I Am Photography

I illumine to pages of History, and make Learning possible for the multitude. Born instantaneously in a Ray of Light, I become Everlasting. As necessary in War as in Peace, I am Man's Servant, and yet his Master.

A glance at the magazine and newspapers of the day will reveal the extent to which pictures enter into the education of the masses. No "story" is complete without its accompanying picture, secured by the metropolitan dailies highly trained press photographers. Historically Photography played a very important part in the Great War. The motion pictures owned by our British Government, can be used for generations to come to show the Military Leaders how the War of 1914-18 was conducted. Also the photographs made by our Airmen of Enemy Territory, that showed what was necessary to be done in order to take that Territory, with the least possible Loss of Lives.

I am Man's Servant, and yet his Master.

A PICTURE INTERESTING TO EVERYONE

INDUSTRY STILL FLURISHING IN TOWN OF MIDDLETON

Stealing of Poultry From Helpless Women, and of Anything Else That Can Be Lifted Without Detection. Time For a Halt!

Some party or parties in our town or surrounding districts, have been suddenly taken a great interest in hens. This statement by itself is not very startling. But when we go a bit further into details stating that some unknown culprits are visiting hen-houses, not their own, to obtain their poultry, we begin to sit up and take notice.

One lady, who lives practically alone, and therefore more or less unprotected, has had her henhouse visited twice of late. The first time the thief made an entrance by smashing a centre pane of glass in one of the windows; then apparently reaching in and unfastening the catch so as to open the window and effect an entrance. The result this time it was the loss of a nice plump hen. This intrusion took place about two weeks ago.

Friday, the 13th (unlucky day for the hen-kind) the second visit was made. This time the bold invader forced open a door in the rear of the building, took for his choice, another beautiful hen to parts unknown. Departure was made by the hen-house door, which was left wide open, so the rest of the flock might follow him home and thus avoid the necessity of further calls. Further visits have not as yet been made.

The parties responsible for the above contemptible tricks, must be of pretty low-down, miserable and contemptible make-up; to nurse a desire to steal from a defenceless woman, who has no means of defence from tactics of this nature. Actions of this nature are apt to discourage the person, or any of us for that matter, when just getting ahead in this little old world.

The measly thief is not known; which is no doubt good news to him. If perchance he should read this, I, J. J., but, for his benefit, we might state, that arrangements have been made, so that further visits to the poultry home, he will possibly undergo the unpleasant duty of telling the judge, and we'll have the satisfaction of letting the world know his identity. Then the brave poultry fancier may be placed where stealing hens won't have the attraction it did.

—WILMOT—

Mar. 17—The community was saddened by the news of the passing away of Mr. Z. S. Gates of South Farmington on Sunday morning. Mr. Gates had been ill for several weeks. Much sympathy is felt for the wife and four children.

Miss L. M. Dennison has gone to Boston to attend the funeral of her aunt, Mrs. E. L. Pickett.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Saunders of Paradise were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Alford.

Miss Frances Palmer of Kingston Village is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Goucher on Thursday evening, February 26th. The roll call was answered by old fashioned Valentine verses and were quite an interesting affair. A most amusing as well as profitable paper was read by Mrs. T. H. Buckler, on "What To Do With a Roast of Beef" and the possibilities were certainly of wide range. On original series of verses by Mrs. W. G. Parsons on "The History of a Chicken" from the egg to the soup pot, also presented a varied menu.

Miss Alida Young gave an interesting talk on "Pictures for Children's Rooms" showing how to cultivate a taste for art. A dainty lunch was served and enjoyed by all the participants. The next meeting, notice of which is given in another corner, will be held on Tuesday evening, March 24th, instead of usual date. Miss MacDougall, the N. S. W. I. Superintendent, will be with us and an invitation is extended to the public interested to meet with us at the Vestry of the United Church on that evening. Mrs. Frank Elliott is convenor for the evening.

Carrie W. Parsons, Sec. W. I.

Quite a number in this place are sick with bad colds. Mrs. C. W. Daniels spent a few days last week at Annapolis Royal. Harry Spencey of East Margareville spent the week end at Millidge Bowley's.

ONE FOR ALL AND ALL FOR ONE

Everywhere folks are coming to realize more and more how inter-dependent we are upon each other. The only individual who is self-sufficient is a hermit.

The keynote — the foundation of civilization — is the family. We all concede that. And we're rapidly coming to realize that our home town — is a home town family — simply the family unit a little bit extended through neighborly cordiality friendship and pleasant social intercourse.

Common good will and recognition of our human obligation is a deeper currency than any money system ever invented. But it is also to our advantage on the material side of life — it rebounds in better practices, living conditions, more generous impulses. It makes Middleton a better place to live.

Let's make our home town unit closer knit. Let's be generous with our good will — realizing that the prosperity of the individual is directly reflected in an added prosperity to our community. Your home industries and merchants have adopted this creed. Will you co-operate?

Buy at home and make times better for you and everyone.

The local chapter of I. O. D. E. have once more come to the fore in assisting good work. They have agreed to look after the collecting of clothing and wearing apparel.

