POETRY.

As the Sun Went Down.

Two soldiers lay on the battlefield
At night when the sun went down.
One held a lock of thin grey hair,
And one held a lock of brown.

One thought of the sweetheart back at home,
Happy and young and gay,
And one of his mother left alone,
Feeble and old and gray.

Each in the thought that a woman cared,
Murmured a prayer to God,
Lifting his gaze to the blue above,
There on the battle sod.

Each in the joy of a woman's love
Smiled through the pain of death,
Murmured the sound of a woman's name,
Though with his parting breath.

Pale grew the dying lips of each.
Then, as the sun went down,
One kissed a lock of thin grey hair,
And one kissed a lock of brown.

SELECT STORY.

Polly's Exploit.

Kane Creek was a railroad crossing on the S. and C. C. Railroad about two miles from the division terminal at Mercer. It was in the midst of a scrubby pine forest, with a sandy road crooking out from the trees on one side and into the trees on the other. There were only two or three houses, a little general store with a porch like the visor of a military cap, and a school house, all arranged in a seraggy row along the railroad track. The dusty red depot was an oasis in the midst of a cinder desert, with a great many telegraph wires singing overhead.

A dozen trains whirled through Kane Creek every day with only a shriek of greeting and a whipping wake of fine sand. Only two of them paid the slightest attention to the girl in a blue gingham dress who stood in the little observation window. One of them was the way freight which stopped at Kane's every time it came along while the conductor handed the girl a bundle of yellow papers and received another like it in return. The other was the night express westward bound from St. Paul, and running at forty miles an hour. It was a splendid train—ten cars, with the finest engine on the road, big No. 606. As its glaring eyes flashed around the bend in the direction of Mercer the girl in the gingham dress often thought of the great train as a powerful and ferocious beast snorting and roaring westward on a race with the sun. It was a beast, but it was well trained, and she knew the hand that trained it. When the train was a mile away there were always two blasts on the whistle. Everyone else in Kane's thought they meant simply, "wake up, look out!"—for that is what all locomotives say at every crossing—but the girl in the gingham dress heard "Hello, Polly," and darted out on the platform and waved her handkerchief. As the great train thundered nearer a hand was thrust from the engineer's window, and although it was usually dark, she could see the flutter of something white, and oftentimes as the engine darted past the station she heard the blurred sound of a voice and caught the glimpse of a grimy face and a blue jean jacket. And then she went back to her place in the little station with a sigh of deep contentment.

For it was a moment of great joy to Polly Marshall when her father's engine went through. Polly was the station agent at Kane Creek—any one could have told that a woman presided in the little depot, for there was always a bouquet in the window and dainty pictures surrounding the grimy time tables on the walls, and a kitten curling upon the door-step? At seven-teen Polly had gone in as assistant to learn telegraphy and when Clark, the agent was called by Mercer the company had left the independent girl in charge. She and her father lived in one of the wooden houses a stone's throw back from the depot, and since Polly's mother died they had been everything to each other.

Engineer Marshall was a big, silent man and his companions, some of them, thought him gruff and ill tempered, but to Polly he was always tender as a kitten. Often when she was a little girl he took her down with him to Mercer on his engine and while she sat on his black leather seat at the cab window, clinging on with both hands, he explained to her how the big black creature under them was started and stopped, what this brass crank was for, and how, when the engine squeaked here or squeaked there, a little oil was needed in this cup or in that groove. And Polly had learned to know an engine as well as she knew the nest little pantry in the house at home. Indeed, she had more than once managed the levers and the throttle, although it was very heavy work for a girl to do.

It was one night late in the fall that Polly Marshall had need of all her knowledge of engines. She was sitting at her desk in the little observation window, a shaded lamp throwing its rays down on her telegraph instruments and the sander clicking sleepily. Suddenly she was startled by the suddenly sought the keys, and she gave the answer that signified that she was all attention.

"Look out for—" clicked the sander, and then it suddenly ceased, and try as she would Polly could get no further communication with the station next to the eastward. What could the trouble be? What was she to look out for? Polly sprang to her feet, remembering that the night express, of which her father was engineer, was the next train due. Could anything be the matter? She ran out on the dark platform to see that her lights were all in place and that the switches were properly set, so that the express would slip past the station without an accident. Then she went back and called up Mercer.

"Can you get Pinekey?" she asked.

Pinekey was the station which had sent her the warning dispatch so mysteriously interrupted. She knew the operator at Pinekey well—every night he told her of the approach of her father's train, and whether or not it left his station on time.

