CHAPTER XLIV.

Had Lady St. Just left the school three minutes later or earlier, she would have avoided this meeting, and perhaps its consequences. As it was the doctor thought there was nothing odd in what was going on. He had always admired young Dorman—he fancied there was something noble and refined about him. Dr. Lester had a great admiration for Adrian St. Just—he considered him one of the wisest statesmen and cleverest men of the day. He met him very often, and they had a mutual respect for each other. On this day the scientific meeting that he had to attend took place in one of the large west-end halls, and at its close Lord St. Just complimented the doctor on the able speech that he had made. They talked for a few minutes, and then the doctor said:

"I am happy to find that I have a protege of yours, my lord, in my school; he is a clever boy and improves rapidly."

At first Lord St. Just thought that the doctor was speaking in jest, or making some political reference.

"I do not quite understand," he replied, politely.

"I say, my lord, that I am pleased to have your young protege in my school."

"I am ashamed to say, doctor," said Lord St. Just, laughing, "that I do not believe I have a protege, in your sense of the word."

"Evidently a poor relation," thought the doctor.

"I thought he was a protege," he said aloud. "Perhaps he is related to you, my lord? He will be a clever man some day."

"My dear doctor," returned Lord St. Just, "you will think me very obtuse, but I have not the faintest idea of what you mean."

"I am speaking of young Dorman," said the doctor.

"Dorman," repeated the peer; "why, he is dead. I attended his funeral some time ago."

"Ah," said the doctor, "that would be the elder Dorman; this is the younger."

"There is no younger. I have heard Lady St. Just say that there were two brothers. One is a solitary book-worm who has an appointment as librarian on the Continent somewhere—I quite forget where; the other died, and I attended his funeral."

"There is certainly a young Dorman at my school, my lord—a clever young stripling—handsome, too. Lady

St. Just comes frequently to see him. His lordship looked up quickly.

"What," he cried—"my wife, Lady St. Just, calls at your school, you say? You must be mistaken."

"I think not," he replied. "I saw Lady St. Just at the Royal Society—and hers is a face not easily forgotten."

"I assure you," said Lord St. Just, earnestly, "that you are quite mistaken, doctor. Lady St. Just in Hammersmith! She would have told me about it."

"I hope to Heaven," thought the doctor, "that I have done no harm. Perhaps she wished all this kept secret from her husband; if so, I have betrayed her."

Suddenly it occurred to him that possibly Lady St. Just, not wishing to be known, had assumed the alias of Mrs. Smith. It struck him, now that he came to think of it, that all her visits had been rather of a strange, secret kind. What mischief had he done? The doctor was at his wit's end.

"I may be mistaken," he replied; "one ought never to be too positive as to identify. I saw the lady only for a moment, but I fancied that I recognized her as Lady St. Just."

"I think not," said Lord St. Just, a little coldly. "It is very unlikely that my wife would visit your school, or any one there without telling me."

"It is most likely my mistake," allowed the doctor; but his lordship saw that he was anxious to lessen the impression of his words, and that annoyed him still more.

"It is as well to be careful," he said, "in making an assertion of that kind;" and the doctor saw that he was cooler than usual in his manner toward him. He looked at him gravely.

"My lord," he said, "I am probably quite mistaken. I see few ladies, and am not a good judge of resemblances. May I ask a favor from you?"

"Certainly," said Lord St. Just, with his usual frank courtesy. "You will honor me by so doing."

"As I have most likely made an absurd mistake, may I request you not to mention what I have said to Lady St. Just?"

The good-natured peer smiled.

"What can it matter?" he replied, "either one way or the other?"

"Still it would oblige me, my lord," persisted the doctor.

"Then I will promise—I will not say a word to Lady St. Just. Are you satisfied now, doctor?"

"Yes," he replied. "Her ladyship would perhaps think that I was taking a liberty with her name."

They parted soon afterward, both uneasy. When he reached home, the first thing that the doctor did was to summon young Dorman to his private room. He made all kinds of inquiries about the lady who had visited him. The boy assured him that it was Mrs. Smith.

"Did you ever know a Lady St. Just?" asked the doctor.

The boy laughed.

"I do not think I have seen a 'lady'—that is, a lord's wife—in all my life," he said.

And the doctor was more puzzled than ever. The more he thought of it, the more sure he felt that the beautiful face he had seen was the face of Lady St. Just.

"I only hope," he said, "that I have made no mischief. One thing is quite certain—her husband knows nothing of the motive that brings her here."

RUB ON NERVILINE.

You'll be astonished at the rapid pain relieving action of "Nerviline." Its effectiveness is due to its remarkable penetrating power—it strikes deeply, sinks to the very core of the trouble.

Nerviline is stronger, many times stronger, than ordinary liniments, and it's not greasy, ill-smelling or disagreeable. Every drop rubs in, bringing comfort and healing wherever applied.

You would scarcely believe how it will relieve a sprain, how it takes out lameness, how it soothes and eases a bruise.

Thousands say no liniment is half so useful in the home. This must be so, because Nerviline is a safe remedy—you can rub it on even a child with fine results.

Just you keep Nerviline on hand—it's a panacea for the aches, pains and slight ills of the whole family. One bottle will keep the doctor's bill small, and can be depended on to cure rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica, toothache, pleurisy, strains or swelling. Wherever there is a pain rub on Nerviline; it will always cure.

The large 50c family size bottle is the most economical; trial size 25c. Sold everywhere by dealers.

Cool in summer—warm in winter

The General Says: Neither the hot winds of summer nor the cold blasts of winter can penetrate our roofing or wall board. Roofs covered with wood shingles, slate, or tile, need one or more layers of our insulating materials under them to keep the building cool in summer and warm in winter.

The use of wall board as an improvement over lath and plaster is becoming universal. Being a non-conductor of heat, it saves fuel in cold weather and keeps out the hot winds and heat of the summer. The great service and very low cost of our materials have led to their enormous use everywhere.

From Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand

Roofing-Board

These are the materials that give the best service at the most moderate cost. Roofing is guaranteed 5, 10, or 15 years according to whether the thickness is 1, 2, or 3-ply respectively.

CHAPTER XLV.

Lord St. Just was equally puzzled—not that for one moment he suspected his beautiful wife of anything unbecoming, or of concealing anything from him—his faith in her was unbounded—yet he was puzzled. Had she been to Hammersmith or not? If she had been, why had she not told him? Why did she not speak about her visit? "Young Dorman"—who could he be? Not the secretary's son, for he had never been married. Why should his wife go to see "Young Dorman" and not tell him about it?

Was there any little matter of her dead friend's that she was keeping secret? That was like his noble Vivien, always ready to help; still it was strange that she had not shared it with him.

He thought he would try her. He was so true a gentleman that, having given his word to the doctor not to mention what he had said, he would keep it at any cost; otherwise nothing would have been easier than to go to her and put a straightforward question to her. He would try her and see if she exhibited any consciousness when he mentioned the doctor's name.

During dinner that day, several guests being present, Lord St. Just spoke of the meeting he had attended.

"The best speech," he said, "was made by Dr. Lester, of Hammersmith—one of the cleverest men we have."

Then he was startled, for his wife's face turned quite white. She was looking at him with fear and wonder in her eyes; he had never seen such an expression on her face before. He saw that her lips were pale, and trembled as she spoke.

Slowly, as from a painful dream, she seemed to rouse herself, and, turning to the gentleman by her side, began to talk; but it was an effort, and he saw it. He saw, too, that she listened if he again mentioned the doctor's name. He mentioned it purposefully, and again he saw a spasm of pain across her face.

