SOLICITOR SALES PLAN

Official Rules That Housing Board Transgressed On Commission Method.

MATTER FOR COURTS

New Attempt To Sell City's Houses May Be Balked by Meredith Finding.

the commissioners themselves. The difficulty arises from the fact that the housing legislation originally enacted by the legislature contemplated no such wholesale speculative onstruction as was later undertaken in London. The act was intended to finance home building, either by or on behalf of responsible people, who were expected to make applications in their own behalf. Later, however, the city purchased large tracts of land in Ealing and South London, and em-barked on a wholesale construction program, anticipating a demand that did not develop. In order to upload the remaining houses the commission at length engaged John W. Cunliffe as manager, and during his tenure paid him about $4,400, of which about $2,400 was in commissions on the ale of 21 houses and 14 lots. 21 houses included the re-sale of six which came back on the city's hands.

Recently the commission decided to make a new attempt to sell the houses on commission, after releasing Mr. Cunliffe from his duties on the first of May, but the city soli-citor has ruled that the city has no power to spend any funds for such no power to spend any tunes for service, and power can only be obtained by applying at the next session of the legislature for some enactment amending the present prohibitory clauses in two acts which are cited as covering housing opera-

Copies of general order 419 of the board of railway commissioners for Canada, restoring the freight rates, which were effective on the C. P. R and C. N. R. on July 6, 1924, were received by the London chamber of commerce, this morning. The change in rates came about by the revival of the famous Crow's Nest Pass agreement, and caused a great upheaval among shippers in many centers o Canada. London was not particular ly affected by the agreement, and the order of the board is consequently not of much interest to local shippers. But the order is a cause of real rejoicing in Brantford, whose shippers found themselves seriously discriminated against by the resumption of the Crow's Nest Pass sched

What Is Christianity?

The trial being staged at Dayton, Tenn., now right of schools to teach evolution as opposed to the law of creation by the Almighty, is drawof the most noted legal minds in United States to present the case for the prosecution and defence. For the latter Clarence Darrow has been hailed from the seclusion which he stated was final when he succeeded in saving Loeb and Leopold from the gallows in Chicago.

The wide and even distant ramifications of the trial are shown in the way previous utterances of Darrow are being unearthed, especially of it. his address at the trial of the infamous "Bill" Haywood, charged with the murder of ex-Gov- Yes, you're right, Dennett. There'll be beatings; ernor Stunenberg of Idaho. Pleading for the life of one of the plotters, Orchard, Darrow made use of the phrase, "I don't believe in hot irons, too, unless you confess you killed man's tinkering with the word of God." He that girl. went on to qualify his words by stating that he was not a professed Christian, but had a great respect for all the religions, even to the worship of idols if they tended to make men better.

The reply of Senator Borah, who was oppos ing Darrow in that trial, is also recalled, and is considered by many as one of his most masterful utterances. Taking up the same theme as Darrow, he told how early in life he read a book on Ingersoll, the atheist, but his father took it away from him. Senator Borah continued:

"I came to the conclusion that Bonaparte was a greater man than Ingersoll; the greatest genius in war or statesmanship that ever lived. came to the history of his Egyptian campaign. read how he took with him on that trip from Paris a number of philosophers, savants from the salons of Paris, learned men, wise men, men were teaching in that day as some of the human heart, nothing more God-like than he human intellect; men who taught there was and difference, as my eloquent friend now says, guidance and direction.

'I read how one night these philosophers sat upon the deck of the ship and discussed in their puny way the mistakes of the Infinite; how they finally concluded that there was no such thing as religion, no God, nothing higher than man At last they turned to Napoleon for an opinion, who, pointing to the firmament above, said Tell me who made that firmament and I will then discuss this matter with you.'

This was a revelation to me. Skepticism and agnosticism were things of the past. And write upon the divine brow of the one who died on Calvary 'Impostor,' too late to write above Redeemer liveth. It is too late to argue against the teaching of Him who said: 'This day thou shalt be with me in Paradise." In connection with the same controversy

Dr. J. G. Machen, leading Presbyterian divine. of Princeton university, has written to the New York Times a definition of what Christianity really stands for and the responsibility that rests on the church to proclaim it. He concludes

"The world, according to our view, is lost in that some other way will answer as well. There is no permanent hope for society in the mere principles of Jesus. It is found only in the the interests of ecclesiastical harmony, or for any other reason, allow our witness to become nothing more than a well-devised publicity stunt, that way in London. Our dealers here buy Urania was chartered for a trip on the lake, the action. A clear enunciation of what the tail. Churches have aiways made their most substantial development in the face of hard opposition.

Giving Them the Third Degree.

The Brantford Expositor believes police methods in United States, with their "third degree" ideas, are partly responsible for the difference between British and United States crime records, and for the way in which British says he's too young to retire from the cabinet. justice gets results and that of United States He's just 65, and has more energy and force at the walls of its conduits, and, if there be any weak spots in those walls, the fluid forces its in many cases does not. The Expositor makes the contrast this way:

"It is an interesting and instructive contrast to note that, while the police, under the British system, warn the prisoner, upon arrest, that anything he may say may be used as evidence against him, the police in the United States put bite at anything from a fishworm to a piece so that when you are 20, your blood pressure, the prisoner under excruciating and prolonged of fat pork on a bent pin. torture in order to force him to make a statement. Thus, in the country where the prisoner is assumed to be innocent until he is proved to be guilty, crime is reduced to a minimum and claim presented to them for children's clothes the guilty seldom escape. Where the prisoner is assumed to be guilty and torture is applied. crime is rampant, respect for law has declined. and those guilty of heinous crimes are seldom 30, in connection with a plot to kidnap Mary Pickford. A paragraph in a news report said: "A confession by Claud Arthur Halcomb, 30, that he plotted with two others to kidnap Mary Pickford and hold her for $200,000 ransom because he was broke and hungry, climaxed ten hours of gruelling cross-examination by police here today.

What took place in that "ten hours of gruelling cross-examination"? Was the idea to break him down to such an extent that he would make some sort of a confession? The despatch goes on to throw further light on the subject:

"With defiant eyes, imploring the officers about him to let up in their questioning, Halcomb stood up bravely against their onslaughts until he succumbed from hunger more than fear; and the confession then followed.'

Why should a man who was charged with a certain offence have to implore the officers to "let up" in their questioning? Was it mere "questioning" that was taking place, for it is a known as the Scopes case, to determine the matter of plain fact that a great many questions could be asked and answered in ten hours. What is meant by "third degree" is described in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post Here is an explanation of the method:

> "'Dennett,' said the police captain fiercely I'm going to get a confession out of you before you leave this room. If you won't talk there are ways of making you talk. Get me?' 'You mean the third degree, I suppose,' said

> Dennett 'Call it what you like.' "'I've heard of your methods before, Captain, Dennett said. 'I know about your beatings, your blackjack, your rubber hose-and all the rest

'Do you? Good!' Burrage leered. 'That helps. You know what's coming to you then. there'll be blackjacks that will break that jaw of yours, and a rubber hose that will hurt you as you have never been hurt in your life, and want you to know exactly what you're in for. So save yourself trouble. Come You killed her, didn't you?' across.

