Washington, D. C., May 19.—The lost naval seaplane NC-3, commanded by Commander Towers, lost in mid-Atlantic since 5:30 Saturday morning, was today reported to the navy department proceeding toward Ponta Delgada, under her own power, seven miles from land.

The NC-4, which arrived at Horta in early Saturday morning, expects to start for Ponta Delgada during the forenoon, but as she has fuel enough to make the flight to Lisbon, she may fly directly for that port.

The NC-1, which is being towed here by the excellent condition to resume the journey, and the confidence of its crew has not been shaken by the misfortune of their fellow fliers.

Weather Handicaps Search. No news from the NC-3, missing since early Saturday morning, when Commander J. H. Towers reported the plane then was off her course about 300 miles from her destination, had been received at the navy department.

IDEALISM, SINCERITY AND INTELLECTUAL CAPACITY DISTINGUISH YOUNG MINISTER OF KNOX PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, S. LONDON

Rev. T. A. Symington Believes in Originality and Declares That Each Individual and Generation Has Its Own Task To Perform.

EMPHASIZES RESPONSIBILITY OF INDIVIDUAL IN RELIGION

Preachers are apt to become known to the populace by the sermons they preach and by the work they accomplish in the church to which they are attached in London there are, however, many clergymen whose personalities are such that a glimpse at them tells more than a dozen of their sermons. It is with the object of bringing these personalities before the public that The Advertiser prints today the eighth of a series of sketches which, it is hoped, will include all those presiding over the destinies of the various churches.

There's a fine idealism and sincerity about Rev. T. A. Symington, M.A., of Knox Church, South London, expressed in the very timbre of his voice. He is serious and earnest in his pulpit or when delivering an address of a religious character, without being sanctimonious. He is called upon in a meeting of the London Presbytery to speak on the forward movement of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. His method of treatment of his subject gives to it a high spiritual significance, strikes the note of inspirational motive which appeals to the worst and best in the hearts of those who listen.

Probably it is the power to awaken the good in people, in an appreciable manner, that is responsible for the enthusiasm over Mr. Symington's preaching of those who hear him. He is a man apart from the crowd, which is a compound of earnest people and people who are not. He has a profound understanding of other people and their problems, a profound conviction in regard to the world's difficulties, and a convincing assurance of the faith which he himself holds, his sermons stand securely upon the merits of sound, thinking, logical reason, and a fine sense of proportion in building.

Social Service Enthusiast. He has been in Knox Church for a short time—just since last October—still to be called "the new minister." He has been so busy with his work in his own congregation that he has scarcely had time to make himself felt or known in the movement which affects the welfare of the city as a whole. While his energies have been directed along the lines of intensive work in the sense that they have been directed most earnestly to his own congregation, the breadth of his interest in making the world a better place is manifestly shown from the statement recently made by a very discerning member of Knox Church.

"The only thing I'm afraid of is that you won't be able to keep Mr. Symington. You'll see, the church will be getting after him for this social service work. He is just full of it, such a good speaker. He's the kind of man that is needed for work like that. In the meantime he is using his pulpit to preach a Christianity that is practical, real, vital, a Christianity which imposes definite responsibilities not only upon the minister but upon every professed believer in the news."

The Church's Function. "What is the function of the church?" Mr. Symington says. "The one function of the church is to bring the world face to face with Christ. Christ was God lived by man. The church is Christ lived by man. And by the same reasoning every individual who has claim to the title 'Christian' should be an expression of Jesus Christ in speech, voice, eye, hand, feet, character and life. Such is the ideal he sets for the Christian life and the Christian Church. Referring in his morning sermon on Sunday to the end of the age for reality in religion he declared that this demand for reality is not peculiar to the present times. It was demanded away back in the time of Jesus, in the early days of the Christian Church. Paul emphasized reality in religion. Two texts characterized as 'remarkable' were chosen to demonstrate this. "What, know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?" and the reference to the church as the body of Christ, contained in Ephesians. "And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all."

A building can't be a temple of God, however beautiful, to show what God is, commented the minister of Knox Church. "It may suggest God, because of the associations. But it is only the life of man that can be an expression of God, the body, the whole outward life, Jesus's body transformed the thoughts of God into action. Mercy, Healing, Encouragement. The hands of God were used in works of mercy and healing to show what God was. The eyes of Jesus accorded things that were mean, small and trivial, but the eyes of Jesus overflowed with sympathy for the sorrowful, for those who were fighting God's battles. "Two voices of Jesus were used to encourage the heavily laden. When he passed and the question was raised, 'What is this that has passed?' the answer given was 'Compassion.' God with us."

"I don't think it is much use talking about the forward movement until we have grasped the responsibility and high privileges of life as God's temples. As Christian people, we are not here to listen to sermons, to increase our size, numbers and opinions as a community of worshippers. We are here to represent the body of Christ. "Did Jesus establish a church? Not in the sense of a system of theology or the harnessing of world policy, like Rome, or philosophy, like Athens. "Jesus established a church in which every life is entitled to its own way to translate the spirit of God, to act and transform the world of God into reality and make the word flesh. In the foregoing sentence, Mr. Symington expressed his desire to establish the kingdom of God on earth and make conditions of life wholesome and livable for the masses, he recognizes that the masses are made up of individuals who are nothing more nor less than living souls, with possibilities of expressing in their bodies the mind of Christ. Originality, according to him, is one of the outstanding characteristics of New Testament teaching. Each individual Christian must not only express the mind of Jesus, but re-express it in his or her own way. The mission of Jesus was to the Jews, that of Paul to the Gentiles. Jesus speaks to each individual with startling newness. He asks each individual to re-think and re-express God. Each one has his own task and must do it. One of God's promises is: 'Give yourself to him, and he will give you a task entirely your own. Each Generation Has Its Task. The statement followed logically in this line of reasoning: 'Let not the generation that is past seek to criticize or direct the methods and work of this generation. We have our own task to perform and must do it.' Concerning the work of the church, he continued: 'Too many use their pulpits to call down what happens in the world. The work of the church is to show the love of God in some real way. The church must develop a social application of Christianity. On every side, there is a demand that the church shall express what Jesus Christ came to teach. Must Be a Power. "Not only is it imperative that the church shall express the reality of God, but there is a demand that it shall be a power in the world today."

And a counter-question was given in the war? "What power has the church in the temporary movement? When protest is made by a ministerial association, by a presbytery or a Sabbath breaking, would even city officials take the view that it pays them to laugh at it? "If the church is to be a power, it must express what Jesus was and God is. The kingdom of heaven is life in a life. The church must give expression to Christ in politics, legislation and public life. Kingdom Held Back. One of the reasons the kingdom of God is held back, according to Mr. Symington, is that there is a tendency to leave the work of Christ to the church, when it must be done by individuals who make up the church. Individual effort has given each individual a definite task to perform. The effectiveness of the task depends upon the degree in which it is done in God's way. There is no need to be afraid about results, when God works through his body, expresses himself through his body, otherwise the individual or the church. But some people refuse to allow their bodies to be temples of God, they refuse to be temples for expression of the life of Christ. The young minister of Knox Church.

re-vently in sympathy with the twentieth century conception of applied Christianity, referred to the Orthodox Presbyterian doctrine of election. "If you think that election means that God calls one and refuses another, you are wrong," he said. "God calls every one and some reject him. The awful thing is that they should refuse the call of God." In conclusion, a striking illustration was given, of what refusing the call of God means. Tragedy of Paralysis. "We have all seen the tragedy of paralysis. The mind has lost touch with the body and the body is a lump and useless. We can't understand how the body is the instrument of will, yet we can't help friend or neighbor, unless we help them in the body. God can't speak or do work in the world unless he has a body that obeys him. Think of the tragedy if you neglect the call of God, the tragedy of the paralysis of God! "Christ said, 'Without me, ye can do nothing.' But it is also true that he says, 'Without you, I can do nothing.' And so, in his opening sermon yesterday, Mr. Symington told each one within sound of his voice: 'You are personally responsible for the success or failure of the establishment of God's kingdom on earth; for the church failing or realizing its possibilities as a power in the world; for the performing by the church of its function to bring the world face to face with Christ. The church tramp was fortunate enough to arrive on a day when the sermon embodied the minister's ideas for the church and the Christian life. The scratch of the pencil, the rustle of paper attracted the attention of a member of the church. "I'm glad," said that stranger member at the close of the service, "that Mr. Symington is going to get a write-up. You should have a good one. He deserves it." Knox Church isn't the easiest auditorium in the city in which to hear all sorts of contradictions have been fixed from time to time to improve the acoustic properties. Now, the organ console and the pulpit have changed places, and from the elevation behind the choir, the preacher's every syllable could be distinctly caught, far to one side. This would scarcely have been possible, however, were his voice not of good carrying power, his enunciation distinct, his speech deliberate. Preaching a practical idealistic Christianity, he does it in simple, well-chosen, expressive English. His manner and tone are quiet and natural, and he neither cringes, elocutes nor resorts to dramatic gestures. Yet over the audience as he speaks falls the stillness of intense interest. The sermon became a fine mentally and trained intellectual powers. But it grips because it speaks right from the heart of the preacher who says, 'Dare I be in the ministry if I believed the results depended upon me or my mind?'