An executive committee was appointed to look after the details and have money, clothing and food stuffs forwarded at the earliest moment.

Be Generous

It is to be hoped that the various members of the committee will have the wholehearted support of the public in this undertaking. It will be plainly seen that our miners and their wives and children are in bad circumstances; and must have the necessities of life at once in order to keep down famine, disease and death away from them. It is not a question of whose to blame. Relief must be given and every Nova Scotian must help his fellow men in this crisis.

LAWRENCETOWN PLAYERS APPRECIATE MIDDLETON

Lawrencetown, March 12, 1925
Editor "The Outlook"

Allow me to use a few inches of your space for the purpose of thanking the people of Middleton for the splendid patronage and encouragement given to the Lawrencetown Theatre Guild on their presentation of "The Village Lawyer" at the Armada Theatre, last Thursday.

It is very seldom that amateurs have the opportunity and rare pleasure of playing to such an appreciative, enthusiastic, and sympathetic audience as that we played to at Middleton.

From each and every member of the Guild I heard nothing but the highest praise of the very cordial reception given their efforts to entertain. We all knew that we were away from home and playing to an audience that might be more discriminating and critical than that of our own town. And, the fact that the people were pleased, pleases us.

The Lawrencetown Theatre Guild is the first to be organized in Nova Scotia. We have been asked what is our policy? At present we have none, that must be developed as experience will direct, but our motive is like the large theatre guilds, viz. "to support and produce first class drama, well performed."

I sincerely trust that the very large audience who greeted us left the theatre satisfied and that next year each will be there to welcome us again.

In closing permit me to add the thanks of the Guild to Mr. Armour, who co-operated with us in every way towards making the production the success it was—financially and otherwise.

Yours for the encouragement of more amateur talent,

R. C. BISHOP,
Manager of the Lawrencetown Theatre Guild

—WARNED IN TIME—

In a certain suburb there is a cottage, the door of which must be closed a little to be opened, and for this purpose a hatchet is generally used. One night a knock came at the door and a youngster was sent to see who was there.

"Who is it?" inquired the boy.
"It's me," said a voice outside.

The youngster recognizing the voice, shouted back: "It's Mrs. Murphy, get the hatchet!"
Mrs. Murphy didn't wait.

An English nobleman was boasting to an American about the antiquity of his family. "See here," said the American, "when I was last over in the States my dad showed me my pedigree. It filled yards and yards of paper, and near the middle of the list there was a small marginal note, says: 'Somewhere about this time the wild was coaxed.'

"It isn't fame and it isn't gold. It isn't the knowledge that text books hold. The world needs most today—It's the kinder smile and the friendlier hand. The love that knows no creed nor land."

LONDON'S MANSION HOUSE.

Is Subject of Interest Wherever the English Language is Spoken. London's historic Mansion House is a subject of interest wherever the English language is spoken, and each succeeding occupant has something new to say about it.

This time it is the Lady Mayoress who speaks, and this is what she says: "I am sometimes asked when showing friends over the great halls and queer corners of our official residence, 'Is the Mansion House haunted?' When I reply that so far I have seen no sign of spirit or spook, no shade of departed Lord Mayor or politician, my friends express surprise.

"Even without ghosts, however, the Mansion House is a place of absorbing interest to a Lady Mayoress during the whole of her year of residence. In fact, my predecessors tell me that their twelve months are over before they have grown quite accustomed to all its beauties and eccentricities.

"A recent historian has likened our home to the Doge's originally Venetian—alas! by reason of its beauty, for externally, at any rate, it cannot claim much beyond a certain square dignity, but only because it is at once a palace, a court of justice, and a prison. It is not really a prison, of course, but the fact that there are cells in the building for the temporary accommodation of delinquents destined for the House of Correction, and the fact that the Mansion House justice room may, perhaps, be held to justify the phrase.

"What impresses me most in the Mansion House is the stately pillared chamber known as the Egyptian Hall, though I can see little that is Egyptian about it except its name. It was, I am informed, designed by the Earl of Burlington, who also designed Burlington House and Devonshire House, and it was modelled on an Egyptian chamber described by Vitruvius.

"On the principal floor of the Mansion House is the saloon, where we receive our guests. It was originally a sort of courtyard open to the sky, but was covered in somewhere about the year 1792, and the walls are now hung with modern tapestries depicting events in the city's history. These include an especially fine one showing the Earl of Crawford jousting on London Bridge on April 23, 1390, with Lord de Welles, the Ambassador sent to Scotland by Richard II. Opened out of the saloon are the Venetian parlors where my husband does all his work when he is not on the bench or entertaining guests of honor, the long parlor, which is used as a luncheon room, and the side drawing-rooms and the famous ballroom.

"Beneath all these glories lies the great vaulted kitchen, where an ox could easily be roasted whole, and where banquets are prepared for as many as 350 guests at a time—a vast apartment, dark and awkwardly built, but capable, nevertheless, of wonderful feats of cookery.

"Over the fireplace the servants' hall is the inscription: 'Swear not. Lie not. Neither repeat old grievances. Whosoever drinks on this hall with his hat on shall forfeit sixpence or ride the wooden horse.'