The story goes on to tell how the prisoner was finally beaten into unconsciousness in an cort to make him confess so the confession could be used against him when it came to the trial. That slaughterhouse method of doing business strips the police and all they stand for in the eyes of the people of anything approaching respect. It seeks to replace brains and skill in ferreting out crime with brute force and a form of torture.

One can hardly conceive of a country that formed its laws in the first place on British standards of justice, which hold that a man is innocent until he has been proved guilty, letting such methods exist. In any British community it is the business of the police and detectives Tainly teach now, that there is nothing higher to get to work and trace events, find a motive. or more divine than the impulses and emotions put the various pieces of evidence together and on that base their case before judge or jury. It is eminently fair to the accused and to the public between the unlettered barbarian muttering at at large. The pollution of this system is an the foot of a black idol and the jubilant soul Americanization that cannot be defended, and looking up to the God on Calvary, asking for the result is a crime record so shocking that it is not equaled in the civilized world.

Callin' On Hank

Hank roomed with me for seven years, we led a free and happy life, but Hank is livin' high-hat now and tryin' to please a fussy wife.

Well Hank he's married off at last like what the most of good folks do, and Hank was boardin' on with me but now his boardin' days be through. He asked me if I wouldn't come when they got settled down at home, and drop in for to chat a spell as though his place was just my own.

I mind how Hank he used to talk about the way he'd fix the place, for he was goin' to settle down and quit the fast and merry

And me and Hank would sit and talk as boardin' partners sometimes will, Hank restin' on an easy chair, his feet propped on the window sill, and I'd be sittin' down there too, a-listenin' to the things he said, a-holdin' down a rockin' chair, my feet cocked up upon the bed.

'Twas solid comfort what we had, and not too stylish in a way, and we was always sure to get three fair good meals most every

Before I left Hank's wife went in and brought us out some cake and tea, it took a half a dozen cups to make a drink for such as me.

Well when I got to home that night I teuched the ice box for some ham, and made a mighty sandwich too, the kind what's pleasin' to a man. I went upstairs to that old room and tossed my boots across the floor, a-wonderin' if Hank really is as happy as he was before.-ARK

High Blood Pressure.

One Certain Way To Find Out If You Have It to Consult a Doctor-Diet and Exercise.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,-How can I tell if I have high blood pressure? Can you tell me what my pressure should be at age 37? What causes it?

The one sure way to find if you have high blood pressure is to see a doctor. He can give you the answer in five minutes. High blood pressure means too great a pressure of blood within the arteries; the circulating fluid strains way through. It is, therefore, obvious that a bleed from anywhere.

said that the proper figure is your age, plus 100; as measured by a manometer, should give a reading of 120; when you are 50, your blood pressure should be 150; at 70, it should be 170, and so on. It is true that this relation between age and blood pressure is commonly found to exist, but it is not true that such a finding is

"Was your home near the home of Yap Yap the Prairie Dog?" Peter Rabbit asked Digger the Badger.
Digger's bright eyes twinkled.
"Well." said he, "I wasn't too far away."

"I think it was horrid of you to try to catch Yap Yap's children," replied Peter.

The twinkle in Digger's eyes grew and it took some digging sometimes."

"Oh, another member of our family," replied Digger. "He is built a good deal like Shadow the Weasel, and he is so slim that he doesn't have to do any digging. He can slip right down one of those holes and find out without much, if any, trouble whether there are any babies in there. Now I had to dig for them, and it took some digging sometimes. plied Peter.

The twinkle in Digger's eyes grew more twinkly. "I would just as soon have a dinner of young Rabbits," said he.

Peter wrinkled up his wobbly little nose at Digger, and was glad that he was inside that bramble-tangle. "I shouldn't have wanted you for a neighbor if I had been in Yap Yap's lightly wire to. Whoever sees you so more twinkled up his wobbly little prairie Dogs, getting a dinner isn't always so easy. It is hard work to creep up on Yap Yap when he is sitting up on his doorstep. If he doesn't see you, one of his neighbors is pretty sure to. Whoever sees you neighbor if I had been in Yap Yap's place" said he.

"Oh, he was used to me," replied Digger. "I don't suppose he loved me any, but then, he and his relatives didn't love several of their neighbors. They didn't love Old Man Coyote, for instance, when he lived out there. They didn't love Blackfoot his head out for a look around. He isn't saturally wants to know what the Ferret."

SCORES WHISPERS DURING CONCERT

Julia Hoyt Deplores Persons Who Disturb Musical Performances.

By JULIA HOYT. I have many times heard musicians say that they would rather play to an audience which had been able to pay only fifty cents a seat than play to one made up of guests at a large dinner in a private house. One reason for this is the lack of discrimination by the host or hostess in the choice of guests. There are some people who not only do not appreciate good music. but have not even the decency to act with respect toward that which they do not understand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependa-ble Help to Mothers

Port Greville, N. S .- "I took your medicine for a terrible pain in my side and for weakness and headaches. I to bloat all over, too, and my feet and hands were the worst. I am the mother of four children and I am nursing my baby—the first one of four I could nurse. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before the baby's birth, so you can see how much it helped me. I cannot raise it too highly for what it has lone for me. I took all kinds of medicine, but the Vegetable Compound is the only one that has helped me for any length of time. I rec it to any one with troubles like mine and you may use my letter for a testi-monial."—Mrs. ROBERT MCCULLEY, Port Greville, Nova Scotia.

Before and after childbirth the mother will find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a blessing.

Many, many letters are received giving the same sort of experience as is given in this letter. Not only is the mother benefited, but these good results pass on to the child. No harmful drugs are used in the preparation of this medicine—just s and herbs—and it can be taken in safety by the nursing mother. 98 out of every 100 women reported benefit from itsuse in a recent canvass among women users of this medicine.

Grand Bend Has Everything Needed at Popular Resort for Refreshing Vacation or Holiday

The Buescher Boys' Orchestra, that supplies the music at the Bend, has taken the crowds by storm. They are an extremely high-class band and play all the season's latest hits with a snap and zest that make your feet fairly tingle.

Early visitors have felt with appreciation the efforts of a small band of workers in putting parks in condition. The beach is a pienic park, and outing parties have plenty of space available without trespassing upon each other's goodwill in any way.

FACILITIES FOR SPORT.

There are increased facilities for sport and recreation all around. If seclusion is the wish of summer cottagers they may find rest and quietness, without disturbance.

Weather is bright and sunny. The sunsets are the talk of the contingents who came late in June. Family visitors have been many and from all parts of the province. There are many new cottages and they are being taken up well.

"PASSING THE BRAND" OPENS SOLEMN RITE AT ORENDAGA

Fifty-Five Girl Braves Elect Miss Anne MacGregor Big Chief.

