BEWARE OF AMERICAN
COUNTERFEITS.

I most respectfully take leave to call the attention of the Public generally to the fact, that certain Houses in New York are sending to many parts of the globe SPURIOUS IMITATIONS of my PILLS and Ointment. These frauds bear on their labels some address in New York.

I do not allow my medicines to be sold in any part of the United States.
I have no Agents there. My Medicines are only made by me, at 555 Oxford Street London.

In the books of directions affixed to the spurious make is a caution, warning the Public against being deceived by counterfeits. Do not be misled by this audacious trick, as they are the counterfeits they pretend to denounce.

These counterfeits are purchased by unprincipled Vendors at one half the price of my PILLS and Ointment, and are sold to you as my genuine Medicines.

I most earnestly appeal to that sense of justice, which I feel sure I may venture upon asking from all honorable persons, to assist me, and the Public, as far as may lie in their power, in denouncing this shameful Fraud.

Holloway's PILLS and Ointment bearing any other address are counterfeits.

Strange Defence to a Breach of Promise Case.

An action for breach of promise of marriage - Paris v. Jackson - brought by the daughter of a builder and contractor against a plumber and gas engineer in Edinburgh, was concluded in the Exchequer Court, London, yesterday, before the Lord Chief Baron and a special jury. The defendant pleaded that he was insane when the engagement was made, and that the plaintiff released him from his promise. Mr. Alexander Chambers, manager of the Melville private lunatic asylum at Musselburgh, was examined in support of the defendant's case, and said when the defendant was at his asylum in 1869 he was a dangerous lunatic. The defendant came into his Asylum in December 1878, under the authority of the Board of Lunacy. The defendant was still detained in the Asylum by the Sheriff's order. The defendant was under delusions still, especially those consisting of suspicions that he was watched by detectives and others. Professor M'Lagan, M.
D., Edinburgh, said in 1890 the defendant was under the persuasion that his soul was eternally lost, and in December 1878, he was under the delusion that detectives and spies were constantly following him, and and that the lady to whom he was engaged had traduced his character.
Dr. Alexander Sanders, Musselburgh, said that the defendant was going on very well, and might suddenly recover some day. Mr. Peter Young, the defendant's medical attendant, said he was of opinion that the defendant was insane. Mr. John Thyne, defendant's brother-in-law, gave evidence to the same effect. The jury yesterday found a verdict for the plaintiff, with £50 damages, and the Lord Chief Baron gave judgment with costs, refusing to stay execution. - Liverpool Mercury, May 19.

The Nihilist Prisoners.

Publicity is given to the following semi-official statement - "The question recently put to the British Government by Sir Robert Peel in the House of Commons, on the subject of affairs in Russia, has excited great attention here. The becoming treatment of the interpellation by the Government is generally recognised, although it might have been preferable had the Government met the wholly incorrect views expressed by Sir Robert Peel, which appear to be founded exclusively on the false statements of some English newspapers, by a circumstantial refutation based on report received from the Embassy. In contradiction to these assertions it may be stated that the fortress of Peter and Paul is wholly inadequate to contain 400 prisoners, to say nothing of 4,700; that no prisoner has been removed from the fortress to Kasan; that the reported arrests of officers have not taken place, and that since February only three officers have been arrested, and finally, that no arrests of whole families have been made.
The impending abdication of the Emperor in favor of the Czarewitch are also absolutely untrue.

A despatch from Warsaw announces that an order has been issued prohibiting students of the intermediate schools of the city from leaving their homes after nine o'clock in the evening. The 'Golos' states that a first party of 300 prisoners, out of 2,000 arrested in Moscow during the winter, have started for Siberia. Nine thousand arrested in other towns during the winter will pass through Moscow during the summer.

The news that Russia had demanded the extradition of a Russian named Turikoff, resident at Geneva, one of the murderers of General Mezentzeff is without foundation.

A 'Morning Post' Berlin telegram says that a fresh Nihilist printing press has been discovered in Petersburg in the office of the Ministry of Public Communications. A number of officials are implicated, and eight arrests have already been made among the departmental staff.

A Legal Romance.

