that an existing railway should look to its own interests, and if it found that a rival road was going to interfere with rights already acquired, they have a perfect right in defence of their own interests to put forward their views. That is all the Michigan Central has done. It is claimed that the construction of this 44 miles would parallel a road constructed by them. They have a perfect right to do that. The hon. gentleman has forgotten that we threshed out this principle before in another place. He must remember that the Pontiac Pacific Junction Railway Company, through Mr. Beemer, their president, and all the influences that it could bring to bear, opposed the passage of a charter in this House on the ground that it was to parallel an existing road. I do not know how the hon. gentleman voted at the time. I think that he sympathized with the existing road and opposed the charter.

Mr. CLANCY. Thinking without knowing.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The point was that the Bristol Company would not even urge its right to come all the way to Ottawa, but wanted to come to Quyon and the proposition was made that they should not parallel any further than Shawville, and I think the hon. gentleman voted to compel them to stop at Shawville.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman is all wrong.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I will take it back if the hon. gentleman says I am wrong, but that is my impression from having been there, and having voted on that Bill. There is a precedent where a company exercised its right to come here and make itself heard before this Parliament. The question, as a matter of principle, is a sound one. There is a road already built, and upon this new road a condition is put, so that if adequate running arrangements can be made with these people there is no reason why a large amount of money should be spent to build a new line paralleling it. Evidence has been given in addition that with the amount of traffic over the existing line it would be almost impossible for them to give adequate accommodation; so that we may reasonably expect that it will become a matter in which the Government would be justified in expending this subsidy, and assurances have been given in the strongest manner that that would be the result. I advise the member for London (Mr. Beattie), who is interested in this, to accept that assurance as in the interest of the company interested, and I am quite sure if the Lake Erie and Detroit Company were here to speak for itself, it would accept that assurance.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman has no right to make such a statement.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I make it on my own responsibility.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I want to say a word or two, as this is a matter with which I am conversant. I think the member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy), after the fair and manly statement made by the Premier, has not advanced the cause he seeks to advance by the persistent and extravagant statements he has made. I cannot understand why that hon. member should take such a tremendous interest in the bonusing of this road. All the freight from his county, from Wallaceburg and Dresden, is carried over the Erie and Huron road to Chatham. It crosses the Canadian Pacific at Chatham, and it crosses the Grand Trunk Railway at Chatham, and he wants this road to carry this away around 40 or 60 miles further down to St. Thomas in order that they may hand it either to the Canadian Pacific Railway at St. Thomas, when they could just as well hand it to the Canadian Pacific Railway or the Grand Trunk Railway at Chatham, as they are doing now. Then, he must remember, that this 44 miles which it is proposed to bonus, is running right alongside the Canada Southern road that never got a single farthing of money from this Dominion. They built that road themselves, and you propose now to tax them to build a road right alongside them. I think this is a matter which the Government should well consider. I believe, as the Premier has stated, that there are reasons why this bonus should be given, and I have advocated it. I think that, in the first place, every effort should be made to see that running rights can be obtained from the Michigan Central before you build another road alongside of it. I believe those rights can be obtained. The Michigan Central does an enormous trade, and enormous freight traffic, and I believe that they intend to double-track their road.

Mr. BEATTIE. It is double-tracked now.

Mr. CAMPBELL. When they get their road double-tracked through, then I think that arrangement may be made satisfactory to both companies, and that running rights could be given over this road. I want to see the road extended on to St. Thomas, but not for the reason stated by the member for Bothwell. His part of the country is well served now. They transfer all their freight to the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway at Chatham, and there is no reason why they should carry it on 60 miles further to St. Thomas and then hand it over to the same road. It gives an outlet to the counties of Essex and Kent. I want to see the road extended to St. Thomas, and if satisfactory arrangements can be made with the Michigan Central, I believe it will serve all purposes. But if you strike out that amendment now and give this bonus to the Lake Erie and Detroit road to St. Thomas to build a parallel line, the Michigan Central and double-track their road and then they will come back here and ask this House to give them a bonus, and we cannot refuse it. They have never received one dollar of bonus, so far, from the Government of Canada. They built that road entirely themselves. I think the proposition is a very wise one, that if a satisfactory arrangement can be made it should be made, but if such an arrangement cannot be made, then, it is time enough to undertake to parallel the road. I do not think that the hon. member for Bothwell is advancing at all the cause that he seeks to advance here to-night, and I think he would have been well advised if he had said a great deal less than he has said upon the subject.

Mr. MCGREGOR. Mr. Chairman, I am, like the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Campbell), interested in this road. One end of this road is very near my own city, and it intersects a part of my own riding. That being the case, I want to say that the Canada Southern, or, as it is termed, the Michigan Central, is a line connecting the great west and the great east. It is one of the busiest railroads in Canada; 48 trains daily pass over the road, and there are usually 40 cars on each train, making more than 1,700 cars drawn over the road every day. We feel that it would be almost impossible to make a satisfactory arrangement with the Michigan Central that would be useful to our part of the country. I represent a fruit-growing district. That road is what is termed a meat or cattle road. They take large trains of cattle from Chicago and deliver them at Boston, Philadelphia and New York as rapidly as they run their passenger trains, and the road is congested at certain hours of the day. At some hours you cannot get along with a local train and even passenger trains are sometimes put at one side to allow freight trains to go on. We desire to extend the Erie and Huron Road which runs from Sarnia, and the Detroit and Lake Erie Road which runs from Walkerville, along the lake shore to Ridgetown, the one being 84 miles long and the other 80 miles. What we desire to do is to build a connecting link between Ridgetown and St. Thomas, which would connect the Erie and Huron and the Detroit and Lake Erie with a road that belongs to the Walkers' as well, running from St. Thomas to London and from St. Thomas to Port Stanley, and which would give us, eventually, not only a road to London but a connection with the lake port at Port Stanley. There would be other advantages. Heavy freights, such as iron, wire, nails, &c., would be shipped to Port Stanley from Montreal and elsewhere and carried over this line to their destination. Coal would also be received because boats are crossing every day bringing coal in on cars, and the cars are drawn to their destination by the railway. We feel that it is very important to us, as we live in a fruit-growing country, that this extension should be made. Because it is necessary that fruit should reach the place of sale as quickly as possible after it is picked. Even if the Michigan Central would agree to give us accommodation we feel that it would be simply impossible for them to do it. The very large trade of the people living along the line of the projected road, as well as that of those living along the road already constructed, makes it necessary that this extension should be made as soon as possible. That being the position of affairs we feel that it is only justice that we should have this road constructed. The hon. member for Kent (Mr. Campbell) says that these two roads parallel each other. It is true the two roads are parallel to each other, but the country, as the hon. member for Bothwell has said, is very narrow in that district. If they were to go nearer to the lake than the line of the Michigan Central they would strike deep ravines which would very much increase the cost of construction. If the road is bonused from Ridgetown to St. Thomas a large amount of the bonus will be required for bridging. I thank the right hon. Prime Minister for the kind manner in which he has received the idea, which has been thrown out in reference to this matter. We have advocated the building of this road in committee, we have advocated it before different Ministers at different times and we feel that when we lay our case properly before them the Government will do justice as between our section of the county and these two roads.

Mr. CLANCY. I suppose I should be indebted to the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Campbell) for the lecture he gave a moment ago, but I think he has his answer from the hon. gentleman who has just sat down. The hon. gentleman will reflect the next time before he is quite so fresh as to declare that he knows all about a matter of this kind. Hon. gentlemen who are accustomed to hear statements from that hon. gentleman always know that he relies upon his imagination when he makes them. When he tells me that I would consult the interests of the people by being silent he has his answer from the hon. member for Essex. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Campbell) made a declaration that there was a case of consequential damages, that the Michigan Central Railway might justly come and claim damages by reason of the paralleling their line. I ask the hon. Minister if he approves of a suggestion of that kind?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I did not understand the hon. gentleman to say that.

Mr. CLANCY. That is exactly what the hon. gentleman said.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I did not say anything of the kind.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman declared that the Michigan Central would have a perfect right to come to Parliament and ask to be recouped for the damages arising from this road being subsidized, and because of the construction of a parallel line.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The hon. gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. CLANCY. By a subsidy.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Has not any company a right to ask for a subsidy ?

Mr. CLANCY. Any company has. That does not answer the question. This line has been in existence for years. Is it usual for a company to ask for a subsidy for a line that has been built for years ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The hon. member for Kent referred to the building of a new track. If they doubled-tracked their line they would have a right to come and ask for a subsidy.

Mr. CLANCY. My hon. friend said that if we paralleled the line, they would have a claim. The hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Mr. Costigan) said that we must respect the rights of the Michigan Central. The hon. gentleman has two advocates, and two alone, and both take different ground from what he has taken. I must apologize for any strong words I have used that might in any sense reflect on the course taken by the right hon. First Minister. He has said that he was entirely in sympathy with my contention and that his belief now was, that running powers were impossible. The hon. member for North Essex (Mr. McGregor) said the same thing. The hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Mr. Costigan) stated the same thing. What stronger evidence does the hon. gentleman want than that ? Everything appears to be against the possibility of obtaining running powers that can be utilized in any fair way. So, I have no course open to me but to ask this committee to declare itself on this question.

Mr. BEATTIE. Perhaps the constituency which I represent has as much interest in this matter as any other constituency in Ontario. The London and Port Stanley Railway is owned by the city of London. Not one dollar of bonus was given to it by the Dominion of Canada ; but it was built solely by the city of London, the city of St. Thomas and the townships adjoining. The city of London bought all the stock of the road, and own it entirely, but has leased it for a term of years to the Lake Erie and Detroit River Company, and will probably be eventually purchased by that company. The three local lines there, when connected, will amount to about 200 miles of railway, which is equal to a trunk line. The Lake Erie and Detroit River Company have built very large steamers, which run from Port Stanley across to Conneaut, Ohio, and carry 27 heavy cars loaded with coal each trip. They cross twice a day, so that they bring 54 cars of coal over each day. How are you going to give running powers over the Michigan Central for 44 miles between Ridgeway and St. Thomas ? It would be simply taking a trade from that road which should not be taken from it. It would be dividing the traffic. We all know what running powers mean. The railway company will simply allow the trains to go just when it suits their convenience, and will not allow trains to stop between stations.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That would not be adequate running powers.

Mr. BEATTIE. It would simply mean that the railway over those 44 miles could do no business, and the running powers would be of no use at all. I think the Prime Minister, when he fully considers this question, will deal with it fairly. This 200 miles of railway, I believe, will eventually become a great trunk line. I understand that the Pennsylvania Railway is trying hard to get a line through Canada, and will very likely build from St. Thomas to Buffalo. I do not know that a more just or reasonable bonus has been asked for from this Parliament, and I believe it will be granted, when the question is thoroughly looked into. The line owned by the Lake Erie and Detroit Company is equal to a single line from Suspension Bridge to Detroit. This line will open up a large tract of country, and will enable our merchants in London to ship their goods for 100 miles along the shore of Lake Erie. I hope the Government will take the question into their very serious consideration.

Amendment negatived : Yeas, 7 ; Nays, 34.

To the South Shore Railway Company, towards the restoration and renewal of the railway bridge over the Yamaska River at Yamaska, Que. (Revote) $50,000

Mr. McLENNAN (Glengarry). Where is this bridge ? Is it near the Grand Trunk Bridge ?

The PRIME MINISTER. No. This bridge is at the village of Yamaska. There was a bridge there formerly, built by the South-eastern Railway Company, but it was washed away about ten years ago. We have voted $50,000 for its reconstruction, but so far no company has taken advantage of the appropriation. The South Shore Railway Company intends to rebuild the bridge.

Mr. McLENNAN (Glengarry). Will this be sufficient to complete it ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. It is to be hoped it will. It is all the subsidy that is going to be given.

Mr. McLENNAN (Glengarry). How far is this from the Grand Trunk Bridge across the Yamaska ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Twenty miles.

Mr. McLENNAN (Glengarry). The other bridge was to cost $300,000.

The PRIME MINISTER. This will cost more than that.

On section 8,

Mr. FOSTER. Has the hon. gentleman the information with reference to those subsidies?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I made application to the accountant in my department on Saturday, and he said this statement would involve going through the accounts during a long period, and as the staff were busy closing up the accounts for the fiscal year, the information could not be got for many days.

Committee rose and reported progress.

EXCHEQUER COURT—RAILWAY DEBTS.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved second reading of Bill (No. 188) respecting the jurisdiction of the Exchequer Court as to Railway Debts. He said: This is to amend an Act passed this session and which received the sanction of His Excellency four or five weeks ago. At present there are certain interprovincial railways which are covered by bonds. Some of these bonds may be in default, and the question is what court should have jurisdiction to enforce their collection. This authorizes the Exchequer Court to act, but in order not to take anybody by surprise this Act will only come into operation on the 1st of August, 1900.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time considered in committee, read the third time and passed.

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. At an earlier stage of the session I said that it was not my intention to bring down any more supplementary Estimates except such were necessary to supply some accidental omissions. I wish to adhere strictly to that statement, but have to submit a few estimates, having regard to the indemnities of members of this House who departed this life this session. These are to pay the representatives of deceased members the balance of their indemnity, also to pay Lady Edgar the balance of salary of the late Sir James Edgar up to the 30th June, 1900, and to pay $5,000 for expenses of committees and witnesses and so on, the total amounting to $12,451. I beg to present a Message from His Excellency the Governor General.

Mr. SPEAKER read the Message as follows:—

Mr. McLENNAN (Glengarry).

MINTO.

The Governor General transmits to the House of Commons, further supplementary Estimates of sums required for the service of the Dominion for the year ending 30th June, 1900, and in accordance with the provisions of "The British North America Act, 1867," the Governor General recommends these Estimates to the House of Commons.

Government House,
Ottawa, 7th August, 1899.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the Message and the Estimates be referred to Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. FOSTER. In looking over this, I find it does not contain what I thought was the subject of an Order in Council, that is, the authority for allocating certain sums of money from other votes to be applied to the primary work of Mr. Charleson. That was done, I should think, by Order in Council.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is the only Order in Council on the subject. There is one other reference regarding a portion of the funds, but there is no special Order in Council. That is all there is, I am informed by the deputy.

Mr. FOSTER. What business will be taken up to-morrow?

The PRIME MINISTER. We will take up the Bills to-morrow morning that still remain on the paper, and then we will go into Supply.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 1.10 a.m. (Tuesday).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, 8th August, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

PRAYERS.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS—COMMITTEE ON.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). Mr. Speaker, I beg to present the Sixth and last report of the Select Standing Committee on Public Accounts.

Mr. WALLACE. I move, seconded by Mr. Clancy:

That the Sixth Report of the Select Standing Committee on Public Accounts, and the minutes of the proceedings of the said Committee be printed in full in the Votes and Proceedings of the House of this day.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I will have to ask my hon. friend (Mr.

Wallace) not to move this motion to-day. If he does, I will have to raise a point of order.

Mr. FOSTER. I understand that when the report of a committee is presented, it goes on the Votes and Proceedings.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I understand quite the contrary to be the rule. I explained that in committee this morning.

Mr. FOSTER. In this case, there is a report of the majority, and a report of the minority. What we want is to have both printed when the time comes.

The PRIME MINISTER. I must ask, however, that the motion be allowed to stand.

Mr. WALLACE. What is the object of having it stand?

The PRIME MINISTER. No notice has been given, and I wish to look at the motion and the report before deciding whether to support the motion or not.

STONY MOUNTAIN PENITENTIARY INVESTIGATION.

Mr. FOSTER. Before we pass from the order of motions, I would like to call the Prime Minister's attention to the commission of investigation into Stony Mountain Penitentiary, the conduct of the warden there, Mr. Irvine. I would like to have the report—not the evidence—printed. The report is not long.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Was it brought down this session?

Mr. FOSTER. I understand so.

The PRIME MINISTER. It is in the hands of the Printing Committee, then. They can order it printed.

Mr. FOSTER. I suppose the Printing Committee is not meeting.

Mr. TAYLOR. The Printing Committee has had its last meeting for this session, but this paper can be dealt with by a committee that was appointed consisting of the Chairman for the Senate and a Chairman for the Commons. I do not remember this paper having come before the Printing Committee.

THE PRIME MINISTER'S INVITATION TO CHICAGO DEMONSTRATION.

Mr. DAVIN. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I wish to mention a matter of the first importance. On Saturday night, before the House rose, I called the attention of the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to an alleged interview which was said to have taken place between him and Mr. F. W. Fitzpatrick, of the Treasury Department.

Mr. CLARKE. What Treasury Department?

Mr. DAVIN. At Washington. I read the interview and asked if it was correct. But the Premier only replied: I have nothing to say, and moved the adjournment of the House. But, Sir, I find in the "Globe," of August 7th, in a letter from our own correspondent, dated August 6th—that is on the Sunday following the sitting of the House to which I refer—a despatch, which, if we can trust the correspondent of the "Globe," shows that the right hon. Premier took that correspondent into his confidence. The paragraph reads as follows:—

Mr. S. W. Fitzpatrick, the Washington gentleman who visited Ottawa to invite Lord Minto and Sir Wilfrid Laurier to participate in the opening of the new Chicago federal building, has been talking to American newspapers. Mr. Fitzpatrick has stated that Sir Wilfrid informed him that the relations between Canada and the United States were so strained that he would not advise Lord Minto to accept the invitation, and that he would not go to Chicago himself. Mr. Fitzpatrick said other things to his interviewers, and the interviewers doubtless added somewhat to what was told them. The truth about the whole affair is—

This is said emphatically and authoritatively.

The truth about the whole affair is that Mr. Fitzpatrick saw Sir Wilfrid, who told him that the date chosen, October 5th, was so far ahead that it would be impossible for him to accept, and that the time was not opportune. Fitzpatrick is an ex-Canadian, and, in the course of a private conversation, Sir Wilfrid told Mr. Fitzpatrick some things regarding the issues between Canada and the United States. Sir Wilfrid's views thus expressed to Fitzpatrick are by no means new to the Canadian people, for the Prime Minister has given vent to them on the floor of Parliament, and in other places. Evidently, Fitzpatrick, like so many of his fellow-citizens, had a very cursory knowledge of the questions at issue. He was surprised at Canada having the temerity to disagree with the United States, and he went back to Washington still amazed, and to reporters detailed and enlarged upon a private conversation.

So that the "Globe" correspondent really confirms the telegram which, on Saturday night, I read to the House. For instance, we are informed the Prime Minister told the correspondent that the time was not opportune. It is quite evident from what followed that the Prime Minister enlarged on that and gave reasons why it was inopportune. Now, the Chicago "Record," having seen that, has the following:—

Postmaster Charles U. Gordon, who is chairman of the committee having in charge the exercises in connection with the laying of the corner stone of the new federal building, said last night: "I am loath to believe that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has refused to attend the laying of the corner stone, and I shall not believe it until our committee, appointed for the express purpose of inviting him has reported that he will not attend. That committee has not yet been made up, but D. R. Cameron has been made chairman of it. The invitations will not be ready for some time, and it will probably be two or three weeks before the committee can go to Canada and submit the in-vitiation. As for Mr. Fitzpatrick, he has not been delegated or authorized to extend an invitation to Sir Wilfrid or to any other member of the Canadian Cabinet. So far as the alleged ground for refusal goes, I would say that we are not deciding the international boundary question here in Chicago, but are holding a great and important celebration, at which I hope to see the Canadian Premier as well as other high officers.

It was with no unfriendly feeling towards the Prime Minister I brought this matter forward. I thought it was due to him, not merely as the head of a party Government, but as the Prime Minister of Canada, and due to him as the leader of the House that, at the earliest possible moment, I should bring before his attention, the alleged interview. Because it was of a very extraordinary character, and seemed to indicate on the part of the Prime Minister a peculiar view of what the circumstances demanded of him. You are aware, Mr. Speaker, that in 1874, when international negotiations were taking place between Great Britain, Canada and the United States, Lord Dufferin was invited by some civic functionaries to stop off at Chicago; he was received there with the large hospitality that belongs to the American people, and the social intercourse which took place, and the pleasant words that were interchanged could not but have had the best effect upon the relations between the two peoples. Well, Sir, while there is no man living in Canada more ready to resent the last appearance of dictation on the part of our neighbours towards us, more ready to strive for the rights of Canada, which now has grown to the magnitude of a nation, her position, one of great national eminence, the position of Prime Minister of Canada being one of the great positions of the earth—while I say I would be ready to strive that we should be always held in proper respect, and that none of our rights should be foregone, yet I recognize that everything that can tend to sweeten the relations between the two countries is of the utmost importance. It struck me when I read that alleged interview that we were not at war with the United States, and that the language, if it were true, which was attributed to the right hon. gentleman, was calculated to do harm from an Imperial as well as from a Colonial stand-point.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I must ask my hon. friend to keep himself in order. If my hon. friend wants to put me a question, that is in order.

Mr. DAVIN. I will place myself in order. As the right hon. gentleman appears to have taken the "Globe" reporter into his confidence, and to have given him an explanation of the alleged interview, I think it is due to this House, I will go further and say that I think it is due to the humblest member of this House, that the Prime Minister should take us into his confidence. Now what has been the result of not doing this?

Mr. DAVIN.

We saw in the "Citizen" yesterday, a quotation in which the words of the Prime Minister were referred to and commented on, but had he reproved this misrepresentation on Saturday night it could not have been written. Not only that, but in the press of the United States at the present moment, the subject is discussed in an undesirable manner, as, for instance, in the New York "Sun," there is an article on the subject which I will not read to the House because it is not necessary.

An hon. MEMBER. Dispense.

Mr. DAVIN. Now, I will read it to the House to reply to that "dispense":

A GROTESQUE CHARACTER.

If the report is true that Sir Wilfrid Laurier the Canadian Premier, has declined an official invitation to be present at a public function at Chicago next October, to be presided over by the President of the United States, on the ground that he fears he will be ill-treated because of the Alaskan boundary controversy, he is a grotesque character who takes himself altogether too seriously.

This single sentence, which is all I will read, shows the misconception which exists in the United States, and the use that is being made of this interview left unexplained at the present time, which use could not have been made of it if the Prime Minister, when I brought the matter before the House on Saturday night, had taken the House into his confidence. Since the reporter of the "Globe" says that the interview took place and that conversations took place explaining why the Governor General and the Prime Minister of Canada could not accept invitations to social functions and interchange social amenities with our great neighbours; invitations from important persons in a great city like Chicago—since that has been done, we ought to have an authoritative explanation of the whole matter. There is another point. If this interview with the "Record" is correct, in the interview of Mr. Fitzpatrick with the Prime Minister, he seems to have presented no credentials, and it is construable at present that he came here without any authority, as the Chicago "Record" alleges. I think this is very grave, for it is calculated to affect the kind feeling between the United States and ourselves, and it is certainly a matter involving the dignity of Canada, and I think now, as on Saturday night, I am discharging a public duty as well as a duty to the Prime Minister and to his great place, in bringing it before the House. I beg to move the adjournment of the House.

The PRIME MINISTER. Let me say one word, not because the hon. gentleman has brought the matter to the attention of the House, but because several newspapers have taken hold of it. There has been an interview published in a Washington paper attributing words to me of a certain character, which the hon. gentleman has just mentioned. I did not take any notice of that interview, and I do not propose to do so. This interview was not published by me, it was an interview with a reporter of the Washington paper, a Mr. Fitzpatrick, and Mr. Fitzpatrick has put words in my mouth for which I do not hold myself at all responsible. If I wish to say anything to the public I will say it myself and in my own way, not through any other party. I have received no invitation so far from the Chicago authorities to take part in the demonstration proposed to be held in the month of October. I understand that one is coming, in fact I have been informed unofficially this morning that one is coming, and whenever it comes I shall certainly treat it with the courtesy that is due to it, not only because of the position I hold, but on account of our relations with our neighbours.

Mr. DAVIN. Before you put that motion I have to say this, that I did not bring this before the House because several papers took notice of it, and I think that the manner in which the Prime Minister treated it when I brought it up on Saturday night, and the petulant tone now adopted is unbecoming his great place.

Nobody can doubt for one minute that it was not right to bring it before the House and of that we have evidence here in the "Globe," or else the reporter of the "Globe" has been guilty of the grossest misconduct towards the Prime Minister. Here is what the "Globe" says. I see the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) who fled the House last night—

Mr. SPEAKER. I hope my hon. friend (Mr. Davin) will preserve decorum. I hope my hon. friend will not indulge in strong language. It is evident from the temper and tone of the House that I have only to ask my hon. friend to avoid extremely strong language.

Mr. DAVIN. Mr. Speaker, this is what the reporter of the "Globe" says :

The truth about the whole affair is that Mr. Fitzpatrick saw Sir Wilfrid, who told him that the date chosen, October 5, was so far ahead that it would be impossible for him to accept, and that the time was not opportune.

This is the language of a man who professes to have been told by the right hon. Prime Minister that he had received an invitation, and that he had treated with Mr. Fitzpatrick as if he were in a position to give an invitation.

Fitzpatrick is an ex-Canadian and in the course of a private conversation Sir Wilfrid told Mr. Fitzpatrick some things regarding the issues between Canada and the United States. Sir Wilfrid's views thus expressed to Fitzpatrick are by no means new to the Canadian people, for the Prime Minister has given vent to them on the floor of Parliament and in other places. Evidently Fitzpatrick, like so many of his fellow citizens, had a very cursory knowledge of the questions at issue. He was surprised at Canada's having the temerity to disagree with the United States, and he went back to Washington still amazed, and two reporters detailed and enlarged upon a private conversation.

I say that the reporter who has written that last part, in making an effort to discredit Fitzpatrick, has used words calculated to do great harm and the reporter for the "Globe" who has written that paragraph, if these words are unauthorized, is responsible to the editor of his paper for a very grave journalistic delinquency. I have no more to say about this matter, but there is nothing that I have ever done in this Parliament which seems to me to be more in accordance with my duty, as a member of Parliament, than what I have done in the premises.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. Speaker, the House has been in session for nearly five months at great inconvenience and loss to many members of Parliament, and at immense cost to the country. It is a very difficult thing for any hon. member of this House to explain to his constituents, in the country, why we have remained here such a length of time.

Mr. DAVIN. The hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair), spoke for an hour and a half yesterday.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I wish to take this opportunity of stating to the public that we have had such proceedings as these, which, I suppose, are according to the rules technically permissible, during the whole of the session. For the past five months we have witnessed hon. members, day after day, getting up with some newspaper, some little article, penned by whom, in many cases, nobody knows, and introducing a discussion in the House upon a matter for which there is no serious foundation.

Mr. DAVIN. It seems to me that this has a serious foundation.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Hon. gentlemen bring in these clap trap motions and I think that the public ought to know that one of the principal reasons why we have not been able to devote ourselves to the public business, in the manner that the public interest demands is because of this improper use of the privileges of the House. This practice is only confined to a few members of the House, but almost every time Mr. Speaker has taken the Chair somebody has jumped up with a newspaper. In many cases even the responsibility of a newspaper is not attached to the statements which are quoted by these hon. gentlemen; they take some letter that has been written by some person, or which is supposed to have been written by some person, and undertake to found a discussion upon it. This practice, I may venture to say is one of the chief principal reasons which has contributed to the lengthening of this session almost two months at immense inconvenience to hon. members and at tremendous cost to the country. I do hope that leading members on both sides of the House will try and use their influence to stop this mode of proceeding.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I am afraid the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sutherland) has chosen a bad time to read a lecture to this side of the House. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Davin) who has made this motion, is perfectly within his rights, otherwise Mr. Speaker would have called him to order. It is perfectly within the right of the hon. member to call the attention of the House to a matter of importance; he has done it within the rules of the House, and we must trust Mr. Speaker to say whether the rules have been observed or not. I just simply rise to say that, while we all wish to end this session as quickly as possible, it is unfortunate that an attempt should be made just now to say that two months have been added to the length of the session as the result of the fault of the Opposition.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) ought to be fair. I did not say the Opposition. I addressed myself to both sides.

Mr. FOSTER. The real fault is, if I may be serious, for a moment, that the Government have committed, and it has been the same with too many governments, the fault of keeping very important legislation to the last period of the session. We have this session given up a multitude of things that we ought to have inquired into. We are to-day repressing dozens of inquiries that it is our right, and almost our duty, to make in order to get through the remaining work of the session. I hope that from this time on, we will not read each other lectures but proceed with the business just as rapidly as possible.

Motion negatived.

QUEBEC CARTRIDGE FACTORY.

Mr. OLANCY. Mr. Speaker, as I see the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence (Mr. Borden) in his place, I desire to renew the question I put yesterday on behalf of the hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram). It was promised by the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence that he would have the answer to the question of the hon. member for East Elgin respecting the Cartridge Factory at Quebec. Perhaps the hon. gentleman has the answer this morning.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). With the permission of the House I will give the answer. The questions are as follows, the third, ninth and twelfth having been struck out:—

1. What were the Government's reasons for dismissing the members of the labour association, Mechanics' Assembly No. 10061, out of the Quebec cartridge factory?

Mr. SUTHERLAND.

2. How many were dismissed?

4. How many girls and boys have been injured and maimed in the said cartridge factory during the last two years, and to what extent were they injured?

5. What remuneration did they receive while suffering from said injuries, including the time laid up from such injuries?

6. What was the nature of the correspondence which took place between the labour party in the city of Quebec regarding the refusal of the cartridge factory authorities to admit for the purpose of inspection the provincial factory inspectress, Madame Provencher?

7. What was the result of the inquiries made by the Government regarding the said refusal?

8. Who is responsible, the Minister of Militia, the Deputy Minister, or the superintendent of the said factory, for the perpetuation of the sweating system as conducted therein?

10. What is the minimum rate of wages paid to young girls and boys in the said factory?

11. Is the Government aware of the fact that the earnings of some of these employees per week does not amount to more than $1?

13. Was there a petition presented to the Government or any member thereof, praying for the dismissal of Charles Roy? What were the reasons alleged in the said petition, and whose signatures were attached thereto?

1 and 2. The Government is not aware that any of the employees of the Cartridge Factory belong to any labour association. 4. One boy—hand scalded with melted rosin. 5. $10 paid for medical attendance. 6. A resolution of the Mechanics Assembly, No. 10061, Nights of Labour, authorizing the secretary to write to the Minister of Militia and Defence and inquire if it was with his knowledge and consent that the Provincial Factory Inspector, Madame Provencher, was refused admission into the Cartridge Factory. This resolution was transmitted to the Minister of Militia and Defence on the 8th November, 1897, and acknowledged on the 10th of the same month. 7. The superintendent of the Cartridge Factory was instructed to send to headquarters, for the Minister's approval, any authority produced by Madame Provencher to visit the factory, but she never applied for permission and nothing more was done in the matter. 8. There is no sweating system in the Cartridge factory. 10. A minimum of 20 cents per day is paid to young girls and boys. 11. It is possible for some persons who may have absented themselves; pay is stopped for absence. 13. A statutory declaration forwarded to the Minister alleging political interference in the last election and signed by J. B. Pelletier.

INQUIRIES FOR RETURNS, &c.

Mr. FOSTER. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like for the last time to renew my request for those papers in regard to the dismissal of Messrs. Belanger and Michaud. There will certainly be trouble when the estimates come if these are not down. I have exhausted all the patience a man can exercise in waiting for them. They are easily accessible, and there seems to be a determination not to produce them ; here I am left to the last day without them. I wanted those papers from the Minister of Railways and Canals, and I am treated with complete contempt with regard to them.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). I was asked to bring down the papers relating to the ownership of the coal under the Nanaimo Harbour. The officer in the department says that a return has been laid on the Table which contains most of the correspondence, and I have the honour now to lay on the Table the rest of the papers. These are all we have in the department. The hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr. Foster) also called my attention to a return which had been brought down containing the correspondence relating to liquor permits in the Yukon. There was a reference in one of the letters to a letter from Mr. Copp, asking for permission to take liquor into the Yukon, and that letter did not appear on the file. I find on inquiry that the letter was not addressed to me or to the department, but directed to Mr. Ogilvie, and was sent to the department with the request that it should be forwarded. It was forwarded to Mr. Ogilvie, and no copy of it was kept in the department. It was simply a formal application for permission to take so much liquor, I forget the amount, into the Yukon Territory. There was another letter referred to, one from Mr. Maxwell. That letter was inclosed in an application for a permit made by a gentleman on the coast, and was addressed to Mr. Smart, the Deputy Minister, and was simply an introductory letter. It did not contain any reference to the business and was marked private, and Mr. Smart did not keep any copy of it.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). That disposes of the papers my hon. friend referred to except those relating to Messrs. Belanger and Michaud. I will send word in regard to them to the Minister of Railways. I now beg to place on the Table a copy of the Order in Council relating to the discharge of J. K. Skelton.

Mr. BERGERON. I want to call the attention of the right hon. gentleman to the papers about which I asked the Minister of Railways and Canals yesterday. They are in answer to an address of the House of the 24th April and relate to contracts and tenders on the Soulanges Canal. The papers cannot be too long to copy, but they are most important, and I would ask the First Minister to see that the Minister of Railways and Canals brings them down. He promised them yesterday, but I think he must have forgotten them. They will shorten the discussion on his estimates if they are brought down.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved second reading of Bill (No. 191) further to amend the Acts respecting the Senate and House of Commons.

Motion agreed to ; Bill read the second time, and the House resolved itself into committee on the Bill.

(In the Committee.)

