FERGUSON-COON

The home of Mr and Mrs S. A. Coon of Athens was the scene of a yery pretty wedding on September the sixth seven p.m., when their eldest daughter Ella Nora was united in marriage to Melzer E. Ferguson of Rockport. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. F. A. Reed in the resence of a large number of relatives.

The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion. The bride was given away by her father, and was attired in a beautiful gown of cream taffeta with pearl and lace trimmings, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley. Her travelling suit was of receda with black beaver hat trimmed to match.

After the ceremony, congratulations ere offered and the guests were invited to a sumptuous repast. Among the many valuable gifts received by the bride were two substancial cheques. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch fob, and to the pianist Miss Ida Ferguson, a signet ring The happy young couple left about ten o'clock for Brockville in an auto, thence by the 11.15 train to Toronto, Niagara, and other western points. On their return to Rockport, their future home will be in readiness for their reception. They are followed by the best wishes of many friends.

GRAHAM-TENNANT

A very pretty house wedding took lace at the home of Mrs Nancy Tennant, Caintown, on Thursday, August hant, Caincown, on Thursday, August 31st, at 10 a.m., when her youngest daughter, Miss Emma Lena, was united in holy matrimony with Mr Robert Radie Graham, B.A., B.Sc. instructor in the Agricultural College Chalab.

The bride, who was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr Knowlton, of Athens, and the couple, each unattended, stood under an arch of wild autumn flowers in the parlor, and after the ceremony, performed by the Rev. L. H. Fisher, minister of the Caintown Methodist church, received the congratulations of the relatives and inimate frands present.

A very tasty wedding luncheon was served in the dining room, after which Mr Thos. Tennant and Mr W. R. Graham, Lanzdowne, brothers of the bride and groom, and the officiating minister made congratulatory remarks and wished the newly-married couple joy

Mr and Mrs Graham left on the afternoon train for Guelph. They were the recipients of many present in cut glass and solid silver, all bear high esteem in which they were held among their numerous friends.

The wedding gown was of white duchers satin, trimmed with seed pearls and crystal trimming, and the bride wore a dull gold bracelet, the gift of the groom. Her going away costume was of brown chiffon broadcloth with hat to match.

A PARTING HONOR

On Tuesday evening a number of friends of Miss Gertrude Young waited upon her at her home and presented her with an ebony mounted toilet set and a gold.mounted fountain pen, together with the following address:-

Dear Miss Young,—Having learned of your intention of removing to another town to pursue a course of study which will quality you for a greater sphere of usefulness, we feel that we cannot allow this occasion to pass without expressing our appreciation of the faithful and efficient service your native town, especially in the League, Sabbath School and Choir.

LESSON XII.—SEPT. 17, 1911.

Daniel's Companions in the Fiery Furnace.-Dan. 3: 1-30.

Commentary.-I. A Royal Decree Disregarded (vs. 1-2). It is probable that the time of Nebuchadnezzar's erection of the great image nere mentioned was upon his return from the conquest of Western Asia and Egypt, and his purpose was to celebrate his great victories. It is likely that the king thought that a public act of this kind would unify the various peoples of his world-empire since all would do reverence to the same God. The image erected was ninety feet high and nine feet in width, but this may be supposed to include a pedestal from thirty to forty feet in height. The Colosus of Rhodes was fifteen feet high-Rhodes was fifteen feet higher than this image, and the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor is three of Liberty in New York harbor is three hundred and six feet high, including the pedestal. Nebuchadnezzar's image was in all probability a representation of the chief god of Babylon, Bel-Merdo dach, but it may have been an image of the king himself. The image was of gold, that is, covered with gold, for it a gearest to have representations. is scarcely to be supposed that it was of solid gold, since it has been estimated that an image of that size would conprecious metal. Some have fixed the site of the image at a point six or seven miles below Babylon where there is a solid structure, which may have been the pedestal of the image. Strict orders were sent to all the officers of the kingdom to be present at the dedication of the image, and all the people, of whatever language, were commanded to fall down to worship it. If any failed to comply they were to be burned II. A Courageous Answer (vs. 13-18)

13. rage and fury—The hasty temper of the Oriental is proverbial. The king failed to consider the excellence of the men at whom he was enraged. Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego—The Hebrews who had received special training for the king's service, and who had refrained from defiling themselves with the king's meat and wine (Dan. 1:8). The absence of Daniel from this narrative is variously explained. He may have been on government business in some remote part of the kingdom. Perhaps he was in such a high position that he was not included in the king's decree. It may be that although he was present and failed to bow the knee, no one reported him, his three companions being the chief objects of the people's envy. 14. is it true—Can it be possible that any in my kingdom, and especially army any in my kingdom, and capeaus, officers, do not heed my decree when such fearful punishment as burning is such fearful punishment as burning is the penalty for non-compliance? 15. if ye be ready—The kind desired to spare them and offered them another oppor-tunity, correct—A horn, flute—A wind instrument made of reeds, sackbut—A four-stringed instrument having a sharp, clear tone—Keil nsaltery—An instruear tone.—Keil, psaltery—An instru-ent like our lyre, dulcimer—A sort of agpipe, burning fiery furnace—A form bagpipe. burning fiery furnace—A form of punishment peculiar to the Babylonians, who is that God—"Who is that God?"—R. There was no anxiety on their part in this matter, in fact, their conduct had already indicated the course they would pursue. 17. if it be so, our God . . . is able to deliver us—The Hebrews were certain that, if the king's threat was certain that, if the king's threat was carried out and they were cast into the burning, fiery furnace, God was able to deliver them even from that. They were assured that the king would have no power over them as against Jehovah's power. They were perfectly secure in God's hands. 18. but if not—Even if God should not see fit to deliver them. we will not ... worship the golden image

The command implied that the furnace should be made as hot as possible. This should be made as not as possible. This order showed that the king was "full of fury." There was plenty of fuel at hand, as wood and pitch, to carry out the order. 20. Mighty men—Either men of high rank or men possessed of great strength. 21. as well as the politics of the empire. Since many nations had been compelled to submit to him, he resolved that they should also worship his god. Viewed in the light of divine law, this proclamation was most tyrannical. It was a violent outrage on the most sacred violet. lent outrage on the most sacred rights of human beings. By it Nebuchadnezzar constituted himself supreme dictator in religion to his whole realm. In so doing he attempted to propagate religion by force, making "might the standard of right." That was religious intolerance. That Oriental despot was then in the zenith of his glory. He was the acknowledged master of the world. The compand of artheritantly and the standard was the acknowledged master of the world.

mand of authority could not tempt the three Hebrews to sin. They did not court martyrdom, but they were pre-pared for it. Nebuchadnezzar was obliged o recognize their right to religious lib erty or at once suppress them. How little qualified was such a man to rule mighty nations woh had no rule over his own spirit! That worm of the earth set himself in competition with Jehovah. set nimself in competition with Jenovan.