A question involving a case of almost romantic interest was put to the Home Secretary in the House of Commons on Thursday evening by Sir J. Eardley-Wilmot, one of the members for Warwickshire. It appears that more than 40 years ago (1836) two men, named Oliver and Gally, were placed upon their trial at Exeter, before Mr. Justice Williams, charged with the murder of a farmer named May. They were convicted, and a few minutes after the verdict was delivered Oliver admitted his guilt, but declared, in an emphatic manner, that he had never beheld his alleged accomplice until he was placed by his side in the dock that morning. Oliver was executed, but the sentence upon Gally was commuted to penal servitude for life, and he is now in Australia. The judge who sentenced him is no more, and it is believed that all the jurors who found him guilty, save one, have paid the debt of nature. This gentleman
- Mr. George Seecombe - still survives, and has long been thoroughly persuaded that Gally was a victim of the fallibility of the law, and wa-perfectly innocent of the crime of which he was convicted. Recent circumstances have called public attention to the untrustworthy character of circumstantial evidence. Habonconvicted of the Whalley Range murder, has been released and compensation on the evidence of a man who proclaimed him innocent and admitted that he himself had fired the fatal shot. As one of the erring jury who returned the verdict which sent Gally to penal servitude, Mr. Seecombe has from time to time addressed urgent appeals to successive Secretaries of State to do the man the tardy justice of recommending that a free pardon be granted to him.
The answers he received were invariably unfavorable. The present Lord Chief Justice of England, who went the western circuit 43 years ago, was in court when Gally was convicted, and formed the opinion that he was innocent. Mr. Seecombe has lately endeavored to enlist the sympathy of the learned judge on behalf of the convict. Sir Alexander Cockburn (than whom there is no more experienced or able judge on the bench) wrote to Mr. Cross, but to no purpose. There was no disposition at the Home Office to reopen a case the urgency of which was all the more important because its reconsideration has been so long delayed. Mr. Seecombe has again written to Mr. Cross, imploring him in the name of humanity to release the man and enable him even now to vindicate his character from the crime of murder. He declares in the most solemn language that his own participation in the trial has weighed upon his mind like a millstone, and that the vindication of the unhappy man will remove a burden from his conscience in the closing hours of a life which cannot at his age be long protracted. He states that the scene in the assize court at Exeter is ever before his eyes, and that he remembers distinctly the distress of Gally as he stood before the judge awaiting his sentence, while his fellow-prisoner asserted, with the earnestness of a man standing, as it were, under the shadow of death, that his fellow prisoner was absolutely innocent of hand or part in the deed. The question which Sir J. Eardley-Wilmot put to the Home Secretary is whether he will allow all the papers in connection with Gally's case to be deposited in the library of the House of Commons, so that those who may desire to investigate the case may have an opportunity of doing so. It should be added that Oliver, before his execution, disclosed the name of his accomplice, and stated what had become of him.

The Press Association is informed that the proposed banquet to Mr.
Gladstone, in recognition of his great public services, has not, as was recently stated, been abandoned but only postponed to a more convenient opportunity. Meanwhile the committee, has laid the matter before Mr. Gladstone, who has expressed his willingness to attend.

Fatal Effects of Lightning.

TERRE HAUTE, May 16.

A terrible thunderstorm, doing much damage and destruction to life and property, passed over Washington county last night. Near Fredericksburg several farm houses and barns were blown to the ground and two farm hands, named John Durnell and Stias Moran, instantly killed. Durnell and Moran were working in a field, and at approach of the storm took shelter under a large sycamore tree standing near by. The tree was struck by lightning and Moran was thrown by the shock into Blue River and Durnell was found sitting upright, dead, at the root of a tree, this morning. No other fatal cases at Fredericksburg are reported.

At Lavonside the storm passed over the village at ten o'clock, inflicting much damage to property. In some cases lives being reported to have been lost. Three farm houses near the town were struck by lightning and completely demolished, three persons being killed. The storm was of short duration but extended over quite a large area, resulting in great damage to persons.

Murder without a Motive.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 28.

Several weeks ago a man named Jas.
Reed took possession of a small unoccupied house, near Effzabeth, in this county, and since then he has lived in it alone. Yesterday morning a quiet, in-offensive man named John Williams, was passing the house, when Reed asked him to come in and have a talk. Williams went in and sat down and as he did so Reed picked up a heavy bar of iron and struck Williams several times over the head, causing the death of the man.
Reed then walked out of the house, lit a cigar and started up the road.
A couple of men, who were passing the house soon after, heard Williams moan and found him dying. Reed was arrested and, being brought here was placed in jail. The two men, Reed and Williams, did not know each other, and never had any dealings together; and what led to the crime is a mystery.
Reed told the 'Telegram' correspondent this afternoon that Williams had come into his house and bothered him by his "pompous airs and talking as if he owned the house." He says he hit him, but does not seem to care what the result is. Williams died this afternoon.

A Happy Land.

An estimable Louisville young man, who teaches a class at Sunday-school, and occupies a prominent position in the choir, has a fancy for the maiden who sings the alto. When last he called upon her he found her, with her father and mother, entertaining the minister. Concealing his disappointment with as much grace as he could command, he joined the dignified circle and maintained his share of the conversation very creditable considering the untoward circumstances. The minister, who has been something of a traveler in his time, turned to talk, and was giving a gorgeous description of his favorite country, Brazil, when a small boy of the family, who was building a block church on the floor, spoke up: "Ma, has sister Foy ever traveled any?" "No, child, no, you musn't speak when others are talking."
"Then, when I was a-lyn' under the soft Sunday night, and sister and Mr. John came in from church and was a-settin' in the big rockin' cheer, how come her to say that the nicest land she ever was in was Lapland?"

The negro exodus is a much more serious thing than many suppose. The indications are that it has hardly commenced in earnest yet. Letters are received in this city every day from colored preachers and others, making inquiries about transportation, and that hundreds are leaving localities which have not been supposed capable of sustaining that many. Meantime all sorts of devices are resorted to for the purpose of detaining the colored men in the South. The latest we have heard of is a writ of attachment, illegally served on a colored man. This is, we fear, the only kind of attachment which has lately been entertained for the negroes by the Southern white.

Provincial.
Railroad Accident.

TORONTO, May 11.—Yesterday afternoon the directors of the Credit Valley Railroad and a few leading citizens went by special train to inspect the work recently finished on the section running from Carleton to Streetsville. On the return journey, and while awaiting on a siding at Carleton for an engine to bring them into the city, the engine which was sent from here for that purpose, through some bungling, dashed into the car at the rate of thirty miles an hour, completely wrecking both and injuring most of the occupants of the car. The engineer states that he understood he was to pick up the Credit Valley car at the station beyond Carleton and was hurrying along to perform this duty. The switchman at Carleton said he saw the engine coming and set his switch on the siding where the car was standing, thinking the engineer would slacken speed before taking the Credit Valley siding. Among those most seriously injured are James Gooderham, merchant and miller of the city, who has since died; P. D. C. Oger, coal merchant, who is in a critical condition; ex mayor Morrison; John McNabb, retired hardware merchant; Samuel Betty, railway agent; A. G. Falconbridge, Barrister; Darcy Bolton, Barrister. A few escaped by jumping from the cars.