ONE FROM ORIENT

Special to The Advertiser.

Port Bruce, July 10 .- A mysterious and yet fascinating ceremony took place at camp yesterday. It was initiation service around a campfire with Miss Anne MacGregor of London, the newly-elected big chief officiating at the rites. The new camp just open boasts 55 girls under canvas, coming from all parts of Western Ontario and even from as far as Milwaukee and Japan.

At the sound of the tom-tom the four tribes began to gather, each little chief leading her company silently, Indian fashion, up to the tribal fire. These fires, one for each tribe, had been laid previously at intervals in a semi-circle about the place chosen for the central camp fire. The tribes standing together in a great circle about the fires, made a picturesque scene.

Passing the Brand. The big chief opened the ceremony of initiation by explaining to all assembled the camp spirit, telling of its ideals and aspirations. Each little chief then came forward and received a burning brand from the big chief and with it lit her own tribal fire until soon the whole place was lit up with the dancing flames. From each "brave" she received a token of their faith and loyalty to her, to their little chiefs, to the camp and to the ideal for which it stands. A pretty ceremony and a solemn one.

The election of the camp officers was an exciting event in camp this week. Miss Anne MacGregor of London being chosen big chief in a lively election in which Miss Kay Beard of London and Miss Marion tour tribes, Miss Etta Brown of Sarnia being elected little chief for tribe 1; Miss Kay Green of London, little chief for tribe 2; Miss Donald McGeachy of Sarnia, little chief for tribe 3, and Miss Kay Beard of London, little chief for tribe 4. Winterbottom and K. Graham McDonald. The results are now and the chief for tribe 4.

Poiret twill, black satin and silk bengaline are the choice of Paris and New York in materials. Flowing lines, flares, cascade draperies and brilliant ideas in applied design are to be seen on these advanced styles. Long, close-fitting sleeves are very much in evidence. A special favorite from Paris is black satin handsomely braided and trimmed with monkey fur. Black satin and purple is another especially rich-looking and popular combination.

London women should be especial-

The birth of a flag usually coincides with wars and conquests. Poetry and tradition are woven into it, if possible. Every old regiment in the world has certain honors and customs which it cherishes above all things. The King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, for example, as a unit, salutes nobody but the King. That special privilege dates to the day King William's horse ran away with him at a certain battle, and charging away from the firing line carried his majesty with great indignity through and scattered the King's Own, which was marching to the fray. Recovering control of his steed, the king rode back and jokingly chided the colonel for not saluting the king as he passed; and he said: "From now on, this regiment salutes nobody but the king."

And so it is. Another regiment drinks the king's health standing with one foot on the mess table. Another breaks the glasses when the toast is drunk. The army and the navy are full of customs and special etiquet based on some treasured incident or precedent or privilege accorded in olden time.

THIS FLAG COULD ONLY MEAN ONE THING — CANADA.

Canada has just such a priceless incident to treasure if she has the imagination. Flags that have no tradition and symbolism in their weave are not flags but bunting.

After the great advance of the Canadian Corps at Amiens, when, with the crack French Tenth Army on their right and the Australians on their left, they thrust a great point into the German defenses towards Roy, Generalissimo Foch, the supreme commander, said: "The Canadians are the spear head of the allies."

blazoned spear-heads on their cuirasses and have worn spear-heads on their helmets. If a modern king had said those words to one of his regi ments it would have been taken and treasured in symbolic form for all time.

Why not take the magnificent and historic compliment of the supreme commander of all the armies of the allies for a legend?

Let it be laid down officially as flag etique: that in remembrance of Foch's words, the Canadian flag, born out of that great conflict, be unfurled always and only on a staff with a spear head!

Britain thought how fine and significant it would be to place the contestants from Canada, Australia, Africa, India and every corner of the empire in one grand and overwhelming battalion. The committees of the dominions thought differently. They decided definitely to march each behind its own flag in proper alphabetical order, in amongst

ND they were right. The effect was this: A the procession of athletes of all nations, starting with A and passing through the alphabet, went by, nation by nation. And every few moments a British flag went by. Not one British flag but a score were in that great parade. One by one, the flags of the world went by the international throng, and first Australia with a splendid regiment of men carried the Union Jack and its marks of union and empire by. Then some more nations, and the British Isles went past, a great showing, behind the Union Jack. Still more nations of the world, and then Canada. So the nations went past, one by one, and at the beginning and at the end came the flag of Britain with the escutcheons of her sons added. How infinitely more imposing-this recurrence of Britain throughout that review of the nations-than had all the dominions followed under the one flag, the British committee realized fully as the moment passed. But the flag the Canadians bore that day was not an official flag. Nor did it strike instant recognition by some symbol already known and respected from the eyes of the beholders from all parts of the world.

The objection raised to the use of the Union Jack with a device laid in the midst of it is that governors-general, lieutenant-governors' and governors' flags, from olden time, are the Union Jack with the coat of arms of the colonies they govern set in the middle. In the case of the Union Jack with the gold maple leaf emblazoned boldly in the centre, there can be no confusion with the governor-general's flag, since his is the Jack with the Canadian coat of arms in the centre. The gold maple leaf without inscription of any sort laid in the heart of the Union Jack could have only one meaning, either here or in most of the countries of the world.

Artists must come into the discussion when the subject is a matter of color and form such as a flag. And the Group of Seven, intensest of all Canadian artists, might be expected to have some thought on the question of a Cana-

Niagara Lies Hidden in Wilds of the North-West Alexandra Falls on the Hay River Has a Giant Drop ing it in much the same way as Niagara and that

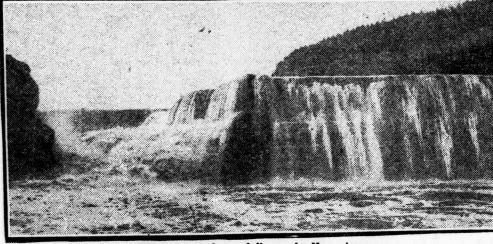

OHN RUSSELL. of the Topographical Survey of Canada, has gone out west and up north to take some photographs. He will be surveying this summer in the Hay river country, which is in Mackenzie territory, just past the top of Alberta, and as a part of his survey work he wants to get a set of pictures of the Alexandra Falls. If he has good luck his pictures will go to Ottawa for official record

Of all Canadian waterfalls this one on Hay river-which, by the way, is twins-is the nearest second to Niagara, but few people in Canada know anything about it and far fewer have seen it. For the thousands of cameras that have been trained on Niagara since the art of photographing began, only a half dozen or so when, at Vimy, we got a commander of our own have ever got up to Alexandra halls in the wild erness north.

Russell's pictures and survey data will doubtless do much to make this little known wonder sight of the Mackenzie country better known. Government reports of that sort have way, however, of moving slowly, and in the meantime-just to show what is eventually coming-some of the other pictures already in captivity may be released.

