

THE CHICAGO MYSTERY.

WHAT A MILKMAN SAW ON THE NIGHT OF THE TRAGEDY.

A Detective Under Suspicion—Police Officers in Secret Conference—Who were Cronin's Murderers?

CHICAGO, May 25.—William Merles, a milkman who lived in the neighborhood of the Carson cottage, at which it is supposed Dr. Cronin was murdered, tells a story which adds to the evidence leading to the conclusion that on the night of the murder, between 8.20 and 9 o'clock, about the time at which it is supposed the Doctor arrived there in the buggy with the man who came from the grocery at his house to visit the grocery at the corner of Ashland-avenue and Otto-street, which is only a short block south of the Carson cottage. He walked east in Addison-avenue to Ashland, and then turned south on the east sidewalk. As he neared the Carson cottage a buggy containing two men rolled up to the edge of the ditch. One of the men, whom Merles describes as a tall and athletic man, wearing a spruce frock coat and a top hat, sprang from the buggy and ran up the front stairs of the cottage, the door of which was thrown open before he knocked for admission. Scarcely had the door closed again when the sound of loud and angry voices within the cottage startled the milk-dealer. He looked searchingly at the man in the buggy, but the stranger's face was shrouded by the brim of a soft hat, and Merles was unable to tell whether he was stout or slender, or fair or dark. The fellow whipped his horse into a gallop, drove to Addison-avenue and then turned in the direction of the lake. Merles says there was a dim light in the front room and that the man who went up the steps—presumably Dr. Cronin—wore a long brown overcoat. Mrs. Conklin, the woman at whose house Dr. Cronin lived, says the doctor wore a long brown coat on the night of the murder. A morning paper publishes a story which implicates a member of the Chicago police force in the taking off of Cronin. The officer in question is Detective Daniel Coughlin. The paper says that on the morning of the day on which Cronin disappeared Coughlin engaged at a livery stable not far from where Cronin lived a horse and buggy, which he said a friend of his would call for that evening; that the man did call and was given a white horse, similar to the one attached to the buggy in which Cronin was decoyed away; that the time of going away was described as corresponding, both with the time when he came from Cronin and with the appearance of the man himself; that Coughlin subsequently told the livery stable keeper to say nothing about the matter. Police officers to these revelations by the fact that Coughlin was a member of one or more societies of which Cronin was a member and that they were enemies. The matter was finally brought to the attention of Chief of Police Hubbard, who seems inclined to take a serious view of the matter and promises to probe it to the bottom.

This afternoon a secret conference took place at which Mayor Cregier, States Attorney Longuecker, Chief Hubbard, Chief Detective Elliott, and other officials were present. The Herald this morning says: "Yesterday's developments give point to the belief that the murderers are not and may never have been residents of Chicago. On the contrary, there is some reason to suppose that his slayers crossed the water from England with designs on his life, and that as soon as they completed their work they made their escape. It will be remembered that one T. J. Kirby, a resident of Canada, came to Chicago last year from London, Eng., on a secret mission for The London Times. Kirby knew Cronin when he lived at St. Catharines, Ont., and when he came to Chicago he renewed his acquaintance with the doctor. Kirby says that the two met frequently in Chicago when Kirby was doing spy work for The Times. The connection is suggestive, to say the least. When Le Caron was on the witness stand in the Harrod case he refused to give the names of his American accomplices on the ground that it would be as much as their lives were worth to be known. Le Caron was ordered by the court, however, to furnish the name or names respectively to the court and counsel, which he did. Might it not be that a detachment of the band that followed Carey to his death followed Cronin to his cruel fate?"

