LADY IRIS' MISTAKE;

Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER XXV.

So they stood in the sunlight, unutterably happy in their love; and the sunbeams fell upon his dark, handsome face, and upon her white hand, on which the diamonds and rubies shone. The rugged trunk of a fallen tree lay near the gate. He drew her to it.

"There is no pleasanter spot than this," he said. "I like to watch the wheat swaying in the sunshine. Whose love is this Iris?—The lovely laughter of the wheat-crowned hill!"

"I do not know," she answered. "Do you know these lines, Allan? The sight of a field full of ripe wheat always brings them to me—

Kissing her hair.

Sleep were no sweeter than her face to me.

Sleep in cold sea-bloom under the cold sea.

What pain could get between my face and hers?

What new sweet thing would love not relish worse.

Unless perhaps white death had kissed me there.

Kissing her hair."

Iris," he said, when he had finished singing, "how naturally love and poetry go together! Poetry fills one's heart with love, and love fills the whole soul with poetry."

"They are twin sisters," observed Lady Iris, with a smile. "Many new ideas seem to strike you now, Allan."

"You are my teacher; so how can I fail to learn?"

And on this, the last of their happy days, they sat talking while the sun shone upon the wheat-fields and the birds called to each other in the trees.

CHAPTER XXVI.

There were a few hours of bliss without alloy for the lovers; and then the storm burst. One morning Lady Iris received more than her usual number of congratulatory letters. It touched her to find how many of her rejected lovers had written.

How kind were the wishes expressed for her happiness, and how sincerely every one seemed to admire Captain Osburn!

She believed that she could not contract any marriage which would meet with such general approval.

"Iris," said Allan, who never left her side for one moment if he could help it, "leave some of those letters, and come out for a stroll by the river. What can people find to write about, I wonder?"

He was impatient to tell her all the thoughts that had filled his mind since he had left her twelve hours before.

"Down by the river?" she replied.

"As that I will; for, of all places,

I love most the river Rille. By-the-bye, Allan, I have a message from papa for you. Will you go to him in his study at noon? He wishes to speak to you."

"Gladly, dearest," he responded,

"for I am sure that he wants to speak to me about you. I shall grow restless soon and ask some one to fix the date for a certain blissful event."

"One would never think you lacked courage," she said, with a light, blushing, happy smile. "I think you say almost what you please."

Then they started for their walk. He remembered afterward many little things that happened which seemed like confinement. They stopped for a few minutes in the hall, and she stood just under the arch with its scroll of golden letters—"Hold with honor;" and, as she paused there, he could not help thinking that this bright, beautiful girl would rather part with her life than that the honor of her house should be sullied. Again, as they passed through the entrance-gate, she looked up with a bright smile at the lion and the lily.

"You love the lion and the lily?" he said.

"Yes," she replied; "and I was just thinking how well it is that the lion is there to protect the lily."

They walked to the river-side, and sat down upon the bank. There they talked for some little time about the happiness of their future life, all unconscious of the swiftly-coming cloud that was to darken it. Suddenly she looked up at him—she was making a knot of scarlet poppies.

"Allan," she said, "I have often been on the point of asking you the question; but something has always hindered it. Tell me, dear, what is this romance of your birth, as John Bardon calls it?"

As she spoke she gave a passing thought to the crushed almond-blossom, and smiled in contempt. Allan looked at her in surprise.

"The romance of my birth, Iris?" he echoed. "I know of no romance, my dear!"

"But there is one—at least John Bardon told me so."

"He must have dreamed it then."

"Well, perhaps, you do not call it a romance. You may call it truth; you are always so careful not to praise yourself."

"But, my darling," he said earnestly, "I do not understand what you mean."

"You must tell me all about it," she persisted, "even though it should make me think you more a hero than ever. Allan. I must hear every word of the story."

"I will tell you everything, Iris, when I know what you mean," he replied.

"John Bardon told me that there was a romance about your birth, that in the most heroic and chivalrous manner you had given up title and fortune."

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Readily better than ready-made cough syrup, and never about $1.00 a bottle.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple, easily prepared syrup.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar, molasses, clarified molasses, honey, corn syrup, etc.

The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $1.00.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives immediate relief. It soothes the throat, stops the nasty, throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membrane and gets rid of easily that it is really asthmatic.

A day's use will usually overcome the primary cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing else like it.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated syrup of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex with 16 oz. of water" and don't buy anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Dried Fish.

Shipments to Porto Rico are showing heavy losses these days. Too many fish were sent forward and the market could not stand the strain.

The outlook in that market is rather a sorry one for our shippers to-day, for it would seem that we are likely to be sending more supplies to Porto Rico than the consumption will easily absorb, in which case buyers will practically name their own price, which after the new duty is deducted, will leave little indeed for the shipper.

This is one of the cases where the consumer does not pay the duty. When fish are scarce he does. Then the shipper fixes the price. We might say a word here about the effect of the new American tariff on our codfish industry. In normal times we shall probably feel it very little in dried fish, because if the Porto Rican and American people want supplies, they will have to pay the market price here. But when world markets generally are bad, and there is more fish than buyers, straight goes the shoe to the other foot, and that is where it is to-day.

We asked a local exporter this week how he thought our shore cod fishery would be affected by the new tariff; that is in the fishery along the South Shore from Cape North to Cape Sable, and which has been selling its products in a green state to American packers of shredded fish.

His view was that the American consumer was not inclined to stand for an advance in price that would be sufficient to assure the marketing of supplies from Nova Scotia in the States as formerly. If this is true then the outlook for our shore cod fishery is rather dismal.

However, trade conditions sometimes change very quickly, and it may be that things will adjust themselves satisfactorily later on. There is no denying, however, that Mr. Fordney, kind, generous man that he is, has given us a very severe jolt which we are not going to forget very quickly whether we feel it badly or not.

But coming back to the dried fish trade. There is a combination of things to-day which is tending to depress prices. Brazilian exchange is so bad that the country temporarily has stopped buying; Italy is as good as bankrupt; Italy is overloaded with supplies; Portugal would buy fish, but with the escudo down to just one twentieth of its face value, naturally there is difficulty in negotiating purchases.

The money situation in Portugal is the same as it would be with us if a 20 cent package of cigarettes moved up to $4.00. Some of us would then be apt to do less smoking. We cannot blame the Portuguese to-day if they eat less fish?

The two bright spots in the dried fish situation to-day are these. Spain is buying freely, and Germany, because of food needs at home, has prohibited further exports of dried fish for the present season. But against this Norway and Newfoundland are keen as mustard for all the business there is, and it is the competition of the latter which is responsible for the lower prices here. We hear of sales of Newfoundland shore fish being made last week at $5.75 to $6.25 delivered Halifax. This while Lunenburg is holding out for $7.00. We would, however, say in closing that there is no reason for getting panicky about the situation just yet, because what dried fish stocks there are will keep, and a lot of things may happen between now and the opening of spring.—Maritime Merchant.

He Could Hardly Swing a Sledge, Says Knickle

"Four bottles of Tanlac put me in such fine shape I can do a hard day's work and still feel fresh at quitting time," declared Ernest Knickle, well-known young blacksmith residing at Pelham Street, Lunenburg, N.S.

"I feel terrible from stomach trouble and when I have run down and weak that sometimes it was almost more than I could do to swing my sledge. I would have such awful pains in the pit of my stomach after eating that it would almost double over like a horseshoe and my food felt like a lump in my stomach. Gas bloated me up terribly and I would be dreadfully nauseated. I couldn't sleep well, lost my appetite entirely and got in mighty bad shape all around."

"A lady who had been sick in bed here for a week took Tanlac and telling our neighbors what a grand medicine it was, so I thought I would give it a trial. Well, it simply rid me of all my troubles, and you can bet that if I ever get back in that condition Tanlac is the first thing I'll go after."

Tanlac is sold by all good drug-gists.

PHILOSOPHY.
Philosophy is good enough when everything is falling to pieces. To help us find the greater plan behind life's grief and care. It's good for talking purposes when friends drop in to chat. And it is fine to hear them say: "I never thought of that." But when a fellow's in the mud, beyond the highest doubt, The best sort of philosophy is first to help him out.

It's fine to fill your pipe and smoke and ponder various things. To find the hidden benefit which every burden brings;

To build your faith in what is good and see the distant goal.

And learn that even the terrors tonic for the soul;

But when a friend is fighting hard and being put to rout.

The best sort of philosophy is first to help him out.

You take a man in trouble, doubt, or danger or distress, or

He doesn't want a lecture on his future happiness;

When he is up against it hard and faint and failing fast,

It's no use then to call to mind the errors of his past;

He is too busy moralizing, preaching,

His friend about,

Desperately needs a chap who'll

try to help him out.

