CHAPTER XXIII.

Love's Revolt.

'Miss Sims, too; and just out of a sick-bed, aren't you? Come, let me find you some wine and refreshments!' exclaimed Mrs. Dare, hospitably spitting the old woman away with her, and leaving her daughter to make the explanation about Lynette that she knew must be forthcoming.

Edgar looked tenderly at his beautiful sweetheart, until she dropped her eyes with a very becoming blush, and he blurted out:

'My sister—is she with you? His heart sank with fear as Myrtle answered promptly:

'Lynette is not here.'

'Not here—heavens!' and he was springing from his seat in dismay, when Myrtle gently pushed him back.

'Wait!' she said, reassuringly, and added, with a roguish smile: 'Your sister is safe and mamma and I have just returned from her wedding.'

'Her wedding? Impossible! I have just come from Blooming Meadows, and Lynette had run away!' the young man began, in astonishment, and again Myrtle returned, with a confident smile:

'I know all that, Edgar. She ran away from Graham Prentiss, but she was married at seven o'clock to another man.'

'You are jesting, Myrtle!' the young man cried out in painful anxiety.

'I am not jesting, Edgar. Do you not see how fine I am?' smiling down at her dark silken gown, relieved by rich white lace. I wore this gown to Lynette's wedding.'

'Whom did she marry, Myrtle? Stephen Belcourt, and the ceremony was in the Lewisburg prison.'

All at once Myrtle realized that she was talking to a sick man, and that the shock of her announcement was very sudden.

Edgar gave one convulsive start, as if he had received a wound, and sunk back in his chair, his eyes closed, his face deathly pale, his hand pressed convulsively against his heart.

In wild alarm, Myrtle sprang to his side, placing her warm, throbbing hand on his cold, white brow.

'Edgar, Edgar, speak to me!' she sobbed entreatingly.

His dark eyes opened in a dazed way, and he murmured:

'Do not be frightened. I have been very ill, and still weak. I cannot stand a sudden shock.'

'I am so sorry. I—I was too hasty. Let me get something to revive you!' she exclaimed, withdrawing her hand; but suddenly he caught it in both his own, saying in a stronger tone:

'Do not leave me. I am better now. But what horrible things were you telling me, Myrtle? It cannot be true that Lynette was mad enough to consent, or any one wicked enough to sanction my poor little sister's marriage to a criminal in prison awaiting trial for murder!'

He looked at her entreatingly, as if hoping for her to deny her statement.

But Myrtle answered stoutly: 'Oh, Edgar, he will surely be vindicated, for he is not guilty, and at

Eczema Not a Blood Disease

For this reason, internal treatments fail to cure—Success of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Experience with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment will soon convince anyone that Eczema is a disease of the skin and not of the blood.

Mr. A. D. Macaulay, Stornoway, Que., writes: "I had itching eczema on my leg for over five years and tried many remedies and several doctors without benefit. Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me completely."

Mrs. Chas. Gilbert, Haystack, Placentia Bay, Nfld., writes: "I was a sufferer from Salt Rheum for ten years and was cured by eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment. I am heartily thankful for this cure and want to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to other sufferers."

Why not get the cure started to-day. If you are a sufferer from eczema or any form of itching skin disease you will thank the day you heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment. 50 cts. a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

of Lynette's true friends admire her courage and constancy.

'Myrtle!' reproachfully.

'Now, Edgar Lewis, keep quiet, will you, while I go over the whole story of the case. Then you may have your say. But—my hand, please, I shall want it for dramatic gestures.'

And, gently releasing her hand from his clasp, not wishing to have the young man take too much for granted, Myrtle drew a chair close to his side, and recounted with moving eloquence the story of poor Lynette's trials and persecutions up to the moment of her flight from Blooming Meadows.

'You see how it was she cried; Lynette was desperate. She had lost the hope of your coming, and was in despair. At one moment she contemplated suicide. Then she prayed over it, and at last a wild temptation came to her to write to Stephen, tell him all, acknowledging that she loved him only, and accepting the offer of marriage he was making her that awful day when he was snatched from her side and cast into prison. Lastly she begged him to marry her on the same hour that was appointed for her wedding with Prentiss.'

'And he was coward enough to let my poor sister link her future to his dishonored name!' cried Edgar, hotly interrupting.

'Hush, Edgar; you shall not blame him! You should be proud to call him brother. Yes, he accepted her sacrifice, as I suppose you consider it. He told me it was the darkest hour of his life just before he received her precious letter at midnight, and he felt like one translated from hell to heaven. Next morning he sent for his own people, and talked to them. They were glad to help him all they could, so—well, Lawyer Price got the license. I carried her Stephen's glad letter, and helped her to get away from Blooming Meadows I brought her here; then we all met at the jail—the Belcourts, Stephen's lawyer, mamma, and I—and the rector of the Episcopal church, Doctor Easter, tied the knot. The jailer and his wife were as kind as could be, letting the marriage come off in their pretty little parlor, and even decorating it with potted plants for the occasion.'

She stopped, and Edgar asked, with a groan:

'At Belcourt with his people, of course. They are all in love with her, you know; but poor little bride, was it not cruel to be parted from her noble husband on her wedding-night?'

