Poetry

Sonnet.

Far down the western slope the weary day Looks out upon the world with dreary eyes.
As o'er her sunny curls she loosely Her crimson hood, and gently slips away, Memorable from out the east the twilight Lingers a moment, till the embracing Emfold her—then the solemn Night doth Rise,
Descending like a monk in dark array Of long black, flowing gown, and piously
He utters prayers in soft, low murmuring,
Then Earth takes up her dewdrop rosary,
And contemplates at his feet herself all white on the altar of blue Heaven high, Each little star a golden censor swinging.

"We Two."

Let storm-whirls wander as they will,
And on the earth be hurled,
We two against the world,
We two against the world,
We two against the world,
We two against the world,
We two against the world,
We two against the world.

Let snow-drifts pile on moonless night,
Old winter's flag unfurled, Within our rose-hedge we sing,
We two against the world,
We two against the world,
We two against the world,
We two against the world.

A woman's heart is bending low,
With love for me impeding, I greet the lover in his eyes, We two! We two! We two against the world.

A Night With a Grizzly.

THE RENDEZVOUS THAT DETAINED A MAN ON HIS WEDDING DAY.

(By William A. Lawson.)

We were a party of trout fishermen in California. It was long after nightfall, and we had gathered about the camp fire to enjoy a final smoke before turning in under shelter of our blankets. The giant pines of the Sierra Nevada towered about us on every side, and the deep silence of the forest was broken only by the sound of our voices.

The talk had turned upon bears: Someone had seen mammoth footprints that day by the river side, and this led to a discussion of the ways of grizzlies. Old Joe, our guide, had been a famous bear hunter in his day, and we pined him with questions.

"How can you tell a grizzly from any other kind of bear, in the night time?" asked the youngest member of the party.

"Foot of his claws," answered the old man, on the instant. Encouraged by the general laugh which followed, the old fellow became a little more communicative.

"The feet in," said Joe, "the grizzly's claws are twice as long as those of any other sort of bear, especially from the fore foot. And they are good black hooked, too. That's one reason why the grizzly doesn't generally climb trees. His claws are not made for climbing, but are great for digging and for tearing apart the things he eats. I know of only one grizzly that ever climbed trees, and I ain't likely to forget him in a hurry."

"Tell me about him, old man," cried the rest of us together, while Joe lighted his pipe with a brand plucked from the fire. He was silent for a minute or two, but knowing his ways, we waited patiently.

"It was early in the fifties," he began, "I was mining on the Yuba, a little above Long Bar, along with a partner of mine, and made a pretty good stake. So I was going to marry my Nancy Jane down at Marysville. The day before the wedding was to come off on the trail up the river to see a friend, and took my ride along, in case I should see a deer.

There had been a big snowstorm in the mountains, and I expected it would drive down lots of game. The trail wound along the side of a deep canon, high up on the rocky wall, above the stream, and I was just turning a point of rock when I came face to face with a bear. It was a grizzly, and a big one at that. I don't know which was most surprised, but I reckon I was.
The bear stood on its hind legs, and Old Joe checked, as he paused to re-light his pipe, and after a few heavy whiffs he resumed.

"At the first sight of me, the bear sat up, open-jawed, and I guess he must have looked about six feet high.
You could have knocked me down with a feather just then, but I reckon I was good deal the most rattled. He went Old Joe checked, as he paused to re-light his pipe, and after a few heavy
whiffs he resumed.

"It wasn't long before I was chilled to the bone. The bear, too, felt the cold, and stopped trying to get upon the trunk, but never let go his hold.
There was a flood in the river, and it was running five or six miles an hour.
The current rushed us along, past mining camps where men were at work, but it was a common thing to see trees going down stream at flood times, and no one looked sharp enough to get a glimpse of either me or the bear. I tried to shout, but was so weak that my voice couldn't have been heard. I couldn't hold on much longer, so I undid my belt and fastened myself to the tree by one arm.

"About that time I was thinking of Nancy Jane, and wondering what she'd say when the time for the wedding came round and I wasn't there.
"Down by Duquenois Point, where the Yuba makes a turn after leaving the hills, and spreads out into Sacramento Valley, there was a little island in the middle of the river. An early carter had made a turn after leaving the hills, and the tree grounded there on the shore. As soon as the bear touched bottom, he floundered to and fro like a cork, and was still there when I managed to crawl out of the water, and then I fell in a faint.

"If it hadn't been that the sun was shining, I would never have come to myself. When I opened my eyes and looked around, I saw the bear's head peering over the side of the island. The cold water had taken all the fight out of him for a while, but I knew he'd soon be stirring, so I crawled off on my hands and knees, through the bushes, to the other side of the island. It was low and flat, and only about a hundred feet across. In the centre there grew two small cottonwood trees, growing side by side.