We should be philosophical. All men should try to see;

The purpose back of every care and all that has to be;

But man, philosopher stands on the river's bank;

And calmly tells a drowning man that he must swim or sink;

And so I half the willing man with arms and muscles stout

Who finds a man in trouble and jumps in to help him out.

A good dinner deserves a good cigarette, a bad dinner needs one. Let your choice be CUB.

Emmeline's Idea.

Little Emmeline was on a visit to her grandmother in the country. They had chicken for dinner, which pleased the little girl very much. "Oh, where did you get the chicken, grandma?" she asked.

From the chicken yard, dear. It's one of those you saw this morning."

"What, one of those I fed?"

"Yes, dear."

"Did you kill one?"

"Yes, darling!"

"Oh, did you!" said Emmeline. "At home we buy ours ready-made!"

VALUABLE TIME LOST.

In addition to the very important part which they play in insurance collection, records are most vital to the operation of any business.

In the case of a manufacturer they tell him where he can buy cheapest and most effectively, how he can transport raw and finished materials and where he can sell at a profit. They aid him in reducing labor turnovers, opening new markets and making developments in his products. The retailer or wholesaler, by consulting his records, ascertains what lines are profitable, what are unprofitable, whether this man or that firm shall be allowed more credit, what his financial condition is and what can be done to better his business generally.

New Rules for
Fisherman's Race
Necessary.

The decision of the Canadian Trustee of the International Fishing Trophy in barring the Boston fishing schooner "Mayflower" from the races after her service of a year and a half in active fishing operations has not received the unanimous approval of vessel owners and fishermen in either the United States or Canada. The rejection of her entry last year, while it occasioned some comment on this side of the border, was fully justified. The vessel's design was radically different from the ordinary type of fisherman, her construction cost was higher and was paid in a manner that savored of being built especially for the purpose of capturing the Cup. It was held by many people that fishing was but a secondary consideration for owners.

"Mayflower," however, has remained in the fishing business since she has dispensed all the allegations about her being a yacht, a fair-weather fisherman and but temporarily engaged in the industry. The "Mayflower" has again been barred from entering the International Races.

In the Deed of Gift accompanying the Halifax Herald Trophy for International Fishing Schooner Racing it is clearly stated in the preamble that the intention of the donors is the development of the most practical and serviceable type of fishing vessel combined with the best fishing qualities, without sacrificing speed. In what manner has the owner violated these principles? Recently she has been turned down by the Trustees on account of her capacity being less than that of the fishing vessels of the Bluenose fleet.

There has been much argument upon since the decision was handed down, but all seem to lose sight of certain fundamentals which have formed the whole basis of contention. First of all, the International Deed of Gift has been drafted solely from a Canadian point of view and with but one class of fishing in mind—the salt bank fisherman of the Lunenburg County fleet. These schooners engage solely in one kind of fishing—fitting out in March, fishing for the ground and salting the catch of fish until the close of season in September or October when they return to their home port. During the balance of the year they sail up or engage in freight. For the purpose of salt fishing, especially, it is imperative that they have ample carrying capacity. This is a profitable investment, indeed, there are but a few schooners employed in any other kind of fishing. The bulk of the fish are the salt bankers.

In the United States we find a range of fishing schooners. Out of Boston there is a considerable fleet market fisherman—schooners engaged in fresh fishing operations all year around; Gloucester has a large part of vessels which may be salt water part of the year and halibut fishing or halibut during the remainder months; Portland, Provincetown and many other ports have fishing schooners which engage in halibut, haddock, herring, sardines, snapper fishing and swordfishing. Is the racing to be confined to the few salt bank fishing schooners of this varied fleet who comply with the rules and measurements?

In our modest opinion the real fishing schooner is the vessel that stays the same year in and year out, winter and summer, and which can turn over into whatever manner of fishing her owners think the most profitable. As a market fisherman, the lines and speed are essential to get her trip to port in the shortest possible time and it is in this type of vessel that the highest development of the naval architect's skill can be attained. Sailing and maneuvering abilities are paramount to these schooners while the packing of a large cargo, such as is demanded in a combination salt fisher and freighter, is unnecessary. As a general all-round fishing vessel, the schooner complies with every requirement.

It would now seem advisable to strongly re-draft the rules and regulations governing the races for the future. It must either be a race between fishing schooners or a sailing race between vessels who comply with the requirements of salt fishing and freighting—N.Y. Fishing Gazette.

Fire Protection Emphasized.

EIGHT CAUSES OF CONFLAGRATIONS.

First, chimneys. For some unknown reason, chimneys are not cleaned as often as they should be. This is a constant menace for soot when it carbonizes is inflammable, and a chimney fire can be very dangerous. "Keep your chimneys clean," we advise daily.

Second, kerosene. Many people use kerosene to light the fire in a hurry, forgetting that the gases formed evolve so quickly that they must blow out somewhere. So they do—out of the stove, carrying the flames with them.

Third, gas ovens. Sometimes a match that is being lighted goes out after it has been scratched to light the oven. The housewife goes for another, leaving the unlighted gas pouring from the oven. Result, by the time that she gets another match and strikes it the fumes have reached tremendous volume and an explosion follows.

Fourth, gasoline. There is much carelessness displayed in the use of gasoline for cleaning gloves, clothing and other articles. This is perfectly safe if it is done in a room with plenty of ventilation. But there should be no fire anywhere near, because the vapors carry and will catch even at a distance of ten or twelve feet when atmospheric conditions are right.

Fifth, stove polish. For some perhaps necessary reason stove polish contains gasoline or naptha or benzine, which, as everybody knows, are highly inflammable. Great care must be displayed in the use of stove polish and directions carefully followed.

Sixth, spontaneous combustion. Cellars and attics are catchalls for all the rubbish and litter that some housewives keep in the oftentimes mistaken idea that it will come in handy some day. Economy is a creditable impulse, but it can be carried to extremes, as in most instances of this sort. Perhaps in some of this material there is an oily, wet or damp rag. Spontaneous combustion occurs where there is dampness.

Seventh, hot ashes. This is a common cause of fires—hot ashes dumped into a wooden container, bin or barrel.

Eighth, electric wiring. Faulty wiring and overloading of circuits are also common causes of fires and should be especially guarded against.

Newfoundland Affected.

The much wrangled over Fordney-McCumber tariff measure for United States has become law, going into effect over a month ago. So far as Newfoundland is concerned in the application of the new and increased rates of duty on fish and fish products, these will very heavily affect our exports to that country, when shipped in British bottoms. Cargoes of salt bulk fish and herring, purchased in this colony by United States subjects, and shipped in vessels of that nationality, escape the rates imposed, being admitted as products of the United States fisheries. In that way the herring cargoes taken at Bay of Islands, Bonne Bay and other places, and those of salt bulk codfish shipped from the South Coast are not liable to taxation, providing they are brought in vessels of U.S. registry. Of course that makes no difference to the people who dispose of their catches through Gloucester, Boston and Bucksport buyers. But let a British vessel with either Newfoundland or Canadian caught fish enter a port of the great republic, no matter by whom loaded, and the duty is promptly assessed and payment demanded ere bulk can be broken. "All fresh fish," says the Canadian Fisherman, "are taxed with varying severity. Canned and cured fish were moderately taxed in the old tariff, but in many instances this has been augmented tremendously. Probably the most serious increases are the tax of 2½ cents per pound on herring and other fish skinned or boned, which heretofore had to pay only ¼ of a cent per pound; pickled herring and mackerel, heretofore free, are now taxed 1 cent per pound; fresh salmon, halibut, previously entered free, are now taxed 2 cents per pound. The levies provided in the new tariff are most severe, at least insofar as fish are concerned and establish a record in trade relations. The Payne-Aldrich tariff of 1909 was considered more or less drastic at the time, but that imposed a tax on fresh fish of only herring, pickled or salted, smokemackerel, halibut and salmon, whether fresh, pickled or salted, one cent per pound; and on herring, pickled or salted, smoked or kippered, one half cent per pound." The export of fresh fish (cod) from Newfoundland to United States does not cover any volume, nor yet that of dried fish. Herring, scotch and ordinary pack, find their way into U.S. markets in large quantities, likewise fish oils. The new duties, however, are all but prohibitive, and will do a great deal to reduce our exports of the products taxed. One way to get even is to place a larger export tax on all Newfoundland fish going out in American bottoms, and levy a surtax, large enough to be appreciable, on all goods and merchandise imported from United States, or by giving a preferential tariff to Britain and the Dominions. The new duties on Salmon, pickled salted, smoked, kippered or otherwise prepared and preserved, is 25 per cent. ad valorem; on dried fish, salted or unsalted, one and one quarter cents per pound, or one dollar and forty cents per hundredweight; on herring, pickled or salted, one cent per pound, which amounts to $2 on a barrel ordinary pack, and $2.50 on a barrel Scotch pack, net. If the same rate is charged on container, pickle, etc., the sum total per barrel will be much greater. On Fish Oils the rates are: Cod and Herring 5 cents per barrel; Seal, 6 cents per gallon; Whale, 6 cents per gallon. The exports of Herring to United States for the year 1921, were: Bulk, 6,638 barrels; Frozen, 10,366 barrels; Pickled, 36,400 barrels. These figures give food for thought. In the past we have always deplored tariff wars as being unprofitable, but if the United States wishes to erect a tariff wall against our products, the means of helping to bring it down are in our own hands.

