CHAPTER XI.
The Accident.

"I'm not hurt, I am sure," she said, and she stood upright and felt—woman-like—for her hat.

He thought—man-like—that she had struck her head; and his anxiety grew poignant.

"Don't move!" he implored her. "Please, please don't move!" And his strong arm wound round her, and seemed unconsciously to lift her off her feet, so completely did it support her.

Norah was trembling. She stretched out her arms, and looked up at him with a flickering laugh.

"I don't think I have broken anything," she said, her color coming and going. "No, I am sure I have not! Oh, please, don't mind me; the poor horses!"

"Never mind the horses!" he said, almost curtly. "Hold on to my arm and walk just three steps; no more, mind!"

Norah obeyed, her hand just touching his arm; he took it in his, and held it firmly.

"I haven't even broken my leg," she said, forcing a laugh. "And I don't see how I could have done! I am not in the least hurt—and do, please, not think of me! The horses—"

He paid not the slightest regard until he had assured himself that she could walk without pain, then she heard him draw a breath and murmur, "Thank God!" with fervent solemnity.

Then, still holding her arm tightly, he led her to the bank.

"Sit down and rest; quite still, please!" he said.

"Yes," she said obediently, and she allowed him, without the faintest protest, to wrap the shawl round her, noticing how careful and gentle the strong hands became in the act.

She looked up for a second and met his eyes, still full of the deepest anxiety, then lowered hers suddenly, and watched him under her long lashes as he hurried to the side of the coachman.

One horse was standing quivering in every limb, but the other was still lying in the road, apparently inextricably jumbled up with the harness.

She noticed that he seemed to take in all the details of the situation with instant promptitude, and she watched him, still under half-lowered lids, as he took out a claspknife and cut the trace, and gently, but firmly, got the struggling, panting horse on to his feet.

The coachman and footman stood for a second eying the wreck and wiping their perspiring foreheads; the footman's hat was gone, and his coat torn.

"Are you hurt in any way?" demanded Cyril Burne.

"No, sir; thank you," replied the coachman, after a glance at his fellow servant. "But her ladyship?" he asked, anxiously.

"I think—I hope—she is all right," replied Cyril, under his breath.

"Thank God for that, sir!" "Amen!" responded Cyril, almost inaudibly.

"Yes, sir, I don't know what my master and mistress would have done if anything had happened to her." His voice shook. "I've been in his lordship's service for twenty years, sir, and this is my first accident—to speak of; but," he looked at the wreck with dismay, "it's an awful one! And it would have been a deal worse," he added, with respectful earnestness, "if it hadn't been for you, sir, catching them as you did. It's a mercy you wasn't got down under 'em and kicked to bits."

"Never mind that," said Cyril, quickly, and with a warning glance toward Norah. "Let us see what damage is done, and he went and examined the carriage.

"The wheel's broke, sir," announced the footman.

"And the pole's gone like match-wood," said the coachman, dolefully. "I'm afraid it's impossible to take her ladyship home," he added, reluctantly.

What was it made Cyril's heart leap at the words?

"It is not very far to the Court," he said. "I will see Lady Norah safely home."

The coachman touched his hat. "Thank you, sir."

"Well, then," said Cyril, for the two men still seemed shaken and confused, "if you are sure you and the footman are uninjured, you had better lead the horses to the village and leave him here by the carriage until you can get help to get all away."

The coachman touched his hat. "Yes, sir," he said; "but I'd better take the horses back to Ferndale as soon as possible. My mistress will be terrible anxious if we're late, and fancy an accident has happened—"

It was.

Cyril nodded, and taking an envelope from his pocket, wrote on the blank side in rather shaky characters, for there was a funny feeling in his arm:

Lady Norah is quite safe and unharmed, and will have reached the Court before you get this. The coachman was not in any way in fault.

CYRIL BURNE.

He read this to the men, and they touched their hats gratefully.

"Thank you, sir," said the coachman. "It's very good of you to speak up for us, but you haven't said that you risked your own life stopping—"

"Never mind that," said Cyril. "There is no need to mention that; I'm all right. Here, let us drag some of the wreck further out of the road," and he went to help them, but he stopped suddenly, and his face grew momentarily pale.

"Never mind," he said; "the footman will see that no one runs into it." He took the one carriage lamp that was still burning and examined the horses with a practised eye.

"Not much damage done, wonderful to say," he said, cheerfully, "but the sooner you and they are home, the better. Good-night."

Then he went back to Norah. She had obeyed him so implicitly that she seemed to have been motionless. She looked up as he approached her with a question on her lips, for she had heard nothing of the conversation between him and the men; but the simple "Well!" would not come.

"It is all right," he said, answering the look. "Neither of them is hurt, and the horses seem very little the worse, barring the fright. It has been a wonderful escape. And you?" His eyes wandered over her anxiously. She smiled.

"I have come off better even than the horses," she said. "For I am not even frightened."

"And you can walk?" he asked. She rose promptly, but he took her arm in time to help her.

"Oh, yes."

"I am afraid you will have to walk to the Court," he said, reluctantly, "unless I leave you in charge of the footman and bring some kind of conveyance from the village; it is not very far."

"Oh, no, no," she said, quickly. "I can walk home quite easily, and would not give you so much trouble for the world."

"It would not give me trouble," he said, quietly. "But ill news flies apace, and the earl might hear of the accident, and be alarmed on your account."

"Yes, yes," she assented at once, "I will walk, please."

"You must take my arm," he said. She put her hand on his arm, then drew back with a sudden color, and her eyes drooped as she said:

"But—but I need not trouble you to come all that way."

His own eyes sought the ground for a moment, then he raised them, and looked at her steadily, but with an eagerness, an earnestness which he tried hard to suppress.

"You cannot go alone," he said. "If you will not let me go with you, there is only one other way; I will stay by the carriage and send the footman with you."

She caught her lip in her teeth, and stood irresolute for a space while one could count ten, then she looked up at him.

"If you will be so kind," she said. He thought that she meant him to send the footman, and turned, a little sigh escaping him, but Norah said quite innocently:

"Will you tell him, please, that I will send him any help if he wants it?" Cyril's face cleared like sunshine after rain.

"Yes, yes," he said, and he gave the message to the footman and was back in an instant.

"You must take my arm," he said, and though he tried to speak in a matter-of-fact voice, there was a suspiciously joyous thrill in it.

Norah would have declined, but it seemed to her that it would only emphasize the situation, and once more she put her hand upon his arm. She did not notice that he had given her the right one, instead of the left.