The Times says: The charges that Dr. Cronin and his friends made against Alexander Sullivan, Michael Boland and Dennis C. Feely, the triumvirate that acted as a board of directors for the United Brotherhood, are stronger than mere endorsement of funds and malfeasance in office. There was a charge not long ago brought against the members of this board that they had not only misappropriated large sums of the money subscribed for the good of the Irish National movement in the Old Country, but that they, or some of them, either intentionally or otherwise allowed secrets of the order to escape their grasp by using in the imprisonment of several emigrants of the Clan-na-Gael and the death of two on British soil. The charges are said to have been based merely on suspicion, but Dr. Cronin was said to have been active in the accumulation of testimony calculated to corroborate the suspicions. In addition to this and more sensational than all, is the undoubted fact that in the possession of Dr. Cronin was an affidavit made by a well-known Irish-American that he heard one of the parties interested in these and other disclosures say that Dr. Cronin must be put out of the way. The name of the man who made this statement is in the possession of the States Attorney and a warrant for his arrest may be looked for at any moment.

Detective Coughlin has explained to Supt. Hubbard his connection with hiring a white horse from Livery stable keeper Dinan on the day on which Cronin disappeared. He says that a few days before May 4 a stranger introduced himself to Coughlin as Thomas Smith of Hancock, Mich., a friend of Coughlin's brother. He was on his way to New Mexico, he said, and Mr. Coughlin of Hancock asked him to look up his brother. Dr. Cronin, the detective, while he was in Chicago, Detective Coughlin showed Smith around town, Saturday Smith said he would like to take a buggy ride that evening to the home of an aunt, but he did not know whether the livery stable keeper would trust a stranger with a horse. Coughlin told Smith to go to Dinan's place whenever he wanted a horse, and he would see Dinan during the day and make it all right. Smith got the white horse and rig and Coughlin did not see him again for a week or more, when Coughlin met him on the street and wanted to know why he did not pay for the use of the rig. Dinan having come to Coughlin for the money, Smith gave Coughlin $3 and said he would give him the other $2 later. Coughlin met Smith for the last time one day last week and Smith said he would meet for New Mexico the next day. An evening paper says that the matter turned over to the police by the serious nature of the blood-stained coat. The police seem to have the epistle to be sent to him, but go on enough to indicate that

THE WIDE, WIDE WORLD.

WHAT IS GOING ON IN OTHER LANDS AND PLACES.

Advice to Husbands. Always come home good-tempered, leaving business cares behind, and do not vent annoyances met with at the office on your wife and family. Make yourself agreeable to your wife and friends and do not sit glum all the evening, looking utterly bored. Be lenient to your wife's faults and do not expect perfection until you have first become perfect yourself. Be punctual at meals. Remember that a cook cannot keep dinner waiting without its being spoiled. Do not expect each servant to have two pairs of hands. Do not expect your wife to keep accounts unless you take the trouble to keep your own correctly. Dress as well and as neatly as your means will allow, and be careful not to get your best trousers wet, as baggy knees are a thing no woman can respect. Be as kind and attentive to your wife as you were before your marriage, and remember she has got no pipe to go to for comfort. When your liver is out of order, remember food cannot be palatable; therefore do not grumble and turn over on your plate what your wife has provided for you, as if it were not fit for a dog to eat.

THE CHICAGO MYSTERY.

DISCOVERIES RELATING TO CRONIN'S DEATH.

CHICAGO, May 24.—A post-mortem examination of Dr. Cronin's body was made yesterday. The doctors found no signs of suffocation or strangling, and could not agree as to the cause of death, although all were of opinion that Cronin might have been killed by the blow on the outer corner of the forehead. Even on this blow was not enough to fracture or splinter the bones. The mystery of the case is thus deepened. The funeral will take place Sunday. Dr. Cronin's brother, John, arrived from Arkansas yesterday and positively identified the body.