GRAND JURY FINDS TWO TRUE BILLS.

The Grand Jury were in attendance at the Supreme Court this morning and were addressed by his Lordship the Chief Justice on an indictment for murder preferred against Wo Fen Game. The Chief Justice said there were three counts for murder and a fourth charging the defendant with wounding with intent to kill, which was contrary to an Act passed in 1861. He said that some 34 witnesses who would give testimony were at their service to guide them in arriving at a verdict. There were, he said, no eyewitnesses, but there was a letter and the statement of the accused, and also a witness to the purchase of a revolver on the day of the murder. The Chief Justice also instructed the jury on a bill of indictment charging one Hurley with housebreaking. His Lordship stated that it would be shown that at the time of entry to Neyley's premises the accused wore glove fingers on his hands evidently to prevent detection by the finger print system. The indictment charging Kitchener Edwards with jail breaking was also presented to the Jury. After a short absence the jury returned to court with true bills against the last two men. The charge against Wo Fen Game will be considered to-morrow. The Grand Jury will visit the public institutions this afternoon.

Rotary Club Luncheon.

REV. FR. PIPPY, SPEAKER.

At the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club held yesterday Rev. Joseph Pippy gave a short address on the boy life of the city. Rotarian B. C. Gardner presided. The report of the Boy Life Survey teams showed that over 2100 cards had been filled in. The speaker of the day, Father Pippy, strongly endorsed the survey work. As Chaplain of the C.C.C. he had come in close touch with many boys and advocated that all youths should be encouraged to join the city brigades. Parents should be advised to send their children to school and a public play grounds for boys should be urged, said the speaker. Concluding, Father Pippy said he was glad to see the increased interest that was being taken in the young boys of the city because they were the hope of the future and their proper training was essential for the future prosperity of the community. A communication from the Child Welfare Association was received, and each Rotarian was asked to become a member of the Association and thus assist in a practical manner the excellent work in which its members are engaged.

Mr. Winter appeared for the Crown. The judgment of Judge Morris was read this morning by the Chief Justice, and it was ordered set aside. Both Mr. Justice Johnson and Mr. Justice Kent concurred with the Chief Justice. By this decision the fine imposed on Mr. Burnstein will be revoked, and the insurance, which was in the vicinity of $1500, is also affected.

JUDGE LECTURES COMPLAINANT.

In the case of indecent assault preferred by a young girl against a Post Office official which was heard in camera to-day, the defendant was fined $50. Mr. Barron appeared for the accused. He submitted that the plaintiff's previous conduct on other occasions offered an inducement for the assault, with which defendant was charged. He offered to produce witnesses to imprudent conduct taking place between them in the Post Office on previous occasions, and at other places. The Judge in passing sentence lectured the complainant and stated that if she wished redress she had to seek it with clean hands. The fine, if paid, was ordered to be handed over to the girl to pay for her coat, which was torn on the occasion complained of.

WORK OF COUNCIL REVIEWED.

The Executive of the Social Service Council at its meeting on Monday, considered some of its past work and outlined future activities with good prospects of success. The efforts of the Council in framing and having a law enacted for the protection of neglected, dependent and delinquent children have resulted so far in distinct advantage and Rev. Canon Bolt, Dr. Greene, D. G. Hemmick, and Dr. Jones is due special thanks in that they were primarily responsible for the passage of the Act. The Government has appointed District Inspector Noyesworth to be Probation Officer under the Act, and at the recent meeting the Inspector attended and outlined some of the valuable work already performed. Cases of neglect to young children have been inquiry into and conditions improved. That suggests the value of the Council's efforts in behalf of the helpless. Neglect, rather than cruelty, appears to occasion most of the trouble, and all cases are being carefully inquired into and rating afforded. The Council is indebted to Judge Morris for sympathetic assistance as Judge of the Juvenile Court in cases that have been brought before him on the bench, or elsewhere, and the hope is well grounded that in the near future even greater good will be achieved than has been recorded in the past. As is generally known, the Social Service Council is representative of all denominations, since all are more or less affected or inflicted with the care of neglected, dependent and delinquent children and the aims of the Council is to afford protection to those who need it. The annual meeting of the Council will be held on the 21st instant, when officers and Executive will be elected, and it is hoped the gathering will be large and commensurate with the importance of the work in hand.

Local Talent Merits.*VERY HIGHEST PRAISE.

(By Newfoundland.)
It is that Newfoundlanders are so vociferous in their praise of their own musical talents and so grateful in their commendations of purely local triumphs and accomplishments of the same kind? Some little time ago a gentleman was brought here from a series of concerts in aid of a charitable object. His exhibition of skill inspired some of our papers even to editorial approbation. This is not a contention that honor is paid where honor was not due. It is merely a comment on the peculiarity of the fact that local musical efforts and interests, every whit as creditable, did not receive more than bare recognition in the columns of the local papers. Certainly, no effort was made to impress on our own people the fact that local musical talent is controlled only by the greatest masters of the art vocal and instrumental. The author of this note had the great privilege of attending the smoker and concert put up by the Orphanage Club at the C.C.C. Hall last Thursday evening. The affair made a variety of impressions, all of them creditable, on the mind. The self-sacrificing deication infected the patrons of the event with an enthusiasm that opened the hearts and the purses of all present to the great advantage of the cause of the helpless orphans. It was delightful to note such prominent citizens as Hon. Dr. Campbell and Mr. W. J. Higgins, M.H.A., Hon. H. M. Mosdell and Hon. S. D. Blantford and their willing workers throw themselves wholeheartedly into the field of endeavor for the orphans. It was a pleasure to understand that the whole effort was voluntary. Mr. Eric Fox threw himself heart and soul into the preparation of the programme and when Mr. Fox undertakes to make such a programme a success the results always leave nothing to be desired. Peerless in his own field of musical director is Mr. Gordon Christian, who holds some of the highest professional diplomas ever awarded to Newfoundlanders. With these two gentlemen in command it is not surprising that the arranging of the programme and the rendition of the accompaniments left nothing at all to be desired.

OMISSIONS REGRETTED.

It was a matter of great disappointment to the writer that all the individual items on the programme could not be rendered. The auction sale came right in the middle of the list of vocal and instrumental items and was protracted beyond all expectation by the enthusiasm with which all present threw themselves into the bidding. Here was an instance in which selfishness clashed with philanthropic desires. One hankered for more of the good music but at the same time one delighted in the success that was attending Councillor Dowden's efforts to pile up dollars to be spent on the orphans. It is regrettable, therefore, that Messrs. Gunn, Stanfield, MacFarlane, King and Glass could not add their quota to the feast of music, but it is delightful to hear that financially the smoker was a tremendous success. The highest compliment the writer can pay the gentlemen whose numbers were omitted is to express the confidence that they would have maintained the high standard set by those whose names appeared opposite the opening numbers. Bare mention of the names of Messrs. Trapnell, Christian, Herder, Williams, Fox, Tucker, O'Neill, Hunt, Penman and Kearney, is sufficient voucher for the high genius, skill and enjoyment that characterised the numbers actually rendered. Karl Trapnell with his solo and Arthur Bulley with his instrumental number proved themselves, to the "steenth time pastmasters at the art of musical-entertainment and received rounds of applause and demands for encores that could not be refused. In purely instrumental technique, in sympathy of touch and expression and in ability to interpret the light and the classical, the "highbrow" and the popular in pianoforte music, Mr. Christian, a son of the soil, is a musician of whom every Newfoundland should be proud. Of individual strunged music, Messrs. Penman and Bradshaw each is a master entertainer in himself, while Messrs. Bulley and Gunn extract unsuspected harmonies from the saxophone.

MASTERLY QUARTETTE.