In his haughtiness and bigotry he added rudeness and insolence to idolatry and challenged the neight of the God of Israel. With the Hebrews their duty to God was stronger than their grati-tude to the king, Their first considers tion was not their prospects, but their duty. They made religion a personal duty. thing. They put eternal things before tempore. They were not mere Israelites in name. Their piety was more than an inheritance. They believed in God, in the truths which he had revealed to them, and in the moral responsibilities He had placed upon them. They were worshippers of God in a heathen land. Their decision was absolute, because their duty was plain. They

a small number to appear for the Lord God of Israel in opposition to the idol-atry of the king and the court and the empire of Habylon. Their faith was not apeculative, but real. It dominated their ives and secured their glad service. 11. Martyrdom or surrender to com-The three Hehrawa resisted sin, but did not rebel against the king's penalty. As men of principle, they did not depend upon being understood, but upon their knowledge of duty. Their great moral courage was born of great convictions. They preferred suffering to sin. They preferred martyrdom rather than the disapproval of God. Firm and decided for Jehovah, the three Hebrews approached the eventful spot. If the example of those noble young men at that crisis had been warting how and that crisis had been wanting, how would have been the consequences! As God's providence called for martyrs, He gave them grace. They believed that God would make all things work to-gether for their good. Before an as-sembled multitude they were called to combat the confederated powers of darkess and to vindicate the insulted ma jesty of Jehovah. There was seen the contrast between spiritual and human

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS. Trust. "We are not careful to answer thee in this matter" (v. 16.) These Hebrews did not offer to compromise. Parleying with sin would be fatal. They did not argue. They could not be moved from their purpose. They did not complain nor remonstrate nor seek a rever sal of the decision. They saw the king was determined. They did not seek to justify themselves. Their standpoint would not be clearly seen by the king. An enraged heathen monarch could not understand how absolute to them was God's command, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image .. thou shalt not bow down" (Exod. 20: 4, 5). They were not careful to answer. God would do that for them when the emergency came. "But if not .. we will not" (v. 18.) They would be true to God regardless of consequences. The proconsul said to Cyprian, "The emperor com-mends thre to sacrifice." "I am a Christian," was the resolute reply, "and I can not sacrifice to your gods! do therefore what you are commanded." Cyprian has had many illustrious folwers in his determination to be true o his God in the face of death and maidens of tender years, men and women mature and thoughtful, and those far advanced in age have chosen to die martyrs' deaths rather than to dishonor God.

Presence of God. "The asp of the fourth is like a son of the gods" v. 25. R. V.) Whether the furnace be kindled by secret hate, or open persecution, or bitter oppression, or fierce temptation, or physicail pain, or temporal loss, or sore bereavement, the form of the fourth is always present, for the promise is fulfilled, "I will be with him in trou-ble" (Psa. 91: 15.) The proverb, "Troubles never come single, is true. Mark Guy Pearse says. "Every trouble brings God with it. When the child is well. mother bids the nurse take care of the little one; keep it out of the winds, and find the sunny path, and avoid the perils of crowded street; but when the cheek is flushed, the head drops, the eyes are heavy, the hot breaths come and go quickly, then the little one can find no rest but in the mother's arms, and in the sound of her voice and her gentle touch. "I will be with the little one to-night, says the mother. Even so tender and pitiful is our God, I will be with him in trouble.' Angels may minster in a thousand gracious ways, trouble makes us so sacred that God himself comes then to soothe and cheer

HOW HE SWAM

It Was Burgess' Sixteenth Attempt to Cross.

Swimmer Tells of His Experience in the Sea.

Bitten by Jelly Fish---Sick and Nearly Gave Up.

Deal, England, Sept. 11.-After a lapse of thirty-six years, as already wired. Captain Matthew Webb's feat of swimming the English Channel has been duplicated by William T. Burgess, a Yorkshireman by birth and a natural-It was Burgess' six ized Frenchman. teenth attempt, he having first essayed the task in 1904.

Burgess started from South Fore-land, Dover, at 11.15 o'clock on Tues-day morning. He landed at Le Chate-let, a little village two miles east of Cape Gris Nez, at 9.50 e'clock this morning, accomplishing the passage in 22 hours and 35 minutes. A motor boat accompanied the swimmer, and it is estimated that Burgess, owing to the zigzag course he was compelled to take of the baffling tides, covered es. The distance on a straight line is 20 miles.

Soon after the start a dense fog settled down over the channel and no further tidings of his progress were received until the ann plished the task and landed on the French soil.

Throughout the trip Burgess was fav ored by a calm sea, but a strong tide was running and a severe strain was put on the swimmer to get past the Goodwin Sands. Twice he was attacked by sickness and several times was only held to his task by the strongest will power and the encouraging words of the men in the boat. He remained on French soil just long enough to tele-graph word of his success to his wife and partake of refreshments in a bathing suit. Then he returned by motor boat—to rest and sleep. When he landed at Deal this evening Burgess received a tremendous ovation and with difficulty made his way through the cheering throng to a hotel.