'What a lot you think of that fellow!' exclaimed Edgar, half-angrily.

'He deserves it,' she answered, very seriously; and added: 'I may as well tell you, Edgar, though it must be kept secret yet, that Stephen's lawyers are in possession of some very incriminating evidence that almost places the rope about Graham

Prentiss' neck. Lloyd Llewelyn returned from Washington to-day, having traced out step by step that man's courtship and marriage to Madge McDonald. He was her husband, and when she followed him here, he put her out of the way; then, to remove a rival from his path, he bribed Jason Bell to charge Belcourt with the murder.'

'Can this be true?' cried Edgar, in amazement, and she answered confidently:

'It is true, though, based on such clear links of circumstantial evidence that we hope to prove the man Bell guilty of perjury.'

'Thank God, then, Lynette was saved from a marriage with that guilty wretch! And, Myrtle, how can I thank you for your devotion to her interests?'

'I need no thanks. It pleased me to watch over her, for Lynette has always been as dear to me as my own sister.'

But suddenly Myrtle blushed hotly, seeing that she had given Edgar an opening such as an ardent lover would seize on to push his suit.

'I—I—' she began incoherently, but Edgar caught her hand and leaned over her, whispering tremulously: 'You love Lynette as a sister, don't you? Then let me make her your real sister, darling! I love you! You have known that through patient years, haven't you, sweet? I always felt as if God made us for each other, but I was too proud to ask you until my future prospects were assured. Now all is sunshine, and—let me kiss you, Myrtle! Silence gives sweetest consent!'

Up at stately Belcourt, in the brilliantly lighted drawing room, sat our pretty bride, Lynette, surrounded by a group of admirers—mamma-in-law, sister-in-law, and brother-in-law.

Now that the past had been explained, and Lynette's fealty to Stephen so nobly demonstrated, they fairly worshipped the choice, and vied with one another in loving demonstrations.

'Ah, if Stephen could only be with us now!' sighed the gentle mother, her tender heart returning to her son in his lonely prison cell—lonely, yet not unhappy; for his heart was warm with love for his noble little bride.

Suddenly the door opened and the curtains of the butler, and announced:

'Miss Dare, Miss Sims, and Mr. Lewis!'

And all at once there was a scene—Lynette and Edgar in each other's arms.

'Darling little bride!' he murmured.

'Then, you do not blame me, Edgar?'

'No, darling, no; but I don't intend to remain single now that you are married, so Myrtle and I have agreed to make a match.'

'I never saw a man yet that could keep a secret!' pouted Myrtle; and this tacit admission was the signal for all the women to fall on her with congratulatory hugs and kisses.

'To think that you shall be my sweet sister! How charming!' cried Lynette; adding, less the others should be jealous: 'I always wished for a sister, and now I am rich I have three.'

And just at that moment the poor old maid came up to her favorite, saying in a gentle voice:

'Honey, I beg pardon for coming here in such a time to see you, but you know I promised you a pretty wedding-gift, dearie, so here it is.'

And she suddenly clasped round the girl's white throat, with her feeble hands, a pretty gold chain and locket.

Lynette checked up when she tried to thank the dear old woman, and just caught her in her arms, with a fervent hug and kiss.

Then they all crowded round to inspect the gift, exclaiming on its beauty.

'What beautiful carving! Why, it's your monogram, isn't it?' asked Lloyd Llewelyn, who came last.

He held it in his hand, studying out the intricate lettering, and suddenly his voice was raised, shrill with horror:

'M. McD! Oh, heavens!'

And though his fingers trembled as with sudden ague, he touched the spring, and the locket opened, revealing a pictured face.

They all crowded around to look at it, Sally Ann exclaiming: 'Laws me! I never knew it had a picture inside the thing.'

But there within the golden lids, smiling out at them in all its dark, evil beauty, was the face of Graham Prentiss!

A triumphant cry ran from lip to lip: 'The lost locket!'

A hand grasped the old maid's shoulder, and Lloyd Llewelyn almost gasped:

'How came you by that thing?'

Not at all comprehending the prevalent excitement, Sally Ann explained calmly:

'Laws me! I found it, sir, an' I kept it, because there wa'n't no inquiry made fer it, an' I knowed 'twas no harm, fer Madge McDonald lost it at my cabin door the same day 'at she was shot—leastwise, I 'se shore 'twuz her'n, fer you kin see fer yourself a little thread of fine silk twisted in the clasp, just exactly like her blue silk belt an' collar.'

The Evening Chit-Chat

"The people, people work with, are often very queer. The people, people down by birth, quite about your first idea. The people, people choose as friends, our common sense appall. But the people, people marry, are the queerest folks of all."

"Why on earth couldn't she have married some other man? I'm sure she's attracted enough to have had some chance to pick a n d choose."

So, in querulous tones, my neighbor attacked our mutual friend's matrimonial taste.

Our mutual friend left college some years ago to marry the man of her choice. Her husband is deeply devoted to her and is an excellent provider. She adores him. They have three charming children. In every way, there seems an exceptionally happy marriage.

But, unfortunately for him—no, I won't say that, for I don't believe he minds it at all—unfortunately rather for some people's peace of mind, our mutual friend's husband has committed the mistake of being a silent and reserved, and perhaps rather peculiar man, in whom some people can see nothing pleasing.

