He Found His Father Had Died of

Gloucester City, N. J., Oct. 12.—A prodigal returned home today, but instead of the glad welcome and prompt forgiveness, found that his father had died of a broken heart during his absence from Kill Electrician.

The boy is William Barnes, the 17 The boy is William Barnes, the 17-year-old son of a well-known resident of this city. He left home some weeks ago, and soon all trace of him was lost. He says that he made his way to the south, where he became dissatisfied with himself and longed to atone for his action by returning home.

Upon learning that his father was dead the young man broke down and wept bitterly. Later he made his way to the fresh grave in St. Mary's Cemetery, and fell upon it in an uncontrolled outburst of grief.

The father, Joseph Barnes, died last week of what the physicians declare was really a broken heart.

"Eddie was never a bad boy. Sometimes he was mischlevous, but not unlike most boys. He was quiet and hard to be aroused. I tried to do all I could for him, and he attended the public schools, receiving an ordinary education. I am a plasterer by trade and I have done odd jobs, Eddie working with me.

"It is often said preachers' children are the worst. I do not believe that. Teach the child the way he should go while he is young and when he is old he will not depart therefrom, is a quotation over which I have pondered so much since Eddie got into this trouble. Writers have substituted 'may' for 'will' and this affords me, as a minister, the consolation that I have probably done my duty toward my son, Eddie.

"I do not believe my boy ever struck that man with murderous intent; I believe it was an accidental blow, struck when Eddie was in fear. In the United States he would have been charged with manslaughter and not murder. Yet I have no fault to find with the court or the crown prosecutor. My son's attorney, D. R. Davis, is doing all he can. I only ask the mercy of those who are now in position to save my son's life.

Appears at the Police Station and Surrenders

New York, Oct. 12.-The first fatality in the subway, in which the victim was run over and killed by a passenger train, occurred on Tuesday afternoon at One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street

One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street and Broadway.

The train was one of the practice trains, by which the car crews are being made familiar with the subway. Aboard it were 50 men and women passengers, guests invited by Superintendent Mertitt to inspect the subway and to enjoy the novelty of traveling to "Harlem in fifteen minutes." The victim was Michael Kupac, an electrician, 40 years old, of No. 502 Sixth street.

Another Addition to List of Deaths From Wood Alcohol Whisky.

New York, Oct. 12.-When Herman Sachs died tonight in Roosevelt Hospital, 20 minutes after he had been admitted as a patient, another death was added to the long list of those whom Coroner Scholer believes were caused by the wood alcohol in the whisky sold in the saloon of Rudolph Fritzcher. There are now sixteen deaths on this list. Sachs was seized with violent abdominal pains this afternoon.

Coroner Scholer was notified, and hurried investigation showed that the stricken man had been drinking whisky bought at Fritzcher's saloon, just be fore the police took possession of the place. Hardly had Sachs been sent to the hospital when the coroner learned that a man named Gaffney, living in West Fifty-third street, was suffering from the same symptoms following the use of whisky said to have been bought in Fritzcher's saloon. Gaffney was hurried to the hospital, and was alive at a late hour tonight. Fritzcher's saloon in Tenth avenue which has been guarded by a police-man since it was closed yesterday, was attacked tonight by a mob of 150 resines at it, smashing in the door and windows. Girl's High Climb.

What Kind of a Tariff?

