German support trench. They will clean up any Germans lying in shell craters on the way. They grow dim with distance and in the fading light, but they get there. Bit by bit, gains are made between big attacks. The British are now within one thousand yards of Thiepval, maintain their position in Guillemont and are within three hundred yards of Ginchy and of Martingulich.

SHORTAGE OF SCHOOL BOOKS

The vendors of school books in town have not yet received their supplies from the government appointee in Fredericton, and the schools here were opened four days ago. This is a nice state of affairs, and some one should endeavor to find a remedy.

The vendors here sent their orders to Fredericton some time ago and have been following these up with telegrams and telephones. The present administration finds no difficulty of providing money for many purposes, but when it is for necessary to pay additional employees to handle the school supplies, no funds are available, thus the people are inconvenienced. No doubt the books necessary will be along in a week or two.

Average payments per family for the seven months of the year $17.37.
Percentage of expense on Monthly Payments, $1.65.
Estimating a monthly expenditure of $2600.00 a month until the end of the year will mean a total required of over $30,000.00 to meet which we have the County Grant of $10,000.00 and subscriptions (from Campbellton alone) of $6,449.50. Hence there will be a deficit of $13,550.50 at the end of the year from the present indications. It will therefore require about $13,550 additional to make the Restigouche Patriotic Fund self-sustaining.

MORE IN LINE

The Newcastle Advocate has fallen into line with the Chatham Commercial, Campbellton Graphic and other provincial newspapers by increasing its subscription rates to $1.50 per year, new rate to take effect November 1st. A large number of Nova Scotia publications are also adopting the new rate. Doubtless there will be a few subscribers to the various papers adopting the new rates who will not take kindly to the action, but the publishers have been forced to take this step owing to the greatly increased cost of production. Paper and printing materials of all kinds have advanced so much in price that it has been found impossible to continue the old rate.—Commercial.

THE DOG DAYS, JULY 25-SEPT 5

We are now in the midst of the season popularly known as the "dog days." This period extends from July

25 to September 5 and receives its name from the brilliant star Sirius commonly known as the dog star.

The ancients believed that Sirius was the cause of the hot weather rather than the appearance of this luminous body merely marked the season of the year when the sun's heat is the greatest. Sirius is the most conspicuous sun seen from our earth's surface and is also comparatively speaking one of

New York, Aug. 28.—A cable to the World from Paris says:—Although the Kaiser sent his second son, Prince

Eitel Frederick, and the crack first division of the Prussian Guards to the Somme front to halt the wedge, the Anglo-French are driving deeply into territory occupied by the Germans.

General Fayoll has hammered this salient further by clearing all the Germans from Maurepas, into which they had penetrated again since the village was stormed by the French on August 16, and by occupying the heights and slopes northeast and south of Maure-pas.

Moreover, with the advanced trenches on the outskirts of the wood, the

DEEP CAVERNS AT THIEPVAL

Caves Dating From Early Times Said to be Used by the Germans

The Paris correspondent of the Daily Chronicle sends the following: "Many sensational stories have been in circulation concerning Thiepval, the fortified village in the Somme, which has figured so prominently in the British communiqués since the beginning of the offensive.

"The owner of the chateau was alleged to have German blood in his veins, and to have transferred his property before the war into a fortress with hundreds of tons of cement, gun platforms, and subterranean passages and depots holding huge stocks of shells.

"Krupp, of course, was mixed up in these stories, which were seasoned with the inevitable mysterious automobiles and night meetings in the park. It is almost unnecessary to say that all these reports are the mere product of excited imagination without a shadow of foundation.

"The chateau, built in 1725, belonging to a well-known family of the district, the deBreda. In 1912 Comte Jacques de Breda sold the place to a Paris engineer, M. Henri Portier, of the Ecole Centrale, officer of the Legion of Honor, and a retired officer of the French Army.

"M. Portier had a good many alterations made in his new property—only French workmen from Paris were employed—and it was not until June, 1914, that he and his family took up their residence in the Chateau de Thiepval, from which they escaped on Aug. 27, 1914, at 5 o'clock in the morning.

"It seems, however, that a German General who came to inspect the chateau immediately afterward, expressed his surprise at the limited extent of the cellars, and insisted that there must be others.

"A writer in the Gaulois, who says he knows very thoroughly the whole region of the Somme, explains that local legends refer to the existence in former times of great extents of subterranean passages in the region of Thiepval, although no trace of them could be found during the recent work of the chateau.