Wm. E. Hotchkiss, a reporter for the Inter Ocean, did a little police work last night on his own account. The result may be that another person besides Cronin was murdered. Hotchkiss found that the suburban police had neglected to search the catch basin where Cronin's body was found after removing the corpse. The newspaper man undertook the work himself. In the bottom of the sewer basin, concealed in the water, he found a bloody towel exactly similar to the one which was wrapped about Cronin's head. Further probing brought up a single human finger. The member was decomposed, and it was impossible to determine whether it was a man's or a woman's. The police are giving a vacant cottage in Lakeview, which was rented shortly before Dr. Cronin's death, but has not been occupied since. A reporter gained entrance this morning and discovered blood stains on the front parlor floor, in the corner of the back parlor, in the hallway and on the front steps. The steps were saturated with blood, although the murderers evidently made an effort to wipe away the evidence of the crime. The parlor floor is covered with bloody marks. The floor is drenched with brown paint, and it can be plainly seen that the job was done in a hurry, but that there was no attempt at completely covering up the life blood of Dr. Cronin.

THE CHICAGO MYSTERY.

DISCOVERIES RELATING TO CRONIN'S DEATH.

CHICAGO, May 24.—A post-mortem examination of Dr. Cronin's body was made yesterday. The doctors found no signs of suffocation or strangling, and could not agree as to the cause of death, although all were of opinion that Cronin might have been killed by the blow on the outer corner of the forehead. Even on this blow was not enough to fracture or splinter the bones. The mystery of the case is thus deepened. The funeral will take place Sunday. Dr. Cronin's brother, John, arrived from Arkansas yesterday and positively identified the body.

Wm. E. Hotchkiss, a reporter for the Inter Ocean, did a little police work last night on his own account. The result may be that another person besides Cronin was murdered. Hotchkiss found that the suburban police had neglected to search the catch basin where Cronin's body was found after removing the corpse. The newspaper man undertook the work himself. In the bottom of the sewer basin, concealed in the water, he found a bloody towel exactly similar to the one which was wrapped about Cronin's head. Further probing brought up a single human finger. The member was decomposed, and it was impossible to determine whether it was a man's or a woman's. The police are giving a vacant cottage in Lakeview, which was rented shortly before Dr. Cronin's death, but has not been occupied since. A reporter gained entrance this morning and discovered blood stains on the front parlor floor, in the corner of the back parlor, in the hallway and on the front steps. The steps were saturated with blood, although the murderers evidently made an effort to wipe away the evidence of the crime. The parlor floor is covered with bloody marks. The floor is drenched with brown paint, and it can be plainly seen that the job was done in a hurry, but that there was no attempt at completely covering up the life blood of Dr. Cronin.

THE FASHIONS

A Variety of Settings that Will Interest the Fair Sex.

This year's silks are chiefly remarkable for their splendid designs, nearly all on a large scale, floral designs predominating. The white-grounded thin-ner silks have a natural colored floral design. Imperatrice is one of the new-est kinds of silk; it is horizontally corded, the cord being bold, thick and closely set in rows. It is either used by itself or for combining with velvets and plushes. Large plaids are fashionable, but require an artist to arrange them to suit the figure; badly cut, they are atrocious. Brocades with amure and merveilleux grounds are popular, and there is a tendency to employ silks with pale-colored grounds and over designs in black. Pongees still holds its own.

Gray, green, and tan pongees are sometimes chosen for travelling and sun parasols. Everything can be used for those for dressy occasions. Gold and silver lace and embroidery in all their rich and brilliant patterns are called in to help out the decorations of the parasol. A most striking example is a canopy-topped parasol, covered with delicate, almost transparent, lavender silk, and trimmed with circular rows of wide and filmy silver lace, inclosing spaces run with baby ribbons of white moire, alternating with wavy vine patterns in silver-floss embroidery. This parasol has a broad, white ribbon twisted about inside from one rib to another, and when the parasol is closed it falls in queer, bunched loops about the handle.

"It not infrequently happens that the inside of a parasol receives more decoration than the cover. A green parasol is considered chic if pale tinted and perfectly plain on the outside, while within every rib is edged with a full fall of white lace, one or two lengths crossing endwise the pretty, steamer lung pavilion. The same idea is carried out in a handsome Directory parasol with cover of heavy white brocade adorned only by its very rich veins, until one peeps into the inside and discovers the white ribbons and knotted bows which are tacked over the ribs to conceal the frame-work.