What is the function of the church? Mr. Symington says. "The one function of the church is to bring the world face to face with Christ. Christ was God lived by man. The church is Christ lived by man. And by the same reasoning every individual who has claim to the title 'Christian' should be an expression of Jesus Christ in speech, voice, eye, hand, feet, character and life. INFORMAL VOTE TO BE TAKEN SOON ON THE TIME QUESTION

Council Expected To Decide On This Tonight.

CHEAPER THAN BYLAW While Not Binding, Will Show What Majority of the Citizens Want.

An informal vote on the question of daylight saving or standard time for the city may be decided upon at tonight's meeting of the city council. The expected petition from the street railway employees has been sent to the city clerk, and will be presented to council this evening and an understood that one of the aldermen has prepared or is preparing a resolution to have an informal vote taken, with May 21 as the proposed date for this.

An informal vote, it is pointed out, will require much less time and will cost considerably less money than a formal vote on a bylaw. The bylaw would have to be prepared and submitted two weeks from today, and after that three weeks' notice would have to be given before the poll could be held legally. The cost would be in the neighborhood of $1,000. Cheaper Plan. On the other hand an informal vote can be taken without the preliminaries necessary in the other case, only one polling station in each school, and consequently only one deputy returning officer in each school, would be necessary, and the city would not have to employ scrutineers, who would be supplied, if at all, by the advocates of the respective systems of time-fixing. The estimated cost of the informal poll is placed at about $500. Not Binding. While such a vote would not be binding, neither would a formal vote on a bylaw, since the city has already been held to have no power to fix the time. On the other hand, however, the alderman who will move the resolution, and who is upheld by a considerable number of the other aldermen in his view, believed that if an overwhelming majority of votes is cast one way or the other, it will have the effect of standardizing the general action of the citizens, and it has been hinted that the street railway will be willing in the event of a majority of the votes being cast in favor of daylight saving, to revert to the standard time.

That council will adopt the resolution is generally believed to be almost certain. Flying fairly high a Curtiss aeroplane with two occupants swept over the city Sunday afternoon at a speed of 100 miles an hour, circling, it returned to the eastward, whence it had come and disappeared from sight. The plane was piloted by one of them an Advertiser reporter, who had managed to induce a friend to bring him back from Toronto to London via the air route. Both were experienced aldermen and the flight westward was made without mishap of any kind. Landing here, however, was a difficult matter; in fact it was impossible. The velocity of the wind was too great to allow any visit to earth, so the two had to wheel and return to Hamilton, where they obtained more petrol and proceeded back to Leaside Camp, Toronto. There the reporter had to take train for his home, after all.

Auto Thief Admits He Lied to Court; Tells the Truth

P. C. McCaughey's Good Capture Leads to Conviction.

Admitting to Crown Attorney James B. McKillop that his evidence had been a tissue of lies, Robert McArthur, a hydro-electric line foreman, broke down in the Canning street witness-stand Saturday afternoon, and admitted the theft of a motor car, implicating a man named Russell. He was remanded by Police Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon until May 26 for sentence. Prior to his admission of guilt, McArthur denied the crown's evidence that he and Russell had deliberately planned and stolen the car owned by Thomas Edwards. His story was to the effect that he was asked to go for a ride by a man whom he did not know. Later the car stalled, and following a conversation with Patrolman McCaughey, they ran away, he being caught by the constable in Hobbs' glass works yards. Arthur Temple, called by the crown at a special sitting on Saturday afternoon, swore on the witness-stand that he had seen two men approach the car owned by Thomas Edwards after they had been damaged by a witness, "came from the east. At the motor car they stopped and talked a few moments. One man finally got in the car, while the other cranked it. The latter followed into the car, and the two drove off with the machine. "Is it not true," queried Crown Attorney McKillop, "that you, McArthur, and another man went to this car together and took it away? Remember, you are on your oath; and is not this man's name Russell?" Hesitating a moment, McArthur looked appealingly at Police Magistrate Graydon and said: "I'm sorry, that my evidence has been all lies. I have to admit the truth, that I went to the machine with a man named Russell. I was trying to shield him."

"You have committed the basest kind of perjury in this court, and I did not believe your story," commented Magistrate Graydon. "There is great indignation at this court, and I will remind you until Monday, May 26, for sentence." The detection of the motor car was attempted to locate the man named Russell implicated by McArthur.

The wedding march was played by the bride's sister, Miss Nettie Blinkhorn, who wore a dress of pink silk crepe. PRESS OF CANADA CLEANEST, MOST MORAL AND HAS BEST INFLUENCE ON RELIGIOUS LIFE Glowing Tribute Paid by Rev. Dr. D. L. McCrae Before the Ministerial Alliance—Appeal For Help to Armenia Made by Rev. I. W. Pierce.

A glowing tribute to the press of Canada was paid today by Rev. Dr. D. L. McCrae, veteran newspaper man and preacher, in the course of a dress delivered at the monthly meeting of the Ministerial Alliance on the subject, "The Influence of the Press on the Religious Life of the Nation." After more than fifty years of close observation of the press and close association with the press, said the speaker, he is prepared to say that the Canadian Press is the cleanest, most moral and exerts the best influence upon the religious life of the nation of any in the world.

In addition to the address of Dr. McCrae, a gripping appeal on behalf of starving, stricken Armenia was made by a visitor to the Alliance, Rev. I. W. Pierce, who reached Turkey on a missionary work at the Congregational church a few months before the war, and was a witness in consequence of the horrors of the atrocities, returning to Canada recently. Arrangements were made for the union peace service under the auspices of the Alliance which will be held in the First Methodist Church at 11 o'clock daily after peace is declared, and at which Rev. D. C. MacGregor will be the preacher. The Alliance placed itself on record as favoring early closing of stores. With regard to a communication from the chamber of commerce in reply to one from the industry committee of the Alliance re law wages of women, this was referred back to the Alliance committee to take action in arranging a conference with a committee of the chamber of commerce.

GREAT GENERAL STRIKE OF ALL ORGANIZED LABOR THREATENS CITY, SAYS LABOR COUNCIL'S SECRETARY

Declares Situation As Grave As It Could Be and Only Slight Aggravation Needed To Provoke Trouble—Agreement With Other Cities Stands.

London is threatened with a great general strike of all organized labor, requiring only the slightest aggravation of a variety of difficulties in a dozen lines of trade to precipitate a labor war similar to that of Winnipeg, in the opinion of James G. Hussey, secretary of the Trades and Labor Council. "The situation is as grave now as it possibly could be. Of course, we don't want any trouble here if it can be avoided, but Labor leaders regard this as the psychological moment in which to adjust trouble," he told The Advertiser today.

Just 24 Hours' Notice. London union men and women are working under an agreement this week to give notice of 24 hours' notice of a strike, in sympathy with metal workers of Toronto. The trades and labor council will undoubtedly assume a most critical aspect. "The trades and labor council are prepared to order lines of the Bell Telephone Company to quit work immediately in sympathy with other electric workers as a possible of union employees are preparing to unite. In about two weeks, organizers predict that these forces will be completely unorganized throughout the city."

CANADA TO PLAY AN IMPORTANT PART TO LEAGUE

London Newspaper Points Out Dominion's Responsibility in World Society.

Integral French Element in Canada Insures Sympathy With European Races.

London, May 19.—The Observer, in an editorial under the caption of "Canada's Glory," says: "The birth of the League of Nations throws on all of us, and on Canada not the least, wider responsibility as members of the British Commonwealth. In this regard Canada has a signal part to play. She is destined to be the keystone of our unity. Of the self-governing dominions she is the greatest and save Newfoundland the nearest to Europe. The integral French element in her population is, in Europe, a special sympathy with and understanding of Latin races of Europe. The fact that like her great neighbor she absorbed into her stock no small number of the British stock no small collection from the other races of Europe gives her a peculiar direct interest in the old world and a better outlook on its affairs. In fact, Canada adds to her position as a Dominion much of the prestige which the United States enjoys as the home of millions of emigrants from Europe."