TORONTO, May 12.—A special car containing the excursion party left Toronto at 2 p. m., and was taken by a Grand Trunk engine to the Junction, where a Credit Valley engine attached which took it to Streetsville, and returning about 6 o'clock left it on Credit Valley line, about five hundred feet from the switch, to await the Grand Trunk engine, which was to take it back to the city. The interval was followed by speech-making, and while Mr. R. W. Elliott was replying to a toast, the Grand Trunk engine, going at a rate of thirty-five miles an hour, ran into the car, smashing one end, driving the trunk through the floor and injuring nearly all the occupants more or less severely. James Gooderham, of the firm of Gooderham & Worts, received injuries from which he has since died. The engine driver says that he was ordered to proceed to Carleton and wait there, and that the switch being open when he was going at a good average speed he ran into the cars before there was any possibility of stopping.

What will be done with Hanlan.

(From the Toronto Globe.)

The question now arises, What is to be done with Hanlan? It is probable that there is not a sculler in the world who can hold a candle to him. Wallace Ross's easy defeat of Emmet laid it open to question whether the brawny young New Brunswicker was not more than a match for all the Thames men, and Wallace Ross is of no sort of use when pitted against Hanlan. In fact, there is a very general impression abroad that the London scullers have no really first class man among them in these days, and the winning of the championship by Elliott, a Tyne sculler, goes to prove this. Hanlan's next effort will be to wrest the English championship from Elliott, and in a match between those two there is some chance of a really good race. Elliott is, from all accounts, able to beat anything that Hanlan has yet done, but our champion has a reserve fund of unknown extent. As a matter of fact he has not been compelled to do his best in any of his great races. It is possible that he can pass Elliott as he passed the rest of them, and then there remains only Laycock, who lately defeated the Australian, Trickett, the holder of the sculling championship of the world.

The switchman on the other hand says that the engine driver gave the signal for him to open the switch, which he accordingly did.

QUEBEC, May 10.—Private telegrams received within the past few days from Hon. Mr. Joly in London, state that the hon. gentleman has had an interview with the Colonial Secretary, at Downing street, and was most courteously received. A general impression prevails that the Letellier question will be referred to the Judicial committee of the English Privy Council for decision.

The rumor which has appeared in one or two journals setting forth that the question had been referred back to the decision of the Governor General and Privy Council of the Dominion, is understood to be entirely without foundation.

"Honest Labor—our noblest heritage."

CARBONEAR, N. F. JUNE, 5.

OUR FISHERIES.

Now that our Labrador fleet are daily leaving their various ports for the purpose of entering upon the season's voyage, we feel that a few words in connection with this most important subject will not be deemed inopportune or uninteresting either to those engaged in the prosecution or participating in the general results thereof. We are much gratified to observe that our people profiting from the experience of the past, are awakening to the necessity of being early on the ground to ensure, as far as possible, their future prospects of success, the unfavorable results of former years having but too clearly demonstrated to them, that the loss hitherto incurred, may in a great measure be attributed to the delay which has unfortunately, too often taken place in making arrangements for proceeding to their intended destinations. This great obstacle having been removed by the early departure of the Labrador vessels, the next most important point for consideration, would be the great and we may say, the imperative necessity of increased and extra vigilance on the part of those more immediately interested in the cure and saving of the season's voyage, that such an improvement may result in this respect as may tend still further to enhance the local value and ensure a brisk demand and ready sale for our staple product in foreign markets. That grave necessity exists for improvement in the cure of our fish, we feel that we need adduce no stronger proof than the opinions advanced and the suggestions offered on this subject in the Reports of the Commercial Body of this colony for some time past, these opinions and suggestions being of the most unequivocal character. To the foregoing may also be added the increased and daily increasing competition, with which we have to contend on the part of foreign nations, such for example as France, Norway and the United States—a competition which has already resulted so seriously to our interests in some countries, of whose markets but a few short years since, we may say, we enjoyed the almost absolute and undisputed control. In referring to this subject we wish to be understood, as by no means speaking in disparagement of our local produce or in depreciation of its abstract value in foreign markets as compared with that of other countries, cargoes of our Newfoundland made fish having in many instances, as we are credibly informed, commanded a ready sale and at higher rates than the best quality of any of the countries referred to. Viewing the subject therefore from the point of self interest, looking to the difficulties against which we have to contend in foreign markets as also the satisfactory results which have been attained in the instances referred to, may not extra vigilance and attention in the cure of our fish be reasonably urged? Does it not become absolutely necessary, if we are desirous to retain for the produce of our country that prestige and standing, which for so long a period it has maintained in the markets of the world.

Direct Steam Communication with the Labrador.