On section 2,

Mr. BOURASSA. This Bill is an indication of a strange feeling that has developed in this House, especially during this session. I refer to a spirit of great loyalty, I might say jingoism. Of course, I have no objection in maintaining the militia on a good footing ; but at the same time I am sure it does not accord with the public opinion of the day to go too far in that direction. It is all very well to allow members of this House and members of the Senate to go when they please and have a good time in camps ; but there are members of Parliament who occupy public positions outside, such as the mayors of great cities and others, who are called away on business which is quite as important as the camping of these military gentlemen. Therefore, I think it is a bad precedent to bring in a Bill at the end of the session for the purpose of allowing these gentlemen who go and enjoy themselves in camping to draw their whole indemnity as members of Parliament. I do not want to raise any discussion on this matter, but I want to enter my protest against this extreme spirit of militarism, which is entirely out of harmony with the public opinion of this country.

Mr. BERGERON. I do not want to follow my hon. friend in his remarks, but I want to call the attention of the House to something else. I think the rule under which members are expected to give the accountant a statement of all their days of absence has of late years been very much forgotten. I do not want to bring any accusation against anybody ; it is none of my business ; but I could not help remarking, in reading over the Auditor General's Report, that there are very few members who do not draw the whole of their indemnity, although as a matter of fact some of them have been absent a great many days from the House. I only mention the fact to show that the law in that respect is a dead-letter, and might as well be struck off the statutes.

As far as this is concerned, it may work injustice to some people, as compared with others, for some people may be scrupulous and mention every day of absence while others will not. This year there is no declaration required, for we have passed the number of days which entitle members to their full indemnity without making any declaration as regards absence, but each year the accountant sends out a declaration to be filled in and signed by each member, showing his days of absence, and the result is that while some may account for every day of absence others do not, so that some members who may have been in attendance for months are still docked a part of their indemnity, while others, who may have been in attendance only a few weeks, will receive the full amount. It would be better to do away with the declaration altogether than not have the law complied with in every case.

Bill reported; read the third time and passed.

SEED GRAIN INDEBTEDNESS, N.W.T.

Bill (No. 189) respecting securities for seed grain indebtedness (Mr. Sifton) read the second time, and the House resolved itself into committee on the Bill.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. DAVIN. I beg to move an amendment that the following clause be added to the Bill:—

The Governor General in Council may transfer to the Government of the North-west Territories the claims of the Crown on the principal debtor for seed grain, with instructions to give the principal debtor option to pay the money or its equivalent, provided that statute labour, sufficient at the usual rate to cover the amount, may be taken as an equivalent.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). No.

Mr. DAVIN. I had hoped that the hon. Minister would accept this. It would dispose finally of the question that is very near the heart of the North-west Territories. Those people, who are thus the principal debtors of the Crown, contracted this indebtedness at a time when certainly the great majority of the settlers had not learned how to farm in the Territories, and when many of those who had made the experiment were doubtful whether the territory would prove a farming success or not. These men were unable in those days to get seed grain, and the Crown lent them their seed grain, and they stuck to the country when others left. These are the men who have proved that the country is good for farming, and many of them have had great struggles and hard years. There are not many so poor that they will not pay, but there are some who are poor and who, though they do not wish to avoid paying, would prefer paying in the form of statute labour than cash. The hon. Minister gave, in reply to a question I put to him some time ago, the amount of the indebtedness, and it is not large. It would be much easier for the local government to deal with the people; and as I have proved again and again, the local government has not got all that it is entitled to, considering the population, and it would be a very small matter to transfer that indebtedness to it, I would fain hope—I see that the hon. Minister of the Interior is engaged in a private conversation with the Minister of Railways, and I think he might have abstained for a moment from his conversation while I was drawing his attention and that of the House to this important subject.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I was not aware that the hon. gentleman was addressing himself to the Minister of the Interior.

Mr. DAVIN. This is a matter in which a large number of farmers in the North-west Territories is interested, either directly or indirectly, and the solution I propose would not place any of the farmers in the position of having accepted seed grain without paying for it. Most of them would pay in money, but they would pay the local government, and the local government would gain that small amount. But the great thing that would be accomplished would be the giving of an opportunity to some of the farmers, who are in hard circumstances, to pay in statute labour, and the whole debt would be wiped out.

Amendment negatived.

The committee rose and reported progress.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I move the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. DAVIN. I move that the Bill be referred back to committee to add the following clause:—

The Governor General in Council may transfer to the Governor of the North-west Territories, the claims of the Crown on the principal debtors for seed-grain, with instructions to give the principal debtor the option to pay in money or its equivalent, provided that statute labour, sufficient at the usual rate to cover the amount may be taken as an equivalent.

House divided on amendment.

YUKON TERRITORY ACT AMENDMENT.

Bill (No. 186) to amend the Yukon Territory Act read the second time and House resolved itself into committee on the Bill.

(In the Committee.)

On section 1,

Mr. FOSTER. What is the proposition as to bringing that into force?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). I may say that the Government has not had an opportunity of giving that matter very careful consideration. The Bill was introduced by the Minister of Justice in the Senate and carefully considered there, and this provision was inserted, looking to the representation of the British subjects in the Territory in the Assembly. But, as to the exact date when it can be brought into force, I am hardly in a position to say what I would advise the Government at this moment. But my disposition is to bring it into force as soon as it can conveniently be done. The objection to immediate action consists simply in not knowing what the permanent population of the Territory is. I wish to move—

Mr. FOSTER. Just a moment. Who introduced this Bill into the Senate?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The Minister of Justice.

Mr. FOSTER. Does it not seem a very odd thing that the Government should prepare a Bill and have it introduced by the Minister of Justice into the Senate and have it passed there, and when it comes here a member of the same Government should tell us that they have not given it consideration, and consequently he puts a clause in that they may have some time to consider it before it comes into operation? That is a remarkable kind of legislation.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. There is nothing remarkable about it. I did not say that the Bill had not received consideration; the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) is putting words in my mouth that I did not use. I say that the subject that has not received the consideration that we would like to give it is the time when this should come into force, which is a different thing altogether from what the hon. gentleman says. I wish to move:

That subsection 6 be amended to read: "Subsections 3, 4 and 5 of this section shall come into force at such time as the Governor in Council shall think proper and shall fix for the purpose by Order in Council."

The subsection as it now reads is:

This section shall come into force—

And so on. That, of course, will apply to the whole of the section. The portion of the section which it is intended to cover is that portion which applies to the election of two members of Council, and in order to effectuate that intention, it will be necessary to amend it as I suggest, so that it will read: "Subsections 3, 4 and 5 of this section shall go into force."

Mr. DAVIN. Why has it been decided to eliminate judges as ex-officio members of the Council?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. There are objections upon principle to having judicial officers in a governing body. It has sometimes been found convenient that the judges should be members of the Council, but upon principle, the judicial and the executive or administrative functions of government ought always, if possible, to be separate. The scarcity of officers sufficiently well qualified for the position of members of Council when the Council was originally organized, was a reason why it was suggested in the House, and I assented to the suggestion, although it is not in the original Bill, that the judges of the district should be members of Council. Facts, however, of which members of the House are aware, namely, that the judges' names have been brought into discussion where it is not desirable they should be, and another fact which I mentioned in the House before, that legislative measures were passed upon by the Council at which the judge was present, and were afterwards declared ultra vires by the judge, give a sufficient reason to my hon. friend why the judge should not be a member of the Council.

On section 2,

Mr. FOSTER. I do not understand how you prevent a conflict in that clause where you give the Governor in Council, or the Commissioner in Council power to make regulations in respect, especially to tavern and other licenses, and to impose duties for the issue of the same. You have two powers there who may be doing it three or four thousand miles apart.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The scheme of the Act is the same as the scheme of the old North-west Territories Act, that the power of the Commissioner in Council is subordinate to that of the Governor in Council; and where the provision is that the Governor in Council or the Commissioner in Council may make certain regulations, then the power of the Commissioner in Council is subject to that of the Governor in Council. The Governor in Council directs the Commissioner in Council to exercise his authority; it may be done to such an extent and under such limitations as the Governor in Council provides. The council being an appointed body, it must be under control of the central authority. The central authority is altogether responsible for what the appointed body does, so that the method of procedure under this will be for the Governor in Council to direct what the Commissioner in Council may do under this Act.

Mr. DAVIN. This enlarges the power of the Council; it gives them power to deal with public health and municipal taxation.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. They had that before. The enlargement of power is not in regard to jurisdiction over public health or matters of that kind, but in regard to taxation. Before passing from this clause I desire to move a couple of amendments. In the 20th line I move that after the words "public health," there be inserted "or for purposes of local improvement." The work which it is contemplated to do in connection with preserving public health might include everything that is required, but it is not absolutely certain. I move, also, that the words in the 21st and the 22nd line "upon the inhabitants of any such settlement" be struck out. My reason for the last amendment is this: On examination of these clauses it appears to me that it might be open to the construction that the words, "upon the inhabitants of any such settlement" would be held to refer to a poll tax and not to a tax upon property.

Mr. FOSTER. There is one point that strikes me. Here you have a settlement of five or six hundred miners, sturdy, independent men. Suppose that the commissioner takes a notion that certain public improvements ought to be made, a building or something of that kind. Suppose that the sentiment of the settlement is entirely against that, you still give the commissioner power to have that building erected, and to tax the property of the inhabitants for the erection of it. Is that a wise thing to do? It would be imposing a burden sometimes against the will of the people who have to pay for it. It would really be taxation without a voice in it. I think you should have some expression of sentiment from the majority of the people before the commissioner should say that a building should be erected or that certain public works should be constructed for which they are to pay. It would be, I think, too arbitrary. You have no more independent set of men, and you have no set of men more generous in the matter of making public improvements and paying their shot for it, as they call it. I think it would be a pretty extreme thing for one man to go down and say that a building must be put up or an improvement constructed without consulting the people.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I perfectly recognize the strength of the hon. gentleman's remarks. That was one of the most difficult points in connection with this Bill. It was discussed at very considerable length in the Senate.

Mr. FOSTER. As regards public health, I do not think that would be an objection, but as regards public improvements I think it would be.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. It may be that the words "local improvement" may be construed to have a wider meaning than would be desirable, but if we were to confine it to work necessary to promote public health, I do not think the provision would be sufficiently wide. The original provision in the Bill, brought into the Senate, was that this jurisdiction should be exercised only upon the petition of the majority of the inhabitants of the district.

Mr. FOSTER. What kind of public improvements or local works do you contemplate?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. We do not contemplate anything, but I suppose a ditch, or a road, or a sidewalk, would probably be the only kinds of works that the commissioner would cause to be constructed.

Mr. FOSTER. If they were only public works necessary for the preservation of public health, such as a drain, there would not be so much objection. But if you are going to construct streets, and sidewalks, I think it should be left at the people's option.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I can understand that if the commissioner were reckless, or careless, he might raise a feeling in the minds of the inhabitants of the district that they were not properly treated. Taxation of any kind, without direct representation, is, of course, always necessarily, more or less, offensive. I think in this case you can be certain that the Commissioner in Council would only act upon the urgent representation of the people themselves.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not think you ought to legislate upon that assumption. It may be all very well in private administration.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. We have a state of circumstances in which it is almost impossible to apply ordinary rules, and we have necessarily to leave a considerable amount to the discretion of the commissioner. If these words "local improvement" are objected to we might, perhaps, consider an amendment.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). I think they are necessary.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. They strike me as being necessary.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. You cannot do anything at all if you do not have these words in. How can you do anything necessary without these words?

Mr. FOSTER. How would it do to amend it by inserting the words in the clause "and in the case of local improvements on a majority vote of the adult inhabitants."

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. If it were a matter of any weight that might be necessary, but it is a small matter.

Mr. DAVIN. Why is it necessary in the Yukon, to go beyond what were the powers given at a similar stage in the North-west Territories?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Because you have an entirely different set of circumstances. In the North-west Territories there were towns with no municipal organization of any kind and with no governmental interference, with nothing being done except by the people themselves. In Dawson City, and the mining towns of the Yukon, if such a state of affairs went on for another year, the people would die if an epidemic were to break out. It is absolutely necessary that some means should be provided, and this is the means that is being provided, only for the purpose of meeting an emergency that would arise in connection with a lot of people going suddenly to one place, starting up a mining camp and being camped closely together, in regard to which measures would have to be taken to have a road built or a drain constructed, and, perhaps, a sidewalk put down, which, perhaps, the people might not think necessary for the purposes of public health or public convenience. I think it would be hardly safe to simply limit it to the words "public health," and leave the other matters optional. I think the words "local improvements" under the circumstances, are not too wide. The hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries suggests that the words "this object," in the 23rd and 24th lines, should be changed to "any of these objects," to make the latter portion of the clause consistent with the amendments that have been made. I move that the amendment be made as I have stated it.

Mr. SPROULE. I would suggest that, as the hon. Minister wishes to make some distinction between local improvements and improvements necessary for the public health, he should use the term "local improvements for sanitary purposes," so that the provision would apply only to improvements necessary for the public health.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. That would not include such improvements as sidewalks.

Mr. DAVIN. The moment you want sidewalks you will have municipalities.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I do not think that a sidewalk could be held to be a sanitary work. It may be necessary to construct a road through the middle of a settlement, which work might not come under the definition of a sanitary work, although it would be necessary for the public health. This provision is due to the fact that we have not in that country a large population of British subjects. If we had, we would provide for immediate municipal organization. But in most of these places that spring up, if we were to provide for municipal organization, there would be no electors, and the organization would be ridiculous. So that we have to provide for something in the nature of an emergency.

Mr. DAVIN. As we provide later on for municipal taxation, does not the Minister think it is giving too much power to the Commissioner in Council to add the words: "for purposes of local improvements." It may lead to a great deal of tyrannical action that is wholly unnecessary. If you have a settlement which is indulging in habits inimical to sanitary conditions, under the clause as it was originally the Commissioner in Council could take steps at once; but under the clause as amended, he will have power to decide to have sidewalks or some other expensive luxury in which the people do not want to indulge. You have personal government there as it is, and by putting in the words: "for purposes of local improvement" you are placing still larger powers in the hands of the commissioners.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This provision, I take it, has reference to that initial stage through which a settlement passes before it is compact and numerous enough to be formed into a municipality. I think we are magnifying the possible difficulties that may arise. We must assume that this power will be exercised wisely and in a proper emergency.

Mr. CLARKE. The commissioner is authorized to levy a tax for the purpose of repaying the cost of local improvements. Is there any limitation to his power as to when that tax shall be levied?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is not for the purpose of repaying the cost of local improvements. It is only to provide for the initial stage of the settlement.

Mr. CLARKE. If the repayment of the cost of the local improvement were made payable during the life of the improvement, there would not be so much objection to the provision. I want to guard against property being confiscated by the initiation of a tax to pay the cost of an improvement in one year.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. This is merely an enabling power given to the Commissioner in Council to take steps in an emergency, before a municipal council is elected, to provide for the needs of the settlement; and when we give him power to frame a municipal Act, we can surely give him the power to provide for local improvements. The suggestion which my hon. friend makes would imply that the Commissioner in Council would desire to destroy the place; but it would be contrary to the principles of legislation for us to assume that he would act in an obviously improper way. If we proceeded on that principle of legislation, we could not confer power on anybody. It is a case in which we are providing for an emergency that may happen before municipal government can be formed, and we have to give more or less extensive powers.

Mr. CLARKE. Even where there is a well-established municipal government, the system of local improvement taxation often leads to grave abuses. In some centres such as Toronto and other places, the property of people has been practically confiscated by the imposition of ordinary taxation for local improvement rates.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This power does not extend to places where there is a municipal organization.

Mr. SPROULE. This applies only to places where there is no local corporation—

Mr. CLARKE. That makes it all the worse.

Mr. SPROULE. It can only apply where local municipalities are not organized. Where municipal organizations exist, I take it that they have the authority, or if they have not, it could be vested in them by the Governor in Council. But where a settlement is suddenly started in a locality without any municipal government, it would apply. But even in that case, it is going a long way to give the commissioner the right to tax for local improvements. I could understand giving him the right to tax for improvements for the promotion of health, but going beyond that is vesting him with a very dangerous power.

Mr. DAVIN. I think the hon. Minister ought not to press that amendment.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The complaint is not, that we do too much, but not enough.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

On section 3,

Mr. FLINT. I would like the control of the importation of intoxicating liquors to be invested in the Governor in Council, rather than in the Commissioner in Council. The House is well aware of the difficulties of regulating that matter in such a distant territory as the Yukon, and I think we would have much more confidence in the Governor in Council in such a matter than in the commissioner. The commissioner is practically beyond our control and criticism. He is not responsible to any legislative body or the people, except in a very indirect way to the Government here. I think that until some further stage is reached in the government of the Yukon, it would be more acceptable to the people to put this matter under the control of the Governor in Council.

Mr. FOSTER. There is one great merit in the present situation, and that is that no one can find out what is being done, when it is being done, and what is the result. We have been trying, during this whole session, to get at certain facts, but have been bandied about between this Government and the government of the North-west Territories, and the commissioner, and the like, and have found it impossible to get any information of what is being done. I think that this Government ought to keep the responsibility solely in itself, on the advice of the Council as an advisory body. In the first place, the ordinances, or enactments, or regulations made here in Ottawa by the Government would have greater force and be more respected than the enactment of a local Council, and there would be less disposition to cavil at and attempt to evade them. Another reason is, that we are here, and the Government is primarily responsible to us, and I think the regulations ought to be regulations passed by the Government here on the best information and advice they can get. What is the intention of the Government with reference to the manufacture of liquors in the Yukon? We are enacting legislation which practically provides that nothing shall be done except on the recommendation of the Government. What is the policy of the Government in this respect?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. My advice to my colleagues so far has been not to permit the manufacture of intoxicating liquors in the territory, and I have not seen anything to change that opinion yet.

Mr. FOSTER. Is that to be the policy of the Government?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The hon. gentleman cannot expect a definite answer to a question of that kind. That is my opinion so far, and my colleagues have seen fit to concur in it, and nothing has happened to cause us to change that opinion up to the present. But nobody can say what we will do in the future.

Mr. FOSTER. Here we are enacting that:

No intoxicating liquor or intoxicants shall be manufactured, compounded or made in the territory, except under regulation of the Governor in Council.

That means that we are giving power to the Governor in Council to permit the manufacture or compounding of liquor in the territory.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. We have that power now.

Mr. FOSTER. But we have the practice which has been asserted, and the statement made just now that practically the policy of the Government so far has been not to allow the manufacture of intoxicants in the Yukon. We ought to know whether that is the settled policy of the Government. Otherwise, we may be disposed to move in these enactments something with regard to that. I am entirely of the opinion of the hon. Minister of the Interior, that it is not necessary to manufacture intoxicating liquors in that territory, and I should hope that the policy which he says he has carried out individually, will be carried out by the Government without any enactment, but, if necessary, I could move an amendment to that effect.

Mr. FLINT. I beg to move that the words "Governor in Council" be substituted for the words "Commissioner in Council."

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. TAYLOR. I move that in the 37th line, after the word "council," the following words be added: "And then only for a medicinal or manufacturing purpose"; and after the word "council" in the 40th line, the same words.

Mr. FOSTER. I should prefer if my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor) would make his amendment in this way—to leave out all the words after "no intoxicating liquor or intoxicants shall be manufactured, compounded or made in the Territory."

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). And are they to be allowed to import them? And if so, why should they not be allowed to make them?

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman has stated his policy, which up to this time has been against the manufacture of intoxicating liquors there; and what I propose is to give effect to that policy. If it was a good policy in the past, it is a good policy for the future. There are arguments, and strong ones, even if you may allow the importation in a guarded way, against allowing the manufacture in a country like that.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. As I understand, my hon. friend from York, N.B. (Mr. Foster) moves that in the phrase:

No intoxicating liquor or intoxicants shall be manufactured, compounded or made in the territory, except under regulation of the Governor in Council.

the words "except under regulation of the Governor in Council" shall be struck out.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. And that the hon. member for Leeds moves another amendment.

Some hon. MEMBERS. One o'clock.

Mr. FOSTER. Before we rise, let us understand what the amendment is. The hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) has moved an amendment which would allow both the making and importation, but only for these restricted purposes. Under my amendment, no intoxicating liquors would be manufactured in the Territory or imported except by permission of the Governor in Council. And then, under the amendment of my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor) only for medicinal and manufacturing purposes.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It does not matter under whose permission you are going to limit it to medicinal purposes.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not know—"medicinal purposes" has a wide application some times.

It being One o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

House resumed at three o'clock.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. As I understand the hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr. Foster) has moved that the words "except under regulation of the Governor in Council" be struck out. This would mean the prohibition of the manufacture and compounding of liquor in the Territory. I am willing to agree to that. Then, the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) has moved an amendment prohibiting importation except for mechanical and medicinal purposes. I am not willing to agree to that. The clause is practically the law that was in force in the North-west Territories in former years. It was satisfactorily administered there, and I think we can take the responsibility of dealing with the subject on the same principle in the Yukon Territory.

Mr. DAVIS. I do not think the amendment moved by the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) is practicable. I had a little experience in the North-west Territories in the old days under prohibition, and I am satisfied that the adoption of that amendment would throw the sale of liquor altogether into the hands of the druggists. Any man who wanted to get liquor to drink would go to a doctor, pay him a dollar and get a prescription, which would enable him to go to a drug store and get all the liquor he wanted. In that way the doctors would be able to build up quite an industry. I suppose there are 100,000 people in that country, among whom are very few prohibitionists, and if you prohibited liquor going in, you would have whisky stills all over the country. The consequence would be that in place of having 200 or 300 police, who are able to maintain law and order so well at present, that people returning say that they are safer there than in the streets of Ottawa or Toronto, you would require 1,000 or 1,500 police, and even that number I venture to say would not maintain law and order. I do not think the people of this country would be willing to be taxed to maintain such a force for the purpose of trying to keep down this traffic, when it would be utterly impossible to keep it down. The country is a wild country, and it would be impossible to ferret out the illicit stills. The consequence would be that people would have just as much liquor, but it would not be controlled. By the amendment of the hon. member for Yarmouth (Mr. Flint), which has been accepted by the Government, the control of this matter is placed in the hands of the Governor in Council, who will grant all permits for liquor that goes into the country, and I do not see that we require any other safeguard. But I think it would be a great mistake to adopt the amendment of the hon. member for South Leeds.

Amendment of Mr. Foster agreed to; amendment of Mr. Taylor negatived.

Mr. DAVIN. I would like to call the attention of the Minister of the Interior to this, that in the Yukon Act of 1898, section 12 reads as follows:—

The sittings of the court, presided over by a judge or judges, shall be held at such times and places as the Governor in Council and the Commissioner in Council shall appoint.

There is no provision made here that judgments shall be pronounced in open court, and there is no provision made here that it shall be in open court. In the old Act it is provided that the sittings shall be in open court, and that judgments shall be pronounced in public.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I will consider that in a moment.

On section 11,

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman if that implies that the British Columbia judges will have to hold a court alternately in the Yukon district?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. No, they have no original jurisdiction, it is only an appellate jurisdiction.

Mr. FOSTER. My colleague from Victoria, B.C. (Mr. Prior) wished to make some remarks upon this when it came up, and as he had to go away he asked me if I would mention the matter, which I am very glad to do. It is this: The judges of British Columbia, owing to this new work being put upon them ought to be considered with reference to an increase of salary because of their additional work.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I am astonished that any judges desire to have their salaries increased.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the hon. gentleman has his astonishment all to himself. My colleague's statement was, and I suppose it will be true to quite a large extent, that this will throw upon the judges additional work, that they all have very large districts now, but that they have salaries which are smaller than those of judges of other appellate courts; and my colleague wished me to put in a plea for the increase of salary on account of the extra work which will be put upon them.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Does the hon. gentleman concur in his colleague's suggestion?

Mr. FOSTER. I did not state that the judges asked to be considered.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Do you concur in the suggestion?

Mr. FOSTER. I said that I had great pleasure in presenting the case on behalf of my colleague.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) raised the point that in the old North-west Territories Act there was a provision that the courts, when held, should be open courts. My impression was that the common law sufficiently provided for that, and I find a clause in the old North-west Territories Act, but it does not expressly negative that conclusion. I would have no objection to putting a clause in if it were necessary. I have consulted with my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies), and we both agree that it is not necessary, and that the common law provides sufficiently that the court, being a court of record, would have to be an open court.

Mr. DAVIN. The common law applied to the North-west Territories at the time this old North-west Territories Act was passed, just as it applies to the Yukon now. The hon. gentleman will admit that at that date it was necessary to put that in. The council will now be without any judges in it, and you will have the commissioner and council sitting without any judge.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I will not leave it to argument. If anybody has any doubt about it, I will put a clause in.

Mr. DAVIN. Very good.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The twelfth clause of the original Bill reads as follows :—

Sittings of the court, presided over by a judge, or judges, shall be held at such times and places as the Governor in Council or the Commissioner in Council shall appoint.

I beg to move that a section be added to this Bill—which will be section 14, reading as follows :—

Section 12 of the said Act is hereby amended by adding the following words :—“And such sittings shall be public.”

Motion agreed to.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

QUEBEC HARBOUR COMMISSION.

House resolved itself into committee on Bill (No. 178) respecting the Quebec Harbour Commissioners.—(Mr. Fielding.)

On section 2,

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, when we had this Bill under consideration the last time, I was, I think, in the middle of addressing some remarks to the House in reference to it. I do not know quite where I broke off, and so I am afraid I will have to commence anew, but I shall be very brief in saying what I shall have to say, and then the committee can do what it pleases. The object of this Bill is, I contend, to subsidize a railway at the public expense to build an elevator in the city of Quebec on the premises of the Harbour Commissioners at Quebec. We know that a number of years ago, as one of the conditions of the financial arrangement which was made with Quebec, an elevator was to be built at Quebec. That elevator, I believe, was built; it must be there now, and in the first place, I would like to ask the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to say to the committee where that elevator is placed, what its capacity is, if it is workable, and whether a second elevator is necessary in the harbour. As I understand it this elevator has never been used.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The elevator was built by the Canadian Pacific Railway as part of the agreement which was arrived at between the Government of Canada and the Canadian Pacific Railway after the purchase of the North Shore Railway by the Canadian Pacific Railway. It is on the Long Wharf and on the Louise Basin. It has never been used, so far as my knowledge goes. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) has asked me what is the reason that it has not been used. I would rather not state what I believe is the reason, because I am not sure that I would be in the right. What I understand is, although I may be in error, because I cannot speak with any certainty about it, is that considerable expense would be involved in order to put it in such a condition that a train could unload grain, and that a ship could load it on the other side. That is a condition of things which I believe exists. But as to that I may be astray but one reason for which the elevator has never been used is, that, so far as my information goes, the Canadian Pacific Railway never brought a bushel of wheat to the city of Quebec. I do not believe that they undertake to carry wheat east of Lake Superior, or, if it does, it is in very exceptional cases, and I do not believe that they have undertaken the carrying of wheat as a business, as the Parry Sound Railway does. My hon. friend asks what is the capacity of this elevator and its cost. I could not say what is its capacity, but my impression is, that it cost $100,000. I cannot speak accurately, however, on that subject, but that is my impression. My hon. friend will ask me why this new company wants to build an elevator at Quebec. He knows that all railway companies at present do not deem themselves properly equipped, unless they have elevators. The new company is making preparation to carry wheat. My hon. friend knows that both the president and the manager of the Canada Atlantic are making great efforts to bring wheat to the seaboard. At present that company has no interest in the city of Montreal. It gets to that city over the Grand Trunk Railway, and I understand it has to pay very heavily for doing so; and its object is to use the Great Northern to bring wheat to the seaboard at Quebec, which, in many respects, would be a harbour free from the blemishes of the harbour of Montreal. Without any disparagement of the harbour of Montreal, I may say that wheat brought to Quebec would avoid the dangers of navigation between Montreal and Quebec. Whether or not the thing can be done is more than I can say at present. This is more perhaps in the nature of an experiment, but at all events, the promoters of the road and the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec have so much confidence in the scheme that they think they can safely undertake the building of an elevator.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I wish to explain the difference between the new and the old elevator. Though I have not been little in the city of Quebec lately, I know pretty well the locality, and I know that the proposed elevator will be built on ground rented by the Harbour Commissioners near the customs-house. I know enough about the situation of the old elevator to remember that it is completely out of reach of the water, except on one side, and there it is a considerable distance from it, whereas the wharf upon which the proposed elevator is to be built is situated in such a way that the elevator will be available from three sides, so that three ships may be loaded at once from it.

Mr. FOSTER. I am afraid that the hon. gentleman has not added very much to the cogency of the reasons for building a second elevator. Let us say that a gentleman has a house, for which he has paid. He would like to have another additional room or two, but I think he will keep to his own house and use it, rather than beg or borrow from his neighbours the money to build a new one, until he is in a position to know whether he can well afford the new one or not. That is a parallel to this case. If there is an elevator at the port of Quebec, it is because the Dominion paid public money to erect it. The Canadian Pacific Railway may have built it, but they got a quid pro quo in the shape of a subsidy arrangement, one of the conditions of which was the building of an elevator in Quebec harbour. That elevator was built, and I do not imagine that business men would put up an elevator where it could not be fairly well used, nor do I imagine that it is an elevator that cannot be used, because it is not of old construction, and certainly is not worn out by use. So that we have an elevator in that harbour on the Louise docks, where railway tracks are laid, and can get to it. The Canadian Pacific Railway is not using it to-day, and my hon. friend says that the Canadian Pacific Railway have never carried grain east of Lake Superior. I do not think that he is correct in that.

Mr. SPROULE. He is entirely astray in that; they bring grain to Owen Sound and Toronto.

Mr. FOSTER. It is sufficient for the argument, if they have not brought wheat to Quebec, although if they can take wheat through to St. John, I do not see why they cannot take it to Quebec and ship it from there. So that we have an elevator built in Quebec in a position where it can be used. Now comes another railway company, which says: We would like to ship grain, but it is an experiment, and we have no elevator. We are a large corporation, with an immense future and large means, and are building this Great Northern Railway, with its connections, and we will go to a body like the Quebec Harbour Commissioners, loaded down with debt—so much in debt that they cannot even pay a moiety of the interest upon it—and we will say to them: Guarantee our bonds, or we will not put up an elevator there for the use of our own road. The Harbour Commissioners are not in a position to guarantee the bonds, but the Government come to their rescue. They owe this Government $5,000,000, upon which they ought to pay interest, but upon which they never have paid any interest, their excuse being that they have not a sufficient surplus revenue, after meeting expenses, to pay it.

Sir HENRI JOLY DE LOTBINIERE.

But they say to this Government: If you will forego your lien upon us, we will divert our portion of surplus revenue, if necessary—and we must take for granted that it will be necessary, because that is the reason for this legislation—to pay the interest on the bonds necessary to construct this elevator, and give this guarantee as our contribution to the cost. In so far as they take any surplus revenue which ought to come to us on account of their interest, to that extent we remit them their debt. Therefore, in the end, it simply means that it is really the public treasury of Canada which is enabling the Quebec Harbour Commissioners to guarantee those bonds. Three questions are thus brought up. Why in the world is a second elevator necessary, when there is one elevator there already which can be used, and is not used. You say it does not belong to the Great Northern. But that property is lying there idle, and the Canadian Pacific Railway—by the way, who owns that elevator the Canadian Pacific Railway or the Harbour Commissioners.

The PRIME MINISTER. The Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. FOSTER. The Canadian Pacific Railway is not averse to having its property used in such a way as to get a reasonable compensation for it, if they cannot use it themselves. That would turn something into their treasury, and of course they are ready for a business arrangement of that kind. So, by merely leasing an elevator which is already there, the Great Northern could go on with its shipments through the experimental stage until it had demonstrated its capacity for carrying and handling grain, and it could carry on the business in that way until it was demonstrated that that elevator was not sufficient to accommodate its trade, when it could quickly put up another. Now, why should this country go into helping to build a second elevator where there is one already that is not used? Why should the Government bonus railway companies in this way. The Canadian Pacific Railway is building its own elevators. Go to the city of St. John, and on the west side of the harbour, you will see large elevators. Built by whom? Built by the Canadian Pacific Railway and the city of St. John—

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. And the provincial government—

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, and the provincial government, each of which paid out of its own funds—the city of St. John to an extent which it could not well afford, acting out of public spirit with the desire of extending its trade by improving its transport facilities. But in the city of Quebec, the railway is not going to build the elevator, the provincial government give nothing, the corporation of Quebec gives not a stiver; but they come to the poor, debt-laden Harbour Commissioners, and prevail upon them to prevail upon the Dominion Government to actually give away its first lien for the money which is due to it, in order that they may subsidize a new elevator. I really do not see the business necessity for it in the first place, nor do I see the principle on which the Government is going in subsidizing elevators on railways which are not owned by the Government; nor do I see that it is good business for the Government to put this debt ahead of our own lien. When we were in power, how we were twitted with this immense amount of money that we had dropped into the harbour of Quebec, for which, it was said, we would never get an adequate return; and we were happy enough when we were able to state that the increase of this capital debt had ceased; there it is, whatever it is; we will get back our money when we can, but, at any rate, the debt has ceased to grow. But now it is going on year after year, and first one sum and then another is being put ahead of the lien upon what is the only security we have for ever getting back a part of our interest. Then, again, does not my right hon. friend think that the railway is sufficient to carry on this venture of itself? Here is a Government that, on the one hand, through its Minister of Public Works, is scooping out the bottom of the River St. Lawrence so that it may be possible for any vessel that traverses the Atlantic to come to the city of Montreal to the central port of the country, and on the other hand, the same Government is adding to the already great sums of money it has put into the harbour of Quebec and doing it in order to help a great railway to put an elevator there. I think this is going very, very far.