"Pinekey quiet; can't get answer," was the report of the wires. "What's the trouble?"

Polly answered as well as she could, and Mercer made another attempt to arouse Pinekey.

Her father's train was now due. It should be whistling cheerily at the lower bend. Polly stepped out on the platform and peered up the track. Yes, there was the familiar headlight—she would have known it among a hundred. Then came the whistle "Hello, Polly," and Polly ran back in to her office much relieved and sat down to wait Mercer. At that instant she heard a peculiar cracking sound that sent her heart quivering deep in her bosom. Then there was the shrill scream of the locomotive whistle, suddenly interrupted, as if the hand that had drawn the lever had been struck from its place. Polly knew it was a cry of distress. It seemed to say "Help" in a long tremulous wail. Instantly Polly darted outside and flew up the track. Already the express should have thundered past the station, but she could see its headlight a hundred yards or more away. The train had stopped.

With a hundred terrifying questions flashing through her mind Polly ran on through the gloom. When she was almost within range of a big headlight she saw a half dozen armed men swarming around the engine, she heard fierce oaths, and then the engine started up again. She saw in an instant that it had been cut free from the train. In the cab window, where his father usually stood, there was a big unfamiliar figure, managing the lever and throttle. Terrified, Polly sprang to one side into a clump of bushes. As the locomotive passed her on its way up the track she saw that the man in the cab wore a black mask on his face, and then she knew what had happened. She understood why Pinekey had tried to warn her and then failed. Robbers had held up the train and were preparing to rob the express car.

For a moment Polly was torn with doubt and terror. Had they shot her father? She knew that he never would submit to have his train captured without a struggle. Should she go to him? Then she remembered her station and the telegraph, and without a moment's delay she was flying down the track toward the depot. But squarely in front of the little depot the locomotive stopped and the black-masked man sprang from the cab window and darted across the platform. Hardly thinking what she was doing, Polly ran up on the other side, the fireman's side of the engine, and, raising herself up, peered into the cab. She had half expected to see her father's dead body lying on the floor, for she had heard much about the terrible doings of train robbers.

Through the cab window she could see the robber sitting at her own little desk, and she saw him plainly.

It flashed over her all at once that he was wiring Mercer that the express was delayed, thus preventing any alarm. The robber had pushed up his mask and she saw him plainly.

What should she do? She dared not enter the office, and she, a mere girl, could be of no service where the robbers were making their attack on the train. If only she had the little revolver that lay in the drawer of her desk—she set her teeth as she thought what she would do with it.

At that moment three shots rang out, clear and distinct, from the detached train. The man at the telegraph instrument sprang to his feet and ran to the side window in the waiting-room and looked up the track.

Now was her chance. Hardly thinking what she did, Polly sprang to the engineer's side of the cab, threw back the reverse lever and opened the throttle steadily. The big steel wheels began to turn, very slowly at first. Farther and farther the throttle opened and faster and faster turned the wheels, and yet they did not go half fast enough to suit Polly, who was now glancing fearfully over her shoulder.

Suddenly the depot door was thrown open, and she saw the robber darting up the track. He had his pistol in his hand. He was pointing it at her and shouting for her to stop. But the engine was now going at good speed, and run as he would, the robber could not catch it. But he stopped and fired, the bullet ripping through the cab cover above Polly's head.

The engine was now tearing down the track at full speed. Polly knew that it must be fired or it would not go far, and so, leaving the throttle open she sprang to the coal pit, flung open the fire hole, and with the heavy shovel in her small white hands threw in load after load of coal. When she returned to her place she could see the first signal light of Mercer already blinking into view. She pulled down on the whistle cord and the engine shrieked its distress.

Five minutes later Polly strained at the heavy reverse lever, turned hard on the air-brake and brought the great iron horse to a sudden standstill. How she ever managed to stammer the story she never knew, but in a few minutes the engine was headed back with half a dozen armed men aboard of her. Behind them came another load of men on a switch engine and two men were racing up the street of Mercer calling the alarm.

They heard firing before they reached Kane Creek, but it ceased soon afterward. The robbers had gone. They had taken with them much plunder from the passengers, but they had not been able to get into the express safe, although they were at work drilling it open when relief came.

From the time that the engine stopped Polly was missing. When the rescued and excited passengers and express managers began to crowd around and inquire the Mercer men remembered her. A party of them went out to find the girl who had brought help to the beleaguered train.

In a little clump of bushes they heard a man moaning, and an instant later they saw Polly kneeling in the sand, with her father's head in her lap, crying bitterly. And they gathered up the brave engineer and his daughter and carried them down to the train, cheering all the way.