Speaking of his great accommissionent, he said:
"In the time the swim occupied I should have been able to cross tige channel twice, but for the adverse cur-rents. Against these I had a terrific fight and again and again came within an ace of failing. Fhen approaching Cape Gris Nez the strong outward set of currents forced me to alter my course three times. I was held up for some time, but when I had rounded the corner I found slack water and then I knew that I was assured of success. "It was just in the slack of the tide that I got in. If I had not managed it then I might have missed it and tides and two part tides to bring me

It was seven o'clock in the morning when the swimmer sighted Gris Nez semaphore. He was then two mlies to the west southwest. In the two miles it was a battle with the currents, but when Burgess got within the shelter of the cape he swam easily ashore. He stumbled for two or three steps, then walked steadily without assistance. He looked remarkably fresh considering his

Burgess' attempts have been full of disappointment. On his thirteenth try, on August 22, 1908, Burgess got within a mile and a half of the French coast when he was compelled to give up. On that occasion he had been in the water twenty-two and three-quarter hours and best all endurance records. Burthree-quarter hours gess at that time covered sixty miles, while Captain Matthew Webb, who crossed the channel from Dover to Calcovered a direct course of about Everybody seemed to be delighted at the success of Burgess, principally be-cause of his dogged determination to accomplish the feat after so many failures. His bad luck was a by-word at Dover, and it was a saying there "when Burgess starts to swim across look out for bad weather.

Webb entered the water at Dover on Webb entered the water at Dover on the afternoon of August 24, 1875. and on the following day, after swimming for 21 and three-quarter hours, he gain-ed the goal at Calais. This was Cap-tain Webb's second attempt. A few years later Captain Webb tried to swim the rapids at Niagara Falls and was never seen again until his hatwas never seen again until his battered corpse was washed ashore lower down the Falls.

MILK FOODS FOR YOUNG PIGS.

In feeding young pigs, whole milk is the best of nature's foods, but is seldom fed. In the operation of skimming the fat is removed which changes the character of the food very materially. Skim milk is rich in bone and flesh forming material, but owing to the fat being removed it is a one-sided ration, having what is known as a narrow nutritive ratio. It has a great tendency to be constipating when fed alone to young pigs. Many farmers have suffered much loss by feeding too much skimmed milk to young pigs that are up in pens where they can not get to the ground or succulent food, such as grass

The pigs usually look fat and well until some morning, when being fed, some of them will take what is commonly known as a fit and may die inside of an hour. If they do recover and the food is not changed they and their companions will show a dirty, scurvy ap-pearance on the skin about the eyes, ack of the ear and back of the shoul ders. The hair becomes curly, and the pig has a tendency to go around with his back humped up. This is owing to a deranged condition of the digestive organs. which should be remedied by giv-ing the pigs a dose of raw Knseed oil, followed by plenty of succulent food, such as roots or grass, and plenty of ex-

COLD BREEDERS.

The idea of raising chickens without the aid of artificial heat and without Mither Hen is practised somewhat "over the line." It is being tried in England, but not with much success so far. The brooders are constructed so that a cloth hangs almost on the chickens' backs, and cushions fit on 12 nes all round, like a padded counterpane. calm was gone, the tiny rippling movement was changed into gigantic rolling waves crested with white foam and dashing on to the beach in angry majesty, with a sound as of thunder. So she went away from the quiet village back to London and to life, back to duty, firm in her new-born strength and

"Ab, they are happy, milord and miladi both!" sighed Pauline to her com-puanion and fellow-traveller, the earl's valet. "She is so simple and so pretty—and they have love. Ah, monsieur, how great is that wondrous love!"

The husband and wife sat silent dur the greater part of the journey gery, resting her head against the Margery, resting cushions, sat with closed eyes. The earl thought she slept, but sleep was far from her. A vague longing seized her that she might step back into the far distant past when she knew neither the greatness of joy nor the bitterness of orrow. If she could be once more the simple-minded girl living in all content ment her peaceful village life, her stud ies the one excitement of her days! She was happier then, before she had learned the mystery of her own heart, be-fore childhood had vanished and womanhood had come in its place.

It had been Lord Court's intention to trayel with his wife straight down to Court Manor, after resting a day or two in London; but the death of his aunt, Lady Merivale, immediately on their ar rival, necessitated his presence in town, as her affairs were left in his hands. Margery at first felt disappointed at the delay, but, after a week had passed, she grew content. They had a suite of rooms at the Bristol, and, to Pauline's delight, were in the very heart of London. Horses and carriages were brought up for the Countess of Court's use during her brief stay, and the slender black-robed girl with sweet pathetic face and crown of red-gold hair, provoked universal admiration. The earl had not many near relatives; but such of his connections as were in town paid an early visit to Lady Court, and found their anicipations of dislike turn to wonder a the gracious dignity and sweetness of Margery's presence. She soon learned that her strange romantic mariage was the one topic of the moment in society, that every one was eager to see the unknown girl who had won the heart of Nugent, Earl of Court, so eligible yet so disappointing a parti. It gave Margery no pleasure to receive and return to be her husband's friends; still she forced herself to do it, as the beginning of her path of duty. Every day, as sh or her path of duty. Every day, as sne drove out, she dreaded to see those two faces whose images she could not banish from her memory; and she would shrink back in the corner of the luxurious carriage as she passed a riding party, forgetful for the minute that her own features were hidden beneath the thick black veil which, despite all Pauline's protests, she would wear, forgetful too of the fact that, were she to meet Vane Charteris and Stuart, they would never associate Margery Daw with the Counters of Court. For no mention of her name be fore her marriage had crept out. The his sister's companion for his wife, and there its information ended. Miss Law-son and Dr. Fothergill and his wife were alone in the secret, and with them it was safe. One afternoon, at the beginning of the second week of their stay in town, a trial came to Margery's pride. Lord Court was claimed by the lawyers: and, Court was claimed by the lawyers: and, after a morning spent among her books, Margery prepared for a drive and some visits. Pauline dressed the slender, graceful figure in the black garments and fastened the sable mantle while she uttered explamations of delight at her mistress, appearance. She made a slight protest as the veil was produced; but Margery was firm, and the delicate but Margery was firm, and the delicate face with its great blue eyes was com-pletely hidden beneath the thick folds. The first visit was to an old march ioness who had fallen a victim to Lady Court's charm and sweetness, and Mar-gery made great progress toward friend ship. Several ladies were present, and frome one and all she received kind congratulations.