Among these, needless to say, is my neighbor. Of course, you know my neighbor's type. I mean—

"And isn't she absurd? She chooses her own husband, or intends to if she hasn't already, but she simply will get accord that privilege to other people."

"She is always querulously wondering why so-and-so married such-and-such, and fretting because Mr. Someone Else will not fall in love with Miss Sweet Girl, who is so manifestly the right woman for him."

It seems to me that my neighbor's attitude is a most foolish and shortsighted one.

For me the wide divergence and the complete unaccountability of folk's matrimonial tastes, is a thing of delight and a joy forever.

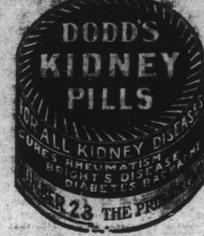

Why, just think, suppose all the men in town refused to love any one else but Miss — you know whom I mean—that girl who stands head and shoulders above all the others in the neighborhood for prettiness, sweetness and loveliness. What would become of the other girls?

But, thank Providence, things aren't arranged that way. And I seldom see a very homely and unattractive pair gazing into each other's eyes and evidently each thinking the other the nicest person in the world, without thanking Providence that tastes are queer, since their being so produces such happiness.

As the old lady said when she kissed the cow, "There's no accounting for tastes."

But on the whole I think that is a condition which should make us rejoice rather than complain.

Don't you?

as small buttons, lace motifs and metallic braid. They are usually made to overlap at the back with a fancy ornament finish.

Some of the latest suits have wool embroidery applied to the skirt as well as the coats. The broad velvet collars have elaborate wool embroidery which nearly covers the velvet, this elaboration also being introduced on the revers and cuffs in more simple designs, representing braided patterns.

Notwithstanding the long reign of black-and-white and white-and-black, these combinations will undoubtedly remain unchanged and it is even predicted that they will survive the fashion of autumn and winter and triumph in the spring. This information comes from leading manufacturers.

What We Owe to Insects.

In Mexico a tiny insect of brilliant scarlet feasts on the cactus. This is the cochineal bug, and it requires seventy thousand of these atoms to make a pound. The males are of little account. To be sure, each cochineal gentleman has a pair of wings, while his wife goes through life minus this handy means of locomotion. Madam Cochineal is twice as large as her husband, and the females outnumber the males two hundred to one.

The life of the tiny red bug is brief, and may be counted by hours. Her last act is always the laying of many dozens of eggs, which she covers with her dead body to protect them from the fierce rays of the tropical sun.

The cochineal industry is a thousand years old. For a long time after it was introduced into Europe everyone supposed that the red mite was a bud or seed of the cactus on which it lived. At the time the Spaniards discovered Mexico the industry was in its palmiest days, the scarlet atoms more precious than gold. Indeed, a pound of the wondrous dye produced by them was worth many times its weight in yellow metal. The cochineal bug and the nopal plant (a species of cactus which it feeds) were introduced into southern Spain and Algiers, where they were successfully propagated for three hundred years.

One day a German chemist of an investigating mind discovered that he could produce a dye quite as brilliant as cochineal much cheaper and in unlimited quantities from coal-tar. This was a deathblow to the industry, which for hundreds of years had made men rich both the New World and the Old.

Villainous-Looking "Indians."

An amusing incident occurred at the last Naval and Military Tournament. A German visitor, indicating some black-faced troops in Indian uniforms, said to one of the British officers: "Can you really trust these fellows?" "Implicitly," replied the officer. "Well, I should hardly have thought so," replied the German. "They're about the most villainous-looking lot of fellows I ever saw."

Just then one of the "Indian" troops turned to a companion and said: "Say, cully, got a chew of yer? I'm skun out."

Then did the German visitor realize the truth. The villainous-looking fellows with the dark, shifty skins and black beards were real English "Tomnies" in disguise.

Handicapped.

A gentleman who had the misfortune to lose his nose, and who was in the habit of giving alms to an old Dublin beggarwoman, was always saluted with the word "wish." "May the Lord preserve yer honner's eyesight."

Unable to fathom the meaning of this oft-repeated wish, as there was nothing wrong with his eyesight, he one day inquired of the woman as to its significance.

"Well, yer honner," the old crone replied, "it will be a bad thing for ye if ever gets wike, for you'll have nothing to rest your spectacles on."

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription
Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, and sleek.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.
Hoast, druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this well-tested remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drug. It is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

Fads and Fashions.

Stripes will be retained.

Satins are to have a great popularity.

Roman stripes have been added to the novelty list, and auto scarfings with double borders are used to some extent for separate blouses.

Men's fall and winter fashions contemplate padless shoulders, narrow trousers and a general slender effect in so far as it can be accomplished.

Trimming in one-sided, effects is much seen in every direction, in fact there is a general fashion tendency toward a chic one-sidedness.

Semi-tailored waists are made in both three-quarter and full lengths and these waists show a preference for a finish hat way from the elbow to the wrist.

The skirt model attracting most attention just now is a high-waisted

THE PATIENT BRAIN

A tireless worker so long as it is supplied with rich, red blood.