"Below is the name of George Roberts, 'porter to ye Right Hon. Sir Crisp Gascoyne, Lord Mayor, 1763,' which seems to place the date of this quaint warning. The 'wooden horse' is a stout black staff which offenders have to beatride and are carried round the room by two sturdy footmen.

"Sometimes, as I wander through the winding passages and stately chambers of this historic building, wherein, by virtue of my husband's office, we are privileged to reside for one short year. I think of our predecessors who graced the Mansion House in the years that have passed, and in imagination, I see dim figures of bygone days flit across the hangings of a ghostly house. And, surely, in that limited sense, it is haunted, after all.

History or Legend?

One of the features of the great historical pageant of Devon at Torquay, was the use, in one scene, of the identical set of bowls with which Drake was playing when the Armada came in sight. These bowls are among the treasures of Torquay Museum.

There are people, however, who doubt their authenticity, or rather the truth of the famous anecdote of Drake and his celebrated game on Plymouth Hoe. There is no contemporary account of the incident, which was described for the first time in Britain in an eighteenth century book. It is mentioned, however, in a Spanish political pamphlet published in 1624.

Quite Likely.

"When I was once in danger from a lion," said the explorer, "I tried sitting down and staring at him, as I had no weapons."

"How did it work?" asked his companion.

"Perfectly. The lion didn't even offer to touch me."

"Strange! How do you account for it?"

"Well, sometimes I've thought it was because I sat on the top branch of a very tall tree."

No Hero After All.

He had risked his life to rescue the fair maid from a watery grave, and, of course, her father was duly grateful.

"Young man," he said, "I can never thank you sufficiently for your heroic act. You incurred an awful risk in saving my only daughter."

"None whatever, sir," replied the amateur lifesaver. "I am already married."

Would Have a Brogue.

The Victim—"And is this real Irish lace?"

The Clerk—"Madam, if that lace could talk it would be with a brogue."

UNKNOWN TO NATURAL HISTORY.

Some Mystery Creatures of the Jungle.

To those who imagine, as many do, that nature has no further surprises in store for us in the shape of new animals and birds, the news that an expedition is in South America attempting to capture the hoazin, a very rare species of water fowl, will come as a surprise, says a writer in an Old Country paper.

But the hoazin, with its cuckoo-like and its formidably powerful beak, is by no means the only mysterious creature known to exist to-day in the heart of Central Africa, where the jungle in many places has never been penetrated by white men, there is to be found a strange leopard-like animal, striped after the fashion of a zebra, that so far has evaded classification by natural history.

What is known as the hippo-horse is another mysterious beast that built in the African wilds. The natives have long spoken of it, but it was not until a few months ago that a white man, Mr. H. E. Lee, made its acquaintance.

He saw the animal half-immersed in a pool. Its mouth, cheeks, and ears like those of a horse, but its head was like that of a hippopotamus, with two long, erect horns on either side of its forehead.

The New Guinea forests are believed to be the home of more than one animal unknown to natural history, while the dense jungles of Borneo and Brazil contain others, among them a long lizard-like creature that is said to be capable of flying.

The Giant Bush Pig of Kenya Colony is another beast that is so rarely seen that its existence is doubted by some, although several reputable travellers claim to have observed it.

Torpedo-Carrying Wonder Plane.

What is generally thought to be the most wonderful airplane ever built is nearing completion at the works of the Blackburn Aircraft Co., Ltd., at Brough, on the Humber, in England.

The machine was built for the Air Ministry, and is named the Cubaroo. It is driven by a 1,000-h.p. Napier Cub, and is like a biplane, with a spread of about 70 feet, and it has an enormous fuselage.

Although the Napier Cub is, both in size and power, the biggest aero engine in the world, it is stowed away in the fuselage so that it cannot be seen, and the pilot's seat is actually on top of the engine.

Inside the fuselage there are three torpedo compartments. On the top floor is the pilot's room and space for armament.

On the middle floor are the chart-room and offices, and on the "ground floor" or basement are the bombights and more armament. The torpedo is also controlled from this room.

The machine has been specially designed to carry the largest naval torpedo built.

It has a normal top speed of 120 m.p.h., but when in action it could swoop down at 150 m.p.h. to within a few feet of the water, discharge its torpedo, which would disable or even sink the largest 35,000-ton battleship afloat, and be miles away almost before the crew of the ship knew what was happening.

The Cubaroo has been designed by Major Bumpus, and a fleet of 400 such machines could be built for the price of the battleship which any one of them could destroy.

"Twas a Famous Victory.

"It is a great day for England," said William IV., as he lay on his death-bed on Jan. 20, 1837, and listened to the guns firing for the anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo. This battle was fought by eighty thousand French and two hundred and fifty guns, against sixty-seven thousand British, Hanoverians, and Belgians, assisted by a large number of Prussians who came in at the last moment. The British casualties on the field were fourteen hundred men killed and nearly five thousand wounded. Four thousand of the allied forces were killed, and the total number of their wounded was twenty-two thousand.