"It seems odd to talk of Directory parasols, seeing that the article which goes by that name borrows not one idea from the last century. The parasol of the Directory was not built to use and was a most awkward and inconvenient thing to carry. Still, everything which is made, even to walls, which were not worn under the Directory, arrogates that name this season.

"There is nothing more novel in the spring parasol collection than the oddity with one panel unlike the other seven. A notably rich and elegant parasol is of cream silk, covered with flounces of Spanish lace. The flounces are quite wide and run about the cover without interruption until they reach the fast panel. Here the continuity is broken except that the bottom flounce, edging the points, completes its allotted circle. The panel or side thus left vacant is covered with silver spangled gauze, totally different from the lace in texture, draped from top to bottom instead of in a horizontal circle.

"Frings and hand painting are features of the new parasols. One beautiful specimen calculated to make havoc in the hands of a pretty girl, is covered with a creamy white silk, and edged with a white silk fringe, like that on the old silk and costume always not so fashionable, many inches in length, so that the pretty girl's eyes must twinkle through the threads if they are to get any twinkling accomplished. One very new design is of black silk painted with large straggling passion flowers. Jet beading and embroidery is the further decoration, which is set on in bands without regard to what spray may be crossed, what may partially hidden."

Parasols of black and white will be stylish; and those covered with embroidered gauze, ribbons, and chenille dotted tulle, very troublesome and inconvenient, even though it is shipped into three lots in the color of the costume, lined with some tint of the color in combination, with medium length natural wood handle, and a bow or two of ribbon, will make a parasol in excellent taste, and carry enough diversity with it to make it "fashionable." Black, lined with white, cream, black, or some light or dark tint, and trimmed with lace, will be good form. Small covered black buttons are an odd and inappropriate decoration found on some of the nevelities.

Good to All.

Dear Sirs:—I can recommend Hayward's Yellow Oil as a sure cure for rheumatism, from which disease I suffered for some time, but was cured with two bottles. It is the best thing I can get for man or horse. J. Mustard, Strathaven, Ont.

Not a Book A Cent

Mr Goode, druggist, is not a book agent, but has the agency in Goderich for Johnston's Tonic Bitters, which he can heartily recommend for any complaint to which a tonic medicine is applicable. This valuable medicine has been with most astonishing good results in cases of general debility, weakness, irregularities peculiar to females, extreme paleness, impoverishment of the blood, stomach and liver troubles, loss of appetite, and for that general worn-out feeling that nearly every one is troubled with at some part of the year. Don't forget the name Johnston's Tonic Bitters 50c. and $1 per bottle at Goode's drug store, Albion block, Goderich, sole agent.

Miss Alice J. Coleclough, daughter of Mr Henry Coleclough, of Hullett, left on Friday last for Bathgate, Dakota, where her sister is at present living.

A REWARD—Of one dozen "TEABERY" to any one sending the best four limericks on "TEABERY," the remarkable little gem for the Teeth and Eats. Ask your druggist or address

A wealthy business man not long ago made a short trip into his native town, a thriving little place, and while there was asked to address the Sunday School on the general subject of success in life. "But I don't know that I have anything to say, except that industry and honesty win the race," he answered. "Your very example would be inspiring if you would tell the story of your life," said the superintendent. "Are you not a self-made man?" "I don't know about that."

"Why, I've heard all about your early struggles! You went into Mr Wheelwright's office when you were only ten—"

"So I did! So I did! But my mother got me the place, and while I was there she did all my washing and mending, so that I had something to eat, and when I got discouraged, told me to cheer up and remember tears were for babies."

"Well, it was certainly true, wasn't it, that as soon as you had saved a little money, you invested in fruit, and began to peddle it out on the evening train?"