The brain is one of the most patient and industrious organs of the body. It can be induced, by good treatment, to perform prodigies of work. But it is sensitive and will not brook abuse. It responds to the lash at first, but if the lash is laid on too hard it balks.

Nervous trouble is generally brain trouble, and no suffering is to be compared to mental suffering, with the accompanying dread, suspicion and melancholy.

One-fifth of the blood in the human body is contained by the brain, so make the blood rich and red by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and you will overcome diseases of the nerves. Headaches will disappear, irritability will go, digestion will improve, and weakness and despondency will give place to new hope and courage, new vigor and energy.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food will enable you to avoid such extreme nervous troubles as paralysis and paralysis, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50; at all dealers, or Edmansson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Fads and Fashions.

narrow garment, ornamented with one or two lines of buttons from waist-line to hem in front.

The coming of autumn sees a general adoption of light-weight materials and veiled costumes for house-wear, and of heavier-than-usual-garments for outer garments.

The present call for millinery trimmings leans strongly toward the simpler trimmings that are adapted for use on the semi-dressed hats that the fall styles permit.

Long tunic effects are much to be seen in new separate skirts, while the pleated insets at the seams give more fullness when an extremely conservative model is required.

Good, old-fashioned hand-made tuck-lace has been revived for the trimming of lingerie. It is a durable, serviceable lace that never should have gone out of fashion.

Fancy millinery novelties are long ostrich quills in black, green or purple. Peacock feathers in quills and algrette fanics are suddenly quite popular for the trimming of small hats.

Small and large buttons made of white cotton thread, closely crocheted, are now in first fashion. They are placed on blouses, on one-piece frocks, in top wraps in every size.

The majority of dressy waists are made with three-quarter sleeves, though some full-length styles are noted. These models are made with some fullness at the elbow, tapering off to a snug finish at the wrist.

Latest approved suits from Paris have coats slightly longer, but this fashion is not yet fully confirmed, and coat lengths may be the same as last year or slightly longer and still be reasonably well within the fashion.

New evening gowns shown in the most exclusive shops are extremely rich, the materials brought out showing patterns in metallic threads, embossed velvet designs, sombre shades and rich East Indian colors.

Many new waists are finished at the waist-line with wide crushed kidies. Trimmings are applied to some, such

MONDAY, Sept. 25, 1911.

Still Waiting

The Government has up to the present declined to throw any light upon the dispute with the Contractor about taking the Bonavista Branch Railway into the heart of Trinity West.

It cannot be successfully denied that a dispute did arise, and the Government has not submitted to the public any evidence in support of its position. Indeed the evidence available points distinctly to the failure of the attempt of the Government to induce the Contractor to build the spur line as part and parcel of the general contract for which he is to be paid at $15,000 a mile. Their failure is clear from the fact that the Contractor continued his work to Bonavista without building it. It is evident also from the fact that the Contractor began the building of the station at Jenkins' farm, and began it too without the approval of the Government, who warned him he had commenced the building of the station at his own risk, and not without the approval called for in section 24 of the Construction Contract. The existence of the dispute is evidenced by the notification from the Government to the Contractor that "no further payment will be made on account of the Bonavista Branch line until such time as the line has been brought into Trinity proper."

This notification also contains the implication that the Government was insisting on the building of the Spur Line as part and parcel of the general contract for which payment had been agreed upon at $15,000 a mile. How then did it come about that a dispute could arise about the Spur Line? The origin of the dispute is not difficult to find, even in the absence of any disclosure by the Government. Read the last clause of section 2, viz.:

"All the said Branches shall follow, as nearly as may be practicable, the routes that may be decided by the Government."

It is clear that the words we have printed in black type may afford the Contractor the right to contend that the building of the Spur Line is so sufficiently impracticable that he cannot be compelled to build it as part of the Branch Line that he is to be paid for at $15,000 a mile.

We have no direct evidence before us that such an attitude has been taken up by the Contractor, but the existence of the dispute points to such a contention.

The words quoted are part of the contract to which the Great Seal of Newfoundland was affixed by order of the Governor in Council to which the signature of R. Watson was appended as Colonial Secretary, and the wording of which was approved by Boon For Placentia.

By the Portia we hear that it is reported along the coast that the Contractor to carry the line into Trinity and to do so at once!

If it is a mere reiteration of the desire of the Government that the Contractor shall build the Spur Line at $15,000 a mile, we shall be surprised if success in the future is any greater than the success of that attempt in the past.

If it means that the Government has directed the Contractor to build it as an extra under contract 24, then the Contractor will no doubt face the cost of the extra engineering difficulties, as section 26 provides that the Government shall pay the fair value of the work, no matter if it costs $100,000 a mile.

Meanwhile the people are waiting for the information which their trustee, the Government, has so far disinclined to vouchsafe.

DOING WELL IN CANADA.

The many friends of Allan Blackler, son of Mr. Wm. Blackler, of the General Post Office, will be pleased to learn that by last mail his father received a letter from him containing the pleasing intelligence that he had secured a first class position in the audit office of the C. P. R. at Montreal. His salary is double that which he was receiving in the Board of Health Office here. Allan is full of push and energy and is sure to make his mark in his new home. He brought with him to Canada splendid testimonials as to character and ability from Dr. Brehm and Inspector O'Brien, and these apparently have had the desired effect with the officials of the C. P. R. There is no doubt Allan will prove himself worthy of the confidence of his late superiors and forge ahead, as in his position attention to duty is repaid by rapid promotion.