"There is a mystery," he said to himself—"a mystery that has some pain in it—and my darling is keeping it all to herself."

He noticed that all the evening his wife was unusually thoughtful and abstracted. More than once she answered at random, not knowing what she said; and when their visitors had gone she sat quite still, looking with dreamy eyes at the pages of a book, which she did not even pretend to be reading. Suddenly she began to talk to him.

"What meeting was that," she asked, "that you attended this morning?" gradually leading up to the matter she had most at heart. "Who is this Dr. Lester I heard you mention?" she said.

"A gentleman who keeps a school at Hammersmith," he remarked.

"Do you know him?" she asked; and though she spoke so quietly, he detected the keen anxiety underlying the low tones.

"Yes, everyone in London knows Dr. Lester. He lectures admirably, and he has written two or three valuable works. He is quite a public character."

She looked relieved, and he saw it. "Do you often see him?" she asked, after a short pause.

"Not very often. We meet at lectures and soirees. I do not remember to have seen him elsewhere."

She took up her book and said no more. But he, watching her, saw that she did not read—that she never turned a leaf. He saw that she was so deeply, so completely engrossed in her own thoughts that she had forgotten all else. He believed that she would have sat there for hours.

What could it all mean? He had noticed the great change in his wife, her fits of absence of mind, her gloomy abstraction, the brooding thought that seemed to lie like a shadow over her. Could it be possible that the mysterious visits to Hammersmith had anything to do with the change in her manner, the engrossing care and thought that now characterized her? If so, what could there be wrong in this proud, stately wife of his?

He watched her for quite half an hour—she never moved nor spoke. Then he went to her and took the book from her hands.

"Adrian," she cried, with a start, "I—I had forgotten you were here."

"That is a poor compliment, Vivien. You had forgotten that I was here—may I ask of whom you were thinking—or of what—that you could forget me?"

Her face flushed crimson under the searching gaze of his eyes.

"You spend a great deal of time in thinking now," he said. "Pray tell me what it is all about?"

"Who can describe an unknown world?" she asked. "And thought is an unknown world."

It was an evasive answer, and he felt it. He raised her face between his hands.

"Let me look into your eyes, darling, and see if I can tell what you are thinking about."

But her eyes fell before his, the white lids closed over them, the long dark lashes lay on her cheeks.

"Why, Vivien, you will not let me see!" Then he changed his tone to one of grave, tender earnestness. "My darling wife," he said, gently, "is there any secret that you are keeping from me?"

He could tell how the words pierced her by the shudder that passed over her.

"A secret!" she cried, wildly. "Why should you say that? A secret, Adrian! What secret have I?"

"I cannot tell. Is there one? Are you keeping anything from me, darling? Have you any secret that you will not share with me?"

She seemed to recover herself by a marvelous effort. She freed herself from his arms. She raised her hand to the diamond circlet on her hair.

"See," she said, "you have spoilt my coiffure—and it was very pretty. How you have startled me, Adrian, talking about secrets! See, too, how late it is. And you have that long speech to make to-morrow! I insist upon your going to rest."

Lord St. Just felt his heart sink within him. There was a mystery, a secret, and his wife was keeping it from him. She had tried her best, but she had not deceived him.

He said no more. A keen, restless pain took possession of him. This fair, proud woman whom he had so implicitly trusted—could it be possible that in any way she had deceived him? So quietly, so true, so noble, what secret had she?

398th Day of the War Latest From the Front.

Messages Received
Previous to 9 A.M.

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Sept. 4.
The Governor, Newfoundland, reports that the French and Russian fronts the general position is unchanged. The Italian Government report the capture of an important mountain position in the Perahis region, and of trenches on the Carso.

BONAR LAW.
LIVER HESPERIAN TORPEDOED BUT ESCAPES—LOSS OF LIFE ABOUT EIGHT.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.
The American Consul at Queenstown has cabled the State Department as follows: "The Allan Liner Hesperian was torpedoed by a German submarine 70 miles S.W. of Fastnet at 8.30 Saturday evening. One or two American were on board, none were lost. The less life is about eight. The vessel was not sunk, and the Admiralty boats landed the passengers and troops at 8.30 this morning, and has returned to the Hesperian here. She is due about 9 o'clock to-morrow morning. There were about forty-five Canadian troops on board, unorganized, mainly unarmed, also one 4.7 gun mounted, was visible at the stern of the vessel. She was bound to Montreal."

QUEENSTOWN, Sept. 5.—The Hesperian, outward bound from Liverpool for Montreal, carried 700 passengers and crew. There were about 50 in the first cabin, 100 in the second, 250 in the third, with 250 in crew. It is asserted that at 8.30 last night, about 100 miles S.W. of the Fastnet, a German submarine torpedoed the Hesperian without warning. The torpedo struck forward of the engine room, tearing away the forward compartments. Boats go away quickly, the greater number being well filled. Among the passengers were many wounded Canadian soldiers returning to their homes. Wireless calls soon brought a fleet of rescue steamers to her aid. J. H. Brockington, who landed her from the first rescue steamer, declared that the Hesperian was torpedoed without warning.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The American Consul at Queenstown, has telegraphed the States Embassy here, that there were only one or two Americans aboard the Hesperian. "None were lost. Three of the Hesperian's boats had been upset in launching; 20 injured have been landed here. The Hesperian is expected to Queenstown with assistance. There were about 600 persons aboard, of whom 350 were passengers; all were saved. The submarine is supposed to have been chasing the Hesperian, and coming up as darkness was falling, torpedoed her. The passengers arriving here declare that the attack was so sudden that great alarm was caused aboard the steamer.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—Major J. S. Barres, who was returning to Canada with twelve officers and thirty-eight men to recuperate from wounds, said concerning the torpedoing, that perfect order prevailed. One boat capsized through the falls getting jammed, someone cutting the ropes to facilitate the lowering of the boat. The Hesperian, according to the main, was one hundred and thirty miles west of Queenstown when she was torpedoed.

QUEENSTOWN, Sept. 5.—Ronald Whiteway, of London, who, with his wife, was a passenger on the Hesperian, said: "We were sitting on the upper deck, when about 8.30 on Saturday evening we felt a violent impact, which almost knocked us out of our chairs. In less time than I can tell it, a huge volume of water rose almost as high as the masts, and breaking, drenched us to the skin. We thought we were out of the danger zone, and a pleasant voyage. Life boats were lowered and rowed away from the steamer, on which the captain, officers and some of the crew remained. The steamer was apparently struck on the starboard side, but as it was nearly dark, the torpedo could not be seen. After the explosion, the Hesperian settled down by the head. Rescue steamers were soon on the scene and took the passengers on board."

LATER: (London, this a.m.)—According to a statement issued by the Allan Company, no lives were lost when the Hesperian was torpedoed.

NOVELTY IN SUBMARINE WARFARE.

LONDON, Sept. 5.
A novelty in submarine warfare is reported in a despatch from Athens to the Star: A British submarine, after threading its way through the Gulf of Ismidjameu, landed a party for the purpose of dynamiting a railroad bridge at Goules, 28 miles southeast of Constantinople. The railroad running between Bahar Pasha and Ismidjameu is the main communication line between Constantinople and Asia Minor. The despatch says that the expedition was entirely successful. British bluejackets destroyed a portion of the bridge, killing the Turkish soldiers on guard. They returned safely to the submarine.

VIOLENT ENGAGEMENTS WEST.
PARIS, Sept. 4.
Particularly violent artillery engagements took place yesterday to the northeast and southeast of Arras, and at other points between the Oise and the Aisne, according to an announcement made to-day by the French War Office.