"According to the legend these subterranean passages, which led from the ruins of an old feudal castle to the marshes of Beaumont, were blocked up two or three centuries ago in order to prevent the village children from losing themselves in the labyrinth.

"It seems not impossible that some such passages still exist beneath the chateau and park, and that the Germans knew of them.

"What is beyond question, says the writer in the Gaulois, is that in the whole region, from Doullens to Bray, Comblès and Albert, traces can be found of immense caves and fissures hewn in the chalk by prehistoric rivers, whose courses can still be traced by geologists.

"He mentions the underground city of Noyon, the caves of Behaumont, the subterranean passages of Englebelem and Rossignol which, although unknown to the inhabitants, can yet be explored by people prepared to accept a little risk.

"These were the work of men intended probably, in many cases, to serve as shelters and hiding places for the inhabitants during the successive invasions which the region has seen since the time of the Romans. German tourists before the war frequently visited Noyon and the other subterranean vestiges of the past."

THEIR OWN MEDICINE

They Had No Mercy in Their Own Lives, But Now are Whining

Carl Wegner, in the Kolnische Zeitung, describing the horrors to which the German troops are subjected on the Somme front by the French and British artillery fire, says that the Germans, having been ferociously the first sweep of the Somme offensive to give up their grudge of strongly built positions consisting only of a chain of shell holes.

"What is to be seen now," he writes, "is only that which we have been able to create in haste, under the fearful bombardment of both British and French. The men crouch immovably in these shell holes, with no cover from sun and rain, and not the slightest protection against the shells dropping like a torrent from straight above."

"The men lie in these pits in the most fearful confusion with the wounded, who cannot be taken away until the approach of night, and with the dead, who cannot be buried at all. In the August heat the bodies began to decay quickly. Unceasingly the enemy strews the country with shrapnel and blows it up with heavy shell. When the attack begins the terrors of these pits are beyond description. Like the fire rain upon Gomorrah, the drum fire of the enemy comes down from Heaven."

"Who is that chap in front of the fire?" "Oh! a new member—awful boulder."

"One of those fellows, don't you know, who keeps the hand on his cigar."

THE SCARLET CROSS

(Jane Anderson in the London Daily Mail.)

It happened that, at midnight, I had to wait for a train in a little English town. The station was at the top of an incline which sloped down steeply, and in a narrow valley at the foot of it I could see the dark houses of the village with the moonlight on the thatched roofs. There were no lights in the houses and the street lamps were like candles burning in the darkness.

At one side of the village the river followed the curve of the valley, and there were tall trees which made a deep shadow beside it. In all of the village there was no sound, no movement; it was plain that the day's work was done, that in each one of those little dark houses the due proportion of labor had reached fulfillment, that the small commonplaces of living had been achieved.

It was hard for me to remember that these people were at war, that in those little thatched houses there were men and women who were each day making payment in suffering, giving each day their small tithe of courage. But there seemed to be in this little village only peace. It seemed to be set apart, secure, tranquil, mysteriously protected.

Then, suddenly, a train came thundering into the station, a long train with open trucks. These trucks were loaded with coal—coal loaded in some nameless city and destined for some mysterious destination. So I knew that the isolation of the little village in the valley was but an illusion of the night; that the links of civilization were too strongly forged to exempt even one small place. The long train slowly past, and the light from the dim lamps overhead made great patches of blue on the shapeless lumps of coal. It was a very clear and crystalline blue.

Then there were other trains which came and went, and in each engine the fire-box threw a bright, yellow light which illumined the cab and made flashes of gold in the columns of smoke. Sometimes the stationmaster would come out to talk to the driver and would stand beside the footboard swinging his red lantern. Certainly the little village with the thatched roofs was taking its part in the affairs of the world.

But finally the last goods train came and passed by, and the stationmaster went into his little room at the end of the platform and closed his door. And then a very wonderful thing happened. I had gone back to the railing overlooking the slope of the hill and the little dark houses in the valley below, and I was thinking that even in so short a time the blue darkness of the night had deepened, had intensified the impression of peace and fine security which marked that small village and set it apart from war.

So I did not know that another train had come in on the other side of the station. Then I turned round and saw it moving slowly past with the white plume of smoke blowing back over the tender. It seemed to go very smoothly, this train, and silently. There was no sound but the even turning of the wheels on the rails. The goods trains with their heavy cargoes had clattered past and waked up echoes under the high roof of the platform, but this train was like a train from some other world. No one took heed of its passing; there were no signals, there were no lights.

