KEYS.

ESSIE CHANDLER.

Long ago in old Grenada, when the Moors were forced to flee,
Each man locked his home behind him,
Taking in his flight the key.

Hopefully they watched and waited for the time to come when they should return from their long exile to those homes so far away.

But the mansions in Grenada they had left in all their prime,
Vanished as the years rolled onward,
'neath the crumbling touch of time.

Like the Moors, we all have dwellings where we vainly long to be,
And through all life's changing phases ever fast we hold the key.

Our fair country lies beyond us; we are exiles, too, in truth,
For no more shall we behold her. Our Grenada's name is Youth.

We have our delusive day-dreams, and rejoice when, now and then,
Some old heartstring stirs within us,
And we feel our youth again.

"We are young," we cry triumphant, thrilled with old-time joy and glee,
Then the dream fades slowly, softly,
Leaving nothing but the key!

—The Century.

Interesting Story.

A Wayward Ward.

It is the business of the philosopher, as the world knows, to find law and order in even the most abnormal phenomena, to suggest at last, an adequate explanation of every enigma. For what other purpose does he exist than to throw light on the surrounding darkness? He is a torch-bearer to humanity's ignorance. If now and again, by reason of a pessimist temperament or defect of training, the rays he sheds around intensify rather than dispel the gloom, and cast shadows as of Egyptian night across man's forward path, surely he misconstrues his mission.

But the wisest head is sometimes puzzled, and the shrewdest explorer of the all-enveloping mystery is sometimes confounded. A problem presents itself which cannot be solved by any of the familiar processes. The way of some suddenly disclosed fact is as inscrutable as the Sphinx of the Eastern desert. It was thus with Bernard Ralston.

Those who thirst for fame, as misers thirst for gold, or coquettes for admiration, would have found much to envy in this young man's position. At an age when a statesman is currently supposed to be studying his parliamentary primer, and when a future general may still be writing under the sarcasms of a barrack-room instructor, Bernard Ralston had been welcomed into the front rank of philosophical thinkers. His book on "Instinct, Conscience, and Reason" was read and criticised by the few, praised and avoided by the many. The noisy heterodox claimed him as a new and promising recruit; and so also, to the amusement of the on-looker, did the staunchest maintainers of old landmarks. He was flattered, feted, and the lion of his season.

It was from this suddenly acquired distinction that his embarrassment had approached. The solicitor's letter that was the beginning of sorrows made this clear. It ran thus:—"DEAR SIR: We have to inform you that by the will of our late client, Mr. Humphry Power, you are appointed sole guardian of his only surviving daughter, Olive. As this may be in the nature of a surprise, we beg leave to quote the precise paragraph of the will: 'And I hereby empower Mr. Bernard Ralston to act in every respect as the guardian of my child. I am sure that Olive can have no fitter or wiser protector, none better qualified to advise and regulate her life; and should he—as I earnestly beg—accept and fulfill this charge, I give and bequeath to the said Bernard Ralston over and above such reasonable expenses as he may have incurred on my daughter's behalf, the sum of £5,000, to be paid by my executors on my daughter's twenty-first birthday, as a small tribute of my gratitude.'

"The young lady is a very considerable heiress, in her eighteenth year, and at present at a private pension in France. Further particulars will follow on your reply. We are, dear sir, yours obediently, FANSHAW & FITCH."

The gift of the proverbial white elephant could have produced in no heart a greater consternation. What should a retired and solitary student, of serious pursuits and courtly manners, answer to such a challenge? If Cleothrope Hall were large, it by no means followed that he wanted more life within its bounds; and a girl in her teens, a mere child, as with the sage wisdom of five-and-thirty years he considered her! How could her presence by his fireside be harmonized with the quiet current of the life he elected to live?

Yet, the bait of five thousand pounds was a temptation. The glories of Cleothrope Hall had been sadly tarnished through the improvidence of Bernard's father, and philosophy is not a particularly remunerative hobby to ride. Mr. Humphry Power's legacy, if not precisely a fortune, would be an assistance in the keeping up of the restricted Cleothrope establishment.

The matter was debated long, and anxiously, and as the result Miss Olive Power arrived at the Hall one snowy February morning. Slight of figure, winsome of feature, with merry, violet-tinted brown eyes, and lips continually parting in a piquant smile over teeth of whitest pearl, as if he was properly to protect his ward, his position might not prove a sinecure. Neither did it.

The girl's beauty attracted suitors as clover blossoms allure bees; and it was soon an open secret in the countryside that Miss Power, as well as being a lovely and lovely young thing, was a richly dowered one. This brought the sometimes lugubrious voice of Prudence into reasonable accord the chorus of adoration.

