THE PRAYER OF THE BEREAVED. BY ISABELLA BIRD.

Saviour, whose crown'd humanity Still stoops to wipe the tearful eye, Unto whose ear the voiceless sigh -Pleads not in vain Thou who the broken heart hast heal'd, Look on the wow to Thee feveal'd, The burning fount of tears unseal'd, This bitter pain.

If blindly on a mortal head With lavish hand I fondly shed Gifts on Thy shrine more fitly laid, Saviour, forgive ! With earthly love compelled to part, Stricken by sorrow's keenest dart, Have mercy on this wounded heart, And healing give.

If mortal accents all too dear With their deep music filled my ear. So that Thy voice I failed to hear,

O Christ, forgive ! Turn not this human heart to stone, But once again with magie tone, Thrill through its chambers dark and lone, Bidding it live.

If I have made a mortal eye The star of my idolatry, In whose dear light I hope to die, Or longed to live-

If one lov'd image over seen Thy glory and my soul between. Forbade my trust on Thee to lean-Jesus, forgive !