Margery laughed softly, and put up her hand to unpin the vell, when the door opened, and a voice announced—
"Lady Charteris—Miss Charteris!"
Margery felt the blood surge in her cars and a mist rose before her eyes; she saw again the beautiful, cold, cruel creature who had spoken words that stabled her to the very heart.

She acknowledged the introduction with a slight bend of the head, then, murmuring a few words of regret and farewell, went swiftly from the room to her carriage, her breast full of stormy emotions.

"I am so sorry you did not see Lady Court; she has the face of an angel," said the hostess, as Margery disappear-ed. "She is very tall," observed Vane, in her most bored manner—"almost too tall for a woman—and she seems to have red hair. I hate red hair," she added, a vision of a sweet girlish face framed in red-gold curls rising before er as she spoke.

"Your taste, dear Vane, is always good," observed the old lady, dryly, and then the conversation drifted into other

Margery gave her orders in a quiet stifled voice, and was driven back to the hotel. The fear, the dread she had suf-fered in anticipation of this meeting was as nothing compared with the agony of tride and pain she now endured. She had thought herself strong, thought she was braced for whatever might hap-pen, and at one blow the barriers she had been building were thrown to the ground, and she was the broken-heart-ed humiliated girl once again. The sight of Vane recalled all her despair, sight of Vane recalled all her despair, and knowledge that Stuart—her love—was lest to her forever. She sat in deep thought as the carriage rolled along, and it was not till it drew up at the hotel that she woke from her meditations. Then in a moment came the memory of her position—of her husband. She was now far above such insults, and she had one who would avenge them. The first rush of agitation had

She threw off her mantle and hat and turned suddenly to the piano. In moments of great emotion music sooth-ed her—it relieved her overcharged heart.

Love and let love, and so will I; Not while I live, not though I die. Good night, good-bye!" It was a new song sent in with many others by the earl. Margery played it through, and sung the words in a low sad voice, till the passion of the music awoke a chord within her; and then, as she neared the end, her tones rang out clear and sweet through the large room.

As the echoes died away the door opened and the footman ushered in a lady. gery rose quickly, gave one look, then, with a sudden exclamation of pleasure, hastened forward and threw her eim

Miss Lawson let her remove her bonnet and cloak and push her with affectionate hand into an easy chair in the inner room, close to a blazing fire. "The world is cruel, Margery, bitter, hard," the elder woman said, with a sigh; then she added, regretfully, "I am sorry you will not disclose your secret; but you know best, dear, and I have done what I considered my duty."

"You have done as you have done so often—treated me as though I were your own child—and I thank you." "And have you not been my own?" said the elder woman with a new light of tenderness on her face. Campaign of Education Undertaken in the State of New York. The number of insane persons in hospitals in the United States on Jan. 1, 1904 (no later figures are available for the country as a whole), was not less than 150,151.

This was more than double the number in 1890, which was 74,028. From 1904 to 1910 the insane in hospitals in New York alone increased 25 per cent. It is safe to say, writes Homer Folks in the American Review of Reviews, that the insane now in hospitals in the United States number at least 200,000.

The population of Nevada and Wyo ming in 1910 together is about equal to the population of the hospitals for the insane in the United States. The total annual cost of caring for the insane in the United States is in the neighborhood of $50,000,000 a year. About one-sixth of the total expenditure of the State of New York is for the care of the insane. The New York State Charities Aid Association has outlined and is carrying into effect a movement for popular education along scientific lines by sound psychological methods as to the causes and prevention of insanity. As one fac tor in this educational movement a short leaflet has been prepared, stating in sim ple language the essential facts as to the causes of insanity so far as they are

Eczema Always Burning and Itching

Used Box of Cuticura Ointment and It Completely Disappeared.

"I have suffered from eczema for two years. The trouble began on one arm where there appeared a red spot of about a five-cent size, and it always widened, all the time itehing and burning. The first days I didn't care, but seeing that it gained in size, I tried — Ointment and — Ointment, but both without success. It was always burning and itching. Having seen in the newspaper the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies, I tried a little, and seeing that it improved, I bought a box of the Cuticura Ointment. Science in a Nutshell

An invention for perfecting the ventilizion of street cars bas just had an extended trial on an electric car here. The satisfactory working of the device caused favorable comment, both by experts and passengers. The atmosphere, even with the trial car full of passengers, some of whom were smoking, was clear and good. This innovation seems simple, and surprise is expressed that the method had not previously suggested itself. A series of cones is arranged in lin, ethe small end of one projecting into the larger open end of the succeeding cone. As the car moves a strong current goes down the first cone into the mouth of the second cone, causing vittated or foul air to enter the larger open mouth of succeeding cones and be swept on to the final outlet.

In order to make a drastic test, all other ventilating apparatuses were thoroughly stopped. Two sets of cones were then fixed at either side of the car. The clearing of smoke from a covered car (bogie type or double-decked) is the most trying test. As smoke is heavier than air the foul air will be removed more quickly than smoke.

The invention is also adaptable to railway gariages, and to workshops. The invention is also adaptable to railway gariages, and to workshops. The invention is also adaptable to railway gariages, and to workshops. The invention is also deptable to railway gariages, and to workshops. The invention is its inexpensiveness. It is said that it will ever reduce the cost of street car construction.

HIGHWAYS OF THE BIRDS. HIGHWAYS OF THE BIRDS.

A wonderful picture is presented to the imagination by Dr. Gromier's description of the gathering of the migratory Birds of France for their annual flight toward Africa. He shows that they have two great atmospheric highways which 'they pursure by preference—one leading over the Pyrenees by the principal passes into Spain, and thence to the Stratt of Gibraltar; and the other skirting the Alps and passing down the whole length of Italy. As the season advances the birds may be seen converging from western, central and Southern France toward the Pyreneean passes. Sometimes the same species, such as the chaffinch, divide into two parties, which Dr. Gromier thinks he can distinguish by the character of their songs, one taking the Spanish and the other the Italian route. Each species their songs, one taking the Spanish and the other the Italian route. Each species has its favorite way depending on the supply of the kinds of the food it pre-fers. The builfinch follows the ranges of low hills; the blackbird keeps to the vineyards, and some kinds follow the watercourses and the shore lines.