But Olive was not minded to be an easy capture of any of her wooers. With a woman's instinctive dexterity she kept them all at bay, and at twenty escaped the necessity of as yet refusing any offer in formal and unequivocal terms. She was developing a taste for study which half amused, half interested her guardian. One evening he playfully rallied her on her application to sundry big volumes in the library.

"I shall be accused of transforming a merry and bewitching young lady into a blue-stocking—a disciple of my own dry-as-dust pursuits," he said; "someone some day may have a special cause to blame me, I fear."

A sudden blush was on the maiden's cheeks, and her glance fell. It was impossible that she should misinterpret Bernard's meaning.

"There is Oswald Harbury to think of," Olive's guardian was daring enough to add.

Two shining eyes were momentarily uplifted. Was the flash they gave one of indignation of scorn, or merely of confusion of a betrayed secret? Bernard could not tell.

"The nature of my employments can make no difference whatever, in any way that I can imagine, to Mr. Harbury," she answered. Toen—it seemed to Bernard a strange transition—"Will you forgive me for asking a favor?" she went swiftly on; "I should like—oh, so much!—to help in your work. Could I not copy out your notes or revise proofs sometimes?"

What philosopher could have successfully resisted the volunteered help of such an amencensis? Not Bernard Ralston.

It was summer, three months later than the date of this conversation. Olive's guardian was seeking his ward in her own boudoir, with a gloom upon his face and a depression of soul which defied his analysis. He had a message to convey and a proposal to informally submit, which he had little doubt would be accepted. Oswald Harbury, the young owner of half Cleothrope, had asked permission to lay himself and his fortunes at Olive's feet. He loved her he said; he would do his best to make her happy.

"And I believe that he will. He has a home to offer you and is a true hearted, honorable gentleman. As your guardian, Olive, I am bound to give my sanction to so fair and so promising a suit. May I bid Mr. Harbury to come and plead his own cause?"

He had spoken hoarsely in a queer far-off kind of voice that he hardly recognized as his own. It was surely singular, and must testify to an unsuspected weakness of character, that the prospect of separation from the ward originally received with so much doubt and dread should thus make havoc of his peace. He waited for the answer in a suspense that was positively harassing. At last it came.

"No, you may not," Olive said, "unless, indeed, you wish to get rid of me—to send me away. And not even then, for I cannot consent to marry a man whom I do not love."

Send Olive away! Was not every pulse in his body beating with fierce, unbidden joy at the verdict she had given? The measure of his recent terror was the measure of his present relief.

"That is a fear which my ward—my wayward ward! never need harbor," he said, with a low, broad smile; "she has brought too much sunshine into my lonely life for me to wish to lose her. But change is inevitable some day."

"Why?" a low voice murmured; and again came the mysterious illumination of Olive's eyes.

"Because, Olive—if for no other reasons—the years of my guardianship will soon be at an end," he answered steadily, almost sternly. He must face the future resolutely, as befitted a teacher of his fellows.

And a few seconds later his quick, nervous step was echoing in the passage without.

An early summer vacation in Switzerland—when the glorious Alpine flora should be at its loveliest—had been the cherished dream of years of Bernard Ralston, and it was realized. A woman's hand had guided his steps thitherward. Olive Power had persuaded him to lay aside his work and make playtime of the sunny weather.

"You can finish your book on 'Vanities as a force in Human Affairs' when you return, and the critics will all say that the last chapters are the brightest," she said pleadingly. And when she added a slight involuntary expression of her own eagerness for the change, he surrendered. The trio—Miss Ralston, Bernard's sister and housekeeper, was Olive's chaperon—had now been from England a fortnight.

They had reached the Riffel and were thus encamped under the shadow of the majestic (grim and uncouth, for variations of epithets) Matterhorn itself. Here Olive went into ecstasies. To watch the sunrise bathe the rugged, furlow sides with waves of liquid light, was an occupation of which she never tired. And then there was the Gornier Grat to visit, the Gornier Glacier to see.

At the hotel there were pleasant company, including a couple of young Americans, who swept the ordinary reserved and cautious student forward into a participation of their own reckless adventures by the sheer force of enthusiasm. The three went off one afternoon on a quest for edleweiss.

The gloom was thickening in gorge and pass and gray shadows were following the sunset glow on the huge crests aloft before there was any sign of a return. The ladies grew uneasy. Stories of accident and of awful peril were staples of the conversational buffet-fare in the hotel saloon, and invariably exerted their influence of nervous minds. In this case the presentiment of evil was but surely justified.