"The rich man's eyes twinkled and then grew moist over the fun and pathos of some old recollection. "Yes," he said, slowly "and I should like to tell you a story connected with that time. Perhaps that might do the Sunday school good. The second lot of apples I bought were specked and wormy. I had been cheated by the man of whom I bought them, and I could not afford the loss. The night after I discovered they were unfit to eat, I crept down cellar and filled my basket as usual."

"They look very well on the outside," I thought, "and perhaps none of the people who buy them will ever come this way again. I'll sell them, and just as soon as they're gone, I'll get some sound ones."

"Mother was singing about the kitchen, as I came up the cellar stairs. I hoped to get out of the house without discussing the subject of unsound fruit, but in the twinkling of an eye she had been and was upon me. "No!" said she, in her clear voice, "what are you going to do with those specked apples?" "So—sell them," stammered I, ashamed in advance. "Then you'll be a cheat, and I shall be ashamed to call you my son," she said promptly. Oh, to think you could dream of such a sneaking thing as that! Then she cried and I cried, and I've never been tempted to cheat since. No, sir, I haven't anything to say in public about my early struggles, but I wish you remind your boys and girls every Sunday that their mothers are probably doing far more for them than they do for themselves. Tell them, than too, to pray that those dear women may live long enough to enjoy some of the prosperity they have won for their children—for mine didn't."

Never Despair.

Even when all seems lost, there is yet hope. Many a despairing, disheartened victim of dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney complaint, scrofula or rheumatism, has been brought back to health and usefulness by Burdock Blood Bitters, the greatest remedy known for all blood diseases.

Many who drive do not seem to understand that the law gives the right of way to the pedestrian. A man or woman who is crossing the street at a regular crossing is not obliged to look out for the person who is driving the team, but the person driving is to take care not to jostle or incommodate the person walking.
FOR SALE CHEAP.—Note, letter and account papers, foolscap, etc. ruled and unruled, white, cream laid, linen and French papers, ladies' and gentlemen's cards, wedding stationery, business cards, shipping tags, fine printing papers, envelopes,—all sizes and qualities, at THE SIGNAL steam printing house. Call and see our sample books and get prices.

"Prof." Johnston has acted the rogue in Wingham. Last week he left that town as he did Exeter—without paying his debts. The press would do well to pass him around. This fraud was exposed by THE SIGNAL some years ago, but, as the fools are not all dead, the "professor" still manages to ply his vocation. He doesn't come to Goderich, however.
Blyth is blessed with a few very economical souls. Whenever they lay out, or wish to call a meeting sometimes, they save all possible expense. They borrow a piece of paper and with someone else's pen and ink a notice is written, the loan of a hammer is secured, half a dozen tacks begged, and the hieroglyphics appear on a tattered pole or in the post office. Nothing like keeping down the expenses.
Acting Mayor McMillan, of Toronto, was in town on Wednesday attending the annual meeting of the Supreme Orange Lodge. LIEUT.-COL. ALLAN.—Lieut.-Col. Dan'l H. Allan, the commanding officer of the Queen's Own, is a well known and respected member of the Canadian militia. He joined the regiment in 1866, and went to the front at that time with the troops ordered out to resist the Fenian raid. He has served through all the grades of military command, being finally promoted in February, 1887, from major to lieutenant-colonel in his regiment. When captain of "A" company of the Queen's Own he was noted as having the best shooting company in the regiment, if not in the Dominion. Under his command the Queen's Own have maintained their high record for efficiency, and in point of numbers and organization are the Canadian militia. Lieut.-Col. Allan was through the North-West as major of the detachment, doing duty there. As he found it impossible to accompany the regiment to Montreal, the command has devolved upon Major Delamere—Montreal Star.