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not dispute at all the statements and the arguments made by my hon. friend (Mr. Foster), if his arguments were founded on facts.

Mr. FOSTER. Take the first point.

The PRIME MINISTER. Very well. The first point is whether a second elevator should be built or not.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes.

The PRIME MINISTER. That is a question as to which there may be a great deal to be said from the point of view of my hon. friend. He says: There is an elevator there which has never been used, so why should another be constructed? I do not say but that, at first blush, there is a great deal to be said in favour of that view. When an elevator has been there for ten or twelve years, and not a bushel of grain has passed through it, it may well be asked: Why put up a second elevator alongside of it? The answer is that people will not build elevators, will not undertake the expense or face the troubles of building, unless there is an object in it. Here are business men who say that they wish to put up an elevator. Mr. Garneau, the president of the railway, is an able man; Mr. Scott is also an able man. They have proved their competence in more than one way, and they have their railway, in which they have taken a great interest, which they are bringing this year to the harbour of Quebec, and which they intend to equip with an elevator. They consider that an elevator should be built. If the elevator is built, their judgment will be proven to be right or it will prove to be wrong. But, when my hon. friend does not think that a new elevator is necessary, I put the business judgment of these business men against his. They must have some good reasons for the conclusion to which they have come. I agree with my hon. friend, however, that the arguments I now offer would not be satisfactory or conclusive if we were asking the Government of Canada to contribute a single penny for the construction of the work. In that case, it would be my duty to make it clear, abundantly clear, to my hon. friend and to the members on the other side of the House that a second elevator was absolutely necessary. But I must repeat that the Government of Canada is not asked to contribute a single dollar to the work. The hon. gentleman referred to the fact that the Government to which he belonged was often twitted with the creation of that debt, but the time came when they were able to say that the debt had ceased to grow. So it has, and this charge will not increase the debt due to the Government by a single penny.

Mr. FOSTER. But it lessens the chances of repayment.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend must be reasonable in this matter. If, instead of having a debt of about $5,000,000, we had a debt of $100,000 or $200,000, there might be something in his argument. But we have a debt of $5,000,000 in relation to a property the gross revenues of which are about $74,000, and this amount has been absorbed in charges of administration and other incidental expenses, and not a cent has gone towards the payment of interest, and not a cent can go towards the payment of interest—

Mr. FOSTER. What are the expenses?

The PRIME MINISTER. The expenses are about the same amount—$74,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Where are they going to get the money to pay this interest?

The PRIME MINISTER. Out of the increased trade through this and other new works. Last year a Bill was passed to authorize the commissioners to issue bonds to the amount of $350,000. This amount has not been completely expended yet.

Mr. WALLACE. What was that for?

The PRIME MINISTER. To improve the harbour by building wharfs giving increased accommodation and so on. We are increasing the value of our security, and today it is worth more than it was. The trade is increasing; and this season will show a much increased trade in the harbour of Quebec, and increased revenue as well. The other day the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) made the assertion that we were contributing to this work out of the treasury. He seemed to be under the impression that the Crown would be liable, whereas such is not the case. The Crown undertakes no liability whatever. The only thing the Crown does is to give a preference over its own debt to be created by the Harbour Commissioners, but if there is a default upon these new bonds, the creditor who purchased them will have to look to the commissioners and not to the Crown. There is absolutely no liability whatever on the part of the Government to come to the rescue of the Harbour Commissioners. The money being expended on the harbour and a new liability being given to that harbour, then, as a consequence, our assets will become more valuable. As I said the other day, I do not expect that the Harbour Commissioners will ever be able to repay the whole $5,000,000 which they owe to the Government; but I certainly expect that with the revival of business, which is already taking place in the harbour of Quebec, the commissioners will be able to make new arrangements with the Government in order to repay, if not the whole, at all events, a part of the liability which the Government has upon this wharf. But in order to do that we must permit the Harbour Commissioners to equip their harbour. Now, I want to say this to my hon. friend: Here is the harbour of Quebec loaded with a debt of $5,000,000. In order to improve their harbour they must have new powers of borrowing. At present they are so loaded with debt that unless the Government give them power to borrow money with which to equip their harbour, they can do nothing. The condition of things is such that the Government is forced, not to advance any money, I do not call that a loan, but to give them permission to borrow money so as to make their assets more valuable. But you may say: If you permit the Harbour Commissioners to issue new bonds, you put so much greater obstacle in the way of collecting your debt. That is only a superficial view of it. The true way of looking at it is to consider that if you permit the Harbour Commissioners to create a new liability and to issue new bonds the proceeds of which must be expended upon the harbour, you are simply enabling them to meet the demands of the trade, and at the same time to obtain more revenue than they have at present. That is the reason why it seems to me this demand is perfectly reasonable and just, and in my opinion in this demand there is absolutely nothing at all which will bind the Crown to a cent of money.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

Mr. HAGGART. The hon. gentleman is perfectly correct when he says that the railway company have a right to build the elevator as a commercial enterprise. But the right hon. gentleman forgets the whole position in reference to the matter. The corporation that builds this elevator on the Princess Louise docks, issues bonds. After these bonds are guaranteed by the Harbour Commissioners to the full extent of the cost of the elevator, the right hon. gentleman says that the Government has nothing to do with it. He forgets the provisions of the Act for the purpose of defining the powers and limitations of the Harbour Commissioners. If he will turn to the Act for the relief of the corporation and for the improvement of the harbour of Quebec, he will find that clause 34 reads:

For the relief of the corporation and for the improvement of the harbour of Quebec, the Governor in Council may raise, under the provisions of the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act, the sum of $362,197.58, being the amount, un borrowed and negotiable, of the loans authorized for that purpose by the several Acts.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). That is no new power, it is only recognizing existing power.

Mr. HAGGART. I ask, when the Governor in Council raises a sum of money, is it raised on the credit of the Dominion?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). Not for the elevator.

Mr. HAGGART (reading):

The sum so raised shall be advanced from time to time to the corporation to meet payments on account of improvements in the harbour of Quebec, if such improvements have been previously sanctioned by the Governor in Council.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is the Consolidation Act of the present session.

Mr. HAGGART. No, it is a new Act respecting the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec. Section 3 says:

All amounts payable by the corporation under the guarantee provided for by the said agreement shall be a charge upon the revenue of the corporation and shall have the same priority of payment as the interest on the debentures or bonds which the corporation is authorized hereafter to issue under the Act.

My interpretation of this clause is that with the consent of the Governor in Council the Government of Canada may raise the sum of $362,197, which may be applied directly towards the building of this elevator.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The section which the hon. gentleman is quoting is only a consolidation of existing laws, it is not conferring new powers, it enables this money to be raised simply for the special purposes mentioned.

Now, building this elevator is not by this Act mentioned.

Mr. HAGGART. Not at all. It is not limited by the purposes of the Act mentioned. Clause 2 says :

Sums so raised shall be advanced from time to time to the corporation to meet payments on account of improvements in the harbour of Quebec, if such improvements have been previously sanctioned by the Governor in Council on the joint report of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the Minister of Public Works, and shall be applied to no other purpose whatever.

There are no limitations under any preceding Act, this is a fresh power of loan given to them.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, no.

Mr. HAGGART. Is that clause in the other Act ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This is a consolidation of existing statutes.

The PRIME MINISTER. It is well known in Quebec that of the old loans which went to the construction of the Quebec harbour docks, there is still the sum of $375,000 due, which could be applied. But the past Government would not apply it.

Mr. FOSTER. It came to the point when the Government of the past said : We have given all that we can give, and that account is closed. But the hon. gentleman has opened it again.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. By referring to the end of the section he will see the citations from the existing Acts of which these sections are but parts.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The House was informed by the Solicitor General, who had charge of the Act, that these were mere transcripts of existing sections and consolidations of the existing laws, without importing anything new whatever.

Mr. FOSTER. But you have power by Order in Council to authorize them to issue the whole of that.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They did it for many years.

Mr. HAGGART. My argument is this, that the guarantee given by the Quebec corporation to this railway company for the purpose of building these elevators, guaranteed payment for a certain number of years, and that is made a charge upon all the sums of money owned and possessed in their order by the Quebec Commissioners.

The PRIME MINISTER. Allow me to read section 34 of that Act :

For the relief of the corporation and for the improvement of the harbour of Quebec, the Governor in Council may raise, under the provisions of the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act, the sum of $362,197.58, being the amount, unborrowed and negotiable, of the loans authorized for that purpose by the several Acts, 36 Vic., 43 Vic., 45 Vic., 47 Vic.

And so on. The sum so raised, as my hon. friend knows, is for the purpose of building a graving dock and other works that are named. But that sum of money cannot be applied to any purposes other than those which are mentioned in these Acts.

Mr. HAGGART. My right hon. friend and I differ entirely on that ground.

Mr. FOSTER. Read subsection 2 of section 34.

The PRIME MINISTER. It is just a reproduction of the old Act :

If such improvements have been previously sanctioned by the Governor in Council, on the joint report of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the Minister of Public Works.

These are the improvements referred to by 36 Victoria, 43 Victoria, 45 Victoria, 47 Victoria, and so on. So the hon. Minister of Public Works and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries have the authority to authorize these works only in so far as they come within the objects contemplated by these Acts, and they cannot do anything else.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In any case they have no application as to the meaning of this clause at all. This is the old law as it has been on the statute-book for a long time. It is simply a consolidation of powers previously granted as they have been on the statute-book, and it has no bearing on this clause at all.

Mr. FOSTER. Section 34 of the Act which authorizes $362,197 to be expended was passed at the present session.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have no shadow of an intention of applying that to the elevator.

Mr. FOSTER. But then you have the power.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, the legal advice we have is that we have not.

Mr. FOSTER. Whose advice ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies) has gone over it very carefully.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. All these statutes describe the character of the improvements to be made, and the elevator does not come within them.

Mr. FOSTER. This subsection 2 says authoritatively that the sum so raised, $362,000, shall be advanced from time to time to the corporation to meet payments. What for ? On account of improvements in the harbour of Quebec.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is the improvements referred to in the preceding section.

Mr. FOSTER. Not the improvements mentioned in that section, but only improvements in the harbour of Quebec. On what condition :

If such improvements have been previously sanctioned by the Governor in Council, on the joint report of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the Minister of Public Works, and shall be applied to no other purpose whatever.

Therefore, if the elevator is considered an improvement in the harbour of Quebec it would come under that clause.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend is wrong. The Minister of Public Works and Minister of Marine and Fisheries have now power to authorize a loan to the amount of $362,000 except for the purposes of the works mentioned in the several statutes here. I will call the hon. gentleman's attention to a fact that he knows himself. Last year the Harbour Commissioners wanted to expend $350,000 on their harbour. We did not authorize them to borrow that money from us. We authorized them to borrow it from the public. We did not contribute a cent.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, that is right ; but you gave a lien.

The PRIME MINISTER. We did not claim that we had power to expend one cent out of the public treasury except for the purposes mentioned in these several Acts, the building of the graving dock and some other works. That is the construction that we have put upon the clause, and we intend to act upon it.

Mr. SPROULE. I did not take the objection to the Bill that the Government had power, according to that Act, to build an elevator, but the objection that I took to this Bill was that every dollar of the money paid as interest on this elevator lien is a dollar which is not paid for that purpose would be paid on the loan that has already been made to the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec and which would otherwise be paid into the public treasury. Another objection I have is that I regard it as unfair to other cities and towns in Canada which have built elevators at their own expense. If these towns want an elevator they arrange with the railway company or the steamship company and provide the funds. The elevator at Owen Sound was built by the corporation jointly with the Canadian Pacific Railway. The town voted a bonus for it, and the Canadian Pacific Railway, in consideration of the bonus, raised the balance of the money required for the elevator. When they wanted a second elevator at Owen Sound the Canadian Pacific Railway applied to the town, the town gave a bonus, and the company went on and raised the rest of the money and built the elevator. No other portion of Canada was called upon to pay a dollar for that building. In the case of the city of Quebec this policy is reversed. The city of Quebec does not pay a dollar. What was done at Owen Sound was also done at Midland, and now an elevator is likely to be erected at Collingwood in the same way. The city of Quebec is relieved of this expenditure and other towns and cities are obliged to tax themselves in order to raise money for the same purpose. In reality the money comes indirectly out of the Dominion of Canada. The statement is made that the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec will not pay out any money belonging to the Dominion of Canada. Why do the Harbour Commissioners guarantee the interest ? It is because they are regarded as better security than any other security that could be put forward. They are regarded as better security because of the large powers conferred upon them by the Dominion of Canada. They have it in their power to retain the money due to the Dominion of Canada, which should be paid in liquidation of their indebtedness, and to apply it on the lien for building this elevator. In this respect I think this proposal is unfair to other towns and cities in Canada. It is unfair that the Quebec Harbour Commissioners should take the money that should be paid to the Dominion of Canada in interest on their indebtedness to the Dominion and expend it for paying the interest on the cost of building an elevator, and which would otherwise go towards paying the interest on the money which they owe to the Dominion of Canada.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman is repeating the argument that he advanced the other night and which was then answered. He is not judging the case fairly when he says that concessions are being made in the case of Quebec which were denied in the case of Collingwood and other harbours on the great lakes. The hon. gentleman knows that Parliament years ago guaranteed payments, or advanced moneys to the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec for improvements in the harbour of Quebec, and that these loans amount to over $3,000,000, which with interest brings the debt up to $5,000,000. It is there as an incubus upon them now. Their guarantee would be of no use to any third person as long as the Dominion of Canada held that debt, and was entitled to receive interest first.

Mr. SPROULE. Does the hon. gentleman regard the interest at all as a debt to Canada ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have already stated that they owe to the Dominion some $3,000,000 as principal and a sum of money as interest, which would bring the total up to nearly $5,000,000. They cannot do anything to improve their harbour unless with the consent of the Government of Canada, and if you choose to lie back, you can insure for the future that that debt will be as dead as it has been in the past. You have had no interest in the past, and you have no hope of getting any in the future if existing conditions continue. You can play the dog-in-the-manger if you like. You may say to them: "We will not let you take advantage of the growing time or of the improvement of trade, but we will hold you to your bargain." What good would that do? Would you get any more money this year or next year than you have got for the last fifteen years? The hon. gentleman knows that under existing conditions that debt is dead, and that the interest will never be paid; and it is on that ground and that ground only that this is justifiable. If, by permitting the commission to make this guarantee and allowing it to take precedence of our debt, we enable the trade of the harbour to be largely increased, we put ourselves in the position of possibly getting back some of our interest, whereas if we adopt the suggestion of my hon. friend there is no hope of getting any back at all.

Mr. SPROULE. Allow me to put another phase of the question to the hon. gentleman. He says we have no hope of getting our interest under present conditions. We may not; but suppose we refuse this request. It may happen, as it does in other cities and towns, that the railway company wants to carry on trade there and wants the means of doing it. It may have a consultation with the city, and the city may be induced, as Owen Sound and other towns have done, to grant a bonus to the railway company to assist it to build an elevator if this takes place. Will the trade of the harbour not be improved and thereby increase our chances of getting our money? If the railway company and the city conjointly provide the conveniences themselves, the trade of the harbour will be built up just as much as it would be if we provided those conveniences; and in that event, if the trade of the place warrants the payment of this money to the Dominion, the Dominion will get it. Instead of being paid out as interest on the indebtedness for the building of the elevator, it will go to reduce to some extent the debt which Canada holds against the Harbour Commissioners.

Mr. HAGGART. As I understand, the position is this. Last session or the session before, we placed $350,000 prior to our debt against the Quebec Harbour Commissioners, and now we are placing this new guarantee of $200,000 in precisely the same position.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Next afterwards.

Mr. HAGGART. At any rate, both of them have priority to our claim. Here is another point. You enter into a kind of lottery with the steamship companies. You say that the first steamship company which comes in to load grain at the elevator shall be entitled to exemption from harbour dues for five years as against all other steamship companies. That is extremely objectionable, and that clause ought to be altered.

The PRIME MINISTER. I would be glad to hear the views of my hon. friend on that point.

Mr. HAGGART. What I object to is giving to any company an exceptional advantage. You say that the company that first loads at the elevator shall be exempt for five years, while every other company shall have to pay harbour dues. That is an exceptional advantage in favour of one company which it ought not to have.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is not. It is granted to the company which will make Quebec its terminal point.

Mr. FOSTER. There will be a great race.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not think there will be much of a race.

Mr. FOSTER. Then, you should not build a second elevator.

Mr. WALLACE. To listen to the Minister of Marine, one would come to the conclusion that in the harbour of Quebec certain improvements have been started, but never completed, and that, therefore, in order to make that harbour effective for business, we should spend a large amount of money to complete the works already started.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman has misunderstood my argument.

Mr. WALLACE. The whole of the hon. gentleman's argument was in that line. He said that the debt is dead, unless we permit these improvements to be made, and that, by permitting the Harbour Commissioners to give this guarantee, we will secure the moneys we have already expended.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, I did not say "secure."

Mr. WALLACE. I took down what the hon. gentleman said. He said we had no hope of ever getting any money at all, unless this expenditure was made. But, as I understood, the harbour of Quebec had been already thoroughly equipped for business. The Harbour Commissioners had got money voted more than liberally by the Parliament of Canada to enable them to have their harbour equipped for all kinds of business. They even had an elevator erected for them, which, it now turns out, has never been used, after it has been a dozen of years in existence. Now we come to the extraordinary clause in the Quebec Harbour Consolidation Act that has been so much discussed to-day. That Act was considered closed, when the capital sum of $3,975,000 was voted the harbour of Quebec to thoroughly equip that harbour for its commercial business, and it was stated that no further sums would be required. But now we find that the account is reopened, and that the sum of $362,000—the right hon. First Minister shakes his head. Does he mean that the $362,000 is included in the $3,975,000

The PRIME MINISTER. My meaning is, that out of the sum originally authorized by the several statutes, there still remains the sum of $360,000, which has not been advanced by the Government to the Harbour Commissioners, as these statutes empowered the Government to do. But there is nothing in that. The account was closed several years ago, and it is not intended to reopen it. So little is that our intention, that last year, when the Quebec Harbour Commission wanted money to build improvements, we refused to advance it, but told them to go into the money market and borrow it.

Mr. WALLACE. The right hon. gentleman has not answered my question. I asked whether this $362,000 is included in that amount of $3,975,000 advanced to the Harbour Commissioners by the Government of Canada.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Three million nine hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars was the sum authorized to be advanced, but not the sum expended. The sum actually advanced was—and I wish to correct an error I made last night—$3,748,519.62.

Mr. WALLACE. Why was not all this money expended on those improvements? Presumably, because they had been completed, and there was no work urgently required that would justify further expenditure. We supposed that the account had been closed, but we are now confronted with $362,000, and the further expenditure last year of $350,000. Is that correct

The PRIME MINISTER. Not at all.

Mr. WALLACE. A loan of $350,000 was authorized to be made by the Harbour Commissioners, which was to have a priority on our claim, and we have now $362,000 proposed to be expended.

The PRIME MINISTER. No.

Mr. WALLACE. The Act reads :

For the relief of the corporation of the Quebec Harbour Commissioners, the Governor in Council may raise, under the provisions of the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act, a sum of $362,927.

It is not proposed to expend all that?

The PRIME MINISTER. No.

Mr. WALLACE.

Mr. WALLACE. Then, what is the necessity of putting in the second clause, providing that the sum so raised shall be advanced from time to time to the said corporation?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is the old statute, and this is simply a consolidation.

Mr. FOSTER. That is for a rainy day.

Mr. WALLACE. Then, we come down to the next order of business. They owe us in principal $4,000,000, and with the interest added, $5,200,000. The loan of last year, $350,000, comes in ahead of ours, and we are asked to-day to let another loan come in ahead of us, so that we will have a second mortgage, instead of a first.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The money will be spent to improve the property.

Mr. WALLACE. Yes, and we will have the second mortgage. Some money was expended in the same way by the Canadian Pacific Railway to improve the property of the Canadian Pacific Railway right in the same locality, and it has not improved it to the extent of a dollar. I hope there will be some success in the present instance. I would be delighted to see the city of Quebec, of which I have very kindly recollections, go on and prosper. I would be delighted, personally, to see that city resume that prosperity which it once enjoyed in commercial matters, and increase it beyond what it enjoyed in any former period of its existence; but there is the matter of business to consider. We are asked to permit the Harbour Commissioners to give a bonus to a railway company to construct an elevator, and do that at the charge of the people of Canada. When you have a mortgage on a place, and you permit somebody else to take precedence of that mortgage and give it a second place, you thereby create a charge on your property. As the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) has told us, other towns recognize that the construction of elevators is a local work, which railway companies, or the city interested, or private individuals should undertake; but we are, in this instance, giving this railway company an advantage at our expense. This company is really a portion of the line of the Canada Atlantic, according to the statement of the right hon. First Minister, which runs from Parry Sound to Ottawa, and on to South Indian, and starts from South Indian. It comes from Parry Sound to the city of Ottawa; thence to South Indian, on the Canada Atlantic Railway; there crosses the Ottawa River, and strikes a bee-line to city of Quebec. It may be, and probably is, a good commercial enterprise. It looks like a feasible undertaking. We are bonusing that railway, every mile of it, to Quebec—I think that is correct. We are contributing the subsidy for the bridge across the Ottawa, and then we assist that road to construct an elevator—

Mr. FOSTER. When there is one there already—

Mr. WALLACE. When there is one there that can be easily used.

Mr. TAYLOR. And no business for it to do.

Mr. WALLACE. There may be business for it, and we hope that the road will carry enormous quantities of grain to Quebec. But it looks like throwing away our security, our resources; it looks like throwing away money to provide another elevator, when an elevator is there and completely equipped, though perhaps not at the very point they would select, but in a convenient place, as I know. See how it is on Georgian Bay. In the town of Midland the Grand Trunk Railway Company and the town together have built an elevator. The Government of Canada has not contributed a dollar. In the town of Owen Sound the corporation and the railway companies have joined together and built elevators there. Private enterprise in other places along the lakes has erected elevators—in every place where they are competing for this great business, the people are providing elevators at their own expense. But in Quebec, where there is already an elevator that is not used, we are asked to burden the resources of the people of Canada to provide another elevator for a railway company. For my part, I think that expenditure is totally unjustifiable.

Mr. FOSTER. Of course, we cannot fight it all day at this period of the session. It is most important, and, I believe, an abuse of legislation. But the session is near its close, and all we can do is to make our protest, and that we do.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If that protest goes on record, I beg to have it understood that the hon. gentlemen who have treated this as a grant to this railway, or to the city of Quebec, are wholly mistaken in their view. If this is to be decided on the question, whether this is a contribution from the Dominion treasury or not, I assert, and it is as clear as noonday, that we do not give one penny out of the Dominion treasury to the construction of this elevator. The Harbour Commissioners of Quebec are in our debt for a large sum. That has been described as a dead debt. It has not paid a penny of interest for nine years. The receipts of the concern are virtually all eaten up in the management. I gave an illustration of this transaction the other day, which I may repeat here, that of a bottomry bond on a ship. Often a man who has a claim upon a ship, must allow a bottomry bond to take priority of his claim, because the proceeds of the loan are going to improve the property, and may save his own money. In the same way, the money spent in this case goes to the improvement of the property, and may make our security of more value. As we have not received a penny of interest in nine years, and have no prospect of receiving interest at any early day in the future, in what way do we take money from the Dominion treasury, or in what way do we burden the people by allowing arrangements under which money will be spent which may improve the property?

Mr. FOSTER. And when you have subsidized a railway which is stretching out from one end of the country to the other, and when you are giving it in some places double subsidy, what sense is there, when you come to the city of Quebec, introducing, by a transaction through the Harbour Commissioners, the vicious principle of subsidizing elevators for railway companies, when right in that very harbour, usable, capacious, is an elevator for which this Government has paid? You are going to get a lot into the treasury, are not you? In the first place, you give them authority to issue bonds for $200,000, the interest on which is guaranteed by the Quebec Harbour Commissioners. The Harbour Commissioners get no revenue from that; they get not a cent—

An hon. MEMBER. Yes, they do.

Mr. FOSTER. Wait a minute; I know what I am talking about. They get not a cent of that, beyond the repayment of the 3 per cent they guarantee upon the bonds. And, if the proceeds to the railway go above 6 per cent, not a dollar of that surplus comes to the Harbour Commissioners, but it is deposited in a reserve fund against the day when the elevator may not be able to pay 6 per cent. And so, the Harbour Commissioners get no revenue at all from the elevator. What next? You say to the great railway company which gets this elevator built for it through the postponement of the debt due to this Government: We will do better for you; we will allow the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec to open up a great lottery game for your benefit. The first steamship company sending a vessel that comes and loads at this elevator, shall have free entry into your harbour for five years. With such a bonus, the railway company can make most advantageous traffic terms with an ocean steamship company. They can go to the ocean steamship company and say: Here is a snap for you; send the first ship to load at this elevator, and you will have free access to the harbour of Quebec for five years without any dues, and so you can carry cheaper. And thus the Government afford the means of making advantageous arrangements with one steamship company. But what more do you do? You lead every other steamship company to say: The Quebec Harbour Commissioners admit free one of our rivals, but they will not allow us to come in without dues; so, we will not go to Quebec harbour, but we will go to Montreal. And so, you will drive trade and revenue from the harbour of Quebec, rather than bring it there.

Mr. EDWARDS. And, if we have a railway running across the continent, built at the expense of the people of Canada, and if to-day we have an elevator at Quebec which is doing no business, and which has never done business, and if we have a railway under construction which is going to do business at the city of Quebec, why hinder the possibility of doing business there?

Mr. TAYLOR. Why not do business with the elevator that is there?

Mr. EDWARDS. That elevator is the property of a railway company and is not available for the use of the railway that is now building. And if that elevator has never done any business, and if the railway company that owns it has never promoted business at the city of Quebec, why hinder other railways that wish to promote business at the city of Quebec? So far as the harbour of Montreal is concerned, it is the great harbour of Canada, and Montreal is the great commercial city of Canada, and there is not one man in this House who has a word to say against Montreal or its importance. But the harbour of Quebec is one of the great coming harbours of Canada. It is true that in the past it has lost its position as a great harbour, but the day is coming, and I hope it is not far distant, when Quebec will do a large portion of the shipping trade of Canada. Now, I want to know who it is to-day that pays all the harbour dues at Quebec, Halifax, Montreal and other cities. It is not the people using those harbours, but it is the people of Canada, and no harm is done to the people of Canada by giving this privilege to the Harbour Commissioners. If the Government of Canada has an asset that is paying no revenue and if it is possible to make that asset pay interest, the Government is bound to do so. But are the commissioners going to be able to pay interest while the harbour remains in its present condition? Evidently not. The only way to make it possible for the Harbour Commissioners to pay interest is to develop and improve the harbour. I think the opposition to this proposition is the most unjustifiable opposition I ever heard; it is ridiculous. If you have an asset which is valueless and if you can improve the value of that asset, why should you not do so? I say: give the harbour of Quebec a chance. In my opinion the time is coming when larger vessels will be engaged in the Atlantic trade than those now so engaged, and it is in the interest of the producers of grain in Canada to encourage the largest ships to come to our seaports to carry away our produce. Montreal must always remain a great harbour, but it is impossible that these very large vessels can come to the city of Montreal, so the harbour of Quebec must be put in a condition to receive them. By doing this for the harbour of Quebec, you are legislating in the interest of the producers of Canada.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

HARBOUR COMMISSIONERS OF MONTREAL.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved the second reading of Bill (No. 179) respecting the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time, and the House resolved itself into committee on the Bill.

(In the Committee.)

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I explained this matter at a former stage. By the Act of last session the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal are authorized to pay out of their funds certain sums for public improvements therein set forth, and it was provided that the sum of $750,000 of the moneys therein referred to should be set apart for improvements in the eastern portion of the harbour, described in the Bill as below St. Mary's current, those improvements including a dry dock. It is proposed this session that the Government shall by a direct vote in the Public Works Department undertake the construction of improvements at the lower section of the harbour below St. Mary's current to the extent of $500,000; therefore, the proposal that the Harbour Commissioners should do the work at that point to the extent of that $500,000 is unnecessary, and the purpose of this Bill is to release $500,000, the sum so set apart of the Harbour Commissioners' funds for improvements below St. Mary's current, and to allow that $500,000 to be applied by the Harbour Commissioners to other works at the upper part of the harbour, at what is called Windmill Basin. That is the whole purpose of the Bill. In the supplementary Estimates, which we have yet to consider, there is an appropriation of $500,000 for improvements in the lower part of the harbour. This $500,000 which has been set apart out of the Harbour Commissioners' moneys will no longer be required for that purpose, and the object of the Bill is to permit the Harbour Commissioners to apply that money to works which they have contemplated at the western portion of the harbour.

Mr. FOSTER. At the western portion of the harbour?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. At what is known as Windmill Point Basin.

The Harbour Commissioners will control this sum of $500,000, which is now released from the work at the lower portion of the harbour and which they are free to apply to the work at the Windmill Point Basin. That money will be expended under the control of the Harbour Commissioners, subject to the general provisions of the law in reference to the harbour of Montreal. The purpose that it is to be applied to is the construction of a pier at the Windmill Point Basin.

Mr. FOSTER. What about the dry dock below that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is not proposed that anything shall be done at present in reference to the construction of the dry dock. There is, in the existing Act, a provision made for an expenditure of $750,000 for improvements, including a dry dock, in that portion of the harbour below St. Mary's Current. We strike out that $750,000 and substitute $250,000, the effect of which is that $250,000 is reserved for any improvements which may be deemed necessary by the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal, including the dry dock, although $250,000 would not be sufficient for a dry dock, and the $500,000 is applied to the western portion of the harbour. It is to be applied by the Harbour Commissioners for the construction of a pier at a point known as the Windmill Point Basin.

Mr. HAGGART. Then, this is a compromise between the Harbour Commissioners and the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte). The money can be applied to the construction of two distinct docks in Montreal harbour, one to be constructed by the commissioners at the Windmill Point Basin and the other at the eastern end of the harbour, as proposed by the hon. Minister of Public Works.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The Harbour Commissioners want both of them.

Mr. HAGGART. I think they wanted the Windmill dock. My own opinion is greatly in favour of the proposal of the hon. Minister of Public Works. There will be a good deal of useless expenditure in making a dock at the Windmill Point Basin. My own opinion is that, if you want to make Montreal a first-class harbour, the location of the docks below St. Mary's Current is preferable. I may be entirely mistaken, but that is my view.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend is not alone in that view.

Mr. HAGGART. Perhaps not. We are going to have a first-class system of docks in Montreal after all. We are going to have two harbours, one at the Windmill Point Basin and one below St. Mary's Current. What does the hon. Minister of Finance intend to do with the $250,000 which remains at the disposal of the Harbour Commissioners, as only $500,000 is transferred?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will do nothing with it at present; it will simply remain in the hands of the Harbour Commissioners subject to the terms of the Act. Reference is made to a dry dock. That $250,000 would not build a suitable dry dock at Montreal, but it will remain as the nucleus of a fund to be used later. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) has asked for a sketch of these works, and I have a plan which shows what is proposed.

Mr. WALLACE. From the correspondence which we have seen in the newspapers and from the statements made by the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte), it appears to me that a large portion of this expenditure is quite unjustifiable, and that it is due to a freak of the hon. Minister of Public Works. I have been pretty familiar, for some years, with the harbour of Montreal in a general way. My opinion is that it is not necessary or desirable, that, at the present time, a wharf should be built in the lower part, because the trade of the port is not there. The trade of the port can be managed for many years to come in the harbour proper, which is higher up the river; and if arrangements are made, all the facilities that are presently required should be concentrated where the business is done. You may take the great wharfs and piers down the river, where it is proposed to spend a large part of this money; but the business is not there and will not go there. So that the expenditure is not justifiable. The Harbour Commissioners themselves are the best judges of the requirements of the harbour. They are usually men of commercial experience who have the interests of the port of Montreal at heart, and they should have more control over these matters than they appear to have. It simply looks to me as if the Minister of Public Works, when he could not bulldoze the Harbour Commissioners to carry out every scheme of his, has undertaken to spend a large amount of our money unnecessarily in carrying out schemes that have not met with the approval and support of the Harbour Commissioners.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). I would not like to let the remarks of the hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace) pass without notice, because I can assure the hon. gentleman that he is entirely mistaken in the theory he has advanced. The Harbour Commissioners are quite at one with the Minister of Public Works in regard to the expenditure provided for in this Bill. In fact, the Harbour Commissioners themselves have asked that the harbour works should be completed at the Windmill Point Basin, and it is at their request, made to the Department of Public Works, that this Bill has been introduced. The hon.

gentleman contends that the harbour of Montreal at present is sufficient to accommodate all the traffic. That has been the theory on which we have gone in times past; and the result has been that because we did not take time by the forelock and have the necessary improvements carried out before the demands absolutely came upon us, the harbour of Montreal is not to-day equal to the demands of the trade of Canada, let alone that trade of the western states of which it is the natural outlet. When this work is completed, we shall be able to meet the demands which will be made in the near future in the port of Montreal, and handle the trade expeditiously and properly.

Bill reported.

Mr. FOSTER. I would ask that the Bill be not read the third time now, as I have a few questions to ask after having seen the plan of the proposed works.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES ACT.

House again in committee on Bill (No. 128) to amend the Weights and Measures Act.—(Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière).