Two of the venturesome explorers returned weary and disheveled, but Bernard Ralston was missing.

"We thought he was before us," explained Mark Croxford, the elder of the brothers. "We drifted apart among the boulders and ice-ridges of a glacier-edge, and we looked for him to rejoin us at the lower end of the track. Not meeting him we hurried away homeward."

A sudden chill had gone to many a heart in the little group of listeners. The thought of precipices and of their hidden and treacherous dangers was in everyone's mind. A search expedition was quickly organized and started.

"I hear steps behind," said the guide, halting on the first stage of the journey and prominently displaying his lamp.

"Why, it is Miss Power!" cried Mark Croxford in astonishment.

It was indeed Olive. With blanched cheeks and agonized eyes and dauntless resolution, she insisted on accompanying the seekers. It was at her request that Bernard Ralston had come to Switzerland. If he perished would it not in a sense be her fault?

Better that her own life should have been sacrificed! To persuade the girl to return was useless—only a loss of precious minutes. With a muttered growl of disapprobation, the guide was compelled to allow her to proceed.

Hours were spent in vain pursuit.

"Guide, is there any hope?" demanded a stout Cornishman at last.

"I fear none!" he answered; at the bottom of yonder chasm—"

His words were cut short. A cry, half triumphant, half fearful, slipped from Olive Power's bloodless lips.

"Listen! I hear a groan," she said.

A silence that might be felt prevailed.

"The wind across the glacier, Miss," answered the leader in sulky despair.

"There is nothing for us but to go back."

"I will not," the girl declared, "until you tell me whose voice that is. Hark! it is no sound of wind!"

Again they listened, and again without result.

Mark Croxford gently laid his hand on Olive's arm. "Believe me, you are mistaken. Miss Power," he said; "you do not suppose that any one of us would give up the search if the least chance remained? But the guide knows best."

And yet, as he uttered his melancholy remonstrance, there was a sound from over the neighboring ice floe, hard to credit to even the most eerie of Swiss breezes.

"There, surely you know it now?" the girl said.

If only to make clear the girl's folly to herself, the quest was recommenced.

The quick ear of love had not blundered, after all. This time a chance gleam of the guide's lantern over a jagged precipice-side revealed a dark form huddled against an inner ledge. It was Bernard Ralston, insensible from his perilous fall, and proving he still lived only by occasional groans.

"I beg your pardon very humbly Miss Power," Mark Croxford whispered.

* * * * *

"And they tell me, Olive, that I owe my life to you," the convalescent said, wheeled out on the broad mountain terrace of his resting place. "How shall I contrive to repay you, I wonder. Do you know—nay you cannot know—I had a dream this morning. After the doctor had left my room I dozed, and it seemed to me that—that the dearest girl in the whole world—and surely the bravest—came to my side and smoothed down the pillow—and—dare I whisper the words?—crossed my forehead. It was singular, was it not?"

Something in the pose of the averted face awakened a sweet suspicion—a keen thrill of happiness.

"It cannot be that—that it was a dream?" he queried. "That my ward is willing to be still dearer—to be my wife?"

The small palm was not withdrawn; the lovely crimsoned face was swiftly and momentarily upturned, as he had seen it twice before, and this time a look of ineffable content was mirrored thereupon.

"If you really desire so to extend your guardianship of your wayward ward," mischievous accents answered. And Bernard Ralston's sometime problem had become his dearest treasure. Love itself had taught love's lesson.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 31, 1885.

THE AVONPORT WHARF.

To what use the old wharf at Avonport is to be put is a matter of great speculation among most people in this county. That it must be intended for some purpose is apparent, and that some one, having influence, either with the Dominion Government or our representative, is deeply interested, is equally apparent. So far as we can learn, comparatively nothing has been shipped from that place—probably for the simple reason that there is nothing to ship. Avonport is not a port of entry so that any vessel arriving or sailing from there must come to Wolfville to enter at the Custom House and get her clearance. It is not centrally situated and its benefit must be purely local. In other words, in our candid opinion it is a foolish waste of money which could and should, in all reason, have been expended in other parts of the county in far greater need. Our representative, and the Government too, know perfectly well the urgent necessity of increasing shipping facilities at this port and why they should, against the expressed opinions (in petition) of a large and representative number of our rate-payers, pay us ever and put money in on old wharf out of reach and of no practical use is, to say the least, strange.

OUR STREETS.