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHY.—The Stratford Herald was shown today a couple of photographs taken by Mr Keith McLean. They were well defined, well arranged and well brought out. The first scene shows the two "Jims," Macfadden and Wade, under their bicycles, having apparently met with an accident. Macfadden's dog is also mixed up in the scramble. "Mac" looks resigned and Wade's face wears a "see that my grave's kept green" expression. George Kay is engaged extracting Wades and George Tiffin is endeavoring to "yank" off Mac's leg. Both pictures are quite interesting to look at, and show that Mr McLean has given quite a bit of attention to shadow-catching for amusement only.—Stratford Herald.

THE AARINKSEN CONCERT.—A fashion able and appreciative audience filled the Grand Opera House, last Tuesday evening, upon the event of the first appearance here of Mrs Agnes Thomson, "Canada's fair songstress." Miss Langstaff, also of Toronto, assisted in carrying out the program, the duties of which, owing to the non appearance of a quartette club, fell heavily upon the ladies' shoulders, though decidedly to the great delight of the audience. Prof. Aarinksen was the means by which our town was brought under Mrs Thomson's notice, and his desire to give us a musical treat was commendable. Mrs Thomson's two songs, Handel's "Angela Ever Bright and Fair" and "Una Voce" showed the versatility of her talent, which is of the highest order. Her voice is clear, pure and sweet, her high notes perfect, added to a beauty of face and form not often combined with so much genius. Mrs Thomson being vigorously encouraged sang "Comin' thro' the Rye," and "Old Folks at Home," and it goes without saying that she carried her audience with her; these favorite airs, the former being sung with the charming cynopsis of expression that is particularly pleasing in a song of its stamp. Miss Langstaff, who has a mezzo-soprano voice, rendered "Marguerite," and "Callie Harris," most pleasingly, and her hearers were charmed in not every prima donna who can equally master the two very distinct types that each of the songs represent, and if one, outside the myopic musical circle might presume to pass judgment, a shade of preference would be given to the operatic style, which seemed to suit Mrs Thomson in every particular. Pianos tuned and repaired at moderate charges. Also, instruction in the piano solo, which filled in the breeze probably they may have been conceptions of Mrs Thomson upon the platform again, when she gave "Home Sweet Home," introducing various little runs and trills, showing the beauty and fidelity of her voice. Miss Langstaff accompanied herself in two songs, which displayed instrumental ability. Miss Cooke acted as accompanist with her usual ability. We would extend a hearty welcome to Mrs Agnes Thomson and Miss Langstaff, at any future date, under different management, though it ought to be a matter of congratulation to them that they were able to entrance their audience for so long, even with the onus of being the sole support.

A Burnt Cork Artist Creates a Sensation with a Revolver—An Alleged "Crooked" Patriotic Society of Artists.

Toronto, May 28.—The principal event of Queen's birthday here was the unveiling of the statue of the late Rev. Egerton Ryerson, the founder of Ontario's school system.

After prayer and singing Hon. G. W. Ross delivered an oration. He paid a glowing eulogy to the memory of Rev. Dr. Ryerson and reviewed his grand work in the most felicitous terms, as indeed did all the speakers that followed.

The Minister of Education then called upon the Lieutenant-Governor to do the unveiling. Sir Alexander in a few words said that no governor of this province had called upon to perform a more pleasant duty.

NOT IN THE PLAY. In the Grand Opera House on Friday night Edward Stowe, one of the end men of Haverly's Minstrels, created some sensation by firing a pistol shot into the audience.

During the Busy Season. The good woman, looking up curiously at the young man's face, was surprised to see him so composed and calm; he witnessed nothing of his walk through the woods, when he battled her into his jealousy, and prayed God's blessing on Bonnie Ailsie.

ROB'S WOOING.

"My boy's going to Glasgow, Miss Ailsie—my lad, the light of my eyes! Couldn't he do nothin' to you?"

"Glasgow is not very far off," said Ailsie Probit, the prettiest maiden in Dunrobin, as she opened her brown eyes in astonishment to see Mrs. Palmer, the busy housewife at Dun Farm, amid the group of little ones pouring into the village school.