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weakness. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. Worthline, 2842 North Taylor street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

INFLAMED GUMS—A CAUSE OF LOOSE TEETH

Pyorrhoea is undoubtedly a vital danger to both gums and teeth. Tender gums indicate it, and with it come loosening teeth. Imperceptibly, at first, the gums recede from the normal gum line. They inflame. They present many tiny openings for millions of bacteria to attack the unmineralized tooth base. Tooth-base decay quickly follows. Even if the cavity be filled and the tooth saved, the gums continue to recede. Remember, too, that inflamed and bleeding gums act as so many doorways for disease germs to enter the system—infecting joints or tonsils—or causing other ailments.

Against this Pyorrhoea (Giggs' Disease) ordinary tooth-pastes are powerless. Yet Pyorrhoea attacks four out of five people who are over forty, and many under this age. But Forhan's—if used in time and used consistently—positively prevents Pyorrhoea. It is a scientific tooth cleanser as well. Brush your teeth with it. See how promptly bleeding or gum tenderness ceases and how your teeth are kept white and clean.

If gum-shrinkage has already set in, start using Forhan's and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment.

Few drops stop corns hurting then they lift right out with fingers

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on the bottoms of your feet, but why care now? This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A scientist in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it Frezzone. Small bottles of Frezzone can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Apply a few drops on your tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you can lift it off with the fingers.

Just think you get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses, without suffering one particle. Millions of women keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let corns ache twice.

Increasing Scarcity of Food Supplies and Ice is Evident.

TORONTO, May 18.—Troops are being held here for Winnipeg. The garrison regiment is under orders to proceed west at a moment's notice, and labor men, when they learned of the fact, declared that use of troops should be strictly avoided. It was decided to use them in Toronto during the packing house strike, which was one of the most orderly strikes in years in spite of the keen feeling which existed.

Winnipeg, May 18.—Winnipeg observed Sunday in a normal manner today. The city was quiet and orderly, and the only outward evidence of the general labor strike which has paralyzed industry, communication and municipal activities, was increasing scarcity of food supplies and ice. No parades were held today in commemoration of Decoration day.

Reports were current Saturday night that the Winnipeg locals of the three great railway brotherhoods were considering the advisability of joining the strikers. It is understood that the stockyard employees would walk out on Monday.

The strike of the commercial telegraphers at noon was the feature of the day's developments.

Headquarters reported only minor disturbances.

Senator Robertson, minister of labor at Ottawa, today telegraphed to Mayor Charles Gray that it would be impossible for him to come to Winnipeg at this time in connection with the strike. He declared that industrial conditions in other sections of the country demanded his attention.

BIG STEEL PLANT

(Special to The Advertiser.)

TORONTO, May 17.—J. J. Mahon of Newark, was in the city yesterday and confirmed the dispatch from Goderich with regard to the new steel company to locate there. The property acquired is ideally situated with respect to the G. T. R., C. P. R. and lake shipping, the industrial site of 150 acres lying parallel to the lake.

"The finest electric steel plant in America will be constructed, and Canada will have an industry that will be of national benefit," said Mr. Mahon. All the high grade steel now imported for use in automobiles, tractors, trucks, steel bars, will now be made in Canada, and the product can be produced here at much less cost than the present prices.

"There is a growing demand for this class of steel that was bound to interest American manufacturers, and the company is merely a natural outcome of an abnormal situation. The coming of Canada of so many American automobile companies merely means that the steel would still have to be imported, and this new venture has, therefore, a big field."

Two or three United States companies are already looking over the ground with a view to linking up beside the steel plant, and operations will commence as soon as possible.

Mr. Mahon was the chief inspector of the imperial munitions board, and made a reputation in Canada supervising the shell output for the board.

Proposal For Conference in August Is Supported
By All.

CALLED BY LEADER

Provincial Premiers and Representatives in Session
At Ottawa.

(Special to The Advertiser.)

OTTAWA, May 18.—Provincial premiers and representatives gathered in conference with federal Liberals here yesterday, enthusiastically endorsing the proposal for the holding next August of a national Liberal convention. Saturday's gathering was a most hearty and generous response to the call of D. D. McKenzie, temporary leader of the Opposition. It was a gathering at which every province in the Dominion was represented, with the exception of Manitoba, where the provincial leaders at the present time are endeavoring to come with the greatest strike in the Dominion's history.

There was nothing sectional about the conference, it was national in character and scope. Tomorrow morning Premier Martin of Saskatchewan will be in attendance at the conference, as will also Premier Foster of New Brunswick, who reached the capital this afternoon.

Gouin Stands Pat.

Notable among the gathering was Sir Lomer Gouin, who attended the morning conference and heartily endorsed the idea of a national Liberal convention. In spite of attempts which have been made in the past few months of alienate the support of Sir Lomer from the Liberal party by offering him a position in the Union Cabinet, the Quebec premier declared that he was as strong a Liberal as he had ever been, and intimated that he was as anxious for the success of the party at the next election as he had been for any past Liberal victory.

William Proudfoot, K. C., Opposition leader of Ontario, referred to the fact that the local opposition in that province had prepared for the holding of a convention in June and declared that after this organization was completed he would be ready to lend his support toward the wider project in August.

Always a Liberal.

Senator King of New Brunswick, informed the gathering that, as a member of the House of Commons 40 years ago, he had voted against the national policy of the Conservatives and was prepared to do so again.

The preliminary gathering augers well for the success and unanimity of the big meeting which is to be held in August. Opposite members here are highly satisfied with the results so far.

Couldn't Drink Coffee Without Spilling It From Cup—Like New Man After Taking Tanlac.

"I feel like a different man altogether since I have been taking Tanlac," said John Maleshey, a well-known railroad man, who lives at 800 Lydia avenue, Kansas City, Mo., the other day.

"I have been trying for the last twenty years to get rid of indigestion and sour stomach," he continued, "and I failed utterly until I got hold of Tanlac. This trouble had about gotten the best of me, too, for I was so weak and run-down that I could walk hardly any distance without stopping once in a while to rest. Everything I ate disagreed with me and caused gas to form on my stomach. I also suffered a great deal from nervousness, which finally got so bad that I couldn't drink a glass of water or a cup of coffee without spilling some of it. I never slept very well, and even the sound of the street cars passing at night would upset me and keep me awake. To tell you the honest truth, I was beginning to be a burden to me."

"I knew a lot of people who had been benefited by taking Tanlac, so I thought I would try it myself. I just want to say right here that of all the medicine I have taken for the last twenty years, Tanlac beats them all. I have taken four bottles so far, and I don't know what it is to have indigestion or sour stomach now, or to be bothered with gas on my stomach after eating. My nerves are as steady as they ever were, and never bother me the least bit, and I sleep eight or nine hours every night, and don't wake up once. Why, I can get out and walk forty or fifty blocks now and it doesn't tire me any more than walking one block before I took Tanlac, as a matter of fact, Tanlac has made a new man of me, and I am more than glad to recommend it to everybody."

Tanlac is sold in London by Standard Drug, Limited, and by an established agency in every town.

A Fourteen-Year Drive to Build This Tire

Fourteen years ago scientists and engineers commenced the work which provides a better tire for your car to-day.

A tire which, through sheer quality of design, material and workmanship does four very important things for you.

- 1.—Renders such unusual mileage as to materially lower your year's tire-bill.
- 2.—Saves on gasoline and car depreciation greatly.
- 3.—Adds a new and almost unbelievable comfort to the riding of any car.
- 4.—Is ultimate in appearance.

The Goodyear Cord Tire, strong with the strength of thousands of rubber-cushioned cords, is a luxury tire in performance which yet goes so far as to cost less in the end.

It is the logical outcome of the Goodyear policy of ever striding towards lower motoring cost. No tire built with an eye to the present price can ever compete with it in value.

The Goodyear Service Station near you can supply your needs—and can serve you, too, by advising the Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tube, a better, thicker tube which justifies its price by longer service and greater tire mileage.

THE UPHILL BATTLE OF CATHOLIC CHURCH AGAINST ENEMIES

Paulist Priest Deals With Its Long History.

CATHEDRAL IS PACKED

Father Gillis Says Catholicism is One Discerning Phenomenon in History.

The Catholic Church is the most venerable and magnificent of all living institutions, and to those who can see in her only a human society, created by human genius, governed and controlled by human wisdom, the church is the most extraordinary and inexplicable fact in the history of the world," said Father Gillis, New York, at St. Peter's Cathedral last night.

The history of nations and of people and of societies generally, as they pelted, social or religious, follows certain laws or sciences—the law of gravitation or the law of conservation of energy—the first and most striking law of history is the law of rise and fall, of progress and decline. A nation mounts slowly, painfully, to the summit of its power, losing its foothold, tumbles from its dizzy pinnacle, struggles for a moment—a moment as history reckons it, and is hurled to the ground. The marvelous political organism ever erected was the Roman Empire; it took eight centuries to build it up—its pre-eminence position as undisputed mistress of the known world was held for perhaps two centuries, and it hurried to its doom in three centuries more. And as with Rome, so with the world, for all the world's a stage, and nations, like individuals, are only actors on that stage; have their triumphs and their exits, play their parts and go their way.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

RETURNED SOLDIERS' JOBS.