At the time it was considered a very dear victory, but it is, perhaps, one of the most famous and important of all time. It has gone down into the glorious history of our country, carrying with it an ever-living memory of our great countryman—Wellington—Annvers.

Too Much Tidiness.

"That place is so tidy I would go mad if I had to live in it," a man said the other day, after paying a visit to a friend, whose wife had the "just so" mania.

One can certainly have too much tidiness, as the small European business community in Persia discovered when the telegraph was first introduced there in the days of Nasr ed Din.

The Persian clerks in charge thought that the messages being transmitted were too untidy, so they carefully re-arranged them, putting all the consonants together, sending them over the wire, and then following up with the vowels.

Never Surprised.

Some people never miss an opportunity for contradiction. Which fact recalls the story of the woman who was travelling through "Wild Wales."

"My, ain't them mountains high!" exclaimed a fellow-passenger.

The contradictory one looked out of the window to see the summits of the lofty hills, and sniffed:

"Only the tops of them is," she protested.

Poor Wifey.

Hubby—"Are you ready, dear?" Wifey—"Yes, I'll be down in a minute; I've only had to put on."

"All right. Then I'll have time to shave before we go."

A laugh is just like music.

It tips the peaks of the with light And drives the clouds away; The soul grows glad that hears it, And feels its course strong; A laugh is just like sunshine For cheering folks along.

WHO DOES YOUR PRINTING ?

In past years — and possibly yet — travellers representing outside printing establishments — sometime as direct agents, sometimes grocery or dry goods men, carrying printing samples as a side-line — have solicited orders from our business men, — too often successfully. Investigation reveals to us that the price, made on "quantity," was the means of securing the order. In justice to ourselves we wish to impress upon the business men of Middleton and surrounding communities that The Outlook is at all times ready and anxious to meet any fair competition submitted by outside parties on any class of commercial printing. During the past four years we have spent thousands of dollars modernizing our equipment, and today have a printing plant capable of handling in an efficient manner almost any class of printing, and can give speedy and satisfactory service. We are anxious to retain all such work in Middleton, instead of seeing it go out of town. As a rule our customers ask us for quotations on small quantities, whereas the outside canvasser succeeds in his efforts by quoting on quantity lots, and on which the difference in cost per thousand is material. The initial cost of setting type and getting ready is the same for lots of one hundred as it is for five thousand, and in this respect the purchaser is misled by the quotations of the salesman who submits a price per thousand for the larger quantities of five thousand or more — and thus gets away with the order. His quotations are also subject to the sales tax of 6 per cent and the express charges, usually about another five per cent, which must be added to the price paid by the purchaser. On the whole his price is not cheaper, nor does

SEVENTEEN

A tale of youth and summer time and the Baxter family, especially William.
By BOOTH TAKINGTON.

Genesis says, it's because that suit is haunted.
"What?"
"You mean," said Jane solemnly, "Genesis says it's haunted. Genesis says everybody over on the avenue knows all about that suit, an' he says that's why One Eye Beljus never could sell it before."
"Genesis says One Eye Beljus tried to sell it to a colored man for $3, but the man said he wouldn't put it on, or $500, an' Genesis says he wouldn't either, because it belonged to a dago

'An' he cut a lady's head off with it!

waiter that—that—". Jane's voice sank to a whisper of uncanny horror. She was having a wonderful time. "Mamma, this dago waiter, he lived over on the avenue, an' he took a case knife ne'd sharpened—an' he cut a lady's head off with it!"
Mrs. Baxter screamed faintly.
"An' he got hung, mamma! If you don't believe it you can ask One Eye Beljus. I guess he knows! An' he sold this suit to One Eye Beljus when he was in jail, mamma. He sold it to him before he got hung, mamma."

"Hush, Jane!"
But Jane couldn't hush now. "An' he had that suit on when he cut the lady's head off, mamma, an' that's why it's haunted. They cleaned it all up except a few little spots of bl'—"

"Jane!" shouted her mother, "you must not talk about such things an' Genesis mustn't tell you stories of that sort!"

"Well, how could he help it if he told me about Willie?" Jane urged reasonably.

"Never mind! Did that crazy ch—Did Willie leave the baskets in that dreadful place?"

"Yes'm, an' his watch an' pin," Jane informed her impressively. "An' One Eye Beljus wanted to know if Genesis knew Willie, because One Eye Beljus wanted to know if Genesis thought Willie could get the $3.00, an' One Eye Beljus wanted to know if Genesis thought he could get anything more out of him besides that."

"He told Genesis he hadn't told Willie he could have the suit, after all. He just told him he thought he could, but he wouldn't say for certain till he brought him the $3.00. So Willie left all his things there, an' his watch an'—"

"What will do?" Mrs. Baxter's voice was grave. "I don't want to hear any more!"

Mrs. Baxter went hurriedly into William's room and made a brief inspection of his clothes closet and dressing table; then she strode to the window and called loudly:

"Genesis!"
"Genesis!" came the voice from below.
"Go to that lumber yard where Mr. William is at work and bring him here to me at once. If he declines to come tell him," Her voice broke oddly. She choked, but Jane could not decide with what emotion. "Tell him—tell him I ordered you to use force if necessary! Hurry!"