Engineer Marshall was not badly hurt, and he was able to be in Mercer when the general manager of the road thanked the blushing Polly officially and offered her a new and better position in Mercer. And of course all the passengers and express messengers heard about Polly's brave deed and said a great many pleasant things about her, but Polly, being a sensible girl, only blushed and said that she had to do it, and that any other girl would have done the same under like circumstances—which no one believed of course.

Later, when the robbers were captured, Polly was able to identify one of them positively—the one who had run the engine—and through him the entire party was convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary.

Gold Fields of the Klondyke.

Everywhere all classes, men, women and children want to know all about this Land of Gold. Recognizing this intense desire of millions of our people, we have a complete work descriptive of the Gold Fields of the Klondyke, by Ernest Ingersoll, Esq., author of "Knocking Round the Rockies," "Crest of the Continent," "Guide Book to Western Canada," "The Ice Queen," "The Silver Cave," etc., etc., also an extensive traveller throughout all the Northwest from the Geological Survey and the Smithsonian Institute, assisted by Henry W. Elliott and E. E. Sedmore, who have spent years in Alaska.

It will tell you all about the mines that have been discovered—how they are worked—what fortunes have been made—what fields are yet unexplored—the vast extent and possibilities of the Gold Region—all about the Indians and other natives of the land—the climate, what riches, etc.

This book, containing 500 pages, is most richly and accurately illustrated from photographs taken on the spot, picturing every phase of mining, country, natives, mountains, ice glaciers and other wonders of the frozen North. It will contain a magnificent map in six colors, 18 x 24, showing the Gold Fields, routes to reach them, etc., and is well worth half the price asked for the book. Not a moment should be lost in securing outfit and pushing the sale. It bids fair to rival the sale of the Johnston Flood. Price of book and map $1.50.

Packing Butter for Winter.

Henry Stewart—in an article on the winter packing of butter, after stating that the full amount of butter consumed in winter is not produced as it is consumed, the deficiency being drawn from that packed during the grazing season, says in the American Agriculturist:

A Winona Lady.

Saved from a Life of Torture.

Paine's Celery Compound Conquers After Years of Failures With Other Medicines.

Mrs. G. H. Parker, of Winona, Ont., was for eighteen years a complete martyr to neuralgia, that cruel and merciless tormentor of thousands of old and young in Canada. During her long years of agony she had the services of some of the best medical men, and consumed a vast quantity of patent medicines, but all failed to drive off the tyrant that was making life a burden. At last she was persuaded to test the power and virtue of Paine's Celery Compound, and the happy results that rewarded her faith are described in the following letter:

"I have been a great sufferer from neuralgia for nearly eighteen years; these sufferings at times were so bad that words would fail to describe them. After having tried every known remedy and different physicians, and receiving no help, I was persuaded to try your Paine's Celery Compound, which I have been using for the past four months. I am happy to say that I am now a different woman and completely cured. I can recommend your Paine's Celery Compound to all my friends, for it has been worth hundreds of dollars to me."

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure.

Celebrated for its great leavening strength and healthfulness. Assures the food against alum and all forms of adulteration common to the cheap brands. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

Butter.

The best package for this purpose is a new white oak pail, made of sound timber, free from knots and blemishes, half an inch thick, well jointed, and perfectly seasoned. This pail holds fifty pounds. White spruce is the next best material, and is quite as free from any objectionable odor or taste given to the butter. The pail is prepared by a thorough cleaning in pure water. It should be soaked for at least twenty-four hours, then well scalded, and then filled with brine. This is done so that it may stay under the brine twenty-four hours before the butter is packed. The pail being ready, the butter is packed as soon as it has been finished at the second working the day after it is churned. It is salted in the usual manner, one ounce to the pound of butter, of the very purest and finest ground salt. It is worked as dry as it can be. The pail, being emptied of the brine, is dusted all over the inside with the salt, and the butter is put in only so much at a time as will make a layer of four inches. This is compactly pressed down by a maple presser, made like a common potato masher, so that all the moisture is pressed out and drained off.

If in this moisture there is any cloud or shade of milk, the butter has not been made as well as it should be, and will not come out in perfect condition. Not a shade of milk is to be permitted in the butter for this use, but any moisture that gets down from it should be as clear as the dew on the morning grass. Then the butter thus put in is lightly dusted with salt, and another layer put in in the same manner, until the pail is filled to a quarter of an inch of the edge.