Closely connected with the subject of our Labrador fishery, is that of regular steam communication from Conception Bay connecting with the various harbors along that line of coast within the jurisdiction of the Government of this colony. Looking to the magnitude of the interests involved in this most important branch of our fisheries, more especially so far as Conception Bay is concerned the people of the various districts comprised within that extensive Bay forming a large majority of those engaged in the prosecution of this fishery, we feel deeply impressed from many reasons, with the necessity for increased facilities of correspondence and more frequent communication being extended during the summer months to those from the fruits of whose energy and enterprise within the period referred to, so much of good or evil is likely to result to the general interests of the colony. In the first place when we come to consider the vast numbers of our people who annually migrate to this distant region, thereby we might say separating themselves in no slight degree from the salutary influence of social intercourse with the various communities to which they may belong, much inconvenience, if not absolute danger to life or health must naturally result from the unavoidable absence of many of those necessary comforts and assistance which under more favorable circumstances might be easily availed of. Then again contingencies may arise, when an extra demand on the stock of supplies usually required for the season's voyage, may render further and additional increase, a matter of immediate necessity, much inconvenience, if not actual and serious loss to the interests of the voyage may be entailed, by want of the necessary facility, or means of communication with the particular quarter whence a further quantity may be obtained. To these may also be added the risk of any serious accident or epidemic in which the aid of surgical or medical assistance may be indispensable, and the means of obtaining such aid or assistance, either utterly beyond reach, or at best, too remote to be availed of. In such an unfortunate state of affairs, what financial consideration could compensate, for the loss of life or limb thus possibly endangered? The foregoing and various other important considerations which might be adduced dia time and space permit, point most unmistakably to the urgent and imperative necessity of all possible means of regular and frequent communication being placed within the reach of those who abandon the comforts and conveniences of home during so long a season, and by the fruits of their energy, enterprise and industry contribute so largely to the material wealth and prosperity of the Colony.

Since our last issue we availed of a favorable opportunity to visit the upper part of Conception Bay and for this purpose left Harbor Grace on Monday last, per "Lady Glover," for Brigus, where we arrived about half-past two o'clock in the afternoon. After a stay of about twenty-four hours in this picturesque and thriving little town we left in the afternoon of Tuesday for Bay Roberts where we arrived about six o'clock. As the result of our visit we give the following notes with reference to shipbuilding &c., in this section of the Bay which we gleaned during our progress, for the benefit of the readers of the "Carbonear Herald." Upon our arrival, feeling as we do, a deep and lively interest in the home industries of our country we proceeded to make inquiry and learned with much pleasure and satisfaction that with regard to the important industry of shipbuilding, Brigus and Bay Roberts occupied a position of prominence in this respect inferior to none other in the Bay. As an indisputable evidence of this fact we found that in Bay Roberts alone within the last two years no less than six vessels has been built by the energetic and enterprising firm of C. and A. Dawe; viz.—the "Alpha" in 1877, the "Brisk" and "Cabot" in 1878 and the "Dauntless," "Emma" and "Ruby" within the present year. Of these vessels, the "Brisk" is now in port discharging a cargo of salt, her second for the season, the "Cabot" is at present in Nova Scotia taking a cargo of lumber for the Bay and the "Emma" is being fitted out for the Labrador. The latter vessel we had the pleasure of visiting and found her upon inspection, in every respect to be a splendid specimen of native genius and skill in marine architecture. The "Emma" a vessel of over 100 tons, is throughout built of the very best material, copper fastened and fitted out with the latest and most improved system of steering apparatus. We learned also that during the present seasons over 200 vessels had cleared from Bay Roberts for Harbor Grace, St. John's and Labrador. A brig of 187 tons which had just discharged a cargo of salt was leaving Bay Roberts on the day of our visit.

The Hon. W. J. S. Donnelly, Surveyor General, accompanied by Mr. Long, topographical Surveyor of the Surveyor General's Department arrived in town yesterday. The object of the visit of these gentlemen is we understand the perfection of some arrangement with a view to contemplated alterations in our public thoroughfares.

We learn from the "Ledger" of Tuesday last, that Mr. C. F. Fraser, Superintendent of the Halifax Institution for the Blind, intends paying Newfoundland a visit in company with a few of the pupils of that establishment, his object being to give a series of concerts.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the "Carbonear Herald".
St. John's, May 26th, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—
Since your last issue the leading items of public interest has been the departure of the hon. W. V. Whiteway, Attorney General, by last mail steamer for England. The hon. gentleman's visit to the mother country is no doubt principally connected with the difficulties at present surrounding our Railway and French Shore questions. Judging from the favorable results as regards this colony, of the labors of the hon. gentlemen at the late Halifax Fisheries Commission, it is not I think, by any means unreasonable to anticipate from his present mission a similar satisfactory adjustment of the difficulties above mentioned. Should such fortunately prove to be the case, a most salutary impetus will be given to our local interests, and our country will in the near future have a fair chance of entering upon the race for progress and advancement with her sister colonies. In the absence of the Attorney General, the hon. Mr. Winter assumes his place as Acting Attorney General, having been duly sworn in, and his Commission read in Court on Saturday last by the Chief Justice. There is a case now going on in the District Court, before Judge Renouf, which is eliciting great interest. It is against Capt. Rex for inhuman treatment of a negro on a passage from Barbadoes. The negro is about 19 years of age. If this case be proven it will be one exception to our legal maxim Res non potest peccare. The weather here is anything but agreeable. Warm one day, comparatively cold another. I haven't received any news worth mentioning from the south this week.

Yours very truly,
JUVENS.

[FOR THE HERALD.]
The Coming Newfoundlander.

The coming Newfoundlander is coming, I have seen him. "Bide a-wee," and you will see him also,—as fine a specimen of humanity, physically, intellectually and morally, as ever your two eyes looked upon.