RHEIMS AGAIN ATTACKED.
PARIS, Sept. 5.
The enemy has thrown a hundred shells against Rheims; no victims are reported. There have been engagements with bombs and hand grenades in Champagne, and artillery engagements elsewhere on the French and British fronts.

PEACE IMPOSSIBLE.
MILAN, Sept. 5.
The Italian press, links together Germany's modification of her submarine policy and Pope Benedict's peace efforts, expressing the view that Germany desires to have President Wilson further the wishes of the Pope. The Secolo remarks that the very reasons which might make peace desirable for Germany would cause it to be disastrous to the Allies. Peace at the present moment of victory for Germany, this newspaper says, would be giving impunity to-day and triumph to-morrow to German militarism. The opinion is expressed by the Secolo that President Wilson, while expressing appreciation of the Pope's move, will postpone any effort of his own for two years.

RUSSIA DETERMINED.
LONDON, Sept. 5.
A Petrograd despatch says that, presiding yesterday at the first meeting of the special conference, having for its object the discussion of measures to be taken for National Defence, Czar Nicholas declared that the question before the conference was of grave importance, and concerted the more speedily equipment of the army with munitions, "which is the one object which our troops wait in order to stop foreign invasion, and bring success to our arms. Parliament has given me a resolution with only the least hesitation, the only reply worthy of Russia, a reply which I deem from it, namely, 'War until victorious.' I doubt not that this is the voice of the whole of the Russian nation."

GALE AT BERMUDA.
HAMILTON, Bermuda, Sept. 5.
A severe gale swept over Bermuda last night, uprooting trees and doing damage to other property.

FAMILIARITY.
The delegate who is too fresh, who is too familiar in his style, annoys the spirit and the flesh, and banishes your sunny smile. When to the store my way I take to buy a watch or carpet tack, some clerking greets me with "Hello, Jake!" and slaps me roundly on the back. This riles my blue patrician blood, I find my temper badly wrecked; clerks would address me, "Mr. Mud," and show some symptoms of respect. In regal ire I leave the store, and buy my tack some other place, and to that merchant's point no more I'll push my waird, bewhiskered face. Good customers are lost each day by breaks such as that clerking made, and weary merchants sigh and say, "I wonder why we're losing trade!" Old friends may call me "Jake, old scout," and slap me 'till they jar' my boots, and turn my pockets inside out, in search of spinach cigraroots; and they may borrow forty cents, or in my woodshed go to sleep; but all the slight-astiduousness gets about on their reservation keep. I do not pay you when we meet, I do not use your given name; and I would think you kind and sweet, if you would treat me just the same.

NEW HOME FOR SEXTON.—This morning Contractor M. E. Walsh commenced the work of building the sexton's new home at Mount Carmel Cemetery. It is expected that the job will be finished in two months.

Amusements.

AT THE CRESCENT.

Prominent picture play stars appear at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day. Alice Joyce in "The Riddle of the Green Umbrella," a great detective feature in two reels. Clara Kimball Young and Earle Williams in "Happy Go Lucky," a Vitagraph melodrama. "The Fable of How Uncle Brewster was too Shifty for Tempter" is one of George Ade's famous fables. Sweddie, the popular Crescent comedian, in "Countess Sweddie," the greatest comedy of the series, and Mr. Harvey Collins singing: "What's the use of 'Dreaming.'" Some show, believe me.

BRITISH THEATRE.

Much interest is being centred on the above house regarding the entertainments which will commence to-day at 2.30 and 7.30, owing to the fact that the beautiful locally filmed picture of the Mount Cashel Garden Party and Sports and also the pretty Pastoral Play which was recently given in the magnificent grounds of Mount Cashel, will be shown. This photo-play is a work of art and reflects great credit upon the gentlemen who produced it. Five other reels will also be shown. In addition to the foregoing Madame Olive Timmons will be heard in two well known classics: "A Perfect Day" and "The Kerry Dance." Arthur Priestman Cameron will sing the latest patriotic comedy song entitled: "Belgium put the Kibosh on the Kaiser." The highly accomplished musician Mr. A. H. Allen will preside at the piano as usual.

TWO SINGERS AT THE NICKEL THEATRE.
Nickel patrons will turn out in full force this evening to hear the two popular vocalists Messrs. Arthur D. Huskins and DeWitt C. Cairns. Both are very favorably known in St. John's as they have appeared here before. For the last year they have been touring Canada singing at the same theatre. They have the latest and best love songs and ballads besides many very attractive duets. The pictures to-day are among the finest. The programme includes the beautiful two-reel drama, "The Hidden Letters," by the Vitagraph Co. "Our Mutual Girl" will be continued and there are other first class subjects.

OUR SOLDIER LADS AT ROSSLEYS.
This is the farewell week of the Russells, and Mr. Jack Russell will present some of his best work, big song numbers and clever specialties, and those who have seen Russell will enjoy his clever work. The picture of our soldier lads will be shown marching. This picture was brought from Scotland by the officers, lately returned. It is very clear and distinct. There will be other regiments seen and the Nid-bros in company favourably with the best of them. On September 13th the famous Ian MacKenzie and Co. will appear. Ian MacKenzie is the greatest Scotch baritone singer on the yaudeville stage to-day. He is also the finest costumed actor before the public. He is a friend of Harry Lauder and Neil Kenyon. Read what the press notices say of him. Mr. Rossley is in New York for the best films and artists procurable.

The Eastern Trust Company.
A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator:—
1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $31,000.00, and a reserve fund of $225,300.00.
2. It has a long experience in the work of administering estates; it is incorporated for this business of acting as a trustee, and, unlike many other trust companies, it does no other.
3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look around for a substitute, and the work of administration is impeded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.

Another Scrap of Paper

The world was again given an object lesson on Saturday evening of the value of a German promise. In spite of the assurance given by the German Chancellor, Foreign Minister and Ambassador that the torpedoing of the Arabic was in contravention of the new policy of Germany, and that the act would be disavowed and its perpetrator punished, there was a repetition of the dastardly deed on Saturday night in the vicinity of the Fastnet, and it was only good fortune that the 600 souls aboard the Hesperian did not meet the fate of the 1,100 persons who perished by the torpedoing of the Lusitania. After the protest of Secretary Lansing against the torpedoing of the Arabic, without warning and without providing for the safety of the passengers, Germany gave an assurance that there should be no repetition of the dastardly deeds. Now after the assurance had been given and after there has been ample time since the alleged change of policy was made to let every submarine commander know of the change, another passenger steamer is attacked by a submarine, and an effort is made to sink her, without any warning and without any provision being made for the safety of those aboard. It is clear from this attempt that no reliance whatever can be placed on any assurance given by Germany to the American Government or anybody else. The saving of the 600 persons aboard the Hesperian was not due to any warning given by the German submarine commander. The safety of the two American seamen aboard the liner was not due to any provision made or allowed by this sea-irate. The saving of these lives was due to causes over which he had no control and in spite of his dastardly deed. The injuries and losses of passengers and crew were due to the breaking of the promise made by those high in authority in Berlin. Excuse may be sought and suggested as happened in the cases of the Lusitania and Arabic, but it is clear from the narratives of those aboard that the attack was as dastardly as any perpetrated by German sea-wolves. No reliance can be placed in any undertaking given by the German Government. Such an undertaking is but a bit of paper to be scrapped any time by Germany.