BOY INJURED.

A boy driving in N. Aylward's carriage up Water Street, Saturday evening, was thrown out near Goodie's grocery store, and was severely injured. Mr. Aylward was going to his home at Kilbride, put his horse at a gallop which resulted in the boy being thrown out. As he did not stop a policeman boarded a street car and peddled him off before he got to the Ross Roads and procured his name.

THE ALMEIRANA HERE.

The Furness Liner Almeirana, Capt. Fairclough, arrived here yesterday afternoon from Liverpool after a run of 9 days. She had strong headwinds all the way and brought 425 tons cargo with 30 packages of mail matter. Her passengers were W. Marshall and J. S. Hill, the latter coming for Bishop Field College. The ship sails for Halifax to-morrow evening.

FOGOTA HERE.

The s.s. Fogota, Capt. B. Barbour, arrived here from the north last night bringing a full freight of whale oil and the following passengers in all: Mr. Tuff, Miss H. Gill, Mrs. I. Blandford, Mrs. J. Kean, Miss S. Keen, R. J. Winsor, W. F. Coaker, Capt. S. B. Winsor, Mrs. G. M. Hunt and child, Mr. T. Snelgrove, W. H. Crowdy, Percio Johnson, Miss G. Every, Mrs. M. Case, Miss Baker and 2 in steerage.

ACCIDENT IN COVE.

Wm. Bulley, a Council employee, whilst working in a cut at Bowring's Cove this afternoon, met with a painful accident. The clay caved in and hurt his legs badly. After some time fellow-workers removed the clay and it was found that his legs and feet were hurt so badly that the boots had to be cut to get them off. It is feared that some of the bones of the legs are broken.

FATALITIES ON THE LABRADOR.

By the Portia we hear that word was had in Boris last week that two of the crew of the banker Almeida, fishing near Domingo, had been drowned, but no names or particulars were at hand when the Portia was there. Another report heard on the coast by the officers of the Portia was to the effect that the schooner's skipper, Capt. Thos. Holfelt, the renowned fish killer, had died suddenly on board the vessel, but this could not be verified.

MARRIED.

At the R. C. Cathedral, on September 10th, by the Rev. Father O'Callaghan, Mr. James Walsh to Miss May Fogarty, both of this city.
At the Cathedral of S. St. Peter and Paul, Chicago, Ill., on Sept. 6th, 1911, by the Very Rev. W. T. Sumner, assisted by Rev. A. S. Morrison, R. A. Peters, of St. John's, Nfld., to Elizabeth A. Loudel, of Chicago, Ill.

DIED.

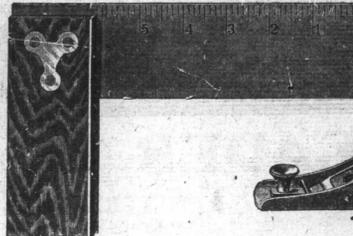

Yesterday morning, at St. Joseph's Hospital, William Michael Carey, aged 28 years, leaving a brother and sister to mourn their sad loss. Funeral to-morrow, Tuesday, at 2:30 p.m., off. It is brother's residence, 13 Pleasant Street. Friends and acquaintances please attend without further notice.

A Settlement Probably Made.

Special Evening Telegram. PARIS, To-Day. The Cabinet met yesterday, and the French reply to Germany's latest suggestions for an agreement was approved unanimously. Since Germany's proposals were drawn up after two long conversations between the German Foreign Minister and the French Ambassador, it will probably be found that France has accepted the arrangement proposed regarding Morocco itself, the question remaining for settlement being details of the cessions of Germany in French Congo.

Big Bank Merger.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, To-Day. Negotiations are completed for the absorption of the Colonial Bank by the Royal Bank of Canada. Mr. Neill, the assistant general manager of the Royal Bank is here in connection with the amalgamation, which is very important not only to the Royal Bank but to the West Indies and Canada for it will bring the Dominion and the Islands more closely into touch. The Colonial Bank was established in London seventy-five years ago. Its head office is in that city, but apart from that office, all the branches, sixteen in number, are in the West Indies.

South African Defence.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, To-Day. Lord Methuen will retain the post of Commander-in-Chief in South Africa until the Union Government has definitely adopted a scheme of defence. It is expected a plan for a small regular striking force and a territorial army, drawn from the population, will be initiated in February.

Strathcona Sails for Canada.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, To-Day. Lord Strathcona has sailed for Canada. It is expected that his successor as High Commissioner for the Dominion will be appointed on his arrival.

Special to Evening Telegram. HALIFAX, To-Day. Sir Wilfrid Laurier announced that he will lead the Liberal forces in the Dominion House of Commons.

Drowning Victims.

Special to Evening Telegram. BOSTON, To-Day. The waters of New England claimed 228 victims by accidental drownings during the past summer season.

Indigestion is Ended Forever.

No Heartburn, Gas, Dyspepsia or Headache five minutes later.

Nothing will remain undigested or sour on your stomach if you will take a little Diapensin occasionally. This powerful digestive and antacid though as harmless and pleasant as candy, will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you can eat.