Papa—"How did you get your clothes so terribly torn?" Tommy—"Tryin' to keep a little boy from bein' licked." Papa—"That was a brave deed. Who was the little boy?" Tommy—"Me."

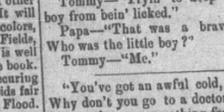

"You've got an awful cold, Smither. Why don't you go to a doctor and get him to give you something for it?" "Give me something for it? Man, he can have it for nothing and welcome."

This is the stamp that the letter bore which carried the story far and wide; of certain cure for the loathsome sore that bubbled up from the tainted tide of the blood below. And 'twas Ayer's name, and his sarsaparilla, that all now know, that was just beginning its fight of fame, with its cures of 50 years ago.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

in the original sarsaparilla. It has behind it a record for cures unequalled by any blood purifying compound. It is the only sarsaparilla honored by a medal at the World's Fair of 1893. Others imitate the record; they can't imitate the record.

50 Years of Cures!

50 Years of Cures!

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N.S., AUG. 27, 1897.

Our Cemeteries.

It is very much to be regretted that our people take so little interest in the condition of their cemeteries. Both here for a long time presented a most untidy and disagreeable appearance. The ACADIAN has repeatedly called attention to the need of some action being taken to put them in a condition that will not bring reproach upon the town, but so far with little effect. The old cemetery is certainly a standing disgrace upon the community. Its prominent position in the centre of the town brings it into general notice, and our summer visitors must form a poor opinion of our regard for the memory of our dead. A small amount of money laid out here would greatly improve its appearance and make it an ornament instead of a blot upon the reputation of the town. "Willow Bank" is most favorably situated and could easily be made a "thing of beauty" if the lot-owners and the public were so inclined. This is the public burying-ground of the place, and all should take pride in its appearance. Little interest, however, appears to be taken and the present condition of the cemetery is not such as to cause us to be anxious in showing it to visitors. The annual meetings of the trustees and lot-owners are very slimly attended and the last elected president, Mr. C. C. Vaux, has tendered his resignation after using every effort to arouse an interest and get those in authority to make a move in the way of improvement. We trust that this very unsatisfactory state of affairs will not be allowed to continue, but that enough public spirit may be found among our people to cause something to be undertaken, and both the old and new cemeteries put in a condition creditable to our town and all concerned in it.

Road Reform.

The Halifax Chronicle in a well written article in a recent issue, deals with road reform in a practical way. Let the city and country press take hold of this important question of road reform and our highways will not long remain in the disgraceful condition that they are in today in many counties of the province. Until public sentiment is properly aroused we fear we need not look for reform, and the quickest way to arouse this sentiment is through the press. Other provinces and other countries have long ago discarded the old fossilized system of statute labor for a more modern system and why should an enlightened people like Nova Scotians be admitted to be hang on to a system of another age to the government appoint a commission of competent men to gather information to be placed before the legislature at its next session, and from this information frame a road bill. Let us have improved highways even at the expense of direct taxation.

Editorial Notes.

The shipments of coal from the several collieries of the Dominion Coal Co. for July amounted to no less than 173,000 tons, the largest output so far. Bring the scrubbed dollar that your old sock contains to the ACADIAN office, and have your name put on the subscription list of the brightest paper in the county. The farmers' picnic to day at Aylesford promises to be a most successful affair. It is a good idea for our people to get together occasionally and compare notes at least. The boom taken by wheat the last few days means millions of dollars to the Canadian farmer, and will put them on their feet in good shape. We regret that more of the ACADIAN's subscribers do not grow wheat. The fifty-second annual meeting of the Baptist Convention of the Maritime Provinces was opened on Saturday, 21st inst., in the Main Street Church, St. John. About 300 delegates were present at the opening session. The famous scientists who compose the British Association, which has been in session in Toronto for the past week, have proved to their satisfaction that religion and science are compatible. Coming from these great masters of science this decision ought to have a considerable influence in dissipating the clouds of agnosticism and materialism that have of late obscured the fair field of natural science. The final argument in the Behring Sea question is being heard in Halifax this week. The commissioners are Judge King, of the Supreme Court of Canada and Judge Putnam, of the U. S. Circuit Court. In the case of a disagreement the president of the Swiss Republic will decide. The counsel for Great Britain and Canada are: Hon. F. Peters, G. C. Premier of Prince Edward Island; F. L. Baigue, Montreal; E. V. Bodwell, Victoria, B. C.; and Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper. The United States counsel are: Hon. David M. Dickenson, Detroit; L. R. W. Lansing, Watertown, N. Y.; Charles B. Warren, Detroit. The leading counsel for the United States is one of the most eminent lawyers in that country, but it is expected that in Sir Hibbert Tupper, the leading advocate for Canada he will meet his match. The outcome of the arbitration is awaited with much interest.