What's the matter with London? When the war was on and we wanted jobs for the front, we told the boys their jobs would be held for them. Returned boys are tramping our streets today—boys whose boots we non-fighters and dockers never fit black—and what do they get when they go for their old jobs back? It is altogether too frequently filled by a girl or a "quickly-retained" draftee or some white-livered slacker who was afraid to what they did—right for those left behind.

ACCOMMODATION FOR SOLDIERS.

I desire a few lines of your valuable space to enter my protest against the lack of accommodation provided for soldiers and their dependents who return from overseas to London. It is scanty, and on Sunday morning, May 4, four soldiers and their wives, several small children and a number of single women, arrived in London. No one was present to meet the train until S. A. women. No place was provided for their men, except that they might obtain a meal at the S. A. Military Hotel. Most of Sunday was spent trying to secure accommodation for night, but had no money. Five hotels and a dozen rooming-houses turned us down, although I had reason to know that the hotels had rooms, but did not want a soldier. We would certainly have had no place to "drop." I think it would be advisable to display fewer banners and make less demonstration when relatives come home, and give "stragglers" a little more attention. Soldiers' wives who make their first visit to Canada ought not to be separated from their husbands on route to their destination. Thanking you for your space, I am, CORP. WM. ASHFIELD, (14th Battalion, originally 24th).

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

During the French revolution, which was the most awful upheaval of society that has been known in modern times, when religion was banished from Paris, and declared outlaw in France; when in the place of the Eucharistic God, there came a vile woman, enthroned upon the altar of the historic church of Notre Dame; when the blood of citizens ran freely in the streets, and the guillotine was never at rest; when no man knew for an hour that his life was his own; when all the foundations of political and civil and religious society were top-sy-turvy, it was asked of a certain citizen of Paris what vicious act he had done in the days of the reign of terror, what claim he had to be numbered among the heroes of the great crisis. "What have I done," he said—"what is my claim to heroism—simply this—I have survived!" "Truly, my friends, it would be glory enough for the church to say at the close of the nineteenth century, that she has known so much of revolution and of blood, so many upheavals of nations, so many collapses of a laboriously constructed civilization, it would be glory enough for her to say, 'I have survived.'"

FACE D MAN ATTACKS.

"But there is a glory added to this; she has not been a mere spectator of passing history. She has been a part, a living, breathing part of all that she has known and seen. It is not passive existence that is her glory, but active, and continued and successful resistance to the powers that have tried so often to send her headlong to a bloody death.

THE REVOLUTIONS HAVE BEEN AGAINST HER.

The outpouring blood has been the blood of her children and her own; the upheavals of society have been planned in the hope of destroying her foundations. The thousands of times she has been proscribed, and a price set upon her head. She has never known a quiet hour, a quiet hour of peace, but she has experienced eternal war, and she has been concerned in the most critical epochs of which that human history has to tell.

1,600 OLD 18TH BATT. MEN WILL WELCOME UNIT

Big Celebration and Reception Expected To Take Place Saturday.

The 18th Battalion committee, together with representatives of the civic reception committee and of the local head-quarters staff, will meet at the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening and conduct a final review of the plans which have been made for a colorful reception to the 18th Battalion on its arrival here, which will probably be either on Friday or Saturday next, most likely Saturday. The committee found the arrangements good, and decided that no material amendments were necessary.

The announcement was made and emphasized that the celebration, in addition to being in the nature of a reception to the battalion, would also be a grand reunion of all present and former members of the 18th. Indications were that about 1,600 "originals" and an equal number of men who had been transferred to the 18th from other units after arriving overseas would be on hand to welcome the men coming in, making a total of about sixteen hundred representatives of the unit, including those who are returning with it.

Many of those who will come to the city for the occasion are expected to bring their wives and families. Several of the contingents also, including those from Windsor and Stratford, will be accompanied by their own bands, so that the "doings" on the occasion of the battalion's arrival here promises to eclipse any previous event in the city of this kind, not excepting the celebration of the signing of the peace.

KEEP AUTOS OFF.

Richmond street was made that the parade should be held between the station and Dundas street, and on Dundas from Richmond to Coburn, no automobiles should be allowed during the parade and another suggestion was that the part of Dundas street between Wellington and Waterloo should be reserved for the children of the city. These proposals were heartily endorsed by E. E. Harley, chairman of the civic reception committee, and in all probability will be carried out.

A massed band, composed of all the city bands and that of the G. O. R. W. Slatter, will head the procession from the station to the district depot at Carling Heights, and many other bands are expected to take part in the march. The ex-members of the battalion will join their original companies in the procession if the present officer commanding is agreeable. Ex-18th men who are disabled will be provided with automobiles. Gordon Phillips, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, notified the committee that he would hold himself responsible for the necessary number of cars were available.

MEET AT SCHOOL.

Before the arrival of the train, all those who are to take part in the parade will be assembled at Princess Avenue School Barracks, and from there will march to York street, opposite the Grand Trunk station, where the procession will be formed up under the supervision of members of the headquarters staff.

As previously announced, the parade at Carling Heights will be followed, at about 6:30 o'clock, by a banquet in the armories, where addresses of welcome will be tendered on behalf of the city and the various organizations particularly interested in returned soldier activities. These formalities are expected to last until about 10 o'clock, after which a torchlight procession will be held through the principal streets, and the celebration will end with a theatre party to the Majestic Theatre, which has been booked for the occasion, and where artists and artists taking part in the Grand Opera House program and local talent will co-operate.

In addition to the usual decorations along the streets, the city will be copiously placarded with large cards, several thousands of which are to be distributed for display in the windows of merchants and others, bearing along the top and bottom the words, "Good Old 18th," and in the centre the battalion's divisional colors and the C. I. of the brigade.

So far as could be ascertained, no detail had been overlooked which could have added to the prospect of making the celebration an historic one, and if the occasion is not talked about in London and throughout Western Ontario for a great many years to come, it will not be because the committee which has been responsible for preparing a program overlooked any opportunities for making the occasion an epochal event.

A. on Saturday evening and conduct a final review of the plans which have been made for a colorful reception to the 18th Battalion on its arrival here, which will probably be either on Friday or Saturday next, most likely Saturday. The committee found the arrangements good, and decided that no material amendments were necessary.

The announcement was made and emphasized that the celebration, in addition to being in the nature of a reception to the battalion, would also be a grand reunion of all present and former members of the 18th. Indications were that about 1,600 "originals" and an equal number of men who had been transferred to the 18th from other units after arriving overseas would be on hand to welcome the men coming in, making a total of about sixteen hundred representatives of the unit, including those who are returning with it.

Many of those who will come to the city for the occasion are expected to bring their wives and families. Several of the contingents also, including those from Windsor and Stratford, will be accompanied by their own bands, so that the "doings" on the occasion of the battalion's arrival here promises to eclipse any previous event in the city of this kind, not excepting the celebration of the signing of the peace.

KEEP AUTOS OFF.

Richmond street was made that the parade should be held between the station and Dundas street, and on Dundas from Richmond to Coburn, no automobiles should be allowed during the parade and another suggestion was that the part of Dundas street between Wellington and Waterloo should be reserved for the children of the city. These proposals were heartily endorsed by E. E. Harley, chairman of the civic reception committee, and in all probability will be carried out.

A MASSES BAND.

A massed band, composed of all the city bands and that of the G. O. R. W. Slatter, will head the procession from the station to the district depot at Carling Heights, and many other bands are expected to take part in the march. The ex-members of the battalion will join their original companies in the procession if the present officer commanding is agreeable. Ex-18th men who are disabled will be provided with automobiles. Gordon Phillips, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, notified the committee that he would hold himself responsible for the necessary number of cars were available.

MEET AT SCHOOL.

Before the arrival of the train, all those who are to take part in the parade will be assembled at Princess Avenue School Barracks, and from there will march to York street, opposite the Grand Trunk station, where the procession will be formed up under the supervision of members of the headquarters staff.

As previously announced, the parade at Carling Heights will be followed, at about 6:30 o'clock, by a banquet in the armories, where addresses of welcome will be tendered on behalf of the city and the various organizations particularly interested in returned soldier activities. These formalities are expected to last until about 10 o'clock, after which a torchlight procession will be held through the principal streets, and the celebration will end with a theatre party to the Majestic Theatre, which has been booked for the occasion, and where artists and artists taking part in the Grand Opera House program and local talent will co-operate.

In addition to the usual decorations along the streets, the city will be copiously placarded with large cards, several thousands of which are to be distributed for display in the windows of merchants and others, bearing along the top and bottom the words, "Good Old 18th," and in the centre the battalion's divisional colors and the C. I. of the brigade.