Eat what your stomach craves without the slightest fear of indigestion or that you will be bothered with sour risings, Belching, Gas on Stomach, Heartburn, Headaches from Stomach, Nausea, Bad Breath, Water Brash or a feeling like you had swallowed a lump of lead, or other disagreeable miseries. Should you be suffering now from any stomach disorder you can get relief within five minutes.

If you will get from your pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapensin you could always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and your meals would taste good, because you would know there would be no indigestion or Sleepless nights or Headache or Stomach misery all the next day; and besides, you would not need laxatives or liver pills to keep your stomach and bowels clean and fresh.

Pape's Diapensin can be obtained from your druggist, and contains more than sufficient to thoroughly cure the worst case of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. There is nothing better for Gas on the Stomach or sour odors from the Stomach or to cure a Stomach Headache.

You couldn't keep a handkerchief or more useful article in the house.

Police Court News.

A drunk and disorderly in Richard Byrne's saloon was the first arraigned to-day. Mr. Byrne testified that the man, who is a cripple, repeatedly has entered his place and called him the vilest of names, and that he proved himself a nuisance right along. He was fined $10 or 30 days.

Three drunks were each fined $1 or 3 days. A disorderly was fined $2 or 7 days.

Three stokers, in for safekeeping, were released yesterday. The defendant in a trivial assault case was let off on paying costs.

The man Leary who assaulted Saml. Butt on Mundy Pond Road last week was arraigned to-day, charged with beating, wounding and ill-treating Butt, who could not appear. His wife, who was present, testified that she was called by a woman named Parsons who told her to go to her husband's aid, and that she found him on the road with Leary upon him as he lay on the ground and pressing his knees into the man's stomach, the while her husband's tongue protruded from his mouth. Dr. Macpherson was called, is still attending him and her husband, she averred, is still in bed very ill after surgery. Leary was remanded for 8 days, but if Butt's condition improves he will be released on bail.

Injured Stoker Dead.

Stoker J. W. McLurg who was hurt badly about the head by a fall received on board the S. S. Lutetion, which ship put in here last week and landed the man, died in the General Hospital at 5.30 p.m. Saturday. From the time of the accident up to the time of his death the man never regained consciousness, still when the Captain visited the hospital with Bowring Bros. Shipping Clerk Friday night he seemed to be better and Matron Southcott was pleased with his condition. The remains were interred at 11.30 to-day in the C. E. Cemetery, Rev. G. H. Hewitt officiating. He leaves a wife and 2 children at South Shields, and Shipping Master Carter will write them particulars of the husband and father's sad death. Mr. Stodgrass, the 2nd Engineer, who was also hurt in the ship is very much better and will go home by the next Allan boat. When he arrives in the Old Country he intends seeing Mrs. McLurg and giving her details of her husband's death.

ARRESTED FOR ASSAULT.

Saturday afternoon a man named Lawrence Leary, of Mundy's Pond, was arrested by Sergt. Mackey at his residence under warrant for assaulting "Doctor" Butt. According to the story which Leary tells, Butt was under the influence of liquor when the men met and used the most insulting language to his opponent, whom he attempted to strike, when the other hit and knocked him down. Dr. Macpherson attended Butt again Saturday. He is very ill and confined to his bed.

LYING ON GROUND.

Saturday the police station had a phone that a man was lying on Newtown Road, and asking that officers be sent to remove him. Sergt. Mackey and Const. Keefe drove there, but some people passing who knew the individual removed him to his home.

Too Unlucky.

The old lady was just about to be knocked down when the taxi-cab driver, by a superhuman effort, managed to slap on the brakes and steer clear of what promised to have been a nasty accident.

"Bravo, driver! Bravo! Nobly done!" exclaimed an admiring spectator. "I wouldn't have run over her for the world," replied the taxi man. "She would have been my thirteenth this month, and I'm a bit superstitious."

Cochrane-st. Church.

A large congregation assembled at the above church last evening. A very interesting sermon was preached by Rev. W. H. Webber on the necessity and the power of faith. He took his text from the words which were to Luther the means of light and guidance, and showed how the great reformer followed his star to the end of his life. He spoke of the necessity of faith to all men, both in themselves, in their fellow men, in God and in Christ as the Saviour. The choir sang an anthem by Walter Spinney with great expression, the solo being taken by Miss Vincent with her accustomed sweetness. The singing of the special hymns was joined in heartily by the large congregation, and before singing that splendid hymn by Dr. Matheson, "O love that will not let her go." Mr. Webber made reference to the circumstances under which it was composed. The service was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

The Nfld. Teachers' Association.

The First meeting of the N.T.A. under the new management, was held at the residence of the President, on Saturday, 23rd inst.

The attendance was very encouraging, and all were keenly interested in matters brought to their notice. The chief business transacted was:

(a) The appointment of Committees of Management for the Educational Journals.

(b) The discussion of certain resolutions passed at Convention re benefits to teachers; and the appointment of a Committee to get them into suitable form for presentation at an early date.

(c) It was decided to send sample copies of Journals to every teacher in the country, followed by a circular letter, requesting all teachers to become interested in and join the Association.