FAST LIVING FILLS ASYLUMS.

At a meeting of the Academy of Medicine in New York it was clearly brought out that many cases of insanity which are now incurable, would have been preventable if their cause had been properly followed up and attacked. Dr. Albert W. Ferris, President of the New York State Lunacy Commission, estimated that almost half the cases of insanity under close observation in the State Hospitals were the result of loose living and nervous strain.

During the last ten years, said Dr. Ferris, while the population of the State has increased 8 per cent. the number of insane has increased 104 per cent. Nearly half of these were of foreign birth, and 28 per cent, had been driven mad by alcohol and drugs.

"The crying need of the present day," said Dr. Allen Starr, "is a realization that we work too hard; that we strive too intensely; that we feel too keenly. Moderation, not excess, leads to headth. FAST LIVING FILLS ASYLUMS.

POWER FROM SEA WAVES. POWER FROM SEA WAVES.

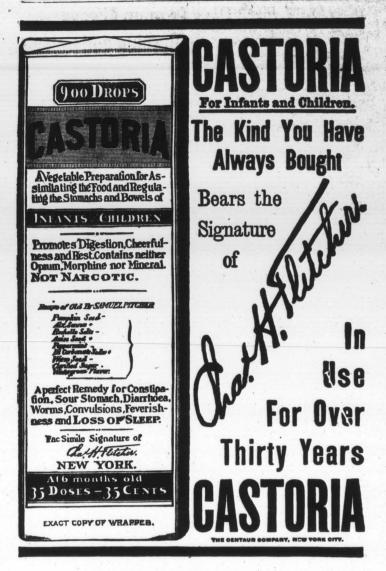

At the recent meeting of the British Association the question of economical production of power from tides and winds was again under discussion, and it has been taken up widely by scientific journals in Europe. La Revue Scientifique calls attention to a system of utilizing the power of sea waves to actuate a dynamo which has been employed during the past six months at the mouth of the River Gironde. An air chamber is connected with a well, which communicates with the sea at a depth below the livel of the lowest tides. By the advance and recession of the waves, changes of pressure are produced in the air chamber, and a system of valves enables, the resulting air-currents to be applied to rotating a kind of turbine. It is said that the apparatus works equally well in calm and in stormy weather.

Magical Future.

What will the world be like a hunited years hence?

None but a "wisard" dare raise the rurtain and disclose the scorets of the luture; and what wisard can do it with so sure a hand as Thomas A. Edison, who has wrested so many secrets from lealous nature? He alone of all men who live has the necessary courage and gift of foresight; and he has not shrunk from the venture.

Already, Edison tells us, the steam engine is emitting its last gasps. A century hence it will be as remote an antiquity as the lumbering coach of Tudor days, which took a week to travel from Yorkshire to London. In the year 2011 such railway trains as survive will be driven at incredible speeds by electricity (which will also be the motive force of all the world's machinery), generated by "hydraulic" ery), generated by "hydraulic" wheels. But the traveler of the future will largely scorn such earth-crawling. He will fly through the air, swifter than any swallow, at a speed of two hundred miles an hour, in coloseal machines which will enable him to breakfast in London, transact business in Paris, and eat his luncheon in Cheapside.

Paris, and eat his funcheon in Cheapside.

The house of the next century will be furnished from basement to attic with steel, at a sixth of the present cost—of steel so light that it will be as easy to move a sideboard as it is to-day to lift a drawing-room chair.
The baby of the twenty-first century will be rooked in a steel chair at a steel dining table; and his mother's boudoit will be sumptuously equipped with steel furnishing, converted by ounning warmishes to the semblance of rosewood, or mahogany, or any other wood her ladyship fancies.

Books of the coming century will all be printed on leaves of nickel, so light to hold that the reader can enjoy a small library in a single volume.
A book two inches thick will contain paedia Britannica." And each volume would weigh less than a pound.

Already Mr. Edison can produce a pound-weight of these nickel leaves, more flexible than paper, and ten times as durable, at a cost of five shillings. In a hundred years' time the cost will probably be reduced to a tenth.

More amazing still, this wizard sounds the death-knell of gold as a previous metal. "Gold," he says, "has even now but a few years to live; the day is near when bars of it will be a common and as cheap as bers of the day is near when bars of it will be as common and as cheap as bars of iron or blocks of steel." We are al-ready on the verge of discovering the secret of transmuting metals, which are all substantially the same in mat-ter, though "combined in different proportions." Before long it will be an easy matter to convert a truck-load of iron bars into as many bars of virgin gold.

In these magical days to come there is no reason why our great liners should not be of solid gold from stem to stern; why we should not ride in golden taxi-cabs; or substitute gold for steel in our drawing-room suites.
Only, steel will be the more durable, and thus the cheaper in the long run.
And in the world of manufacture the changes of the next hundred years will be just as revolutionary. Where we have now a score of machines, each responsible for a stage of manufacture, one will suffice.

"Before long," says Mr. Edison, without a twinkle in his eye, and certainly without his tongue in his cheek;
"we shall have a machine into one

The Rough-on-Bores Machine. Mr. Yamakava, a Japanese engineer, has rendered a great service to humanity, for he has devised a means whereby long-winded orators are "re moved" painlessly and noiselessly from the scene of their labors. The from the scene of their labors. The "rough-on-bores" apparatus consists of pipes, which, starting from every seat in a hall or Parliament house, meet under the floor of the pulpit from which the orator has to speak. At the beginning of every sitting every member, on going to his seat, receives a certain number of small lead balls; these balls are pearly at large. a certain number of small lead balls; these balls are nearly as large as a shilling piece. Now, the floor of the pulpit is fixed in such a way that it can be set free as soon as a certain number of leaden balls run down into the receiver, and the floor disappears below and takes the orator with it. As leaden ball can be put into the rips below and takes the orator with it. As a leaden ball can be put into the pipe selectly, and as it makes no noise in its course to the central receiver below the smaker, the surprise felt by the speaker, who is becoming a bore is equalled only by the delight of his long-suffering audience.