"Yes'm," Jane ran to the window in time to see Genesis departing seriously through the back gate.

"Mamma!"
"Don't talk to me now, Jane," Mrs. Baxter said crisply. "I want you to go down in the yard, and when Willie comes tell him I'm waiting for him here in his own room. And don't come with him, Jane. Run!"

"Yes, mamma," Jane was pleased with this appointment. She anxiously desired to be the first to see how Willie "looked."

He looked flurried and flustered and breathless, and there were blisters upon the reddened palms of his hands. "What on earth's the matter, mother?" he asked as he stood panting before her. "Genesis said something was wrong, and he said you told him to tell me if I wouldn't come."

"Oh, no!" she cried. "I only meant I thought perhaps you wouldn't obey any ordinary message."

"Well, well, it doesn't matter, but please hurry and say what you want to, because I got to get back and—"

"No," Mrs. Baxter said quietly, "you're not going back to count any more shingles, Willie. How much have you earned?"

He swallowed, but spoke bravely. "Thirty-six cents. But I've been getting lots faster the last two hours, and there's a good deal of time before o'clock, Mother."

"No," she said. "You're going over to that horrible place where you've left your clothes and your watch and all those other things in the two baskets, and you're going to bring them home at once."

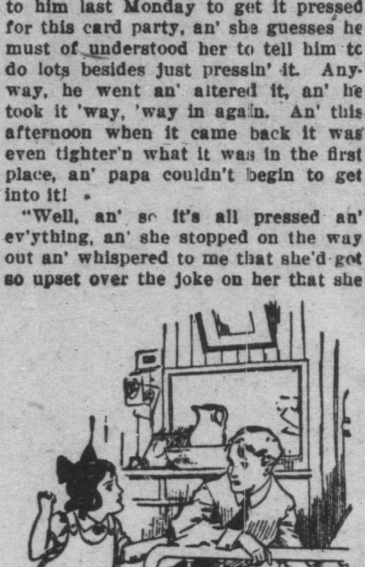

"Mother?" he cried, aghast. "Who told you?"
"It doesn't matter. You don't want your father to find out, do you? Then get those things back here as quickly as possible against the light of the open door. "Oh, oh, oh!"

"What's the matter?"
"She said I mustn't tell that she told me to tell my goodness! I forgot that! Mamma took me on alone right after dinner, an' she told me to tell you this joke on her a little after she an' papa had left the house but she said, 'Above all things, she said, don't let Willie know I said it to tell him.' That's just what she said an' here that's the very first thing I had to go an' do!"

"Well, what of it?"
Jane quieted down. "Did you hear what a fuss papa was makin' when he was dressin' for the card party?"

"He had to go in his regular clothes," whispered Jane triumphantly. "An' this is the joke on mamma: You know that tailor that let papa's dress suit 'way out? Well, mamma thinks that 'way out must think she's crazy or some p'n, 'cause she took papa's dress suit to him last Monday to get it pressed for this card party an' she pressed it must of understood her to tell him to do lots besides just pressin' it. Any way, he went an' altered it, an' he took it 'way out, 'way out, 'way out, an' papa couldn't begin to get into it!"

"Well, an' an' it's all pressed an' everything, an' she stopped on the way out an' whispered to me that she'd got so upset over the joke on her that she couldn't remember where she put it when she took it out of papa's room after he gave up tryin' to get inside of it. An' that," cried Jane—"that's the funniest thing of all! Why, it's layin' right on her bed this very minute!"

In one bound William leaped through the open door. Two seconds sufficed for his passage through the hall to his mother's bedroom, and there, neatly spread upon the lace-covered bed and brighter than coronation robes, faster than Joseph's holy coat, it lay!

As a hurried wordling in almost perfectly fitting evening clothes passed out of his father's gateway and hurried toward the place whence faintly came the sound of dance music, a child's voice called sweetly from an unidentified window of the darkened house behind him:

"Well, any way, you try an' have a good time, Willie!"
Jane's friendly but ill chosen "any way" had touched doubts already annoying him. He was certain to be late for the party—late, indeed, and might prove difficult to obtain a proper number of dances with the sacred girl in whose honor the celebration was being held.

But as he hastened onward his spirits rose, and he did reply to Jane, after all, though he had placed a hundred yards between them.

"Yes, and you can bet your bottom dollar I will too!" he muttered between his determined teeth.

Spellbound groups of uninvited persons, most of them colored, reared their forearms upon the rail of the Parcher's picket fence, offering to William a silhouette like that of a crowd at a fire, a fire, indeed, bright and warm as skimming, shimmering, wavering over a white platform, while high overhead the young moon sprayed a shimmering light down through the maple leaves to where processions of rose globes hung floating in the blue night.

Yonder—somewhere in the breath of radiant water, his green eyes, all her court about her. Queen and court, thought William, and nothing less exorbitant could have expressed his feeling.