The writer was particularly charmed with the vocal quartette comprising Messrs. W. H. Herder, A. Williams, E. Fox and W. A. Tucker. Their combination displayed a mastery of harmony, a dignity of expression and a lightness of touch and charm of rendition that shows them music lovers and music masters in the deepest and fullest sense of the term. Their rendition of "Hush-a-bye M'Baby," was a delight to the audience. The croon of the lullaby, the swing of the chorus and the sudden transition from subvocal hum to full-throated melody was a revelation to the gathering who showed their great appreciation with an instant demand for an encore. Special mention must be made by the writer of Mr. T. H. O'Neill's recitation, or, rather, trial of them. For, not satisfied with an intimitable Irish description of David's fight with Goliath, the audience simply compelled Mr. O'Neill to treble his contribution to the programme. And, then, also, with grave and solemn countenance, Mr. C. E. Hunt related a "Terrible Tale" of sundry personal and local happenings. The relation rhymed well and was sung in style that was irresistibly comic. It was a "Tale" that gripped Mr. Hunt's auditors in spasms of mirth and it was the concoction of a master of humorous verse. Mr. George Kearney, too, nicely delivered a topical song that dealt with the affairs and interests of the "Little House in the Pond" where the orphans abide. The whole affair was a masterpiece of philanthropic co-operation. Planned by the Orphanage Club, it caught the fancy and gripped the hearts of our best musicians, it proved an open sesame to the purse of our citizens and it resulted in great financial benefit to the cause of the orphaned. The writer fears that he has already trespassed far, too much on the space of the Telegram, notably generous though that old Family Newspaper is to the interest of such causes. It would be only fair, though, in closing this tribute to local talent to pay an additional one to the Orphanage Club, which is working so hard, for "the least of these" and which comprises—Hon. H. M. Mosdell, President; Hon. S. D. Blantford, Vice-Pres.; Councillor Reg. Dowden, Secretary; Mr. B. Stafford, Treasurer; and Messrs. E. Lawrence, Fred Davy, B. Parsons, Fred Reid, R. G. Silverlock, S. Thompson, E. Snow, C. A. Jeffery, G. H. Press, and J. H. Scammon, M.H.A.

Storm Abating.*HEAVY SEA STILL ON.

The Shipping Department received a message this forenoon from Nipper's Harbor stating that the N.E. storm which raged yesterday was abating somewhat, but a heavy sea was still on. It is not likely that the Northern fleet will leave until the sea goes down, but the appearance of the schooners may be expected at the end of the week.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES*THE NEWCASTLE AFFAIR.

LONDON, Nov. 1.
An amicable settlement of the question of the United States consulate at Newcastle, England, which was closed by order of United States Government last August in a fair way of being reached, it was said yesterday. The impression was given it would soon be opened. British charges against Fred C. Slater and Russell M. Brooks, Consul and Vice-Consul, of alleged discrimination against British shipping interests are to be withdrawn, on condition that these officials will be replaced by others.

TO FIGHT OR NOT TO FIGHT.

LONDON, Nov. 1.
Chieftains of the Conservative Party, led by Bonar Law, and the National Liberals under the banner of Lloyd George are still undecided to-day as to whether they would "spread the war" against one another's candidates, or stand on the present situation of fighting bitterly in some districts, and cooperating in others. "To fight or not to fight," was subject to discussions in Conservative quarters last night, but no orders were issued to leaders in the hinterlands, and the matter will again be threshed out to-day. Some anti-Lloyd George papers declare he is bluffing, and has no organization capable of offering effective warfare against the Tories, while his journalistic champion, the Daily Chronicle, contends he really has the men and the means to use them, but is simply holding back in hopes of returning sanity elsewhere."

LLOYD GEORGE ILL.

LONDON, Nov. 1.
Lloyd George has developed a sore throat, and on the advice of physicians has abandoned his engagement to speak in Bristol to-morrow. Lord Dawson, his physician, says several days rest are absolutely essential to the ex-Premier, but his condition is not serious.

LENINE AGGRESSIVE AS EVER.

MOSCOW, Nov. 1.
Soviet Moscow is now assured that Lenin is in good physical condition, and fine spirits. He spoke publicly yesterday for the first time since his prolonged illness, making an unheralded appearance before the Workers' and Peasant's Parliament. The matter was settled out of court.

BIG GALE RAGING AT SYDNEY.

SYDNEY, Nov. 1.
One small schooner and several motor boats are ashore and a large amount of minor water front damage resulted from a severe northwest gale which has been blowing since midnight Monday. This morning the gale blew 40 miles an hour, accompanied by a high sea, which swept directly up the harbor, breaking over wharves in front of the city, seven miles from the open sea. In the afternoon the wind abated somewhat, but freshened at 6 p.m., and at midnight to-night is blowing about 45 miles an hour. The harbor ferry service is suspended, and ferry boats have come up from North Sydney for shelter from the high seas running. Much damage to telephone and electric light and power circuits resulted in Sydney. At North Sydney two large motor boats drove ashore, a small schooner broke from her moorings and collided with another vessel, and then drove ashore at Leitches Creek. The crew are in no danger. A Danish four master is having a hard time to hold on to Farquhar's wharf, although secured by seven cables and a bow anchor. Indian Beach diving stands and bathing equipment have been wrecked. At Glace Bay, Lingan Bar is reported as broken in two places, thus cutting shore communication with New Waterford. The steamer Becketham, which was in an exposed position at Sydney, dragged her anchors and required the assistance of tugs to keep her from going ashore at Peter's Fields, Westmount.

Quits Ridicule*of Whiskers.*LONG ESTEEMED AS A SYMBOL OF MANHOOD.

The impolite epidemic of "Beaver" has practically died out of London, writes Norman Ackland in "The Daily News", but the production of a revue of that name, which is shortly going on tour, will give it new life in the provinces.

It is an innovation from the historical point of view, for people with hair on their faces to be ridiculed. The beard has long been esteemed as the symbol of manhood, sagacity and strength. During periods of intellectual prominence in most countries beards happened to be fashionable.

The Assyrian and ancient Persian rulers wore beards, the latter actually interweaving them with gold threads, in ancient Greece, Zeus and the Homeric heroes are depicted with them. Plato and the philosophers wore beards, but Alexander the Great abolished them, as they afforded an excellent grip for the enemy hand-to-hand conflicts. It was during the time of Alexander that Greek culture began to wane.

The leading lights of the Renaissance, Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo and Galileo were bearded, as were the great Elizabethans. Beards were taxed in England in the sixteenth century, hence they became a luxury and were frequently dyed. In "A Midsummer Night's Dream," when Quince asks Bottom the Weaver to play the part of Pyramus, the latter says: "I will discharge it in either your straw-color beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-gold beard or your French crown-color beard your perfect yellow." (in which case he would become Bottom the Beaver.)

Pope Clement VII grew his beard as an indication of grief for the sack of Rome in 1527, and from that time the Popes were bearded until the death of Innocent XII in 1705.

Sandy Macpherson had just met Robert Macdonald after losing sight of him for five years. He clasped Robert joyfully by the hand.

"And what are ye doin' to-morrow night, mon?" he asked after the conversation.

"Oh, I'm free to-morrow night."

"And Thursday night?"

"That's free as well."

"And Friday night?"

"Free also."

"And what are ye doin' on Saturday night?"

"Oh, I'm goin' to the kirk meeting on Saturday night."

"It's a peety," said Sandy, mournfully shaking his head; "it's a peety; I was going to ask ye to dinner on Saturday night."

Committees have been formed all over Holland in aid of the restoration of the choir of the "Nieuwe Kerk" at Delft, where the principal members of the Orange family are entombed. The so-called new church is not so very new, as it was built between the years 1333 and 1496. The interior has been badly spoilt by so-called restoration work in the first half of the nineteenth century. In the nave and the choir the original vault is concealed by a flat ceiling, and the walls and sandstone pillars are covered with a thick layer of lime. In the midst of this poor and much disfigured part of the church stands the splendid mausoleum of Prince William the Silent, while underneath is the family vault of the Oranges, and close at hand are other Orange monuments.

International Fishing Schooner Races.

The Story of the 1922 Series Sailed Off Gloucester.

(Reprinted from Staff Correspondence of Morning Chronicle, Halifax).

(By H. W. JONES.)
GLoucester, Oct. 26.—Scooting home under lower and maintopsail in a squall northerly that attained to 28 knots, the schooner Bluenose, of Lunenburg, her smoking lee foam turned red by the westerly sun, this afternoon tore to the finishing line defeating the schooner Henry Ford, of Gloucester, by seven minutes and fifty-one seconds in the best and final race of the International series.

Bluenose covered the course in 4 hours, 48 minutes and 38 seconds. The Nova Scotia vessel, having two official victories to her credit retains the trophy which she won off Halifax last year from the Gloucester schooner Elsie, and receives therewith $3,000 first prize money.