SWINDLER IS JOYOUS

To the audacity of the utterer of counterfeit coin there is no end. And with the approach of the coronation season in London, when people are apt to grow a little careless, he will be busier than ever.

Not only does this worthy sail complacently round to the shops selling small bottles of spirit—really consisting of vinegar and water—for testing counterfeit coin, but when business falls flat he turns his hand to swind-ling of other kinds.

When a man wants to pass bad money, he enters a small shop, and claks for a packet of cigarettes or some low priced article, tendering a bad two-shilling piece in payment. The passers work in threes, and never by any chance does the man who enters the shop have more than one bad coin in his possession. The object of this move is plain.

move is plain. In order that move is plain.

In order that a prosecution shall be successful it is necessary that more than one base coin shall be found on the person accused, or that there be previous convictions against him for similar offences.

repudiates it, and demands to be searched. Often the result is a protuse apology.

The counterfeit money is carried by the two confederates, who take care to beep out of sight, and it is handed piece by piece to the man who does the passing.

The actual coiner does not appear in these transactions at all. He pursues his evil trade in the night watches so that no prying neighbor shall detect the smell which is made when the metal is being run into the moulds.

It costs the coiner about two shillings to make a "load," or sovereign, in base money. He sells it to the passers for six shillings, so that, after paying expenses, the despicable calling is a remunerative one.

The places most favored by coin passers are milk-shops, because the beautiful preserved in the counters are generally greasy, and grease spoils the acid test which is often applied.

feit one, which he tenders in payment for the cigar.

If the publican says it is bad, the passer becomes indignant, and declares that he has just received it from the landlord himself, and that he has no other coin upon him. And when he turns out his pockets, this proves to be the case, because the good half-crown has been slipped to a confederate.

confederate.

When the passer is not getting rid of base money, he is probably ringing the changes on the pawnbroker.

He obtains possession of a really good gold ring and one exactly the same size in brass, stamped 18 or 22 carat, as the case may be. On the genuine ring he asks for an advance of a sovereign. The pawnbroker takes it away to test it, and returns with the information that fifteen shillings is the most he can lend.

"It's my wite's wedding-ring," says

A week later a confederate calls, and, pleading poverty, offers the companion picture for sale. The dealer thinks he is in luck, and has been known to pay as much as six pounds for a painting worth a few shillings, on the assumption that he will make a profit of £4 after he has sold it for £10 to the customer who desires it. Neither are seen again.

Neither are seen again.

British business people are vewary of the broken umbrella trick.

No shopkerper likes trouble with a eustomer, and he pays eight or ten shillings for a new umbrella, being in blissful ignorance of the fact that the swindler's "gamp" was already brok-en in the middle, and had probably

Money Is Not a Prosperous Trade

And if the shopkeeper should be smart enough to accuse the man of attempting a swindle, he indignantly repudiates it, and demands to be searched. Often the result is a pro-ablic house.

One of the passers calls for two the door, "and I'm not going to let it go for that amount!"

Then he appears to think better of the matter, and, turning to the counter again, he mutters resignedly, "Very well; lend me the fifteen shillings." And he hands the ring to the pawnbroker. But not the same ring. For, during the brief time his back was turned, the rogue has substituted the brass ring for the gold one. If he can work this dodge on twenty pawnshops a day, he makes a fine thing out of it.

Another swindle perpetrated by the passer of bad money is that of matching the picture.

One of the scoundrels purchases a pair of oil paintings at a shop for about fifteen shillings. Then he takes one to a dealer, and asks that it shall be matched, expressing his willingness to pay at least ten pounds if the wary of the broken umbrella trick. Got up as a very benevolent-looking but fussy old gentleman, the passer will go into a business establishment and make a small purchase. He has previously taken care to see that there is some loose oilcloth or carpet about. As he is leaving, he will trip and fall over the projection, and immediately make a great outcry about the proprietor's car lessness. Woefully, he points to his broken umbrella, and demands the money for a new one.

NOTES ON THE WEST

Mr Walter Smith has just returned from a trip over prairie land. He travelled through many leading, rapidly developing towns.

He left on the 25th of July. The first corn he ate this season was in Moose Jaw at the home of Mr Massey, M. A., planted and cultivated by himself in his own garden.

"On my progress," he says,
"Through Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, I was suprised to see on the markets of those provinces, cabbage, cucumbers, and garden produc-tions so far in advance of all such produce in Ontario. I never saw po-tatoes so large. I was suprised at the rapid growth of all garden products, leaving our own gardens far behind."

He seems reluctant to relieve his nemory of these matters, even now; he seems more surprised when he reflects that not far below the surface on which the plants grew, may be tound solid, frozen earth.

From Qu'Apple Mr Smith drove out to an Indian Mission School, four miles on Goyernment road, including 320 Indian boys and girls. Around the school are beautiful flower gardens cultivated by the scholars under the direction of skilful gardeners. When one looks at the variety of these gorgeous, vigorous, great sized flowers, one is impressed with the fascination of their marvellous beauty. They leave the suburban and city flower gardens of New York, which Mr Smith has seen, far, far behind.

All towns great and small, seems ultimately determined to border their limits with flower gardens and parks. Some farmers have 2,000 to 3,000 bushels of grain : such may have many piles of straw as large as small barns.

From a little elevation oue nay sometimes count twenty or more en gines at work, some so far away that the smoke only may be seen. Then, as evening comes on, they set fire to the straw to get rid of it. Mr Smith says it is a beautiful, a wild, a weird sight to see 100 of these cones of flame rise over a vast, broad plain, like youthful volcanoes.