A sense of picturesqueness—his own picturesqueness—made him walk rather theatrically as he passed through the groups of humble onlookers outside the picket fence. Many of these turned to stare at the belated guest, and William was unconscious of neither their low estate nor his own quality as a particular man about town in almost perfectly fitting evening dress. A faint, cold smile was allowed to appear upon his lips, and a fragment from a story he had read came momentarily to his mind—"Through the gaping crowds the young Augustan noble was borne down from the Palatine, scornful in his jeweled litter."

An admiring murmur reached William's ear. "Oh, oh, honey, look at them long tail suits! At's a rich boy, honey!"

"Tessum, so! Bet he got his pockets packed full of twenty dollar gold pieces right his minute!"

"Willow allowed the coldness of his faint smile to increase to become scornful. These poor sidewalk creatures little knew what seethed inside the alabaster of the young Augustan noble! What was it to them that this was Miss Pratt's last night and that he intended to dance and dance with her on the last night of her life?"

Upon one of the posts of the gateway there rested the elbow of a contemplative man, middle aged or a little worse. He all persons having pleasure or business within the bright inclosure he was that evening the least important, being merely the back of a head and parent who paid the bills—Mr. Parcher.

One subject was preoccupying both Mr. Parcher and William. Their two views, though again founded upon one thought, had no real congeniality. The preoccupying subject was the imminence of Miss Pratt's departure. Neither Mr. Parcher nor William forgot it for an instant. No matter what else played upon the surface of their attention, each kept saying to himself underneath: "This is the last night—the last night! Miss Pratt is going away—going away tomorrow!"

The unuttered words advanced tragically toward the gate in the head of the Parcher at the same time that they moved contentedly away in the head of Mr. Parcher, for Mr. Parcher caught sight of his wife just then and went to join her as she sank wearily upon the front steps.

"Taking a rest for a minute?" he inquired. "By George, we're both tired. To a good, long rest after tonight! If we could afford it we'd go away to a quiet little sanitarium in the hills somewhere, and—"

His staring eyes followed the movements of a stately young woman entering the gates. "Look at it!" said Mr. Parcher in a whisper. "Just look at it!"

"Look at what?" asked his wife.
"That Baxter boy?" said Mr. Parcher as William passed on toward the dancers. "What's he think he's imitating—Henry Irving? Look at his walk!"

"He walks that way a good deal lately, I've noticed," said Mrs. Parcher in a tired voice. "So do Joe Bullitt and—"

"He didn't even come to say good evening to you," Mr. Parcher interrupted. "Talk about manners nowadays! These young—"

"Well, we're used to that," said Mr. Parcher. "None of 'em sees us. They've worn holes in all the cane-seated chairs for the embankment or the lunatic asylum. I haven't been able to sit down anywhere downstairs for three months without sitting on some dam boy. But you'll see 'em when you go to the Well, thank the Lord, it's over—over tonight!"

His voice became reflective. "That Baxter boy was the worst until he took to coming in the daytime when I was downstairs. I couldn't have stood it if he'd kept on coming in the evening. If I had to listen to any more of his talking or singing either the embankment or the lunatic asylum would have had me, sure! I see he's got hold of his daddy's dress suit! Mrs. Parcher inquired, "How do you know?"

Mr. Parcher smiled. "How I happen to know is a secret," he said. "I for-remember the time Miss Pratt told me that Mrs. Baxter had hidden it, or something, so that Willie couldn't see it, but I guess Jane wouldn't tell me that she had it, or something, as they're letting him use it again tonight. I suppose he feels grander in the king of Siam!"

here tonight and ask him about some thing important before?"
"Te good! Can't you wait a minute?" William cried, keeping his grip upon Joe's lapels. "You got to give me anyway two out of all your dances with her! You heard her tell me your self that she'd be willing if you or Johnnie or—"

"Well, I only got five or six with her and a couple extras. Johnnie's got seven. Why'n't you go after Johnnie? I bet he'd help you out, all right, I you kept after him. What you want to pester me for, Bill?"

William swallowed, and, increasing the affectionate desperation of his clutch upon Mr. Bullitt's lapels, "Joe," he began huskily—"Joe, if I'd got six regular and two extras with Miss Pratt last night here, and you got here late, and it wasn't your fault—I couldn't help being late! Could I? I wasn't my fault I was late, I guess it was. Well, if I was in your place I wouldn't act the way you and Johnnie do—not in a thousand years I wouldn't! I'd say, 'You want a couple of my dances with Miss Pratt, ole man? Why, certainly!'"

"Yes, you would?" was the cynical comment of Mr. Bullitt, whose averted face and reluctant shoulders indicated a strong desire to conclude the interview. "Tonight especially!" he added.

"Look here, Joe," said William desperately, "don't you realize that this is the very last night Miss Pratt's going to be in this town?"

"You bet I do!" These words, though vehement, were inaudible, being formed in the mind of Mr. Bullitt, but, for diplomatic reasons, not projected upon the air by his vocal organs.

William continued, "Joe, you and I have been friends ever since you and I were boys." He spoke with emotion, but Joe had no appearance of being favorably impressed. "And when I look back," said William, "I expect I've done more favors for you than I ever have for any other—"

But Mr. Bullitt briskly interrupted this appealing reminiscence. "Listen here, Billy Bill," he said, becoming all at once friendly and encouraging—"Bill, there's other girls here you can get dances with. There's one or two of 'em sittin' around in the yard. You can have a bully time even if you did come late." And, with the air of discharging happily all the obligations which William had reminded him, he added, "I'll tell you that much, Bill!"