These sea-horrors have now been brought home to us in Newfoundland for we have learnt since writing the above that Newfoundland has cause to mourn the loss of an estimable old lady in the person of Miss Carberry, who died as a result of the shock she received after the torpedoing of the Hesperian, on board of which she was a passenger.

Miss E. Carberry Died of Shock

After the Torpedoing of the Hesperian.
This morning, Dr. Scully received a message bearing the sad news that Miss Carberry, who was a passenger on board the Hesperian, bound from Liverpool to Quebec, had died from shock after the torpedoing of the liner on Saturday night. The message contained no further particulars, and whether the estimable lady was in the boat which capsized and whose occupants were thrown in the water and afterwards rescued, can

SERGEANT WELLS, A NEWFOUNDLANDER, Badly Treated by Germans

A story appears in a recent issue of the Montreal Star telling of the brutal treatment of a Newfoundlander, Sergt. Fred. F. Wells. The Sergeant hails from Newfoundland and was resident for some time in Montreal, from which city he moved to New Westminster and joined the 7th Battalion. He was wounded at Ypres on April 24th, and was taken prisoner. He says a Red Cross man prevented a German bayoneting him, while he lay wounded. The German, however, made a bayonet thrust at his left arm, which had five bullets in it and gave him a kick before he left him.

For ten hours he waited for reinforcements to come up and carry him away, but they never came, and he made for the German lines for succor. On his way he stopped to give water to a wounded man, and was helped by two Germans to get behind the lines. German Red Cross men on learning that he was a Canadian slapped him in the face and then left him. He crawled to the road and was then driven towards a dressing station at the point of the bayonet. The sentries kicked him along the road, until he collapsed. A Red Cross sergeant ordered them to put him on a stretcher, but when the sergeant left they made him walk. At the station the doctor treated him kindly, gave him bread and cheese and injected morphia to ease his pain. Next morning he and others were placed in cattle trucks and sent to Roulers, where they were treated kindly by Belgian sisters. The doctors told him he could not live, but he insisted on having his arm amputated, and as he was too weak to take much chloroform, he was semi-conscious while the arm was being amputated. He was afterwards placed on a Red Cross train and when he asked for a drink of water was told there was no water, tobacco or anything for the English, and when he told the orderly he could not speak German, he slapped his face. He spent two days and three nights in the train and had to be content with two mugs of coffee and some black bread. At every station, the orderly pointed derisively to him as a Canadian. At their destination, Ohrdruf, he lay from two to two and a half hours poorly clad and cold. They were placed in beer trucks and driven through the streets of the city, where people came to look at "the English swine." He remained two weeks at Ohrdruf, where he had his arm dressed twice. He was then removed to Lazaret, where a French doctor took six splinters of bone from his arm. Sergeant Wells complains bitterly of the food, which he declared was rotten. Things improved, however, when he began to get parcels of food from the Canadian Red Cross Society. At last he was exchanged as a disabled soldier, and arrived in England. His greatest grief is that he is unable to serve again, for he would dearly like to have another go at the Germans for what he suffered at their hands.

Visit to St. Thomas's.

DR. JONES' ELOQUENT SERMON.
A most excellent and edifying service was held at St. Thomas's Church last evening, a large congregation being present on the occasion. Rev. Dr. Jones excelled in the delivery of a sermon that was eloquent in diction and rich and forceful in expression. The doctor in his burly utterances seemed to be imparting part of himself to his profoundly attentive audience, and his well-developed climaxes seemed to draw his hearers with him and involve them in the same line of thought. Dr. Jones seems to have no place for the "soft emotions" in the clergy that recumbent virtues drowsy doctors preach, but rather uses the "sword of the spirit" at arm's length when the occasion demands it. "Most I can say about Dr. Jones' sermon last evening, and the least I ought to say is, that 'the length, and the breadth, and the height of it'—in a broad and well-learned interpretation of the Christian life—were equal. The good people of St. Thomas's have good reason to be proud of their Rector, and their Rector has equally good reason to congratulate himself upon his accession to his present official position. I understand that visitors are always welcome to St. Thomas's."

While the shore train was nerving Clarke's Beach on Saturday evening last, David Candow, the well-known engineer, who was in charge, was taken suddenly ill and had to leave the throttle, being replaced by the fireman, who took the train as far as Holyrood, whence Engineer E. Moore, who went out by the evening express, brought the train to town. Engineer Candow is suffering from a serious internal malady of which he has had frequent attacks of late. On arrival in the city he was driven to his residence, New Gower Street.

S. are victors the Wanderers will become absolute owners of the title, without having to clash with the youngsters at all.

After discharging at the latter place the ship visited Job's fishing stations in the Straits and took on board fish which she brought here to be sent to foreign market. The Neptune reports not much fishing being done at present in the Straits. Trapping is over and hooking is interrupted by bad weather as well as the bait shortage, which is being felt on every section of the coast. Capt. Joyce came on board in charge of the Neptune, having joined her in Sydney, where Capt. Melkie, who commanded her from here, left and went on to ports of Canada on business in connection with his firm.

BALFOUR

First Lord of the Admiralty, Sets Forth the Failure of the German Submarine Policy.

10.30 A.M.

LONDON, To-day.

Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, contributes the following letter to the British press: "Much has been written about Germany's military methods and aims on land not so much about the aims and methods at sea, yet in truth the two are so intimately connected, that neither can be understood apart from the other. In 1900 Germany first proclaimed her policy of building a fleet against Britain from the point of view of her own ambitions. The policy was a perfectly sound one. She aimed at world domination. Against world domination in the British fleet from the time of Queen Elizabeth to the present has always been found the surest and most effectual protection. The Germans have every reason to be aware of the fact, for without the British fleet, Frederick the Great must have succumbed to his enemies and Prussia would scarcely have shaken off the Napoleonic tyranny. Whatever may be thought of the freedom of the seas, and its various leanings, freedom on the land is due in no small measure to British ships and British sailors. It takes time as well as money to create a great fleet. German statesmen were too wise to suppose they could at once call into existence a navy able to contend on equal terms with a Power which as they saw clearly enough was the most formidable obstacle to their aggressive projects, but they did not on that account doubt the immediate advantages which a maritime policy conferred upon them. They calculated that a powerful fleet, even though it was numerically inferior to that of Britain, would nevertheless render the latter important, since no British Government would dare to risk a conflict which however successful, might leave them in the end with naval forces inferior to those of some third power. This policy was clearly and cautiously expressed in the famous preamble of the Navy Bill. It is unnecessary to add that the German Navy League entertained a much more ambitious design. So far neither the designs of the German Government nor those of the German Navy League have met with any measure of success. The British fighting fleet became relatively stronger than it was thirteen months ago. There is no reason to suppose during the future course of the war that this preponderance is likely to be arrested. It is indeed plain that after six months of hostilities, Admiral Von Tirpitz and the Government which he serves, arrived at the same conclusion. They saw the whole policy broken down, and that a new policy must be devised. Submarines, they thought, might succeed where ironclads and cruisers failed. The change was no doubt adopted with extreme reluctance and many searchings of heart. The admission of failure itself is unpleasant, though we cannot regard a Government responsible for Belgium atrocities as either scrupulous or humane, even the most reckless Government does not desire to perpetrate unnecessary crimes. As to what the German Navy must have felt about the new policy, we can only conjecture, but German sailors are gallant men, and gallant men do not like being put on a coward's job. They know well enough that in the old days which we are pleased to regard as less humane than our own, there was no privateersman but would have thought himself disgraced had he sent to the bottom an unresisting merchant ship with all hands on board. It can have been a no very agreeable reflection, even to the German Navy League, that the first notable performance of the German fleet should resemble piracy rather than privateering. We may therefore safely assume nothing but the hope of decisive success would have induced German Ministers to inflict this new stain upon the honor of their country. If decisive success has not yet been attained and does not seem to be in sight, I claim no gift of prophecy, I make no boasts of the future, but of the past I can speak with assurance. It may interest you to know that while the losses inflicted upon German submarines have been formidable, British merchant tonnage has at this moment greater than it was when the war began. It is true that by this method of warfare many inoffensive persons, women and children as well as men, neutrals as well as belligerents, have been robbed and killed, but it is not only the innocent who have suffered, but the criminals also have paid a heavy toll. Some have been rescued as prisoners of war, but from the very nature of submarines, they must often happen that they drive their crews with them to destruction. Those who send them forth on their unhonored mission, wait for their return in vain, herein lies the explanation of making the change, which came over the diplomatic attitude of Germany towards the United States. Men ask themselves why the sinking of the Lusitania with the loss of over 1,100 men, women and children was welcomed throughout Germany with a shout of triumph, while the sinking of the Arabic was accepted with melancholy silence. Is it because in the intervening months the United States became stronger or Germany weaker? Is it because the attitude of the President varied? Is it because the arguments of the Secretary of State became more persuasive? Is it because German opinion has at least revolted against lawless cruelty? The reason must be found somewhere. It is found in the fact that the authors of the submarine policy have had time to measure its efforts, and that deeds which were merely crimes in May, in September are seen to be blunders.