However, it carried a precious cargo. For the carriages of this train were not like the carriages of other trains; they were painted white, and on each carriage there was a great red cross. I think that I had never before known the meaning of these scarlet crosses; I thought of the men lying in those dim compartments and of the quality of their home-coming. The great red crosses were the color of blood, but when I watched them moving slowly past I thought that I had never seen such beautiful emblems as these.

I watched the white train until the last carriage disappeared among the dark trees bordering the fields.

Then, after a long while, my train arrived, and in due time I came again to London. But I found that I had returned to a London which I did not know. In the big station, where I had seen hundreds of people, each one of them mysteriously dedicated to the small problems of his day, I found only the men at the gates and the porters waiting in the white concourse. The windows of the booking office were closed; the gray trucks, in an orderly row against the wall, made a chain of purple shadows on the floor. Here, as in the little village with the thatched houses, the work of the day was done.

However, dispute the empty concourse and the closed offices, the work of war was not done. For, in one of the big, subsidiary sheds, the wounded train had come in. After its long, slow journey from the coast, the white train, with its precious cargo, had reached London. It stood under the black roof, illumined by the pale light from the painted globes overhead.

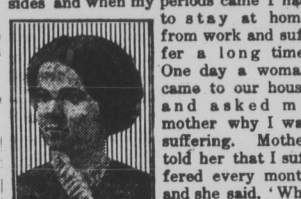

In the two forward coaches the big centre doors were open, and a narrow gangway led to the platform. The gray ambulances were waiting, a long file of them, in the roadway at one side, and stretchers, covered with dark blankets, were in a row on the platform.

Somewhat, it seemed that there were not many people taking part in the grave task of moving this great trainload of wounded men. Only some orderlies. In blue uniform and dark puttees.

GIRL COULD NOT WORK

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer for a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. If girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a safe and pure remedy made from roots and herbs, much suffering might be avoided.

tees, and some nurses with deep bands of red on their grey coats.

But each one of these people was a perfect unit in an exceedingly competent machine.

The orderlies carried the stretchers down the narrow gangway, walking very slowly, and lifted them into the ambulances. Then the gangway was moved to the next compartment and a new ambulance came into position by the gates.

Yes, it was very expeditious and very simple and purposeful, this moving of men who had paid the price of war. But there was tenderness and pity in it, too. It was very fine to watch. Each one of those burdens covered over with its blue blanket was infinitely pitiful and helpless. They looked very unlike men—those shapeless, covered things, with the blue, pale light of the station falling over them. But once, above the white sheet folded back, I saw a man's face. It was almost covered with bandages, which were over his head like a cap and came down over both cheeks and under his chin. But I think that this man was smiling.

And so, one by one, the ambulances were filled and the white doors of the ambulance train were closed. Last of all, the gangway was carried away, and the last ambulance rolled slowly out from under the black roof. The ambulance train, empty, waited beside the empty platform, and the scarlet cross was a very clear and brilliant crimson.

Then I went out into the dark street where my cab was waiting, and I drove past the tall, dark houses of London. It was very still. The arch of the sky above the roofs of the city was as wide and as blue as it was above the thatched cottages of the little villages in the valley. There was the same silence, that same fine tranquility.

I had found the secret of this. I knew that in the little village and in London there was no doubt, no misgiving. That the white train, with its red crosses, which were the color of blood, was their guarantee. I knew that they were the symbols of England's faith.

"Five shillings, please," said the dentist.

"But," protested the patient, "your sign reads, 'Painless extracting free,' and now you want five shillings."

"Certainly," replied the dentist. "You remember that you yelled a bit, so this does not apply in your case. I do painless extracting free, just as I advertise, but yours evidently was not painless, and so I make a charge for it. Five shillings, please."

How to Have Dry Buildings

YPON doesn't wear out. It runs out. Ready! Roofings don't wear out, they dry out. Do you know how important this is? It means that there is a tremendous difference between ready roofings, even though all have felt and waterproofing compound in them. It is the quality of that compound, the skill used in saturating the felt, that counts. It is the skill used in the saturation, plus the chemical composition of the saturating compound that makes Panamoid a wonderful roofing.

Panamoid is made of the best felt that can be obtained. It is tough, fibrous, strong. This felt is uniformly saturated with a non-volatile compound that stays there. Being sticky, the felt holds this saturation indelibly. If you want dry roofs at low cost, come in and get some Panamoid Roofing. Very easily laid.