He thinks it is an immense realm of wealth, power and wonder, and re-turned to his home highly pleased. Mr Irwin Wiltse reviewed the same

TO KEEP SHIRTWAIST IN PLACE. This belt, intended to hold a woman's shirtwaist in place at the bulke St. Olpherts in The Notorwaist band, is made of elastic and cotton braids combined with a rubber grip-piece of rough surface at the back. When the belt is drawn taut the elastic braid will stretch and draw in the loops seen in the illustration, causing the rubber strip to adhere closely to the wearer and hold the waist firmly, though it cannot tear the cloth.

THE DURABILITY OF STEEL.

(Harper's Weekly.) It has been shown that nearly all the ares of steel occur very early in its ory. If a plate or bar of mild steel lasts for a year in service, it may be trusted to last for many years. The most injurious thing is continual bending backward and forward, as in what is called the "panting" of a boiler end. As one authority puts it, steel has a somewhat "tumultuous youth," but "in middle age it is trustworthy, and in old age beyond reproach." In regard to corrosion, there is difference of opinion, some holding that steel corrodes more readily than iron.

GILA MONSTERS INCREASING. Whether Bite of This Lizard is Fatally Poisonous to Man Unsettled.

"Naturalists who recently visited the Mojave desert in Arizona say that there has been an increase in the number of gila monsters in that region." said Dr. A. B. Cedron, of Prescott, Ariz.

"These lizards are of great interest to naturalists, for in spite of investiga-tions authorities still differ as to whe-ther the bite of a gila monster is fat-ally poisonous. I have had several instances come under my observation where men have been bitten by gila mon-sters, but none ever died. In the case of a gila monster biting a guinea pig, how-ever, the poison was fatal a few minutes after the guinea pig was bitten. The natives of the Southwest, particularly natives of the Southwest, particularly the Indians of Mexico, sincerely be-lieve that the bit of a gila is fatal to a human being and the lizard is held in much awe by them.

"It is likely, however, that this fear is occasioned largely by the repulsive appearance of the reptile. The head is very prominent, comprising about one-fifth of the total length of the body, and like the back it is thickly covered with yellow and black tinted tubercles Its skin is very tough, and although the bones of the tail are fragile this part of the reptile is very strong, it being possible for the monster to raist itself and balance the body on the tip of the tail thus enabling it to climb rocks, and thus enabling it to climb rocks, and steep ascents. There is no doubt that the teeth lead to glands containing poison. It is very slow in its movements, but it is not timid like other reptiles. If one attempts to strike the gila with a stick it will grasp the weapon in its jaws like a dog does, and when angered it emits its breath in a succession of quick gasps. It is supposed that the breath of the gila has a drug-like effect on insects, and as it can be detected at a considerable distance it is believed that this is the way it catches its food."—From the Wash-

"I imagine," said Arliss, "that if we could reproduce all our sleep thoughts they would be excedingly disappointing and not nearly as valu-able as we thought them at the time. must say, however, that I owe much in life to a dream that I did remember. I had succeeded John Hare as the Duke St. Olpherts in 'The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsnith,' with Mrs. Patknew I was not doing myself justice or getting results. Something was wrong, but I had no idea what. One wrong, but I had no idea what. One night I dreamt that a chap came to me gripping a big stick. The trouble with you is that you are playing the part like this,' he said, shaking the stick with his fist. What you should do is to hold it like this.' With that he let the came swing gingerly between two fingers. The simile was perfect. I saw whereir I had failed and took the lesson to heart. To this day when I feel that I am getting my teeth in a role, I remember the stick in the dream and relax. I owe my unknown dream visitor the greatest debt of gratitude."

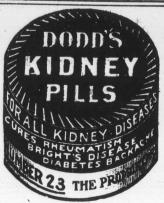

It should be added that the Duke of St. Olpherts was the role that first gave Arliss his standing in London as a character actor.

MEXICAN WOMEN.

"Regarding some of the customs of a Mexican girl," said Jerome S. Horner, of El Paso, Texas, "there are current many mistaken notions.
"For example, she is popularly supposed to play the guitar, to wear a man-tilla and to smoke eigarettes. As a matter of fact the guitar is almost an unknown instrument among the women of the upper classes, the becoming mantilla is rarely seen in the streets save or Good Friday, having been discarded in favor of hats in atrocious taste, and the senorita never smokes. Neither does she make a habit of attending bullfights. Washington Herald.

APPETITE FOR SNAILS.

The snail appetite of the whole world is increasing so rapidly that the snail fraternity cannot supply the demand, and the result is that some Frenchman has worked out an position in the shape of an artificial snail, the only genuine part of which is the shells, which are used over and over again. The artificial snail is over again. The artificial snail is very difficult to detect, even by those who pride themselves on their epi-curean accomplishments. The sec-ond-handed shell is taken and filled with a morsel of the lung of a healthy beef, which is cut in the desired form by a piece of machinery which cuts its in a cork-screw shape. The mouth of the shell is then sealed with a coating of heated fat. These are sold to resturent keepers and are sold to restaurant keepers, and when they are served cooked it is almost impossible to detect the fraud.

AN X SHAPED BRIDGE.

In one of the southern cities of this country there has been a "Y" shaped bridge in use for a long time, and now the proposition of erecting an "X" shaped bridge over the Seine is being considered. As a matter of fact, the idea has been practically adopted, the only diffi-culty being the lack of money, and if this is sucessfuelly looked after the bridge will be built. One great advantage of such a structure is the fact that on pier in the middle of the streams supports both structures, while if two bridges were built the difficulties of navigating the stream would creased.

BEGGED HIS HORSE'S PARDON.

In his early boyhood Count Tolstoi learned to be kind to animals. He tells in a story written for children how he and his brothers used to ride the old family horse, Raven, and sometimes beat him when he was too tired to go further. On one such occasion an old servant thus reproved him in words which he never forgot:

"Ah, master, you have no pity! Why do you beat him? He is twenty years old and is tired out; he can hardly breathe. Why, for a horse, he is as old as Timofeyitch"—a very old peasant living on the place. A PROBLEM YET.