It is very pleasing to see that at last the people of Wolfville are beginning to take some interest in the condition of their streets, and while our correspondents are discussing the matter, perhaps a few words from us would not be out of place. With a very little care by the people generally, the streets in Wolfville would be the finest in the County. The commissioners have done good work this year and we could mention many improvements that have been made, such as new bridges, gravelling and grading sidewalks &c.; but unless the people take the interest they should in keeping the streets tidy and clean, the work of the commissioners is, in a certain degree, in vain. Some years ago (we do not just call to mind how many) a committee was formed in Wolfville to improve and beautify the streets. This committee, for a short time, did good work—planting ornamental trees and in many ways looking after the streets—but soon the interest diminished, and for several years we have heard nothing from them. Where is the committee now? and why could it not again be made an instrument of good? And right here again comes up the question of incorporating the place. With the Village incorporated and having its own Council and staff of officers, any work of this kind would be easy. In our opinion Wolfville will never take its proper place until it is incorporated. We would like to hear from some of our citizens on this question and the different points, both for and against, brought out so that the people could see for themselves whether it would be a good measure or not. Business men and others, do wake up and take the interest in the place that you should and which, apparently, you do not.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editors of the ACADIAN.

MESSRS EDITORS.—It appears that the condition of our streets and sidewalks is attracting considerable attention. It would be an easy matter to make a few changes which would add very much to the attractiveness of the village and make it more comfortable for pedestrians. If some suitable posts and rails were placed along side the Baptist church so that people who ride to meeting could find a place to tie their horses without going to the neighbor's doorway fences, and tight gates were placed in the rear of the grocery at that corner so as to conceal the rubbish that accumulates there, and the owner of the houses above the grocery would place in front of them some posts for tying horses, and posts also were placed in front of the shoe-shop on the other side of the meeting house so that customers would not be tempted to hitch their teams right across the sidewalk, and the posts in front of the post office could be moved in so that thoughtless persons could not drive close to the door and sit there in calm indifference while foot passengers are forced into the gutter, and the mail-carrier from Gaspereau would tie his horse to a post and not the fence at the corner of the office, and the agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals would take care of the skeleton of a horse that nibbles under the fences and the yellow horse that wanders up and down the street very much and all this would not cost very much and the village would be in a much more decent condition and much pleasanter to visitors. ONE INTERESTED.

A REJOINDER.

To the Editors of the ACADIAN.

"One who has been There," has, I think, wandered a little. He says, I "went out of my way" to make "an unkind personal allusion to a person entirely out of the question." It must have been a personal allusion, I suppose, if made to a person, but, waving that nice metaphysical "question," I must deny that I "went out of my way," either in a literal, or a figurative sense: for "in going to church"—not necessarily "the Baptist church"—I passed the obstructions and nuisances complained of in my communication, nor were the obstructions and nuisances all confined to one spot in the Village, as your correspondent represents me as intimating. The "carts plows, harrows &c., blocked up or encroached upon the sidewalk in front of more than one place of business, and almost as much could be said of the 'fires.' I am glad however to be able to state that there has already been an improvement, and now that the ball has been set in motion, I hope it will not be allowed to stop till a thorough reform has been effected throughout the village. "One-who-has-been-there" fails he says to see any harm in ploughs and other implements "so long as they are put up snugly." But I would remind him that the law says nothing about snugness, but forbids any part of the road-way or sidewalk to be so encumbered. The odorous and obnoxious part of the article of your correspondent I will not reply to, as there was nothing that appealed to the nasal organ in my communication or in that of "A Pedestrian," it had its existence solely in the imagination of "One-who-was-there," or in his nose. OBSERVER. July 25, 1885.

A RESPONSE.

To the Editors of the ACADIAN.

I am in duty bound to acknowledge the compliments paid to me, and to my last article, by your courteous correspondent "A Revisor"; as also to express the hope that he found a great deal of pleasure in his labored misrepresentations of so many of my statements and remarks. By such a process he would, in the days of the Inquisition, have conferred on hosts of unhappy victims the glorious crown of martyrdom, and earned for himself a high position in the "Holy Office." As regards the orthography of the word Revisor, the charge of your correspondent is based on a weak and trembling foundation; until he can prove that an article as published, is always a perfect reproduction of the manuscript furnished to a printer; and further that such manuscript is invariably so distinctly written that a printer cannot mistake even a single letter. Would Revisor like his article to be subjected to such a test, as he applies to mine? By the time he shall have been writing for the papers say a few years he will probably have ceased to expect such fac-similes as now seem to exist in his buoyant imagination. I spell Revisor: just as Revisor says it is spelled in the Statutes of Nova Scotia and as he spells it himself; so in that I suppose I am right.