The Alexandra Falls occur at a point on Hay River about forty-five miles from its outlet into Great Slave Lake. As yet, it is all a wilderness country thereabouts, a great expanse of woodland and waterway with none but Indians and a few white traders to occupy it. There is little immediate prospect of Alexandra becoming over-commercialized, like Niagara.

After winding hither and thither over the country for most of its length, Hay River breaks limestone ledge 384 feet wide and 105 feet high. Its own water has cut a canyon for it to tumble in, and the whole performance is staged in primeval wildness, with the woods behind it and more woods before it. The lay-out, barring the wildness, is the nearest like Niagara that Canada has to show, with differences that make it distinctive and individual. The suddenness of the drop, the volume of water, the height from which it plunges, are surprising and impressive. It seems a pity that more people cannot witness the performance.

When Hulbert Footner was poking around in the north on one of his book-making adventures he visited Alexandra Falls, and this is what he said of them in his "New Rivers of the North": "Imagine, if you can, millions upon millions of gallons of root beer with its rich creamy foam pouring into that great hole in the world without filling it. We could have sat for hours merely watching the tight little curls of spray that puffed up like jets of smoke out of the face of the falling water and then, spreading out and descending slowly, merged into the white cloud that rolled about the foot of the falls. This cloud itself billowed up in successive undulations like full draperies, only to spread out and vanish in the sunshine.'

Before Footner, two visits to this northern vonder-sight are on record. R. G. McConnell, of the Canada Geological Survey, was there in 1887, and he afterwards wrote a description, more particularly from a geological standpoint. He found, for instance, that the waterfall had eaten itself back into the limestone beds suppor-

Once in all the years since Hay River began to tumble, a bird's-eye picture of the double falls has been taken from the air. That was in the spring of 1921, when an experimen9tal aeroplane trip was made from Edmonton to Fort Simpson, in the Mackenzie River oil country. At the time winter was still holding its grip upon the northland, and the wide expanse of bush country is shown in broken white. The river, too, is white, for it was still frozen over;

Arthur Heming, Canadian Author-Artist Just About the Most Painstaking

Craftsman in America F genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains, then Arthur Heming, the Canadianauthor-artist, possesses this quality to a high degree. His latest book is the result of three and a half years of grinding work, during which period the author did without a real holiday or social relaxations. Those who think writers have merely to sit down at a typewriter and let fancy flow may be surprised to know that every word was written seven times, and the entire story was reconstructed three times.

Before the fastidious artist-author was satisfled with the opening paragraph, which numbers sixty words, he wrote and discarded more than twenty thousand words.

Had Heming turned his astute and keen mind in the direction of business instead of art, he might be a captain of industry or a bank president. As it is, he has arrived at the double distinction of being a leading writer as well as an outstanding artist of Canada, and the sole Canadian artist-author, since Seton should really be considered an Englishman and lives in the United States.

His financial success has been considerable. for he has used business methods in selling his work, disposing of copyrights in Canada, United States, Britain, France and several European Arthur Heming was born in Paris. Ontario, but grew up in Hamilton, where at the early age of seventeen his proficiency in drawing won him the post of assistant teacher of drawing in the Hamilton art school.

To his mother's excellent training he attributes much of his success. He was one of a family of eleven boys and girls, and as the boys came first Mrs. Heming saw no reason why they should not do their share of the housework, and firmly carried out this idea.

Thoroughness Above Everything

O NE Saturday morning she told Arthur to sweep out the dining-room. Like any boy anxious to play, he rushed through the work in short order. But the maternal eye was keen, and he was told to do it over again. When the mother came to view the room the second time she was far from satisfied.

"If it takes you all day, it MUST be done right," she told him.

Five times did the unwilling boy have to wield the broom on the stiff Brussels carpet before his strict mother was satisfied. It would have taken her less time to do the work herself, but her son would then have failed to learn a valuable lesson in discipline.

It taught him it was a saving of time and energy to do things right in the first place. This habit of being thorough, of taking the greatest possible amount of pains, has stuck to him

Every day he rises early, does his daily two hundred-no paltry dozen for this strenuous man-and then spends from eight to ten hours at his manuscript or easel, his only recreation being long walks. Not until he finishes whatever work he has undertaken does he allow himself a good holiday, and then it is generally spent in the woods gathering material for his next work.

He is very strict with himself—quite as strict as his mother was. He neither smokes nor drinks, and is very simple in his diet. Perhaps to his regular, systematic way of living may be accounted his excellent health. He has one little peculiarity-he detests perfume, except the incense that nature spreads abroad in the woods and meadows.

Struggling writers or artists who appeal to him for counsel find him helpful, for he has been able to give valuable advice to many, the fruit of long years of experience. He remembers his own early struggles and what it meant to him to have the encouragement of the great English artist. Brangwyn, with whom he studied

The Canadian Girl Has a Natural Flair for Athletics Breaking Records Fast Becoming Coast-to-Coast Habit

Dominion's Reputation Now More Than Continent-Wide-Producing Stars on Track and Links, Swimming Stars and All-Round Experts—Acute Observers Search to Find the Reason

ANADA has, quite suddenly it seems, developed into a country famous for women athletes. Their fame is not now either national or confined to one continent. A request has come that Canada send across the Atlantic a team of her finest to compete with the best that Britain can produce.

She has produced not one, but several skaters who have shattered existing world records. Any time that there is ice, a team of girl skaters can be put in the field which will in all probability skate a series of rings around any opposition that can be offered by any other country or collection of countries in the Americas.

Year by year, her women golf stars achieve wider and wider notice. The city of Edmonton appears on the athletic map with a team of lady basketballers with an awe-inspiring habit of inflicting decisive defeats. Thousands of Torontonians troop over to local arenas to watch dozens of enthusiastic young ladies throw, drive, toss and smash baseballs in all directions. Within the past few days, champion girl swimmers have bobbed up on the Pacific coast. Last year, at Pictou, Nova Scotia, a nineteen-year-old girl, Eva Morrison, raced wto male swimmers four miles out to sea and beat them. At Halifax, she stuck to the finish in a ten mile race through seas so icy that fourteen men were forced to quit.

Innes Bramley, a young Toronto girl, appeared at a track meet as an unknown and immediately put one of the jump records into the discard. Rosa Grosse and Fanny Rosen feldt, Toronto runners, equalled and shattered worlds' records on the cinder path.

So it goes and, according to indications, will continue to go. There must be a reason for all this. Athletes, observers of athletes and medical men interested in athletics have a variety of theories, reasons and explanations. Some of them still hold that women should not indulge in strenuous activities such as softball. Others are hurrah-ing for the free woman. But that is not the point at issue.

"Since the war," says one man, "women all over the world have been breaking into athletic competitions of one sort and another. Canadian girls have simply done what the rest are doing. Why the women of the world have suddenly decided to do strenuous things is a matter for the professors to think about in the long winter evenings. But everybody is doing it and that explains why Canadian girls have developed the

"Personally, I think the ancient belief that men are, naturally and simply because they are men, superior to women in every line of sport is a creed which is based on fact as much as the yarns of Baron Munchausen. There seems nothing to support it except the fact that women have never had, until recently, an opportunity to compete with men."