For a minute or two they were silent as they made their way along the lane filled with the perfume of a summer's night. Above them the moon slowly sailed upward, a thrush sang sleepily somewhere in the hedge, and the bats whirled through the silver light.

Norah was still trembling a little, but, as she said, she was not frightened. It was not fear that caused her heart to beat so fast that it almost seemed to her as if he must hear it.

The silence at last grew tangible, almost embarrassing, and suddenly Norah almost stopped.

"Lady Ferndale!" she said, in a tone of remorse. "She will think that it is worse than it is, and I forgot to send her a message."

"That's all right," he said. "I wrote a line or two saying you were safe, and sent it by the coachman."

She looked at him, but said not a word for a moment, then, in a low voice, she murmured:

"Then, good-by, glowworm," he said. "Poor thing, I pity you!" he added, inaudibly, as he laid it on the grass; "to be disliked by her!"

"I dare say he is immensely relieved," said Norah.

"Ah, he didn't know when he was well off," he said.

Norah moved forward, and instinctively laid her hand on his arm again.

She had crossed round to the other side of him while she had been examining the glowworm, and it was his left arm that she now touched, and lightly as she touched it, she felt a faint shudder run through him.

Her hand flew from his arm, and she stopped and looked at him.

"You seem to have thought of everything."

He laughed softly. "That was not much to think of, Lady Norah."

"And yet I forgot it," she breathed, with self-reproach.

"Oh, don't blame yourself," he said. "Why, the shock alone was enough to drive everything out of your head. I think you have behaved wonderfully!"

She smiled at his earnestness. "How strange that you should have been there!" she said. "You saw it all—or didn't you? I mean when the horses first took fright?"

"Yes, I was watching the owl, and saw it go swooping across the road in front of them. I thought they would be startled. It—the color flashed in—" to his face for a moment—"it was rather strange my being there." He could not tell her that he had returned to the spot where he had seen her in the afternoon, that he might dream of her in the gloaming, and perhaps get a glimpse of her on her way back to the Court. "I'm rather fond of mooning about in the evening. I am glad I happened to be there."

"So am I—so were we all," she corrected herself. "What made the horses stop?" she asked, innocently.

"The carriage caught in the trunk of a tree and the near horse fell," he replied, simply. "The coachman was not to blame; no one could have held them from the box."

"Poor men," she said. "You will be able to tell Lady Ferndale how it all happened, and that they were not to blame?"

"Yes," he said. "It will be an excuse for calling on Lady Ferndale."

"Ah, yes," she assented, almost eagerly. "You will like her so much."

"You have spent a happy evening?" he asked, and his voice was subdued by sympathy; the touch of her hand, the sound of her voice was thrilling through him. Her very nearness to him was casting a glamor over him, so that it seemed almost impossible to speak any other words than "I love you! I love you!"

"Ah, yes," said Norah; "there never were such lovable people; never! At least," she sighed softly, "I have met so few people, and never any who were so kind to me."

"Kind to you!" he echoed, almost rebelliously. "How could they help it?"

The warmth, and something more than warmth, the subdued passion in his tone sent the blood to her face, and she was silent for a moment; then suddenly she stopped.

"Look, there is a glowworm!" she exclaimed, with girlish eagerness, and in a low voice, as if she feared to startle it.

"Yes," he said at once; "would you like to have it? I will get it for you," and he went forward and carefully plucked it up. "There it is," he said, holding it in the palm of his hand.

"It is not so pretty as its light, and even that vanishes in any other. See," and he held it in the full rays of the moon.

She bent forward, so near that the red-brown hair almost touched his lips. His breath came fast, and he stood still as a stone—but, ah! how unlike a stone with that fast beating heart!—and Norah, entirely absorbed in the curious insect, touched it with her forefinger.

"I don't quite like it," she said, drawing back her finger and looking up at him with a smile and a little feminine shudder which he thought surely the most charming gesture he had ever imagined. "No, I am sure I don't like it," and she laughed.

"Then, good-by, glowworm," he said. "Poor thing, I pity you!" he added, inaudibly, as he laid it on the grass; "to be disliked by her!"

"I dare say he is immensely relieved," said Norah.

"Ah, he didn't know when he was well off," he said.

Norah moved forward, and instinctively laid her hand on his arm again.

She had crossed round to the other side of him while she had been examining the glowworm, and it was his left arm that she now touched, and lightly as she touched it, she felt a faint shudder run through him.

Her hand flew from his arm, and she stopped and looked at him.

An Innovation in International

(The Globe, New York)
The submarine campaign, a racket, involving as it did the theft of six merchantmen in 100 hours, brings to the duller apprehension appreciation of innovation in international law which this country, so far as administration has power in the United States since its beginning, a nation has steadily contended for the seas; complete freedom not being attainable, it has to keep within narrow limits, and has reversed this position given up gains acquired by progress.
International law with its merchantmen captured at sea, clear two and a half years ago, right of capture existed, but closely circumscribed—as, for example, in the American navy prepared by Admiral Stockton, a gun with a blank charge fired. If the merchantman fired, then a shot was to be sent off her, and only if the port flight could she be attacked. The merchantman's stoppage and party in a small boat is to be patched, with not more than going aboard to examine the merchantman's papers. If she is to be of enemy registry, or contraband carrier, the vessel normally to be seized, a prize placed in charge, and sent to prize court, after full hearing, vessel is to be appropriated.

An Innovation in International Law.

(The 'Globe,' New York.)

The submarine campaign off Nantucket, involving as it did the destruction of six merchantmen in as many hours, brings to the dullest comprehension appreciation of the great innovation in international law to which this country, so far as one administration has power to commit it, has apparently consented. The United States since its beginning as a nation has steadily contended for freedom of the seas; complete freedom not being attainable, it has sought to keep within narrow limits departures therefrom. The present administration has reversed this policy and given up gains acquired by a century of progress.

International law with respect to merchantmen captured at sea was clear two and a half years ago. The right of capture existed, but it was closely circumscribed—as, for example, in the American naval code prepared by Admiral Stockton. First, a gun with a blank charge was to be fired. If the merchantman did not lie to sea, a shot was to be sent in front of her, and only if she persisted in flight could she be attacked. After the merchantman's stoppage an unarmed party in a small boat is to be despatched, with not more than three going aboard to examine the merchantman's papers. If she is found to be of enemy registry, or to be a contraband carrier, the vessel is then formally to be seized, a prize crew placed in charge, and sent before a prize court, after full hearing, that the vessel is to be appropriated.