He stands five feet nine inches in his bare feet, is square-shouldered, strong-armed, and has magnificent legs. His head is rather square, business-like, in fact, Saxon. Usually bright and merry, his eye is now quick, penetrating, searching; now soft, alluring, fascinating. They say this kind of eye is peculiar to children of the Green Isle; I don't know. I do know that it blazes up sometimes, scintillating in a truly awful manner, especially when there is question of Confederation. This, too, is usually predicted of the eye Milesian. Moderately high and broad, his forehead is Celtic and Saxon, betraying the rigorous, subtle logic of the former, with the exact comprehensive intellectuality of the latter. I am of opinion also that his look is now and then a little "canny," particularly when negotiating with a smart Yankee the sale of some shares in the Grand Lake Consolidated Coal Mine Co. He plays cricket scientifically, is a fair shot, and sculls like Hanlan. But give him a "fore-and-after," and no matter how "hard" it blows, I venture to doubt whether he has an equal.

From some remarks I heard him make I infer that he is well-instructed, with fairly educated intellect. Being a little literary, he writes scientific papers in the Terra Nova Monthly, (a magazine of some merit, published in St. John's), regarding the conservation of the Codfish, the extent of our Coal-measures, Copper-mining and the immense profits of extensive sheep farming.

Nor is he a tad fellow as to either moral principles or honorable conduct. He has a fair share of the former, and is accredited also with a fair share of the latter. His love of Newfoundland is real and honest; his loyalty to the Sovereign thorough and conscientious.

When I saw him he was just stepping into a first-class carriage of the express train for Grand Lake to spend a month or two on the family farm. When you see him, you will say with me that the coming male Newfoundlander is a first-rate fellow. In the meantime, listen auribus erectis, and you will hear his name distinctly through the —, OUTPORT TELEPHONE—JOHN PATRICK ALEXANDER NEWFOUNDLAND.

Local and other Items.

QUICK PASSAGE.—We learn from the Chronicle that the barque Camellia, Capt. Harvey, owned by Messrs. P. & L. Tessier, sailed from this port on the 10th ulto, for Oporto, for orders; she was ordered thence to Viana, discharged part cargo, carrying the balance to Figueria, where she loaded a cargo of salt and returned to this port on the morning of the 24th inst.; thus performing the voyage in 42 days—the quickest on record.—North Star.

POLICE NEWS.—On the night of Wednesday the 28th ult., while the Police were conveying a young man to the Station charged with being disorderly, &c., a crowd assembled, three or four of the most determined of whom signalled themselves by making an attempt to rescue the prisoner. The Police were obliged to draw their batons and assume the defensive. They succeeded however in closing their man, and appeared on the street again where one of the would-be rescuers had put himself in a fighting attitude. He shared the same fate as the first, but not before leaving the imprint of his boots on the face, arm and leg of one of the Police.
 That morning those two were fined £1 each—the morning following three of the gang appeared voluntarily, pleaded ignorance and were fined in the like amount, with a wholesome caution from the worthy Magistrate.—Com.

The Press on the Herald.

There lies before us the first number of the "Carbonar Herald and Outport Telephone," a paper lately started in the above town by J. A. Rochfort Esq., of St. John's. The first issue of the "Herald" is got up in a very creditable style. (H. G. Standard.)
 We are happy to observe that Mr. Rochfort has established a journal at Carbonar in Conception Bay, under the title of "The Carbonar Herald and Outport Telephone." The paper is very creditably "got up" and will no doubt prove highly useful to the Bay generally, and to Carbonar in particular it must supply a great local desideratum. We wish the new journal all that success which the praiseworthy perseverance and industry of Mr. Rochfort, its editor and proprietor so rightly deserves.—Patriot.
 The first number of a Newspaper entitled "The Carbonar Herald and Outport Telephone," has been received at our office. The "Herald" is to be published weekly, on Thursdays at Carbonar, by J. A. Rochfort, Esq., late of this city. The number before us is well printed, contains a good selection of foreign and local matters, and its Editorial department will we feel assured, be conducted with judgment and ability.—Gazette.

Religious News.

The Bishop of Newfoundland return to St. John's from Conception Bay, Friday. His Lordship preached in the Cathedral on Sunday last. He leaves this week for visitations in Twillingate, Herring Neck and Fogo.
 The Rev. Pere L. LeCasse, O. M. J. for some years connected with the diocese of Harbor Grace, as missionary to the Esquimaux on the Labrador, and other tribes further north, arrived per 'Alhambra' during last week. Within the past few days the Rev. gentleman has been the guest of His Lordship the Bishop of Harbor Grace, and will almost immediately proceed to Labrador to re-enter upon the arduous duties of his mission. We most cordially wish the Rev. gentleman success in the prosecution of his philanthropic labors.
 The statistics of the Union Presbyterian Church of Japan, which consists of three missions, namely, those of the American Presbyterian, the American Re-

The total of the foreign staff is 29; of the native staff, 37. There are 18 organized churches, 41 preaching places, 3 mission stations, and 394 scholars in the schools. The number of members is 790. HEALTHY STOCK.—Every farmer and stock-raiser ought to bear this fact in mind—that burnt corn, coal and wool ashes is one of the very best preventives of disease in pigs, and while such simple remedies are so good they should always be borne in mind and used occasionally, say once or twice a week—an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure. Likewise give your horses and cattle free access to salt and a few ashes; and while they are kept in and fed, you will find it advisable also to give them some in their oats at least once a week. It gives animals a general healthy tone. And while such are good, we want a firm y impressed on your minds, and what's more, put in practice.—Farmer's Advocate.