"Come ye here a moment," said Mrs. Palmer, drawing Ailsie into the tiny kitchen, which stood at the end of the passage. "You're bonnie enough to have a heart about you, lass. Haven't ye given Rob hopes and turned the lad's head with your ways—till me that?"

"Really, Mrs. Palmer, I cannot stand out listening to such talk; there never was anything settled between your son and myself."

"Nay, but ye gave him hopes; didn't ye always walk home with you from the park, and bring you berries and flowers to me, and was there a lad in Dunrobin that you would look at then but my Rob? Now that the grand folks at the Lodge have taken you up, Rob's head is ask you the question; he's gone away without a word, Ailsie, girl, but I've sent you a message for him; my boy loves you, lassie!"

"Nothing! but I hope he'll get on in the farming abroad."

"The good woman, looking up curiously at the young man's face, was surprised to see him so composed and calm; he witnessed nothing of his walk through the woods, when he battled her into his jealousy, and prayed God's blessing on Bonnie Ailsie."

"The girl's heart craved to see him before he sailed away, but he seemed positively to avoid her; she even strolled through the fields of Dun Farm, but only saw Rob's little brother, Donald, one of her nephews, who had some notion she was in the neighborhood with a view to his lease, and warned her against his bull in the pasture, thus causing her precipitate retreat."

An interval elapsed, and then she became conscious that Rob's tall form was striding towards her through the shadows, and his strong muscular arms were stretched out to her aid.

"Poor little maid!" said he, very gently. "Don't tremble so, Ailsie; this is not the worst part of the bog—further on it is bad—but see, you are safe; nothing can hurt you now. I shall have to carry you, Ailsie; the horse is over by the side of the path. Donald has a lantern—steady, Buttercup! can you sit up, Ailsie?"

"I suppose objections are no use now," said Ailsie, shortly; for now she was safe she thought with indignation of the promise he had extracted from her in the bog. "I am too tired to talk, Mr. Palmer; I can get down at the farm and walk home."

"I don't know how he meant to go broad," Mrs. Palmer was watching for her boys at the garden gate of the Dun Farm. Despite the soreness of her heart towards Ailsie, her hospitable feelings could not endure that the girl should go home so weary and wet.

"I don't know what you mean," she said, a little impatiently. "It was wrong of you to take me there—but, Rob, I said so."

"Lassie," he exclaimed, his color rising as he looked at her drooping face, "there's something between us we don't understand. You've never said 'Yes' to me, dearie—I never dared to ask you."

"Then, it was that scamp of a lad—Rob," said Rob, suddenly. "I suppose you were too much upon him at the time to recognize Donald's voice; he declared he heard some one calling, and as we were walking by Buttercup's side for a bit to rest her, off he ran, and I got quite alarmed about him. I began to think presently I could hear you, Ailsie, and you were so fancy what I felt when Donald ran back and told me you were sinking in a bog. I can't be angry with the lad, because he was the first to hear your cries in the distance—oh, suppose you were there alone now, whilst I am safe by the fire! No, Ailsie, dearie—it was all a mistake—I never asked you."

But they were so close together, and there was a sweet, tender dew in her dusky eyes, that Rob Palmer's heart began to thud in the certainty that the Southern never would call that witness to his own fancy what I felt when Donald ran back and told me you were sinking in a bog.

More Trouble May be Expected. If you do not heed the warnings of nature and at once pay attention to the maintenance of your health, how often we see a person put off from day to day the purchase of a medicine which if procured at the outset of a disease would have remedied it almost immediately.

Whittier's Dog. During Mr. Whittier's recent birthday celebration he was visited among others by Mrs. Julia Houston West.

"I must upon an abundance of regular sleep as much as it is possible before I might come."

"I have been troubled for some years with a complication of difficulties. After trying various remedies, and not finding relief, I tried Paine's Celery Compound. Before taking one full bottle the long troublesome symptoms began to subside, and I can truly say now that I feel like a new man. Digestion has improved, and I have gained ten pounds in weight since I have commenced taking the Compound."