Our regulations thus do not countenance the destruction of vessels at the time of their capture. When the Confederate cruisers sank vessels on the spot our Government denounced the acts as piratical. Before the Geneva tribunal our Government claimed damages because Great Britain had permitted cruisers guilty of such practices to leave her ports. On Sunday our war vessels looked on without protest while the work of summary destruction went on. The warning was scant, and the visit and search even scantier. As soon as passengers and crews were in small boats the merchantmen were sunk. There was no thought of getting the judgment of a prize court. Prize courts have no reason for further existence.

Recently, as an exception to the general rule, the right of instant destruction has been recognized. But such destruction was legal only when conditions were unusual. International law said that the prize should be taken straight to a port where a prize court was sitting. But in the present war the German Admiralty has made the exception the general rule. First, by overseas, and then by undersea cruisers; it has done what it could to destroy what there is of sea freedom. The Wilson administration by insisting on nothing more than that passengers and crews shall be allowed to live if there is vessel destruction, in effect consents to destruction if lives are safeguarded. The administration has countenanced the doctrine that private property at sea does not exist. So doing, it has abandoned advocacy of a principle stoutly upheld by all its predecessors. Public opinion does not yet seem alive to the price the President has paid to secure the appearance of a diplomatic victory, but time will bring an awakening. The administration, saying that no single nation could change international law according to its wish, has consented by its acts to a most momentous innovation.

Recruiting Meeting at Bay Bulls.

Special to Evening Telegram. BAY BULLS, Nov. 8. Last night the first recruiting meeting was held in the school here, and was addressed by Messrs. Meaney, McGrath and Private Gladney. There was a good attendance of the men of the settlement. The meeting was called to order at 8 p.m. by Mr. A. Henri, Chairman. The opening speaker was Mr. J. T. Meaney, who addressed the meeting for 40 minutes, reviewing the history of events leading up to the present war, and pointing out the necessity of the young men of military age responding to the call to arms and keeping up the Newfoundland Regiment to full strength at the front and maintaining the splendid record the sons of Newfoundland have made for their country. He was followed by Private Gladney, who recounted the interesting incidents of his experience through the Gallipoli campaign, which elicited rounds of applause. Mr. R. T. McGrath, Inspector of Customs, closed the meeting by an eloquent address of thirty minutes, presenting to the meeting forcible reasons why the young men of Newfoundland should offer themselves for service in the Newfoundland Regiment. His speech was able and eloquent, finishing by a stirring appeal to men of military age to come forward and offer themselves to the service of King and Country. They held a meeting to-night at Witless Bay.

The "Gift of Kings."

There is no gift which conveys such a personal message of regard—as a portrait—for years it has been the gift of romance, the "Gift of Kings"—there is nothing so delightful to give—there is certainly nothing so welcome to receive.

The exquisite Sketch Photographs made at the Studio of S. H. Parsons & Sons, corner of Water and Prescott Streets, are entirely different from ordinary work. The convincing likeness, the refined simplicity, the absence of accessories, the slight suggestion of background, the freedom of the black pencil work, give the portraits an unrivalled charm and interest.

For good class work such as the arm of S. H. Parsons & Sons are noted for, it is essential that ample time be allowed for the completion of all orders.

There are a large number of people who make praiseworthy resolutions to have photographs made early for Xmas, but who put off ordering till the last moment; we advise these people to place their orders as early as possible, to avoid disappointment. We have on hand Leather Pocket cases for photographs, a most welcome present to your friend abroad. Studio open every night.

Man Suicides BY HANGING.

Mr. C. H. Hutchings, K.C., Deputy Minister of Justice, is in receipt of a message from Magistrate John Roper, of Bonavista, to the effect that a man named John Dyke, aged 55 years, of that place had ended his life yesterday morning there by hanging himself to a beam. No particulars as to what led up to the rash act were received, and Magistrate Roper is holding an enquiry.

AFTER THE FUSS.

The campaign's done; those statesmen won for whom we have been rooting; the vanquished sail the Salt Creek train, and raise their doleful hooting. Now let us turn to work and earn some good old honest guineas; work with zest—that's fortune's best of which we are the builders. If we should wait till statesmen state our path to wealth and glory, we'll be obscure and beastly poor when we are bent and hoary. If you depend, misguided friend, on government to aid you, you'll weep some morn at how forlorn that sort of graft has made you. If you put faith in such a wraith as campaigns' vows and thunder, you'll be a joke and you'll go broke, while others nail the plunder. The easy scates hear candidates and think it's truth they're speaking, but all they say is just the play of tireless wind-mills creaking. We have to strive to keep alive, and have our ditty dinner, and clothe the kids and buy them lids, whatever statesman's winner.

The War Meantime.

It would be a pity were it not for the fact that the little has been happening in Europe while so much has been happening in America: we would prefer to think that the war operations had been courteously suspended to allow the world to follow without distraction the far more important battle in the great Republic. However that may be, it is a fact that a strange lull has once more fallen upon nearly every battle front. Possibly, when the counting is at last done and Wilson or Hughes definitely assured of the victory, we may find that more has been taking place than we have been informed of. With the exception of important gains by the French near Chantilly, indicative of more important fighting to come, practically nothing has been reported for a couple of days. This silence and American politics should not make us forget that a very critical stage of the war has been reached in Roumania. Every day that passes sees the situation more acute. Every day also, it may be said, that passes without material progress by the enemy should mean a strengthening of the defence and an encouragement to us.

A short and very general message has told that the Roumanians have taken the offensive again in Dobruja and with a certain amount of success. If this is correct, the fact that they can spare troops for such an undertaking is significant. For the present they have nothing to fear from Mackensen, who is effectively barred from further progress by the broad Danube; the potential danger from him is the possibility of Falkenhayn cutting his way right through Roumania to the Danube and joining forces with him. Such a feat would be a disaster to us indeed, for it would turn the whole Russian army wing and undo all the invaluable work of Brusiloff in the spring. This is, of course, anticipating the very worst, but the great shows the great importance of the operations in Transylvania. The mere fact that the Germans are making slow progress should not induce undue optimism; it must be remembered how slow were the first stages of the Serbian campaign a year ago and how overwhelmingly rapid the last ones. Fortunately the two cases cannot be compared. Serbia then stood isolated and alone; Russia was reeling almost to a fall; the Allies' western offensive had failed; Italy was having little effect; and Germany had many troops to spare, as well as Bulgaria to stab the plucky little country in the back. Today, in the case of Roumania, all these conditions are lacking or reversed; but we must not lose sight of the fact that the geographical position of Roumania has allowed Germany to mass a huge army on both her flanks. We must therefore watch Transylvania closely in the next few weeks. If anything short of complete success rewards the superhuman effort of the enemy we can say he has failed. Winter will impose a truce, and in the months over which he holds sway Russia will lay up a fresh supply of the guns and munitions of which she clearly feels the lack again. With an adequate supply of these and her enormous army, she will give Germany next year something nearer home to think about than the straggling of Roumania.