Have the Enthusiasm

BUSINESS man, interested in both ath-A letics and psychology, advances the theory that women are naturally much more enthusiastic than men and have just as good, if not better, powers of enthusiasm. They enter into sports with all their natural eagerness and, in addition, to show the mere male that they are at least on a par with him. This, says the acute observer, spurs them on to unusual effort. He feels that when, in the course of time, the novelty of men and women competing against each other athletically has worn off and this type of contest becomes an accepted thing, women's athletics will suffer a certain slump and the records which are now being regularly wrecked will remain stationary for a time.

These, of course, are his own personal opinions. But what about the purely Canadian angle of the matter? How is it that the young ladies of the whole dominion, not any one province or part of it, have so rapidly earned so much respect for their prowess?

A physical-cultural doctor has a theory for that, too. "It's the country," he says, "and it's the climate. The Scandinavians owe their ability at sports to a great extent to their country and their climate. If their geography and their weather can produce a Nurmi, there is no reason why the Canadian geography and the Canadian weather can't produce a Canadian lady

Bernard Shaw and Hilaire Belloc Try to Peep Into the Dim Future

D ERNARD SHAW, the British dramatist, and Hilaire Belloc recently staged a debate for charity on the subject: "What Is Coming?" The theatre which had been chosen as the orators' arena proved much too small to hold the mob and the chairman observed that if he had known, in advance, how notorious the two speakers were he would have made arrangements to hire the stadium at Wembley.

Mr. Shaw was very serious. He discussed William Jennings Bryan, the human soul and the church. He believes in the future, believes that there is something different in store for us and something higher. He makes no bones of the fact that he is an evolutionist and glories

As far as Mr. Belloc is concerned, the future is inscrutable. He declares that no man can tell what is coming. He is not certain that it would be wise to know. Mr. Belloc, in short, was his humorous self.

The debate was brilliant, but it was also long, so that it is only possible to list some of the high points of each address:

HILAIRE BELLOC

JOU have no idea what the world is going to be like in 50, 100 or 200 years' time. You do not know what you yourself will be like in a few hours now. Something may happen to one.

It is very curious that of the many things thing that does not.

Whatever is coming is not what you think Mr. Shaw has called up the picture of some-beer and wine, anything may come. If we could guess at the future, I take it there are three things which most men and a great many women would like to know. First: "What is going to win the Derby next year?" Second: "When are we going to die?" Third: What will the weather be on a particular day?"

Let me assure you that to know any one of those things would lead you to misfortune.

What Canada Requires Is a Lot of Insomnia

Experts Insist That We Sleep Too Much -Edison and Napoleon Thought

Three Hours Enough

XPERTS have decided that most of us do too much sheeping. Sir John Sinclair, famous British scientist, has lately issued a public manifesto against super-somnolence. Too much sleep, Sir John insists, blunts the senses and weakens mind and body. Other English authorities agree with him, holding that eight hours should be the maximum. Edison and Napoleon are two famous figures who would no doubt agree with Sir John and his co-workers. Napoleon, according to the histories, slept about three hours a night and before the battle of Eyelau did no sleeping for forty-eight hours. Edison is like MacBeth. He seems to have hours a night is ample.

"Sleep," he once said, "is a bad habit. For practically twenty years I slept on a bench with my clothes on. My workmen were forced to follow my example. For the first four or five days they suffered. Afterwards they felt so fine that when they were ordered to knock off work they kept on for nothing- merely to enjoy the physical exaltation."

"Life is too short for sleep. It takes me one minute to undress at night, forty seconds to fall asleep and two minutes to dress in the morning. That is living so that time gets in no innings.' Kant, the German philosopher, was another great man who scoffed at slumber. Frederick the Great required only five hours less in summer. Dr. John S. Walsh, in his book, "Yours for Sleep," says that while it is well to emulate good example, the example of prominent men is not to be followed without question.

One man's meat is another man's poison. Because Edison can work brilliantly on a few hours' sleep, it does not follow that everyone can do it. Temperamental difference, habit, circumstances explain why so little sleep suffices for these men. "As a rule," Dr. Walsh announces, "adults require from seven to eight hours of sleep out of every 24. Women can do with less sleep than men. In old age less sleep is required. In cold climates more sleep is required than in warm climates. "There is a popular idea that sleep before midnight tends to favor the development of beauty. All sleep is beauty-giving, save excessive and unnatural sleep. There is no reason why sleep before midnight should be more beauty-giving than sleep obtained at other times -nor is it."

NOTICE SLIGHTLY AMENDED

THERE is a grim humor about the story told recently by Mr. Chauncey Depew, the American statesman, at a dinner of the New York Bankers' Association.

It concerned a certain bank president in Arizona, who made away with all the money under his charge, and then posted on the door of the institution: "Bank suspended."

That night he was interviewed by several angry depositors, who dealt with him in approved western fashion, and then amended the notice to: "Bank president suspended."

SIDELIGHTS ON PEOPLE NOW IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Nova Scotia's 83-Year-Young Man-Princess Mary Expert at Spotting Bad Eggs

FEW days ago, the Canadian press chronicled the fact that one of the most forceful and vigorous speeches ever delivered in the Canadian senate had just been delivered by Hon. William Roche of Halifax.

Hon. Mr. Roche is remarkable among the dominion's public men. Observing observers on Parliament Hill expect him to play a prominent part in this country's life for another decade though he has now passed his 83rd birthday.

He is one of the two Nova Scotia senators on the Liberal side and his political career has been a strenuous one. He is the only man who ever defeated Sir Robert Borden in an election, accomplishing this feat in 1904. He himself has served 37 years, 14 years in the Nova Scotia legislature, eight years in the Dominion House of Commons and 15 years in the senate. He has suffered only one defeat and that one at the hands of a very worthy political adversary, Sir Robert Borden once more. This was in 1908. His business career has been as strenuous as his political one. He made a fortune coaling steamers, going out after business in a small boat and all kinds of weather. A competitor who once imagined he had slipped in ahead of him, arrived on the Norwegian tramp which was his objective one stormy night to find that the future senator had already completed arrangements and was taking a nap on board.

Senator Roche is a widely read man with an astounding vocabulary. The voters in his constituency used to gather in mobs to hear him handle the choicest selections from the standard dictionary.

On one occasion, an Irish hack-driver named Pat Flemming was interpreting Mr. Roche's jaw-breakers for the benefit of a crowd of workingmen in the north end of Halifax.

"Sir Charles Tupper is illogical," said the orator. "He has not established his major premise." "Who's that major premise, Pat?" one of the puzzled ones asked the oracle. "Oh that's one of them-military up at Ottawa," was Patrick's ready reply.