"Joe, you got to give me anyway one dance!"

"Look!" said Mr. Bullitt eagerly. "Look, sittin' yonder, over under that tree all by herself! That's a visiting girl named Miss Boko. She's visiting some old uncle or something she's got living here, and I bet you could—"

"Joe, you got to—"

"I bet that Miss Boko's a good dancer or two," Joe continued warmly. "Mr. Parcher says so. She was trying to get to dance with her myself, but I couldn't or I would of. Honest, Bill, I would of. Bill, if it was you I'd say right in there before anybody else go a start, and I'd—"

"Ole man," said William gently, "remember the time Miss Pratt told me that Mrs. Baxter had hidden it, or something, so that Willie couldn't see it, but I guess Jane wouldn't tell me that she had it, or something, as they're letting him use it again tonight. I suppose he feels grander in the king of Siam!"

BABY CHICKS BY MAIL

To avoid the confusion caused last year to purchasers who were not aware that the postal authorities set stop dates for receiving bay chicks, the following advice from the Ottawa post office is repeated:

"Postmasters are informed that the experimental service introduced last spring for the transmission of day-old chicks by Parcel Post in Canada will be renewed this year."

"Five day-old chicks may be accepted from April 1 to June 15, except in British Columbia, where the mailing period will be from March 15 to May 31, at the risk of the sender, for transmission at Parcel Post rates to places within Canada and United States, provided the package in which they are contained is properly prepared, and that delivery can be made to the addressee within 36 hours from the time of posting."

"Day-old chicks must not be accepted for transmission if baggage car service, 'catch-post' service, or service by water route is necessary, which does not include short water routes, which are virtually ferry services. Shippers should consult the District Superintendent of Postal Service for information as to places to which the day-old chicks may be sent."

"Parcels containing day-old chicks may not be insured."

"Shipments of day-old chicks are to be transported outside of mail bags. It is recommended that the shipper affix a legibly-written or printed notice to each such package, giving the following instructions, which postal employees are to carefully observe: 'This side up.'"

"Handle with special care. 'Do not give food or drink to the chicks while in transit.'"

"Despatch as quickly as possible and deliver to the addressee promptly upon arrival at office of destination."

"Do not place near hot pipes, stoves or radiators, or expose to cold winds or hot sun."

"As far as possible protect from all extremes of heat or cold."

THE LARGEST CLOCK

Electricity plays an important part in what is claimed to be the world's largest clock. This is the new clock of Colgate & Co., which takes the place of the one that for many years called attention to their Jersey City factory.

The new clock, wound by a quarter horse power motor, has a dial diameter of 50 feet. The main hand is 33 feet 3 inches long and the hour measures 27 feet 6 inches, the hands weighing together 3,325 lbs. More than two hundred lamps placed at regular distances around the hands make it as easy to tell the time by night as by day.

There is a Middleton man who claims he never swears unless the paper doesn't come.

SUCCESSFUL MEN ARE CRITICISED

A newspaper paragraph has given us this striking picture of the present-day attitude toward men: "If he's poor, he's a failure; if he's rich, he's a menace." If he's poor, and a failure, he gets no more attention than to cast him into discard of humanity. But if he's rich, how he is pursued, and denounced! A few names will be enough. John D. Rockefeller, who made a vast fortune, has been blackened probably more than any man on this continent. Yet he has given unnumbered millions to philanthropic causes, to religion, and to foundations that never would have existed under other conditions. Practically the whole time of his son, John D. Jr., is given to the disbursement of the accumulated wealth of the family for the benefit of mankind in general. Government could not have done the things for the promotion of the public welfare that have been carried on by the Rockefeller foundations. Andrew Carnegie was another man who amassed an enormous fortune, and distributed it all over the world to the people. His benefactions to education, in nearly every community in America, there is a Carnegie Public Library. These have collectively been a priceless boon to the humble citizens. Yet how he was cursed as a profiteer and an exploiter of the poor. In our town Canada the captains of industry have not suffered similar calumny. The huge Joseph Flavelle is perhaps the most notable case in this country. By his splendid organizing genius he built up a great industry and made some millions. In the process he gave employment to thousands of men and invariably treated them generously. But all that was submerged in a general outcry of denunciation. Not many years ago he was the most successful business man in the world, and he is now a pariah.