The Principals of Colleges volunteered to back up this circular with a private letter to every teacher of his own denomination. The interest manifested at this point seemed to be such that if there are 1,001 teachers in the island, and a 1,000 joined, the Association will not rest satisfied till they get the other one.

The Journals are being got ready with all speed, and will be sent forth within a week or ten days. Having all the Principals of Colleges in the city keenly interested and actively engaged in the affairs of the Association, we feel sure that their assistance and outport teachers will fall into line in due time, and thus the success of the N.T.A. will be assured.

The next meeting will take place on Saturday at 2 p.m. on Saturday, 30th inst. Our outport friends will please note this as the hour is fixed to suit them.

There appear to be possibilities in the idea of M. Constantin, a French inventor, who seriously suggests that the use of an adoption of the windmill would reduce the air resistance and increase the speed. At first sight the idea seems fanciful and quite impracticable, but M. Constantin has given considerable weight to this theory by constructing a model aluminum wagon which, according to a newspaper cutting, was driven forward with surprising energy by a windmill turned by a headwind. The windmill is apparently a form of conical screw, with the blades inclined forward. It is placed at the front of the wagon and its axis is so geared to the wheels that the screw is turned forward when the screw is rotated by the breeze it encounters. Tested against the mild air current of an ordinary electric fan the model wagon promptly started ahead, soon developing considerable speed, and was found capable of climbing grades of six per cent and over. When tried with a stronger fan it easily carried a load of over twenty pounds.

New York, Sept. 15.—Another young Italian was caught to-day with a bomb in his possession, but in this case the police say the prisoner had a lighted match in his hand, which he'd just applied to the spluttering fuse. Detectives from the Italian squad who made the discovery quickly extinguished the fuse and captured the lighter after chasing him to the roof of an East Side tenement house and exchanging several shots. None of the bullets took effect.

The prisoner, Giovanni Rizzo, aged 19, refused to talk and proved as baffling as Giuseppe Costabile, who was recently arrested with a bomb under his coat.

Just before Rizzo was arrested a bomb was exploded in a tenement in East 12th street. It shook the plaster off the walls and blew down several doors, but did no other damage.

Saturday afternoon a little boy, aged 4 years, was removed from his home at 28 Joy Place to the Hospital to be placed under observation for typhoid. Another of the family is in Hospital now suffering from the disease.

Shooting Game Birds in Newfoundland.

BY JOHN DUFF, IN "ROD AND GUN."

Having not only derived much pleasure but also a vast amount of information from reading the many excellent stories of fishing and hunting appearing in Rod and Gun I thought many Canadian sportsmen might like to know something of our experiences in shooting game birds in Newfoundland.

I was much interested in the stories "A Day with the Chickens in Manitoba" and "Pheasant Shooting in the Niagara Peninsula" being deeply struck on reading the latter with the notices put up forbidding trespassing and shooting. In Newfoundland we have not to contend with any such drawback. When the shooting season opens the sportsmen can roam at will from daylight till dark without fear of interruption. He may search in vain for any prohibitory notice on the shooting grounds.

Our game bird season opens on September twentieth and readers (particularly those who are game bird hunters themselves) can imagine how anxiously we await the dawn of day. We all know something of the enjoyment to be derived from the tramp through the country, the bracing air of the open, the watching of the dogs as they take the scent and bring us up to the first covey for the first shot and the delightful satisfaction of the full bag.

In my own case the nearest shooting ground is about a mile and a half from my house. Generally I walk to this particular ground leaving home about four o'clock and arriving on the ground just before dawn, in time to hear the old cock give his morning call. How the blood tingles in a true sportsman's veins as he hears the different cawings go backward and forward over the grounds. My good dog Ping shivers with excitement, waiting for the dawn and the command to go. If it is the early bird that catches the worm so also is the early sportsman that obtains the first chance at the covey.

Following the calls good old Ping soon obtains the scent and looking back to see if I am within shooting distance, waits until I come up. A few creeping steps and then bang! bang! that delight of a sportsman's heart—a right and a left—being secured as an opener of the day's sport (The birds are fairly plentiful and I haven't to wait long before my other dog "Dash" is also on the point. While watching the dogs and admiring their work we wish for a camera in order that we may picture them. One of the finest sporting pictures possible is that of a dog standing on "point" with one paw lifted, body rigid and tail straight, waiting for the birds to rise.

Crossing the ground we find other coveys and singles and it isn't long before the birds are scattered. Many other shooters are present on the first morning of open season and I never expect to do much on that morning.

At the end of three hours' tramping we stop for a rest and a light lunch and make plans for the next two hours, the carriage having been ordered for ten o'clock. After lunch we carry out our arrangements and arrive at the road about the time stated with fairly satisfactory bags.

Our grounds are magnificent for game bird shooting—bare hills, low brush, grass covered hollows dotted with trees, not too tall to hide the birds when they rise and the brush not too thick to prevent the dogs from going in. We can drive right on the grounds and keep the carriage there should we desire to do so.

While driving on these grounds we have seen the dogs jump from the rig and "point," not ten yds. from us. One of the accompaniments of illustrations is a man, the boy whom I always take with me to carry the bag, as well as myself and will give readers a little idea of the shooting ground and of the nature of the sport. Norman takes a keen delight in the shooting and always has a good excuse ready whenever I make a miss—a very encouraging characteristic in one's assistant. The bag on this occasion contained fifteen birds—now too bad for a four hours' tramp.