ally found when the arc between the two carbons was irregular, which was due to poor trimming. Indium would never produce in incandescence a light equal to the electric arc. Mr. Berly, engineer, Paris, said his company had undertaken the lighting of the Thames Embankment using Jablockoff candle. The cost of lighting each lamp was 5d. per hour, which included the profit of the company. A loss of about 50 per cent. lighting power was caused by the use of globes. Improvements were being made in the light.
 At the Metropolitan Board of Works yesterday, a report was presented by the chief engineer and consulting chemist on the lighting of the Thames Embankment by electricity. It was stated that the cost per lamp was 5 1/4d. per hour, that the cost of gas giving the same amount of light would be 2 1/2d. in opal globes. The report declared that the defects connected with the electric light must prevent its adoption as a general mode of lighting.
 Another step in the development of the application of electricity to lighting purposes has to be recorded, Mr. Edison's second invention patented in this country having just been published at the Great Seal Patent Office. It is entitled "Improvements in Lighting by Electricity."

CAUTION.

The PILLS Purify the Blood, correct all disorders of the Liver, Stomach Kidneys and Bowls, and are invaluable in all complaints incidental to Females. The OINTMENT is the only reliable remedy for Bad Legs, Old Wounds, Sores, and Ulcers, of however long standing. For Bronchitis, Diphtheria, Coughs, Colds, Gout, Rheumatism, and all Skin Diseases it is no equal.

BWARE OF AMERICAN COUNTERFEITS.

I most respectfully take leave to call the attention of the Public generally to the fact, that certain Houses in New York are sending to many parts of the globe SPURIOUS IMITATIONS of my Pills and Ointment. These frauds bears on their labels some address in New York.
 I do not allow my medicines to be sold in any part of the United States. I have no Agents there. My Medicines are only made by me, at 555 Oxford Street London.
 In the books of directions affixed to the spurious make is a caution, warning the Public against being deceived by counterfeits. Do not be misled by this audacious trick, as they are the counterfeits they pretend to denounce.
 These counterfeits are purchased by unprincipled Vendors at one half the price of my Pills and Ointment, and are sold to you as my genuine Medicines.
 I most earnestly appeal to that sense of justice which I feel sure I may venture upon asking from all honorable persons, to assist me, and the Public, as far as may lie in their power, in denouncing this shameful Fraud.
 Each Pot and Box of the Genuine Medicines, bears the British Government Stamp, with the words "HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, LONDON," engraved thereon. On the label is the address, 533, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, where alone they are Manufactured. Holloway's Pills and Ointment bearing any other address are counterfeits.
 The Trade Marks of these Medicines are registered in Ottawa. Hence, any one throughout the British Possessions, who may keep the American Counterfeits for sale, will be prosecuted.
 Signed THOS HOLLOWAY,

A Friend in Need.

(From the Waverly Magazine.)
 Look back, my boy, and retrospect,
 And let the future fade
 Until we view the years that lie
 In graves already made;
 Come, let us dig them up again While mem'ry holds her own—
 I love to sing the olden song
 In sweet affection's tone.
 Although yet young, our boyhood days
 Look in the distant dim,
 And, as we read along life's book,
 New feelings do begin;
 It takes us back in visions grand
 To childhood's stately days,
 When time on eagle pinions flew
 In many sportive plays.
 But then a little farther go,
 When we were in our teens,
 Do you remember what we saw
 In fancy's youthful dream?
 We thought to brave the foeman's sword,
 Escape the battle scar,
 And with all glory come again
 Out from that cruel war.
 But ere we turn our gaze away
 More peaceful scenes to view, We look and find that we have been Each to the other true:
 'Tis now our heart can swell with pride
 In this we did succeed,
 And may our motto ever be A friend to friend in need.

MALDEN VALENTINE.

HELEN'S HEART; OR,
 TOLD BY THE SHADOWS.

(Concluded.)
 It was a gay winter in —, and yet it was a hard, cold, stubborn winter for those beyond the pale of wealth and fashion. Hard times became so visible a reality that those who looked on unconcerned for themselves saw that humanity called for some remedy, at least for alleviation, if not for cure.
 There were contributions and visiting committees and labor of one kind or another; until at last some of the elite determined upon a grand amateur entertainment—a sprinkling of comedy, chaff, and tableaux, for the benefit of the suffering poor.
 Helen did not enter into the latter very enthusiastically, though she after some coaxing, agreed to take a minor part. The stage and footlights had never dazzled her fancy. That affair was to be public open to all the world, of course and perhaps, farmer's daughter though she was, she was too aristocratic to care to help minister to the amusement of the populace of a provincial city. It was the end in view alone that finally induced her scruples and join her friend in the undertaking.
 If her part on the stage were of minor importance, her place in the preparations was not, and her active governing made itself felt everywhere.
 The evening at last arrived, the house was crowded, the performance proceeded with great zeal.
 Helen stood in one of the wings watching the stage, all costumed for the next scene. There was a painful frown on her face since she had found that, at the last moment, by a necessary substitution, she would have to "go on" with Richard Steele, and she was just thinking if this could be a trick played upon her by some of those who had noticed her avoidance of Steele.
 Her quick ear caught the sound of footsteps, could it be Richard Steele, coming to insult her with his presence before it was needed? Could he know the ghastly struggle she had this day had on his account, the great yearning to cry out that she had stifled. Villain though he was, she had been truer to him than he had dreamed of.
 The steps sound-d familiar. With a bound her mind went back and she saw herself by the spring in Hazel Dell, where she last listened to the sound of their coming.
 She saw him at last. He came through the shadows in the darkness; but he was not in costume. He was in full evening dress.
 How was this? He came out of the shadows. His face changed. He was no longer Richard Steele, he was Wynwood Herbert.
 He came hastily forward, with outstretched hand as if to greet her but halted suddenly at something he saw in her attitude and face.
 She was white as marble, and her eyes were dilated and fixed with a horrified expression.
 "My dear Helen he exclaimed, 'What is it? In Heaven's name what have you seen or heard—what have I done? Is that look meant for me?'
 "No nearer, sir, if you please, no nearer!"
 She raised both hands and with uplifted palms turned towards him.
 "What sudden change is this? Who has dared to malign me to you? A day or two ago and I was your best friend—may I believe I was more than friend. Now—what has wrought this change?"
 Helen's lips still quivered her face was still ashen, her eyes still dilated; but she was gradually recovering her senses.
 "You a friend—more than a friend? Never! You were naught to me at the best, now as only a woman can whose heart you have crushed, whose life you have wrecked, I hate you. I know you at last—the shadows told me—the darkness revealed in the story."

