Collecting Scott Act Fines.

United Scott Act Fines are made payable forthwith, some difficulty is occasionally experienced in collecting the same, as the party fined tries every subterfuge to avoid payment of their dues. Here is a case in point which, however, we are pleased to say is decidedly exceptional. Mr. Porteous runs a hotel at Exoter, but his wife generally has charge of the same. She was recently fined for violation of the Scott Act, and given a certain time in which to pay her fine, but she failed to pay, and a warrant was issued for her arrest. When the constable went to ex-ecute it, she dropped off her clothes, and asking what he had better do. Back came the answer, "Yank her out of bed," their sweetness, health seemed to breathe and as the constable then manifested his determination to carry out this advice, the proposals made, and gave matances of at so much levelineess, the fiend gresped the women expressed her willingness to compromise. Knowing that a certain farmer, who was a friend of hers had come to town that day with a load of wheat, she sent word to him, narrating the state of affairs, and he sent her his wheat check, out of which the amount of fine and costs were realized -Actor Free

Grand Work on Local Option Lines Missouri Voting out the Ruin-Working Iratile -- tiood News From a for Country.

THE State of Missouri is making rapid progress in the suppression of the strong drink traffic. Commencing on July 26th last there have been fought in this State a series of bitter contests between the prohibitionists and the asloomatics, but on the whole our friends have come off magnificently, when we take into consideration the difficulties to be met with by temperance workers in the South, the class projudices which the liquorites are over ready to foster and utilize, the ignor-ance that prevails in a very large class of the voting population, the hold that the liquor traine has upon the community, the obstacles placed in the way of temperance progress by hostile courts and officials, we cannot but be surprised at the remarkable results achieved. We heartly congratulate our co-workers on what has been accomplished, and wish them good speed in the light they are making for the redemption of their State.

Our Division and its Work,

MY J. B. H.

[Prepared for and read at a recent meeting of Chandlere Division No. 333.]

ONE constituent element in temperance work, as applied to abstinence from strong drink, must ever recommend it to the thoughtful as being a lover of immense power for good, viz., being thoroughly commopolitan. Thank God, all are welcome whatever may be his or her religious creed, nationality or character. Temperance advocates have reason to be profoundly thankful they possess so mighty a weapon with which to fight, otherwise they court defeat, an overwhelming overthrow,

We are glad every battalion of the immonee army is permented with this influence, none more so than the Order of the Sons of Temperance, with which, as a Division, we are identified. At the three-hold of the Division the candidate for initiation has the guarantee given that we interfere not with religious views or political aspirations, while nate mality is never considered. True character must necess-arily be regarded, inasmuch as if utterly worthless, or the object of being initiated plainly to cloak a dishonorable purpose, plainty to creak a distributive purpose, then, for the sake of all, such a preposi-tion must be, and justly so, rejected; but when the desire is evident to overcome mighty completion, an endravor to amend the past and become worthy encessif, in such a case to close our doors would re-know that sugar and starch are composed epigram on the subject of amoking, which sult in being recream to principle, endure of the same elements of matter. Further than this, however, the do not differ in any feature that would persistent iteration, in many quarters, of make one better suited than another, the statement that voting for Reform to any community or locality. We do not care to be forced to discuss this matter, but continually we are receiving letters and reading newspaper articles making the mortion that, temperance men being largely reformers and reformers largely temperance men, the success of the Reed to the interests of a particular lo- form party would be the success of the cality, community or class, but there is temperance cause, and would ensure prohibition. The political character of better suited to any place than the the votes taken in the House of Commone is pointed to as evidence of this.