Dental Association Meeting.

The eighth annual meeting of the Dental Association was convened in Temperance Hall, Wolfville, Wednesday last, at 9.30 a. m. F. H. Parker, D. D. S., President, in the chair. Eight counties were represented. After routine business and the election of officers the session adjourned. Many visiting members took in the Evangeline drive under arrangements made by the Dental Faculty of Wolfville and Kentville. At the evening session the retiring Vice-President, Dr. G. K. Thompson, having been elected President for the ensuing year, took the chair. A paper on Tobacco elicited some important remarks. Dr. H. Woodbury was a strong speaker, and there were also remarks by Dr. DeWitt, of Wolfville, present by invitation. The work closed Thursday at noon, the professional and social intercourse having been most enjoyable. The following members were present: Dr. A. C. Cogswell, H. Woodbury, F. Woodbury, G. K. Thompson, H. Bigelow, Halifax; F. H. Parker, New Glasgow; J. A. Johnson, Parrsboro; A. C. Harding, Yarmouth; M. F. Harrington, Liverpool; M. K. Langille, Truro; F. W. Ryan, Windsor; E. N. Foyant, A. J. McKenna, H. Lawrence, Wolfville; J. E. Maloney, L. Saunders, Kentville; S. W. Eaton, Canning; G. R. Murphy, Windsor.

Evangeline Beach.

The swimming tournament is to be held on Wednesday next, the tide serving at 3.43. The Baptists of Avonport, Lockhartville, Bishopville and Kellyville held their annual S. S. picnic at Evangeline Beach on Thursday last. On Friday a private picnic drove from Waterville, a distance of 22 miles, and spent the day at the Beach. A family picnic from Gaspereau were here on Saturday. Two sail boats full of young ladies and gentlemen, from Kingsport, stopped at the Beach for a few hours on their homeward way from a sail to Cape Blomidon. A picnic from New Minas and one from Horton Bluff visited the Beach Tuesday afternoon. Sixteen of the members of the Dental Association then in session at Wolfville paid a flying visit to the Beach Wednesday afternoon. The tides will be very high next week especially those on Monday and Tuesday. It is rumored that Samantha and her partner, Josiah, will be at the tournament on Wednesday next. Keep a sharp lookout for them.

Baptist S. S. Convention.

The Kings Co. Baptist Sabbath-school on Thursday, Sept. 2nd, beginning at 10 a. m. Morning session: Devotional exercises, Election of officers, Reports from S. schools, Paper on Bible Study by Mrs. C. H. Martell. Afternoon session: Devotional exercises, Bible lesson, Paper by Miss Avors-Dicker, Address by Rev. A. W. Sawyer, D. D. Evening session: Devotional exercises, Business, Address by Rev. One of those events which are so interesting, especially to young ladies, took place in our village on Wednesday, the 18th, viz: The marriage of Lavinia J. youngest daughter of W. E. Harris, Esq., to R. W. North, secretary to the R. W. Kinsman Co., Ltd., Canning. At 8.30 as the strains of the Bridal March, played by Mrs. F. R. Harris, filled the house the groom appeared supported by Mr. Cecil Harris, shortly after the bridesmaid, Miss Ethel Loomer, entered followed by the bride leaning on the arm of her father. The bride looked charming in white cashmere with lace and ribbons, and carried a large bouquet of white asters and sweet peas. The bridesmaid was also dressed in white cashmere with a bouquet of pink sweet peas. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. H. Martell assisted by Rev. A. B. Higgins. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion and the numerous presents testify to the universal esteem in which the bride was held. Mr and Mrs North will reside in Canning. ONE PASTOR.

Nova Scotia Provincial Exhibition.

Entries for Live Stock, Poultry, Dogs, Dairy Produce, Ladies Work, Fine Arts and all classes of Manufacture close on or before Saturday September 11th. Grain, Field Roots, Fruits and Horticultural product on or before Tuesday, September 21st. The Speed Competitions close Saturday, September 11th. These dates for closing entries will be strictly enforced and intending Exhibitors should govern themselves accordingly. McClure's Magazine for September will contain a new ballad by Kipling—a dramatic personification of English rule in Egypt. There will also be a humorous story by Robert Barr, retelling the discomfiture of a New York confidence man by a kindly but ingenious and resolute cowboy.

We would ask our readers to take note of the announcement of an auction sale to be held on the premises of the late Jas. S. Morris. The sale will be held Sept. 7th.