TO-DAY'S Messages.

THE HESPERIAN IN QUEENSTOWN

LIVERPOOL, To-day.

A statement issued at office of Allan line says: The Hesperian had on board 350 passengers and crew of 300 and the passengers were taken off and landed at Queenstown, while a part of the crew remained on board the liner, which has been towed to Queenstown. When the tackle became jammed, those on the boat were thrown into the water. Darkness and confusion naturally prevailed, but all were picked up, and with other passengers and crew transferred to the rescue steamers which arrived in answer to wireless calls for assistance. The Hesperian was about 150 miles westward when struck.

THE LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, To-day.

Either the driving power of the Austro-German offensive against Russia is nearly exhausted, or the German Generals decided that their armies penetrated the Russian Empire.

armies especially in the marshy region cannot hope to carry on operations much longer. Some reports state the Germans and Austrians already moving troops to the Serbian, Rumanian and Western fronts. In the western one, the heavy artillery of the Allies are still bombarding the German lines and doing all damage possible, trying to break the morale of the German troops, but thus far there is no indication of a general offensive. Paris reports the Turks delivered an unsuccessful night attack against the British position near Anzac region. Beyond that no news has been received of operations in the Near East. There has been a renewal of reports from Athens of dissension among Turks, as a result of the heavy losses in Gallipoli. No evidence of this however is to be found among the Turkish troops, who are reported to be fighting with all their stubbornness.

or's dominions as far as is considered safe and are preparing to dig themselves in for the winter. This is the opinion expressed by military writers here. Certainly very little progress is now being made, and at many points the Germans and Austrians are contenting themselves with repulsing the counter-attacks of the Russians. From the Gulf of Riga to Grodno, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's armies are at a standstill, having apparently made no attempt to cross Dyina after carrying the bridge heads at Kennowada and Friederichstadt. To the North and Southwest and South of Vihna, the fall of which has been predicted for some days, the Germans are faced by very strong Russian forces, which by their offensive have made it dangerous for the Germans to push their way Westward, North or South of them. The Germans, on the other hand, are massed between Grodno and the Kobrin-Brest-Pinsk railway, but the immediate object is not obvious, unless they are looking for a good defensive position, on which to hold the Russians throughout winter. Further south the Russians are offering fresh resistance, as they are firmly established in a fortified area, in which Rovno and Dubno are centered, while in Galicia they still hold the line of the Sereth River. With the rainy season, a few weeks off, the opposing armies especially in the marshy region cannot hope to carry on operations much longer. Some reports state the Germans and Austrians already moving troops to the Serbian, Rumanian and Western fronts. ### MAN ON WATCH SAW SUBMARINE.

LONDON, To-day.

The Allan Line steamer, Hesperian, with 350 passengers and crew of 300 aboard bound from Liverpool for Montreal, was attacked without warning by a German submarine off the Irish coast, just as darkness was falling on Saturday evening. Although the torpedo found its mark, the vessel remained afloat, according to statement issued by the Company last night and every soul aboard was saved. The Allan Line officials, however, decided not to give out the list of passengers. No submarine was seen probably. It was too dark to observe the wake of the torpedo, but all the passengers and members of the crew who arrived at Queenstown in the rescue steamer yesterday agree the attack was made by a German submarine, basing their opinion on the force of the shock and the great volume of water thrown into the air. This dropped back on the deck, drenching the passengers, who were taking an after dinner promenade and feeling quite safe in the belief they had passed the submarine danger zone. The force of the explosion was tremendous and of the passengers landed at Queenstown many of them were scantily clad and about 20 injured. There were no American passengers aboard, so far as the American Consul could learn last night, but two members of the crew were American citizens. They were both saved. About 30 Canadian soldiers who were wounded in battle in Flanders were going home to recuperate. Most of the other passengers were Canadians returning from a visit to England, or English people on their way to Canada to settle. The torpedo struck the Hesperian forward of the engine room and the ship immediately began to settle by the head. Captain Main ordered the passengers and crew into the boats, but with his officers remained on the bridge, although at that time they must have felt sure that his ship would go down. Discipline was perfect. The passengers were unanimous in declaring the Hesperian was attacked without warning. The only person aboard the steamer who actually saw the underwater boat was the man on watch, who got a glimpse of it in the distance and reported the fact to Capt. Main.

In court to-day "hubby" denied the charge that he had made any threat, though he admitted having the weapon in his possession. The charge of non-support he did not dispute and was ordered to give bonds to support his family.

The Archbishop at Topsail.

Yesterday His Grace Archbishop Roche, accompanied by Rev. J. McDermott, Administrator, Frs. Pippy and Nangle, visited Topsail and was received by the people in a very enthusiastic manner. Hunting was displayed at various points along the route, and six arches that had been erected for the occasion bore appropriate mottoes of welcome. High Mass was celebrated at 11 o'clock by Fr. Kelly, assisted by Frs. Pippy and Nangle, whilst ministering to His Grace were Rev. J. McDermott and Rev. T. Gough, P.P., Portugal Cove. Mr. John Fox of St. John's kindly and most acceptably presided at the organ. After Mass an address and purse were tendered to His Grace by the parishioners of Topsail. His Grace made a pleasing reply, thanking the people for the sentiments expressed and for the tokens of affection which he witnessed on all sides. He referred to his residence in the parish for ten happy years, and the special place the people of Topsail should have in his thoughts on that account. He also spoke of the serious loss which Kelligrews experienced in the burning of their beautiful church and school, and pointed out that one of his first acts on being made Archbishop was to cause the erection of a new school. He promised them that in the near future, as soon as circumstances will permit, a new church will be built both at Kelligrews and Topsail, and concluded by wishing the people every happiness and prosperity. The Star of the Sea Society lined the space between the church and the gate and added considerably to the success of the reception. After Mass His Grace, with the attendant priests motored to Powerscourt, where luncheon was served. In the afternoon His Grace and Kelligrews to inspect the new school and view the arches. Thus ended a red letter day for that thriving little parish of Topsail.—Com.

A Plea for Short Sermons!