To the loser goes $2,000. The trophy will be presented to Capt. Angus Walters, skipper of the Canadian schooner, at a hotel here tomorrow. Bluenose also wins the "Captain's Cup," presented by a Gloucester firm.

It was a clear victory, rendered decisive in a ten mile thresh to windward on the fourth leg of the course when the Canadian schooner, showing herself stiffer and more weatherly in the full breeze that whipped the ocean feather white, gained more than six minutes. This was less than was expected but it was sufficient to demonstrate the Canadian vessel's supremacy over the swift and pretty flivver of the sea in a muzzler to windward.

then pleased, of course, to have held the trophy despite the efforts of Gloucester's best schooner and crew, until we accept this victory with the proper sporting spirit. It is the fact that our views are to the comparative merits of the two vessels, laughed at by most of Gloucester, have turned out to be correct, that causes us now to chuckle.

Some of the native sons are not yet satisfied that Ford is beaten. As we neared the line on the Committee boat this afternoon, the Sailing Committee received the following radiogram from William J. McInnes, Chairman of the Gloucester elimination race Committee:

"I appeal to you for a square deal. The Henry Ford is a crippled vessel. Answer quickly."

Captain George H. Peeples, of Gloucester, Chairman of the Sailing Committee, showed this message to the newspapermen and was asked by them what he planned to do about it. "Frame it," was his terse reply.

A SPLINTER ON HER SHOE.
So that is that. To those who may not understand just what Mr. McInnes' message meant, it will be well to explain that he regarded the Henry Ford as a crippled vessel, because a diver found a fifteen inch splinter on her shoe this morning, before the race, and because, unable to carry sail, with the Canadian, she carried away the tip of her foretopmast during the windward thresh. In the first place, if the Ford went to the line minus part of her shoe, so did the Bluenose. The diver inspected the Canadian's bottom first and found 12 feet of the shoe gone from the stern post forward, a very small section of the heel knocked away, and several bolts jutting out. In the second place it was most timely for the Ford that she broke her foretopmast. Without the tip she could not spread the hallenner, foretopsail or staysail, and she was all the better under reduced canvas. Her crew smartly smoothed the slating sail and within seven minutes time three men aloft had sent down all the wreckage from the foremast head. All this time the schooner was boiling along and while she may have lost a minute, she certainly lost no more.

CAPT. MORRISSEY SATISFIED.
Capt. Clayton Morrissey, skipper of the Ford, does not agree with Mr. McInnes who is a candidate for the Mayoralty here, and whose views are probably prompted by popular clamor. "If we were all under four lowers all the way to-day I might have been able to beat the Bluenose." Ford's skipper is quoted as saying after the foretopmast carried away. And when Bluenose' partly in courtesy to Ford and as a matter of good racing quality took down her kites, a few minutes later, the skipper of the Yankee craft remarked:

"Now we are more evenly matched." The boats were on course number two, the same as yesterday; the wind would give them a close reach for five miles broad reaches for the next two legs of 10 miles each, dead to windward for ten miles and a close reach home. Soon after the start Ford appeared to gain and Angus headed inshore well to weather of the mark. They were carrying all sail and even the Ford seemed to enjoy it, except that her maintopsail flapped with much frequency. Snappy puffs off the low lands on the coast sent the boats seesawing along. Ford now appearing to cut down the gap, then Bluenose seemed to open it again. After a long distance luffing match they raced for the buoy with a good full, travelling fast in the smooth water. Bluenose, which had been 15 seconds ahead at the start, was a minute and five seconds in the lead at the buoy. She had gained 50 seconds, a showing which was somewhat unexpected as the Ford is very fast down the wind. The schooners had hit a clip of 11.5 knots on this leg.

Gybing round the buoy, Bluenose had sheets smartly and hastened

BLUENOSE AND MAYFLOWER.

Tonight there is much talk but no certainty of a race between the Bluenose and the Mayflower. Capt. Angus Walters said tonight that he could not say whether or not he would be able to race any more this year, on account of the condition of his vessel underwater. Bluenose, as the after effects of too much stranding on Gloucester's Harbor bed is leaking and will be required to haul out. Captain Walters, for reason of his own is not anxious to have his vessel hauled out here and it may be that he will be compelled to return forthwith to Lunenburg, there to go on the slip. There is a bare possibility, however, that satisfactory arrangements for repairing and hauling the Bluenose can be made here, in which event a special race may be arranged.

It is suggested that besides the trophy winner and the Mayflower, the Ford and Elizabeth Howard, runner up in the Gloucester eliminations, may also compete in this event. Saturday next is suggested as the date suitable to all concerned.

THE BEST DAY'S SPORT.

For real sport to-day's race had all the previous ones of the series beaten to the mast. We were once again the guests of the officers of H. M. C. S. Patriot. Ordered to be on board by eight-thirty o'clock, we waited patiently on the destroyer until well after nine. Postponement was due to the fact that divers from Boston were engaged in examining the keels of both the racers at their docks and attempting to smooth off the damaged shrouds. Bluenose flew a distress flag in her rigging while the diver worked at the protruding bolts and lagged shrouds with cold chisel and saw. Ford, suddenly discovering something wrong with her underbody, though it had not been previously reported that she had grounded, was given a thorough examination by the diver, who brought up the splinter-mentioned and then went down again and whittled the rough edges smooth with a fish skin knife.

The schooner's troubles, real or otherwise, induced the sailing committee to postpone the start of the race from ten o'clock to eleven. Hall

Soon after the start Ford appeared to gain and Angus headed inshore well to weather of the mark. They were carrying all sail and even the Ford seemed to enjoy it, except that her maintopsail flapped with much frequency. Snappy puffs off the low lands on the coast sent the boats seesawing along. Ford now appearing to cut down the gap, then Bluenose seemed to open it again. After a long distance luffing match they raced for the buoy with a good full, travelling fast in the smooth water. Bluenose, which had been 15 seconds ahead at the start, was a minute and five seconds in the lead at the buoy. She had gained 50 seconds, a showing which was somewhat unexpected as the Ford is very fast down the wind. The schooners had hit a clip of 11.5 knots on this leg.

SAME COURSE AS WEDNESDAY.

The boats were on course number two, the same as yesterday; the wind would give them a close reach for five miles broad reaches for the next two legs of 10 miles each, dead to windward for ten miles and a close reach home.

BLUENOSE AND MAYFLOWER.

Tonight there is much talk but no certainty of a race between the Bluenose and the Mayflower. Capt. Angus Walters said tonight that he could not say whether or not he would be able to race any more this year, on account of the condition of his vessel underwater. Bluenose, as the after effects of too much stranding on Gloucester's Harbor bed is leaking and will be required to haul out. Captain Walters, for reason of his own is not anxious to have his vessel hauled out here and it may be that he will be compelled to return forthwith to Lunenburg, there to go on the slip. There is a bare possibility, however, that satisfactory arrangements for repairing and hauling the Bluenose can be made here, in which event a special race may be arranged.

It is suggested that besides the trophy winner and the Mayflower, the Ford and Elizabeth Howard, runner up in the Gloucester eliminations, may also compete in this event. Saturday next is suggested as the date suitable to all concerned.

THE BEST DAY'S SPORT.

For real sport to-day's race had all the previous ones of the series beaten to the mast. We were once again the guests of the officers of H. M. C. S. Patriot. Ordered to be on board by eight-thirty o'clock, we waited patiently on the destroyer until well after nine. Postponement was due to the fact that divers from Boston were engaged in examining the keels of both the racers at their docks and attempting to smooth off the damaged shrouds. Bluenose flew a distress flag in her rigging while the diver worked at the protruding bolts and lagged shrouds with cold chisel and saw. Ford, suddenly discovering something wrong with her underbody, though it had not been previously reported that she had grounded, was given a thorough examination by the diver, who brought up the splinter-mentioned and then went down again and whittled the rough edges smooth with a fish skin knife.

The schooner's troubles, real or otherwise, induced the sailing committee to postpone the start of the race from ten o'clock to eleven. Hall an hour before the start the wind was blowing 18 knots north by west and the harbor was dotted with tiny whitecaps. This looked like the weather for which Bluenose admirers had been praying, and both vessels were moving smartly as they jockeyed to and fro.