Nearly two hundred and fifty years ago one of the greatest intellects connected with science surned his attention to gravitation. In that two hundred and fifty years physical science has made rapid advances. A boy who has completed a year's work in an elementary physics could entertain Newton in lectricity were it possible for the great philosopher to return to earth. After learning of the great progress of electricity, I can imagine him in his eager desire for knowledge turning to the boy and expecting some light on gravitation. Alas, not only the high school boy, but not even the most learned can give any definite information or gravitation. The problem is about where Newton left it.— Monthly. wilson C Monthly.

Hands Tied to Prevent Scratching. Five Doctors Failed to Relieve, but Zam-Buk Worked a Cure.

Mrs. Charles Levere, of Prescott, North Channel, Ont., tells how Am Buk cured her baby. She says: "M baby's head and face was one complete mass of sores. The itching and irritation were fearful, and the little one plight was so serious that at one time we feared her ears would be eaten off by the disease

"We had to keep her hands tied for days to prevent her rubbing and scratching the sores. Doctor after doctor treated her in vain, until we had had five doctors. They all agreed it was a frightful case of eczema, but mone of them did any permanent good.

"As a last resource we were advised to try Zam-Buk. The first box did so much good that we felt sure we were at last working in the right direction We persevered with the treatment until we had used thirteen boxes, and at the end of that time I am glad to say Zam-Buk had effected a complete cure."

TRUE PRAYER. I have no doubt that the old idea of prayer as a begging of God to set aside wise laws to accommodate puny and often foolish men, will more and more fade away as men grow wiser. But I think that all this will only prepare the way for true prayer, that think that all this will only prepare the way for true prayer—that prayer which seeks to get the highest spiritual good by confirming to the highest spiritual laws of our nature. This kind of prayer, I think, we shall no more outgrow than we shall outgrow hope, or love, or gratitude, or aspiration, or reverence, or the sense of dependence on a Higher Power, or the need, in our weakness and sorrow of comfort and strength from some source higher than our poor selves.

Thus, I think, as we get away sorrow of comfort and strength from some source higher than our poor selves.

Origin of the Great St. Bernard: Hospice.

In an article dealing with the rescue an article dealing with the rescue-dogs of St. Bernard, a writer in the Wide World Magazine states that the fameus Hospice was founded in the year 962 by Barnard de Menthon, a neigh-boring nobleman, for the benefit of pil-grims journeying to Rome.

For many years after it was erected it was continually being attacked by bands of robbers who infested the ial on the tariff to go and preach a funeral sermon. This was an honor that mountains. In those days the monks were compelled at times to barricade the doors of their strong-hold and wait until the weather drops he had never dared to dream of, and he said so in strong and emphatic language, but, having done most everything else from prescribing medicine to subscribing for headstones and being a pall-bearer anyway, he could not refuse. To this day the relatives and friends of Smith Van Denberg, of Cross Hill, say they never heard a better funeral sermon. It didn't bother ye editor much to deliver a funeral sermon, for he had already addressed political meetings and the besiegers away before they venture forth. Once it was des Once it was destroyed by fire, while it was here that Napo-leon was entertained when he took his army over the Alps into Italy in the spring of 180%. One hundred and eighty of his soldiers held the pass for a year.

Tourists visiting the hospice from Western Europe naturally ascend the pass on the Swiss side. The last village one passes is Bourg St. Pierre, and at the inn here the landlord will point with pride to the tiny table and cloth-covered arm-chair which were used by the great soldier as he sat at breakfast early on the morning before breakfast early on the morning before he set out on that memorable journey across the Alps. His army numbered thirty thousand men, and for miles they had literally to fight their way, foot by foot, waist-deep in snow. Napoleon converted the hospice into barracks, and the great room where travellers are now shelter. travellers are now sheltered turned into a huge hospital ward.

BOMB · BURST.

Another Black Hand Outrage in New York

New York Sent 11 -Just when the police were beginning to congratulate themselves that the arrest of Guisseppe ostabile "the fox." had driven the Black Hand agents here to cover, an other bomb was exploded early to-day in the heart of the long-suffering Italian colony. The bomb was let go in front of the office of prominent Italian bankers and steamship agents. No one was coming at a fime when the Italian col ony had been lulled to fancied security was tremendous.

The occurrence is of the vengeance Costabile's friends may exact from any of his fellow-countrymen who dare to testify against him. Be-cause he-was caught with a bomb under his coat, the grand jury in a day or two is expected to indict Costabile for violating the "dangerous weapons" law. Meanwhile the search for more serious evidence against him continues Manifesto of Presbyterian Board of Moral Reform.

Advice to Voters—The Standing Committees.

Toronto report: The Board of Moral nd Social Reform closed its session last night. It was decided to continue the holding of ministerial retreat institutes of Christian service, and also the Sumner schools.

Dr. Grant addressed the board on the subject of the Men and Religion Forard Movement. The board heartily enlorsed the movement, and hoped the ministers of the church would avail themselves of the opportunity it afforded. A resolution was passed to inaugur ate this autumn and winter the most thoroughgoing campaign of education in the interest of social service and evan-

Political purity was the next subjective in of discussion, and in view of the im-pending Federal election, the following deliverance was adopted: "Recognizing the fact that in a self-governing country like Canada, politi-cal purity lies at the basis of national well-being, and deploring the existence of low idea is and corrupt practices, fa-tal to the existence of free institutions and to the moral health of the people Board of Social Service and Evangel-of the Presbyterian Church in Canthe Board of Social Service and Evi ada desires to press upon the members of the Church the duty of opposing elec-toral corruption in every form, and of maintaining the following principles:

(1) It is the duty of every citizen to ughtfully and seriously discharge the full responsibility of citizenship.

(2) The law of righteousness, which is recognized as imperative in the business and social world, should rule also in the sphere of politics. The assumption of a double standard must be repudiated.

(3) The interest of the nation is supreme, It should not be subordinated to matter the sectional section. party, sectional, or selfish considera

(4) The ballot is sacred. The franchise is a solemn trust, not to be bought and sold, but to be exercised as a civic responsibility and as in God's eight.

The board further suggested that all pastors should deal with this subject in their pulpits before the election. Standing Committees were appointed, with conveners, as follows: Sabbat Observance, Rev. W. H. Sedgewick, Hamilton; Temperance, Rev. G. A.