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

This is a plea for short sermons in our churches. I make it not flippantly or irreverently but in the sincere belief that if our ministers tried to say what they have to say as simply and concisely as possible, instead of trying to fill a certain set time, we should all get more out of our church-going. How often do you hear a sermon which could not be boiled down to a fifteen or twenty-minute talk and thereby made more effective? "If there is anywhere a thing said in two sentences that could have been said as clearly and as engagingly and as forcibly said in one, then it is amateur work," a great writer once said. That is true of course. But we do not ask the minister to shorten his sermons merely for the sake of artistry. We want him to do it for the sake of results, for the purpose of holding the attention of his hearers every minute and of leaving a simple, clear-cut impression. A minister has a thought. Something impresses him and inspires him. That is the seed of his sermon. Now suppose he were to tell that thought to some friend. He would put it in as clear and simple language as possible; he would light it up with illustration, and incident perhaps, but he certainly wouldn't bury it in rhetoric.

Aren't a Minister's Congregation His Friends?

Well, now, shouldn't a minister's congregation be his friends? Shouldn't they have the right to have that thought presented to them in the same simple, friendly fashion? What have they done to deserve that he should offer them the thought so completely surrounded by words, so obscured by rhetoric, by gestures and posturing that oftentimes they don't get it at all? What have the congregation done? Well, they put the minister in the strait-jacket of a set form. They have prescribed that his sermon shall last a certain time and so they get a sermon which lasts a certain time, respectively. Let Him Speak Till He Finishes, Then Sit Down

Do you know, I think it would be beautiful if the minister should stand up and speak just as long as it took him to give us his thought simply and forcibly and clearly, and then sit down. What would we do with the rest of the time? Well, if we must fill a certain set time with our worship there are many ways. "Beethoven's sixth sonata," said Stevenson, "has done me more good than all of the churches in Christendom."

Why not have Beethoven's sixth sonata (I use this merely as the symbol of the beautiful music that is a form of worship) played? Or train the congregation to sing some of our fine old hymns in a way that shall thrill and inspire them as congregational singing should.

What Religion Ought to Accomplish

Or let the minister or someone else with the gift of musical speech read some of the finer passages from the Bible.

Or let the minister tell us of some inspiring deed he has read or heard of during the week. Reading about the man who gave up his fortune to the families of the girls who were burned in his factory thrilled and inspired me as much as a sermon.

The main functions of religion, as

South Africa's Sharpshooters.

The average South African soldier, whether he is Boer or Briton, will be wasted in North-Western France unless his special skill is allowed full scope. The shooting of the British Army is far above the shooting of any Continental army, but we cannot compete with the "shooters" of South Africa, who will hit a man's hand at 900 yds. Shooting is a recreation in South Africa in peace time; people go on the range in preference to the tennis court, and it is the favorite sport of the Boer. If a South African contingent were placed in one set of trenches its proficiency in this branch of war would be of little avail, and the suggestion has been put forward that the best use which could be made of the South Africans would be to distribute them as sharpshooters among the other troops.

Equals of the Men Who Won Waterloo

As good soldiers as were those who fought and won at Waterloo one hundred years ago—That is the judgment passed upon British troops now on the Continent by the London Telegraph. In making the comparison some interesting comments on Waterloo are offered—interesting and instructive because they are made by a student of military affairs, and interesting too because Waterloo is a theme suggested by this year, Waterloo's centenary, and by the fact that British troops are again in Belgium, not far from the scene of Wellington's victory, fighting for the liberties of Europe and the civilization of the world.

What comment on Wellington and Napoleon's strategy, and the comparison between the British soldier of today and the British soldier of one hundred years ago, are here produced.

The Strategy of the Generals.

Many cities have discussed the Battle of Waterloo, says the London writer, and found this or that reason why the issue turned out as it did. In all battles mistakes are made on one side or the other, and on the balance between the two accounts the final result depends. Neither Wellington nor Napoleon was immaculate in this respect. Each suffered from the defects of his own qualities. Wellington thought that the aim of the Emperor was to cut him off from his communications with the sea, and he therefore spent prodigious gains in strengthening his right to the northwest of Hougomont. Napoleon's one desire was to break the English centre, so as to prevent all possibility of junction between his British adversary and his Prussian ally.

The weak point in Wellington's line was clearly his left. But it must be remembered, on the other hand, that the whole scheme of the battle was arranged on the assumption that Blucher would come up from the eastward, in accordance with his pledged word. Wellington only accepted battle on the position at Mont St. Jean because he was sure of Prussian assistance. To criticize him therefore for endangering the fortunes of the day is to ignore the main principle of his strategy, and the principal reason for his tactical dispositions.

Some Errors by Napoleon.

And when we turn to the other side, it is equally easy to put our finger on the errors of the Emperor. Napoleon himself was no longer the Napoleon of Marengo or Austerlitz, and though his strength was not broken down it was certainly impaired. He delayed his attack on Wellington's position much too late on the 18th. Every moment of inaction was valuable to his adversary and was fatal to himself. He believed against strong evidence to the contrary, that Grouchy would come up in time to help him from Wavre. He allowed Ney too free a hand in the disposition of the attack. Indeed, the main source of his weakness was that he had to trust in the military skill of two marshals—Ney and Grouchy—neither of whom proved himself competent to the tasks assigned him. Grouchy, away on the east, entirely misunderstanding the problem. He thought that Blucher was falling back on Brussels instead of marching towards Wellington. Ney, a gallant officer, who had proved his bravery in many a stricken field, led charge after charge of cavalry, unsupported by infantry, during priceless moments when it was absolutely imperative for the French to break the English squares.

Indomitable Tenacity Won.

D'Erlon was left oscillating between right and left with uncertain orders. It is easy, as we have said, to point to this or that mistake which altered the fortunes of the day. But what chiefly lives in the memory are those wild battle scenes which here and there broke the assault and there proved the irresistible strength of his attack. When all is said and done it was Wellington's indomitable tenacity which held the ground during all those weary hours of conflict till the looked-for moment came when, in response to their leader's call, the Guards drove the beaten enemy down the hill. And the sheer gallantry of the fight drags at our heart-strings and fills our eyes with happy tears.

Has The British Soldier Changed?

Has the British soldier changed in this long space of a hundred years? Yes and no. In many ways he is a much finer fellow than his predecessor. Not one of the brave men whom we have sent to the front during recent months is capable of the excesses committed at Badajoz. There is no touch of brutality about our modern champion. He is not drunken, like his predecessor; he is a free man, fighting for his heart and home. In himself, too, the British soldier retains all those characteristic virtues which were so much in evidence on the field of Waterloo. Wherever the men came from who formed the thin red line north of Hougomont and La Haye Sainte, they never knew when they were beaten. Time after time the squares were submerged under a deluge of the finest horsemen in the French Army, but they were never broken; they could not be broken, and as each successive wave ebbed away the stout-hearted defenders of Mont St. Jean remained as indomitable as before. Our soldiers retain the same stoicism which bears up against every form of suffering and death, even the same humor, never unkindly though at times a little grim.

Napoleon's doom was sealed because he knew nothing of the main attributes of English troops. He had never had experience of their power in defending a position, he had only heard that they were slow in manoeuvring and might perhaps be overcome by quick and sudden action. Let us remember, to the eternal glory of those kinsmen of ours who a century ago fought to a finish at Waterloo, that they not only possessed they themselves the rare quality of obstinate courage, but have bequeathed it to their descendants of to-day. Their valor destroyed the Napoleonic Empire and drove the Emperor himself to surrender to those whom he described as the "most powerful, the most unwavering and the most generous of his foes." The valor of our modern soldiers will equally carry us to our ultimate triumph. And if the nation is called on to bear enormous sacrifices in the resolute pursuit of its aims, let us hearten ourselves by the reflection that what men have done men can do, and that as England did not fail in 1815, so, by the Grace of God, she will not fail to-day.