I am sorry that your correspondent has resolved to "drop the subject" before he has replied to the real charge made against the honorable body to which he belongs and whose cause he has championed so valiantly, if not successfully. It is as hard to find the Voter's List now as it was when Revisor began to write. The list may be "posted up," as Revisor says it is; but where it is posted, that is the question—the question which we want answered, but to which there is no response. Not a name is given in the whole of Revisor's two articles, but that of Mr Best, which was not asked for. Revisor has "left undone the things he should have done and done those which he ought not to have done." The sin of omission is scarcely atoned for by the sin of commission. NOVA BENA. July 25, '85.

Correspondents will please remember that contributions must be in the office not later than Wednesday. Items of general interest so cited.

DON'T READ ANYTHING IN THIS COLUMN UNLESS YOU WISH A GOOD SEWING MACHINE.

CONVINCING EVIDENCE OF THE SUPERIORITY OF THE "DOMESTIC."

When agents "puff" their own goods, people pay but little heed; but when they speak well of goods they are not selling and do not intend to sell, then the people begin to listen. A sewing machine dealer may spend hundreds of dollars in trying to convince the people that the machine he is offering is the right one to buy, and it may be just what he claims for it, but yet other dealers may contradict his statements and the people be left in uncertainty. Some persons seem to think that all sewing machines are about alike and the one they can buy for the least money is the one they will have. Others believe there is a great difference but have no way of telling which is the best. Persons acquainted with the manufacture of sewing machines are well aware that there are really several grades, some being worth much more than others. As a general rule all sewing machines of the same model and made by the same company are about alike in quality, the difference in price between the different styles of any particular make being caused by the addition of drawers, cover, leaf, extra finish, and ornamentation to the plain table of the machine, while the real machine remains the same through all these styles.

SUPERIORITY OF THE "DOMESTIC."

One day last week a certain agent or traveller for a certain Canadian Co. called at one of our stores with a sample of the "New Williams," and several persons stepped into the store to see the new machine. The agent seemed well acquainted with American as well as Canadian sewing machines, and after working hard for over half an hour to show up all the "good points" about the "New Williams," honestly acknowledged before all present that the "Domestic" is the best sewing machine made in the United States. Now this is actually true as several of our citizens can testify, and this is the kind of evidence that tells. This gentleman, it must be remembered, was not selling the "Domestic" and not paid for "puffing" it; but when an agent of that make asked him why so many sewing machines are made to imitate the "Domestic," what else could he do but confess the truth, especially as the one he was introducing was an imitation of that machine? All sewing machine dealers and agents, who have any knowledge of sewing machines in general, admit to one another that the "Domestic" is the best machine; yet many prefer to handle some make that costs them less and pays a larger profit, and this is the true reason why the "Domestic" is so little known in many parts of our Province. It is generally understood among us that American machines of any kind are apt to be better than Canadian, and this is especially true of sewing machines. The best American sewing machines will no doubt wear much longer than the best Canadian because the wearing parts are made much harder. Try them both with a file and you will be convinced. The principal argument in favor of Canadian machines is that the

"DUTY IS SAVED."

Now look here, Canadian sewing machines cost the dealer about as much as American after the duty is paid and the retail prices of many of them are much higher than even those of the "Domestic" which is acknowledged the best in the United States. How is this? The retail price of the "New Williams" is about $10 above that of the "Domestic." Do you suppose it is better? Why, according to the agent's own statement it cannot be so good. True, it is an imitation of the "Domestic" and does look something like it, but did you ever see pine made to look like rosewood and brass to resemble gold? A close comparison will convince you that the "Domestic" is better, the workmanship far superior, and that it runs much easier. Further examination would show many more points of superiority which the Domestic has, and must have or how can it be the best machine &c. What! are you going to pass by "the best" and take an imitation of it at a higher price? The "Domestic" sewing machine has been manufactured for over twenty years and

than any other in the U. S. Hundreds of thousands of them are now in use and not a fault found yet. Every genuine "Domestic" has the word "Domestic" cast in the legs and stenciled on the cover. Don't go to agents of other machines to ask about the "Domestic." A. C. Resden, Wolfville, is the agent. He will be pleased to give you all the needed information and show you all about the machines. Retail prices of the "Domestic," $50, $55, $60, and $65; full set of best attachments free. These are U. S. prices, and how anybody can pay the duty and freight on them and then sell them here at such prices seems strange but yet it is true. The profits must certainly be very small and not sufficient to pay for carting them all over the country on trial, so don't wait for the agent. How does he know you want a machine? Notify him by mail; it will cost you only three cents. He will certainly answer and be pleased to do so.

QUESTIONS.