"My clothes were still wet, and in spite of the sunshine, I suffered terribly from the cold. I had a good fire going, as night was falling, and I had been so long. My head ached as if it would split, and it seemed to me that without a fire I must die before the night was over. I was coming on, perhaps you think I wasn't glad when I found my match box had kept out of the water. It was a good fire going, of dry leaves and driftwood, and the heat put me into me. There wasn't much wood that would burn, but I made the most of it while it lasted, and got my clothes well dried. While the blaze kept up, there was small chance of the bear's coming high me, even if he felt like it. But when the blaze died down and the sun had set, I crept around the shore, and saw the bear nosing about near the spot where we both landed. Then I made up my mind to climb one of the cottonwoods, and stay all night in the tree, as the safest place I could find. So I shinned up one of the smooth trunks, and climbed through the branches as high as I could. There I sat on a limb for hours, wondering whether the bear would try to get at me, and how I best his moving through the bushes, and once he came to the foot of the tree and clawed the bark, but did not seem to be trying to climb. The night was very cold, but after a while I got so sleepy and tired that I was afraid I would fall off. So I fastened myself safely with my belt, and soon went to sleep, in spite of all the cold and cramped to sleep well, and was awake about half the time during the night, though I heard no more of the bear until morning. Then he began moving about again, and when daylight came he was lying at the foot of the tree, as if waiting for me to come down.

"Now, that was a nice position for a man to find himself in, wasn't it, on the morning of his wedding day?
I don't know, but I was aching all over, and horribly hungry. Old Joe, I know he must be feeling pretty greedy himself, and there was nothing on the island for him to eat—except me. He looked savage enough as he watched me limbering up my joints, as well as I could, in the top of the tree.
After a while the sun warmed me up a little, and I tried hard to think up some way of escape. There was no cabin to be seen on either side of the river, and no road in sight of the land. I might die there, or be devoured, and no one did it out for a long time. The island was several hundred yards distant from the nearest bank of the river, and the current swift, so I knew I could not swim that distance in the icy water. But what would Nancy Jane think if I did not show myself at 12 o'clock of the morning? I could think of that any way out of my right place, up jumped the bear and began to climb the tree.

"I had a keen bowie knife, but how could I use it? The bear could reach my feet with his paws before I could get my hand with the knife. But I was a good gymnast in those days, and I was as quick as all for me to take my knees from a branch and dangle head down with my knife in my hand.
Griz was a clumsy climber, but I wasn't. I was in a position to get within striking distance I gave him an ugly gasp on the nose, but the next instant he had knocked the knife from my hand by a blow on the head. I began climbing the second tree, and I was a good swimmer, I swung away from the tree to dodge a stroke that the bear aimed at my head, and as I did so I saw that the bear was stronger than I was. I was in a

The Weekly Monitor,

TERMS—$1.50 per year in advance.

WEDNESDAY, June 8th, 1904.

One of the movements of the day, which has both aesthetic and practical value...

It is with a feeling of pride that we so often hear our "young folks" referred to as "the future of the country"...

When man enters upon virgin Nature's unmanufactured domain he must first destroy and lay waste what he has been long years in building and cherishing...

What are the practical uses of the associations that are now being established to bring back as far as possible the beauty man's carelessness has destroyed?

Bridgetown is noted as one of the prettiest towns in this fair province. What claim has it to this title?

Why then should an improvement association be needed here? If Bridgetown is already so charming what work could such an association find to occupy itself with?

Leaving the station the tourist immediately arrives at the edge of the large barn with an opening at either end.

and stages of renovation or decay. He observes the lack of any regular grading of the street, gutters and sidewalks is paved or cemented, groups of loafers ornament it with their expectations.

Let us say nothing of the unsavoury odor of the streets. Happily the tourist does not arrive in the early spring or late fall, so he is spared the distastefulness and the resident is spared the chagrin and mortification of having his windows blown through the mire which covers the highway dignified by the title of Queen street.

If the tourist takes him along Granville Street east he cannot fail to observe our most famous structure, the post office, of quaint antique design. Let us hope he will not happen to visit it on a rainy day during the opening of the mill. Further up the street we trust he will be occupied with viewing the many pretty and attractive private residences so that it may happily escape his notice that the sewerage on this street runs in the gutters and through private grounds.

If the tourist walks in the early morning or dewy eve he will have to dispute the right-of-way with the Jerseys and Holsteins going and coming from pasture, as if at a picnic, and the cows and calves with due care and precision after he has passed them.