PRINCESS MARY'S knowledge of domestic duties is amazing. She recently scored 100 per cent. in an examination for housewives to which she voluntarily submitted.

She proved herself, the reports say, absolutely perfect at spotting a bad egg.

HAJJ TAHIR, born in Mecca and now living in Palestine is the latest claimant for freak fame. Haji claims to be the only person now living who has ever seen Napoleon. He himself claims to be 140 years old, though other experts declare he is only a mere 124 years. Hajj, of course, disputes this vigorously.

He is sound in wind and limb, has an enermous appetite and, strangest of all, an indienutable power of mastication with the aid of what, he asserts, is a newly sprouting, but still invisible third set of teeth.

The only weakness in his claim is the fact that that his children give no relevant evidence of his age. He states that he committed matrimony for the first time at the age of 70 and recently married again.

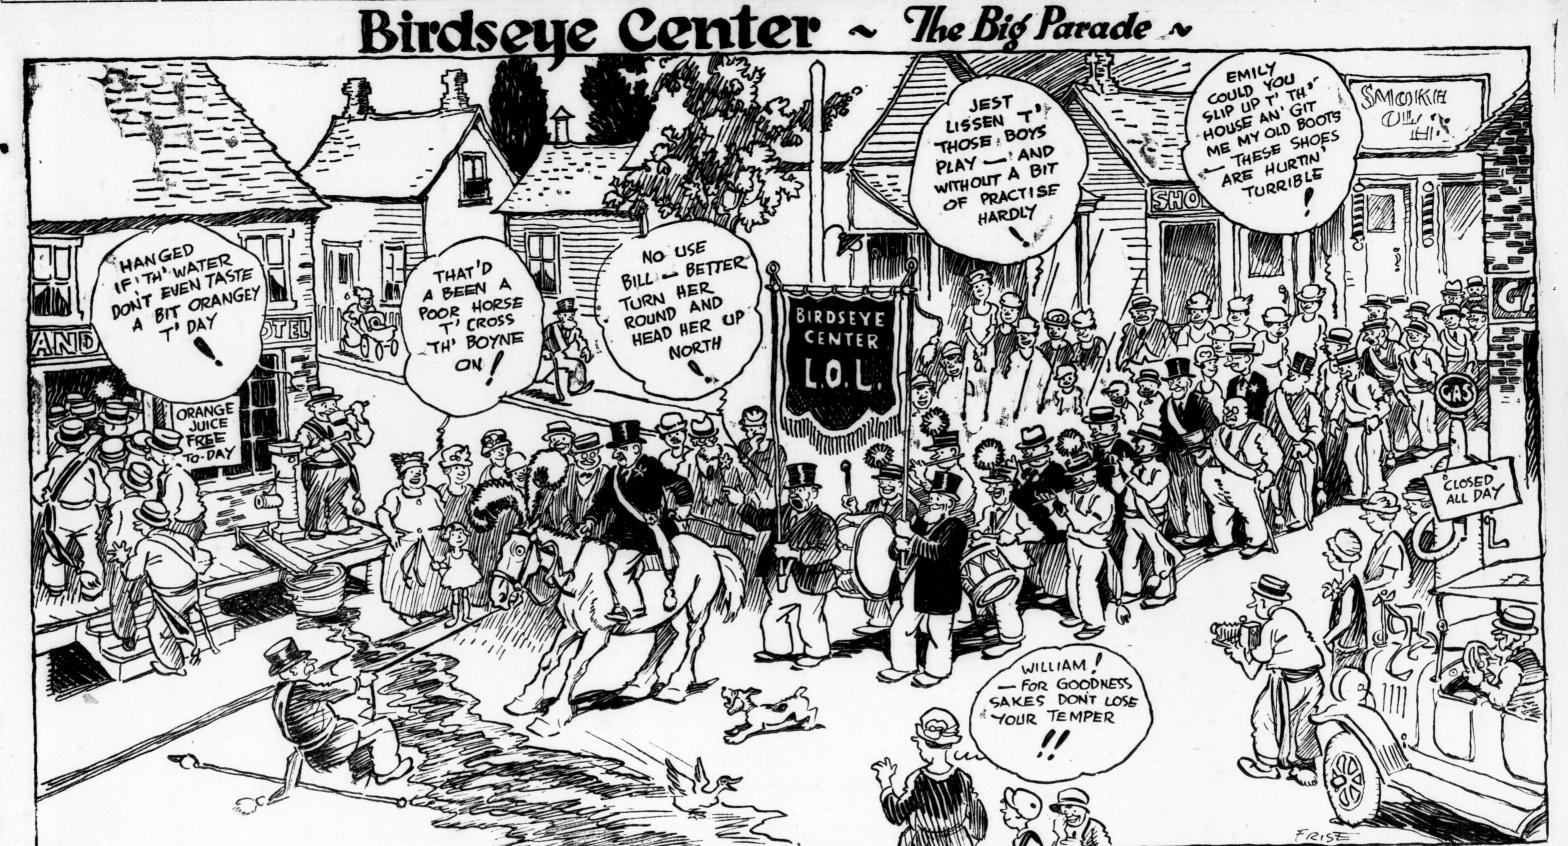

Just what a man of 140 means by "recently" is still another matter to be decided.

SEVEN hundred Canadian and American doctors visiting in London were recently told, in no uncertain terms, that they should cam-

Twelve Types of Women; Style For Every Type

Women who are particular about their apparel know that the terms "regular" and "stout" do not take into consideration ALL of the differences between types.

Style authorities tell us that there are twelve distinct types of women, and they have evolve certain comprehensive rules for the color, pattern and accessories that are best suited to

They know, for instance, that a Junoesque figure cannot dress in the same colorful, carefree manner as the Dolly Vardens; that the athletic woman will assuredly not be at ease in the garb of butterfly. Their designers, therefore, have created styles to fit personalities, and all types of nt personanties, and all types of women may now be outfitted in apparel that becomes them—and consequently invests them with added poise ease of manner and a sense of "looking their best."

It's really easy to find just the sort of clothes you should buy. London's apparel shops and department stores have taken thought for all types of women -for all occasions.

The variety and beauty of their summer stocks are reflected in their advertising these days. Here you will find the first glad hats, shoes, lingerie, hosiery and other charming accessories which are indispensable. Here you will also find the first news of price concessions which

Both Teams Booted, But Tecs' Punts Proved Most Costly.

BROWER HITS

Special to The Advertiser.
Hamilton, July 10.—The Clippers walloped Mike Baker's London Tecumsehs

loped Mike Baker's London Tecumsehs again, making it two straight, and once again they proved the better ball club. This time the count was 10 to 7, a battle that was decided by base hits and errors, both cropping up before the fans frequently.