THE WAR—AND PARCEL POST.—One of the most thriving branches at present in the Post Office is the Parcel Post Department, for apart from its usefulness at all times, it has been made a busy place since the war. Thousands of packages are handled there monthly from all over the country, and as the most of these are forwarded to "Ours" abroad the work entailed is very great. By each express and steamer to the Old Country huge mails are despatched and the officials in the department assure us that the service is increasing daily, so that the staff and offices want enlargement.

MINARD'S LIMENT CURES DYPH-TERIA.

Biggest Sea in Fifty Years.

MUCH DAMAGE WROUGHT.

Not within the memory of perhaps the oldest inhabitant or, at least during the past half century, has there ever been seen here such a tremendous and dangerous underground sea as that which raged in and around the entrance to this Harbor last evening and to-day, the outcome of the strong north winds that have prevailed of late. In consequence the port has been practically blockaded to shipping. Light-keeper Cantwell at Cape Spear informs us that it is the worst he ever saw at the Cape. The huge sea which broke over the Northern and Southern Heads in the Narrows with awful violence and sprays ascended as high as 100 feet over the cliffs. Some of the sprays went right in over Fort Amherst Light House. Dwelling houses and fishing property at the North and South Batteries were threatened with destruction this morning. Many stages were swept away and boats carried in on the beach and smashed in pieces. Pouch Cove, particularly, felt the heavy outbreak of sea very severely and, however, for all the fisher folk who suffered damage, is that the voyage is just over for this year. All last night and this morning a heavy snowstorm rained in the harbor. The Red Cross Liner Florizel, which was discharging at Harvey's wharf, began to pound heavily against the pier to which she eventually did much damage, and broke her moorings as well, having to be moved off in the stream where she still is. Other shipping along the waterfront had to berth in the stream to avoid damage.

SLIGHT FIRE.—At 11.15 this forenoon the Central and Eastern Companies called out to an alarm of fire from box 228, corner of Freshwater and Cookstown Roads. There was a slight blaze in a house in that locality, but it was extinguished before any damage was done.

MORE CAUTION.—If there is necessity for the drivers of speed automobiles to travel country roads with reduced headlights, they ought at least to hand their cars with more precaution and a little more concern to the safety of pedestrians. Last night one such car was driven down Circular Road at most terrific speed, and reaching King's Bridge Road continued its mad progress much to the danger of any passer who might be crossing the thoroughfare. Surely this kind of thing ought to be censured—but by whom?

THE FRIENDLY COLORS.—Mr. John Reardon, of the East End Fire Hall, posted a parcel of Christmas cheer to his good friends in the early days of the war and left here with the first 500, as did also his brother, Staff Sergt. Norman. Both took part in the Gallipoli campaign, and when the latter fell wounded on the battlefield he was attended to by his brother who, dashing out in the open amid a storm of shrapnel and machine gun fire, bound up his wounds and brought him back to the trenches.

More Men!

In brighter days the Optimist Once more comes forth to take his outing. We have the Germans in our fist And all is over bar the shouting! You might hear the fellow bawl, Imagine he had done it all. He talks about the great advance As if it were a picnic party In which the Hun had got no chance, And is so genial, gay and hearty That one regrets he isn't there In those supreme delights to share. The men who face the guns to-day, Who see their comrades round them falling But nobly keep their onward way, Must find such "optimist" gallantry. Those who are firing out the Hun Know at what cost the job is done. "More men! More men!" is still the cry; That is the kernel of the matter. One new battalion marching by Means more than floods of foolish chatter. By sacrifices yet unmade The debt of heroes must be paid. —Touchstone, in the Daily Mail.

Prince Who Loves a Commoner.

WANTS TO MARRY A BEAUTIFUL WIDOW. King Cophetus, in the person of Prince Christophoros of Greece, the youngest brother of King Constantine, has wooed and won a commoner, who is certainly not a beggar-maid. She is the beautiful widow of William B. Leeds, the American tin-plate king, and is worth over £3,000,000.

A Conjuring Yarn.

"Carlton," the well known comic conjurer, when entertaining some wounded soldiers at Windsor Castle recently, told a story that tickled his audience immensely. "I was once," he said, "performing before a rough-and-ready audience in a Western American mining camp, and one of my tricks necessitated my borrowing a pocket flask of spirits. "Will some gentleman in the audience favour me with a pint flask of whisky?" I asked. There was no response. "Surely," I went on after a brief pause, "in a Western mining town I ought not to have to ask a second time for such a thing. I give you my word I will return it uninjured. Is there no—"

Unwatched toast always burns. Chives will give soup a good flavor. Fish is not fresh unless the flesh is firm. A good chicken pie makes a good luncheon dish. Good lamb is of bright red color with white fat. Beef dumplings will make a good winter dish. A soiled book can have its pages cleaned with gasoline. Good pastry can only be made from a good, fine flour. Few cooks realize how frequently rice should be washed. Eggs may not be more than a week old and yet be stale. Toast is more delicate if the crust is removed from the bread. Save the water in which rice is cooked for a soup foundation. All foodstuffs eaten raw should be washed before being served.

Although Mrs. Leeds has consented to an engagement with the Prince, she refuses to marry him unless she is accepted as a member of the family by all the Royalties of Europe. So Prince Christophoros has a difficult task in front of him. If Mrs. Leeds marries the Prince she will not be recognised as a princess, for royal etiquette forbids any of the royals to marry out of their caste. The Prince did not think of this when he courted the beautiful American in the gardens of the Villa Primavera on the shores of the Mediterranean, where nightingales sing and the orange-blossoms bloom. Greece's youngest prince is determined to make Mrs. Leeds his bride, in spite of the difficulties in his path, for she will have to be accepted by six Courts of Europe, and by her husband's sisters, cousins and aunts. If the Prince overcomes these formidable difficulties, and succeeds in winning over his royal relations, Mrs. Leeds will possess the highest rank to which an American woman has ever attained.—Pearsons' Weekly.

Another Big Recruiting Meeting Last Night.