V. C. Slacker.

Clergyman's Mistake.

Seaman Sampson, V.C., a Dardanelles hero, on his way from Abovne, Aberdeenshire, to Carnoustie, his native town, passed through Aberdeen recently. He told of an amusing ing experience, says the Glasgow Herald.

He was in plain clothes in a homeward-bound train. His battle-worn uniform lay wrapped up on the rack above his head. The train slowed down and a clergyman entered the carriage. He looked at Sampson, V.C., with a stern, disapproving eye.

"Are you not doing anything to help your country?" he asked.

Sampson, V.C., smiled. This was getting amusing.

"A man of your stamp ought to be in the army," continued the clergyman.

Sampson, V.C., was a sailor, so he replied quite truthfully:

"I have no intention of joining the Army!" This was the last straw. The clergyman blazed out:

"You're a slacker!"

"I think it would suit you better, sir, if you had khaki on," Sampson at once retorted. The atmosphere of the railway carriage became strained.

On leaving the carriage Sampson took down a parcel from the rack. It was his uniform and part of it showed through the paper. The clergyman saw it. There was a rush of apology.

"I thought you were one of the lads who wouldn't go!" he said.

Sampson, V.C., simply smiled, and they parted good friends.—The Daily Mail, Aug. 19th.

SEE AMERICA FIRST—LINCOLN'S TOMB

By GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Swish"

Because Abraham Lincoln lies buried in the cemetery at Springfield, Ill., several thousand people visit that city each year to gaze respectfully at his tomb.

This pilgrimage is an act of great devotion, because Springfield is not readily reached by the population of America. Nine-tenths of the population live more than 500 miles away and the tourist routes pass far to the north. But it will pay the real American far greater dividends than a long and billowy trip to Shakespeare's tomb or Goethe's house or Samuel Johnson's tavern. Lincoln was buried in the town where he grew great and some of his honesty and kindness may be contagious.

The tomb of Lincoln is located in one of the most beautiful cemeteries in the country and the state of Illinois has built a vast and soaring monument over his tomb. It is a granite shaft on a pedestal around which are bronze groups of the army, navy, artillery and cavalry—four institutions upon which Lincoln relied at a time when certain earnest gentlemen were urging the country to settle its troubles by organizing a peace association and crawling under to the bed. In the vault beneath this monument are the remains of Lincoln, Mrs. Lincoln, two sons and a grandson.

In a room in the pedestal are many relics of Lincoln. In the Lincoln home in Springfield, which is carefully preserved, are many more. In the State House are still others. We may read in many of Lincoln's letters, which are preserved here, that he was a shy, timid man when he first came to Springfield and that the carriage of the rich which splashed mud on him as he dashed haughtily by made him hesitate to bring his young bride there—for he couldn't afford a carriage and the walking was very poor in muddy, unpaved central Illinois.

We should be perpetually thankful that Lincoln did not save up his money and buy a carriage, instead of spending it on law books and a belated education. Sometimes it almost seems as if nothing in the world is so worthless as the things for lack of which the young man grieves and is disconsolate.

"Be economical," is the cry in England, and this slogan has the same significance in Canada. We all must economize. There is more actual waste in our dress expenses than any other item. When a garment becomes soiled we throw it aside, when for a few cents it could be restored to original freshness and beauty by Dry Cleaning. A saving of at least 35 per cent. in the expense of dressing is possible by using the processes of Dry Cleaning and Dyeing.

Our agents will gladly give you full particulars.

Household Notes.

Fried food should not be allowed to become cool before serving. Flowers will keep fresh longer if a little sugar is added to the water. One of the best salads is made of finely shaved cabbage with French dressing. In making sandwiches be sure that the bread is at least a day old and that the butter is soft. Wood alcohol will take vasoline stains from wash goods. Soak them a few minutes in the alcohol. Brown and white rolls are always appreciated for sandwiches, especially when men are going to eat them. Oranges and bananas make an excellent salad with lettuce hearts, chopped nuts and French dressing. Pocket handkerchiefs and laces can be whitened by soaking them over night in a bath of toilet carbolic soap. It is a good idea to put a heavy Turkish towel on the bottom of the dishpan when washing fine china or glass. When a metal teapot is not in use, put a lump of sugar into the pot, and this will prevent its becoming musty. The juice of a lemon added to a pan of water will freshen wilted vegetables. Let them stand in it for one hour. Mash sardines to a paste with their own oil, and they will make more satisfactory sandwiches than if simply split. Steel wool is an excellent cleaner for pots, pans and cooking dishes generally. But remember to dry the wool quickly. If a sugary coat is desired on lemon meringue, pie, sift powdered sugar over the top before it is put into the oven. Try rubbing the silver every day with a dry flannel rag, it will not have to be cleaned with silver polish nearly so often. Don't pour away the water greens have been boiled in until it has become quite cold, otherwise it will leave an unpleasant smell. To clean cut glass satisfactorily use a stiff bristle nail brush and hot water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. Always push a new lamp wick through the top of a burner, wet the lighting end in kerosene, turn low and allow it to stand a day before using.

THE ICELAND LAUNCHED.—The new sealer Iceland recently launched in Scotland is now having her engines installed. Delay in building was caused by the war. When the finishing touches are made to the Iceland, and after the trial trip, she may be taken over by the Russian Government.

From Private McCormack.

The following letter was sent to Mr. Michael McCormack, of Spencer St., by his son John J. McCormack, now fighting the Germans with the British Expeditionary Force in France:—

France, Aug. 10th, '15. Dear Father,—I take pleasure in writing you these few lines to let you know that I am well, and hoping to find you the same, with not much news to tell you, but the next time I write I hope to tell you more. I had a letter from Harry last week, it was the first one for a month. I would tell you more of the war, but we are not allowed. There was one poor fellow I knew from home, and he was killed three months ago; his name was Tucker, and he belonged to Bay Roberts. I knew from home, and I knew from the place. I am writing to Uncle Pat and Aunt Bridget soon. I did not get time to write. Remember me to all my friends. So goodbye for this time. I have not much news to tell you, but the next time I write I hope to tell you more. I am, your loving son, J. J. MCCORMACK.

FROM SUBMARINE H-2.

The following was received by last mail, sent to a gentleman in town, by a stoker on submarine H-2 which was here the early part of the summer. It reads as follows:— Dear Mr. —, I now take the pleasure of writing you these few lines, hoping this will find you quite well. It leaves me at present, they received the photos safe, and was very much pleased to get them. They are not very bad are they, just as well as we could expect them. We are at Malta now, we did not get a worse trip than we had before we got there. I have not got much more to say now, so I must close, with best love to all from Louis. I remain, Your faithful friend, L. F. PEARCE.

Note.—The writer was a seaman on board H.M.S. Lion with Admiral Beatty, at the time of the sinking of the German ship "Blucher" and also in the fight at the Dogger Bank.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mr. Weir, of the School for the Blind in Halifax, is to give an illustrated lecture in St. Paul's Hall on Monday, showing the blind people at work in the different trades they have been taught. The object is a very worthy one, and the lecture will no doubt be well patronized. Mrs. M. Archibald arrived by Thursday's train from Boston, and will remain some time with her sons. Mrs. Archibald's many friends are very pleased to see her.