It is expected that the Rev. Mr. Gardner, pastor of Central Square Church, East Boston, will occupy the pulpit of the Wolville Baptist church next Sabbath.

We have this week been favored with some rather enjoyable street music, furnished by a couple of colored travelling musicians—a violinist, and a harpist. Their efforts have been quite liberally rewarded.

Our town presented a busy appearance last Saturday evening. The streets and stores were full of people, and the merchants must have done a good business. A large number of visitors spent Sunday in town.

A boy named Messum, was up before Stipendiary Crawley on Wednesday morning, charged with striking another boy with a stone. After being severely reprimanded and cautioned against a repetition of the offence, he was discharged.

The Baptist and Episcopal Sabbath-schools held their picnics yesterday, the former at Evangeline Beach and the latter at Blue Beach. The town presented quite a lively appearance during their departure, and we understand a most pleasant day was spent by all.

Suffered From Infancy.

THE WARD OF MISERY WAVED OVER MRS THOS. GREFF.

From Her Childhood She Suffered from Heart Trouble—Doctors Said Nothing Could Be Done for Her, and that Her Death at Any Moment Would Not Surprise Them.

Of the making of books there is no end. It hath been said, and the same claim might be set up in respect of the making of testimonials in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Wonderful as are some of the statements published in the newspapers as to the cures effected in all parts of the country, fresh evidence proves the half has not been told. Were it not for a false sense of delicacy which a great many people entertain in regard to such matters, the columns of the press would be literally teeming with grateful acknowledgments of benefit derived from permanent cures effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

It is quite within the mark to say that there is no other medicine offered the public that can at all compare with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and there is not a corner in this wide Dominion in which their virtues have not been proved. A cure which recently came to the knowledge of a representative of the Herald is deserving of being widely known. It is an instance of heart trouble that baffled the skill of a number of physicians, some of whom positively refused to treat the patient on the ground that it was no use. The subject of the affliction referred to is the wife of a highly respected and well-to-do farmer in the township of Logan, near the village of Dublin. Mr and Mrs Thos. Green are firm believers in the efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and for very good reasons. Mrs Green has suffered everything but death from a weak heart, the trouble having afflicted her since early childhood. On several occasions she has been so low that it was not thought possible for her to recover. Her greatest trouble often arose from exhaustion or a sudden start, and at such times her heart seemed to cease its throbbing and the breathing was stifled and labored. Doctor's medicine seemed to have no effect whatever. She was advised by one physician that all that could be done was to keep her strength up, and it was with a view to strengthening her system, and with no hope that her heart would be benefited, that she began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She had not been taking them long, however, when there was an unmistakable relief from the trouble that had made her whole life miserable. During the past summer she has used very little more, and has enjoyed better health than for many years before, and has been able not only to do her household work, but also many of the out door chores that fall to the lot of a farmer's wife. The different physicians who have treated her would not be surprised to hear of her death at any moment, but she is to-day a strong woman, enjoying better health than she has done for years. Both Mrs Green and her husband feel grateful for the great benefit she has received from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and spare no words in sounding their praises to everyone who enquire what has wrought such a wonderful change in Mrs Green's health and spirits.

In cases of paralysis, spinal troubles, locomotor ataxia, sciatica, rheumatism, erysipelas, scrofulous troubles, etc., Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are superior to all other treatment. They are also a specific for the troubles which make the lives of so many women a burden, and especially restore the rich glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. Men broken down by overwork, worry or excess, will find in Pink Pills a certain cure. Sold by all dealers or sent by mail postpaid, at five a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y. Beware of imitations and substitutes alleged to be "just as good."

Manuscript Room of the British Museum. In the bewildering maze of the British Museum, where many miles of shelves and cases are filled with the world's treasures, there is one little room that attracts a greater number of visitors than any other. The crowds that throng about the cases in this room are composed of persons of curiously diverse characteristics. It is a center of interest for scholars and literary people, and yet seems as attractive to the least learned of the visitors. This is the room which contains the department of autographs and manuscripts, and the treasures within it are perhaps the most humanly interesting in the whole museum.

Here are all manner of writings by the hands of the world's greatest men of many ages and countries. There are personal letters of kings and popes, queens, ministers and courtiers, whose names in history, in story, and in song seem not to stand for real men and women, but rather for legendary beings, and these letters reveal in some homely phrase or bit of simple sentiment a touch of human nature which seems to make them more akin to those who curiously scan the documents to-day. Here one may come, as it seems, to actual acquaintance with the most notable of the characters in Shakespeare's historical dramas, and get a new reading, in the quaint original, of passages in his works. Here are characters and state papers that tell volumes of history in a few lines; letters of the great religious reformers, of statesmen, generals, poets and composers. These autograph documents, many of them letters from husband to wife or lover to sweetheart, show famous personages in a very different light from that in which they are commonly seen in the pages of history.