Mr. Borden talks a great deal about an "adequate tariff" which he would establish, if he were in power. But, unfortunately, he has never yet made designate a "prohibitory tariff;" that to keep out everything that could be made in Canada, or produced in Canada; a tariff which would necessarily abolish the preference now given to British goods... Of course, when they speak of a prohibitory tariff they do not mean to what Dundonald really meant to do. raise the customs wall so high that everything would be kept out, though on this point they are not absolutely that "Hyman will be opposed in Lonclear. We should hardly suppose they don." Well, Well! would raise the rates so high as to keep out the anthracite coal which we now import from the United States. Probably they would keep out the soft frid is a sick man, the wish is father coal, so as to compel the people of to the thought. Ontario to buy Nova Scotia coal. At least we judge so, as we have seen it thrown out occasionally as an objection to the rate on bituminous coal stay ill. that it is only high enough to keep out the coal from the Maritime Provinces. We do not know that they want to facturers are satisfied with the Fieldkeep out all the raw material for manufacturing purposes which now comes in free. Probably opinions would differ on that subject. Each man would want the raw material he used himself Mackenzie Bowell is having his re- her, and she was taken to Woodstock high duty on what other people used. Ingersoll, Oct. 12. - As the result of an inquest held by Dr. Neff, of Ingersoll, and a jury at the village of Salford last night, Mrs. William Dee is detained in the charge of Chief Wright, of Ingersoll. No charge has been lodged against her, the authorities simply saying that it is necessary to detain her in view of certain facts that were brought out concerning the death of her husband, William Dee, who died under suspicious circumstances this morning. Dee and his wife lived alone in a ouse about a mile west of Salford. Dee took his breakfast at 9 o'clock in the morning, and shortly after he was a number of neighbors had arrived. Death had evidently resulted from strychnine poisoning. Evidence brought Ination, declared that he had ill-used her, and Mrs. Kennedy, a neighbor, de-clared that last summer Mrs. Dee had declared that she would kill her husband if she got an opportunity. Mrs. Dee went down to Mrs. Kennedy's place when her husband took ill, and recalling Mrs. Dee's threat she imnediately asked the woman if sh Dee replied that she had no desire to do away with her husband, and denied that she had given him anything except a cup of tea, she having put the milk in and the sugar. The whole section is greatly worked up over the affair. Only two witnesses were examined at the inquest, Mrs. Dee and Mrs. Kennedy, and after the jury had conferred for a short time they decided to place Mrs. Dee under arrest. Rumor Revived in Hamilton About the Copp Works.

The rumor is again revived in Ham-The rumor is again that the Copp works there, owned into that the Copp works there, owned and operated by the McClary Manufacturing Company, of this city, are to be removed to London forthwith. This morning the statement was made at the head offices here that as yet nothing definite had been done and that the description. This statement was made today assessed, and that in the city as a services as cook and servant and to recover the value of plaintiff's whole plenty of latitude has been allowed property owners by the assessors. This statement is borne out, too, by the reports of realty sales made each the head offices here that as yet nothing definite had been done and that the definite had been done and that the AS HIGH AS 51/2% CAN STILL company is not as yet ready to make be obtained on 51/2% Investments a statement on the subject. It is said that the removal of the Copp works here will not bring a great many men to London, though it will, of course, bring some. The business here will also be increased greatly, but of late the McClary firm has been making extensive additions to both of its huge plants in this city and large numbers of extra men have been engaged to keep up with the rapidly increasing business.

A SECOND ARREST

Another Indian Locked Up on Serious Charge.

Two Indians came before Squire Smyth this morning on very serious charge. One was Neil McArthur, arrested some days ago, on the information of Rev. Mr. George, superintendent of the Muncey Institute, who charges him with seducing an Indian 113 Masonic Temple girl named Wakbezee, who is an inmate of the institution, and over the age of 16 years. McArthur was remanded until an alleged accomplice, William Brown, was arrested. County Constable B. W. Fisher, of Mount Brydges, captured Brown this morning and brought him to the jail. The two alleged offenders came before Squire Smyth, and Rev. Mr. George was on hand to testify against them. Mr. John

> There passed away last night about o'clock an old and well-known citizen of London in the person of Mr. Patrick Wallace, father-in-law of Mr. W. M. Greer, the caretaker of the custom house, with whom he had been living for the last seventeen years. Mr. Wallace was on the London police force for 41 years, and his many friends and acquaintances, by whom he was greatly liked and respected, will grieve to learn of his death, and will sadly miss his familiar figure around years ago in Limerick county, Ireland, and lived in the old country until his A SHOP-BREAKER marriage. He then emigrated to America, and after being employed for a while in Clintonville, New York State, he came to this city in 1854, and had lived here ever since. He joined the police force and was one of its most valuable members until the time of his retirement seven years ago. He was the first officer to enjoy the benefits of the pension fund. Since then he had lived a quiet life, and there are very few who have not seen him at the custom house corner, where he delight. Policeman Robert Black gave a shoped to pass the time in fresh air when the weather was favorable.