 "You hate me?" he cried, drawing nearer, and as yet misunderstanding her words. "You are wild; someone has been torturing you. Since I have known you I defy the sharpest tongue of malice to utter a truth against my sincerity and devotion, to name a thing in which I have been untrue to you, to point to a single reason why I should not lay my heart and fortune at your feet."
 "Since you have known me? Were you ever at Weston?"
 "Never."
 It was an unguarded statement, almost but not quite true. His face flushed and he breathed hard as if expecting a coming thrust.
 "And you never knew Susie Hemming?"
 "Never."
 "I received a letter from Weston to-day. Her bones have been found secreted near the path that leads by the spring in the little dingle on what used to be my father's farm."
 "You from Weston? Heaven is my witness I never knew it. I never knew her."
 "It is false sir. I saw you go down that path with your victim, to the place of slaughter not ten minutes before she met her death. She was pleading with you even then. I mistook you for Richard Steele and to this day supposed they had gone off together. Oh, my pride, my pride! If I had only the courage to learn more! Others saw your meeting—to this day he bears the blame—he might have stood in a felon's cell had not it been for this meeting you thrust upon me."
 Wynwood Herbert had stood like one stunned through this outburst. Now he sprang forward and caught her fiercely by the wrist while his eyes blazed like fire.
 "And now—what would you do?"
 "Proclaim the whole story from the house-tops but what I will clear him."
 "I am innocent of her death, I swear it!"
 "I saw you together! I will tell the truth!"
 "By heavens, you shall not! If I have lost you I have nothing to hold me to life, but I will never do upon the scaffold your promise, promise, quick, never to reveal this!"
 He was wild with passion; he was frantic, carried away; a very maniac. The livid look depended upon his face; his teeth grated together with a sound like that made by a wild beast. Verily the fine gentleman had changed into a desperate madman.
 He then, with a superb courage that refused to scream, raised her eyes firmly to his, and with her coolness all come back, calmly said in a deep, low tone.
 "But I shall tell—Unhand me sir."
 He loosened one hand as he spoke, but it was to raise it towards her throat.
 A moment more and his fingers might have cut her throat-like at her neck when suddenly they were no longer a one. Richard Steele bounded through the shadows, caught Wynwood Herbert by the shoulders swung him from his feet and flung him with terrific force to the floor.
 "Hold him, for your life hold him! He is a murderer!" exclaimed Helen, then, just as they came trooping in from the stage, she fell fainting in the arms of Richard Steele, who leaped forward in time to catch her.

It created a vast sensation. People talked and shook their heads and looked wise. Other people went quite wild with excitement. Wynwood Herbert was tried for the murder of Susie Hemming, and in the opinion of a great many was found guilty. It was slow that he met his end in a ham-burgh—a town some ten or dozen miles from Weston—where she was visiting some relatives, that he had shown her many attentions, and an unsigned note, found by Susie's father after her disappearance, was identified as his handwriting. Helen Jayne despite her pride and aversion to the task told the story. Richard Steele, who was called to give evidence upon another point, gave testimony, afterwards corroborated by other, that he was not in Weston that fatal evening, and as the trial had been prolonged into the dusk, the jury had optical proof of the singular and startling resemblance of the two men when seen in the shadow—a resemblance which was but dimly visible a few moments later in the broad glare of the gas-light. The bones found in the cleft of two huge rocks, were shown to be those of a young female, and a ring found with them was proved to be hers. It seemed a pretty fair case.
 Wynwood Herbert's story was a substantially this:
 He had known Miss Hemming—intimately—she should have been his wife. He had met her that night and finally refused to make her his wife. He was asked with her to the banks of the creek, where she had flung herself down. He turned away. She gave a great scream, said that she had taken poison, she would die, and her blood would be upon his head. After that he had remained silent and he, disbelieving her, had walked away. Doubtless she had told the truth, lying there by the side of the stream, she had breathed her life away. A day or two later there was a great storm and her body had been washed into the rift and covered with floating debris. Her friends had been thrown off the scent by her letter and her body remained buried for years without discovery. Doubtless he had been very wicked—but this was not murder.

It was a plausible tale especially for one with wealth and friends. He did not ascend the scaffold, at least, and if he tasted for a time the fellow's cell, what more was it than upon his own showing that he richly deserved?
 Helen's heart pitied him and felt for him and hated him—but Helen's heart also still loved Richard Steele.
 And so in the fulness of the fruition of Richard's early desires, the two hearts became one. It took time to build up a complete reconciliation, and it is not certain that Helen will ever a together forgive herself for the past; but she has a fair chance for a happy life and Richard knows that, though it may sometimes seem to bend from the exact line of its allegiance, there is nothing so true in all this world as a woman's heart.