One of the most enjoyable evenings spent by the lovers of sport for some time was that of Wednesday last when a tug-of-war was pulled at the K.E.B. Armory between teams from the C.C.C. and I.C.E.B. The contest was keen, but was won by the C.C.C. It was heartily enjoyed by the large number of spectators. A dance was held in the Armory after the close of the "war".

Hr. Grace, Sept. 4, 1915. —COR. Flower Service. AT C. OF E. CEMETERY.

In the presence of a large gathering of worshippers the annual Flower Service was held at the Church of England Cemetery yesterday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. H. Uphill who also preached an eloquent and touching discourse dealing with our respect towards the dead. Then the graves of departed ones were decorated with floral tributes and the scene was a most impressive one. The G. L. B. Band, under Staff-Sergt. Cake, played a number of hymns during the service. The addition of a tart apple or two to the cranberries improves the flavor.

Holland Alarmed at German Policy.

Bethman Hollweg's "New Europe" Speech a Menace to Neutrals, Journal Says.

The Hague, Aug. 28.—The Rotterdam Courant, the most influential and most widely circulated newspaper in Holland, published on its first page a two column editorial virtually declaring that Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's recent speech in the Reichstag was a menace to the neutral States. The article gains in significance from the fact that the Courant heretofore has been considered strongly pro-German. The paper says: "What the German Chancellor in the Reichstag on Aug. 19 described as a 'new Europe'—under the general enthusiastic applause of his hearers—is in the eyes of us neutrals a future hell. It is not because it is Germany for which the Chancellor claims 'an impregnable strong position'. For England or Russia to assume to play the star part in this anachronistic fashion would be equally unbearable. But, if any State succeeds in so strengthening itself that it is wholly invulnerable, King Terror becomes our only ruler."

The Rotterdam Journal's expressions coincide with those of other leading Dutch papers, which are strenuously protesting against the idea of a complete German hegemony over Europe. General Staal, a Dutch ex-Minister of War, writing in Het Vaterland, says: "German drafts of peace terms indicate that Germany will not be able to help incorporating Belgium. Whoever broaches this proposal is completely forgetful of the fact that Belgium has been involved in the war against her wishes, and by an act on the part of Germany. If Germany continues to occupy Belgium after peace she will give to this war a character which would stamp her as a brutal, grasping usurper and make neutrals sorry not to have intervened." The articles quoted are the most emphatic to appear in the Dutch press. They indicate the extent of the anxiety which has been aroused by von Bethmann-Hollweg's speech.

In Milady's Boudoir.

When you, Milady, come home from the summers outing, look out for your complexion, and as quickly as possible, repair the ravages of the sun and wind. Cold water should never be used on a sunburned complexion. Wash the face in warm water instead. Then sponge with a simple mixture of rain water or soft water, lavender, and benzoin. The proportions are three of water, one of simple tincture of benzoin, and two of lavender water. Cucumber milk is cooling for the sunburned face. Take an ounce of fresh cucumber juice and three ounces of fresh milk. Scald, skim and use. It will only keep a few days so do not make too large a quantity. Massage this well into the face after washing. Then wipe the face with a soft towel. The woman who freckles easily should protect her skin by rubbing a little non-greasy cream into once or twice a day and giving it a light dusting of powder after the cream has been well rubbed into the pores. Buttermilk is invaluable for washing the freckled face, and its regular use will entirely remove freckles and prevent them from reappearing. It is always a mistake to put off the removal of freckles until the end of the summer, as the longer they are allowed to remain the more trouble they give when the task of removing them is undertaken. It is best to start removing them as soon as they are noticed, and then to take precautions to prevent them from forming again. The following lotion is excellent for removing light freckles: four ounces lemon juice, two ounces glycerine, one ounce rose water. Apply to the face several times daily and allow it to dry on the skin. If the freckles are deep, a stronger solution will be necessary to remove them. This is a stronger bleach: quarter ounce carbonated potash, one eighth ounce chloride of soda, eight ounces rose water, two ounces orange flower water. Mix and bathe the face with this solution at night before retiring, allowing it to dry on the skin. In the morning use plenty of good cold cream.

Address

To The Most Rev. Edward Patrick Roche, Archbishop of St. John's.

May it please Your Grace:— This being your first visit to Bell Island since your well merited elevation to the Archbishopric, we, on behalf of the Catholics of this Parish with loyal homage respectfully tender you our heartiest congratulations on your succession as Metropolitan of Newfoundland.

We desire to thank Your Grace for the great honour conferred on us by this early Episcopal visit to our Parish, so shortly after your consecration. Following in the line of such illustrious predecessors as Bishops Fleming, Mullock, Power and the late venerated Archbishop Howley, all of whom left inefaceable footprints on the sands of time, religiously, educationally and patriotically, we feel assured that with your religious zeal, energy, marked ability, and able guidance these footprints will become more visibly distinct during your Episcopacy, therefore in loyalty and love we present to you our native colours tied with the square and true knot of our affection and reverence; a knot that is guaranteed to stand firm in any storm, and yet may be easily manipulated at the will of our distinguished countryman.

We desire then to extend to Your Grace a heartfelt welcome and pray the Almighty to spare you for many years spent in useful endeavour for the spread of Catholicity and the good of our native land.

In conclusion we ask Your Grace to accept the accompanying gift; to remind you that we ever stand ready to make our contribution to the upkeep of that Church we love and revere.

On behalf of St. Michael's Parish we ask Your Grace's Blessing on Our Church, Our Island, Our Pastor and our People.

Bay de Verde Notes.

We notice in a recent issue of your paper the catches of codfish taken from the reports given to the Board of Trade, and while we cannot judge the catches in other districts, your correspondent is of the opinion that a great exaggeration is made in this district. We notice that Mr. Thomas Tucker, of Burnt Head, has contradicted Mr. Fahey's report and Mr. Tucker is a man whose opinion is worth more than Mr. Fahey's. We quite agree with Mr. Tucker, and moreover believe that instead of 30,000 qts., 25,000 would be nearer the mark.

The fishery here since the 1st August may be considered one of the worst with hook and line for many years, and the fact that no squid are obtainable for bait makes the outlook for a good fall's fishery anything but bright, and those who have prosecuted the voyage with hook and line have very poor catches.

Mr. Benson, Job Bros. agent, is now here purchasing fish for his firm and we understand has secured a good share of it.

Our local fish buyers are not, if we judge by appearances, anxious to purchase, and seem to be looking on and saying nothing.

Miss Ryall, of St. John's, is now here on a visit and is sojourning at North's Hotel.

The schr. Annie H., Wm. Hogan, master, arrived from St. John's yesterday with a load of provisions and other commodities.

Mr. Wm. Frost who had been in hospital at St. John's for a month's treatment, has returned from that institution fully recovered.

Miss Taylor, of Moreton's Harbor, arrived here by s.s. Susu, and takes charge of the Church of England School.

Fishing boats have not been to the fishing grounds the past week owing to no squid. The scarcity of bait is a serious thing to fishermen and there is no remedy for it.

The fact that the hook and line fishery is behind that of last year considerably, and the poor prospects at present cause fishermen to be depressed when they realize that a long winter is to be reckoned with and their small catches are altogether inadequate to supply themselves and families with the necessities to tide them over the winter season.—COR.

Workman Injured.

Mr. Wm. Dormidy, a labourer who was engaged discharging salt from the S. S. Korsford, met with an unpleasant experience, which fortunately did not result seriously. He was working in the hold of the ship discharging salt, and somehow he got buried in it. He was released by other workmen. He was badly hurt about the back and had to be taken to a doctor for treatment.