Mr. Wallace's wife died seventeen years ago, but two daughters and six sons live to mourn his loss. They are as follows: Mrs. W. M. Greer, of this city; John, of Chatham: James, Thomas, Maurice and Patrick, of this city; Mrs. Howie, of Battle Creek, Mich., and

Yes, by the stream-where they wandered, Rick and she-she will read his She goes to the stump and seats herself, and takes the letter from her pocket, and looks at it; then she looks round covertly, and puts it to

It is the first love letter she has ever received, she thinks, with a sudden flush. What will he say? How will he address her. Will he say, "My own Paula"? or "My darling"? She can almost hear his beloved voice speaking to her as she gazes at the envelope. How strangely he writes, too; it is a round hand, almost like that which ladies favor nowadays, but a little cramped and hard. It is adressed to Miss Pauline Estcourt, too. He has never, she thinks, called her Pauline. For another minute—fully a minute she dallies with it as one dallies with a sure and certain delight, hoarding it up, and reveling in anticipation. At last she tears the envelope open. As she does so a faint perfume seems to arise from the inside; and she smiles with a little wonder that Sir Herrick should use scented stationery.

Then she takes out the note and unfolds it, and a great blank falls upon her face; a bitter sense of disappointment that makes her wince and quiver. It is not from Sir Herrick. It is-she stares open-eyed and pale for a mo-ment, then with a low cry of amazement-only amazement at present: there is no time as yet for any other emotion—she reads on.
This is what the note contains, written in a plain hand, that, for all its roundness, is a woman's:

"Miss Estcourt,-When two women are being wronged and deceived. It is of the one that discovers to reveal it to the other. Duty and something more prompts me to address you. By this time you have turned to the foot of this letter to learn my name -do not cast my warning aside because I choose to hide that name. 1 am told that she to whom I write and appeal is an honest, simple-natured, country girl, with no thought of guile or suspicion of evil. If that be so, then shall not appeal in vain. Miss Estcourt, you and I have been deceived. and wronged by Sir Herrick Powis, if it be true that he has offered you his love, and promised to make you his That love he had given to me, long before he saw you. That ove, I believe, is still mine. How can I think otherwise when he has spent the last three days by my side, as he has spent many and many others before—when he has just left me without a word or look of coldness? I could not credit that he has behaved so dishonorable toward both of us, but that I have heard it from an undeniable source. He cannot love both of us. I cannot think that he has forgotten me or ceased to love me, else, why has he get your money back if not cured. Oc a box, at or ceased to love me, else, why has he left you so soon to return to me? as to whence the blow has come, no sign of the hand that has thrust the dagger at Paula's quivering heart. Motionless, she sits staring at the letter, but seeing it not; a great thick veil seems to have dropped before her eyes, shutting out the good heaventhe golden sky; an intense stillness and awful hush seem to have fallen on the world, and only the pleading words ring in her ears, as though she could actually hear the tearful, imploring voice of this other unknown girl. So she sits, stunned and helpless, while one could count fifty; then a sudden reshe looks up and laughs hoarsely.
'It is a lie—a cruel, wicked lie! Yes that is what it must, it must be; and"and she laughs again with infinite self-scorn-"I was taken in by it-actually taken in by it!" she exclaims, stretching out her hands as if to a palpable listener. "I was, indeed, but

What is it the woman says? Ask him whose is the portrait he wears in his locket? Ask him where he spent the last three days? Ask him why he left her, Paula, so suddenly? Why—why this woman knows that he has some such portrait - knows where he has been-knows that he left her! She must, or she would not dare to write thus.

MAKING vs. MATERIAL

With a "Walla Walla"

There's more in making than in the material. Most anybody can buy as good brushes and pigments as Titian ever had.

Perhaps there are other coals as good as "Walla Walla" in the earth. But none are "made" or mined as carefully as "Walla Walla" coal. None of the others cost within 10 per cent per ton as much at the mines as "Walla Walla."

Again, none of these others are shipped in closed cars to insure dryness.

Still again, none of the others are graded as carefully at the mines-none of the others are housed as carefully, as dryly, as "Walla Walla."

Then, too, to complete the superiority, it comes to you for the same price as inferior coal, and comes 20 tull bags