Highest Enjoyment.

One of the highest and best enjoyments comes through what is done for others. This is believed in theoretically, but seldom practically. If a man has money, he imagines the way to enjoy it is either to keep it and accumulate it or to spend it on personal gratification; yet he misses the force of its benefits when he refuses to share it or its benefits with others. So with our time, our talents, and our thoughts—kept to ourselves, and used simply for our own delectation, they do not give us a tithe of the enjoyment that they afford when we use them liberally for the benefit of the family, or friends, or the community. No one who has tasted the sweets of ministering successfully to the happiness of others will ever again relapse into a purely selfish use of his advantages.

How to Prepare for Death.

To prepare for death does not make a convent necessary. We do not need to go into a cell and mortify the flesh, and conjure up ghastly sights, and drown all the vices by which our senses speak to us. To prepare for death is to do one's ordinary work faithfully, and one's whole duty nobly. To prepare for death is not to chase one's bright thing from life's pathway, is not to ignore one's true pleasures, is not to give up one's thing sour, or to make believe that a bitter thing is pleasant to take. That is the glorious side of this truth. The Christian who understands his duty simply means that we are faithfully doing our everyday duty every day.—F. E. Clark, D. D.

Exceptions.

Perfect children. Doctors who agree. Always wise parents. A man without an enemy. Loves who never quarrel. Genius without opportunity. A great character flawless. Pride and humanity hand in hand. One who loves his enemy as himself. Sense that attracts as soon as beauty. The tattling tongue that tells the truth. Greater self abnegation than that of trait love.

Homely Hints.

The pen strikes worse than the tongue. Where right concedes everything it is apt to lose all. Don't spend more time in teaching your parrot than yourself. It is a common bluff to accuse others of one's own ignorance.

Did you ever know a kleptomaniac to take the other fellow's blue silk? There is more solid compassion in a single cent than in a hundred centimes. The blackguard should be taught that in this country facts are as free as speech.

Two of the bravest acts ever done, but probably unrecorded, were these, writes Andrew Lang: We were trying to blow up a gate, in the Indian mutiny, and the fuse failed. A young Scottish officer was smoking a cheroot. He stroiled up and put the lighted end of the cheroot into the powder. He was blown up, fell into a ditch, and survived, but not to tell the tale. The other event was in civil life. A boat full of ladies and officers going to a picnic, was swamped in crossing an Indian river. A lady and an officer clung to an oar. It is not enough for two, say good-bye to the regiment for me. Then he left his hold of the oar and of life. It is easy to see that a romance might be founded on this, but these are the plain facts.

When I was out West, says a business man quoted in Hardware, a young man registered at the hotel and proceeded to make things lively. The first night he played poker with the landlord, and cleaned him out; the next night he came home drunk and whipped the cabman; the third night he went up and down the halls singing at the top of his voice singing and during the chambermaids to come out and embrace him. In the morning they asked for the key of his room and gave him his bill. He looked it over, and then said, with surprised pathos: "Don't you make any discount to clergymen?"

Bismarck, who had worn himself out in the services of Germany and of his emperor, rarely referred to his labors for the fatherland. One morning he and the Emperor William were riding together in the park. They had not gone far when Bismarck complained of fatigue. The emperor, who was quite fresh, said, somewhat testily: How is it that, though I am an older man than yourself, I can always outstride you? Bismarck's reply was as respectful as it was egotistical. Ah, sire, he said, the rider always outstriks the horse.

It is one of the glorious things that can be said of the true church of Christ that she is true to the trusts reposed in her. No organization can be glorious that is untrueworthy. It is a blot upon character that no greatness of numbers or wealth or enterprise can ever remove. Dishonesty in peasant or prince is a blot that even the world abhors. But integrity marked on character is everywhere a passport to public confidence.

Poor chap! Bright young fellow, but a hopeless idiot, I judge, from his talk. No, indeed. He's merely quoting a little passage from the latest Scotch novel.

Wear your untanned shoes when you go to the Klondyke. They'll make better soup.