VAST CROWD ADDRESSED BY LIEUT. KNIGHT AND MR. W. R. WARREN, K.C.

Last night another big crowd assembled in front of the Court House and were addressed by Lieut. Knight, a veteran of the Gallipoli and France Campaigns and now invalided home. The gallant officer made a strong plea for recruits for the Army and Navy, as both branches of the service were in need of every man they could get. He made a special appeal to the single men to enlist immediately and also those who are married and without "care," meaning those whose circumstances in life are such that their services at home are not needed so badly as they are in France.

Mr. W. R. Warren, K. C., speaking from the view point of one who had offered his services and was rejected, urged every man of military age and fitness to enlist and fill up the gaps made vacant by those who had made the supreme sacrifice. "Win The War," said Mr. Warren. "Let the slogan float throughout the length and breadth of the island, halting at every door where there is a man fit for active service."

The S. A. Band was in attendance and rendered several patriotic airs and at the conclusion of Mr. Warren's address the following young men offered for the Army and Navy:

HIT IT AGAIN.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Did you ever play the game called "Tether Ball"? It is a sort of second cousin, twice removed, from tennis. There is a tennis ball tethered by a piece of cord to a tall pole. The two contestants stand on opposite sides of the pole and hit the ball with tennis racquets. The object is to wind the cord up, each of course trying to wind it up his way.

It is an excellent game, a game which gives just as much exercise as tennis and is financially within the reach of everyone.

But I am not an agent for "Tether Ball." I simply want to make you acquainted with the game so that you can visualize a little drama which I witnessed the other day.

The Champion Was The Shortest
Half a dozen young people were playing this game. As you can readily see, it is a sport in which height and strength are great advantages. And yet, the champion of the group was the shortest of the lot—a little, red-haired lad of about fifteen, slight and rather short even for his age.

Two of the other contestants were six inches taller than he. And one was unquestionably stronger. Why, then, should he win? I thought perhaps he had been at it longer than the rest, but found he had not.

So I watched him a few minutes—and then I knew.

He Never Rested On His Laurels.
He never rested on his laurels. The others would give a good hit and then stand back and watch the ball. He would give a good hit and then get into place to hit again. I am going to watch that boy when he grows up. I feel sure that the habit of hitting again is going to stand him in good stead.

The Man Who Got A Raise.
"The trouble with a great many of my salesmen," a business man once said to me, "is that whenever they make a big killing they have to sit back and admire themselves for awhile. But I've got one man who looks on every big sale he makes as a record to be broken next trip. I couldn't raise my other men this year, but you can bet I raised him!"

Laurels are bad things to rest on. There's a perfume about them that has much the same effect as lotus eating.

A boys' club asked me for a motto the other day. I couldn't think of one just then, but now I suggest "Hit it again."

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."
"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylax and Zylax Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylax at your druggist."

Zylax, 50c. a box; Zylax Soap, 25c. a cake.

Last Night's Concert.

A GREAT SUCCESS.
Last evening the concert in aid of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Club, at Canon Wood Hall, was very largely attended. Included in the number were His Excellency the Governor, Lady Davidson, Capt. Abraham, Hon. R. Watson and Mrs. Browning of the Ladies' Reception Committee.

Prior to the commencing of the concert and at intervals the following young ladies did a brisk business in disposing of home-made candy: Misses Herder, Baird, Hayward, Trapnell and Duley. To Miss Jean Herder was allotted the responsibility of obtaining donations and manufacturing such an excellent supply of candy. The decorations and stage settings were very nicely arranged. The program which consisted of the following numbers, was greatly enjoyed by those present. Songs were given by Mrs. G. W. B. Ayre, Miss Emily Mare, Messrs. A. Williams, F. M. Ruggles, H. Courtenay; pianoforte solo, Mr. Gordon Christian, L.R.A.M., who also acted as accompanist. The feature of the evening was the one-act farce: "The Spare Room." Scotch: London. Present day. A Room in a small flat. The performers, who without exception filled their parts well, were Corporal L. R. Cooper, as Guy, the young husband; Miss Frances A. Gosling, as Ethel, his wife; Commander MacDermott, R.N., as Uncle David; Mrs. L. R. Cooper, as Aunt Psyche; and Mr. H. Bell, as Cab-Runner. The act was very amusing and greatly enjoyed by all.

A number of ladies who spend their spare moments knitting socks for our soldiers brought along their work and during the evening managed to turn a hell or run off a few rounds. Mrs. Gosling and her assistants are to be congratulated on the splendid success of the affair.

The unsold candles were sent on board H.M.S. Briton for our Naval Reservists.

Austro-German Forces at a Standstill.

Facing Disaster—Instant Success or Utter Failure.
Athens, Tuesday, Oct. 31, via London, Nov. 2.—"The Austro-German offensive in Transylvania appears definitely to have arrived at a standstill," declared N. N. Filodor, the Roumanian Minister to Greece, to-day to the Associated Press correspondent.

"Operations of this smashing nature, like the attack on Paris, must be instantly successful if they are not destined to fail utterly," continued M. Filodor.

"Every day that we are able to postpone disaster we grow stronger and our opponents grow weaker. Any concerted attack presupposes a certain amount of unpreparedness to meet it on the part of those attacked, but if it is not immediately successful, the preparedness of those attacked constantly increases, as was the case at Verdun."

"This is precisely what happened in Roumania, and is why the Austro-German offensive already is doomed. Moreover the fact that General Von Falkenhayn seems to have been replaced by Archduke Charles Francis on this front can be taken as showing that even the German general staff realizes the failure of the attempt."

IF!

Gaby Deslys, whose return to the London music-hall stage will be welcomed by all amusement lovers, tells a good story of a young English actor who was touring with her in America.

It was his first trip to the land of the stars and stripes, and he had an idea that it was the correct thing to carry a revolver out there, so before he left London he bought a beautiful little silver-plated, pearl-handled one, and stowed it away in his baggage.

In due course, as it happened, they arrived at a Western town which really did have a somewhat sinister reputation for rowdiness. The Englishman thought this a good opportunity to sport his revolver, and was showing it round in the afternoon in the bar of the principal hotel to a group of hard-bitten cowboys, in from the plains to see the show, and each of whom carried, strapped on his left hip, a huge 45 with a barrel nearly as long as a small carbine.

They examined the English actor's expensive "egg" with a curiosity not unmarked with contempt.

At length one of them remarked, as he laid the tiny revolver flat in the palm of one enormous hand:—
"Stranger, if yer was to shoot me with this 'ere derned thing, and I ever found it out, I'd go yer half-headed, sure."—Pearson's Weekly.