BATTLE FOR WEATHER BIRTH

The battle for the weather birth had begun. Woe was way up off Norman's Woe while Ford was to leeward of the starting line on Eastern Point. The Yankee chased the Canadian, apparently intending to follow him and be in a position to pounce on his weather. Bluenose scenting these tactics sped for the line, came about inside the point buoy and drove into shoal water. Ford dropped the following policy and attempted to lure Bluenose into a trap. Angus began to follow his rival and held behind him but always to his weather, reminding one of the proverbial cat. Ten minutes before the gun both boats were off the harbor mouth heading for sea. Angus following. They gybed; Angus was still on Ford's weather quarter. We all expected him to continue these tactics, when suddenly he gybed and headed for the line, leaving Clayton in the lurch. Bluenose had the better of the start by four lengths and furthermore was well to the weather. They drove at the line at an angle and so were slow getting across.

CLAYTON MORRISSEY SATISFIED.

Capt. Clayton Morrissey, skipper of the Ford, does not agree with Mr. McInnes who is a candidate for the Mayoralty here, and whose views are probably prompted by popular clamor. "If we were all under four lowers all the way to-day I might have been able to beat the Bluenose." Ford's skipper is quoted as saying after the foretopmast carried away. And when Bluenose' partly in courtesy to Ford and as a matter of good racing quality took down her kites, a few minutes later, the skipper of the Yankee craft remarked:

"Now we are more evenly matched."

The boats were on course number two, the same as yesterday; the wind would give them a close reach for five miles broad reaches for the next two legs of 10 miles each, dead to windward for ten miles and a close reach home.

Sar' Ann.

By HARRY M. MOORE.
(Rod and Gun in Canada)

(Concluded.)

Leaving Cassidy's immediately after the shooting Bull made straight-way for the valley where as unconcerned as though nothing unusual had happened he threw himself down on his bunk. He slept soundly. As dawn came he got up, ate some bacon and bread, washed down with cold tea, gave Sar' Ann a thorough cleaning and left the shack. Half an hour later with Sar' Ann on the ground before him, Bull lay in the shadow of a huge boulder at the top of a steep wall of rock. Unseen, Bull was in a position to see all parts of the valley and the arrival of those who would be sent to hunt him down.

Bull Heffernon didn't have to wait very long. A glint of the sun on a rifle barrel was his first intimation that the myrmidons of The Law had arrived. They came into view at the top of the cliff opposite. There were seven of them. The large figure in the red shirt was Old Sam Pettigrew, a hard man to outwit, a crack shot and a fighter of the old school.

The posse separated and began a slow encircling movement of Bull Heffernon's shack. Bull cracked as he pumped a shell from the magazine into the barrel. Just then Old Sam Pettigrew dropped from a shelf of rock on the opposite side of the valley and stood in bold relief against a grey boulder. Bull Heffernon raised Sar' Ann and sighted her on the leader of the posse. The temptation was too strong for him. Unconsciously his fingers pressed the trigger—a big white blotch showed where the lead spewed the rock in close proximity to the old constable's head. Nor was that all Bull Heffernon saw. Emitting a whoop, Old Sam Pettigrew dove into a clump of cedars.

Zing-zing—zing!—whut! Bull Heffernon hugged the ground and cursed himself for his folly. The posse had discovered his position. The air above him sang with a million devils. Puffs of smoke from different parts of the valley opposite showed where the enemy moving from clump to clump were trying to wing him. Bull dodged lead and shot into the smoke targets. But Bull Heffernon's position became untenable. The air rained lead—that tore holes in his clothes, flattened on the rocks all around him and sent biting fragments into his face. Bull studied his ground for a chance to escape; if he could only crawl around the boulder he could skirt along the ridge and still be able to give his hunters a battle.

Zing—ping!—Bull Heffernon went one way, Sar' Ann with a ding in her magazine went the other—over the edge of the cliff. With an oath of despair Bull Heffernon flattened out.

The rain of lead continued. It continued until Bull Heffernon's boasted iron nerve cracked under the strain of the thing. Cooped up, shot at and unable to make a reply, there was but one alternative and survive. And life was still dear to Bull Heffernon. He shouted to them to stop their fusillade but they answered him with singing bullets. Bull rolled over on his side and tore a strip from his shirt, fastened the strip on a stick and put it up. A cheer was the answer and then a silence as the posse came up the ridge towards the cliff. Half an hour later Bull Heffernon started out to answer for his sins. And Sar' Ann—Sar' Ann reclaiming from the bottom of that high wall of rock went out with him as a witness of Bull Heffernon's wrong-doing.

Back to the village came to Sar' Ann a battered, bruised veteran of stirring days. Marked "Exhibit A" the rifle was placed in court for Bull Heffernon's trial for the murder of Cassidy and endangering the lives of the posse.

The trial was held in a low frame building with its solid back to the mill-pond of the river. The weather was hot, the court-room was crowded with people from all parts of the upper district, and doors and windows were open wide for comfort. Shackled hand and foot Bull Heffernon sat in the prisoner's box to the left of the stern-faced, grey-haired judge. Bull was apparently as uninterested in the proceedings as if he had never taken a life. He was defended by a long-nosed young man who sat at his elbow and whispered into his ear. Across the room behind a table upon which rested Sar' Ann the crown prosecutor with his arms on the open window behind him was questioning a witness.

"You say you saw Bull Heffernon standing in the door of Cassidy's place with a rifle in his hand."

"What did he do then?"

"He ducked a bottle thrown at his head and jerked Sar' Ann."

"Wait a moment—wait a moment," the prosecutor checked him. "You say he jerked Sar' Ann. In the name of common sense what are you talking about? Jerked Sar' Ann? Who is Sar' Ann?"

"The rifle, sir."

The lawyer for the defence was on his feet.

"Your Honour," addressing the judge, "This rifle has been known in the country up there as Sar' Ann. Some sentimental reason for calling it that, I suppose." And took his seat.

"Well," the crown attorney returned to his witness, "Bull Heffernon jerked Sar' Ann—"

"He jerked Sar' Ann to his shoulder like this and died. Cassidy dropped in his tracks and he was dead before we got to him."

"Never mind that," the lawyer broke in. "Would you recognize that rifle if you ever saw it again?"

"Yes."

"Be careful now. You say Bull Heffernon was standing in the doorway. He must have been at least thirty feet from you and it was not bright in there at that time—"

"But I would know it," the witness protested. "I would recognize it anywhere. It is a new kind of gun and has a white pearl strip in the stock."

The lawyer held Sar' Ann up.

"Is this the rifle?"

"It is."

"Be careful now, you're on your oath remember. You swear this is the rifle Sar' Ann that Bull Heffernon had in his hands when he stood that night in Cassidy's door?"

"It's the same rifle."

"That will do."

The witness stepped out of the box. The crown attorney turned and lay Sar' Ann on the window sill behind him.

The trial dragged on into afternoon without a stop. Then the crown having finished, the lawyer for the defence took up the argument. He contended that Cassidy had been shot with a .44 calibre whereas Sar' Ann was a .32. With the two types of shells in his hands he crossed the floor and asked that the rifle be further examined. The crown attorney pushed back from his table, stood up and put a hand on the window sill. Next moment he staggered back. Sar' Ann had disappeared.

Sar' Ann's disappearance created a stir. Court was adjourned until this famous fireman was brought back into the trial. It was an important link in the chain of evidence that the crown was forging around Bull Heffernon. Without Sar' Ann to convict him—the crown attorney mopped his brow.

The courtroom was searched high and low, the immediate premises were given a thorough raking, the village took a holiday, every man, woman and child made busy to find Sar' Ann. The millpond was dragged finally. They did not find Sar' Ann there but they brought up a human body that had been caught in the piling below the dam. That body proved to be Pete Lahey who had come down for the trial and had been in attendance at the court in the earlier part of the day. The doctors said Pete Lahey couldn't have been in the water much more than two hours. How he got there or what he had been doing there no one knew.

Pete Lahey laid out in the undertaker's rooms, the trial of Bull Heffernon resumed. The crown put up a hard fight to have the man hanged, but lacking its main witness, Sar' Ann, the trial was in reality a victory for the defence. Bull Heffernon's crime was changed to manslaughter and the punishment was three years.

For a long time afterwards the big unanswered question was "What became of Sar' Ann?" then the years rolled around and people began to forget. But there was one who never forgot.

Ten years after Sar' Ann had disappeared so mysteriously, Angus Delauche sold his property to an English syndicate who had found a vein of molybdenite. And when Angus Delauche sold out, he came into the village and bought a bungalow. From the day he arrived in the village Angus Delauche spent morning, noon and night in the vicinity of the millpond. If he wasn't paddling around in his canoe, he would sit by the hour on the old dam and study the waters. People wondered.

"What are you looking for?" they asked Angus many a time.

And Angus always whispered mysteriously,

"Sar' Ann."

Which was Greek to them.