So far as could be ascertained, no detail had been overlooked which could have added to the prospect of making the celebration an historic one, and if the occasion is not talked about in London and throughout Western Ontario for a great many years to come, it will not be because the committee which has been responsible for preparing a program overlooked any opportunities for making the occasion an epochal event.

Cheap Tubes Are an Extravagance. The cost of a tube is not measured by its price or life alone. It is the assistance it gives the tire to render greater mileage that counts. Suppose you purchase a cheap tube for a few dollars less than the price of a good one. Then you put this tube into a high-priced casing—and lose thousands of miles of service. A tube which fails to hold air properly is the most expensive tube in the world. The air escapes slowly but surely, lowering the pressure and deflating the tire. The best casing made cannot stand such treatment. Under-inflation quickly ruins any tire. Goodyear Tubes are built up of many thin sheets of fine flawless rubber—with the valve patch vulcanized in. It costs more to make this tube. It costs you more. But it costs less in the end because it goes farther—it helps the tire go farther. Particularly remember—the larger your casing, the more important it is that the tube should serve you well. For with a large and costly casing you have much more to lose should the tube fail you. For greater service, Goodyear produced the Heavy Tourist Tube—extra thick and extra good—a tube which will more than earn its extra cost in long life and assistance to the tire. When you buy tubes, say "Goodyear"—distinctly. And if you buy the Heavy Tourist, see that you get the handy waterproof bag it comes in. Box, bag and tube are stamped "Heavy Tourist." What Does He Think as He Comes Into Canada?

A reader of a recent editorial regarding the positive influences of daily contact that were factors in shaping the destiny of Canada asked the question of the writer "What should Canada become?" Such a question involves so much that its baffling ramifications had to be dismissed, and the answer given in as many words as the inquiry, "Canada should be Canada!"

The Englishman or Irishman or Scotsman who lands at Halifax from incoming ocean liner may have surveyed his future land with mixed feelings. There were some no doubt who came with the feeling that they already possessed this country. There were others who had already realized that if this new country was not made, it was in the making; it had its own laws, it handled its own affairs without paternal attention or interference, it spent most of its time in driving ahead to attain prosperity as all other countries have done, and it was touched but little by any influences save internal influences and the influences of close environment. In many ways the country was no more affected by the people of European lands than by the people who live in South America. The old countryman, according to his advance understanding of this country, came here to become a Canadian or to remain an old countryman. He was going to think as Canadians thought as much as that was possible, or he was going to think as an old countryman and endeavor to make Canadians think the same way. In either case he found the challenge to adapt himself or to be considered a man apart. In either case he may have met with a good deal of intolerance, that in the rush of development and striving to build gave little consideration to the newcomer. He quickly found, in any event, that the average Canadian had his own conceptions of the system by which this country must advance. No matter what his party, that voter was a lone unit who went in very strongly on class distinction and titles. The installation of a governor-general at Ottawa was a social event for a few and a cause of grumbling among the many, who while no less loyal to British connection considered that Canada had no place for symbolic rulership, and were wholly devoted to the patriotism of the ideal democracy.

The old countryman may have made a quick decision one way or the other. In the one case, he did not profess to like the country from the moment he arrived. He nagged about it; in the other case he said "This is the country I have chosen. I have become a Canadian. I have given up something to become a Canadian. Perhaps I am as good if not a better Canadian than many of those born here." He threw himself into the task that was afforded him, and he took an interest in Canadian institutions. He realized that no matter what his views or his fixed ideas, his children, both the born and the unborn, were certain to become Canadians. They would attend Canadian schools, mingle with Canadian children, read Canadian history (and very little other history) and come in contact with a teaching profession that was a free democracy in itself, less influenced, perhaps, by bigotry or partisanship than any other class in the community, and wholly devoted to the shaping of little models into great citizens. So he worked for those children, for whose sake he had made the great journey.

His type of newcomer brings more of British influence to Canada than anything else. He has come by the thousands. He is the best stock that has been developed, if for no other than breeding purposes. He is necessary to the country if the country is to advance, and the more quickly and the more sympathetically he gets the Canadian understanding of his new homeland the better it will be for him and for his children and for Canada. He will have a large part in shaping its future. The door will always remain open to him, and to his brothers. The "Welcome" sign on the mat may be covered over by the rush of hurrying feet, but it is there, just the same, and it will remain, graven in solid stone, and never obliterated if it may be obscured.

The influence of this newcomer from the old country is going to be the strongest influence toward maintaining British connection for Canada. And it may become as the deeper understanding of the most democratic form of empire sinks into the heart of the British-born that he will have a tremendous power in making Canada more Canadian, in not endeavoring to make it more English in its outlook, nor insisting upon too much of the guidance by the parent of the new home in the western world, nor in succumbing to the glitter of the American blaze of glory, but in striving with all his might to make of this country a distinctive entity, with a high and mighty vision of itself and a harnessed-up unity of effort that will roll over prejudices and make all who are Canadian believe that word in itself is a sufficient identification in the eyes of all men.

The observant old countryman may see too much of the spirit of dependence expressed in this country. He may see the desire to be spoon-fed manifest in many ways. We are intensely protective in some areas and intensely free trade in other areas. We are also gloating over the fact that we are to be given a preference within the empire. He realizes that the people of a growing country need all they can get, but may get too much for their own good. He may conceive a country that will be more for standing on its own feet, less given to asking the bonus or the remittance from the parental store, and at the same time be a greater country within the British Empire by reason of its fearless and unselfish determination to conduct its own business, with favors neither given nor asked, but a four-square bargain for all. In the degree of its dependence upon either the motherland or the United States will it be small; in the degree of its independence of favors from any quarter will it be great. We may succumb to one influence and revert again to the status of a colonial possession; we may succumb to the other and be gobbled up and lost to a national identity. We may remain in the vast partnership of nations vested in the British Empire and grow with no bonds severed to the stature of the stalwart firstborn who has won his way to fame and true destiny; we may continue the friendly relations with our closest neighbor and equal his success upon our own policy of conducting our affairs.

But if we are to become great as Canada, while accepting the logical opportunities of service and growth, we must look more to Canada, give more to Canada, build for Canada and spur the people of Canada to self support and independent action, whether in the building of ships or the invention of new agricultural machinery. We have been known for many things it is true, but we often have gazed over the fence while others developed our richest possessions; we have sent hundreds of thousands of our people to another country while telling the world ours was the best. We have never got at the task of finding out what Canadianism means and what has to be done to achieve real nationhood. And the newcomers must devote themselves with the native-born to the problems under our eyes if the future is to say that the work was worthy done.

The Return From Siberia

The Canadian boys who returned from Siberia did not get many decorations. They went over there expecting to fight and expecting some fighting that was described as "nasty," but they did not function. They had, for the most part, a dreary time of it, and the non-interference policy eventually reached a decision to withdraw the whole force. While the Canadians waited for action, Premier Borden was proposing a conference with the Bolshevik leaders that did not come to anything.

The experience in Vladivostok had little benefit for Canada, and with the signing of the armistice the sentiment of the people was for the withdrawal of the force. It was not a pleasant experience for those who went over, no one went into raptures over life in Siberia, and they are mighty glad to be home, and anxious to get out of their mackinaw coats.

Everyone is glad to see the members of this force returning without casualties. At the same time the disappointment felt by the men is apparent to anyone who comes in contact with them. They are recognized as having played their part, even if it was a rather listless part, in an expedition that certainly was of no moment to Canada, either from the standpoint of setting the world in order or trade expansion. In common with the Americans the Canadian Siberian force is glad to be back where the gloom is not so chunky, to say the least.

As to Drives and Tag Days

From many Canadian cities comes the word that recent efforts in the form of "drives" to secure funds for the furthering of charitable or patriotic work have been marked by failure. While the war progressed the people were willing to give and to sacrifice for every worthy cause; at present they are inclined to ask for a rest before "shelling out" once again by the same methods as became general before the armistice was signed. It was not that people denied the worthiness of the cause for which money was asked, but that the renewal of the financial pressure was not in keeping with the general relaxation.

And it will be well if "drives" and tag days are suspended for a period sufficiently long to permit the public to get the need of the next contribution securely fixed in its mind. It will not be well for great campaigns to be launched for some time to come, or they will be doomed to failure, but once the people have recovered their breath, financially, they will be glad to donate generously toward the cause that aids the suffering or builds the community. Demands on the public purse came thick and fast during the war. Few, if any, failed of their objective while the need of war comforts and relief was present. But with the end of fighting came the word that most of the suffering nations were provided for, that the soldiers needed no more of the usual supplies, and that some of the funds, the patriotic fund, for instance, had large surpluses. It was then that the average man felt that he might devote his surplus cash to some reconstruction of his own, and while wages were high for many people during the war and money was spent freely, there was retrenchment in such matters as the repairing of houses, and the improvement of holdings. It is not that the public has become niggardly. It is to be hoped that the fine spirit of community giving will not be lost. But for a time at least, it would be folly to launch any big campaigns for funds. The people want a few months to catch up.