PAUL GASCOIGNE'S MARRIAGE.

Every one wondered when Paul Gascoigne married, though indeed, considering that he was a man of considerable fortune, there would have been cause for wonder if he had not. And yet people did wonder, and talk too, when the papers announced one morning the place that Paul Gascoigne had taken to himself a wife; and then their tongues ran on freely, wondering whom he had married, or whether the lady was young and pretty, or the reverse.
 For the past eighteen years Mr. Gascoigne had been abroad, no one knew where, and no one altogether cared to ask him when he came home, bronzed with travel and prematurely gray, a year before starting the world with the announcement of his marriage.
 Paul Gascoigne kept himself to himself that there was a shadow over his life, no one doubted; yet nobody quite knew the reason that had driven him abroad at one and twenty away from his own house and home.
 Every one knows his own secrets best, and Paul Gascoigne kept his well. Nobody knew why he went, or why he came back after eighteen long years, and was now, at forty-one a stern reserved man, erect and strong with bright deep blue eyes, but hair and mustache gray before their time.
 He was at once handsome and remarkable looking—"interesting," many a fair one called him; and been well known to the rich, he was greatly run after, but all in vain.
 Mr. Paul Gascoigne was evidently not a lady's man, and when the London season was over he was still free. Great, therefore, was the surprise when a few months later he married.
 And, had people known it the manner of his marriage was romantic enough. Mr. Gascoigne who if he was nothing else, was certainly a sportsman to the backbone, was returning after tramping many weary miles, to his delectable little shooting place on the Scottish moor, one hot afternoon.
 The sun was sinking westward in dying splendor, and a l was very calm and peaceful when the stillness was broken by a woman's scream.
 Throwing down his bag and gun Mr. Gascoigne set off at a run towards the river, when he cries proceeded.
 Reaching the high bank he looked down through the network of over hanging branches to see a girl's white, despaired face and two up lifted arms clinging to a branch while her body was lifted up by the rapid current. The sun shone on the upturned face and terror-filled eyes on the mud hands clinging convulsively to the branches.
 "Hold on!" shouted Mr. Gascoigne frantically, divesting himself of his coat and boots, and scrambling down the high bank he sprang in just as, with a last cry of "help, help!" the girl's hands slipped from their hold, and the white figure was swept down the stream.
 She rose and sank as Mr. Gascoigne struck out, trying vainly to grasp her as she floated again. It was a critical moment, for the river was deep there and full of holes; but just as the dark rushing water was closing over head, he caught her long masses of hair, and succeeded in bringing her to land, nearly a quarter of a mile from the place where he had seen her first.
 Dripping he stood with his lifeless burden beside him, looking with concern at the deathlike features.
 "Poor little thing, I'm afraid she's dead, he thought as he rubbed her hands and tried to bring back life and circulation. Then he remembered that he had a flask of brandy in his coat-pocket and ran back for it.
 He had not scoured the world for 18 years for nothing, and this girl was not the first fellow creature he had rescued from drowning; so in a short time he had the satisfaction of seeing his efforts crowned with success, and of beholding two violet eyes opening for a second, to be veiled again immediately by the long, wit eye-lashes that drooped over the white cheeks.
 "All right," said her deliverer, pouring a few more drops of brandy between her blue lips. "And now what am I to do with her?"
 Standing up, he shaded his eyes with his hand and looked round. Not very far off was a roof between the trees, so in that direction he bent his steps. Stooping he lifted the girl's slight form up in his arms, and stepped out, looking down anxiously at the face hanging back on his arm, with its wealth of bright brown hair hanging in a wet mass back from her forehead, and beginning to wish he could see the deep violet eyes again.

WIT AND HUMOR.

A crusty old bachelor's objection to ladies with beautiful teeth is that nine out of every ten of them would laugh at a funeral.
 Who was the author of that little poem beginning:
 'Tis sweet to love but oh, how bitter To love a girl and then not get her?'
 "Is this air tight?" inquired a man in a hardware store as he examined a stove.
 "No, sir," replied the clerk; "air never gets tight." He lost a customer.
 A Kentucky editor says that in one week he was addressed as Governor, General, Colonel, Major and Old Boss.
 Waiter—"Beg pardon, sir, but I think you've made a mistake. This is a half-penny!" Old Gent—(grandly)—"Oh, dear no, not at all! I never give less."
 Home Missionary.—"Are you a Son of Temperance?" Tope.—"No reaction at all, I can you sir, not even an acquaintance."
 "And what did you think of Switzerland?" asked a lady of a young American belle who had just made the tour.
 "Pretty place; but it struck me there were too many lakes and too few young men."
 "Will the boy who threw that red pepper on the stove please come up here and get a present of a nice book?" said a Sunday-school superintendent in Iowa; but the boy never moved. He was a far-seeing boy.
 "Fellow-citizens," said a North Carolina candidate "there are three topics which now agitate the state—greenbacks, taxation and the penitentiary. I shall pass over the first two very briefly, as my sentiments are well known, and come to the penitentiary where I shall dwell for some time."
 "What made you quit the East," said a man in Nevada to a new-comer. "I got into trouble by marrying two wives," was the response. "Well," said the other, "I came here because I got into trouble by marrying only one wife." And I? added a by-stander, came out here because I got into trouble simply by promising to marry one.