Limited space prevents us from following tourist farther, but we think it possible we have convinced our readers that a civic improvement league even in Bridgetown might find employment. Until some public-spirited citizen arises to the occasion and leads in such a movement, let us each be a committee of one to remedy such defects and disfigurements as an examination of our own premises reveals.

This article is not written in a spirit of carping criticism, but that we may recognize our needs, and hoping them in view look forward to their attainment as circumstances may favor us. Bridgetown has led the smaller provincial towns in many improvements. May her place in the van of progress never be vacated.

The Dominion Entomologist's Reply to Mr. Messenger.

R. J. Messenger, Esq., Bridgetown, N. S. My Dear Mr. Messenger—The small beetles sent with your letter of the 27th ult, are the Shot-borer, Xyleborus dispar, which you will find figured and referred to on page 200 of my report for 1897, of which I send you a copy herewith.

This insect has been very destructive in some parts of Nova Scotia, and has a bad habit of running a gallery all round a branch just beneath the bark, so that frequently a branch is left hanging by a few shreds of wood, and a great deal of harm is done by the galleries which are bored into the solid wood of the tree.

The only remedy which has done much good is to wash the trees, beginning late in May if that is the time the beetles first appear, with a soap wash containing caustic soda.

Although the Shot-borer is, luckily for you, new to you as an injurious insect, it has at different times done a great deal of harm in your province. Yours very truly, JAMES FLETCHER, Dominion Entomologist.

"SHOT-BORER (Xyleborus dispar Fabr.)—This injurious beetle continues to commit serious depredations in the orchards of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, where its attacks most injure apple and plum trees.

The most extensive injury brought to my notice during the past season occurred at Grand Pre, Kings County, N. S., where George Johnson, a Dominion statistician, found the beetles working much havoc in his own orchard as well as in those of several of his neighbors.

The best remedy for this insect is the wash mentioned in my report for 1894, viz., caustic soda, three gallons, carbolic acid, 1 pint. This same mixture has been used successfully against the Peach Bark-borer (Phloeobius humilis, Harris).

Note.—The Dr. Fletcher speaks of it as a serious pest, he does not cite instances of trees being killed outright by it, as has been the case during the past few weeks in orchards around Carden's Corner. As its life history or description is not appended in the paragraph above, I may say that the borer spoken of is black, about one-eighth of an inch in length, showing under an ordinary lens six legs with two antennae at the fore part of head, and two indistinctly divided body segments.

This little creature bores holes straight into the trunk and branches of trees, the holes being about the size of his shot, hence, probably its name. Young trees, two to six years from transplanting, are chiefly affected. The remedy spoken of above is simple and it is hoped it may prove effective against it. R. J. MESSENGER.

Death of Maynard P. Roach.

Maynard P. Roach died May 29th, at his residence in Worcester, Mass., after an illness of more than a year. Anemia was the cause of his death.

He was 41 years and 11 months old, and was the second son of J. Frederick Roach, of Clarence. He had lived in Worcester for the last twenty-three years, and for a number of years was engaged in the manufacture of architectural iron work.

Three years ago he became connected with the Eastern Bridge and Structural Co. During his business life he had travelled extensively and had a large business acquaintance throughout the Eastern States. He was a prominent Odd-fellow, being a member of Worcester Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Wachusett Encampment, and had held the positions of president and secretary of the latter.

He was a member of the Old South Congregational Church, in which building his funeral services were held, the pastor having charge of the service, and the Odd-fellows using their beautiful burial service. The floral tributes were very numerous and varied. The burial was in Hope Cemetery on Wednesday, June 1st, 1904.

New Signal Submarine Bells.

Ottawa, May 31.—The Light House Board will meet in a few days and report upon some thirty patents on the St. Lawrence and the Atlantic Coast at which it is intended to place submarine bells. Ten of these bells will be placed in commission this session.

Next year these submarine bells will be placed in other parts of the Dominion, making ten in all. They are located at all dangerous points on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

In about three weeks the Larcher lightship of Yarmouth, N. S., and the Anticosti of the Island of Anticosti, will be equipped with these submarine bells. Commander Spain has been making tests with them and they have proved very satisfactory.

The Empire Liniment Mfg. Co., Bridgetown, Nova Scotia, is pleased to certify that I have used your Empire Liniment for some time in my knee, and by the use of a single bottle have had no return of pain. Four weeks ago I was taken with rheumatism in my back; I purchased a bottle of Empire Liniment and used it freely on the parts affected by bathing thoroughly, and now my back appears to be all right. I consider it the best liniment on the market.