This means that in a parliament with a bare majority of Liberals prohibition would still be defeated by a majority of

Let us, however, suppose a still bet ter case for the Reformers. Let us suppose that they may get to be in as strong a majority over the Conserva tives as the Conservatives now are over the Liberals, that is, let us suppose that the constituencies went, in a gen if they were taken against the movement and such sheers as those servative; and that the new Liberal kind of Union he opposes and which made in the paragraph above quoted and Conservative representatives voted no one proposes, namely, a union are neither honorable nor judicious. for and against prohibition respectively THE CANADA CIT.ZER should be known to of the "S. of T., the LO.G.T. the R. And we would still be left on the prohibition question, beaten by a majority of eleven, not withstanding that the Liberals were in power by a majority which very few of them expect to have for a long, long time.

Would it not be possible, however, to go so far in this direction that the House of Commons might become prohibition by becoming Liberal! We think not. It is worth while, however, enquiring to what extent would it be necessary to make the Dominion House a Reform House to secure by that means a majority or a prohibition vote. If the same proportion of Liberals and Conservatives respectively still refrain from voting we would require to have so many Reformers in the House that the vote would stand thus:-

> To Both Potators.-- in Ireland potatoes are boiled to perfection: the humblest peasant places his potatoes on his table better cooked than could half the cooks in London, trying their best. Potators should always be hoiled in their "jackets:" peoling a potato before boiling is offering a premium for water to run through it, and making them waxy and unpalatable; they should be thoroughly washed and put into cold water. In Ireland they always nick a piece of the skin off before they place them in the pot; the water is gradually heated, but never allowed to hoil; cold water should be added as soon as the water commences boiling, and it should thus be checked until the potatoes are done; pour the water off completely, and let the skins be thoroughly dry before preling.

Tales and Sketches. Dorset's Turning Point.

THE day was cold and gray with driving mist and rain. The prairie, that in summer glowed with thre lilies, and scarlet pointed cups, and in autumn was golden with aunilowers, was now a sodden waste, from which Dorset, never very attractive, rose like a collection of weather beaten fungi. When the sun shone, John Badger's wagon factory, and busy, big red wind-wheel gave the place a superficial look of respectability and industry. But this dreary day it was easy to believe that Domet well deserved the evil name given it by the presiding elder, cital A sink of iniquity," for the only son, who had more than once felt the weight of a drunkard's hand, had complex reasons for thankfulness when he stepped into Mrs. Badger's warm sitting

JOHN P. LASH, Manager,

A Simple Deed of Kindness.

It takes a little degree of thoughtfulness even to remember to drop into the "Hospital Box" the papers we have finished reading, or to send a little money or some flowers to the Flower Mission, we have no realizing sense at SPAULDING & CHEESBROUGH all of the meaning those simple acts may have to the recipients; but the poor bed-ridden sufferer seizes the paper with joy, and inhales the flower's perfume with thankfulness.

A little woman had lain sick for weeks in her home in one of the divisions of Chicago. The doctor had come in the morning and in the evening and felt of her pulse, and left some medicine and gone away, for as many weeks as his patient had been in her bed. Her husband had come in from his work at the close of each day and had prepared his meal, had carried something to the patient little sufferer, which she would taste in the daintiest way and then close her eyes. The fectuess in appearance and utility, and at nights dragged along as the little clock on the shelf went galloping away, the hands passing the hour mark with an extra click as if to gain more strength for the next hour. The door bell had been muffled, and even the children in the neighborhood passed the place on tiptoe and intifled their laughter and shouts till they reached the corner. It got to be such a routine that the neighbors called in a mechanical way. The temperature was stationary, and the sunlight came through the window curtains in a feeble manner, as if it were weary of falling across the pillow where the little pale face was always the same. One day strange hands out in the woodlands about one of the suburban towns gathered some flowers. They found their way into the city and indirectly were sent to the sickroom. The breeze came in at the window with the sunshine, and the two got in N.R.—Special attention given to physicians' among the flowers and carried the per-prescriptions. Remember the address. fume to the sick pillow. The eyes of the patient opened and a smile came over the wan features, and then the wan lips iroved and the hands were clasped. Somehow the woman grew better and the home brighter, and in a few days she sat by the window, and a little later she was on her feet, and she and the bird in the cage sang together. It was only that some one had thought, - Chicago Mail