On section 1,

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I have been informed by some of my friends that they have a few small amendments to introduce; but before taking up those amendments, I would ask the committee to consider the Bill. There is a blank for the date, which I would suggest be made the 1st of July, 1900. When this Bill was the last time before the committee, there was a great objection to the word "veneer," as describing the barrels, and I would ask that that word be struck out, because it is only applicable to cylindrical barrels, so that it is not necessary.

Mr. CLANCY. When this Bill was before the committee on a former occasion, it was pointed out that it would create a great deal of hardship if the provisions of this section were strictly followed, because it would be impossible for the farmers and others who supply a local trade to conform to its terms. I think it was suggested that section 18 should be made to read: "All apples packed in Canada for sale by the barrel for export." That would prevent the difficulty arising where farmers buy sugar barrels, flour barrels, &c., in which to bring apples to the local towns and villages for sale. The hon. Minister on that occasion promised to take this suggestion into consideration. The primary object of this Bill, I understand, is to make stringent provisions against apples being badly packed or packed in inferior packages for export. That, to my mind, is a very laudable object in which both sides will readily concur, but I desire again to point out that the provisions of the Bill go further and affect the local trade.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. That has always been the law.

Mr. CLANCY. I am quite aware of that, but that does not make it any less undesirable. We should amend the law and get rid of vexatious and useless clauses. I need no better reason than the fact that nobody has ever paid the slightest attention to it. If the hon. gentleman would restrict this to exports only, that would cover the whole case.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I must say that I feel great reluctance to changing a law which has been on our statutes so long, and which has been applied with moderation and not been made the means of persecuting the farmers. There will be time enough to make a change when it is found that it works oppressively.

Mr. MILLS. I would call the attention of the hon. Minister to the words "with a lining hoop within the chimes" since the Bill was, at my suggestion, laid over until hon. members had the opportunity of ascertaining the opinions of those interested, I have had many communications, and while all agree that to have a barrel of a uniform description throughout Canada would be a good thing, a great many are of the opinion that the words I have quoted are useless. They contend that if a barrel is properly made, there is no necessity for an inside lining hoop within the chimes at all, and insisting on this will create some inconvenience.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I hope my hon. friend will not insist upon these words being struck out. This Bill was prepared after we had received a number of petitions from the apple growers of New Brunswick and principally the apple growers of Annapolis valley, Nova Scotia. This clause was particularly insisted upon. I know that it is a trifle, but my hon. friend will admit that a barrel which is not perfect, as a barrel would be made to hold liquid, a hoop within the chimes is really a great strengthening and increases the safety of the contents. This is one of the things strongly recommended in the petition.

Mr. MILLS. By leaving in those words, we would be giving an inducement to have barrels poorly made, because all coopers agree that if a barrel is properly made there is no necessity for a hoop within the chimes. I simply make the suggestion, which I do not intend to follow up with a motion.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it to be inside the head or outside?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. Outside. It is put there for the purpose of strengthening and preventing the head coming off in case of shrinkage.

Mr. HENDERSON. Before the Bill is reported, I desire to move that an additional clause be inserted. The hon. member for St. Lawrence, Montreal (Mr. Penny) gave notice in the early part of the session of a Bill—in fact it passed its first reading—embodying the provision contained in this amendment, which I beg to propose in his absence :

1. The standard of measure for buying and selling strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, currants and other small fruits shall be a box or basket of the following dimensions, inside measurements :—

Top— $4\frac{1}{2}$  by  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches.

Bottom—4 by 4 inches.

Depth of sides— $2\frac{1}{4}$  inches.

2. Any person who sells or offers for sale such boxes or baskets of less size or capacity than those herein described shall be guilty of an offence, and liable, upon summary conviction, to a fine of not less than $2 and not more than $10.

3. This Act shall come into force on the first day of May, 1900.

I desire to give a word of explanation. Throughout the province of Ontario, for the past forty years, berry baskets have been made of the dimensions mentioned in the amendment, namely,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches square at the top, 4 inches square at the bottom, and  $2\frac{1}{4}$  inches in depth.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. Will it be the length of the inside ?

Mr. HENDERSON. The length of the inside.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. That will settle the question. If it has a slope, it will not be the same thing as a perpendicular.

Mr. HENDERSON. I may say that these dimensions were agreed upon by the hon. member for St. Lawrence, Montreal (Mr. Penny), who has taken an active interest in this matter, and a practical box-maker from Oakville, in the county of Halton. The measurement, as the hon. Minister will observe, is the length of side of the box— $2\frac{1}{4}$  inches, not the perpendicular depth. I think it is sufficiently explicit in the amendment. I was stating why this amendment is necessary. While this is the standard box that has been used for forty years in the province of Ontario for the shipment of small fruit to the city of Montreal, the hon. member for the St. Lawrence division found that there was another box in use by some dealers in Montreal, a box of the same measurement at the top and of the same depth of side, but only  $3\frac{1}{4}$  inches square at the bottom. The practice had grown up in Montreal of taking the fruit from the boxes as shipped from Ontario, and putting them into the small boxes used by certain dealers. In that way, about five boxes could be made out of three, giving a very large profit to the middleman, but causing a very serious loss to the consumer. I may say this box is known in Montreal as the "shark box."

And in the factory where it is made, in order to designate it properly it is known as the "Montreal fraud." The object of the Bill is to prevent this fraud and prevent the dealers of Montreal from using it instead of the larger one in which they received the berries. That was the object of the Bill of the hon. member for the St. Lawrence division, and he withdrew it with the understanding that he would have an opportunity of moving this amendment when the Bill to amend the Weights and Measures Act should come before the House. I am sure it is in the interest not only of the producer, but in the interest of the consumer of small fruits, that there should be a uniform size of box. The box which is suggested has been approved of by the growers of small fruits, and I know that, at any rate, in the county of Halton, which I have the honour to represent, it is approved by the basket-makers. It is also approved of by those in Montreal who have taken exception to the small box that has been imposed upon them for some years past. I have letters from box-makers who confirm what I say in reference to the size of these boxes, and also conveying to me the report that the fruit-growers are in hearty sympathy with it. I therefore move that the amendment which I have read be made part of the Bill as an additional clause.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I think if my hon. friend will look at the amendment, he will see that if the perpendicular depth is made clear—

Mr. HENDERSON. I think the amendment is well understood. The measurements were put on the box which I have here by a practical box-maker, and were agreed upon when he was present. And I think it would be better to leave it that way than to use any other language.

Mr. COWAN. Before this amendment is put, I would draw the committee's attention to one or two facts. I agree practically with all that has been said by the hon. member for Halton as to the object he wishes to attain. At the same time, if the amendment passes in the form in which it is, it will prove very serious to some manufacturers. It practically states that every berry-box manufactured in the Dominion of Canada shall have a top measurement of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches by  $4\frac{1}{2}$  inches and the bottom measurement of 4 by 4 inches. It seems to me that it would meet all the requirements of the case if the amendment should state the number of cubic inches which a berry-box should contain. That would allow each box-maker to use such form of box as he saw fit, so long as he made it of the same cubic capacity. I forwarded a copy of this amendment to a large box manufacturer in my constituency, and I received this answer :

We have been to considerable loss this year, not having sufficient stock to supply our customers. Owing to the reports of crop failure and the Government's Bill regulating the size, we were afraid to make up a large stock, expecting they would be useless for another season in case they were not sold this year. So we have been running very close, with the result stated. Our box, though not the dimensions you specify, would hold exactly the same amount, it being  $3\frac{1}{2}$  square at the bottom and 5 inches square at the top, and  $2\frac{1}{4}$  inches deep. Would it not do as well if you specify in your Act a box to contain a certain number of cubic inches, as, if we have to change our machines, some of which are entirely new and cost a great deal, it will be very expensive for us. Besides, fruit put up in a basket of these dimensions suits the trade better.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) GARDNER BROS. & CO.

The object of the hon. member for the St. Lawrence division, as stated by the hon. member for Halton, was to get rid of the box which he has characterized as the "Montreal shark box" or "Montreal fraud." Representing as I do a fruit-growing constituency, I can only say the capacity of the box provided in the amendment is satisfactory, both to the box manufacturers and the fruit-growers in my constituency. I have two box manufacturers in my riding, one manufacturing boxes of the exact size and the exact dimensions provided for in the amendment, and the other manufacturing a box of the same capacity, but not of the same dimensions. All the necessities of the case would be met by adopting the suggestion I have made, and at the same time we should avoid practically wiping out the capital that these men have invested in these machines. It would then be left to the manufacturers to cater to the trade, furnish them the box that they found to be the best in the interest of all.

Mr. TUCKER. I desire to say a word in confirmation of what has been said by my hon. friend from South Essex (Mr. Cowan). The square box would not carry fruit with safety. There are other forms which would carry fruit, even if roughly handled, a longer distance. I quite agree with the hon. member who has just spoken, and endorse the view that by having the internal measurement mentioned it would give the general public an opportunity of using their knowledge with respect to the particular description of fruit they wish to purchase.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I have no doubt that this amendment may be necessary in the interest of the fruit-growers. There is a danger, however, that in seeking to remedy an existing evil a new evil may be created. We have already had experience of that in passing hasty legislation. As I understand this amendment, it covers all small fruits, cultivated and wild, wild strawberries as well as domestic strawberries. There are sections of this country where there is a large trade done in wild berries.

Mr. SPROULE. They are bought and sold by the pound.

Mr. COWAN.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Yes, and by the bushel, by the barrel. I may be under a wrong impression, but I thought, in hearing the amendment read, that it provided for a special sized box for the sale of all such berries, and a penalty is imposed on those who sell otherwise. I will give an instance that came under my own knowledge. In the county that I have the honour to represent, there is no export of cultivated berries, but there is a large export of wild berries, to such an extent that in one season I ascertained that some $65,000 in cash were paid out to the poor people in that county for wild berries gathered by children and exported, equal almost to the value of the crop of that year. All this money was brought into the country and paid for these wild berries, the fruit of the labour of the children and people not otherwise employed who picked them. If you place any limitation upon that trade you destroy it, the margin is so small. They carry their berries in pails and baskets to the dealers, who ship them in barrels, although they are sold along the line by the pound. I have no objection to the amendment, so far as it provides a remedy where a remedy is required. But it might be well to state that it shall only affect cultivated berries and not wild berries. These remarks will, no doubt, apply to outlying districts in other provinces than New Brunswick.

Mr. HENDERSON. In reply to the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Mr. Costigan), I would say that this amendment in no way interferes with the selling of berries by the pound, by the pail or by the barrel. It is only when a small berry-box is used that the Bill applies; consequently, I see no reason for the suggestion made by my hon. friend, as I am quite satisfied the Bill will not at all interfere with that trade in the outlying districts or in any districts of country to which he refers. With reference to the suggestion made by the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan), I think were we to adopt two standards we would defeat the whole object of the Bill. The Bill is to prevent fraudulent practices. Now, a person going on the Montreal market to purchase berries can readily determine whether the box is of the specified size or not; but if you have two or three different sized boxes it is impossible for the purchaser to say whether he is getting his proper quantity or not. We can readily tell whether a box is of the proper measurement, but it would be difficult to determine whether it is of the capacity of the one we describe. I hope the committee will see the propriety of confining the standard to one specific sized box, and not only to one specific sized box, but to a box of specific dimensions such as can be readily determined by a person purchasing a box of berries. The fact that this box has been in use for the last forty years, as I am told, is, I think, a sufficient guarantee why it should be made a standard for the future.

Mr. FLINT. I think the committee ought to be very careful before adopting an amendment of this kind, because I am convinced there must be a number of hon. gentlemen on the committee who do not realize how this amendment would operate in practice. It was not in the Bill laid before the House by the Government, and possibly it did not come under the consideration of hon. members who could communicate with their constituents to ascertain their views upon the proposed measurements and the size of boxes to be a standard. In that portion of the province that I represent the shipments of blueberries have reached as high a figure as $30,000 or $40,000 in one season. I have not the slightest idea of the exact dimensions of the boxes in which these are shipped and handled. I know that there are a great number of boxes used. The berries are put into small round boxes, these are packed into large crates and shipped by steamer; and the same with other berries. As a legislator, I would not like to say to the people dealing in these small fruits that after they have been using any sized box for so long a time, in the manufacture of which a considerable amount of capital has been expended, if they use a box which does not tally with the dimensions given in the hon. gentleman's amendment, they shall be liable to a penalty. I would suggest that, as the hon. gentleman has presented this amendment and had it discussed, it be allowed to stand over until another year. The hon. gentleman must be aware that if the change is made it will affect a large number of people, many of them in humble circumstances, and will create an immense amount of discomfort, altogether out of proportion to the benefit likely to arise from the suggested change. Of course, the first clause really applies to the standard for buying and selling. I think you are opening up a question which will most seriously discommode an immense number of people, and I agree with the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Mr. Costigan), that it is inadvisable that legislation of this kind, dealing with matters with which many hon. members must be unfamiliar, should be passed this session. Let this matter stand over.

Mr. HENDERSON. A Bill was placed on the Notice paper at the beginning of the session, or nearly at the beginning of the session, with the same object in view, by the hon. member for St. Lawrence, Montreal (Mr. Penny). The Bill remained on the Order paper for some time, until it was withdrawn by the consent of the House, on the assurance that an opportunity would be given to bring up an amendment to this proposed measure. I received notice of the hon. member's amendment at that time, and I communicated it to my constituents. I have had letter after letter in reference to the matter; in fact, a deputation came here from my county in reference to the matter. The hon. member then had the same notice and the same opportunity of acquainting himself with it that I had. I think, in the interest of the people of Montreal, who have a great deal more interest in it than my constituents, because it is of more importance to the consumers than to the producers, we should adopt this amendment. It is not the producers who are troubled with the small boxes, but it is unfair to the people of Montreal and of other cities where these boxes are used. I am promoting this amendment more on behalf of the hon. member for the St. Lawrence division of Montreal, who is absent; and who requested me to bring the matter up if he should happen to be absent, and more in the interest of the consumer than in the interest of the producer. Boxes of this size have been used for the past forty years—and I am quite sure that no injury will come to any one by making this box the standard for buying and selling small fruits which are sold in boxes.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). My hon. friend (Mr. Henderson) makes it the standard of buying and selling small fruits, that they must be sold in boxes. If a man were to sell fruit by the quart, or by the pint, he would be liable to the penalty under this amendment. The Bill to which the hon. gentleman referred was different from this amendment.

Mr. HENDERSON. The amendment was drawn by the hon. member for St. Lawrence, Montreal.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That may be, but it is not in the terms of his Bill as originally introduced. If the amendment only applied to such fruits as were sold in small square boxes there might have been some reason in it, and if it could be drawn in such a way as to apply in such cases only, I would be disposed to support it, but to apply it to every transaction in these small fruits, I think, is going too far. It might work great hardships under many circumstances.

Mr. HAGGART. The hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) does not surely think that a person who sold a quart of berries would be liable to the penalty under this amendment?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This amendment would make them liable if he sold a quart of strawberries.

Mr. SPROULE. I would suggest that we might get over the difficulty by providing that nothing in this Act shall be construed to interfere with the right of selling by the pound, or by bulk, or in any larger quantities.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière). I think it would, perhaps, be better that this proposed amendment should be allowed to stand, so that, between this time and next session, we may see if some measure cannot be adopted that will meet all the requirements of the case; in view of the fact that such serious objections have been urged.

Mr. HENDERSON. I would like to say a word in reply to the hon. Minister of Agriculture. I have before me the Bill introduced by the hon. member for the St. Lawrence, Montreal, and it reads as follows:—

The standard of measure for buying and selling strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, currants and other small fruits shall be the quart, which shall contain, when even-full, 67 cubic inches.

The first line is identical with the amendment that he proposes. He has changed his proposition, and instead of making it a quart he applies it to the boxes which have been in use for forty years. I really think that the hon. Minister might allow the amendment to go through. A very slight alteration would meet his view, perhaps. If the words "when sold by the box," were inserted, I think, the hon. Minister would find a way out of the difficulty, and a lot of trouble that is going on every year would be avoided. This same measure was brought up last year and was laid over.

Mr. COWAN. Box manufacturers in my constituency manufacture boxes which are of the same capacity, but which are not of the same dimensions. What I would suggest to my hon. friend is, if he wants to press the amendment, he should use the words "of equal capacity."

Motion negatived.

Mr. HENDERSON. I beg to move the following amendment to the Bill now before the committee:—

That section 16 of said Act be amended by striking out the word "eighty" in the sixth line thereof, and inserting in lieu thereof "seventy."

The matter I refer to is the weight of a bushel of lime. Chapter 30 of the statutes of last year fixed the weights of a bushel of lime at eighty pounds. This weight is entirely erroneous. It was not fixed by this House, but the matter came up after the Bill had left this House, and it was in the Senate that the weight of a bushel of lime was fixed at eighty pounds. It was a mistake, because it is a well-known fact that a bushel of lime does not weigh eighty pounds. Seventy pounds is the proper weight of a bushel of lime. When the Bill came back from the Senate to this House, the error was not detected. The insertion of that clause has created a great deal of confusion amongst the people who are handling this article. About $650,000 worth of lime, is produced each year in the Dominion of Canada, and the custom has been to buy and sell that article by measure. But as the law provides that heaped measure is illegal, the dealers are forced to adopt some other system. As far as can be ascertained, 70 pounds to the bushel is the correct weight, and to force people to deliver 80 pounds on a contract is simply to force them to deliver a great deal more than they are entitled to deliver. I have looked into some authorities on this subject. I find in the library a book entitled "The Busy Man's Hand-book" which on page 474 states that a cubic foot of quicklime weighs 54 pounds. If that be so, a bushel would weigh 67½ pounds even measure; so that if you make allowance for the heaped measure, 70 pounds to the bushel would be a fair weight. The same authority gives the weight of one bushel of quicklime as 70 pounds. Another authority I find in the library is entitled "The Little Giant Cyclopedia and Treasury of Ready Reference," which at page 376 gives a bushel of quicklime as 70 pounds, or a cubic foot of quicklime as 53 pounds, which would make a level bushel 67 pounds. So that making allowance for the heaped measure, a bushel of lime would be 70 pounds. The Ontario Lime Association, whose head office is at Toronto, last year handled 360 cars of lime, which was sold at the rate of 70 pounds to the bushel. By the law they were compelled to abandon that mode of dealing with lime, as they were required to sell it at the rate of 80 pounds to the bushel. Consequently they had to find other methods of disposing of their output, selling by the hundred or in any other way they could until a change should be made in the law. The Ontario Lime Association, the Toronto Lime Company, and others agree that 70 pounds is a fair weight for a bushel of lime. I do not mean to say that that is the exact weight of a bushel of lime in every instance. One lime will weigh more than another, just as some wheat will weigh more than other wheat; but 70 pounds is the recognized standard throughout the province of Ontario, where lime is handled in very large quantities. I therefore ask that the amendment I propose be adopted, and that the word "eighty" be struck out and the word "seventy" be substituted for it.

Mr. SPROULE.

Mr. SPROULE. I think it would be a mistake to adopt that amendment, for this reason, that if lime is not well burned it will weigh very much heavier, whereas if it is well burned, it will weigh very much lighter. Therefore, to sell lime by weight is against the interest of the purchaser.

Amendment (of Mr. Henderson) agreed to.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. The hon. member for South Huron (Mr. McMillan) introduced a Bill to fix the weight of eggs when sold by the dozen. He introduced it last session, but was unable to get it adopted, and this session he again introduced the Bill, and it was read the first time on the 17th of May. I promised that when the House was in committee on this Bill I would ask the Committee to take it into consideration. The Bill provides as follows :—

Unless otherwise specially agreed upon between the buyer and seller, eggs shall be sold by weight, and the weight equivalent to a dozen shall be one pound and one-half.

I think the hon. gentleman is right in desiring to fix the weight of eggs for exportation. Before the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization, Mr. Gilbert, a valuable authority, urged the importance of improving our egg market by establishing a standard for the weight of eggs. He said :

There is an impression abroad, and that impression is perhaps warranted so long as eggs are not sold by weight, that it does not matter what the size of the egg is so long as we get them in numbers. But when eggs are sold by weight, which I hope will soon be the case, it will be of importance to have large eggs.

Therefore, I propose to add the following to the Bill :—

Unless otherwise specially agreed upon between the buyer and seller, eggs for exportation shall be sold by weight, and the weight equivalent to a dozen shall be one pound and one-half.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. During recess I had occasion to meet members on both sides, and I find out that there is serious objection to this amendment. The hon. member for South Huron (Mr. McMillan) has left for home. He is in possession of information in support of his proposal, which might induce the House to adopt his views, which I have not got, and I therefore ask for leave to withdraw the amendment.

Amendment withdrawn.

Bill, as amended, reported, read the third time and passed.

CRIMINAL CODE.

The PRIME MINISTER. I beg leave to move that Order No. 23 for second reading of Bill (No. 16)—from the Senate—further to amend the Criminal Code of 1892, be discharged.

Motion agreed to.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair) moved third reading of Bill (No. 190) to authorize the granting of subsidies in aid of the construction of railways therein mentioned.

310‡

Mr. CLANCY. I beg to move in amendment :

That the said Bill be not now read a third time, but be referred back forthwith to the Committee of the Whole House, with instructions to amend the same by adding to subsection 49 of section 2 the following words :—“Within six months.”

In view of the statement by the right hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Minister of Railways, that this is merely a matter of suspension, I move this amendment, and ask the Government to consent to it.

The House divided on amendment (Mr. Clancy).

Amendment negatived.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I desire to have this Bill referred back to the Committee of the Whole, in order to insert a few words in section 8. The object is, by inserting these words to make the meaning and intention of the section somewhat clearer than it is at present.

The PRIME MINISTER moved that the Bill be referred back to the Committee of the Whole for certain amendments.

Motion agreed to, and House resolved itself into committee on the Bill.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I move that section 8 be reconsidered, and that the word “and” in the first line be struck out, and that in the second line, after the word "assigns" the following words be inserted: "And any person or company controlling or operating the railway or portion of railway subsidized under this Act."

Motion agreed to.

Section, as amended, agreed to.

Bill, as amended, reported; and read the third time and passed.

SUPPLY—INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the House again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. FOSTER. I desire to call attention to the fact that these papers that have at last been brought down are utterly useless to me—the Michaud-Belanger papers. There is not a letter here from the Minister, though there is six of his letters referred to—every one carefully taken out. Mr. French's petition is not here, though it is referred to over and over again, and the letter which accompanies the petition. There are other omissions, though these are the principal ones. It shows that there was no attempt to prepare the papers with any other idea than to pitch something on the Table—let him take it or leave it, as he likes. It is absolutely a disgrace for any Minister to deal with an order of the House in this contemptuous way. I do not think there has ever been a report, after months of asking, in such a slovenly manner as this. The report is of no use to me. But I give notice that I am ready to stay here for five months, if I can get anybody to stay with me, if I cannot have a proper return made for the Order of the House. It is not my order; it is the Order of the House.

The PRIME MINISTER. What was the date of the Order of the House?

Mr. FOSTER. It was passed in April.

Mr. DAVIN. The return to the Order of the House calling for all the Orders in Council passed since 1896, respecting contracts made without tender, which the right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), I fancy, thinks he brought down, has not been brought down. What the right hon. gentleman laid on the Table was simply a return to an Order made last year for all contracts let in the Department of Public Works without tender. And I would just like to say, as I am on my feet, with reference to the Queen vs. Skelton, that the return which has come down is a very elaborate one, and it would be impossible, at this time, to analyze it. But, if my life is spared, and if I have the honour of being a member of the House next session, I will call attention to it.

Mr. BLAIR.

SUPPLY—THE BOTHWELL ELECTION, 1896.

Mr. CLANCY. At this stage of the proceedings, one might, under other circumstances, be expected to offer an apology to the House for keeping it a few moments. But, as I desire to call the attention of the Government, but especially that of the right hon. First Minister, to a report which has gone broadcast in the newspapers and very generally throughout the country. I think an apology is hardly necessary for the few remarks I shall make. The report is in relation to the election which took place in the electoral district of Bothwell during the general election of 1896. The "Globe" newspaper, of the 19th of July last, has this to say about it. Speaking of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, it says:

He referred to the defeat of the Minister of Justice in Bothwell at the last general election.

The Hon. David Mills, interrupting, said he had been defeated by ballots being taken out of the ballot-box and other ballots put in. He had some of the ballots in his possession at the present time.

The "Mail" newspaper of the same date has a report almost similar to that, which reads as follows:—

He (Sir Mackenzie Bowell) referred to the defeat of the Minister of Justice in Bothwell at the last general elections.

Hon. David Mills said he had been defeated by ballots being taken out of the ballot-box and ballots being put in. He had some of the ballots in his possession at the present time.

Another report with regard to the election in Bothwell reads this way:

Sir MACKENZIE BOWELL. But as time rolls on changes take place. New electors rise up. Young men come of age, and my hon. friend was defeated, as others have been.

The Hon. DAVID MILLS. No, that is not the way it was done.

Sir MACKENZIE BOWELL. How was it?

The Hon. DAVID MILLS. Ballots were put into the box and ballots taken out, and I have some of them in my possession that were found afterwards.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to treat seriously a matter that, so far as I have any knowledge of it in any shape or form, I believe to be utterly destitute of a single particle of truth. But the statement having been made on the authority of a Minister of the Crown, with the weight that necessarily attaches to a statement coming from that quarter, it has given rise to my being the recipient of a large number of letters, all expressing surprise, and making inquiries as to the correctness of the statement. That being the case, and in justice to myself, and, I think, in justice to the electoral district of Bothwell—

The PRIME MINISTER. I must call my hon. friend to order. He is referring to what took place in another House.

Mr. CLANCY. I am not discussing that at all.

The PRIME MINISTER. He is referring to it, which he has no right to do.

Mr. CLANCY. I am discussing another matter now; I am calling attention to something else. I am not referring to a former debate.

The PRIME MINISTER. No, but to proceedings in another House.

Mr. CLANCY. Nor am I referring to a debate in another Chamber; I am saying now what I deem it my duty to do in view of these statements, that is, not only to give them an absolute denial, but to demand an inquiry. I say, that statement having been made on the authority of a Minister of the Crown, it is due to the good name of Bothwell, and in justice to myself, that an investigation should take place, and that that statement should be made good. I may be told that I have waited till the ballots have been destroyed, and that, therefore, I have no right to make this demand; but I want to say to the right hon. gentleman that the Minister of Justice took good care to make this statement himself when he knew the ballots were destroyed. If there is anything wanting in making a searching inquiry, the fault does not lie with me, but entirely with the gentleman who made the statement. The statement is made, that the Minister of Justice is now in possession of the ballots that were found upon the floor, and that were substituted for ballots that were taken out of the ballot-boxes. In view of that statement, I now ask the right hon. gentleman, in justice to the fair name of that constituency, that it should not lie under any such imputation, and that an investigation should take place.

The PRIME MINISTER. I cannot give a better answer to my hon. friend than to call his attention to the law upon this subject. If he complains of anything, he complains of something that took place in another Chamber. Here is what our authority, Sir John Bourinot, says upon that subject, page 426:

It is a part of the unwritten law of Parliament that no allusion should be made in one House to the debates of the other Chamber, a rule always imposed by the Speaker with the utmost strictness. Members frequently attempt to evade this rule by resorting to ambiguous terms of expression—by referring, for instance, to what happened in "another place;" but all such evasions of a wholesome practice will be stopped by the Speaker when it is very evident to whom the allusions are made.

When I called the hon. gentleman to order, he said he was not alluding to what took place in another Chamber. Now, the very basis of his reference and of his request for an investigation is what took place in another Chamber. He will see that he is clearly out of order.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman will see that he has not touched the point of order at all. It is too late to take the point of order now.

SUPPLY—SALE OF BINDER TWINE.

Mr. TAYLOR. Before you leave the Chair, this matter being disposed of, I purpose to say a few words, in fulfilment of a promise that I made to the Government and to the House, that I would say something before the session was over in reference to the very unbusinesslike manner in which the Government have dealt with the property of the people of Canada. I refer to the binder twine manufactured at the Kingston Penitentiary. I promised to deal with that question, and I intend to do so now, because I always consider my word as my bond. I allowed the Estimates to go through, because the Government were anxious to get the main Estimates closed, but I then promised to bring this matter up before the close of the session. I purpose concluding with a motion, and I will read the motion now, before making my remarks.

Mr. BERGERON. Do not read it now. If you read it now, you will not be able to speak afterwards.

Mr. TAYLOR. As my hon. friend has been the Deputy Speaker, I will take his advice, and not read it now. This Government was elected in 1896. They made a promise to the people of this country that they would conduct the business of the country on business principles. They made a claim that the Government was composed of business men. Now, I make the statement, that if any business firm, any incorporated company, had a board of directors and a president who controlled the property of the company, as this Government is handling the property of the people of this country, that company would very soon call a special meeting to dismiss the president and directors. When this Government were elected, they immediately looked around to see how they could benefit some of their political supporters, and they went up to the Kingston Penitentiary, and discovered there some 500 tons of binder twine lying on hand. They did not call for tenders and sell that binder twine at the highest price. They sold it to private friends. Coll Bros., who purchased 500 tons at a small price. Coll Bros. handed that binder twine over to the Hobbs Hardware Company of London. In the Public Accounts Committee I moved that all the tenders, correspondence and documents referring to the revenues of the Kingston Penitentiary from the sale of binder twine, should be produced. This is the return I hold in my hands containing the tenders that were received for the sale of binder twine and the correspondence relating to it. The Deputy Minister of Justice writes this letter :

Ottawa, 30th May, 1899.

Sir,—In compliance with the request contained in your letter of the 20th instant, I inclose herewith for the information of the Public Accounts Committee, copies of such documents mentioned therein as this department is able to supply.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) E. L. NEWCOMBE,
Deputy Minister of Justice.

N. Robidoux, Esq.,
Clerk of Public Accounts Committee,
House of Commons.

We found in the papers that came down this document :

Memorandum of Agreement between William Richard Hobbs, and Thomas Sanders Hobbs, of the city of London, in the province of Ontario, merchants, doing business under the name, style and firm of "The Hobbs Hardware Company," of the first part, and the Warden of the Kingston Penitentiary, of the second part.

Whereas, by a certain memorandum of agreement bearing date the fourth day of September, 1896, Messrs. Coll Brothers, of the city of St. John, province of New Brunswick, merchants, became the purchasers from the warden of the Kingston Penitentiary of 500 tons of binder twine, of which they agreed to take delivery and for which they agreed to pay at the time, and according to the terms and prices set forth in the said agreement, a copy of which is hereunto annexed.

And whereas the said Coll Brothers, by a certain memorandum of agreement, bearing date the 25th day of January, 1897, did assign to the said Hobbs Hardware Company the said hereinbefore in part recited agreement, and the said binder twine therein mentioned, and all their right, title and interest under and by virtue of the said agreement, as will more fully appear by reference to the said last mentioned memorandum of agreement, a copy of which is also hereunto annexed.

I may say here that there is no copy annexed, and that the prices are not given, but they are in a detailed statement, which is furnished, of the receipts of the penitentiary, showing that they sold 500 tons of twine at about 4 cents per pound :

And whereas the warden of the Kingston Penitentiary has agreed to acquiesce in the assignment and to substitute the parties hereto of the first part for the said Coll Brothers as the purchasers of the said twine and for the performance of all and singular the obligations on their behalf in the said first mentioned agreement contained.

This agreement therefore witnesseth that the parties hereto of the first part undertake and agree to and with the warden of the Kingston Penitentiary to well and truly abide by and perform all and singular the agreements, stipulations and obligations in the said agreement of the 4th of September, 1896, entered into and contained by and on behalf of the said Coll Brothers, and to accept delivery of the said twine and pay therefor according to the provisions of the said agreement, and also at all times until the full performance of the said agreement to maintain the security and insurance therein mentioned.

In witness whereof the parties hereto have set their hands this 16th day of February, 1897.

By that agreement Coll Bros. purchased these 500 tons of binder twine in the fall of 1896. and handed it over to the Hobbs Hardware Company of London.

Mr. WOOD. Had they not a perfect right to do that ?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, but this goes to prove that there was a ring formed then, which ring is in existence to-day, and before I get through with the hon. gentleman (Mr. Wood), I think I will prove that the hon. gentleman is in it.

Mr. WOOD. You are mistaken.

Mr. TAYLOR. It just goes to prove that there was a ring formed then and that ring is in existence up to the present time. Binder twine has been sold at 4 cents and 4½ cents a pound by the penitentiary, and this ring has compelled the farmers of Canada to pay from 12 cents to 15 cents per pound during the last two or three years. That is the state of affairs that this Government has brought about. The binder twine manufactory was started at the Kingston Penitentiary by the late Government for the express purpose of giving the farmers binder twine practically at what they could manufacture it for and allow other manufacturers a fair living profit. The late Government disposed of this twine by supplying merchants, all over the country, sending their agents out and forcing other manufacturers to do the same in order to get their goods on the market.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. They never got paid for it.

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, they did get paid for it. I asked the question of the Government if there was a dollar due for binder twine, and the answer of the hon. Solicitor General (Mr. Fitzpatrick) was that every dollar had been paid.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. This Government must have collected it.