Some two hundred sets for the regulation of the liquor traffic are in force in the United Kingdom wholly or in part at the present time. Two-thirds of these are for police and one-third for fiscal purposes. No wonder the legal officials engaged in the task of compiling a book on the Revenue Licensing Laws conclude it is high time the laws were simplified. There can be no simpler nor more effective law than prohibition.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

She—"I don't know what makes her so positive about everything!" He—"Her sex."

How the dickens did you happen to speak of the battle-ship Kentucky? Ask the unwelcome visitor. Association of ideas, I suppose.

"The camera has come!" was the tune the band struck up when the bicyclists appeared around the bend, bumping themselves like all possessed.

Minards Liniment is used by Physicians. Statistics prove that nearly two thirds of the letters carried by the world's postal services are written, sent to and read by English speaking people.

Mrs Peck—"If I had my life to live over again, I wouldn't marry the best man alive. I'd marry the best you wouldn't. I wouldn't ask you to.

Ask for Minards and take no other. Mead—"Are you sure that you love me?" Claude—"How can you doubt it when two nights a week I give up riding my wheel to call on you."

Economical and wealthy Father—"Do you know, my son, what aristocrat would do for you, my son? Robert—I know what it has done for me, father, and I respect you for it."

Keep Minards Liniment in the House. Practical Father—"I've given you a good college education; what more do you want?" Son—"You haven't yet supplied me with the means to live up to it."

Jack—"What makes you think the Miss Charmingy is the most popular girl on the beach?" Tom—"She's the only one the other girls refer to as a 'designing creature.'"

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is justly considered the only sure specific for blood disorders. Mrs Gabberton—"I understand your husband cannot meet his creditors. Mrs Fales—"Oh, the contrary he says he can't help meeting them at every turn. That's the reason he goes out to sea."

The best way to avoid scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness, is to use the best preventative known for that purpose—Hall's Hair Renewer.

Jinks—"at a party"—I don't see what the matter with that pretty woman over there. She was awfully flirty a little while ago, and now she won't have anything to do with me. Stranger—"I have just come in. She's my wife."

"It's dreadfully queer," said the housewife, "that the potatoes you bring should be so much bigger on the top of the basket than they are at the bottom."

"Miss," said the honest farmer, "it comes about this way. 'Platers' get a bushel of potatoes, and they put in a bushful of the last ones in every much bigger than the first ones."

Not one complaint has ever been made by those using Sarsaparilla according to directions. Furthermore, we have yet to learn of a case in which it has failed to afford benefit. So say hundreds of druggists all over the country. Has cured others, will cure you.

Mexicans are not very fond of Spaniards, and jokes are constantly cropping up in Mexico illustrative of the arrogance of the Spanish character. One now current in Mexico runs as follows: A Spaniard arrived at Vera Cruz and stepped ashore just as an earthquake occurred. Putting on a benign smile, he said: "Tremble not, Earth, I am not going to harm thee."

An Irishman whose orchard had been invaded by some picnickers, was arranging the potatoes with no mild form of vengeance, when one of the party said to him: There, my friend, don't get yourself into such a state of excitement; we'll compensate you. He returned Pat. De-gorra, ye ought to pay me!

Alfred A. Taylor, of Margate, 1891! "One bottle MINARD'S LINIMENT cured a swelling of the gambler joint, and saved a horse worth $140.00."

Thos. W. Payne, of Bathurst, saved the life of a valuable horse that the Vet had given up, with a few bottles of MINARD'S LINIMENT.

The wife of the late Professor Agassiz was one morning putting on her stockings and boots. A little scream attracted the professor's attention. Not having risen, he leaned forward anxiously on his elbow and inquired what was the matter. "Why a little snake has just crawled out of my boot!" cried she. "Only one, my dear?" interrogated the professor, calmly lying down again. "There should have been three." He had put them there to keep them warm.

Two Perfect Colors Found Only in Diamond Dyes. Perfection in color or shade is sure to captivate the hearts of the ladies, who are always unerring judges. The lovely pink produced by the Diamond Dyes is a discovery that has gladdened the hearts of thousands. This Diamond Dye Fast Pink for Wool is clear, pure, brilliant and fast as a rock. One package gives a magnificent shade of pink on two pounds of goods—silk or wool; a medium shade on three pounds; or a light and delicate shade on four pounds.

Attention is also called to the Diamond Dye Fast Light Blue for Wool. This is a dye that gives a color far surpassing the light blues produced by European dyes. Ladies having soiled white or cream dresses made from cashmere, nun's cloth or serge can have them dyed in rich shades of Pink or Light Blue and fast for evening wear. This making of new dresses out of soiled, faded and cast-off garments means a great saving in dollars to thousands of families in Canada.