SENATE STILL DEMOCRATIC

NEW YORK.
The Senate will remain in Democratic control by a majority of 19 or 15, dependent on who come in New Mexico, while the Democrats, in maintaining a cover Hubbell, nominated by Republicans to succeed Cather, holds the Senate stands 53; Republicans, 41; 1 undecided.

THE FORTUNES OF THE PRESIDENT

NEW YORK.
At midnight 24 hours of important newspaper in the States regardless of political opinions had heralded the election of President Hughes. The result of the election is still in striking contrast with the certainty of Republican victory an early hour this morning. The situation of the country is still in a state of uncertainty. Philadelphia, Chicago, and other cities in various sections of the country definitely announced their support of Hughes. As the result of whatever certainty as to the election of the President was gradually dissipated, the country retired to rest with a doubt that the fourth of November would witness the inauguration of a new President, but at 3 o'clock the tide began to turn in the States, where the early morning papers in Philadelphia, Chicago, and other cities in various sections of the country definitely announced their support of Hughes. ### SENATE STILL DEMOCRATIC.

NEW YORK, To-day.—The Senate will remain under Democratic control by a reduced majority of 10 or 12, dependent on the outcome in New Mexico, where Jones, Democrat, is maintaining a slight lead over Hubbell, nominated by the Republicans to succeed Catron. At this hour the Senate stands Democrats, 53; Republicans, 41; 1 undecided.

THE FORTUNES OF THE BATTLE.

NEW YORK, To-day.—At midnight 24 hours after every important newspaper in the United States had heralded the election to the Presidency of Chas. E. Hughes, the result of the election is still in doubt. In striking contrast with the virtual certainty of Republican success at an early hour this morning is the tenacity of the situation that exists to-night. As early as 8 o'clock last night the leading papers in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston and other cities in various sections of the country definitely announced the election of Hughes. As the night wore on whatever certainty as to the election of the Republican candidate existed was gradually dissipated. The country retired to rest without any doubt that the fourth of March would witness the inauguration of a new incumbent, but at 3 o'clock this morning the tide began to turn in the West—States, where the early returns which showed a strong trend toward Hughes began to develop Wilson's strength. Gradually Hughes' majorities shrunk until the States that were conceded to him first drifted into the doubtful column then into the group claimed by the President. This sudden change of the fortunes of the two great parties aroused in the people a degree of interest that even on election day was noticeably lacking. Great crowds began to gather in front of the newspaper offices where editions were issued at short intervals recording the varying changes in the battle of the ballots. All day and all night tireless vigils were kept by anxious watchers at various headquarters where the returns from the doubtful or Pivotal States—California, North Dakota, Washington, West Virginia, Minnesota, Nebraska and New Mexico were closely and anxiously scanned as they filtered in. At midnight the returns, such as were complete or so far complete as to be regarded as indicative, gave Wilson 232 votes, in the Electoral College, Hughes 239, and left sixty votes doubtful in eight States. It requires 266 votes to elect a President. Although California showed a lead for the President, his campaigners claiming it by at least 1,500, the President's majority there had dwindled to little more than 1,400 with about one-fifth of the districts missing. In Minnesota, too, the Wilson lead which was as high as 10,000 early in the day steadily dropped as the vote from the rural districts came in. During the evening Hughes took the lead on a small margin; then Wilson shot again ahead but by less than 1,000 votes. The Republican Managers claimed the State on the final returns. Idaho was estimated for the Wilson column with a majority of 10,000. Kansas was still incomplete, with little more than two-thirds of the districts reported and showed President Wilson leading by more than 27,000. Washington, little more than half reported, has given the President a lead of 7,000; West Virginia, two-thirds reported, showing Hughes' majority nearly 2,000; North Dakota was very close with two-thirds complete, and Hughes' majority less than 1,000. Wilson was leading in New Mexico with only a small proportion of the precincts were reported. Delaware and New Hampshire counted among the Hughes States, but incomplete during the day definitely turned into the Republican column.

BELIEVES IN HUGHES.

NEW YORK, To-day.—Chairman Wilcox of the Republican National Committee issued the following statement at midnight: "Returns from the States in which the vote is closed are coming slowly. The delay appears to be caused by the time required to get reports from the rural communities. The latest returns clearly indicate that Minnesota, North Dakota, New Mexico, Oregon and probably California has gone for Hughes. Those added to the States already certain give him 250 Electoral votes. Even if all or some of the electoral votes of California should go to Wilson, there are still enough left to assure the election of Hughes. Every precaution must be taken to secure an honest count of the ballots in every closed State. Anybody who intimates that Charles E. Hughes would permit any man or group of men to attempt to steal the Presidency from him is a contemptible scoundrel and knows it. I say further with full sense of the responsibility of the American people that any man or group of men who attempts to steal the Presidency from Hughes will do it at their peril."

FRANCE OSTRACISES HEARST

NEW YORK, To-day.—The New York Tribune this morning publishes the following: Paris, 8th.—Following the precedent set by the British Government, the French Government has deprived Wm. Randolph Hearst and the International News Services the use of the cable services between Paris and America. The order applies to all news channels under Hearst's control and was issued yesterday, and to-day all the Hearst employees at Paris received notice like other positions.

IMPORTANT GAINS BY ITALIANS.

LONDON, To-day.—The special correspondent of the Times at the Italian army headquarters telegraphs as follows: "Friday's operations in the drive on Trieste, though less spectacular than those of the previous two days, were of tactical importance because of the occupation of the Lower Hills, between the Wipbach and the northern rampart of the Carso plateau. The advance of the eleventh corps was extended to cover a front of more than three miles and the position of Faltieby was strengthened against counter-attacks. In losing Faltieby an Austrian Colonel, taken prisoner in the September offensive, said nothing mattered so long as Faltieby was held. Its loss was certainly serious. The point dominates Castelnovizza on the Carso and its network of roads, and the main road from Bassano to the Carso positions. Possibilities— even more important than the actual achievements suggest themselves at this intensely interesting movement. Meanwhile however, weather has broken and rain is falling heavily.

CALIFORNIAN RETURNS.

SAN FRANCISCO, To-day.—Wilson was leading Hughes early by a margin of approximately 4,000 with all but 570 of the State's precincts accounted for. Of the missing precincts 113 in southern California, where the Republicans have shown greatest strength, and the remainder are scattered throughout the northern section of the State, where the Democratic vote has been heaviest. In the city of Los Angeles the returns from 113 precincts were held under guard of the United States Marshal and his Deputies last night, and to-day they are to be tabulated.