Mr. TAYLOR. It was practically all collected by the late Government. The return brought down was up to the 1st of July. The twine had been sold at four months, and, of course, the merchants had not paid, but they paid their bills as soon as they became due. There is not a dollar owing to the binder twine manufactory at Kingston Penitentiary by the late Government, as the statement of the hon. Solicitor General proves. The late Government adopted that plan, but they went further. They advertised in the papers that any farmer, or any person who wanted a car-load, or any other quantity, by sending their order to the Kingston Penitentiary would be supplied if the money accompanied the order. They did not allow a ring to be formed, as this Government have done, to force the price up. They established the binder twine manufactory at Kingston in order that the farmers should get their twine practically at first cost. In 1897, the binder twine was sold to the Hobbs Hardware Company, of London. On the 24th of February, 1897, this agreement was entered into, no tender brought down, no tender accompanying the return; therefore, the Government sold the twine in 1897 to the Hobbs Hardware Company at the following prices. The penitentiary sold what was on hand in the fall to Coll Bros., and Coll Bros. assigned it to the Hobbs Hardware Company. Then the Government sold the output from the 1st of August, 1896, to the 1st of August, 1897, to the Hobbs Hardware Company on the 24th February, and this agreement was entered into:

Memorandum of Agreement made in triplicate this 24th day of February, A.D. 1897, between the warden of the Kingston Penitentiary, herein after called the Warden, of the first part, and William Richard Hobbs, of the city of London, in the province of Ontario, and Thomas Sanders Hobbs, of the same place, trading together as hardware merchants under the name, style and firm of the Hobbs Hardware Company, and hereinafter called the purchasers, of the second part, witnesseth as follows:—

1. The warden agrees to sell, and the purchasers agree to purchase, all binder twine now on hand at the Kingston Penitentiary and not already sold, and all binder twine that shall be manufactured at the said penitentiary up to and inclusive of the first day of August, A.D. 1897, the prices to be paid by the purchasers, all f.o.b. cars at Kingston, to be for "Maple Leaf" five and a quarter (5¼) cents per pound, for "Beaver" four and three-quarter (4¾) cents per pound, and for "Sisal" four and two-fifths (4⅔) cents per pound.

2. The twine so purchased is to be delivered from time to time in such quantities as the purchasers may order, provided that the quantities ordered are in stock, and the warehouse is to be cleared of all twine on the first day of August, A.D. 1897.

3. The terms of sale in all cases to be cash on delivery of the twine.

4. The cheque for $2,397.50 which accompanied the tender of the purchasers, is to be deposited to the credit of the Receiver General of Canada, and the amount thereof is to be retained as security for the faithful performance of this agreement by the purchasers. If the contract is duly performed the amount of the cheque will be credited in the final settlement.

In witness whereof the parties have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year first above written.

Signed, sealed and delivered.

That accounts for all the twine from the 1st of August, 1896, up to the 1st of August, 1897, it having been sold to the Hobbs Hardware Company. Having secured the 500 tons that was on hand in the fall of 1896 from Coll Bros., and having purchased the output from the Kingston Penitentiary for 1897, the Hobbs Hardware Company incorporated two or three companies so as to make farmers believe that there was competition. They had gone up to Toronto and arranged with their friends at the Central Prison to control the output of the factory there, and had made arrangements with the Farmers' Binder Twine Co., of Brantford, and they all sold it at the same price. The Hobbs Company was the agent for the Binder Twine Trust of the United States, and no twine could be purchased by any agent in Canada unless it went through their hands, and they got the commission. Therefore, they practically controlled the market, and the farmers of this country had to pay from 12 to 15 cents a pound for binder twine which this Government put into the hands of Hobbs & Company at an average of 4½ cents a pound. I asked the question early this session:

To whom and at what price was the binder twine manufactured at the Kingston Penitentiary between the first day of July, 1896, and the 30th June, 1897, sold? Were tenders called for?

The answer of the Minister was:

To Hobbs Hardware Company, of London, at the following prices:—Sisal, $4.40 per cwt.; Beaver, $4.75 per cwt.; Maple Leaf, $5.25 per cwt. Tenders were called for.

But in the return brought down, in answer to my motion for the tenders, there was not a tender brought down, and, therefore, I assume that there was no tender. The second question I put on the same paper, was:

2. To whom and at what price was the binder twine manufactured at the Kingston Penitentiary between the first day of July, 1897, and the 30th June, 1898, sold? Were tenders called and in what papers were they advertised?

The reply to that was:

To H. N. Bate & Sons, Ottawa, at the following prices:—Sisal, $4.15 per cwt.; Beaver, $4.45 per cwt.; Maple Leaf, $4.95 per cwt. Tenders were called for by circular addressed to leading dealers throughout the Dominion.

Who were the dealers to whom the circular was sent? Simply the four or five who composed this ring. There was not a circular sent to the Massey Harris Company, the Frost & Wood Company, to any of the large hardware dealers in Montreal, or to any of the large dealers throughout the country. A circular was sent to the Wood-Vallance Company, of Hamilton, to Ashdown & Company, of Winnipeg, to the Hobbs Hardware Company, to Bate & Sons, and to two or three outside parties.

Mr. WOOD. To Rice, Lewis & Sons, Toronto—a good Grit firm.

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, to Rice, Lewis & Sons. Here is a letter dated the 19th of February, from the Minister of Justice:

Referring to the interview between the Minister of Justice and your Mr. H. Allen Bate, I am directed by the Minister to state that he is prepared to consider any definite proposal which you may submit in connection with the manufacture of binder twine at the Kingston Penitentiary.

I may also inform you that we have on hand at Kingston Penitentiary a quantity of three different grades of twine, and the Minister will be glad to receive any offer which you may make in that connection, such offer to be treated confidentially pending a definite decision in reference thereto.

The twine referred to is the produce of the manufacture of the current fiscal year.

That was the letter sent to Mr. Bate, stating that if he would make an offer it would be considered confidential. On the 28th of February, Bate & Sons wrote the Minister of Justice the following letter:—

Ottawa, February 28th, 1898.

To the Hon. David Mills, Minister of Justice, Ottawa.

Sir,—Referring to the request contained in yours of the 19th instant, relative to making you an offer for the binder twine on hand, we beg to submit the following:—

For about 60 tons of sisal.....	$4 50 per 100
For about 120 tons mixed manilla .....	4 95 do
For about 100 tons pure manilla	4 95 do

Subject to cash settlements on dates of deliveries at our option, f.o.b. Kingston, providing of course that the manufacturing is well done and in perfect condition.

We are, awaiting the favour of an early reply.

Yours faithfully,

(Sgd.) H. N. BATE & SONS.

The Government, I have no doubt, then made up their mind that they would hand over that twine to Bate & Sons, because they issued a circular dated the 5th of March calling for tenders. This circular the Prime Minister stated had been sent to all the leading business men of the country. It called for tenders to be in on the 19th, giving only two weeks. The circular could hardly have time to go to Winnipeg and back. Each tender was to be accompanied by a cheque for $2,000. But no tender was sent in, because it was arranged between the parties that there should be no tender. The circular was sent to the following parties:—John Hallam, of Toronto, a man not in the business at all, but a party heeler; H. Mooers, of Kingston, a man not in the business; J. H. Ashdown, of Winnipeg, a gentleman who ran in the Liberal interest in the last election; Coll Bros., of St. John, N.B., to whom the Government sold the output in 1896; the Farmers' Binder Twine Company, of Brantford, who arranged that their twine would be sold at the same price at which the Hobbs Company sold theirs; Charles Braithwaite, of Portage la Prairie, a farmer who ran in the interest of the Liberal party in the last election; Jas. Elder, of Virden, Man., another farmer; and Bate & Sons, of Ottawa. These compose the leading business men of this country to whom the Prime Minister said he had sent to this circular. I have no doubt it took two or three days for the circular to be written, so that there was only about ten days' notice. My hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Wood) told me he did not get a circular at all.

Mr. TAYLOR.

Mr. WOOD. I did not see it. I was not there.

Mr. TAYLOR. There was not a circular sent to Montreal or Halifax. This was the twine that was dealt with last year. Then I asked this question about the twine of this year:

To whom and at what price was the binder twine manufactured at the Kingston Penitentiary since the 1st July, 1898, and to be manufactured up to the 10th June, 1899, sold? Were tenders called for?

The Prime Minister replied:

To Hobbs Hardware Company, of London. Tenders were called for by advertisement in the newspapers, and the highest tender accepted.

My hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) put another question on the paper in reference to the same thing, but he asked the question in another way, and the Prime Minister answered differently. The right hon. gentleman told me that it had been sold to the Hobbs Hardware Company, and that the highest tender had been accepted. The hon. member for Halton put this question on the paper:

1. Has the tender of Martin P. Connolly for the current season's make of binder twine, at Kingston, been accepted by the Government? If not, to whom has such twine been sold?
2. What are the prices to be paid to the Government by the purchaser for the different brands of such twine?

The Prime Minister answered:

1. The tender of Martin P. Connolly has been accepted and a contract based upon that tender has been executed with the Hobbs Hardware Company, of London.
2. The prices cannot be given until the output has been marketed by the purchaser.

Whoever heard of such a thing? The Government sell their property by tender, and they refuse to tell the price until the purchasers, who are the ring, re-sell the goods. The Minister admits in reply to the question that it was sold on the tender of Martin P. Connolly. To me he said it had been sold on the tender of the Hobbs Hardware Company. But it was sold on the tender of Martin P. Connolly, who no doubt handed it over to the Hobbs Hardware Company. They advertised, and I am informed that three tenders came in: the Hobbs Hardware Company, Coll Bros. and Bate & Sons. It was discovered that the Hobbs Company was not quite the lowest, and at five o'clock, I am informed, on the day the tenders were to be received, a gentleman who sits in the Press Gallery carried in another telegram from Connolly offering a little bit more than the highest tender, which was not that of the Hobbs Company. The cheque inclosed in the tender of Martin P. Connolly was a cheque signed on the Banque Nationale by Mr. Purdy, the Hobbs Hardware Company's solicitor; and on the day these tenders came in and for some time before Martin P. Connolly was not in the country at all, but was away down in Mexico. This information I have received, and I believe it is correct. The contract was awarded to Martin P. Connolly, who handed it over to the Hobbs Hardware Company. This plan was taken to keep the twine in the ring. We had a discussion here a few days ago on this subject, and a "Journal" reporter called on Mr. Bate, who showed him that he had sold a certain quantity of this twine to the Massey Harris Company; but he d'd not show that he had sold 200 tons of it to the Wood-Vallance Company, of Hamilton. But he did not say that he shipped 200 pounds of it to the firm of Wood, Vallance & Company, of Hamilton. I received a letter early this spring, dated 25th May:

Dear Sir,—Re binder twine, make some inquiries carefully, and find out if Wood, Vallance & Co. are not the actual tenderers for the binder twine at Kingston last year, and not Bate & Sons, of Ottawa. Bate & Sons' name was only a cloak, if some things I have heard is half-right.

Mr. WOOD. Give us the name.

Mr. TAYLOR. There is no name to it.

Mr. WOOD. Is it not worth much?

Mr. TAYLOR. No, but it is a pointer leading to the fact that 200 pounds were shipped by Bate & Sons from the Kingston Penitentiary to the firm of Wood, Vallance & Co., of Hamilton.

Mr. WOOD. And was paid for.

Mr. TAYLOR. Certainly, at an average of 4½ cents, and the farmers from one end of this country to the other had to pay last year 12 to 15 cents per pound. No wonder a little girl made this prayer. A little girl, the daughter of a prominent man in the ranks of the Liberal party, had been taught to pray for everybody, and startled her mother one evening by her devout prayer as follows:—

Now, O God, take care of yourself, for if we lose you we only have Mr. Laurier to take care of us, and he is not doing as well as papa expected he would.

I think that the farmers of this country have come to the conclusion that he has not done as well as he expected when he sold the binder twine made at the Kingston Penitentiary at 4½ cents per pound to his political friends, who sold it back to the farmers at 12 cents to 15 cents per pound.

Here is a statement of the receipts of the Kingston Penitentiary from the 1st July, 1897, to the 30th June, 1898:

Received from—
Hobbs & Co.....	$29,288 01
Bate & Sons .....	38,695 82
Total .....	$67,983 83
369,866 lbs. Maple Leaf.
209,823 do Beaver.
236,725 do Sisal.
426,771 do Mixed.
236,750 do Standard.
1,479,635

1,479,635 pounds of binder twine were sent out from the Kingston Penitentiary and the money received for it was $67,000. Calculate that binder twine at 4½ cents per pound, and it comes to $66,583.27. So that practically the average price received from the Hobbs Hardware Company and Bate & Sons was 4½ cents per pound, of which $66,583.27 went into the treasury. This binder twine they sold to the farmers at an average of 13½ cents per pound, which comes to $199,750.72, leaving a profit to the ring of $133,167.15. That amount was taken out of the pockets of the farmers and put into the pockets of the men who handled this binder twine.

Mr. WALLACE. Who were the men who handled the binder twine?

Mr. TAYLOR. The Hobbs Hardware Company and Bate & Sons. Bate & Sons were the purchasers last year, but the Hobbs Hardware Company had the contract for three years. Bate & Sons did not sell it to the farmers at all, but handed over 200 tons of it to Wood, Vallance & Co., of Hamilton.

Mr. WALLACE. No relation of the hon. member for Hamilton.

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not know who compose the firm. The Hobbs Hardware Company controlled the output of binder twine manufactured at the Central Prison, Toronto. They have rented the machinery at so much per day, they pay so much per day to the convicts, and furnish the raw materials and control the output. They controlled the output of the Kingston Penitentiary, and also of the Binder Twine Company of Brantford, which, according to the Toronto "Globe," declared a dividend last year of 70 per cent.

Not bad for an industry that is not protected in the tariff. But they had a more effective protection outside the tariff. The Hobbs Hardware Company are the agents for the American Trust Company, and the latter could not sell binder twine in this country at all. Now, we will take the three items. If there was $133,167.15 profit made out of the Kingston output, there was the same profit on the output of the Toronto Central Prison and the Farmers' Brantford Binder Twine Company, giving a total of $399,501.45 taken from the farmers, over and above the purchase price which they paid for this twine. The price paid by the Hobbs Hardware Company was 4½ cents per pound on an average, and they sold at 13½ cents per pound on the average, which would leave as a profit on the output of the Kingston Penitentiary of $133,167.15. Multiply that by three to get at the profit on the output of the three institutions—the Kingston Penitentiary, the Toronto Central Prison and the Farmers' Binder Twine Company of Brantford—and you have a total profit of of $399,541.42 made by the ring last year, all of which came out of the pockets of the farmers. How true and prophetic were the words of the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce when he said, a few years ago, that under the National Policy, for every dollar which went into the treasury, two dollars went into the pockets of the manufacturers. For $66,583.27 that went into the treasury of this Dominion, $163,667 went into the pockets of the Hobbs Hardware Company as clear profit.

Mr. WOOD. Nonsense, you know better.

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not know better, and I know my hon. friend knows that the binder twine was sold by the Government at an average of 4½ cents per pound and that the farmers paid on an average of 13½ cents per pound.

Mr. WOOD. As a business man, you know better than that.

Mr. TAYLOR. I must ask you, Mr. Speaker, to call the hon. gentleman to order. As a business man, I will prove that every farmer paid 13½ cents for his binder twine, and all that the Government got was 4½ cents per pound, showing a clear profit of 9 cents to the ring.

Mr. WOOD. You got some of the profit when you sold the twine. You are making the speech of a demagogue.

Mr. TAYLOR. The farmers of this country know my figures cannot be contradicted. I could go and elaborate further, but as the session is so near its close, and other hon. members will have something to say, particularly my hon. friend from Hamilton, who will have to explain how he got these 200 tons, I do not propose to detain the House longer. The Government have no business selling the twine at a low price and enabling these people to bleed the farmers as they have done. Binder twine is just as staple an article as sugar and cotton and everything else, the wholesale quotations of which you can find any day in the newspapers. But you cannot find the wholesale prices of binder twine manufactured by this Government. I put the question to the Government this session and they replied: We sold this year to the Hobbs Hardware Company of London; tenders were called for, and the prices cannot be made public, as the binder twine has not been marketed by the purchaser. Why should not the prices be made public? Why protect the purchasers instead of the farmers. The farmers would not begrudge one cent of a pound profit, but what are they paying for the binder twine that the Government sold at 4½ cents per pound? And these parties re-sold it at from 13 cents to 15 cents a pound. A friend of mine from Quebec was asking me how it was that twine was selling at Windsor at 11 cents and at Quebec they had to pay 13 cents for it. That is what we are doing this year, and the Government have repeated the same operation—they have handed over the output of this year at a low price and the farmers are paying a high price, as high, practically, as last year. Therefore, I beg to move seconded by Mr. Sproule:

That the Speaker do not now leave the Chair, but that it be resolved: That in the opinion of this House the system adopted by the Government for the sale of binder twine on hand on the 1st July, 1896, and manufactured in the Kingston Penitentiary since that date has proved unsatisfactory and detrimental to the best interests of the farmers of Canada.

Mr. SPROULE. I second this motion, because I think it is well that the farmers of Canada should know how far this paternal Government may be regarded as their friends. It was often said before the present Government came into power that the farmers were "bled white" by our system of taxation. It was said they were paying too much for their agricultural implements, that they were paying more than they should pay for their binder twine, that they were taxed too much on sugar, and that for all other articles of consumption they were paying more than they should pay. In the first place a motion was made to reduce the duty on binder twine, so that the farmers of Canada might get their binder twine at the lowest possible price. And it was said frequently by the present Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) and by the present Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock), who had, to a large extent control of the "Farmers' Sun"—the Patron paper then—that if a Reform Government came into power, the farmers of the country could be helped very materially by reducing the cost to them of the binder twine they had to use and the agricultural implements so necessary to them. Now, in the light of a few years experience, it is important for us to consider how far they succeeded in fulfilling these promises to the farmers. These gentlemen were always pleased to call themselves the paternal friends of the farmers. The first transaction in which they undertook to help the farmer was in connection with binder twine and coal oil. They took the duty off binder twine, it is true. And though the farmers have frequently been told before this time by the then Government that reducing or taking away the duty on binder twine would not reduce the price to the farmers of Canada because a combine in the United States controlled the article there and they would not sell to Canada except under regulations given out by themselves. It was said that the same applied to some other things, but to this more particularly. But the present Government came into power, and to please the farmers and performance of their promise, they took the duty off binder twine. What was the result? I need not ask any farmer in Canada if he got his binder twine any cheaper by reason of the duty being taken off, because every farmer knows that the reverse was the case. It is important to inquire what brought about the increased price of binder twine. We were told last year—and I have heard it said repeatedly by Reformers and by Reform agents who were selling binder twine and conversing with farmers who grumbled a good deal about paying the high price—that the high price was due to the war in Manilla, that this had stopped the importation of the raw material which went into the manufacture of binder twine.

Mr. MCGREGOR. Hear, hear.

Mr. SPROULE. My hon. friend from North Essex (Mr. McGregor) says "hear, hear." May I tell him, if he does not know it already, that all material that went into that binder twine that was sold last year was bought and paid for before the war commenced, and that the same price was paid for it as was paid for that which went into the binder twine sold the year before at about half the price.

Mr. MCGREGOR. And the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) has just said that binder twine went up. It is just the same as wheat that my hon. friend from South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) sells—it often goes up in price after he has sold it.

Mr. SPROULE. After which was sold?

Mr. MCGREGOR. After the binder twine was sold by the Government.

Mr. SPROULE. But why did it go up? Because it went into the hands of friends of the Government who put the price up. Who were they? The Hobbs Hardware Company, one of whose members used to be in the local House and who negotiated for the output of Central Prison, so that the farmer could not get a pound of it; and H. N. Bate & Sons here, who have been so useful to the Reformers of this country; and Coll Bros., of Halifax; and Wood, Vallance & Co., one of whose members sits on the other side of this House. That is the crowd who joined with the Farmers' Binder Twine Company, of Brantford, which work in harmony with them, except the Montreal one, have the output of all the factories in Canada under control. It is important to inquire how this is brought about and to see why there is no truth in the statement that the increased price was due to the fact that the raw material out of which it was made had increased in price. What was paid for the sisal? The Auditor General's Report says that practically the same price was paid as the year before, and about the same as the year before that—practically the same price every year for three years.

Mr. MCGREGOR. And the Government got for the binder twine they sold what it was worth at the time they sold.

Mr. SPROULE. Of course they got what it was worth, and that was 4½ cents. But did it require the margin between 4½ and 14 cents to cover the profit of the wholesaler and retailer and get the goods into the hands of the consumers? Was not that an exorbitant profit? Why, 1½ cents would be a big profit for the wholesaler, and the same would be a good profit to the retailer. Add that profit to 4½ cents and you get 7½ cents as a fair price for this binder twine. And instead of being sold at that price, it was sold at 14 cents, 15 cents and 16 cents a pound in my part of the country. I know that, because I bought it myself and I know what I paid for it. How was that accomplished? It was accomplished by the way the binder twine sale was effected by the Government. Were notices published in the newspapers throughout the country asking for tenders for this binder twine so that everybody might have a chance to tender? Not at all, a circular was sent out to a few political friends of the Government, united among themselves and arranged that only certain ones were to tender, and no matter who got it it would be distributed to any number of them who desired to sell it as wholesalers, but it would all be purchased from the Government at one price. That was the first step that was wrong. I say that had they put out an advertisement in the papers in 1897 that this binder twine was for sale and invited tenders for it, they never would have brought about what took place. First, they negotiated it by a private letter to parties in Ottawa. Then, after a while there was a circular purporting to be sent to several companies who might desire to purchase this twine, and I am told that the circular did not reach half the firms. But what was the result? They invited tenders on the 5th of March by this private circular, tenders were to be put in on the 19th of March, and on the 19th of March only one tender was in. The tender was opened and the contract was practically given to one firm. Probably, if there had been public tenders they would have made a better bargain, but there were none, and the result is that it goes into the hands of the H. N. Bate Co., and that company, as I have already said are acting in concert with the Hobbs Hardware Company of London, who purchased from the provincial government in Toronto the whole output of the Central Prison there. The Hobbs Hardware Company goes into an arrangement with the Farmers' Binder Twine Company, of Brantford, and then through the ring they have control of the whole output in Canada. Then, they enter into a combine in the United States, through a firm, for the sale of American binder twine in Canada. The result is that twine is sold to the farmers of Canada at the price of 14 cents a pound. The lowest figures at which you could buy a pound of twine last summer was 14, 15 and 16 cents for the three qualities.

Now, then, in what respect were the Government derelict in their duty to the farmer? How could they have avoided that? They could have avoided it by putting a notice in the paper so that every man might tender for twine in any portion of the country. In the next place, they could have done as their predecessors did to avoid the possibility of a combination being formed, they could have reserved the right to sell to any farmer or to any man in Canada a carload of that twine at the same price that they sold to the parties who bought the output and thereby prevent the price being put up. That is what was done by the previous Government. When they were asked in this House why they did it, the answer was. We did it to prevent them from putting the price too high to the farmers. So, if they put the price too high all the farmer had to do was, through the Patrons of Industry, or through their agent, to order a carload of binder twine and sell it out to the farmers. You can sell it at a fair price, and by that means we will keep the price of it down to the farmers at what it ought to be. There is where they made the mistake, and because they did not do that, they left it in the power of these parties to enter into a combine by which they mulcted the farmers to the tune which was mentioned by the member for South Leeds. That is where I blame the present Government. They sold their binder twine first in a private way, they sold it by sending a private circular instead of making it open for competition by putting notices in the papers. Then, the prices at which the binder twine was sold to these parties by the Government were very much the same as it was sold in previous years, because I find it was sold in 1896 at $4.83 to Coll Bros., or higher than it had ever been sold since. $4.83 per 100 pounds would make a little over 4½ cents per pound. But when it was sold at that price it was sold out to the farmers for 7 cents a pound retail. In the year when it was sold for $4.46, or less than 4½ cents a pound, when the year before it was sold at 4½ cents, it was retailed to the farmers at 7 cents a pound. But next year, when it was sold at $4.51, or 4½ cents a pound, practically the same prices as the year before, it was sold to the farmers at 14, 15 and 16 cents; whereas the year before it had been sold at 7 cents. Why that great difference? Why did the farmer pay 7 cents a pound more for his binder twine last year than the year before? It did not cost the wholesale man any more, therefore, taking a fair profit out of it, the farmer should have bought it last year at 7 cents and 7½ cents a pound. That was the price he could have bought it for, leaving a fair margin of profit both to the wholesaler and the retailer. But had this binder twine been sold in a proper way, as it was done by the Conservative Government, by reserving the right to sell to any farmer in Canada a carload of that binder twine at the same price that they sold it to the party who bought the output, it would have kept the price down to its normal figure, and the farmers last year would have got binder twine at 7 cents and 7½ cents per pound instead of 14, 15 and 16 cents. That is why I complain of the way this Government has done it. Now, I say it is because no provision was made to keep down the price, it is because this paternal Government had forgotten their duty to the farmers, had forgotten what they told the farmers before they came into power, when they said they were going to make binder twine so much cheaper than it was before; they had forgotten how they cried out that the monopolists and manufacturers of this country were bleeding the people white; they had forgotten that they told the farmers that if they were brought to power they would destroy these monopolists, and they would curtail the bloated manufacturers to that extent, and the people would get what they consumed at a fair living price. But the first thing they did was to put all the binder twine in the hands of that monopolistic ring represented by the Hobbs Hardware Company in London, Bate & Sons in Ottawa, Vallance & Wood in Hamilton, and Coll & Co. in Halifax. These four firms, all thorough Reformers, that were going to do so much for the farmers, received a monopoly of binder twine; this necessity for the farmer was put into the hands of these plunderers, as the Minister of Trade and Commerce used to call them, these bloated monopolists; it was put in their hands by this paternal Government, who were going to do so much for the farmers; and they did it in that case by making the farmer pay about 7 cents a pound more for his binder twine than he would have been obliged to pay had the Conservatives remained in power.

Now, the farmers may calculate for themselves what they owe to the Reform party. They can easily calculate it if they ascertain how much binder twine was sold in the country and compare the price of it for the last year with the price paid the year before. It ought to have been sold last year at exactly the same price as the year before, and both the retailer and the wholesaler would have had the same profits; and it could have been sold for what I have stated. I heard the member for Huron (Mr. McMillan) say the other night in defence of the farmers of this country, when he was trying to prove that they were just as smart as anybody else. He said as evidence of it: I need only mention the fact that the Farmers' Binder Twine Company of Brantford—which, by the way, was established a few years ago by the Patrons of Industry to give binder twine to the farmers at the lowest price—he said they made 60 per cent of a dividend on the money invested in their operation, and by that means he was endeavouring to prove to this House that the farmers were as smart as anybody else. A Reform farmer, when he goes into manufacturing, is as smart as anybody else, especially when that farmer has political friends who will help him. Who paid that 60 per cent? The farmers of Canada, and it was an extravagant dividend to be paid. They would not have been able to have taken that 60 per cent dividend out of the farmers of Canada if the Government had reserved the right to supply to any person who wanted it, in any province throughout the country, with a car-load of twine, so that he could furnish the farmers in his own locality with their twine at a reasonable price, and which would have been below the price that they had to pay as the result of the course which the Government have pursued. This was a most unbusinesslike transaction, and it was a most reckless sacrifice of the interests of the great farming population of the country. There are 467,000 farmers in the country who were obliged to pay 7 cents a pound more than it was worth for every pound of binder twine purchased by them last year on account of the way that it was sold by the Government, the result of which was to place the output of the factories under the control of Reform friends of the Government. I have no hesitation in seconding this motion, and I hope that this House will censure the Government for the way in which they conducted that transaction in connection with the output of the binder twine of this country. I have been handed a note saying that the contention is made that the war in Manilla affected the price of raw material for binder twine, and pointing out that there has been a civil war going on in the Philippine Islands for years. I would also point out that there is only a small percentage of the raw material which comes from that portion of the Philippine Islands where the war with the United States is being fought. The war is not being fought in the locality where sisal is raised, but that this raw material is grown hundreds of miles away from there. It will, therefore, be seen that the war did not interfere with the cultivation, or importation, of binder twine. It did not affect the price one iota, although hon. gentlemen are attempting to delude the farmers of the country into believing that the rise in price was due to a cause over which the Government and their friends had no control. When these facts are known and understood by the farmers in the country, in my judgment, they will not thank this paternal Government for pretending to do for them what they have not done, for acting in this unbusinesslike way, the result of which has been that every farmer in the country has been obliged to pay 7 cents a pound more for his binder twine than he would have been obliged to pay if the Government had done their duty.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, there is very little for me to say in this debate further than to emphatically repudiate any connection with any ring of any description, binder twine, cordage or anything else, since I have been in business. When the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) says that I, or my firm, form part of any ring, he makes a statement in which there is not a particle of truth. My firm bought 200 tons of binder twine from Messrs. H. N. Bate & Sons—

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). On what date?

Mr. WOOD. About a year ago last May. I have the prices here. I understood from the hon. gentleman that he was going to bring this matter up and to implicate my firm as one of a ring. I told him that I had nothing to do with it, that I never was connected with a ring in my life, and was not in this instance. I telegraphed to my firm to send me down the prices we paid to Messrs. Bate & Sons. The representative of Messrs. Bate & Sons came to my place and my partner, who does most of the buying, bought the twine from him in as straightforward a business way as he would buy it from any other traveller. He knew nothing about Bate & Sons; I do not know that he had ever heard their name, and when he told me that he had bought twine from Bate & Sons, it was the first time I knew that they were dealers in this article. I never knew anything about it, although I see nothing wrong in Bate & Sons tendering for this twine; and as the highest bidders making the purchase.

Mr. TAYLOR. There were no tenders.

Mr. WOOD. The House will readily understand, from the prices quoted by the hon. gentleman, that I had paid Messrs. Bate & Sons a fairly reasonable profit upon their purchase, and if I were a part of the ring I would not have paid them a profit on their purchase. The prices my firm paid were as follows : Sisal, $4.90 per 100 pounds ; mixed manilla, $5.30 ; manilla, $6.05, f.o.b., cash, 1st October. I paid as soon as the twine was delivered and got the discount. So much for that portion of the matter. I ask the hon. gentleman, if he wishes to do what is fair, to withdraw the statement associating my firm's name with a ring that is favoured by the Government.

An hon. MEMBER. There is no ring.

Mr. WOOD. I know nothing about any ring ; I never heard of such a ring. Hon. gentlemen talk about the Government not seeing that the farmer was supplied—

Mr. SPROULE. Would the hon. gentleman have any objection to say at what price he sold that binder twine to the retailer for ?

Mr. WOOD. I am coming to that by and by. I cannot exactly say what we sold the binder twine for per pound. The Government did simply what every manufacturer would do before starting in to manufacture binder twine. They would go to the country and ask for tenders for the twine for the coming season. This is what stove manufacturers, reaping machine manufacturers, or any other manufacturing industry would do. They would send their representatives through the country and find out, before manufacturing these articles, if they could sell them at a profit. I bought a very large quantity of wire and wire nails at a low price. If I had kept them until the price advanced I would have made a large sum of money, but my travellers went into the country and sold them at a reasonable advance upon the cost. I have no doubt that the people to whom they were sold made a handsome thing out of them. When we got these 200 tons of twine, our travellers went all over the country and took orders at a reasonable advance on the cost, 7½ per cent to 10 per cent. Our customers could not sell their twine until the harvest came on, and in the meantime, the price had gone up all over the country.

Mr. SPROULE. No, it had not.

Mr. WOOD. When the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) says that the price of raw material was not enhanced in consequence of the war breaking out in the Phillipine Islands, I would tell him that this manilla is imported by large merchants, and that these merchants thought that, as a matter of course, in consequence of the war, the raw material would advance, with the result that they advanced the price all over the country. The manufacturers advanced the price just as the raw material had advanced. These hon. gentlemen who make these outrageous statements should know that there are other manufacturers in this country.

Mr. WOOD.

There was the Consumers' Cordage Company, of Montreal, which produced more twine than both the Kingston Penitentiary and the Toronto Central Prison, put together. That company sold twine just in the same way as the Government. The Government contracted for all the twine manufactured at a certain price. The Cordage Company contracted for all they could ; but when the price advanced, they also advanced the price. Is it unreasonable to suppose that, when the price advanced with the manufacturer and the wholesale merchant, the retail merchant in the country would not get the last farthing he could out of the farmers ? The Government did not sell to the farmers ; it was not their business to do so ; if they did, the enterprise would soon come to an end. As a matter of fact, the farmers never pay cash for twine. If a farmer were to send to Kingston for any twine without the money, he could not get it. It would be very unwise for the Government to sell to the farmer, or to any one else, at retail.

Mr. SPROULE. As a matter of fact, the farmers always pay cash for twine.

Mr. WOOD. I know better than that. I have been dealing with the farmers much longer than the doctor ; and, if he were a business man, he would not make that statement.

Mr. SPROULE. I have not made one statement that is not correct, and I will take my oath to it.

Mr. WOOD. I say that if the doctor were a business man, doing business throughout the country, either wholesale or retail, he never would make the statement he made to-night. I do not blame him so much as I do the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor), who is a business man, and knows how business is done. The hon. gentleman knows that he himself would be the very first man to take advantage of an advance on the cost of material and goods of any kind.

Mr. SPROULE. What was the incorrect statement I made ?

Mr. WOOD. That, in consequence of an arrangement made by the Government with the ring, the farmer was compelled to pay 7 or 8 cents a pound more for his twine than he would otherwise have paid.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, and I repeat it.