Then—then when McLaren decided to build a new dam above the old one, Angus Delauche was one of the first to apply for a job. And this made the people still wonder—Angus Delauche was a rich man. But then, Angus Delauche had no idea where Sar' Ann was and how the old rifle got there, although he had never told anyone. Nobody knew why Angus Delauche was so keen for a job on the new dam until that morning they found him kneeling in the mud with a slimy, rusty object in his hand. There were tears in Angus Delauche's eyes that morning.

"Boys," he said, as they surrounded him, "This is the rifle that killed Cassidy at the Basin Depot. This is old Sar' Ann that shot my only son—he would have been a man now. There was a day when I would have thrown that rifle into the lake because I blamed it for what happened to my boy. But I was a plain fool—" he straightened up and his jaw muscles stuck out. "Every man is a fool who leaves a loaded rifle where a child can get his hands on it. Had I not quarreled with Sar' Ann, Bull Heffernon might not have shot Cassidy. Pete Lahey would not have lost his life trying to take the rifle over the plank on the dam the day he stole it from the window in the court-room."

And so—to-day Sar' Ann cleaned up as well as it can be cleaned, for the rust has pock-marked the forged steel barrel and eaten out the grooves that gave the steel-jacketed bullet so much speed: Sar' Ann hangs up in Angus Delauche's little bungalow—a silent reminder of days when a man could hunt to his heart's content, untrammeled by convention, unfettered by the Law—a free man in the freest country under the sun.

JOY IN LUNENBURG
OVER VICTORY.

BIG PROCESSION IN WHICH THE WHOLE TOWN JOINED.

LUNENBURG, N.S., Oct. 26.—News of the Blueshore victory at Gloucester to-day was received with great enthusiasm here. During the afternoon interested crowds hung around the bulletin boards and anxiously scanned each report as it was posted up. When the final news arrived that the Blueshore had won the enthusiasm of the crowd was immense and cheer after cheer was given for the victory.

Do you who live in the colder parts of our country remember the winter suits and coats that we used to buy, heavy wool cloth, warmly interlined. The suits they sell to-day are the weight that they used to sell for summer.

Try to Heat the Unwise.

This determination not to bundle up really seems to have reached the height of mania with the younger generation. In summer it is harmless, of course, but when it makes them try to keep themselves warm in winter by using up their own bodily energy instead of conserving it by proper clothing, it is an idiotic thing. I hope we don't go back to the days of bustles and two petticoats again.

The ladies were also in large numbers and the people generally recognized that it is an international event of considerable importance, not only for the sailing victory alone, but in placing our shipyards in the forefront, so much that Lunenburg had turned out the fleetest fishing schooner that has so far been built.

A celebration was organized to-night which was entered into most enthusiastically by all classes in the community. Homer Dodge, with his auto with "Blueshore" painted on each side in tow of an old Ford car with "Lizzie" painted on each side. E. F. Zwicker was a passenger representing his brother A. H. Zwicker, Mayor Schwartz, Councillors Young, Zwicker, Adams and Powers. The procession was headed by the band and a jazz band was followed by an immense procession of school children in all sorts of fantastic costumes.

The Mayor addressed the citizens from the band stand and the cheering here and all along the march was most enthusiastic. The celebration ended with a bonfire on Blockhouse Hill, composed of a tar barrel and combustible materials. R. G. Adams, Chas. Acorn, and Stewart Hirle took a leading part in this event. Much credit is due Robert Backman who made a campaign and commanded all the leading part in this event. ## Taxes we Don't Want.

Queer taxes are always being suggested. At least twice a year someone wants to tax bachelors, for instance.

So far, the idea has only been talked about, but it was actually in being during the reign of William III; the unfortunate bachelor, on attaining the age of twenty-five, having to pay the sum of one shilling yearly until he married.

Another queer tax was that levied in the reign of Edgar the Peaceable, when the Welsh people had to hand over annually to the English king three hundred wales' heads. This had the effect, inside our years, of clearing the Welsh forests of these wild animals and thus securing more safety for both man and domestic animals.

Probably the most hated of all taxes was the birth tax, which was levied in the eighteenth century.

The ladies were also in large numbers and the people generally recognized that it is an international event of considerable importance, not only for the sailing victory alone, but in placing our shipyards in the forefront, so much that Lunenburg had turned out the fleetest fishing schooner that has so far been built.

A $50 SUGGESTION!

We recommend for immediate purchase on margin of $50.00,
any one of the following five items:

10 Shares Middle States Oil . . . . . $180.00
10 Shares General Motors . . . . . $145.00
10 Shares Standard Corporation . . . . . $182.00
400 Shares West End Lake . . . . . $180.00
10 Shares Hollinger Gold . . . . . $180.00

These quotations are approximate and subject to market fluctuations. The first and last stocks are dividend payers, the second stock should shortly enter the dividend class, while the third and fourth stocks are speculative with splendid possibilities.

All five seem good purchases just now.

Hallowe'en Festivities.

MANY ENJOYABLE FUNCTIONS LAST NIGHT.

The citizens of St. John's observed All Hallow's Eve in fine style last night. The young children in their homes enjoyed the Cauld Cannon suppers, and derived great fun over the usual "Snap Apple". Celebrations in the form of dances and concerts were held in many of the halls, which the grown-ups enjoyed to the full.

WESLEY Y. P. LEAGUE.

The Halloween Social held by the Young People's League of Wesley Church in the Primary Room on Monday night, was a decided success, and evidenced that there is a large amount of musical talent, and a splendid enthusiasm amongst them which only needs leadership; and as the new pastor and his wife get better acquainted with them they will bring about that desideratum. Rev. Mr. Fairbairn kindly acted as chairman, and like other Scotchmen his versatility proved he was "a man of parts," and a combination of a philosopher, a theologian and an entertainer, for his monologue at the piano, and ready wit, often put all in good humor. The solos of Misses Bartlett, Bursey, Faulkner and Marshall; and Mrs. Green King, Richards and Snow, were all sung well, and very acceptable. Mrs. Brushett and Mrs. Fred Cummings are very good reciters and pleased all present. Miss Florence Dave gave a piano solo with much taste. Music lovers said it was a wonderful selection, while Mr. Walker maintained his reputation, for like Paderewski, he certainly knocked music out of the piano. Rev. Mr. Johnson, was in a very happy mood, and provoked much laughter when telling of how the farmers sons won the girls at feasts up in Nova Scotia. Ex-Mayor Morris, G. W. Gushee, A. N. Martin and others were present as guests, to a friendly cup of tea, and an abundance of cake, pies etc served, were greatly enjoyed by all. Meeting friends from other churches "in this way, we remembered that we are far too sectional. We want the smile and the glad hand much more in many ways as we pass through life. Mrs. Whelan the President, Misses Taylor Butt, Sparkes, Grimes and others of the Committee must be pleased with the appreciation of their efforts for all present voted it a grand time.

A. W. M.
ARTS CLASS, SPENCER COLLEGE
SPEND ENJOYABLE EVENING.

The undergraduates of Spencer College, comprising the Associates in Arts Class, gave a Hallowe'en party in the Spencer College Hall at 8 o'clock last night. The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion; streams of banners in colors of light and dark blue predominating, while the hostess and guests of the evening appeared in fancy costumes, which proved very conspicuous for such a function. The teaching staff of the college were invited guests, Miss Cherrington, the lady principal of the College made a most charming hostess. During the evening tea were served by maid-servants. S. C. Thompson, R. Williams, A. W. Picott, and M. McGregor of the Spencer Club. Dancing, being one of the chief features of the occasion, wound up a most enjoyable evening. The costumes of the young ladies blended forth in a most interesting spectacle to the eye. The prize for the most original costume was awarded "A Dutch Girl," having been won by Miss Amelia Crawford. The music for the dance was provided by Miss M. Devine in her own inimitable style. The party proved a great success and the thanks of the class is due Mr. F. H. Ellis, who very kindly acted as floor manager.

GIRLS' CLUB HALLOWEEN PARTY.

Last evening the members of the West End Girls' Club of George St. Church, with their boy friends, held a "Hallowe'en Party" in the basement of that church, which was prettily decorated for the occasion. About sixty attended, all of whom were first put through an initiation, which consisted of being led, blindfolded, and encountering thus such obstacles as suspended apples and tree branches, etc., and also walking over (the boys in their stocking feet) beans and other impediments. Following this, at the feet of the enthroned Witch, in the appropriate costume and setting, an oath was taken, punctuated by the mischievous use of a wet feather, the "full-stop" being a shake of a wet, gloved hand. A successful competition was then enjoyed by all, as were also the games, recitation, and needless to say—the refreshments.

N.R.S. CELEBRATE.