C. A. PADDOCK, Heymarket Square, St. John, N. B., June 13th, 1903.

A meeting of the Valley Steamship Company, Ltd., was held at Annapolis on May 24th, when the following directors were appointed: E. C. Whitman, F. W. Pickles, S. W. Pickup, C. W. Collins and S. E. Bancroft. Officers: E. C. Whitman, Secy, and Capt. J. H. Charlton, Pres.

The question of running the Dominion Line to Bridgetown was discussed, but deferred to a future meeting. It was decided to purchase the steamer "Royal" from St. John and Annapolis Royal, to be used as an intermediate port to suit freight or passengers.

The Water Supply.

THE FARM WELL-THE CHEESE FACTORY AND CREAMERY.

Some startling facts in regard to the water supply of our farms, cheese factories and creameries were brought out at the conference of dairy instructors and experts held in Ottawa last fall...

The Horse for the Farmer.

The farmer of to-day owes much to the horse animal which has been man's friend for centuries. He is not only a necessity on the farm, but adds much to the pleasure and profit of the farmer... for sties. Many stables are being imported annually, and among the number many that ought to be rejected by purchase and breeders.

They are bound to leave their impress on the offspring and the farmer will pay the price when after several years the colts come to marketable age.

The Great Risk.

In almost every neighborhood someone has died from an attack of cholera or cholera morbus, often before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned.

A Clear Complexion.

To keep the skin in a perfectly healthy condition a daily tepid water bath is necessary. It is a good plan to wash the entire body with a sponge and use a brush on the neck and face.

Nothing Like Experience.

"One truth learned by actual experience does more good than ten precepts one hears about. Tell me that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy will cure cholera morbus, and he will believe it before the end of the day.

A Queer Custom.

Between the mountains of India and Persia is a powerful tribe among whom an extraordinary custom prevails. Women's rights here appear to be received full recognition for the ladies of the tribe can choose their own husbands.

The Best Liniment.

"I have derived great benefit from the use of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism and lameness. My wife, Mrs. Anna Hagman, of Chubbuck, N. J., writes: 'My husband used it for a sprained ankle and it cured it in a few days.'

Torpedo Nets.

Warships have absolutely no protection from torpedoes. In recent years much time has been spent in perfecting nets made of steel wire, rope, etc., but the modern torpedo does not explode until it strikes the hard side of a ship.

Young Ladies. Read This.

If you are bothered with pimples, freckles, or any blotches on your face, if your complexion is sallow, it's an evidence that you require Ferronine. A study of the market shows that a large per cent. of the horses that go there are light and unclashed, and as a rule these are cheap and plentiful.

Improvement Necessary.

A factory will not be kept uncontaminated so long as the drainage and sewerage system is defective. Next is the proper construction of the well, including its covering, so as not to permit surface washings flowing in.

The Germ of Catarrh.

Not only attack the passages of the head and throat, but finally reach the lungs and cause consumption. Catarrh, so quickly as fragments of Catarrh, which relieves the cough, stops the discharge, takes all secretions from the throat. I consider Catarrhine has no equal as a cure for Catarrh and lung trouble.

The Household.

USEFUL HINTS. If you find it difficult to wake up in time, then go to bed earlier and give yourself a proper amount of rest. Make up your mind as you lie down just what time you wish to get up, and a little practice will enable you to wake exactly the minute decided upon.

VEGETABLES AS MEDICINE. Many medicines exert direct medicinal effects and it is well for the housewife to inform herself as to the nature of these, in order that they may work more intelligently in constructing daily bills of fare.

THE ART OF QUICK DRESSING. To be able to dress rapidly and in a spare is an accomplishment, an art which, although it takes long to acquire, will hold to one through life when one learns. Some time or other, many times, indeed, it will be necessary to dress very quickly.

WHY THE GOOSE WAS NOT COOKED. "A married couple were frequently in disagreement on the subject of menu, each usually suggesting a dish for the Sunday dinner which the other did not approve. One Saturday the man came home from market with a hen.

IT WAS SUFFICIENT. A story is told of an eminent New York lawyer receiving a severe reprimand from a witness whom he was trying to browbeat. It was an important issue, and in order to gain his case it was necessary, if possible, to diminish the value of the witness' evidence.

NEEDN'T HAVE KEPT ON. Dr. Thomas A. Hoyt, the pastor of the Chambers-Wells Memorial Church of Philadelphia, was recently elected President Patton of Princeton, Gen. John B. Gordon and other eminent men at dinner. The guests were speaking in strong praise of a sermon the minister had just preached, and those who were versed in theology were discussing the doctrinal points he had brought out.