Mr. WOOD. The statement would be unworthy of the hon. gentleman, if he were a business man ; but, as he is not, I cannot put it home to him as hard as I would like. But the hon. member for South Leeds, who has been a business man for many years, knows as well as any man in this House that when goods advance in price ; every business man takes advantage of the advance, and he would be a very poor business man, if he did not. As to the circulars, I believe one did come to my firm, but I did not see it. My firm knew quite well that we could not tender to the Government for the purchase of this twine. If I had sent a tender and had purchased the twine, the hon. gentleman opposite would have been the first man to have made an attack upon me under the Independence of Parliament Act, and he would have liked to see me make my exit out of this door; but I was a little too sharp for him and his friends, and I did not send in a tender. I bought the twine in a straightforward business way; I sold it in the same way. A more demagogic speech I never listened to than that made by the hon. member for South Leeds to-night for the purpose of pure clap-trap,—

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. WOOD—for the purpose of trying to influence the farmers and make a point against the Government. The business has been attended to by the Government in a straightforward, business way, a way in which any business man throughout the country would do it. If it had been done in any other way, it would not have been done on business principles.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman did not tell us at what price he sold the twine to the retailer.

Mr. WOOD. When we bought the twine, our travellers went out through the country and sold it at from 7½ to 10 per cent. As the price advanced, we advanced the price in the ordinary way. We took the advantage of the increase in price, just as anybody else did, when the cost of the raw material advanced. Suppose that quinine were sold for $1 a pound, and the doctor had a large quantity of it, and the price went up to $2.50, would he continue to sell it at $1.25? Nobody would blame him, if he took advantage of the increased cost of the article; but he should not try to make a point against the Government where no point exists.

Mr. EDWARDS. The hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor), in bringing this matter before the House, referred to correspondence between H. N. Bate & Sons and the Minister of Justice. He also referred to the methods by which this binder twine was sold to the farmers. So far as these questions are concerned, I do not at all pretend to deal with them, because they will be dealt with by the responsible Ministers. But as a large user of the article, I desire to say a few words on the matter in a general way. In the first place, let me say that there is no one in this country who would more strongly deprecate any injustice done to the farmers of Canada than I would. But I want to ask the hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House who have spoken on this question, if the conditions were such that the price of binder twine was 10 cents or 12 cents a pound, and if afterwards, because of changed conditions, the price went down to 4 cents a pound, would the farmers of Canada consent to pay the high price at which the goods were bought? I think not. As a general business principle, that buyers of goods have to pay the prices, which are governed by the supply and demand. Now, I am a very large user of cordage and a considerable user of binder twine. We buy these goods largely from the Consumers' Cordage Company, of Montreal. Early last spring the prices were lower, I think, than I had ever known them to be before; but before the season closed the prices had more than doubled, the reason alleged being the war in Manilla. Could it be possible that the product of the Kingston Penitentiary would control the price of the article in Canada? The proposition is perfectly absurd. The Consumers' Cordage Company, of Montreal produces many times more of the article than the Kingston Penitentiary, and it is perfectly absurd to make the statement that a firm buying the product of the Kingston Penitentiary could so manipulate things as to fix the price in Canada. I do not myself believe that there was a ring, or anything of the kind, so far as this transaction was concerned. But because of the general advance in cost of the raw material, not only in Canada, but in other parts of the world, this article advanced in price, and those who had the article to sell got the benefit of the advance, just as they would have had to suffer the loss, if the price had gone down.

The statement has been made, that binder twine was sold to the farmers for 14 to 15 cents per pound. All I can say is, that I am largely engaged in agriculture, as well as milling, and buy a very considerable quantity of that article, and last autumn, during harvest time, I bought a very considerable quantity, not direct from the manufacturers, as I generally do, nor from the wholesale merchants, but from the local agent of the Massey-Harris Company, and I paid 11½ cents per pound; so that I cannot understand how it can be said by any hon. gentleman that 14 cents and 15 cents were the prevailing prices; 11½ cents per pound is what we paid to the local agent.

Mr. WALLACE. What brand?

Mr. EDWARDS. The best binder twine.

Mr. SPROULE. There was not a pound sold in our country under 14 cents.

Mr. EDWARDS. The hon. gentleman must live in a very benighted part of Canada, and I think it must be a benighted portion which would send a gentleman here to represent the farmers as he represents them. During the time he sat on this side of the House, he was one of those who continually voted for that iniquitous system of protection, under which the farmers were being bled.

Mr. BERGERON. And you are doing the same.

Mr. EDWARDS. But, having moved to the other side, he is indignant at the way they are treated. The farmers of Canada know to whom it is best to entrust their business, they know who are their friends, and who have been their friends to the extent that they have reduced their burdens, and they look to the present Administration, and will not look in vain, to still further reduce those burdens, as the conditions will admit, during the many years to come in which the present Administration will govern this country.

Mr. DAVIS. I must say that I am surprised at the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor), who, I am given to understand, is a business man, making the statement he has made to-night. There may be some excuse for the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), because I am informed that he is not a business man, but a doctor, and probably does not understand how these things are done.

An hon. MEMBER. And a statesman, too.

Mr. DAVIS. No doubt, in his own estimation, but, as I understand it, this is a straight business proposition. When this twine was sold to Bate & Sons, it was sold at the current market price. If the hon. members for Leeds and Grey had shown that binder twine was worth 6, or 7, or 8 cents in other portions at the time, and that that Government sold it to their political friends at 4½ cents, they would have made out a case. But the Government did not do that. They sold the binder twine exactly for what it was worth in the market at the time. They sold it at 4½ cents, and it has been shown that Bate & Sons did not make such an amount out of it, because they sold it to the firm of the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Wood) and other people at 4-70 cents, which is a very small profit indeed. It was sold in the regular way, and afterwards the purchasers sold it also in the regular way to the retailers at the price which the article was worth in the market. After it passed into the hands of the retailers, the price went up, and naturally they took advantage of that rise and increased the price to the farmers. Any business man would do the same. People in business may buy an article at $10, and if it goes down to $8, they make a loss, but if it goes up to $12, they make a profit. If the hon. member for Grey (Mr. Sproule) were a business man, he would understand that. He made the statement that the war had nothing to do with the rise in the price of the raw material, because the raw material had got into the hands of the manufacturers, and the rise occurred afterwards. But I would like to ask the hon. member for Leeds, as a business man, what difference that makes? Were not the manufacturers who bought that raw material, entitled to the benefit in the rise in price after they bought it? I question if the hon. member, who deals in lumber, had bought 25,000 feet at $10, and the price had gone up to $35, whether he would sell it at $10 or $12 per 1,000 feet. He would be the last man to do that.

Mr. COCHRANE. But the Government did not get the advantage of the rise. They sold it at 4½ cents.

Mr. DAVIS. If the hon. gentleman will hold his soul in patience, he will have a chance. I would like to draw the attention of the member for Leeds to the fact that, after the war broke out, the price of the raw material did rise materially, and at the same time an advance took place in the price of wheat, so that the farmers got the advantage of the increased price in wheat, which far outbalanced the increased price in binder twine. To try and make a case against the Government because they sold the binder twine for what it was worth at the time in the market, is carrying party politics to an absurd extreme. The hon. gentleman has failed to make out any case. And besides, the binder twine which the Government sold, they were paid for, and it was not sold on credit, as was done by our hon. friends opposite, when they were in power. In the session of 1895 the following question was put by Mr. Martin, and the following reply was given by Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper:—

Mr. MARTIN asked :

How much binder twine was manufactured last season at Kingston Penitentiary? How much was sold? How much remained on hand after close of season? How much was realized from sale of twine? Was collection made in full for all twine sold? If not, how much is still owing and names of parties indebted, and amounts? Was any twine sold on credit, and to whom? When was twine sold on credit paid for, and names of parties to whom so sold?

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The amount of twine manufactured during the season was 331,316 lbs.; amount sold during the season, 241,016 lbs.; amount sent as samples, 200,000 lbs.; amount remaining on hand at close of season is 90,050 lbs.; sum realized from the sale of twine, $15,515.62. Collection was not made in full for all the twine sold. Mr. R. Rogers, of Manitou, Man., owes a balance of $652.75.

I presume the amount given, 200,000 pounds, sent as a sample, must be an error. Surely, hon. gentlemen opposite did not send out to their political friends 200,000 pounds of binder twine as samples. But that is down in "Hansard," and it must have been in election time, if that amount was sent out. Mr. R. Rogers, of Manitoba, owed a balance of $652.75. I am sure my hon. friends opposite know who R. Rogers was. He is one of the chief pushers of the Conservative party in Manitoba, and was a candidate a couple of times. I do not know whether he has ever been a member of this House, but I know that he has been a candidate and I know that he is looked upon as one of the leaders of the faithful by hon. gentlemen on that side, and this is the gentleman who is walking around with this $652.75 of the people's money in his pocket. Now, it appears to me to be a little out of place for gentlemen on the other side to accuse this Government of crooked dealing in connection with the binder twine, considering their own record in this very matter.

Mr. HENDERSON. It is not my intention to dwell at length on this much-vexed question of binder twine. But I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Davis), who has just taken his seat might have spared the House the pain of listening to a statement which has been made over and over again and refuted over and over again, that under the former Administration, the sum of $652 was unpaid for binder twine. In my hearing during the present session in this Chamber, and I doubt not, in the hearing of the hon. gentleman himself, the Solicitor General answering a question, stated that there were no arrears for binder twine purchased from the Government that the sum referred to by the hon. gentleman had all been paid and wiped off the books of the Government. Of course, the hon. gentleman is referring to a matter that took place in 1895. The money may not have been actually due according to the terms of the contract, for all I know; and this is only an attempt to throw dust in the eyes of the country by making it appear that the system adopted by the previous Government in disposing of binder twine more directly to the farmers than under the system of the present Government was a bad system, because the Government did not get paid for it, though, as a matter of fact every hon. member in this House except the hon. member for Saskatchewan (Mr. Davis) is perfectly aware that that sum was paid.

Mr. DAVIS. Will the hon. gentleman allow me to ask him a question? Does he approve of this Government or any Government selling binder twine to its political friends on credit?

Mr. HENDERSON. I have no hesitation in giving my opinion as to how the Government should sell the twine, in fact that is the purpose for which I rose. I disapprove, I may say, of the whole policy of the Government on the binder twine question. I disapprove of their putting binder twine on the free list, and destroying the industry in this country. I disapprove of the policy of the Government in placing the twine made in Kingston Penitentiary in the hands of a ring in the beginning of the season, say, in the early part of March. I say that the Government ought to hold all the twine they make until about the 1st July.

Mr. WOOD. Oh, oh.

Mr. HENDERSON. The hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Wood) laughs. He knows that then there would be no opportunity for him to make a profit out of it. By holding the twine, as I have said, the Government would prevent the advance in price which has been made during the last two years. Were the Government in a position on or about the 1st of July to put on the market of this country, say, 500 tons of twine, or even twice that quantity—and I would have no objection to their making twice that quantity—we could rest assured that the manufacturers in this country and those who are importing twine from the United States would not get 10 cents or 12 cents or 14 cents a pound for twine. The industry of manufacturing binder twine in Kingston Penitentiary never was started for the purpose of making money. This Government does not need to enter into speculations of this kind to make money; they can find funds for all their purposes in some other way than by extorting it from the pockets of the farmers. They should hold that twine even if they held it at a loss. Suppose they did lose $2,500 on the amount to compared with probably $350,000 filched from the pockets of the farmers of this country by reason of that twine not being held back. Such men as these—I do not wish to mention any names—certain corporations or individuals, year after year in this country, should not be allowed to make an exorbitant profit out of an industry of that kind to the detriment of the great producing class of this country. Better let us take the risk of the Government losing a very considerable sum each year in holding that twine until the 1st of July as a lever to prevent the advance in price which robs the farmer out of a sum, which, when I stated it at $350,000, I stated it very low indeed.

Now, what does a pound of twine cost? I propose to investigate, in order to see what these people make out of it. It is no secret. They say that Manilla has advanced, and, therefore, binder twine must advance as well. What did the Government pay for raw Manilla. I have it right here in the Government report. They bought 125 tons and paid for it at the rate of 4 cents a pound. The statement also shows that they bought cordage oil at about 10 cents a gallon, 1½ cents a pound. Now, sisal is worth about half the price of Manilla, and, therefore, their sisal would cost them 2 cents a pound. Now, it is a fact that is well known to the manufacturers of binder twine that about 20 per cent of the twine consists simply of oil—cordage oil. Then 32 per cent is sisal and 48 per cent Manilla, in the best brand of binder twine—I refer to the binder twine made by the Farmers' Company, of Brantford. The oil in a pound of twine would cost one-quarter of a cent, the sisal would cost two-thirds of a cent, the Manilla would cost 2 cents. Now, what would it cost to manufacture it? It can be manufactured for 85 cents per hundred pounds. Mr. Noxon stated in an investigation held a few years ago, according to my recollection, that it could be manufactured at 47 cents per 100 pounds. Adding 23 cents per 100 pounds for baling, we have the actual cost of a pound of binder twine of the best quality that the farmer wants—4 cents. The Government sold it at 4½ cents. They made a fair profit. No retailer in the country expects to make more than half a cent to a cent a pound in selling binder twine. The Government should not have looked for a profit, but should have held that binder twine that cost them 4 cents until about the 1st of July, taking the risk of selling it at 3½ cents, if necessary, in order to prevent the manufacturers and importers of this country from raising the price on the farmer.

Mr. WOOD. Does the hon. gentleman know that if the Government had kept it to the 1st of July they would not have sold it at that season? Twine was all marketed before that time.

Mr. HENDERSON. The hon. gentleman perhaps is not aware that I know a good deal more about binder twine than he does. It is not necessary for the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Wood) to school me in the matter of binder twine. I made a special study of this question long before he handled a pound of binder twine, I have no doubt.

Mr. WOOD. I do not think so. I have been in business a long time before the hon. gentleman was born.

Mr. HENDERSON. The hon. gentleman says that if that twine had been kept to the 1st of July it would not have been sold that season. Well, I would be perfectly satisfied that the Government should carry it over a year if necessary to check the advance in price. As I said, the industry was started in the Kingston Penitentiary for the purpose of keeping the price at a proper level. Of course, the hon. gentleman could not have made his profit out of it. But there are other people than the hardware merchants in the city of Hamilton to be considered: the farmers of this country are to be considered, they should come first.

Mr. EDWARDS. I desire to ask the hon. gentleman this question: If the quantity of binder twine which controlled the market last year and made the price in Canada is withdrawn from the market entirely, then I want to know the price the farmers of Canada will pay for binder twine.

Mr. HENDERSON. I understand the hon. gentleman says that if the quantity of twine manufactured in the Kingston Penitentiary were withdrawn from the market, he wonders what the farmers would pay for twine. Why, Sir, it is only a flea-bite that they make in Kingston, it is only a very small matter compared with the whole. But I tell you it is sufficient for the purpose for which it was designed. Bearing in mind the very large quantity that is sold before the 1st of July, and the fact that the Government holds 500 tons of twine it will prevent any manufacturer in this country from enhancing the price unduly at the time the farmer wants it. Farmers do not buy their twine in April, in May, in June; the bulk of it is bought towards the end of June and in the early part of July; and while the Kingston output is a small quantity compared with the total that is used, it is sufficient for the purpose of maintaining a level of prices, because no manufacturer, knowing that the Government held that quantity of twine and was in a position to throw it on the market the next day, when possibly half the quantity had already been supplied, no manufacturer would take the risk of holding his price at 10 or 12 cents, twice what it was worth, knowing that the Government were in a position to throw upon the market that quantity and supply his customers at a much lower price. Now, I cannot speak of the quantity of twine used in the entire Dominion, but the province of Ontario cuts 4,000,000 acres of crop—fall wheat, spring wheat, barley and oats. Allowing two and one-half pounds to the acre, which is slightly under the average, we find that in the province of Ontario alone they use 10,000,000 pounds of twine. Now, there was imported last year into the Dominion, 6,274,258 pounds under the free list.

Mr. HENDERSON.

Mr. TAYLOR. All that ought to have been made in this country.

Mr. HENDERSON. That was the point I was going to make. I say that not only have the farmers sustained a loss by having the price enhanced, but the manufacturers and the workmen of this country have sustained a loss by reason of the fact that 6,274,258 pounds of twine have been brought into this country free, every pound of which ought to have been made in this country. Now, I find the "Cordage Journal," of New York, gives the quotation of manilla, about 15 years ago, at £58 sterling, or $290 per ton. In 1897 twine was bought at $80 per ton, or a reduction of $210 per ton. We are told that under the old regime, when the duty on twine was 25 per cent, that twine was very high, and how could it be otherwise when the raw material which was brought into the country cost £58 sterling, $290 per ton? Why, twine at that time ought to have been, under ordinary circumstances, three times the price that it is now. But as the demand for this fibre became known, as it came to be used for the purpose of making twine in immense quantities the people in Manilla seem to have produced and exported a larger quantity, and the result was that an increased trade increased the output and the price fell from $290 per ton to $80 per ton, as it was in 1897. Now, this accounts for the fact that 10 to 15 years ago, under the former Government, when there was a duty on twine that article was very high, but it was not as high then in proportion to the price of the raw material as it is to-day. Now, Sir, we see that 1897 the manilla cost 4 cents a pound, and we are told that on account of the war in the east the price of manilla advanced very materially, and consequently there was an increase in the price of twine. Now, Sir, I searched the American trade returns just to find what manilla cost in the years 1897-98-99. In 1897 manilla was imported into the United States, at a cost of $3.77 per 100.

Mr. WOOD. What time of the year was that?

Mr. HENDERSON. That is the average for nine months of the year. In 1898, for nine months, the average price was $3.09 per 100 pounds; in 1898 the average price was $5.83; or between 1897 and the current year only an advance of 2 cents per pound in the price of manilla. Now, as I have explained already, in the best twine, the twine manufactured at Brantford by the Farmers' Company, there is less than half a pound of manilla in each pound of twine; consequently the increase of the raw material would enhance the twine only 1 cent per pound; therefore, if twine could be manufactured in 1897 for 4 cents, it could be manufactured in 1899 for 5 cents.

Mr. WOOD. I want to ask the hon. gentleman a question. He says that the Farmers' Binder Twine Company, of Brantford, do not manufacture any pure manilla twine, he says there is only 60 per cent of manilla put into the twine.

Mr. HENDERSON. I will very gladly give the answer to the hon. gentleman's question. I have my information from one of the directors, and that director is a member of this House. He tells me that the highest grade of twine they make contains 60 per cent of manilla and 40 per cent of sisal.

Mr. WOOD. Then, the country is deceived, that is all.

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not want to give the hon. gentleman's name in this House, but I will give it to the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Wood) privately, if he wishes it. Now, it appears that the binder twine sold by the Government to Bates & Sons in the year 1897-98 was resold, and a portion of it, about 200 tons, was sold at an advance—$4.90, $5.30, $6.05 being paid for the different grades, making an average of $5.40 per 100 pounds. This was bought by the Bates Company at $4.50, showing a profit of 90 cents per 100 pounds, or nine-tenths of a cent per pound. I should say that that was a very good profit, but there is no reason why that profit should go into the pockets of the Bates Company. There is a way of disposing of binder twine, and that way, to my mind, would be absolutely secure to the Government. It would be by getting a little closer to the farmer, not selling to the Bates Company, and then the Bates Company selling to Wood Vallance & Co., and Wood, Vallance & Co. selling to John Brown & Co., and John Brown & Co. selling to John Jones & Co., and John Jones & Co. going around and selling it to the farmers; so that four or five profits are filched out of that twine before it reaches the farmers. In regard to the price of twine for the current year, while it was produced last year for 4 cents a pound, allowing an increase of 1 cent on the manilla that goes into a pound of binder twine—and there will be no increase on the sisal, because there is no war in Texas, and no war in Canada, where we produce the oil—the price at which the Government should be able to sell twine to the farmers would be 5 cents. What they have sold it at, we do not know. The question has been asked repeatedly, what the Government received for the twine they sold last March. They claim that it would not be policy, that it would not be a proper thing, to disclose the price at which they had sold it until the purchasers had succeeded in filching 5 or 6 cents profit out of the pockets of the farmers. The farmers would have risen up in rebellion, if the Government had told them in May that they had sold binder twine for 5 or 6 cents a pound for which the farmers are paying 10 cents and 11 cents a pound now. In my section of the country that is the price they are paying, and I am under the impression that you could scarcely buy twine at two different prices. There is a combination at the present time, without any doubt. There is no doubt that there is an arrangement between the dealers in this country and the American trust on the other side, by which the price of twine will be maintained. Unless a man has a pull with the trust on the other side, he cannot import any twine, and unless he has a pull with the Government, he cannot get any Government twine. Is it any wonder that the Brantford Company were able to obtain a price for their twine that enabled them to pay a dividend of 60 per cent? There is no doubt that they did pay such a dividend. The hon. member for Huron (Mr. McMillan) admitted that a short time ago. In my own neighbourhood there are farmers who have, on a $10 stock, got a $6 dividend, and they only wish that they had $100 of the stock, instead of $10. This is the result of the policy adopted by the Government in throwing their twine into the hands of a combination and not keeping it in their own hands as a lever to maintain the balance between the producer and the consumer. This is what enables these men to enhance the price which is extorted from the farmers. Of course, the few farmers who have stock are perfectly satisfied, because they are making money out of it. Some of the few make enough profit on $10 of stock to purchase all the twine they want for one year. If they can make 60 per cent on this stock, they are willing to join with the Government and take the profit, notwithstanding the fact that the money is taken out of the pockets of their brother farmers. I do not know that I need say much more on this question. I hope that the Government will take into consideration the interests of the farmers and not the interests of the dealers in twine only; that they will take that question seriously into their consideration, and try to devise some plan by which they can prevent this undue enhancement of the price of twine at the time that the farmers urgently want twine. Five hundred tons is only a small quantity, compared with the requirements of the country, but still, I maintain, it is sufficient for the purpose for which it was designed, the purpose being to maintain the level of prices between the producer and consumer. If the Government find that 500 tons, manufactured in Kingston, is not sufficient to maintain that level, let them increase their output, double the quantity, if necessary, make it sufficient to fulfil the purpose for which it was originally designed. Let the Government drop the idea of making money out of twine. That never was intended. Let hon. gentlemen talk less about the danger of losing money on the manufacture of binding twine. Let us lose it, if necessary. Let us lose $10,000, $20,000, $30,000, or $50,000 a year on the binder twine we make in Kingston, if necessary, for it would be better to do that than have $300,000 or $400,000 filched out of the farmers' pockets by combinations and trusts managing the output and import of binder twine.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Mr. Speaker, the motion before the House is a motion by which the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) asks the House to censure the Government for the manner in which they have disposed of the twine manufactured at Kingston since they have been in office. I would ask the House to pause a little before assenting to this motion, because, if the House felt disposed to censure the Government for the policy that we have followed, then, I think, it would be in order for the House to direct the Government as to the policy that should be adopted for the disposal of this twine. I do not believe that the House would agree with the suggestion of the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson), who would shut out binder twine from coming from the American side, and thereby prevent competition, and at the same time put under lock and key the binder twine manufactured at Kingston, and thus prevent the twine from coming from within.

Mr. HENDERSON.

I do not know that the farmers of the country would be helped, if they had not the benefit of the twine manufactured abroad, or of the twine manufactured within. The Government have adopted only one course in regard to the disposal of this twine, and it is that of disposing of it by competition or by auction. I am sorry that the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) did not give me notice of his intention to bring this matter up, because the hon. Minister of Justice had placed in my hands all the papers which give the whole history of the matter since the Government came into office. I suppose, however, that I will have to rely upon my memory to give the facts, and I think I can give them tolerably well for the last two years. For the purpose of the present discussion, I think it will be sufficient to give the facts and figures, as disclosed by the operations of the last two years. In the previous year the twine was disposed of by tenders, invited, not publicly, but privately. The correspondence brought down to the House discloses that in the month of February the firm of H. N. Bate & Sons entered into negotiation with the Government for the purchase of their twine. The Government would not accept the offer then made, and informed Mr. Bate that they would invite tenders; but they retained the offer of Mr. Bate, and required him to deposit with it $2,000, which was the deposit required of all the other tenderers. Then, tenders were invited by circulars sent to the principal dealers in the country. The names of the parties to whom the circular was sent have been given, but they may be repeated: The Wood-Vallance Co., of Hamilton; the Hobbs Hardware Co., of London; Rice, Lewis & Sons, of Toronto; Henry Moore, of Kingston; Mr. Ashdown, of Winnipeg; Coll Bros., of St. John; the Farmers' Binder Twine Co., of Brantford; Mr. Braithwaite, of Portage la Prairie, and Mr. Jas. Elder, of Virden, Man. This list includes most of the important dealers in the article, with few exceptions, if any. None of them sent in a tender, and the tender of Bate & Sons was accepted at the price, if I remember correctly, of 4 cents and a fraction. Nobody denies that this was the current price at that time. Before I proceed any further, let me offer a word of explanation as to the policy which has been followed by the Government on this question. The hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson), and the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), challenged the policy of the Government in placing binder twine on the free list. No man can seriously pretend that the Government made a mistake in that respect. We have not enough articles, I contend, on the free list; but if there is an article which ought to be placed on the free list, it is certainly an article of such importance and necessity to the farmer as binder twine; and when hon. gentlemen contend that it was a mistake to place such an article on the free list, that it could not help the farmer, but, on the contrary, as was insinuated, though not asserted, that it was an injury to the farmer, I say that is an argument which cannot be taken seriously. What is the argument when it is expanded and put in so many words? Hon. gentlemen say that there is a combine between the producers in the United States and the producers in Canada. I do not know, but so far no evidence of the fact has been adduced. Let us say, however, that there is a combine. If there is a combine between the manufacturers in the United States and the manufacturers in Canada, this fact is not the result of the abolition of the duty. Suppose we had the duty still, there would be still greater facility for the Canadian manufacturers to combine than there is to-day. Therefore, the reasoning of these hon. gentlemen will not stand examination. The hon. gentlemen who say that the Government did not follow a wise policy in taking the duty off binder twine would not dare to censure the Government for doing so, or advocate the duty being put on again. Coming back to the transaction of last year, when the twine was disposed of on the tender of H. N. Bate & Sons, it is stated that there was a combine at that time. Well, suppose there was. No one can say that the Government was aware of that combine. What more can the Government do than invite tenders? And if there are rings formed among the tenderers, and the Government is not aware of the fact, how can the Government be censurable for calling for tenders and giving the contract to the lowest tenderer? Assuredly no blame can attach to the Government. We have laws against combines and have done the best we could to destroy combines. But we cannot always hope to succeed; and it is likely that combines and rings will be formed in order to cheat, not only the Government, but individuals as well. Surely the Government cannot be held blamable for that. It is true, after the firm of Bate & Sons had obtained the contract, the price of twine went up. What was the reason of that? I call the attention of my hon. friend from Halton and my hon. friend from East Grey to this fact. The duty on twine was removed in the spring of 1897. I never heard any complaint made of the prices paid for binder twine in that season. The complaint was made in the season of 1898; and what was the reason of it? Surely it cannot be on account of the tariff. It would be idle to argue that it was. If it had been caused by the tariff, the price would have risen as soon as the tariff was reduced. What is the reason, then, that in the season of 1898 the price went up? What reason could there be except that the country which produced the raw material was at that time devastated by war. That is the logical and reasonable cause. It may be that there was in the country at that time a large quantity of the manufactured article on hand. I am sure that in May or June, 1898, at the time war was declared, there were large supplies of the twine in Canada and the United States. We are told by the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Woods), who is an expert in these matters—though it does not require the knowledge of an expert to come to the conclusion—the moment manufacturers and dealers saw that the raw material was scarce they would put up the price of the manufactured article; and that is what took place. The fact that the Philippines were devastated by war, and that probably a great deal of manilla had been reduced to ashes, accounts alone for the increase in the price. If there had been no increase of price in the last season, we would not have heard a word of the contract awarded to Bate & Sons. Messrs. Bate & Sons purchased at the ordinary prices and under ordinary circumstances; but in view of the criticism directed to the Government for having given the contract to that firm upon private tenders and not public tenders, we determined last year to invite public tenders. Therefore, we invited tenders by public advertisement in some forty papers; I gave a list of the papers some time ago. We published the advertisement as widely as possible all over Canada. In answer to that we received a few tenders, and the successful tenderer was M. P. Connolly. The hon. gentleman who made that motion rather made some insinuations with reference to the transaction which took place. Mr. M. P. Connolly was the successful tenderer, but he assigned his contract to the Hobbs Hardware Company, and the hon. gentleman insinuated that there was something crooked in the transaction. I have this to say to the hon. gentleman. If a member occupying the position he does has any charges to make, he ought to make them, and not deal in insinuations. If he thinks there was a fraudulent transaction of some kind in which the Department of Justice is implicated, it is his duty to make the charges, and it will then be the duty of the Government to have an investigation. The Government has no interest in shielding anybody. Let me tell the hon. member for South Leeds that while I do not know what may have transpired between Mr. Connolly or anybody else, I do not believe that anything wrong or crooked can be established against the Department of Justice. If there has been any crooked transaction between Mr. Connolly and anybody else, I am quite convinced that the Department of Justice was not a party to anything of the kind. So far as that department is concerned, the transaction was fair and above board, and will bear investigation, and if the hon. gentleman thinks there has been anything crooked let him make the charge.

This is the way in which we dispose of the binder twine. We came to the conclusion that the best method to dispose of it was at public auction, and not in the late season, not in the month of July, as my hon. friend suggests, for I do not think it would be advantageous to the country and especially to the farmers if we were to keep that binder twine under lock and key until the market was supplied.

Mr. HENDERSON. In the province of Manitoba, they have not yet purchased their twine.

The PRIME MINISTER. Well, we will see further what is the best policy. For my part, I take the admission of business men as evidence that our method is preferable to that followed in Manitoba. This is the policy we followed last year, and I see no reason for departing from it. The policy we think the best, and which we think the best judgment of the country will approve, is to dispose of the twine manufactured at the opening of the season and dispose of it by tender publicly invited, as we did last year. Is any hon. gentleman opposite prepared to challenge that policy?

Mr. HENDERSON. Would the right hon. gentleman make the price known. Will he sell it by public auction, and let the public know the price at which it is sold?

The PRIME MINISTER. No, I do not think it would be fair to the merchant to do that. We are asked to say by this amendment that the system is not satisfactory but is detrimental to the best interests of the farmers. I take issue on that point. Is any hon. gentleman prepared to say that the system we have followed of disposing of this binder twine by public tender—

Mr. TAYLOR. Since 1896?

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes, as we have done this year, is not a good policy, or that we should dispose of the twine in any other manner than by tenders publicly invited? Whatever may be the judgment of the House, it is the policy of the Government to continue that system.

The hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) asks if we would publish the prices to the world. I want to know whether any business man would tender, if his price were to be made known?

Mr. TAYLOR. Certainly.

The PRIME MINISTER. It is not reasonable to expect that he would. If the Government have gone into the business, they have done so for the purpose of helping the farmers, and the farmers do not expect that we should follow any other than ordinary business methods. That is the policy we intend to follow, and I can safely leave this question to the judgment of the House.

Mr. CLANCY. I did not intend to take any part in this discussion, but the right hon. gentleman seemed to think that the price of binder twine must have advanced as a consequence of the advance in the price of the fibre, and his friends on that side applauded that argument. If it went uncontradicted it would be entitled to some weight, but I would like to ask his attention for a moment to the following facts. The cost of fibre that was imported to the Kingston Penitentiary in 1896 was an average of 3.52, and the twine was sold at an average of 4.25, and the cost of twine imported that year from the United States was 5.15. In 1897, the cost of the fibre imported to the Kingston Penitentiary was less than 3.52, it was 3.29, and the twine was sold at 4.64, and the price at which American binding twine was imported was 5.06. In 1898, the fibre imported for the purpose of manufacture at the Kingston Penitentiary cost 3.58, and the price at which the manufactured article was sold was an average of 4.60, and the cost at which American binder twine imported was 5.65.

The hon. Minister of Customs gave us the figures the other day for the nine months of 1899. The quantity imported—and there could have been no objection in entering it at a low rate because there was no duty to pay—was 4,168,716 pounds, at an average price of 6½ cents. These figures are taken entirely from the Auditor General's Report, with the exception of the last, which was given to us by the Minister of Customs. These are the prices for four years.

The PRIME MINISTER. Will my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) allow me a question?

Mr. CLANCY. Certainly.

The PRIME MINISTER. If he has the quotation before him will he give me the figures for 1898 from January to August?

Mr. CLANCY. I am giving the average price for the whole year—not the prices at certain dates. I have given the average for all kinds of fibre of the year for each and every year. These figures are worth repeating, because they show that there was no substantial advance either in fibre or twine after manufacture. In 1896 the cost of fibre was $3.25 per hundred; in 1897 it was $3.39 per hundred, and in 1898 it was $3.58 per hundred. Now, we take the price at which it was sold. In 1896, it sold at $4.25 per hundred; in 1897 at $4.64 per hundred, and in 1898 at $4.60 per hundred. The right hon. gentleman will see that there is no substantial advance. I will give the prices at which twine was imported for the same three years. And let it be remarked that a part of this was from January, 1898, when binder twine came in free. In 1896 the cost of imported was $5.15 per hundred; in 1897, $5.06 per hundred—lower than in 1896—and in 1898 it was $5.65. To confirm that, I will give the quantities imported for these years. In 1896, we imported 3,023,986 pounds; in 1897 we imported 3,364,840 pounds and in 1898, up to the 1st of January, when the duty ceased, we imported 2,396,625 pounds. And from that time to the end of the fiscal year we imported an additional quantity of 6,313,618. The average price for these three years was $5.65. From this we see that in 1898, the year when binder twine became free, we imported the enormous quantity of 8,710,243 pounds, as against 3,364,840 pounds in the previous year. In other words, the American people manufactured for our farmers 5,345,403 pounds more than in the previous year. Now, what does that show? It shows that there was a combine, arising, as has been stated, from the fact that the Government did not take due precautions—they were, in fact, a party to it, playing into the hands of the Hobbs Company, knowing that there was a collusion—and if hon. gentlemen doubt it I will read the evidence of Mr. Stewart, when he declares—

Mr. SOMERVILLE. We will take your word for it.