The Newfoundland British Society celebrated a Hallowe'en Concert and card party, in their rooms last night. A large number of the members and friends of the Society attending. The Ladies' Auxiliary served a Cauld Cannon supper during the evening, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. It is the intention of the Society to hold similar entertainments every month.

AT THE PRESBYTERIAN HALL.

The Halloween Sociable in the Presbyterian Hall last evening was attended by a large gathering and proved to be the hit of the season. The St. Andrew's Young Ladies' Guild supplied a delicious Cauld Cannon supper for the occasion, while the concert programme, which was a most excellent one, was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Those that contributed to the numbers were Misses Elsie Tait, I. Glendinning, Doris Mews, Marguerite Mitchell, Mrs. Small, Alice Woods and Mrs. C. F. Garland, while Messrs. A. E. Homes, and A. R. Stanfield contributed to a very interesting sketch. The evening's entertainment proved to be an unqualified success, the sale of candy and ice cream, greatly augmenting to the sum realized. The girls of the Guild were tendered a hearty vote of thanks before the close.

LADIES AUXILIARY PROVIDE A SPLENDID ENTERTAINMENT.

Upwards of 200 people attended the Cauld Cannon supper, card party and dance, arranged by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Total Abstinence Society in the T. A. Hall last night. The card game proved very interesting. The scoring of points at many of the tables were very high, good cards having been played throughout. The fortunate winners being Mrs. White and Mr. McDonald. After the card tournament had been completed, the Cauld Cannon supper was partaken of. Full justice having been done it. The Ladies' Auxiliary were accorded a hearty vote of thanks for the delicious repast. Bennett's Orchestra furnished excellent music for the dancers which was kept up until an early hour this morning.

Sports Festivals.
STADIUM AS FUTURE
HOME OF IMPERIAL CONTESTS
CALL TO ATHLETES.

out of the project for the Empire Exhibition in 1924, the idea grew that there could not be a more fitting adjunct to such a comprehensive display of the Empire's products and manufactures than a ground that should be worthy of Great Britain and its far-flung Dominions, Colonies and Dependencies. It was not possible, in connection with the exhibition, seeing that every part of the Empire will have its sons here in large numbers, to organize a series of contests in every branch of outdoor sport, in which the prowess of athletes of the Mother Country would be pitted against the skill of the athletes of Australasia, Canada, South Africa, India, and those other parts of the earth marked red on the map! It would be impossible to conceive a movement more likely to unite firmly those close ties of kindred that found their highest form of expression in the Great War, when by side, Englishmen, Scotsmen, Welshmen, and Irishmen fought with the greatest of enthusiasm, kinship, and sense of humanity and civilization.

LOYALTY OF SPORTSMEN.
Great Britain must do anything and everything within her power to maintain that splendid alliance of kinship and friendship, and one of the best ways at her command is to promote brotherhood, on the mimic battle field of sport, of the young men to whom will be committed later the care of the destinies of Empires. It is important to realize the importance of the promoters of the Empire Exhibition who have provided the means for athletic gatherings. Will those who are able to organize them meet the needs of the occasion, and give a wonderful fillip to athletic and outdoor sports of every kind at the same time working as agents of Empire? There is no section of the community in Great Britain more intensely loyal, more proudly patriotic, than its sportsmen. It is history that when, in the year 1914, the call came from the Mother Country for soldiers, sportsmen by the hundred had flocked to her standard from all parts of the British Dominions, and were able to prove to them that the new need of their help and assistance still further to assist in the work of consolidating the Empire, for that help to be given steadily. If, through sport, and such great Empire Exhibitions, our sons and daughters the world over can be brought to see another better, to appreciate another more, and mutually to like each other in the future to an extent that, for lack of opportunities, has been possible in the past, then surely the duty, as it certainly is the pleasure, of every sportsman will pull his whole weight to ensure success in the immense venture now taking visible shape at Valley Park.

EMPIRE'S VAST RESOURCES.
The vast ranges of buildings in course of erection are complete, and the products and manufactures of the Empire are staged in such a way that it will be possible, for the first time, for the stay-at-home Briton to realize the vast resources of the Empire of which he is a unit. This exhibition will be world's wonders, and its stadium will be the finest arena on which the foot of man has ever trod. What a spectacle it will be when the flower of the Empire are contending for supremacy, their efforts aided by serried rows of spectators number over 120,000, palpable with excitement, and rousing the particular competitor for whose success they are so very much concerned. What vast areas of people there are to draw upon, and they are generally voted dull. That is because they are not presented in fitting form. They are frequently eloquent than columns of tabulated figures. There is surely much in the fact that, including the German Colonies assigned to the Empire, the Union Jack flies over 13,520,000 square miles, and that the vast areas are peopled by 450,000,000 of various colours, races and creeds. Is it not, too, a romance of the Empire, in 1920, exported to other parts of the Empire goods and products to the value of over £500,000,000, and that her Colonial Imports exceed this colossal figure by £60,000? It almost staggers the imagination to conjure up what may be accomplished by the co-operation of the hundred millions of peoples in this task that the promoters of the Empire Exhibition have themselves to accomplish, and it is the task that sportsmen, as well as commercial sections of the Empire's thousand and one communities and races, may materially assist to through to a successful completion.

FINAL, A NATIONAL INSTITUTION.
The earliest opportunity that will present itself to them to see the magnificent stadium put to practical use will be when the F. A. Cup Final Tie is played there next April. This is something more than a football match. It is a national institution. It attracts sportsmen from every part of the United Kingdom and the Continent of Europe. It is the climax of the Soccer season in this country, and it is fitting that so notable a democratic sports festival should be the first event to be staged at Wembley. Accommodation available is greater than that provided by any sports ground in the world, and it is likely to be tested to the utmost. It will then be demonstrated what care, what skill, what forethought, and what practical knowledge have been shown in its every arrangement. Those who attend will find themselves catered for as never before. The comfort and convenience of onlookers, of officials, of competitors, and of the members of the Fourth Estate have been considered down to the smallest detail.—B. E. Exhibition News Service.

THE PHOTO.

DRAMA.

Five little minutes of William Farnum on the screen lends more dignity to the art of the photoplay than five months of the usual silly prattle of most of the slick-haired top-drawer demons of our day.

The really worth while part of "Perjury" is the acting of Mr. Farnum. In America there is not another man more capable or more talented by nature to act before the camera than he.

His great "intellectual head," his human, tender, courageous, manly countenance, his fine hair, his eyes that speak to the lens, his lion-like frame, his neatness and his grace.

HE HAS THEM ALL.

He caresses his baby-girl, and you wonder if it isn't really his own. He sinks that huge fist into the mid-section of an enemy and you grant of pain. He acts. He is positive at all times. You never wonder what he is about to do. You behold what he already has done. He is no poser. Oh, for a few more like him! Or, perhaps we should say, more pictures with him.

His work in "Perjury" is worthy of more than the usual amount of space devoted to an actor, because he really acts.

NOTE—William Farnum, in "Perjury" will be repeated again to-day at the Majestic Theatre.

Human justice may go wrong but Divine justice is unerring. See Perjury, at the Majestic to-day—Oct. 31.

A Surprise Party.

Sunday evening at the residence of Mrs. T. Murphy a number of Mrs. O'Donnell's friends gave her a surprise party, as she is leaving shortly for the States to join her husband. A feature of the evening was the color scheme, the supper table and other decorations being of pink, white and green, which presented a very pretty appearance. An address and purse of gold were presented Mrs. O'Donnell, and although taken by surprise she thanked her friends in pleasing and grateful terms. A Cauldron supper was served and music, songs and dancing made a very enjoyable time. With the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and God Save the King a very pleasant evening was brought to a close, all expressing the hope of having Mrs. O'Donnell with them again at a distant date.—COM.

Bill Farnum—his great "intellectual head," his human, courageous, tender manly countenance; his fine hair, his eyes that speak to the lens. He has them all, says the New York World. In Perjury, at the Majestic to-day—Oct. 31.

That Pledge for Parliamentary Candidates.

Editor Evening Telegram,
Dear Sir:—So the Prohibitionists intend to pledge candidates at the next election to enforce the present Prohibition law. It would make the election equivalent to another plebiscite, and I feel sure what the result would be if candidates were openly pledged either to enforce or to abolish the present Prohibition law. I wonder are the Prohibitionists crazy enough to demand an open pledge. I hardly think so. Trying to "sneak one over on us" would be more in the line of some of them, if we may judge from some of their actions in the last plebiscite.

As for abolishing the Controller's Department—well, I am not so much in love with the Controller or the way his Department is run, that I would object to that. At the same time cranks are not to be allowed to run the liquor business, even if one of them is a "minister."

Yours truly,
WARWICK SMITH.