Sirs.—Can a legally appointed pound-keeper refuse with impunity to impound cattle that are legally brought to him for that purpose? If he can, are the inhabitants of Wolfville required to take trespassing cattle to a pound in another ward or district to keep them out of mischief? Are pounds intended for the benefit of the pound-keepers, or to preserve the property of the community from damage, and loss? Does the Law determine the side on which pedestrians, vehicles, &c. should pass when they encounter a bicycle? The last question is of almost as much importance as the others; for I observe that our village bicyclist has a good deal of difficulty in getting people out of the way, so as not to be run down. It is very kind and thoughtful in him; but still it would be a convenience to know what the law says on the subject. Wolfville, July 28, '85. INQUIREN. P. S. Please answer the above questions in your next issue without fail. [Will some one versed in the law, please answer these questions.—Ed.]

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 31, 1885.

Local and Provincial.

We had a call on Monday from Mr. F. Nicolson, of the Hants Journal. He was accompanied by Mr. A. C. Borden.

NOTICE.—A. C. Redden has removed his office to Main Street, next door to Burpee Witter's.

Lumber, Shingles and Bricks for sale low at S. R. Steep's.

ERRATUM.—In the article of week before last, headed "Eyes and No Eyes," for "go for them," read go further.

Rev. J. B. Hemmison arrived home from Ottawa on Thursday evening last (July 23) where he has been on business connected with the late session of Government.

We would call attention to W. J. Higgins' adv. in another column. Mr. Higgins has been to considerable trouble and expense in preparing for this business and should receive a liberal patronage.

Just received at Rockwell's, a fine lot of Commercial and Fancy Stationery, which will be sold extremely low.

We are sorry to learn of the serious illness of Mr. Anderson Martin, which completely baffled our physicians, and are informed that he intends going to New York for treatment. Mr. Martin has been doing business here for a number of years and has many friends who join in wishing him a speedy recovery.

"French Lustre" Dressing for Ladies' and Children's Fine Shoes. Softens and preserves the leather, also restores its color and lustre. Put up expressly for C. H. Borden, sole agent for Wolfville.

Rev. Dr. Welton preached in the Presbyterian church, Grand Pre, last Sunday morning, in the Wolfville Presbyterian church in the afternoon, and in the Baptist church in the evening, making three services for the day. Evidently the people are determined to make the most of the Dr while they have the opportunity.

If you wish to color wool, cotton, silk or feathers, use the new Electric Dyes, Strongest and Best in the world. 10 cents at all dealers.

W. Arthur Calnek, Esq., who is well known as a local historical writer, is stopping in the village for a few days. His "Memoir of the late Hon. James William Johnston," first judge of equity of Nova Scotia, which is before us as we write, is very interesting and all should procure it and peruse it. Mr. Calnek yet has a few copies with him and will be pleased to furnish them at 25 cents each. We understand he is at work on a History of Annapolis Co.

—Burpee Witter has just opened a large variety of Hoop Skirts, Bustles and Dress Improvers in all the newest styles.

The interior of the Wolfville Methodist vestry has been newly painted and renovated this week and now presents an attractive appearance. The walls have been tinted a nice, cheerful tint and the woodwork painted to correspond. We think this is as it should be and that all churches, prayer-meeting and Sabbath-school rooms should be made as attractive as possible and that no trouble or expense should be spared in making them cheerful and homelike. We congratulate the Methodists of the fine condition of their vestry. The work was done by our local artist, Mr. B. G. Rishop, and his no less talented assistant, Mr. F. P. Bishop.

CROWN PICTURES.—Lately received at Rockwell & Co's, direct from the manufacturer's, a large lot of moulding expressly for framing the Crown Pictures. As this moulding has been purchased at bottom prices, we are now prepared to frame these pictures at lower prices than have ever been quoted before.

BERWICK, July 27th.—Berwick is still on the acting side. The steam-mill and foundry are running on full time, and the shingle mill, which has been shut down through haying, is about to begin work again very soon.

S. J. Nichols has put in hay scales at Berwick Station—something the place was very much in need of; he has also begun building a new store on the site of the one destroyed by fire belonging to him some years ago.

Business is very quiet in the village now. The farmers are so busy at their hay they don't take time to do much shopping.

The strawberry season is about over and the express officials smile as they gaze along the platform and see it so clear of strawberry crates.—COM.

Local and Provincial.

The date of the temperance picnic at Mt. Uniacke has been changed to Aug 12th on account of the committee not being able to make arrangements with the Railway management for the 5th Aug.