Mr. CLANCY. I hope the hon. gentleman (Mr. Somerville) will show by his vote that he takes my word for it. If any hon. gentleman denies it, I am prepared to show, on the evidence of Mr. Stewart, the inspector, that he knew there was collusion, that the whole thing was settled here between Coll Bros.—or rather by Mr. Connor, acting for them, because I understand that Coll Bros. were not a factor in it—Coll Bros., Mr. Connor and the Hobbs Bros. arranged the matter here. They put three large quantities together, including that for which Coll Bros. were tenderers, but which they forfeited by not accepting delivery and that under Hobbs Hardware Company's tender, when the whole thing was put in with the quantity made by the Central Prison in Toronto, a combine was formed and the prices rose in this country, not because of any advance in the raw material or for any other cause, but simply because the combine existed. There never was clearer evidence of a combine. There never was more criminal neglect on the part of the Government of Canada or any government than this Government showed when it did nothing to prevent the formation of this combine, although they must have known from what Mr. Stewart tells us that there was collusion. He says he knew there was collusion in the parties trying to get the twine, and when the affair at Toronto was closed up it was closed up practically on the same day and with the knowledge of the Justice Department. The Justice Department was aware of the whole thing, as was shown by the evidence. I shall not read the evidence at this stage, unless some hon. gentleman disputes what I say. But I have the evidence under my hand. I have given the figures to the right hon. First Minister, figures that, I think, he was not in possession of before. They are not my figures, they are taken from the Auditor General's Report. It is no use for hon. gentlemen to ask what course should be taken. Hon. gentlemen opposite have been making the best defence they could, but there is absolutely no defence. It is not a difficult thing for the people to see that if the Government were not parties to this arrangement, they were, in a sense, criminally neglectful of their duties. If they had taken a proper course, they could have defended the farmers and prevented the twine getting into the hands of one set of associates. There were offers made for twine in small quantities, but they were refused. The Government might have protected the farmers, but they failed to do so. They could have held back this twine and thrown it upon the market in such a way as to keep down the prices. Even if they had had to hold the twine over, surely the public purse is big enough to do that, if it is necessary in order to prevent a combine. Just imagine what the farmers are paying—the difference between what would be 6 cents a pound, probably, all round, with a fair margin of 25 to 30 per cent for the middlemen who handle it—the farmers are paying the difference between that and 12 or 13 cents a pound. It is a monstrous tax. I venture to say that the tax in this respect upon the farmers of this country is larger than the tax per head for customs duty paid on the average within the last two years. I say it is a scandalous transaction, wherever the blame may rest, and it is not hard to draw a conclusion.

Mr. WALLACE. The First Minister has acknowledged that they made a mistake in selling binder twine the way they did last year; he has not acknowledged that in words, but he has acknowledged it in acts, because the Government last year, instead of asking the public to tender for the purchase of public property, sent a circular to a few of their friends. Who were those friends? Some of them were men who had never dealt in binder twine before, and some who had. There were Wood, Vallance & Co., of Hamilton, H. N. Bate & Sons, of Ottawa, concerning whom the member for Hamilton (Mr. Wood) tells us that his partner never heard their names before, and, I presume, that Bate & Sons never had dealt in binder twine before that time. But the main fact is this, that that binder twine was purchased from the Government for 4½ cents per pound, and it was sold to the farmers for three times 4½ cents per pound, or 13½ cents per pound, or more. Who got the difference? The member for Hamilton said that he was not in any combine. He told us, in the first place, that he sent out his travellers, and that they asked from 7½ per cent to 10 per cent advance on the cost price, which they considered a fairly good profit. But after he had sat down and was compelled to rise again, what did he say? That they had got 7½ to 10 cents per pound, that they had sold at an advance of 50 to 100 per cent. They bought at an average of $5.40, and sold for from 7½ to 10½ cents per pound.

Mr. WOOD. I never said that, the hon. gentleman makes a mistake. I said from 7½ to 10 per cent, not 7½ to 10 cents per pound.

Mr. WALLACE. What were the prices at which it was really sold?

Mr. WOOD. I could not really tell you.

Mr. WALLACE. Then I make no comment on that. The member for Hamilton told us in the beginning of his speech that he would tell us the prices at which it was sold before he sat down, and my hon. friend beside me said that the hon. member had said they were from 7½ to 10½ cents per pound.

Mr. WOOD. I said I would tell what I paid for it. I had the telegram here, and I sent to Hamilton to get what we paid for it.

Mr. WALLACE. The hon. member said before he sat down he would give the information as to the price he sold it for, but he has not done so. We have no right to ask him unless he is willing to give the information. At any rate, he bought it for less than 5½ cents per pound, showing that he was pretty close up to a ring, if ring there was. The farmer had to pay 8 cents a pound more than the member for Hamilton, he had to pay 100 to 150 per cent more for an article than the member for Hamilton; therefore, the member for Hamilton was in an exceedingly good position in regard to this matter. He said also that the member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) was guilty of a slanderous statement because he said that on account of the arrangement between the Government and the ring the farmers had to pay an outrageous price. So they did have to pay an outrageous price. They say: Why, there was war in Manilla, and the prices of the raw material had gone up. I think from the statement made by the member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy), we see that the prices had scarcely gone up. But the fact remains that the prices of the material out of which the products of 1898 were made, had not gone up to the extent of a quarter of a cent per pound.

Mr. WOOD. I want to ask a question of the hon. member, he is a business man himself. If he bought a keg of nails for $1.50, and the price in market was $3.50, in consequence of an advance in the cost of the raw material, would he sell it for $2.75?

Mr. WALLACE. I answer the question in this way: Merchants, men in business, never yet that I know of, excepting this case, get the full advantage of the rise. They are always satisfied to make a quick sale at a little more than an advance on the usual profit. The Minister of Customs shakes his head at that; perhaps he does not do business like that.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. No, you know that is not a straight answer.

Mr. WALLACE. Now, Sir, who got this advance in price? Somebody got it. H. N. Bate & Sons paid 4½ cents, the number for Hamilton paid 5 cents, but the farmer paid 13½ cents. Now, who got the 8 or 9 cents per pound advance? The member for Hamilton will not say that he got it, so we cannot criticise him. But somebody got it, because the farmer had to pay for it, and the farmer had to pay for it out of the goods made by the Government and supplied by the Government, which they did not give the public an opportunity of tendering for, and which they did not give the people, as they should have given every one in this country who choose, an opportunity of purchasing.

Mr. WOOD. What was it sold for at Woodbridge?

Mr. WALLACE. I think at 13 or 14 cents a pound.

Mr. WOOD. Then, you made a handsome profit.

Mr. WALLACE. We did not sell any last year.

Mr. WOOD. You know, as a business man, that is not a fair argument.

Mr. WALLACE. I think, perhaps, we sold some this year, but this is the first year we ever sold a pound. So I am not speaking from personal knowledge, but I am speaking of what I saw it sold for and what many members of this House have stated they know it to be sold for. I say that there was no justification for raising the price of this article. But how was it raised? They had control of the product of the Kingston Penitentiary; the same parties had control of the Central Prison, the same parties had control of all the American binder twine that came in. Although there was no duty, there was a combine ten times as tyrannical as any protective duty could be. Why, Sir, they combined in that way so as to raise prices from 5, 6 and 7 cents a pound, which would have been a fair, legitimate and a handsome profit and raised them to more than double that amount. They did it, Sir, because they have the machinery for doing it in their own hands, and because this Government assisted in building up the machinery of the combination. This would not have occurred if the duty had been continued as it had been under the Conservative regime, the smallest duty on any manufactured article in Canada, 12½ per cent or about one-half of a cent per pound. That was the duty that had to be paid if binder twine was imported, but it was made in Canada without that one-half of a cent a pound being imposed on the farmers, because that was the practical experience.

It was made all over the country, but when the duty was taken off, when the opportunity was given for the combination to be made, the Canadian manufacturers were practically shut out and they closed down their factories because they could not compete against the American manufacturers, who were able to force their surplus product that was not required in the United States on the market here. One year if they did not have a surplus the price would be raised, and the next year if they had a surplus they would drive the Canadian manufacturer out of the market. Therefore, I say that the Government have been remiss in their duty in making the farmers of this country pay hundreds of thousands of dollars additional for their binder twine more than they should pay for it, because, I say, there was no justification for increasing the price to enable a few friends of the Government to heap up enormous fortunes in one year.

House divided on amendment (Mr. Taylor).

Public Buildings, Ontario—

New departmental building (Langevin Block), Ottawa—Balance and interest due contractor..... $29,811 73

Mr. FOSTER. Explain.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). That is a final adjustment of the account between the Government and Mr. Alphonse Charlebois, contractor of the Langevin Block. When the final estimates was rendered in May, 1890, by the Chief Architect in favour of the contractor, there was a balance which Mr. Charlebois claimed of $272,186.24. The Government of the day, Sir Hector Langevin being at the time Minister of Public Works, took no action on that claim. In 1895, when the Hon. Mr. Ouimet was Minister of Public Works, the chief architect was instructed to look into the claim, and Mr. Fuller, then chief architect, and his assistant, were engaged for some time in its consideration. At the outset Mr. Fuller put aside items representing the sum of $128,643 which he considered were not debatable. A number of the items were then take up for consideration, but owing to a difference with the contractor the matter was not prosecuted further. In May, 1896, when the Hon. A. Desjardins was Minister of Public Works, the matter came up again, and he instructed the chief architect to resume the investigation. That investigation took place at Montreal, there being present Mr. Gobeil, the Deputy Minister, Mr. Fuller, Mr. Ewart, the present chief architect, and Mr. Charlebois. In a report made to the then Minister, dated the same month, Mr. Fuller stated that after such examination he had come to the conclusion to recommend the award to Mr. Charlebois of a total sum of $20,000, and an Order in Council was passed on the 6th July, 1896, authorizing the offer of that sum, plus the sum of $5,000 representing the probable cost of litigation, &c., in all $25,000. This Order in Council also provided that should the contractor not accept that sum, the matter should be referred to arbitrators. The amount in question was never offered, and on the 17th of July of the same year the Order in Council of the 6th was cancelled. Upon Mr. Charlebois again pressing his claim against the department, and finally agreeing—what he had always declined to agree to before—to accept the sum found by the chief architect in full and final settlement of his claims, the matter was referred by the present Minister of Public Works to the present chief architect, who concurred in the recommendation made by his predecessor Mr. Fuller, and made a final report in January, 1898, awarding Mr. Charlebois $19,874.49 out of his total claim. The matter was again laid before the Privy Council, and an Order in Council was passed on the 3rd of August, 1898, giving authority to place the amount in the supplementary Estimates, this amount, together with interest at 5 per cent from 1st of July, 1889, the date of the completion of the building to the 1st of July of this year, representing the sum now applied for in the supplementary Estimates. Such is the history of this claim.

Mr. FOSTER. Do you get a discharge now?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is agreed that Mr. Charlebois shall accept this sum in full of all claims.

Ottawa Public Buildings—

Electric lighting, &c..... $21,879 96

Mr. FOSTER. What is the explanation?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is required to pay the balance due in connection with the installation of the electric light in the public buildings of Ottawa. The items are as follows:—For electric wiring, wiring old gas fixtures and the ceiling of the House of Commons, $18,584.59, out of which we have paid $10,000, leaving a balance of $8,584.59; material supplied, not included in contract of Ahearn & Soper, $4,487.25; electroliers, &c., $2,532; switch-boards, marble, $1,713; reflectors for lighting ceiling of House of Commons, $480; marble switch-board for ditto, $253.12; luxfer prisms for ditto, $3,668; shades and holders, $960.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the total amount paid to Ahearn & Soper for the wiring of the buildings? What is the total amount for the lamp fixtures?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Thirty-two thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven dollars and ninety-six cents, less $3,668 for the luxfer prisms.

Mr. FOSTER. Just for the wiring?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, but it includes not only the electric lights, but the wiring for gas fixtures, marble switchboard, shades, lamps, &c., and the Ottawa post office also is included.

Mr. FIELDING.

Mr. BERGERON. Were tenders invited?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. These are patented, and only one party can supply them.

Mr. FOSTER. We are paying so much per lamp, whether used or not. Have there been any changes made?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No. My hon. colleague thought it was better to have a flat rate than a metre rate.

Mr. FOSTER. What is a flat rate?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. A fixed rate.

Mr. HAGGART. What was the rate per light per night?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was $2.25 per light up to 3,000, and for each additional light $2 per light of 16-candle power. There are 960 lamps, but only of 10-candle power, so that they do not pay the full price.

Mr. FOSTER. We pay for those at the rate of $2.25 per night for 16-candle power?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes; 600 lights of 16-candle power.

Mr. FOSTER. For every month in the year?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In the making of the contract, of course, that was an element taken into consideration.

Mr. FOSTER. That appears to be a tremendous price.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. After the discussion the other night, I inquired into the matter. Many of our towns pay much higher prices. One or two cases were cited, in which it was alleged the lights were charged at a lower rate, but these are entirely exceptional. The regular Ottawa rate is $6.25 per light of 16-candle power, and that applies to stores, which do not use the lights continuously.

Mr. FOSTER. I asked my hon. friend then for a calculation as to the comparative cost of lights upon which the Government must have based their calculations. The department would not have consented to the rates without some basis.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have been furnished with a memorandum, but cannot put my hands on it just now.

Mr. FOSTER. That should be furnished to the House. It seems a large amount, especially when we use but a small proportion of the lights all the year round. In the working departments the night-work is really nothing. There may be one or two rooms in which you have lights for working purposes, but the rule is in summer and winter very little night-work is done. Yet we are paying $2 and $2.25 for every light put in. Then, take the other point. You can go into those rooms, and you will find that they are lavishly furnished with lamps, and, taking all those things into consideration, it strikes me that we are paying a large amount. I do not want to find fault with anything reasonable, but at the same time we ought to try and regulate our lights here as we should in our own house.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I did not understand that I was to submit a return to the House, but simply to give the information, and I have a statement, but cannot just now find it. The total number of electric lights now in use in the Parliament Buildings, in the East and West Blocks, the Langevin Block, the city post office, the Supreme Court and in the offices over the bank of Ottawa is 5,716. In the Parliament Buildings there are 2,186 16-candle-power lamps, equal to 2,786 16-candle power lamps. The general length of a session of Parliament is 90 days, and the current used in preparing for a session during the balance of the year is estimated at 15 days, or a total of 105 days. 2,786 lamps for 185 days makes 292,530 lamp days, which, burning an average of seven hours a day, would make 2,047,710 hours. Now, the departmental buildings, including the Langevin Block, the city post office, the Supreme Court and the Ottawa bank building, have 2,914 16-candle power lamps. This multiplied by 365 equals 1,063,610 lamp days. Taking these at an average of 1½ hours per day would equal 1,595,415 lamp hours. At the metre rate of 1 cent per hour, less 40 per cent, for a total of 3,643,125 lamp hours, would mean $21,858.75. That is the architect's estimate of what it would cost by the metre system.

Mr. WALLACE. How many days does he count for the departmental lamps?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He estimates that they would burn an hour and a half on the average for every day in the year. It is estimated that gas by the metre system would cost also $21,858.75. The electric light under contract is estimated at $2.25 per light for 3,000 lights, making $6,750, and $2 per light for 2,700 lights, $5,400, a total estimated cost for the electric light system of $12,150, against $21,858.75, which is the estimated cost of gas or electric light by the metre system.

Mr. FOSTER. Who pays for the lamps?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We purchase the lamps and pay for repairs. Of course, we have to bear that.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What does the hon. gentleman estimate as the ordinary length of the session?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Ninety days is the figure here.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That shows that the statement is absolutely unreliable.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. But it shows that it is a very conservative estimate—this session we should burn much more than is here set down.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). We have been here a good deal over four months.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden) must not do it again.

Mr. BERGERON. Are you going to do away with gas altogether?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It has been done away with gradually. I am informed that there is now no gas burned for light.

Mr. WALLACE. What is it used for?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For heating.

Ottawa Military Buildings—

New store ..... $25,000

Mr. CLARKE. I desire to ask the hon. Minister of Militia again with respect to the proposed addition to the Toronto drill-shed. I understand that a deputation was down to interview the Minister last week, and I would like to know what the intention of the Government is with regard to the matter.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). The mayor of Toronto was here to see me about a different matter, but this, perhaps, was incidentally mentioned. I did not understand that he came to press that question particularly. In the original plan of a drill-shed at Toronto, certain additions to the building as it now exists were to be made. But this involved considerable expenditure, and we have not been able to take it up yet. It will be taken up at a future time.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As to this vote, I may explain that, as will be recollected by hon. gentleman, there is a building which was used for military stores, but under the arrangement made some years ago with Mr. Booth, of the Canada Atlantic Railway, it was provided that when he took possession of the property he should have the option of giving up the building or of paying the Government $10,000, and taking the building. I understand that he has intimated that he will pay the $10,000 and keep the building. So the Militia Department will need a new store building, and this is to provide for it.

Mr. FOSTER. Where is it to be placed?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Probably in rear of the drill-shed on Cartier Square.

Mr. SPROULE. What will be the cost of it?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think that the $10,000, together with this vote, will construct the building.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it to be constructed by tender?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES. Is the little park between the old building and Sparks street to be handed over to the railway company?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not speak definitely, but I think that is part of the property that passes to Mr. Booth.

Ottawa Astronomical Observatory..... $16,000

Mr. CLARKE. It has been said that it was the intention of the Government to remove most of the officers of the meteorological department in Toronto. I desired to know if any of the officers at present stationed in Toronto in connection with the geological branch, are to be removed to Ottawa.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, I think not. This is a vote for the Department of the Interior. I do not think it touches the meteorological service at all.

Mr. FOSTER. What is it for?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. An astronomical observatory.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will let that stand until the Minister of the Interior is present.

To complete reconstruction of portion of Western Departmental Block, destroyed by fire on the 11th February, 1897 ..... $12,000

Mr. FOSTER. How much has that cost now?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The total expenditure up to the 7th of March, 1897, at which date this memorandum was prepared, was $183,738.38, to which will be added the present appropriation.

Public Buildings, Nova Scotia—
Halifax, new public building..... $25,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There has been no public building, except a drillshed, erected in Halifax for Dominion purposes since confederation. The public offices are still so far as possible in a building which was erected before the union. The consequence is that as the business has expanded a number of places all over the city have been rented. The proposal is to erect a new building adapted for the service, and we take this vote to start with. The building will correspond with what is usual in a city of the size of Halifax.

Mr. BORDEN (King's).

Mr. FOSTER. Has the hon. gentleman not made an estimate of what it is proposed to do with this money?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is proposed to buy a site with this vote. We cannot go beyond that, because there is no more than money enough to buy a site. From my information, we cannot more than get in the city of Halifax any land suitable for such a building for this sum. Indeed, for a property which was offered and which was under consideration of the late Government, the owners asked nearly the whole sum. I do not mean by that to say that we have agreed to purchase that property, but land in a favourable position in the city of Halifax, and suitable for a public building, is somewhat expensive. At present, as I say, there are several offices scattered all over the city of Halifax. The customs-house and the post office are both in one building, whereas in most large cities they are in separate buildings. The marine offices are partly in the northern part of the city, the savings bank had to move out for want of room. The customs department examining warehouse is in another part of the city—in fact, we have scattered all over the city quite a number of places.

Mr. FOSTER. What do you propose to do with that building?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. One of these buildings will become the post office and the other the customs, though each one may contain another branch. The idea is to concentrate the Dominion business in two structures, that is, the old one and a new one. A site was offered to the late Government concerning which I have had some information. I know it was before the late Government, for a letter written by one of the ex-Ministers has been submitted to me. That property is still offered to us.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That is the old city market property?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This item of $25,000 will not do very much in the way of affording accommodation, I suppose it is only intended for to purchase a site?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is only about enough to buy a site. The building will be a considerable one. Before going on with it, I think we ought to come to Parliament and ask for a further vote.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman understands what the necessities are at present. The Board of Trade have taken the matter up and have made representations which I had the honour of bringing to the attention of the Minister of Public Works some time ago, and he said the matter was then under consideration. I suppose this is the result of the consideration which he was at that time giving. As a matter of fact, the city of Halifax, so far as post office accommodation is concerned, is not as well off as any ordinary country town in the province of Nova Scotia. The Marine and Fisheries offices in that building are very insufficient; in fact, the circumstances under which public business is carried on in Halifax make it absolutely necessary that the Government should take active steps if they desire to give the public anything like adequate accommodation. I am somewhat surprised that a sufficient sum is not being provided, at least, to commence a building during the present year, because the necessities are very urgent.

Mr. RUSSELL. I am glad to express my concurrence in the views that my colleague has put before the House. The Government have been made aware of the extreme necessity of the case. Perhaps I do not feel as exigent about it as my hon. and learned friend does, the city having survived so many years without any step at all being taken in this direction. However, I think we may now congratulate ourselves at what is being done.

Halifax, quarantine station on Lawlor's Island ..... $12,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is for boring an artesian well for supplying fresh water, and for general repairs, renewals and improvements to the quarantine buildings. At present the water is taken down to the quarantine on Lawlor's Island by boat, it has to be carried over in tanks.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Whenever there is any number of people at the place, there is not enough water. There is enough water for the caretaker, but not for the others.

Mr. FOSTER. What leads you to suppose that you will get it with an artesian well?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They have got it in other places in the neighbourhood in the same way.

Springhill public building..... $500

Mr. FOSTER. What is this for?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Springhill is one of the largest towns in the province of Nova Scotia. It has 6,000 people, with a very considerable business, and I do not think there could be any serious question about the justification for the erection of a public building there.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not exceeding $20,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Will it be let by contract?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It will be let by contract.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the building for?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For the purposes of the Dominion—post office, customs-house, &c.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the revenue?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The post office revenue is $2,561, and the customs revenue, $2,752.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the accommodation there now?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no accommodation at all. There is no post office building. The postmaster has an allowance of $120 a year for rental.

Mr. FOSTER. Is the post office a commodious place?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is in the postmaster's private house, I presume. Usually, the man who holds the office has an allowance and furnishes the building himself.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it simply a dwelling house?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I could not say, positively. Although I have been in the place frequently, I do not recall it.

Mr. FOSTER. We cannot, by any chance, judge as to how you are going to expend that money, unless we have some information. You are now renting a place which serves the purpose of the post office, for $120 a year. If the accommodation is reasonably good, I think that a revenue of $2,600 from the post office is not sufficient to warrant the erection of a public building. The customs revenue is only $2,000, and that is still less of an argument why you should go to this expense. Why should you put down $20,000 in a building, and then fit it up?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, that includes land, fitting up and everything.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, suppose this $20,000 includes everything; you must have a caretaker, and there will be repairs and everything of that kind, and it will cost you certainly $1,200, year in and year out. I venture to say you are getting all your accommodation there now for less than $300, and I dare say the people are getting their letters in a businesslike kind of way. Have we the money to spare to put up a $20,000 building under circumstances like that? Everybody knows that you can get commodious premises, stores, halls, and other places, rented there by the postmaster. The next thing, if you put up this building, will be that the postmaster will want a larger salary, and you will have to squeeze it out.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. You set such a bad example.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, a bad example; but of all the thunderers against such things, the hon. Postmaster General was the most thunderous thunderer. Now he sits there, and he cannot get up and say to this committee that the accommodations there are not fairly commensurate with the wants of the place. Why fix this amount of money in a public building for a post office with a small revenue like this? It has been done, and it will be done again, I suppose; but is it not time that we should stop it, especially in a $60,000,000 year?

Mr. SPROULE. I have always considered that it was the best policy, if the Post Office Department could rent a building for a reasonable figure, to rent it, instead of erecting a building. It costs very much less, and it does not require a caretaker or entail other expenses upon the country.

Digby post office, custom-house, &c. . . . . $ 5,000

Mr. FOSTER. Is that a new building?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Digby is the shire town, which was recently destroyed by fire, and the main buildings on the principal street were destroyed, including the post office. This is a place of considerable importance, where a large business is done, and it is a place to which a large number of people go during the tourist season. It is rather a show place, and that is one item that we should take into consideration.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the revenue?

Mr. COPP. The revenue of the post office is $3,081.78, and of the customs-house, $3,706.39.

Mr. McALISTER. What is the population?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. According to the census of 1891, it is over 3,000.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the estimated cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It will be the same amount as that stated for Springhill—not exceeding $20,000. It ought to be a shade less.

Mr. FOSTER. That is for 3,000 of a population?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In both of these cases, if the sites can be obtained at moderate prices, the buildings should not exceed $18,000 each.

Mr. SPROULE. Why should you put up a post office costing $20,000 in a town with 3,000 population, and refuse year after year to build a post office in Owen Sound, one of the live towns of Ontario, with a population of about 10,000?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. While Owen Sound is a proper place in which to erect a building of this kind, there is a good deal of public expenditure going on there in connection with the harbour, so that the

Mr. FOSTER.

Government can attend to the wants of other districts.

Mr. FOSTER. I ask the Postmaster General, does he approve of putting up a $20,000 building in a village less than 3,000 people? My hon. friend knows that if the Public Works Department in cold blood say that it will take $18,000, when they get their enthusiasm excited, and all the little extras put in, such as travelling expenses, the engineer and clerk of works, it is more probable that both of these buildings will cost nearer $25,000 than $18,000. I know the Public Works Department of old. It is a department which will spend money just as fast as you give it to it, and it will spend it more lavishly than its estimates indicate. If you put up these expensive buildings in all these little towns in the maritime provinces, you will have to do the same in the other provinces. You are doing what we tried not to do, and what in the latter part of our regime we did not do to a large extent. I am not going to say that this is contrary to Liberal professions, but it is contrary to a businesslike administration of the finances.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The trouble is the bad example you set.

Mr. FOSTER. Are you going to the devil because somebody else started to go there?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think I can give my hon. friend the assurance that neither of these buildings will exceed $18,000. I do not think they ought to.

Mr. FOSTER. Neither of these buildings should go above $12,000. A private party can easily put up as good a dwelling as you or I ought to have for $10,000 or $12,000—as good a building as Digby and Springhill ought to have. All you want is a place for a post office and a custom-house; but you cannot get it into the head of a Public Works engineer that he can put up any kind of a building for less than $20,000 or $25,000. Mr. Coste was the same, Mr. Fuller was the same, and those now in the department are the same. You are going all through this country to lock up the people's money in expensive buildings, which will be an increased expense every year.

Mr. COPP. The town of Annapolis is not by any means equal in size to Digby. Its revenue at the present time is $2,851, but in 1889 it had a public building at a cost of $24,000. Lunenburg has a revenue of $2,929, and a public building that cost $30,000. Lachine, in Quebec, with a revenue of only $1,548, has a post office that cost $17,000. Richmond, N.S., with a revenue of $2,653, has a building that cost over $20,000. Rimouski, which has a revenue of only $2,117, has a building that cost $21,000. Rivière du Loup, with $1,637 of revenue, has a building that cost $23,000. Almonte, in Ontario, with a revenue of $4,643, has a public building that cost $28,000. Digby, which has a larger population and a very much larger revenue than Annapolis, should not have a smaller building. Last year we had statistics to show that over 50,000 people passed through the town of Digby. The town of Digby is one of the most flourishing in Nova Scotia. To show how its business has increased in the last few years, I will give you the returns of the wharfage paid on Digby pier: in 1891, $764; in 1892, $830; in 1893, $746; in 1895, $743; in 1896, $1,516; in 1897, $2,195; in 1898, $2,116; in 1899, $2,368, more than three times as much as it was in 1895. The population has increased proportionately. Therefore, I think that a building in Digby should be one that would meet the requirements of the town, and I do not see why it should cost less than a building at Annapolis, Lunenburg, Richmond, or any of the other shire towns in Nova Scotia.

Mr. FOSTER. That is the misery of it. It is not what is adequate to the needs of the town, but it is that a member should have just as much as any other members have got. That is the sum and substance of the whole thing. It gratifies the political pride of a member to be able to say to his friends and supporters; I got you as good a thing—no, not as good a thing, because that is the last idea which enters into his mind—but as costly a thing as Annapolis has got; and if he could get a bell or a tower put on it, which would make it cost $1,000 more, he would be a still better man than the member for Annapolis. The last thing he thinks of is what are the post office and customs wants of his town. Take Digby, for instance, which is a lively place and whose people are very fine people; will any one pretend that it requires a public building costing over $12,000 to accommodate its post office and customs work. But of course with a building of that modest cost, it could not hold up its head alongside Annapolis, which has a $20,000 building, and would be still more cast in the shade by Lunenburg, which has a $23,000 building.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If I were to follow the hon. gentleman's advice we would be able to distinguish the shire towns of Conservative counties from those of Liberal counties by the magnificent public buildings in the one and the modest public buildings in the other.

Mr. FOSTER. You would demonstrate your good sense, if you could.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If the hon. gentleman had taken that view a little while ago, and not set the bad example he did, we might have been spared a good deal of this discussion. But, as Artemus Ward says, there is a good deal of human nature in man, and if the hon. member for Digby wishes to have his shire town adorned by a fine public building, that is a very human sentiment, which, no doubt, exists also in the minds of its inhabitants. I do not say that we ought to be lavish in our expenditure but we ought to try and put up the proper kind of building on the expenditure of a moderate sum of money. We know the tendency of engineers is to spend money liberally and do their work handsomely, and we have to prevent that tendency having its full fling, and have buildings put up which are respectable, and not extravagant.

Mr. SPROULE. If the hon. Minister is going to build post offices in every town or village of 3,000 inhabitants he can go through Ontario and build them by the dozen, for he will find lots of towns there of that size and larger which have no public buildings. I understood that last year the Government intimated that in future they would not put up any public buildings in places where they could rent suitable buildings at a moderate sum, except in towns of a reasonable size. But they seem to have started off again on the same principle as they did last session. If this principle is to be acted on, it seems strange that a town like Owen Sound, with 9,000 or 10,000 of a population, is not also given a post office. The hon. Postmaster General said the Government were spending money there improving the harbour and that was quite sufficient, but in 1896, when the hon. Postmaster General was there helping to return the Minister of Customs to Parliament, he went around the town looking at some sites, and said they were admirable places there on which to erect a post office, and that Owen Sound ought to have a post office.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I never said anything of the kind.

Mr. SPROULE. He also looked around to find a place suitable for a dry dock. Now, because of the moderate expenditure going on in the harbour, the Government will do nothing in the way of erecting a public building. But why did the hon. Minister lead the people there to believe that if his party were successful, they would immediately build a post office. In the maritime provinces the Government is putting up public buildings in every little town with a population of $3,000.

To complete reconstruction of portion of Western Departmental Block, destroyed by fire 11th February, 1897..... $12,000

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). In explanation of this item I wish to read a report from the chief astronomer of the department:

With reference to the Ottawa Astronomical Observatory, I have the honour to report that the principal use of the present establishment on Cliff Street is the termination of time and longitude. It is the basal point from which have been determined a number of telegraphic longitudes, including a series extending across the continent to Victoria.

These telegraphically-determined longitudes have been of use in many ways : as affording a series of points upon which the Dominion Land survey in the railway belt of British Columbia have been based ; in connection with the Dominion Land surveys in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories ; in connection with the international boundary, as in the case of the determination, in 1896, of the longitude of Port Stanley, on the north shore of Lake Erie ; the inter-provincial boundary between Ontario and Manitoba ; and in connection with distant exploration, such as Mr. Ogilvie's survey of part of the shore of Hudson's Bay in 1890.

For all such astronomical determinations, Ottawa, as the capital of the Dominion, forms the natural centre, and it is anticipated that it will be found advisable in future to extend the system of longitude into eastern Canada. Such determinations should form an essential part of any scheme of geodetic survey.

The observatory is used also for the determination of local time, the rating of chronometers (for use in exploratory surveys, &c.), the practising of observers, the determination of their permanent equations, &c.

Besides the transit instruments, with the auxiliary apparatus used in the above work, the observatory is furnished with a reflecting telescope for the observation of star occultations, &c., and as an exhibition instrument for the use of visitors to the observatory.

Unfortunately, the situation of the building is very poor ; there is a clear view to the north and south only ; to the east the view is cut off by the adjacent stable, which is further most objectionable from the danger of fire and in other ways. To the south, buildings and the smoke of the city destroy the view of the most interesting portion of the sky, as the observatory stands on ground much lower than Vittoria and Wellington streets. The lot, moreover, is so narrow that there is not space alongside for the erection of a room which can be warmed in winter—very necessary accommodation, both for the observer preparing for his observations and for keeping the electric batteries by which the recording apparatus is worked. Artificial heat cannot be used in the observing-room itself. Hence the observatory cannot be used in winter at all, or for observations of precision.

On these grounds I recommend the erection of a new building upon a better site. At the same time, I would point out the desirability of improving the equipment of the observatory, so that, besides geographical work (i.e., longitude, &c., spoken of above), something could be done in the direction of the modern investigations in physical astronomy. The special instrument for this purpose, which would have to be procured, is an equatorially-mounted telescope, driven by clock-work, and fitted with attachments for micrometric measurements and for spectroscopic, photometric and photographic work.

The usefulness of such an instrument, from a public stand-point, may be briefly indicated as follows :—

1. The scientific value of the observations which would be made with the instrument ; also, the collateral assistance which would be afforded to investigators in the many branches of science which are closely related to astrophysics.