The west looks to the Mounted Police when in trouble and Winnipeg will be a safer place for their presence.

The mayor of Winnipeg has asked that the minister of labor be sent to the western metropolis at once. But departmental duties seem extremely onerous just now.

After the stunts performed by an aviator over London yesterday, one wonders what the growing generation is going to do without the aerial velocipede.

Winnipeg union waiters will only serve union men who ask for something to eat in restaurants. It might be well to have the nationality of those waiters made public.

An American aviator has accomplished the "long leg" of the Atlantic flight, and it was a pretty piece of work. The Australian and British contestants will attempt one long flight of 2,500 miles, however. They have greater reason for a cautious start.

DIVORCE, CURED.
By John Gregg.

If ever any woman had cause for a divorce it was Edith—that is how Edith thought. Her husband, almost from those neglectful days, almost from those honeymoon. And quarrel! Well, it was almost more than she could stand. Everything she said he disagreed with. Everything he said she disagreed with, although she did not like his relatives, and he hated hers. His sister Arsenne had been the second summer of their marriage miserable for Edith, and now Tom had a perfect right to put up with her brother Gerald. Gerald was a good sort, and was a much better brother than Tom's sister-in-law. The last straw came when Tom had refused utterly to publish one of Gerald's stories. Tom was head of a publishing house and could have easily marketed one of Gerald's many literary endeavors, and Edith was quite sure he would have done so had Gerald had any one save her brother. Their quarrel had been long and heated one and that night Edith had cried herself to sleep. In the morning she came almost ready to forgive, but the first sound that greeted her when she awoke was Tom's voice come back into her room. "Tom was lecturing Gerald scathingly. 'You won't be publishing that story until 2 o'clock in the morning, my house,' Tom was saying. 'It would be a matter of your credit as a young man, if you got out any real work—something that would do some good in the world.' At this point Edith blustered in. 'Few women are beautiful when angry and Edith isn't included in that class. It was terrible, that is all we can say, and we might add that Gerald was the only man who ever and had never been credited. He retreated to his room, leaving Edith blustering and Tom gasping in an endeavor to find some rejoinder to her biting words. When Gerald came down stairs, two hours later, Edith was still crying. 'It's all ended,' she sobbed on Gerald's shoulder. 'Tom has telephoned for his lawyer and has a divorce on his mind. They will be here in an evening.' Edith was in an even-tempered mood in the library waiting for the arrival of the lawyer, but her husband, although they were not to be there until 3 p.m., was going to be there and she was fighting hard to keep back the tears, and as she sat there with just the faintest tears glistening in her eyes she looked like a pretty little disobedient child trying to stick to it that she had not been naughty at all. She tried to brighten up when Gerald entered. 'Read this, Sis, it's my latest story,' he said, handing her a manuscript. It was just like Gerald to give her something to read when he was off her trouble, she reflected, as she tried to open the pages. If Tom had only been more like him!

Divorced! Edith was free. In her hands were the papers that gave her marriage certificate. Somehow the feeling of freedom that she had expected did not come over her. It seemed odd to see Tom's halting a taxi and not offering his arm to assist her in getting over and into the taxi alone, perhaps she would never see him again, she had not kissed her good-bye. Of course, he had not. He did not have the right to now. It felt funny to be giving a taxi for herself and the ride home felt horribly lonely.

How wearisome the house was, and how quiet! The servants had all gone away for the day. There was the large portrait of Tom that had stood in the corner in the library? Of course, he had taken that away. Her eyes strayed to the ash tray. Who had given order for those changes? Why Tom, of course. He was always meddling in little things, for no one knew as he did what pleased her most.

The flowers were violets, too, her favorites. In the excitement she had not noticed that it was good of Tom to remember them. How could he forget them—how could either of them forget them? Was it not in a wood purple with violets where they had met? Were they not violets he brought with the ring that sealed their engagement, and had not her wedding bouquet been most of violets? How beautiful had been the violets seemed then! What a wonderful life it had been! What a wonderful lover had Tom been! What a wonderful husband had he started out to be! Why had he changed? The question started Edith. She thought that perhaps she had been to blame for the whole thing came to her for the first time.

In a lonely apartment in a large hotel, sitting before a fireplace that had not been lit, sat Tom, the loneliest man in creation. The day he had lost his dearest possession, the most wonderful little wife in the world, and he had just realized that the whole thing had been his fault.

He had crossed Edith in her every path, when, just as she had crossed him in his, though he should have overlooked that. They had expected too much of one another. To make life happy one must give in to one's life mate, but neither Edith or Tom had planned to do such things. They even small points. It was a wonder they had not been divorced before.

What other woman would have put up with him as Edith had done? thought Tom in his lonely apartment. And what other man would have put up with her as Tom had done? thought Edith in the library of the lonely home that was hers by law but belonged to Tom by rights. They had been ideally suited to one another had they only been happy in their tastes, their ambitions, their ideals were the same, so why had they not been happy? thus they both thought. Gone was everything, the ambitions, the ideals, the little children they had dreamed of, and the happy old age they had planned to have together. The hopes of a young lifetime shattered by a divorce. There was no turning back. Divorced couples are only re-married in stories and moving pictures. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lester were no more. Mrs. Edith Lester and Mr. Thomas Lester survived. The rest of her life would be spent in dreaming of the love and happiness she had cast aside, and his would be spent in lamenting the wife and children that had been denied him.

Oh, Tom, Tom, forgive me. It has all been my fault, Edith jumped to her feet and threw her brother's manuscript to the floor, tottered and almost fell. Tom was right behind her and caught her in his arms. 'It isn't true, dear, you are still mine,' he cried as he kissed her forehead and again. 'The lawyers haven't come yet, let's start all over again.' Gerald's story seemed so real, she sobbed.

"Too real," he laughed, with an effort to shake off the feeling of depression that had crept over him. "He led me in here to read it over your shoulder. 'He's a clever kid, I think I'll give him that chance he wants in our fiction department.' 'You darling,' Edith smothered further promises with kisses.

We hope profoundly that the fact that Cardinal Mercier of Belgium is to visit the United States. His will be such a welcome as a writing potentate ever had, or any other man of distinction. His reception will be that of a lofty and noble soul, whose sainthood has been established on earth.

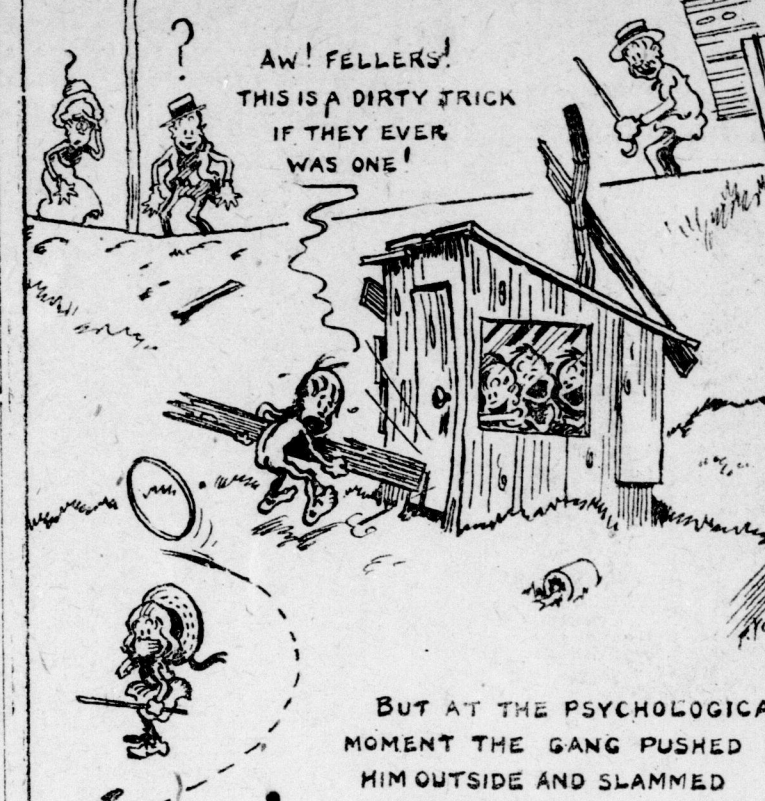

WHAT WE REMEMBER.
He died the other day; they said he didn't leave a cent; they said he was worth his salt. They said he didn't leave his wife enough to pay the rent; he hadn't an insurance nor a car nor house nor ring. He didn't own a decent suit nor any single thing. That's counted as a sign with us that he was worth his salt. And yet I'm just thinkin' as we add up his last fault. And say that he was worthless as we place him on the skirts. That he always carried candy in his pocket for the kids. W. J. L.