THE OPENING DATES FOR THE GAME SEASON

Information Regarding the Shooting of Birds, Moose, Deer and Caribou.—The Licenses

The game season is approaching and sportsmen are already getting ready for it. It is reported from the interior and northern part of the province that big game is quite plentiful, and birds are by no means scarce. The big game season is to open on Sept. 15, when moose, caribou and deer may be hunted—that is, if the proper license is secured. No cow moose or cow caribou may be killed, nor calves under three years of age. What is of greater interest at the present time is that the bird season for wood duck, black duck, teal, brant and geese opens on Friday, Sept. 1. The season for the big game, and for these birds, is open until the last of November. The season for shore birds frequenting the shores of the Bay Chaleur and the Northumberland Strait opened the middle of August.

The small game provides good sport, if the rules of the game are adhered to. While due consideration is given to the sportsmen, restrictions are made in order that certain species shall not become extinct. Seagulls, pheasant and small birds frequenting fields and woods, excepting blackbirds, crows and English sparrows, are prohibited game at all seasons. Twenty ducks per day is the limit and ten each of woodcock and partridge. Shooting on Sunday or in any park or pleasure resort is prohibited.

Birds are free to residents of the province, while non-residents—that is, persons domiciled elsewhere whether native or not—must pay a $10 fee to shoot small game and a $5 fee in addition for angling in the province. The season for snipe, woodcock and partridge does not open until Sept. 15. These birds are reported to be quite plentiful.

Regarding the big game, a bona fide resident of the province for a license fee of $3 may shoot one bull moose, one bull caribou and two deer in the one season, while a non-resident the fee is $50, each license, of course, being good for one season only. Upon receiving the license from the proper authority, instructions will be delivered as to the proper course to follow in removing captured game. They must be secured from the crown lands office to remove carcasses or heads from the province. Under no circumstances will the authorities tolerate carcasses being left in the woods or in streams. In certain areas, such as Grand Manan Island, deer are protected. Non-residents shooting big game must have the services of a registered guide. Automatic rifles may be used in killing big game, but not the smaller game.

STORES ROBBED AT EEL RIVER CROSSING

Thieves Entered by Rear Window.—Took Some Goods But Little Cash

The store of Mr. Alex. Dittie of Eel River Crossing was entered some time Friday night and a quantity of goods and about a dollar in change in the till taken.

The thieves entered by a rear window. The store is also a dwelling and Mr. Dittie lives therein. When the thief entered he stepped into a wash tub of water which was setting on the floor directly under the window, and got his feet wet. He then went to the kitchen and selected a pair of Mr. Dittie's dry socks, which he evidently put on as he left his own in their stead.

He next went into the store, and went to the cash drawer. This he was afraid to pull open in case the bell would ring, so he took a screw driver and removed the entire drawer from the counter and took it away with him. It was later found behind a building empty, but there was less than a dollar change in it.

In order to carry away a quantity of pipes, tobacco, revolvers, cartridges, canned goods, etc., the robber emptied a bag of rice, and used the bag.

Mr. Dittie was asleep in the house at the time, but heard nothing of the intruder.

It is reported that a number of other places were entered, and an attempt was made upon another store.

FINED FOR KILLING MOOSE OUT OF SEASON

Residents of Escuminac Were Up For Slaughter of Moose

A report has reached this office that a number of young men of Escuminac have been before the court on a charge of killing moose out of season and were fined twenty dollars and costs each.

It is alleged that the killing has been going on for some time, and that so much meat was procured in this way that eight quarters of moose meat spoiled before they could be disposed of, and had to be buried.

The fine is altogether too light. The full penalty of the law should be exacted, as it is a notorious fact the game laws are openly violated in this section and if it continues there soon will not be a moose in this part of the country.

CORNER STONE WILL BE LAID ON FRIDAY

The Last Important Public Ceremony at Which Duke of Connaught Will Act

The laying of the corner stone of the new reconstructed Parliament Building at Ottawa by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught on Friday, September 1, at noon, will be a national event.

Invitations have been issued to all dignitaries who have the right to be present at the opening of parliament. This includes all members of parliament, Senators, and their wives and daughters, all Lieutenant Governors, all Privy Councillors, Deputy Ministers, heads of the various Canadian churches, etc. In addition, provincial Premiers and cabinet ministers have been invited. It is not expected there will be a large attendance for the ceremony from a distance.

As this will be the last important national public ceremony at which the Duke will participate before taking his departure for England, there is considerable interest in the event in the capital, and His Royal Highness' remarks on the occasion will have more than ordinary weight.