The second one, showing my little girl Dorothy holding the bag, was taken about three miles from my home. On that occasion the bag contained seventeen partridge, the reward of a four hours' tramp.

On one occasion when making our way down to meet the carriage with a bag of nine birds both dogs came to "point." The birds saw us as the ground was bare but for all that I managed to get a right and left to add to the number.

Within twenty yards they came to point again and before I could get a shot off went about thirty birds. Little did I think I should have the pleasure of carrying some of them home as they appeared to get clear away. We mounted a hill and looking round for the likeliest spot on which they would settle we started on to a piece of low brush. In about ten minutes and when I thought we had misjudged the flight, Dash was missing as we passed a clump. I called Ping, showing her the direction to take and was interested in seeing how keenly and quickly she took up the matter, when Norman saw Dash just inside the edge patiently waiting for us. We knew then it was not a false alarm. Getting between the two dogs I just said "Go on!" when they went forward for a couple of feet and refused to move further. The first step I made up went the birds, four first, then two singles, and then a portion of the covey had landed there but I added seven to the bag.

I believe my dogs to be two of the prettiest and best dogs that ever tramped a moor and they have aided me to many a fine piece of sport. It requires a sportsman to experience the thrills following a position right in a covey when a man is naturally anxious to do his best to fill his bag and has the further knowledge of the presence of a friend who sits patiently on a hillside watching every movement and quite prepared to criticize every mis-shot a man under such circumstances is liable to make.

On the occasion referred to I got short of ammunition and had to borrow some from my friend Moore. He readily agreed to the loan and further offered to take the birds to town for me as he was going home. This offer I declined with thanks as in Newfoundland it is always necessary to have the birds to show. Sportsmen in this country do not exaggerate worse than those elsewhere, but we have an understood rule which causes a sportsman to carry his own birds. When we reached the road my wife, Dorothy and the pony were awaiting us.

Last season birds were very plentiful on the island, particularly at a place called Salmon Cove, a name given owing to the magnificent salmon filling the nearby streams.

One morning we decided upon shooting at Salmon Cove, and after an hour's drive arrived on the grounds. The latter are not ideal as the cover is very scarce, but it wasn't long before the dogs found a good scent. To our surprise the birds were waiting and for some time managed to leave us with an empty bag. The hills are high, rocky and rugged, with very little covering for the birds. I never saw them so numerous as on that particular morning, every hill being covered with coveys, but they were too wild to allow us near them.

We saw birds by the hundred but the place was too bare for dogs to work with advantage. To give readers some idea of the state of the case we saw one flock of fully two hundred birds passing two gun shots away, but they were too wild to corroborate this statement.

However, after getting further up the country we had better luck and arrived home with thirteen birds as the result of the morning's shoot.

Two days later we were back at Salmon Cove with an idea new to us but which we are informed is an old one in England. We ordered a kit and my wife painted upon it the representation of a large black hawk. Norman took the lure and mounting a good elevation started "riving." To our delight the kite soared high and made an excellent imitation of one of the partridge's numerous and most dreaded enemies.

We didn't have far to go when the dogs pointed and the kite did the trick. We managed to get within easy gunshot of the birds, every time—in fact at times had to wait till they got some distance from us.

To our great disappointment rain started and the wind went down. Going through a valley we broke the main stick of the kite. Then we had to hurry to shelter drenched to the skin, though we had the gratification of having obtained a good bag.

I was much interested some time ago in reading the various reasons given for decreases in the partridges in Ontario. A few years ago we were in a similar condition in Newfoundland. Our government closed the season for one year, though as regards increasing the numbers I think no good came from it. If the birds are allowed to increase to any great extent a plague prevails and they are decimated by disease instead of the more merciful efforts of the sportsman.

There is much we have still to learn about our feathered friends, and amongst other things is the reason for the periodical appearance of apparently contagious diseases amongst them.

Being Removed.

The old schr. Tiger, sunk off Bowring's premises, is to-day being removed by Mr. J. Taylor. The Telegram a few days ago pointed out the great danger that this wreck was to the tugs and steamers, and it is pleasing to see that our suggestion has been acted upon re-her removal.

Winnard's Liniment Cures Colds, Etc.

Wants Theatricals.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—I notice by advertisements in the papers the theatre of the Total Abstinence Society is to let, and as there is a feeling in the city that this community should not be limited to picture shows for amusement, the opportunity now presents itself for some local gentlemen to invest a few dollars, hire the hall and secure a good company to play here for the winter season.

The theatre, I understand, can be secured for a very reasonable yearly rental, and as it is the only hall in the city properly fitted for theatres and operas, it may be a good paying investment for a number of citizens who would form a company.

Every one will admit, I am sure, that our people are keen on a good theatrical or operatic show, and it is quite a while since we had anything in this way, there is no doubt that crowded houses would greet a good performance every night this winter.

Who will start the ball a-rolling? Surely we have gentlemen in this city ready to risk a few dollars in this undertaking. It will be too late to talk when the hall is gone once more for moving picture shows, and now is the time to act.

Yours sincerely,
CITIZEN.