NEW USE FOR "UNWRITTEN LAW."
[Memphis Commercial-Appeal.]
The unwritten law has come to strange uses. Once it was invoked when a man killed another because his home was violated or because he was slandering to a point where, if he did not resent, he could not hold up his head in a community. The unwritten law has always been invoked to acquit. Now we are to try the Kaiser according to the unwritten law. There is no precedent, but the Kaiser will be tried and convicted under an ex-tort facta law, and then, under the same unwritten law, will probably be pardoned or sent away to an island or confined within certain limits. The trial will serve one purpose. It will create a precedent, and all lawyers, national and international, must have precedents. The Kaiser will be carried out he will not be degrading, or confined within certain limits. The next time some war lord starts out to whip the rest of the world he will fall the rest of the world he will fall because he knows that if he fails he will be tried, convicted and hanged. The crown prince and future world conquerors will then all be on notice.

AN ECHO OF THE SUPER-GUN.

The Hun 75-mile gun with which

THE GANG PLAY A TRICK

By FONTAINE FOX (Copyright.)

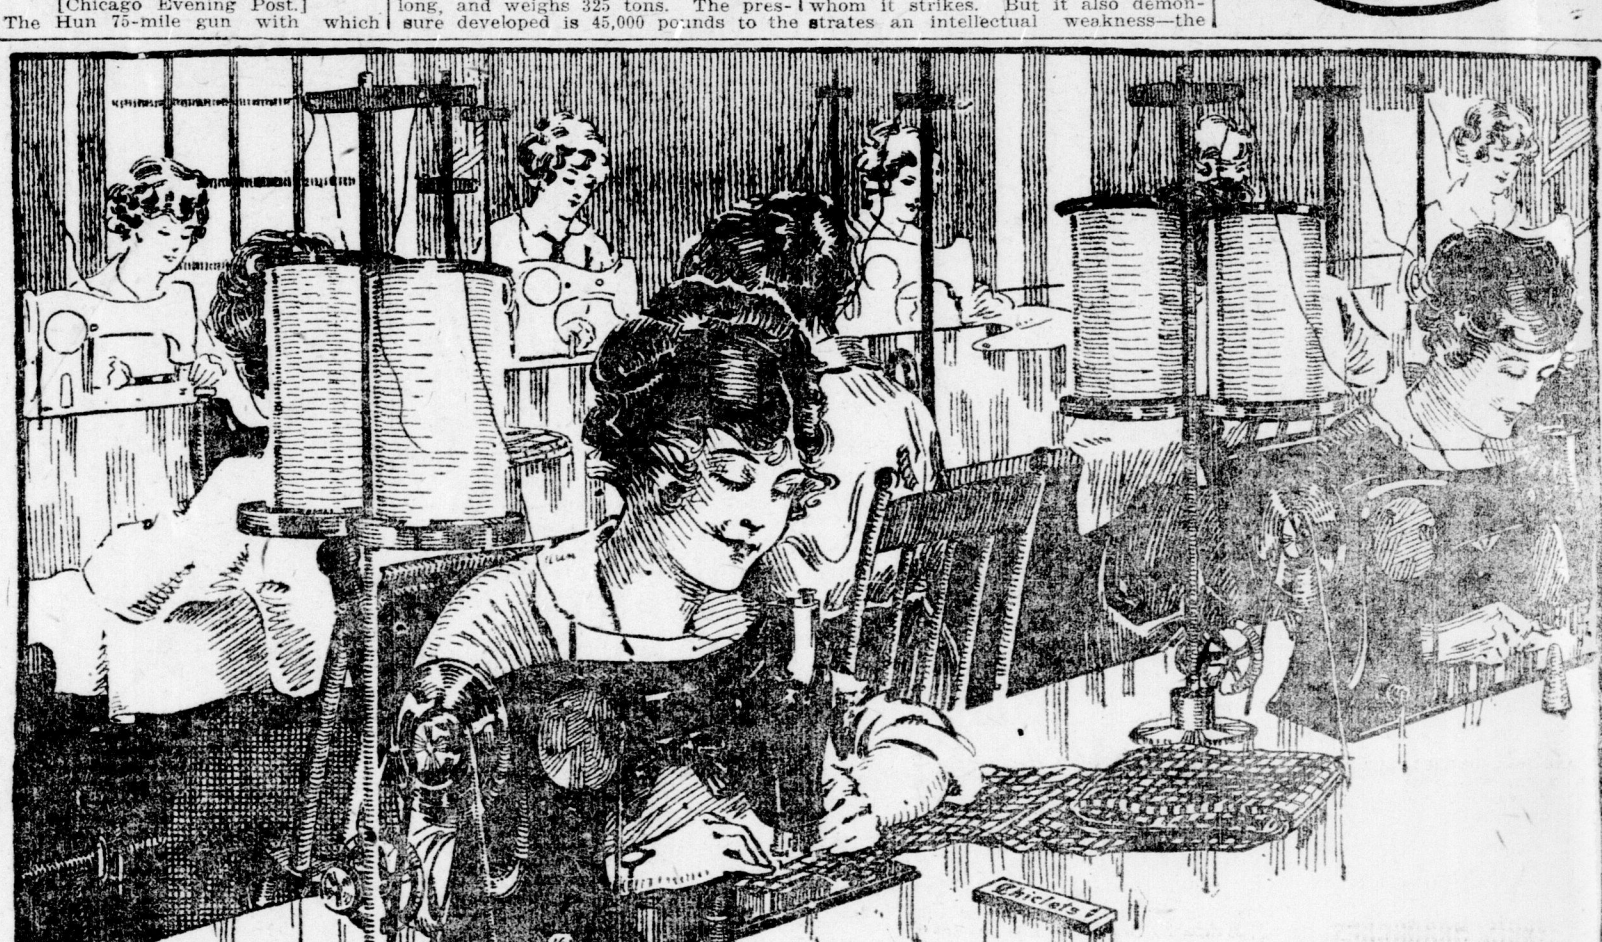

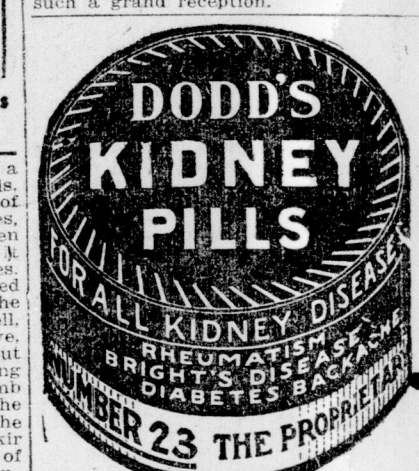

Tommy went over to the "club house" to take off that hot underwear his mother wouldn't let him take off at home.

Paris was harassed is doubtless still regarded by many as evidence of the much-advertised German mechanical superiority. Ordnance experts have long been aware of the possibility of such a gun. But they have also been aware of its impracticability owing to a lack of means of controlling its fire effectively, except in such dastardly work as shelling a great city regardless of whom or what was hit. As an object lesson our ordnance department has designed, without actually building, a super-gun which dwarfs the German machine into insignificance. The data, recently made public through the Scientific American, fairly bewitches the lay mind. The barrel of the gun is 225 feet long, and weighs 325 tons. The projectile developed is 45,000 pounds to the square inch. The projectile has a muzzle velocity of 5,500 feet-per-second, and develops the terrific energy of 200,000 foot-tons. Its range is 121 miles, approximately the distance between Chicago and Madison, Wis., and it soars heavenward a height of 48 miles. This is awesome, but the cold-blooded expert points out that, after all, the gun delivers only a 400-pound shell, containing 60 pounds of high explosive, and that such a gun would cost about $2,500,000. A bombing plane costing $30,000 would drop a 1,000-pound bomb with greater accuracy of aim. The German super-gun demonstrates the savagery of the Hun—the barbaric madness that strikes regardless of whom it strikes. But it also demonstrates an intellectual weakness—the love of mechanism for mechanism's sake. A complicated or difficult piece of machinery captivates his admiration because it is complicated or difficult, regardless of its practicability. With American genius, simplicity is the desideratum. The mechanism, for instance, of the Browning automatic, whether pistol, rifle or machine gun, is astonishingly simple and practically demountable by the fingers alone. One looks at it and wonders why it wasn't invented half a century since. And right there one unconsciously pays genius a high tribute.