Coudert Marvels at British Efficiency

Says English Have 1,500,000 Soldiers in France and 3,000,000 at Home.

The Holland-American liner Noorddam arrived yesterday from Rotterdam, Falmouth and Kirkwall, with 863 passengers.

Frederic R. Coudert returned from a nine weeks' visit to the front in France, where he was the guest of General Sir Douglas Haig and General Foch. In the large base wonderful organization of the British Army impressed him more than anything else on his French tour.

"Never before in the history of the world," Mr. Coudert said, "has there been such speedy preparation. The aviation, artillery, ammunition and commissary supplies of the British forces in France are miraculous when it is considered how they started with nothing when hostilities began. England will reach the acme of her preparation for war next spring, when she will have five guns for every one she has in the field now. There are 1,500,000 troops in France now and 3,000,000 more training in England.

"The United States could learn a great lesson on preparedness by sending army officers to study the organization of the large base camps at Calais, Etaples, Boulogne and Rouen, which I visited. As the troops arrive from England they are sent to the finishing camps at Calais and Etaples for two or three weeks to get a touch of war experience to qualify them for active service. They are initiated into trench life, wearing gas masks against gas clouds and throwing and dodging hand bombs, which has become an essential feature of modern warfare. I put on a mask and entered a trench full of gas which was almost unendurable for any length of time.

"The Commissary Department of the British Army is the best equipped in the world for feeding the soldiers in the field. The men get chocolate, bacon, jams, pies, mutton, beef, vegetables, bread, tea, coffee, fruit and all kinds of little luxuries, and the Canadian troops even have chewing gum served out to them.

"The British have bases for making aeroplanes in France and turn out hundreds of machines there in addition to instructing pilots. In one place near Etaples that I visited I saw more than one hundred aeroplanes of all descriptions. It was a wonderful sight to see the aviators arriving and departing continuously to make scout flights over the German lines.

"The German prisoners I saw looked happy, and are well fed. I spoke to some of them who had been at Contalmaison, and they described the fire of the British artillery as irresistibly hellish." The battle was over just as I arrived on the scene, but I was in time to see the attack at Thiépval.

"It was wonderful to go through the German lines after they had been evacuated and see how the British gunners had destroyed what was considered the strongest fortifications in Europe. The Cure of Contalmaison told me with tears in his eyes that he had been unable to find any traces of his old parish church on account of the deadly effect of the gunfire.

"When the war began the Germans were afraid to surrender to the British because they believed they would be slaughtered; but now that letters have been written home by prisoners telling how well they are treated and fed, are surrendering in hundreds daily, for the German soldiers are tired of the war.

"I was amused to read in The New York Times that von Hindenburg had said that France was dying. Verdun has been won by the French forces, and deserters are coming over from the enemy in swarms daily. The French Army has reached its acme of efficiency and is organized to take full advantage of its victories and to minimize the effect of its losses. Germany is not beaten yet, and, if her defeat has to be effected by military force, officials of the Allies predict that the war may last another two years yet. No matter whether it is two, three or five years longer, the British Army will go on in the steady, slow, sure way to the end which is so characteristic of the race."

Neutrality is never moral. Peace does not necessarily bring righteousness. It is a wicked thing to be neutral between right and wrong. If a nation cannot take its own part, the fact that it fears God will be of no practical consequence to anyone.

Submission to an initial wrong means that all protests against subsequent and lesser wrongs are hypocritical and ineffective.

TORPEDOING OF THE ARABIA. FULL INFORMATION AWAITED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8. Full information regarding the torpedoing yesterday of the British passenger liner Arabia is awaited by the State Department with concern. There has been no report indicating that Americans were aboard the vessel, but the announcement by the British Admiralty that the ship was carrying hundreds of passengers including women and children, had been destroyed without warning added to the seriousness of the submarine instructions now pending. If it should develop that the Arabia carried no Americans the United States probably would take no official notice of the incident, although the deepest interest would be felt because of the possibility it might mean in the change of German methods of submarine warfare. A brief cablegram from Ambassador Pege from London late to-day, announced the sinking of the liner and made no mention of Americans on board. In the absence of Secretary of State Lansing, who will not return here until to-morrow, no formal comment on the case is forthcoming.

BULGARIANS TAKE THE OFFENSIVE.

PARIS, Nov. 8. The Bulgarians took the offensive yesterday against the Serbians in the Gerna River region on the Macedonian front, southeast of Monastir. They made three attacks, the war office announced, but were repulsed. They returned to their own trenches, leaving many dead on the field.

ENEMY SCATTERED.

PARIS, Nov. 8. North of the Somme, says the official issued to-night, French artillery scattered the enemy gathering to the east on the right bank of the Meuse there was an intense artillery duel. Total prisoners taken by the French south of the Somme yesterday, was 659.

GERMANS SHELL BRITISH POSITIONS.

LONDON, Nov. 8. The Germans last night shelled heavily the British positions west of Beaumont Hamel, on the Somme front, north of the Ancre, the war office announced to-day. A German raid in this district was unsuccessful. The weather is stormy.

ARABIA'S PASSENGERS SAVED.

LONDON, Nov. 8. The Peninsular and Oriental Line steamer Arabia, which was sunk by a submarine, was torpedoed without warning, the Admiralty announced to-day, but all the passengers, including 169 women and children were saved.

Best for Liver and Bowels, for biliousness, sour stomach and constipation.

Get a 10-cent box now. Parrot Tongue, Bad Glands, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomachs, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

She was under charter by the France and Canada Co., with offices here. She discharged a cargo of horses for France and continued on for Genoa laden with iron and steel taken on at New York. According to officers of the France and Canada Co., the ship was American and unarmed, and most of her crew Americans. (Apparently the steamer has been sub-marined, though no report has been received here.)

LONDON INTERESTED.

LONDON, Nov. 8. The Presidential election excited great interest throughout London. The morning newspapers all announced that Hughes had been elected beyond doubt, and it was taken for granted until the tickers and the early evening papers began to show the issue in doubt. From that time forward excited groups assembled in clubs and hotels, scanning latest returns. The American Embassy during the course of the day was besieged by enquiries for news of the result, many requests coming from British Government officials. Newspaper placards all featured the election. Virtually all the evening papers printed editorials on the assumption that Hughes was elected. This is the first time London was interested in the Presidential election.