Two "Lefties." Carmen and Harris, tossed in their gloves in mortal combat. The London star spotted the eccentric southpaw of the Wetzel tribe a little in height and weight, plus a repuitation of having lost only three games this season, but this advantage meant little in Carmen's young life. The latter had his bad sessions, as did Harris, but Carmen's were not quite as frequent as those of Harris, and the locals played better ball in the field than the Tecs did. Carmen's generosity cost him a run to open the game. In the first frame Manager Baker started the visitors off with a single through short. Vermilyea helped him up a peg and Stimpson walked. Cross fanned, but Baker scored when Riley and Duckworth got tangled up on Brower's short lift to right center.

Wallaceburg, July 10.—The men of Wallaceburg Tennis club journeyed to Bothwell this afternoon and took part in their last game of the series in a Western Ontario league game. After an unbeaten record for the season, the visitors lost their first game, which, hewever, will not affect their standing as semi-finalists.
The results were as follows:

Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the "Norse" girl, won a hard struggle the other day after being practically beaten. She'll soon be known as the "American" star if she keeps on winning.

However, there is still time left for Mike Baker to get out an injunction restraining the Hams from playing Knotty Lee's Colts.

INFANCY OR DOTAGE?

Bill Marsden, famous Aura Lee hockey coach, now a resident of London, and incidentally a lover and keen student of baseball, is one of those who have neglected baseball, somewhat, for softball, and since coming here has gone further than that by undertaking the coaching

The late Squire Ebbets of Brooklyn will be chiefly remembered in the history of baseball as the originator of the prophetic sentence, "Baseball is still in its infancy." Squire Ebbets made this statement to brief shrinkage in popularity, and the Squire with many debts hanging magnates at that particular time. However, shortly after the Squire Crowds outstripped accommodation, and the present huge stadiums in nates who did not build in proportion to his own optimistic beliefs, and was many times afterwards torn with pangs of remorse as crowds

Bill Marsden, during a discussion of softball the other night, unconsciously made use of the same expression Squire Ebbetts had used. "Softball is still in its infancy," quoth Bill.

It's not good news for those who were hoping that softball was in its dotage instead, if Marsden, who is a keen judge of men and things

However, prophecies may be like lightning, they may not hit twice

It is far from a forlorn hope Supervisor Goodman of the playgrounds leads into Toronto Stadium this afternoon, where the trials

In track and field, consistency of form is usually to be expected, but one of the lures of this sport is that apparent mediocrity may flame matter of split seconds between stardom and mediocrity on the track, even with men after years of training. Girl track athletes have not yet been developed to the point where their consistency may be counted upon with any certainty, and especially should this be so under the stress of actual competition.

THE MARGIN.

Looking back over the first series of the M.-O., about all that separated Hamilton, Bay City and London was the failure of several of Mike's pitchers to come through with wins, and the fact that Hamilton exercised such a complete jinx over Knotty Lee's Colts. As a matter of fact, Bay City Wolves' position on the second rung at the end of the first lap was directly traceable to the games they took from the Colts. The Colts may have been doormats for every other team, but they were hurdles for the Tecs. Neither Fields nor Delman came through with the wins expected of them. Both lost several tough luck games that had nothing to do with their pitching, early in the season, Delman especially having bad luck, losing some of the toughest of those one-run margins by which the Tecs lost fifteen games.

Delman started off badly on the second lap, but should come through regularly from now on. Fields, after two trips to Battle Creek, showed plenty of stuff in the portion he pitched against the Wolves Wednes-His offerings looked as fat as ever, but the Wolves weren't hitting them. Fields throws much the same sort of ball which big Herman Schwartje used and which he is still using to good effect in the International. In fact. Fields' offerings never looked quite as plump as did Schwartje's when he, with his funny delivery, was the Jinxes undoubtedly do pursue pitchers. They have their years. The majors offer plenty of examples of the in and out performances of hurlers. There is Luque, Donahue, Waite Hoyt and a host of others who have burst forth one season only to burn away to a dull glow the next. The Mathewsons, Johnsons and McGinnitys will always be singular when it comes to baseball history.

Pete Harris affords a very good example. Harris had a fair year before he came to London last season. The first two games he pitched, he was knocked off by Saginaw, a rookie single-handed being Pete's undoing. The rookie was a flame-colored morning glory if there ever was one, but folded up tight and was out of the league three weeks after the season opened when his pronounced weakness against inside halls flashed around, as it does in an unbelievably short space of time amongst the hurlers. Harris got off to a bad start, and the breaks didn't improve. This year Harris looks like another man entirely, though it is doubtful if he has any more stuff than he had last year Several of the games he has lost have been full of the same sort of breaks which wouldn't let him get started at all last year. * * * *

TOO TRICKY.

The peculiar playing of Joe Kirkwood, the famous trick shotster of golf, in various important tournaments abroad once more brings up the question as to why this expert, who has extraordinary wizardry with his clubs, is unable to win an important tournament,

Kirkwood can do almost anything he wants to. He sends his ball straight down the fairway, hooks, slices, at will. He can do the most mystifying things with his putter. He can do so many things with a golf ball that no one else can do that one cannot help thinking here i a man who ought to win everything. There can't possibly be a situation Furthermore, Kirkwood seems to have a splendid temperament. He is big and strong and gets his ball away with heft and style. He ought Why doesn't Kirkwood win easily? He himself explains that he has been playing the game since he was knee high to a kangaroo in his native Australia, but that there is a very excellent reason why he isn't a tournament winner. In an interview quoted in the Professional "Golfers watch my exhibition of trick shots and go away wondering how it can be possible to play the different shots as I do in practice. or rather in exhibition, and not make a birdle on every hole in competition. Look at my side of it. I have practiced trick shots since I was a youngster in Australia. For performing tricks there is everything in having the stage set; I am able to employ every outside means will observe, for instance, that I always make my tee, and one cannot do this playing through the fairway. This is a big advantage Another important fact that the gallery fails to consider is that I am never aiming for a particular object. When I call out that this will be a hook or a slice, I just let fly down the fairway, never caring where it finishes so long as I make the shot correctly as I call it. "We can all do wonders in practice, do everything perhaps but the one big thing in golf, and that is winning a championship. No one yet has been able to perfect his game to such an extent that he can make sure of this. When I play an exhibition there is no one opposing me; but when I play in a championship two or three hundred other golfers are just as anxious to win as I am. Winning a big championship will never be easy, in fact I am sure that it becomes more difficult every City Baseball Assured of Development If League Is Success.

STARTS ON MONDAY

The civic playgrounds' bantam baseball series will get under way next Monday with the official opening at Thames park. The ceremonies will find three officials of the public utilities commission the principal figures. Philip Pocock, chairman of the playgrounds committee will do the huring. R. J. Webster, commissioner, will try the catching duties, and E. V. Buchanan, manager of the P. U. C., will do the slugging.

slugging.

The new venture of the local playgrounds, originated by Chief Supervisor Gerald N. Goodman, finds four teams in the field, namely, Tecumseh, Thames, Birketts and Queens. Hamilton 10, London 7.
Bay City 12, Kitchener 9.
Saglnaw 5, Flint 4 (10 inn.)
Games Today. Birketts and Queens.