CONSOLATION.
Once I was the catchweights kid and rode the bags of peas; So light my seat on Pease's back we always romped home easy. I carried weight to check the flight of feet tipped deft with wings, But now I'm fat and can't bring home Peg first in sport of kings. In other words, I fear that I'm a poet. It takes a Clyde to carry me, and then it's quite a feat. And yet we trundle on our road, and if our song's not gay, And if my verse is corrupt, it seems to buy the hay. W. J. L.

Writes About "The Wrong Kind of Love."

Have you been reading the news from Seattle lately? There's all sorts of news from Seattle—things seem to happen up there, good things and bad things, new things and old things, clever things and stupid things. Men come stories of solid strikes up in Alaska in there now and again with strange tales of Indian antics and Eskimo drift in. But this time the story is about a girl and not in any way remarkable to look at—but everybody's looking at her just now.

She fell in love, did this girl—oh, dear!—madly, passionately, in love! She didn't care whether she lived or whether she died, she couldn't eat and she couldn't sleep, and she wouldn't work. All she wanted was to see the man she liked and have him tell her that he loved her, not once but a hundred times every day.

Why should she think? She was in love and that was enough for her. It was lovely to be in love, the moon was brighter, the sunshine clearer, and the little roadways were sweeter—they make a specialty of roses in Seattle—and, oh, everything was too and too sweet, and too romantic and too lovely, and too all-over-the-top words—only there was one thing that was a little annoying.

The man was married, and the worst of that his wife was in love with him, and she would not give a divorce. It was very hard for the girl to realize.

A quiet and pretty wedding took place Wednesday, May 15, 1919, at 5:30 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Blanton, when their eldest daughter, Helen Dives, was married to Angus Colquhoun, son of Colquhoun, Clachan, S. The bride wore cream silk and a corsage bouquet of roses and carnations, carried by her father. Miss Beattie Gordon, of the groom, played the wedding march. The couple were married by Rev. Mr. James of Highgate, officiated. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl subburst ring to the bride's left hand and a diamond ring to the right hand.

A wedding of interest to Londoners was solemnized at the Congregational Church, Godalming, Surrey, England, on Saturday, April 13, when one of Godalming's most popular young ladies, Miss Ann Wilson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Wilson, High street, Godalming, was married to Capt. (Dr.) William Terence Galbraith, V.S., youngest son of Mrs. S. Galbraith, Toronto, chaplain to the Canadian forces.

A reception was held in the lecture hall of the Congregational Church, many guests being present.

The bridal couple left for Scotland, where the honeymoon will be spent. They hope to make their future home in Canada.

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

Dear Miss Grey,—I wonder if "Calamity Ann" will exchange readings with me, and if she gets the Mason piece very much like the Gont's? I would like the Eastern Star, so you see, I have been fishing yet this spring. There is lots down here, so you better send letters, and would like "Lira Kida's" with her. Have any of the correspondents any more readings to correspond to my "Lira Kida's" and "Lira Kida's" tell me what to say. I will leave my address with Miss Grey and sign myself, Ans.—Very kind of you to invite me on a fishing trip. Now, if you will please to take the fish off when "ketching," I might consider it. Your requests are referred.

BIRRO W. I.

The monthly meeting of the Birro Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Ernest Hodgins, Toronto, on Saturday, May 10, 1919. The program for the evening was: first vice-president, Mrs. D. Currie; second vice-president, Mrs. Charles Shiel; secretary, Mrs. E. Moore; directors, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Dodds and Mrs. Jenkinson; district director, Mrs. G. W. Hobb; representative to district annual meeting, Miss L. Anderson; auditors, Mrs. Dodds and Mrs. Anderson; organist, Miss N. Nichols; assistant, Mamie Anderson.

Some "Held-Over" Recipes.

Readers who so kindly supplied recipes during the past month, when space was filled to overflowing, need to know that these were destroyed. Many were preserved, but Miss Grey was glad to take the time to re-write them. Several are given below, so readers get busy with shears and paste:

Brown George Cake.—Two eggs, 1 cup brown sugar, 1/2 cup molasses, 1/2 cup sour milk, 1/2 cup butter, 1 teaspoon each of cinnamon and cloves, 1 cup soda, flour to thicken.

SALEM W. I.

The third annual meeting of the W. I. was held at Salem Church, when the officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. J. M. Jackson (re-elected); first vice-president, Mrs. D. Currie; second vice-president, Mrs. Charles Shiel; secretary, Mrs. E. Moore; directors, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Dodds and Mrs. Jenkinson; district director, Mrs. G. W. Hobb; representative to district annual meeting, Miss L. Anderson; auditors, Mrs. Dodds and Mrs. Anderson; organist, Miss N. Nichols; assistant, Mamie Anderson.

Feeding Baby Chicks.

"Honey B's" message to "Aldine" is printed below so that others interested in chick raising may profit too. Am sure sorry your chicks died off so fast. I've had that luck, too, and I could do was have funerals, moon and night and shed quarts of tears. Can't recommend anything, as could find nothing that would save them. If any other reader can tell us we would be all ears to hear, wouldn't you? To begin at the beginning, "Aldine," don't take your chicks out of the incubator too soon. Two days after the hatch is all over is soon enough. Just clear out all the old houses and keep the temperature about 100 degrees, or leave the door open a little if they seem too hot. The first day in the brooder house feed nothing but fine gravel and water; second day, one cold hard-boiled egg chopped fine for the chicks. Use the infertile eggs that tested out for this purpose. Feed five times a day for the first week or so, gradually increasing the amount, but be careful to give only what they will clean up at a time. When the eggs are about hatched, give your chicks dry oatmeal. If in large flocks, cut up a little with a can till they get so they can eat better. I never have any luck with wet feed. I buy 100 pounds of oatmeal for each hatch, and after that feed any kind of suitable grain. Since you have only half what you would be doing, if I have any more eggs I use oatmeal from the start; say, for 75 chicks to start with. My starter in-law uses a mixture of corn and millet seed, one of each, and Hungarian (which is good) and given a little just now, so will close, hoping to hear from you again soon, and better news next time. HONEY B.

WARDSVILLE W. I.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Institute was held in the town hall, the election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: President, Mrs. J. Belmont; vice-president, Mrs. H. Watter; secretary, Mrs. G. W. Hobb; directors, Mrs. O'Malley and Mrs. Crogan; directors, Mrs. Elwood Harold and Miss Ward; district representative, Mrs. D. L. Purcell.

Word For War Brides.

Dear Miss Grey,—I was both pleased and interested to see in the Mail-Box where a "Sister of Yankee City" has championed the cause of the English women when they were being accused of beer drinking. Thank you a thousand times, "Yankee Sister," for your broadminded outlook and high courage in welcoming the women so far away from their native shores. As I mentioned in a previous letter, all the war brides are only too ready to do anything in their power for the lasting good of their adopted country, and given a fair deal will prove worthy citizens and excellent mothers in this wonderful Canada.

$2,785 CONTRIBUTED BY TEACHERS' GUILD TO PATRIOTIC WORK

Miss Josie Jeffrey Made President at the Annual Meeting.

The Women Teachers' Guild held their closing meeting of the year in the Alexandra School, Miss Carwell, the secretary, reported a most successful year, the usual lecture course having been dispensed with so that the teachers might busy themselves with patriotic work. Two social events were held, a luncheon at which Miss Constance Boulton, the guest of honor, gave a bright address, and a pleasant Valentine party at which the lady trustees were present.

Miss Windsor and Miss Lynch gave reports of the patriotic work, the sum of $2,785 having been contributed during the year to Red Cross and other funds. The teachers also assisted in the influenza epidemic and on registration day.

Miss Evelyn Johnston presented a report of the Federation of Women Teachers, of which she is the president.

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

What Alice Holcombe Asked of Madge. "What really happened?" Alice Holcombe looked at the door behind her, and put her lips to my ear before she whispered the words. "I don't know anything," I whispered back, stressing the verb. "But you need never since I heard on pins and needles. Tell me, I've been awfully anxious to hear what happened. Ken Stockbridge isn't a man who would do that. He would have broken from what I deduced—while Milly was serving her fruit punch. There's only one answer to that." "I'm afraid you have it," I said sulkily. "You put her hand to her heart with an involuntary unconscious gesture. Her face was white with horror, save for two hectic splashes of color in her cheeks. "Poor Milly! Poor Ken!" she murmured brokenly. "It was afraid it would come to something like this. I have felt that she was more than half insane, and distinctly dangerous for a long time. But poison—"

Former Londoner Injured; No Hope For His Recovery. TEESWATER, May 18.—John Arsoott formerly of London, is lying in a precarious condition as a result of an unfortunate accident. He is a member of the firm of Arsoott Bros., tanners, and was assisting in the erection of a new smokestack. A long pole broke loose, and it fell on his head, fracturing the skull, and in knocking him down broke his arm. The surgeons hold out no hope for his recovery. He is still unconscious.