Nowadays, the cry is "crucify him." All three men mentioned were poor boys, who by industry, intelligence and thrift, were able to do the big things that stand to their credit. Their very success, for which they should be praised, is made the cause of condemnation. There is something wrong with the world when failures are able to arouse the public to bound a man because he is successful. People forget that without industrial leaders there would be no industry. They create great organizations through which employment is provided for those who do not possess the ability to create and manage successfully the great industries of a nation. If anyone desires to build upon a picture of industry and deadly chemicals, and it will be seen that the light little island is in a more precarious position than it is today. The ten years ago, the facts of the situation are fully apprehended by the Government. While the navy has lost its value as a line of defence, it cannot be depended upon wholly to protect the country against all comers and to protect defences which will make any hostile nation hesitate before attacking Britain. The program submitted to Parliament involves an expenditure of $100,000,000. Sir Samuel Hoare, the Air Minister said the basis of the new policy was to trouble the British air strength as it stood two years ago, when the nation turned seriously to the problem of defence. In reference to the need of the new policy, the ministry said that the development of air fighting had brought about a revolution. "This revolution," he said, "is far greater than the revolution produced by the invention of gunpowder in the latter middle ages and for the country like ours, which up to a few years ago, depended for its defence almost entirely on sea and its navy, this revolution means more than to any country in the world. All of which goes to show that the British people realize what the changed methods of warfare mean to an island Empire like theirs, and are intelligently preparing for it."

o o o
Taking No Chances

"So you wish to leave to get married, Mary? I hope you have considered the matter seriously?"

"Oh, I have, mum. I've been to two fortune-tellers and a clairvoyant, and looked in a sign-book, and dreamed on a lock of 'is' air, and I've been to a medium and a astrologist, and they all tell me go ahead, mum. I ain't one to marry reckless like, mum."

Only the Best

"Madam" said the doctor, "I shall have to paint your husband's throat with nitrate of silver."

"Please use nitrate of gold doctor," exclaimed Mrs. Moneybags. "The expense is quite immaterial."

Feeling Tired in Springtime

Not Sick, But Not Quite Well—You Need the Help of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

With the passing of winter many people feel weak, depressed and easily tired. No particular disease, but the system lacks tone. You find yourself tired, low-spirited, and often unable to get sound sleep at night. All this is the result of in-door confinement of the winter months, and shows that the blood has become thin and watery. New rich blood is what you need to put you right, and there is no other medicine can give you this new and sure blood as speedily as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This new blood goes to every part of the body and quickly improves the general health. Digestion is toned up, you have a better appetite, nerves are strengthened and sleep is sound and refreshing.

The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills when the system is run down is shown by the experience of Mr. William Mitchell, R. R. No. 1, Bedford, P. E. I., who says:—"A few months ago I found myself in a badly run down condition. My appetite was poor, I was easily tired and did not sleep well. I tried several so-called tonics, but they did not get any relief. Then I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial and soon found that I had got the right medicine. Gradually my strength came back, the dull, tired feeling disappeared, and after using the pills for about a month, I could eat heartily and was as strong and active as ever I had been. I can most cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as an unsurpassed tonic."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BRITAIN IS PREPARING

The perfecting of flying machines and submarines has placed Great Britain in a position of danger from invading forces that makes the defence of the country much more difficult than it was ten years ago. A powerful navy was then a sure safeguard for her shores. Now, however, it is possible from modern submarines, and attacks from the air are difficult to combat. Add to these methods of warfare the invention of deadly chemicals, and it will be seen that the light little island is in a more precarious position than it is today.

The weather is certainly varied. One day it looks like fishing; the next a cold wintry storm.

And the Furnace Smokes?

A man seeing the notice "Iron Sinks" in a hardware store window went inside and said that he was perfectly aware of the fact that iron sinks.

All to the occasion the dealer retallated. "Yes, I know, and time flies, sulphur springs, jam rolls, followed by the telephone, close on the heels of that was the motor car, and the electric light. asked the visitor. "What's that?" inquired the shop-keeper cautiously. "Merle's bust" was the reply.

WONDERS NEVER CEASE!

Of all the wonderful discoveries and inventions of modern times the chief is the radio. It is hard for the mind to grasp all that it means for mankind, especially to those living in rural districts. Only a few years ago the farmer and his family were pretty well cut off from the world. Then came the rural mail delivery, followed by the telephone, close on the heels of that was the motor car, and the electric light. What wonderful changes have taken place in the past quarter of a century in opening up the world to all mankind. But the Radio surpasses all other agencies that bring the people together. A little box the size of a tin of lard cults and a wire strung from it to a tree outside enables a family in the most remote section of the country to hear instantaneously what is being broadcasted from Toronto, Boston, New York, Atlanta, San Francisco and places between. McMillan, the explorer, goes to the North Pole, and while sailing and drifting in the Arctic seas is in constant communication with New York, Chicago, Edmonton, Calgary and Toronto. And all this through the impalpable air with no other medium than the ether. Radio has now advanced to a point where seventy-five cents is spent for apparatus and complete sets to every dollar spent for all other musical instruments combined. The radio industry during 1922 did an estimated business of $350,000,000. Millions of persons "listen in" nightly. During the presidential campaign last fall, President Coolidge addressed practically one quarter of the total population of the continent through simultaneous broadcasting. What other wonders lurk in the air to be picked out by the discoverer? Truly, as Shakespeare said centuries ago, "there are stranger things in Heaven and earth than were ever dreamt of in thy philosophy, Horatio."

Talking about ambition to get up in the world, we have noticed that it is most often realized by the chap who has the energy to get up in the morning.