The oldest piece of mortuary statuary in the Dominion is at Annapolis, N. S., in the shape of an old tombstone in the old cemetery at that place. The lettering is still perfectly legible and it bears the date 1720.

The Celebrated Electric Dyes are the most lasting of all colors. Warranted strictly pure. 10 cents at Druggists and Grocers.

Mr. J. A. Halliday, late of the Dartmouth Times, called on us a few days ago. We congratulate him on getting out of the newspaper business.

Now you can get lots of 10c. Straw Hats at Caldwell & Murray's.

We have been requested by some of the inhabitants of Water St. to ask that certain individuals will keep their horses off the streets at night. A word to the wise &c.

The following items were intended for last issue but were received too late for insertion. As they are of general interest we publish them this week:—

Mrs H. H. Gordon, of Saxon Street, has completed a new barn; size 36x40.

Mr James McGowan, of Canard Street, has built a very fine cooper shop this summer.

Mr F. A. Porter, of Palatka, Florida, writes that the season is very dry, and that means oranges will be small.

Mr John C. Harris, formerly of Saxon Street, but now of Kingsport, is driving a meat wagon. He has all kinds of fresh meat.

Mrs D. Milton Heald, of Milford, New Hampshire, is now visiting her mother, Mrs J. C. Dickie, Saxon St., Cornwallis. This is her first visit home since 1874.

Clarence H. Bishop, of Greenwich, is now in Humboldt County, California. He writes that hunting and fishing are good in that locality and gives account of getting 49 trout one afternoon, none weighing less than 1 1/2 lb, and the next day 51.

The old sign which read "George. E. Eaton" has been moved down street and in its place is a new one which reads "Starr Eaton." Starr has got the front of his store newly painted and also the counters and can now boast of having the finest looking store in Canning.

S. OF T.—At a recent meeting of Maple Leaf Division, S. of T., No. 331, Greenwich, King's Co., the officers were elected as follows:—W. P.—Miss Emma L. Bishop; W. A.—F. J. Porter; R. S.—Miss Roxy Griffin; A. R. S.—F. E. Forsyth; F. S.—Henry Griffin; Treas.—A. K. Forsyth; Chap.—E. B. Forsyth; Con.—E. C. Bishop; A. C.—Miss Carrie W. Bishop; I. S.—Miss Julia Griffin; O. S.—John Padsey; P. W. P.—Mrs A. H. Bishop.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

Thirty years study and experiment have been given to perfecting the formula for Parsons' Pills, and the universal judgment of the highest medical authorities, scientists, and men of learning, is that our formula is the best yet devised by the brain of man, and should rank with the wonderful discoveries of the world. No family should be without them, for there is no other remedy in the world capable of conferring so much benefit, excepting, possibly Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. The information contained in the wrapper around each box is worth ten times the cost of a box of pills; it shows how to avoid and how to cure all manner of diseases, and how to correctly interpret the symptoms thereof. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. A valuable illustrated medical book sent free to all who send their address. DR. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., 23 Custom House St., Boston.

THE EARLY ORATORS.
BY BILL NEE.

Demosthenes was not born an orator. He struggled hard and failed many times. He was honest, and he stammered in his speech, but before his death they came to him for hundreds of miles to get him to open their country fairs and jerk the bird of freedom half-headed on the Fourth of July.

Demosthenes had a short breath, a hesitating speech, and his manners were unbecomingly. To remedy his stammering he filled his mouth full of pebbles and howled his sentiments at the angry sea.

Plutarch says that Demosthenes made a dismal failure of his first speech. This did not discourage him. He finally became the smoothest orator in that country, and it was no uncommon thing for him to fill the First Church of Athens full.

I must now leave Demosthenes and go on rapidly to speak of Patrick Henry.

Mr. Henry was the man who wanted liberty or death. He preferred liberty, though. If he couldn't have liberty he wanted to die, but he was in no great rush about it. When the tyrant asked him what he would rather die of, extreme old age. He was willing to wait he said. He didn't want to go unprepared, and he thought it would take him eighty or ninety years more to prepare, so that when he was ushered into another world he wouldn't be ashamed of himself.

When he started in he was gentle, mild, and quiet in his manner, but later on, carrying his audience with him, he at last became enthusiastic. He thundered, he roared, he whirled, he howled, he jarred the windows, he sawed the air, he split the horizon with his clarion notes, he tipped over the table, kicked the lamps out of the chandeliers, and smashed the big bass viol over the chief fidlers' head.

Oh, Demosthenes, was business when the got started. It will be a long time before we see another off-hand speaker like Demosthenes, and I, for one, have never been the same man since I learned of his death.