THE U. S. ELECTION.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. With thirty Congressional districts to be heard from at 10:45 p.m. 202 Republicans, 199 Democrats, 26 Progressives, 1 Independent, 1 Socialist were elected to the House of Representatives for the 65th Congress. Of 30 districts yet to be heard from, 17 are represented in the present Congress by Democrats, 13 by Republicans. Should these districts be unchanged, the next House would be composed of 216 Democrats, 215 Republicans and 4 scattering, who might elect to affiliate with either side.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—To-night President Wilson has taken the lead in California and Minnesota, acquisition of either of which to his column would insure his election, barring unexpected losses from the States now incalculated to him as reasonably sure.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—A statement issued from the Republican national headquarters this afternoon, claimed Minnesota, Oregon, California and New Hampshire. It is asserted that Hughes has obtained 277 electoral votes.

San Francisco, Nov. 8.—Woodrow Wilson took the lead in California to-day. Returns available from 4,306 out of 5,910 precincts in California, gave Hughes 237,557, Wilson 239,136.

New York, Nov. 8.—President Wilson is absolutely re-elected, said Democratic Chairman McCormack, late this afternoon. The Republicans can't beat him by any combination of States that may ensue. We can lose Minnesota and California and still re-elect the President, but we feel confident we will carry both those States.

Lank Branch, Nov. 8.—"You can tell President Wilson he is certainly elected," Secretary Tumulty was told this afternoon by Robert W. Woolley, Democratic Director of Publicity. He fought his way to the belief that California, Minnesota and West Virginia were sure for Wilson. The news was received with enthusiasm by the executive offices here.

Long Branch, Nov. 8.—"You can tell Tumulty announced to-night the election of President Wilson was assured by a safe majority in the Electoral College. The President is sure of California and Minnesota," he said. Besides these, North Dakota, Kansas, New Mexico, New Hampshire and West Virginia are ours. The Republicans are not sure of a single State west of Mississippi, except Iowa, which has been won by a greatly reduced plurality.

New York, Nov. 8.—W. R. Wilcox, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, after dinner to-night, with Chase, Hughes said, "I believe Hughes has been elected. He shares my view. We ask only what is fair, we want only what we are entitled to, that we propose to have."

New York, Nov. 8.—Chairman McCormack shortly after 11 a.m. confirmed Wilson's election with 288 electoral votes. "I am basing my conclusions on the official canvass of pivotal States," he said, adding "it is a sweeping victory." Mr. McCormack claimed Kansas and Ohio. Mr. Wilcox at the Republican headquarters said the election was close and depended on the figures from four or five States from which complete returns had not been received. "We believe the results in the district States favor Hughes," the Chairman added, "as the returns yet to be received will come from the outlying and farmer districts."

New York, Nov. 8.—Chairman Wilcox of the Republican National Committee at 12:50 o'clock issued this statement: "California and Minnesota are surely for Hughes. This means Hughes is elected." The statement he said, was based upon advices from the respective State headquarters claiming California by 10,000 votes and Minnesota by 20,000. Chester H. Dimell telegraphed from San Francisco that the Republicans could concede everything that the Democrats claim and still carry the State by 6,000.

San Francisco, Nov. 8.—At 8 this morning, with about one-third of the city ballots counted, it was estimated that Wilson's majority in San Francisco would be about 12,000.

Returned Soldiers

Entertained by the Daughters of Empire.

Yesterday thirty of the returned soldiers of the Regiment were given a most enjoyable outing as the guests of the Daughters of Empire. At 11 a.m. they were taken in automobiles to Brennock's, on the Petty Harbor Road, and later treated to a right royal dinner such as this well-known hostelry is celebrated for. That the men enjoyed it thoroughly was plain, and their appreciation was voiced for them by Sergeant Newman, who in a pleasing speech thanked their hostesses for their kindness. Miss Annie Hayward replied and expressed the pleasure of the Daughters of Empire at being able to do anything for the amusement and recreation of the brave men who had fought their country's battles. Songs were then sung and after enjoying themselves in a variety of ways the men were driven back to town. Thanks are due to Mrs. Brennock, who very kindly supplied the dinner at a much reduced price, and to Mr. Hawvermalo for gifts of cigarettes to each man.

Defendant Wins in Assault Case.

Yesterday afternoon the attention of the Magistrate's Court, Judge Morris presiding, was occupied for an hour in the hearing of an interesting assault case, which had a rather unusual termination. The complaint in the action was a policeman and the defendant a Naval Reservist. The evidence given by three independent witnesses showed that the complainant's brother, a Naval Reservist and an ex-policeman, was the aggressor in the assault and used the complainant's baton on the head of the defendant. The case was therefore dismissed.

How to Choose a Dog.

In a word on sheep-raising, a Scottish authority mentions a singular method in use among shepherds in Scotland in order that the best choice may be made from a litter of dogs. The puppies are carried into a room apart from the mother, and kept there some time until she becomes anxious and frightened. When the door is opened, she is allowed to come to them, the dog which she first carries out is invariably the best.

One shepherd made this experiment with a litter of shepherd dogs. The one chosen was the smallest and weakest of the lot. The mother insisted, it seems to the authority quoted, this time fell short, and he so expressed himself to the shepherd.

"No, sir," the latter replied, "It's no big bones nor bark ye want, but stayin' power." Time proved that the mother dog and the shepherd was right—Pittsburg "Christian Advocate."

The Growing Boy or Girl must have Perfect Feet and Ankles to be Strong and Healthy

Do you know how severely these games and sports strain the tender ligaments and muscles of the feet and the ankles? Do you know statistics show that 33 per cent of the school children have "Flat Foot"? Do you know the result of this affliction as it develops through carelessness and ignorance while the child is growing? Do you know that early injuries like turned ankles, sprained ligaments, etc., frequently cause deformity because Nature is not assisted at the proper time by such a simple appliance as

Scholl's "Foot-Eazer"

Scholl's "Foot-Eazer" should be placed in children's shoes at first detection of rotating ankles—turning in or out—and wearing of the heels of the shoes on either side. Shuffling gait, dragging feet, weak ankles, pain in the limbs and back attributed to rheumatism or "growing pains", are frequently caused by weak instep or flat-foot, all of which Scholl's "Foot-Eazer" instantly relieves and permanently corrects.

Scholl's "Foot-Eazer" case, which acts as a supporting arch of the foot, thereby lightens, supports and self-adjusting to all feet and every shoe. Always for men, women and for the children.

A complete line of Men's and Women's Arch Supports. Men's Women's and Children's Ankle Supports just opened. Drop in and be fitted correctly if you have any foot troubles.