The move was brought about in the first place by the fear that baseball was being confined to the older groups and development of material for seasons to come was seen as necessary. Bantam ball should be the remedy, and if the movement is to be carried through it needs support. However, the general conclusion has been reached by enthusiasts that the new idea will swell into real thing and that backing will not be lacking.

The following is the schedule of the league as announced last night:

The Ontario Hospital club are feel very disappointed as a letter was received from the Philadelphia club yesterday to the effect that they found it impossible to tour Canada this year. However, better luck next time.

The inter-league game against Toronto and district is scheduled for next Wednesday on the north lawn of the varsity campus, commencing at 12 o'clock daylight saving time. The team of the S. W. O. C. L. will be published later

St. Georges gave the Oxford club a fright last Saturday running them as close as 4 runs.

The game at the hospital against Detroit was a very interesting one. It is a pity that we haven't a bowler of Hedge's type in this league. Even in cricket there are some players who like to see their names in big print when they make a good score, but hate to see the fact that they collected duck eggs published.

Both Buying and Selling Light, But Undertone Is Strong.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, July 10.—For the major part of the session, the wheat market here today was strong and firm, gaining about 1c over the previous close, but lack of buying power during the last hour induced large fluctuations. October being 1%c down at $1.31%, and December at a decline of 1%c at $1.28%.

Trade generally throughout the day was light, both on the buying and seliwas light, both on the buying and sell-ling side, but the undertone was firm. There was little export business re-cast Iron Pipe. Ing side, but the undertone was firm. There was little export business reported, although exporters took a little July wheat early. There was also considerable spreading, buying December and selling October, and buying October futures against sales at Chicago It was largely a scalping market amongst the trade, with the outside public showing no interest. The coarse grain markets followed the trend of wheat, and all closed lower with trade every limited. There was very little change in cash wheat and coarse grains, with offerings light, and trade continued to be a carlot proposition.

A dozen large loads of cabbage, six all the way from Leamington, caused cabbages to drop from $1 to 50 cents a dozen. Oats are easier, while hay remains more or less scarce.

Raspberries are now in full swing, with next week the logical time for canning. The price today ranged from 23 to 25 cents a box wholesale, and 26 to 27 cents retail.

Red currants sold from 12½ to 15 cents a box, and black currants 25 to 30 cents. The crop this year is not large, owing to spring frosts.

Strawberries are about over, selling from 21 to 25 cents, depending on quality. Gooseberries bring 15 cents a box, with the demand only fair.

Eggs and butter showed slight advances. Prices may be found in the table below.

Cherries were plentiful, with next week seeing the heaviest supplies. The hot weather has ripened the cherries rapidly and the majority will be marketed next week, growers state. Prices ranged from 65 cents to $1.25, the latter price being for black cherries.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

New York, July 11 .- Lower money rates and favorable trade news provided Easier Price Trend Evident
On Moderately Active Exchange.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, July 10.—Trading on the local stock exchange today was moderately active, with an easier price trend in evidence, which was partly attributable to movements at New York, where the market was irregular. Many Canadian stocks, which had been strong at the groundwork for another advance in prices in this week's stock market, although heavy profit-taking cheeked the upward trend in the closing days of the week. Pool activities were on a large scale, particularly among specialities whose current earnings give promise of increased dividend disbursements before the end of the year. Sporadic hear selling failed to bring out much long stock.

Steels held failty firm, with buying influenced by the predictions of weekly trade reviews that summer business would run well above that of last year, and a stiffening price tendency in sebthe groundwork for another advance in eral steel products.

Publication of the monthly tonnage report of the United States Steel Corporation showing another drop of nearly 340,000 tons in unfilled orders, was somewhat of a disappointment, as Wall street had looked for a decrease of not over 300,000 tons.

Coppers responded to the rising red metal prices, and reports of an increased European demand. American Smelting sold at the highest price in eight years, and several others sold around the year's best levels. Sugars, however, sold off when raw and refined prices were marked down. There was a good investment demand for the high grade rails and special for the high grade rails and special accumulation of some of the low-priced shares on expectations of favorable June earnings statements and hopes of

Low Lake Level Is Child Menace

Special to The Advertiser.
Sarnia, July 10.—A new menace has risen on the shores of the St.
Clair river, in the opinion of some who have reviewed the fatal accidents of the week-end, which cost five lives by drowning. The theory is that the extraordinary low level has brought the deep and dangerous channel much closer to the banks. Where once a dozen yards or so of safe bath-ing might separate the shore line and the channel, there are now only a few feet, and youngsters who pride themselves on knowing the river well might wade into the channel without realizing it.

In previous despatches it has been suggested that October appeared to be the most likely month for holding it. Nothing has occurred to discredit that probability. On the contrary, information available points to the present likelihood of ballots being marked about the middle of October, perhaps the 12th or the 19th.

Nature's Warnings

Danger Signals That Everyone Should Take Seriously. Pain is one of Nature's warnings

that something is wrong with the body. Indigestion, for instance, is PRAISED FOR WORK DONE
The local committee in charge of e English picnic scheduled for Port the nerves or stomach are out of order. In some ailments, such as anaemia, pain is not so prominent. In this case Nature's warning take the form of pallor, breathlessness after slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, and loss of appetite. What-ever form these warnings take, wise people will not ignore the fact that many diseases have their origin in poor blood, and that when the blood is enriched the trouble disappears. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are most helpful in such cases because they purify and build up the blood to its normal strength. In this way it tones up the nerves, restores the appetite and gives perfect health. Miss Hazel Berndt, of Arnprior, Ont., has proved the great value of this medicine, and says: "I am a young girl and hav-been working in a factory for the past four years. For two years I had past four years. For two years I had been in such poor health that at times I could not work. I was thin and pale, and troubled with headaches and fainting spells. I doctored nearly all this time, but it did not help me. My mother advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using them for a while I could notice an improvement in my condition. I used nine boxes and can truthfully say nine boxes and can truthfully say began taking the pills I weighed 97 pounds, and now I weigh 114. I feel that I owe my good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and hope other alling people will give them a fai You can get these pills through any

The most charming array of children's clothes and accessories, something for them all. from the latest arrival-that charming baby with his big blue eyes-to the madcap of ten who is the pride and terror of the family. And I fervently said with the poet, "Oh mother, make me a child again just for tonight."

It seems children's styles progress along with mother's, and in one of the latest issues of the "Breath of the Avenue" I notice that the New York shops as well as Paris are sponsoring the "matching costume note for children"-that is dressing two children alike or using the same dresses in different colors, and when wee brother goes walking or on a trip with his sisters, they wear the same coats. only brother's is more mannishly cut and tailored, while sisters' are brightened with touches of embroidery.

I think the idea is quite clever and new, and could be worked out so easily-anyone in the Children's Department on either the second or fourth floors would be willing to give you any suggestions-and you know I am always at your service, too!