One hundred and ten years ago Patrick Henry said: "Sir, our chains are forged. Their clanking may be heard on the plains of Boston. The war is inevitable, and let it come. I repeat it, sir, let it come!"

In the spring of 1861 I used almost the same language. So did Thomas Greeley there were four or five of us who got our heads together and decided that the war was inevitable, and consented to let it come.

Then it came. Whenever there is a large inevitable conflict floating around waiting for permission to come, it devolves on the great statesmen and half-headed demagogues of the nation to avoid all delay. It is the duty of the great orator to stand for war and then hold some other man's coat while he fights.—The Argonaut.

CASTLES IN THE AIR.

Who among us has not builded them! who, as the long dull years have melted into decades, and the silver threads among her hair fit up the march of time, has not erected these dream-like, marvellous palaces of fancy, upon the dim, shadowy corner bits of the imagination? and who ever resided in one?

Who would not, for the smallest of small considerations, give a quit claim deed for all the reality, and a clean bill of sale for the weird and gaudy furniture?

And yet we all build castles in the air. The little boy on his painful way to school, with a paper of tacks in one pocket, and a mouth organ in another, build castles in the air.

The intelligent, the well-to-do of the family, as she smooths out the folds from her doll's pink calico dress, build castles in the air, and the youth with the mousetraps—three hairs on one side and seven on the other—yes to him heavier than a whisker brush—erects these gaudy structures in the oriental style of architecture, with towers and domes, and spires and minarets, and the maiden fair, first in war, first in peace, and first in the heart of the adored heavily bearded cavalier, rears the fairest of beautiful fairy houses.

And the patient wife, humming the old tunes of her childhood, and sewing the 500th button on the fatal shirt, build castles in the air. And the young husband who is to be—oh for some time back, has been, erects these glittering imaginary edifices on the foundations of love—or on the shifting sands of defunct, anti-cipation.

Castles in the air! Magic cities of the realms of day-dreams illuminated by the brilliant light of hope, and on their architects the demurest of visionary schemes. Hope abides through all the corridors of castles in the air, and shak its beam far out upon the rugged path of life. But for these airy fairy castles in the air, ambition's hand might fall, and all the fires of glowing impetuous youth, the outstretched embers of a dead, long-remembered.

J. MCLEOD.

Beware of new importations to Wolfville.

HOROLOGY

Or the theory of Watchmaking was never learned at the bottom of a Colorado Gold Mine, or the PRACTICE of Watchmaking in a New Mexico Coal Pit, or in a

JEREMIAH

Doddler Knitting Machine Shop of Windsor, Nova Scotia. J. McLEOD respectfully informs the public of Wolfville, Kentville, and surrounding districts that he has bought for cash, direct from the Manufacturer the largest and best selected stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, etc.

In King's County, which I can sell at a reduction from 25 to 50 percent beneath the Jewellery Fraternity of King's County. The public will find my stock of a superior quality to what is generally sold by travelling mount-banks, and others not legitimately brought up to the jewellery trade. In-tending purchasers will find it to their advantage to give me a call before going elsewhere.

My Stock consists of Gold and Silver Watches, Necklaces, Earrings, Brooches, Gold Wedding Rings and Keepers, Bracelets in gold and silver, Gents Alberts in gold and silver, Gents Rings in gold and silver, Scarf Pins, Collar Buttons, Cuff Buttons gold and silver, Lockets, Fancy Dress Rings, Silver Thumbies, Charms, Pencil Cases, etc.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

I have for sale the largest selection of English Jewellery out of Halifax in fine Gold Lockets, Ladies' Gilt Rings set in precious stones, Brooches, Earrings, Chains, Gents' Gold Rings, etc. etc. too numerous to mention.

A full line of STANDARD SILVERWARE: Cake Baskets, Card Receivers Sugar Baskets, Cream Jugs, Butter Coolers, Castors, Revolving Butter Coolers, Custars, Napkin Rings, Pickle Dishes, Call Bells, Nut Crackers, Butter Knives Pie Servers, Fork Racks Dinner and Desert Knives and Forks, Dinner and Desert Spoons Ten Spoons, Fish Covers, Sugar Spoons, etc.

Clocks.—Manufactured by French, Canadian, and American makers, the best selection out of Halifax. French Gilt Clocks under glass shades, full finished Canadian Clocks in polished walnut. American Clocks in veneered cases.

I am in a position to sell the WALTHAM WATCH, which is a notorious fact the public of the county is charged $30.00 which I can sell for $29.00 Also Ladies' Steam-waistband watches, which are generally sold for $18 I sell for $12.00