2. Stimulus to science throughout the Dominion. The development of our resources calls for application of science. The advancement of even "pure" science, often so-called in contradistinction to "practical" science, means public benefit in many directions, benefit which may be quite unforeseen by the scientific investigators, but which the history of industrial development shows is sure to follow. A Government cannot well afford to leave its interests in this direction wholly in the hands of foreign investigators, for each country has its own special problems to solve. Hence the advancement of science is a matter of national concern, worthy of careful consideration on the part of the Government.

Now astronomy is a science which so touches other sciences that an increase of public interest in it forwards the others, and, again, there is nothing else so capable of arousing public interest as the exhibition, through a good telescope, of the wonders of the skies. A national observatory at the capital will assist to this end in a paramount degree, for Ottawa is a centre to which come the leaders of public opinion from all parts of Canada, so that the interest aroused will permeate all parts of the Dominion.

Astronomical investigation has been hitherto greatly neglected in Canada, although its importance is recognized everywhere else, especially in the United States, where many princely endowments of observatories have been made by wealthy men. To illustrate the attention paid to astronomy, I append a list of 85 observatories in the United States, and a list of 252 observatories elsewhere. These lists, I believe, are tolerably complete. The United States list shows the results of the widespread popular interest in this branch of investigation.

The following estimates of costs have been prepared after consulting the catalogues of many British instrument makers, and with the advantage of personal consultation with Mr. Brashear, one of the foremost instrument makers of the United States, who spent a day in Ottawa last summer. The bases of the calculations is a telescope, object glass 10 inches in diameter, which appears to be a suitable size for the objects aimed at.

The cost of the telescope, with mounting, all attachments, is.....	$ 5,360
Clocks and minor instruments, and setting-up the instruments, say.....	640
	$6,000
Instruments .....	$ 6,000
Building .....	16,000
	$22,000

The $6,000 for instruments is not included with the $16,000, because it will not be required until the building is finished. I have discussed this matter with Mr. King, who is a very efficient officer, and this is in accordance with his recommendation. I might say to the committee that the competency of our officers has already been tested and they have been found to be extremely competent, even with the chances they have had. Mr. Ogilvie was connected with this department, as also is Mr. Klotz, who is a very competent man. In connection with the survey of the Alaskan boundary, the skill of our officers was very closely tested by the survey of the 141st meridian under Mr. Ogilvie. And it is a source of satisfaction to know that their work stood the test of an examination alongside the work of the officers from the United States who have given special attention to this subject. I think this should stimulate us to furnish them with proper appliances to carry on their work. It has been proposed to erect this building on that portion of the grounds behind the Western Block, it is the highest portion of the grounds and from it the best view can be obtained. That has not been finally decided, but is the best conclusion we have been able to come to thus far. Mr. King says :

In the estimate for the building, provision has been made for office accommodation, besides the tower and pier for the large telescope, and the house for the transit instruments. The material is brick. Stone would probably increase the cost.

The cost of the site has not been included in the estimate.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand the hon. gentleman to say that the diameter of the lens would be ten inches. That would be very small, would it not ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I understand it would be a very fair telescope.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman spoke of an observatory here. Where is it ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I would like my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) to go and see it. One might be here a long time without knowing anything about it. Taking it altogether, I think it is probably the most disgraceful thing in connection with the public affairs of Canada. It is a little building down near the Supreme Court. It is nothing but a packing box—a little bigger than that table. The instruments in it are fairly good and the work done is good, but the idea of having men undertake scientific work in such a place is simply laughable.

Mr. FOSTER. Has the idea ever been considered of combining the observatory with the museum building ? Would not that be a good idea ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. That has been considered. But there are objections. A tower must be constructed, and to make one sufficiently strong and heavy to avoid oscillation would add very considerably and disproportionately to the expense. Besides, the site suggested for the museum building is in Major's Hill park, and the trains coming in there would be likely to cause oscillation. The least oscillation of the ground utterly destroys the value of the setting of the clock work.

Mr. SPROULE. If an observatory is to be built, it ought to be a fairly good one, because being at the capital, a great many people will visit it. I must say that I think a ten-inch lens telescope would not be suitable. When attending the University of Michigan as a student, we used there an instrument with a 17 or 18-inch lens, if I recollect aright. I think the site spoken of is as good as could be had on these grounds. But I think it would be well even to go some distance from these grounds if a more suitable locality could be had. Without wishing to interfere with Toronto, I have always thought that the observatory ought to be here rather than there. This being the capital and Parliament meeting here, the work of the observatory could be made of use to more people throughout the country, than it can be if located in any other city.

Public Buildings—New Brunswick—
St. John quarantine station, improvements ..... $25,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is this vote for ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). This is in consequence of the fact that passenger travel in the winter time through the port of St. John is growing. At present if a vessel arrives with the contagious disease aboard, there is no accommodation for the passengers in quarantine.

Mr. FOSTER. Where is it proposed to build this station ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. On the old site, on the Island.

Mr. FOSTER. Have you a supply of water there ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Part of this money is to go for a supply of water by boring artesian wells, the same as was done for one of the asylums in the neighbourhood of St. John.

Victoriaville, public building ..... $8,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is this ?

The PRIME MINISTER. This is in the county of Arthabaska. The town itself is not very large, but it is growing. It has a population of between 2,500 or 3,000. It has two banks, the Molson's Bank and the Quebec Bank. It has large saw mills, a furniture factory and a tobacco factory. It is an outport of the port of Richmond. The post office revenue is about $1,900, and the customs about $700. The inland revenue is $25,000. At the present time the post office is in the city hall and pays a rental of $200. The rental paid for inland revenue is $60, and $40 is paid for the custody of arms. This new building will be a very modest one, costing only $8,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The outside estimate is $10,000 ; that will take in the fittings.

Mr. FOSTER. I knew we would pick up such items as this at every other step. The population is 2,500, a quiet kind of people, and you got $696 from the customs, and you get $1,900 from the post office ; yet you are going to put up a public building in Victoriaville, simply because you happen to have a tobacco factory there, and it gives you some inland revenue. But the tobacco factory does not make any more people, the people are 2,500 in number. The post office revenue is small. Now, you are going to spend $10,000 or $12,000.

The PRIME MINISTER. Not more than $10,000.

Mr. FOSTER. A little later on there is the Buckingham public building. I fancy you will find before we get through that there never has been an estimate brought down to the House which has had so many of these big buildings in little places, against which the Hon. David Mills, when he was in this House, and all the Opposition, including my hon. friend, after days and nights of discussion, moved a resolution which they founded on reasons that could not be jarred, that you should have a principle in these matters, and the principle would cut out just such as these. Sir John A. Macdonald took that principle, and from that time out I can say with reference to the last Administration, that they simply finished up the buildings that they already had commenced, and with one or two exceptions went no further in that line. I fully agreed with the idea, and did my best to keep within that principle, finishing those that we had already started. We did try to keep out of the business of putting up these large buildings in little places. Now that is all smashed to pieces, and the Hon. David Mills is all knocked into a cocked hat, so to speak, so far as his traditions were concerned. But that is nothing. It is an indefensible thing to take the taxes of the people for that kind of object.

The PRIME MINISTER. I quite agree with the hon. gentleman that nothing can be more absurd than to put up big buildings in small towns, big stone buildings with high towers, such as we have seen in small towns like Victoriaville. Certainly, I would not consent to putting up such a building in those localities. But I think a modest building, not to exceed $8,000 in cost for a town like Victoriaville is the least we can do. We pay $300 to-day for rent, so that there will be no charge at all upon the revenue.

Mr. SPROULE. Will there not have to be a caretaker?

The PRIME MINISTER. I think we can manage it without a caretaker, I think the postmaster can take care of it himself.

Mr. SPROULE. At Collingwood, at Orangeville, and in many other places, there are moderate public buildings, but every one of them has to have a caretaker, who is paid about $400 a year to look after the building, which is more than the rental.

Mr. FOSTER. What about the Buckingham business?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The population of Buckingham in 1891 was 2,339. The postal revenue for the last year was $20,775.26; money orders issued, $15,812. There is no custom-house there, the building will be practically the same as the Victoriaville one, not exceeding $8,000.

Mr. FOSTER.

Mr. FOSTER. I want to know, in reference to these buildings at Digby, Springhill, Victoriaville and Buckingham, if you have to buy the land in all these cases?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In most cases we have, although the municipality of Buckingham has offered a site free. The other sites will have to be purchased.

Mr. FOSTER. Is land very valuable in Victoriaville?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think it is very valuable in any of these places.

Mr. FOSTER. They have not public spirit enough to offer you a site?

Removing old and placing new wires in Parliament Building and Library..... $7,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is that for?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For removing the old electric wire and apparatus that were put in when these buildings were first lighted with electricity, and replacing the same with new wire.

Mr. FOSTER. Are the electric lights in there now?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There are electric lights on the old wire, but the underwriters have condemned the wire, and it is necessary to remove it.

Mr. FOSTER. I thought the Parliament Building was wired by Ahearn & Soper.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Only a portion of it.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it proposed to do that work by contract?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no arrangement yet made. We will take tenders for it.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood, when the discussion was going on regarding the lighting of this building, that Ahearn & Soper had put in all these lights; and, if they put in the lights, they must have put in the wires as well. It cost something between $2 and $3 a light.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This was not included. They did not put in any wires in this portion.

Mr. SPROULE. They put in lamps, which cost something like $18,000, and now there is $7,000 more required for wires.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That includes the other buildings as well.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, they will be put in by contract?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Ottawa Departmental Buildings—
East and West Blocks, concrete floors, cleaning and painting passages, linoleum, &c..... $7,500

Mr. FOSTER. How do you get that linoleum ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The last lot was imported from England by the department.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the rule in reference to the painting ? Do you ask for tenders for it ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is done by the men employed by the department.

Mr. FOSTER. How many men are there down in that house below the bank ? It seems to me that most of Ottawa lives there.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There are 125 workmen in the shops. Besides there are 84 in the elevator, water and gas service, &c.

Mr. FOSTER. You have 125 men in that workshop, at a cost of how much per year ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have the rates of wages paid to the men. The superintendent gets $3 a day ; foreman carpenter, $2.50; carpenters, $2; foreman painter, $2.50 ; painters, $2 ; labouring men, $1.25 a day ; masons, $2.50 per day ; one roofer at $2 a day, one at $1.75 per day ; carters,
$2.25 per day.

Mr. FOSTER. It is a great pity that we have not a little time to go into that. One hundred and twenty-five workmen are kept in and around these buildings, and, besides, there is scarcely anything that you do on the buildings that you do not have to get another vote of money for.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Is the number any greater than it used to be ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am informed that it is not.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes. How many hours a day do these men work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, there is no increase. The men work nine hours.

St. Catharines drill hall..... $10,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is this for ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DE-FENCE (Mr. Borden). The old drill hall was blown down, or destroyed, and it is necessary to have this.

Mr. FOSTER. When was it blown down ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DE-FENCE. About a year ago. It was injured so that it could not be used, and we have had to rent another building for the artillery there.

Mr. FOSTER. What rent do you pay ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DE-
FENCE. Between $250 and $300.

Mr. FOSTER. What are you going to spend ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DE-FENCE. I think this is the full amount required.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, this is not the full amount. I think it will cost $20,000.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the rule about drill-sheds ? Has the department any rule, or is it just political influence ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Political influence has nothing to do with it.

Mr. FOSTER. Not with the Minister of Militia. No one would suspect him ; but what is the rule ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The rule is the requirements of the militia at the particular point where the drill hall is to be constructed.

Mr. FOSTER. For instance, at this place ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. There is artillery and infantry, and the plan of this structure is made in accordance with the requirements of the force.

Mr. FOSTER. How much infantry and how much artillery ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. There is a battalion of infantry—about 340 men. I do not know how many artillery.

Mr. FOSTER. And wherever you have artillery and infantry in these numbers, you build a drill hall.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. In some cases there is cavalry as well, and also stores and sometimes horses.

Toronto Post Office—
Improvements, including automobile cars ..... $12,500

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is for improvement in the heating apparatus, plumbers' work, repairs to roof, cleaning and repairing interior of the building, $7,000 is for general improvements, and $5,000 for the purchase of automobile cars.

Mr. FOSTER. How many cars will that purchase ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think two.

Rideau Hall—
Additional wing to Government House, and furnishing ..... $14,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is to build an additional wing 52 x 38 feet, two stories and basement, built of brick on a stone foundation. It will add 19 rooms to Government House with a toilet and bathroom to each floor. It is represented by the occupants of Rideau Hall that it is still very defective in accommodation, and the Minister of Public Works became satisfied that some increase was necessary.

Mr. FOSTER. Was not the general impression that the household of Lord and Lady Aberdeen was the largest ever here? It does seem to me that 19 more rooms, in addition to the large menage there already, is a considerable addition.

The PRIME MINISTER. I may say that the complaint is that there are no rooms for visitors, and I think the expenditure is really necessary.

Mr. FOSTER. Where is this wing to be built?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. On the eastern side of the house, between the conservatory and the chapel. This covers the total cost.

Mr. WILSON. It seems to me that it would have been an advantage if the house had been destroyed. I certainly would be opposed to voting any more additions to that old house. I think it is big enough and ugly enough as it is.

Public Buildings, Ottawa—

Western Departmental Block—New furniture to replace that destroyed by fire, electric wiring, &c..... $5,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. A considerable portion of this is for material for draughting tables used by the officials. These are made in the department. The remainder is for furniture of a general character, which is obtained in the usual way.

Mr. FOSTER. How much is for draughting tables?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is $719 of this required for material for draughting tables for the Marine Department, together with cupboards, pigeon-holes, shelving, &c., for the storing of papers.

Mr. HAGGART. Then there is no vote for the men?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, no special vote, but the labour is charged against each of the works.

Mr. FOSTER. That is a most vicious system. It was practised before, but it ought to be changed. We should have a special vote for the work of the men. You should know how many you want and take a vote for them. I know the officials do not want that and the hon. Minister of Public Works would no doubt object to the proposal, but it is the only way we can keep any check on the expenditure. I hope the hon. Minister will change that system.

Mr. FIELDING.

Brockville drill hall..... $10,000

Mr. HAGGART. Is there not a drill hall in Brockville?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think not.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that in fulfilment of the understanding come to last election, when it was rumoured that the Minister promised, if his candidate was returned, to build a drill hall. We ought to be thankful that the Government are fulfilling one of their pledges.

Alexandria Reformatory—

Balance of award, including interest.. $1,233 05

Mr. BERGERON. Who gets that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Joseph Bourque, in connection with his contract.

Mr. BERGERON. How much does that reformatory cost the country?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $14,758.

Mr. BERGERON. How much was paid for the land?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $5,000.

Mr. HAGGART. You took a vote for the purpose of settling this claim last year?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There was none last year. There was a vote in the main Estimates, which is not sufficient, and this is in addition.

Mr. BERGERON. The reformatory will not be built there?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Kingston Royal Military College—

Additional building..... $8,000

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This is to build a hospital in connection with the college. At present the only hospital is in the basement, which is not suitable, and the boys have to be sent to the general hospital. There are $3,000 for that and $5,000 for a gymnasium.

Mr. HAGGART. It is not a couple of years since you got a vote for the hospital.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. We did not spend it.

Mr. SPROULE. This is another illustration of how these buildings count up, when we put up our own public buildings. Every year something new is required. Last year there was a granolithic pavement laid down inside the yard, where it was not wanted at all, and $600 was spent on it.

Public Buildings, Ottawa—

East Block, elevator ..... $3,000

Mr. BERGERON. Is it the intention to have an elevator in this house?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is not decided on yet, but there has been some talk about it.

Mr. CLARKE. When the main Estimates were up, the hon. member for East Toronto (Mr. Ross Robertson) asked if it was the intention of the Government to put an elevator in the Toronto custom-house. There is no public building, I am sure, in which it is more needed. There are many people visiting the building every day, and the stairs are very steep. It would be a great convenience to the public if an elevator could be put in.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We shall have to take it into consideration along with other matters. There is no vote for it.

Mr. CLARKE. I thought I heard the Minister say that an elevator had been put in the Eastern Block without an appropriation, and thought perhaps the same could be done in this case.

Public Buildings—Ontario—

London—Drill hall and armoury site.. $10,000

Mr. BERGERON. What is this?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). The city of London has a claim against the Government on account of sewerage put in, which serves the military depot there known as Wolseley barracks. The city's claim has not been adjusted. In that city we have an old drill-shed which is unfit to use without very considerable expenditure and the city object to its being used as a drill-shed, as it is in the residential portion of the city. It is proposed to adjust the differences between the Government and the city by transferring to the city the site and building we have there now, and they will provide the Government with a site and the Government will pay a certain amount of money toward it. These matters, it is proposed, are to be arranged on the basis of a settlement of the claim of the city against the Government. No definite arrangement has yet been arrived at. The mayor of the city has been here and some of my colleagues from Ontario, who are better acquainted with the matter than I am, particularly the Minister of Justice, heard the deputation along with myself, and we decided that this vote should be taken, with a view, if possible, to carrying out the compromise.

Mr. WILSON. How much is the total cost?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This is only to provide for the site?

Mr. HAGGART. The explanation of the Minister is that the Government have a site which is perfectly good, but objectionable so far as the city is concerned on account of it being in a residential portion. The city will furnish a site which will not be so valuable, and the Government will pay the difference in consideration of getting a less valuable site.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Haggart) probably did not hear me say that the city had a claim of $20,000 or so against the Government.

Mr. HAGGART. I understand that; but the Minister said that the city were going to furnish him a site and he was going to pay the difference between the site he gave and the site was given to him.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. With their claim—whether it is a just one or not, I do not say.

Mr. SPROULE. Have you any idea of what the building will cost?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I believe about $35,000.

Mr. FOSTER. What about the armoury?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It is all one building.

Public Buildings—Ontario—

Windsor drill hall ..... $6,000

Mr. FOSTER. How much is this to cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That will be the total cost.

Public Buildings—Ontario—

Sarnia public buildings ..... $10,000

Mr. FOSTER. What will this cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It will cost $25,000 exclusive of the site.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the population of Sarnia?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. According to the last census, 6,693.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the post office revenue?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The postal revenue is $11,015; customs, $123,857.

Mr. FOSTER. I think we might adjourn now.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is one item reserved—the automobiles for Toronto, which the Postmaster General will explain.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mullock). There is a total amount of $12,500. Owing to the growth of postal business in Toronto, we need additional accommodation. I have it in contemplation to try to obtain permission from the Grand Trunk Railway to provide an elevator system near the Union Station, so that we can obtain access to the cars at the latest moment. We have in contemplation also the rearrangement of the post office at Toronto. We propose also to test the automobile system by acquiring one or two automobiles, perhaps more, to be used in connection with the late delivery, and also in connection with the collection of mail matter, and perhaps taking the letter carriers to their several beats.

Mr. FOSTER. Will that enable you to do with fewer letter carriers?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It will facilitate the work, I have no doubt.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the other item?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. We have obtained possession of a large room for sortation, which is being fitted up.

Committee rose and reported progress.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. member for Victoria, B.C., (Mr. Prior) asked me to bring down certain papers in relation to the dry dock at Esquimalt, without formal motion. I now ask leave of the House to submit these papers, and make a motion to that effect.

Motion agreed to.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 1.35 a.m. (Wednesday).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, 9th August, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

PRAYERS.

THIRD READING.

Bill (No. 179) respecting the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal.—(Mr. Fielding.)

SUPPLY—CONDUCT OF TROOPS IN THE YUKON.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the House again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. HUGHES. I desire, in justice to some of the soldiers of the Yukon force who have been charged in a publication called the "Canada Militia Gazette," with misconduct, to contradict in the most emphatic manner the statement published broadcast throughout this country that there has been any serious misconduct on the part of the men of the field force. There are three men whose names have been placarded before the world as having been guilty of serious offences in the Yukon. They are private soldiers, but a private soldier's reputation is as dear to him as any other man's, and the officers are anxious that the facts should be made public. The facts are that soon after the troops reached the Yukon, three men committed slight offences, or offences that were not serious, for which they were properly punished, and they have led most exemplary lives for seven months, as I have the assurance of those who are in the best position to know. But on the 25th of June they find themselves placarded before the world in the manner I have described, and the aspersions cast upon the character of these men are reflected as being the general character of the whole field force. These men are far distant from civilization, and have no means of defending their character; and I take this opportunity to state that I think it absolutely and manifestly unfair that any publication should slander soldiers as these men have been slandered.

Mr. MULLOCK.

Motion agreed to, and the House resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

(In the Committee.)

Montreal Harbour—Improvements below St. Mary's current.....	$500,000
Montreal Harbour—Grain elevator and storage .....	250,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). I may inform the committee that we do not propose to proceed with this item of $250,000 for a grain elevator at Montreal: that is a matter which will be laid aside for the present. But we ask the committee to consent to the vote of $500,000 for improvements in the Montreal harbour below St. Mary's current.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the condition of this grant? Is it to be a subvention by the Government for some work in the Montreal harbour?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, it is a gift like any other work in the Public Works Department. We discussed the matter somewhat yesterday in connection with the Montreal Harbour Bill, so I cannot add very much information to what was then given. This vote is intended to build one additional pier below St. Mary's current, between the two piers already constructed by the Montreal Harbour Commissioners. The vote is deemed to be sufficient to construct the work.

Mr. BERGERON. Is this given to the city of Montreal or to the Harbour Commissioners?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is not given to the commissioners, but, like any other public work, it will be the property of the Dominion Government. But I think it will be necessary to make an arrangement between the Public Works Department and the Harbour Commission for having a common management, as I cannot conceive that there should be a dual management. This will be arranged between the hon. Minister of Public Works and the Harbour Commission. I understand that they are working quite harmoniously and that they are desirous that this appropriation shall be made. This will be an appropriation by the Government for a Dominion public work and will not be under the control of the Harbour Commissioners unless an arrangement be made between the hon. Minister of Public Works and the Harbour Commission.

Mr. BERGERON. Is this to be added to the $250,000 which remain of last year's vote of $750,000 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, because the $250,000 remain under the control of the Harbour Commission, while this will be an appropriation under the control of the Public Works Department. The $250,000 remain as a part of the commission's fund to be disposed of under the terms of the Act, and although both will be available for works below St. Mary's Current, the two items are entirely distinct.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I should like to say a word as to the wisdom of the course which the Government is pursuing. Montreal is a great port, and the city is a great commercial centre. No one outside of Montreal can probably have a better idea of Montreal's necessities in the way of trade and as to the best way of meeting them than the business men of Montreal. The policy adopted by the Government heretofore has been to have Montreal harbour under the consecutive and sole management of the Harbour Commission, a part of which body is appointed by the Government, and another part by various public interests in the city of Montreal. That policy has been in operation for a long series of years. The Government has authorized its issues of bonds, and these have been issued and have been made charges as far as the interest goes, on the revenues of the harbour. That is the way in which the arrangement has been carried on so far. In that way we have had a consecutive control; the Government has been relieved of the unending and unedifying spectacle of political pulling and hauling that will inevitably take place the moment the Government sticks its nose into the affairs of a great harbour like that of the city of Montreal. What reason was there why this Government should interfere to make a divided authority and a divided expenditure in reference to a great harbour like that of Montreal? On the face of it, is it business-like that you should have a double authority, one subject entirely to political influences and the other, certainly, appointed by and working in pursuance of the business interests of the city? The two influences are totally different. In the city of Montreal you have divergent interests, the particulars of which I shall not go into now, but this emphasizes what I say as to the political pressure that will be brought upon the Government. I take leave to say that I would rather trust the representatives of the commercial and business interests of Montreal than I would the hon. Minister of Public Works. The hon. Minister of Public Works is a creation of a party; he may be the creation of a faction; he is not a man, in the very nature of things, who is well versed in commercial matters, and especially in all those matters which appertain to the works necessary to adequately carry on the business of a great city like that of Montreal. That is not his business. He is the head of a political party; he is the head, to a certain extent, of a political department, and to that extent, his training, his surroundings and all those conditions and circumstances, fit him, in the least possible degree, to be an authority upon the progressive works that should be undertaken in Montreal in order to serve its business interests. Now, they say that Montreal has burdened itself nobly and well with the expense of carrying on that harbour and improving, not only the harbour, but the River St. Lawrence and that it has been inadequately aided by the Government. I have sympathy with a plea of that kind, I do not think you could find another case in the history of Canada where the business men of a city have gone so fairly and nobly to work to improve their transport facilities. I do not think you could instance a case in the Dominion of Canada at all equal to that of the city of Montreal. They have taken pride in their work; they have gone about it like business men and capitalists, as they are, and they have evinced a public spirit which is in striking contrast with a great many other portions of this Dominion that I might mention. Now, they make the plea that it is a great national highway, that Montreal is a great national port and that they should not be overburdened. I think their plea is good, but the Government can help them in a far better way than by sticking the hon. Minister of Public Works down there in the midst of their progressive improvements, of their transport facilities with his politics and party and everything like that, open to a thousand influences that business men are not open to, and swayed by a thousand influences that business men would be entirely impervious to. Make this commission as representative as it is necessary to be; make it such as to be in every way adequate to the circumstances of the case, then give it a subvention and let it apply that subvention to the harbour of Montreal, or relieve them of a portion of the burden which is exactly the same thing in order that their plea that the expenses of the harbour may not be made too large and thus interfere with the proper development of trade and so place their port at a disadvantage with other ports. That can be done without injecting piece work machinery like this into the improvement of that harbour, and I venture to say that the business men of Montreal are, in their hearts opposed, not to a grant of public money by this Dominion Parliament in aid of their harbour, but to the method in which it is given. They do not want to say too much about it, because, otherwise, they might not get the grant at all. They would rather have this $500,000 expended by the hon. Minister of Public Works, than not have their harbour benefited by it at all, but my view would be that the policy for this Government to pursue would be to keep itself out of that business, to keep itself out of that complication and to give the Harbour Commission the subvention it proposes here. Oh, but you say, the hon. Minister of Public Works represents the Dominion, and the Dominion has interests there. The business men of Montreal represent the Dominion and with adequate transportation and harbour facilities its trade ought to grow in relative proportion to that of the Dominion of Canada. The business men of Montreal are not merely local in their interests, but they are as cosmopolitan as you can get men in this country. But, you say, that you can get the great engineering force of the Department of Public Works. I would put those engineers aside entirely in preference to the engineering force which the commission can get whenever they want it. If they need expert advice they can get it a great deal better than they can by asking it from a set of routine officials who have to do with a certain kind of construction in the Dominion of Canada, and whose advice I would not take to be equal to the advice of experts upon that kind of engineering construction which is necessary to the development of a great harbour. These are my views expressed roughly; and I do deplore that the Government is going to interfere, by this piece-work machinery, with the development of a great harbour. Give it a subvention in aid if you think proper, but let us have one management, and that a business and not a political management.

Mr. SPROULE. The general consensus of opinion outside of this House, among those who have given any attention to the subject, is that since the present Minister of Public Works got control of the Public Works Department, there has been a conflict between the Harbour Commissioners and the Minister of Public Works and one of the members for the city of Montreal, and that the large expenditure which is being made in that harbour, part of which is proposed in this item, is more for the purpose of benefiting politicians than for the promotion of the best interests of the harbour of Montreal. Now, I have heard considerable about some interested politicians who invested money in property near where this expenditure is about to be made, and that it was expected to enhance the value of that property. This opinion is prevalent in the country, and if the Government cannot give some information to disabuse the public mind of that impression, this expenditure will be regarded as not made in the best interests of the shipping trade of the country, but rather in the interest of politicians.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). There is, or rather there was, some rumor to the effect mentioned by the hon. gentleman. We heard a good deal last fall, through the newspapers and on the street, about certain interested politicians having purchased property, with a view to unloading it on the Harbour Commission or on the Government through the Minister of Public Works. But the hon. gentleman should have said also that we have had something more than rumours. He should have said that we have had the open statement made by the Minister of Public Works that he would not have that property at all. He should have stated that fact as well as the rumour.

Mr. SPROULE. I have not heard it.

The PRIME MINISTER. I am sorry the hon. gentleman has not heard it, he ought to have been informed of it. He should not take the rumours of the street to blacken the character of a man who has stated that these rumours are not true. He should inform himself as to the fact instead of making insinuations against an absent man when there is not a shadow of truth in those insinuations. We had also a statement of the hon. member for York (Mr. Foster) a moment ago that there has been interference by politicians in this matter. The position we take at the present time is simply this. The harbour of Montreal for many years has taken a position which is a great credit to itself. The business men of Montreal have shown an energy and an enterprise unparalleled in the history of the country, in improving the natural advantages of the harbour of Montreal, and in making it what it was intended by nature to be—the point of junction between lake and ocean navigation. But at the present time there is a consensus of opinion, which is not denied by any one in this House that Montreal is more than a mere local harbour—that it is the great national harbour of Canada. All the pride of the country is centered in it, and not only the pride, but all the best interests of the country. We know that when we are improving the harbour of Montreal we are benefiting every farmer, every grower of wheat, every shipper of natural products, west of the harbour of Montreal. It is certainly not unfair, when the Government are voting $500,000 directly for the improvement of the harbour, that the Government should retain some control of the expenditure since it is to be a national harbour, and since the Government represents the nation. If that be true, no exception can be taken to the conduct or the policy of the Government in this instance. But my hon. friend says, "If you do that, you are going to import politics into the management of the harbour of Montreal; and you should leave matters as they are." Is my hon. friend absolutely certain that when he was sitting on this side of the House, and when his party controlled the Montreal Harbour Commission, that the harbour of Montreal was altogether free from politics? If there ever was a time when there was politics in the harbour of Montreal it was at that very period. The Minister of Public Works, who I am sorry to say is not here to defend himself, and who could do it very successfully if he were here, has come into conflict with some of the business men of Montreal in connection with the expenditure to be made in the harbour; but what has been the result? The result has been that the policy which has been introduced by the Government this year has not been criticised by any business man in Montreal; and I was glad yesterday to hear the hon. member for South Lanark (Mr. Haggart) state, on the floor of this House, within the hearing of the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), that on this matter he sympathized altogether with the views of the Minister of Public Works. The Minister of Public Works has not carried out his views to the fullest extent; but there has been a compromise on certain points, as there must always be when rival interests are contending, wherein the views of the Minister of Public Works and those of the business men of Montreal have been reconciled, and the result has received the approval and support of the hon. member for South Lanark. Such being the case, it seems to me that the position we have taken is one which ought to commend itself to the judgment and approbation of hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House.

Mr. BERGERON. I think we all agree that the port of Montreal is to-day regarded, as the right hon. gentleman has said as the port of the whole Dominion of Canada. I do not understand that any criticism is offered by this side of the House, so far as that is concerned. We all agree that that port should be made a good port, and should be provided with all modern facilities. What we contend—and I think my right hon. friend has just touched the spot in his few last words—is that the work is not done as it ought to be done. My right hon. friend says there has been politics in the Harbour Commission of Montreal in the past. I admit it, and I regret it. There has been; but there should not be any more. My right hon. friend, when he came into power, was to put an end to all the bad things that had been done under the Conservative Administration. I have always believed, since I have been in Parliament—and I am more convinced now than ever—that the Harbour Commission of Montreal is a wheel within a wheel. I remember twenty years ago that a gentleman sitting in this House asked the Minister of Public Works what was the expenditure on the harbour of Montreal. What was the answer? "We have nothing to do with it; you have to apply to the Harbour Commission." That seems to me to be an anomaly.

Where do we find ourselves? Last year the Government of Canada authorized the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal to borrow $2,000,000, but they attached a condition, and that is where the politics of the Minister of Public Works came into play. Out of that $2,000,000 which the Government authorized the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal to borrow, and on which they guaranteed the interest—no doubt contemplating the probability that the Harbour Commissioners would never pay it—the commissioners were to spend $750,000 to build a dry dock in the eastern part of Montreal. What did the commissioners reply? They travelled between Montreal and Ottawa in deputations to the Government urging the Government not to impose that condition. They said: If we borrow the $2,000,000, let us spend it where the expenditure will be in the best interests of the harbour and not sink $750,000 of it in a farm. But the Minister of Public Works said to them: You shall not have a cent, you can go home without anything, unless you accept our rider and spend $750,000 in the eastern part of the city. It was then that the charges and accusations, to which my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) referred, were freely circulated throughout the city. It was then on the tip of everybody's tongue that a syndicate had bought a large farm, and that $750,000 of public money was to be squandered in building a dry dock on the site of that farm. The thing created a scandal during the whole summer. Every citizen reading the newspapers was shocked at what was going on. It was a fight between the Harbour Commissioners and the press of Montreal on the one side and the Minister of Public Works on the other; and we had the Minister of Public Works promenading the city, going to the city councillors and the Harbour Commissioners and saying every where: I do not care what you say, and you, the Harbour Commissioners, must do as I tell you. And he threatened to dismiss the Harbour Commissioners, who were appointed by the Government, if they did not carry out his behests! What was the result? The Minister got his own way. I said to some of the Harbour Commissioners: I would be ashamed to occupy the position you do. Although I have never approved of that commission, in the old days the Harbour Commissioners were somebody. They were supposed to be great merchants, men of wealth, men of energy, but to-day, I said to them: You are the mere puppets of the Minister of Public Works. They replied: What can we do, we must yield or the harbour will not get a cent.

I am glad to see that hon. members on this side from all parts of the Dominion admit that Montreal is the national harbour of Canada, but if we are to improve that harbour, we ought to expend money there as it is spent on public works in other parts of the Dominion. We ought to expend it in the best interests of the harbour. My hon. friend says he is going to build a wharf between two piers belonging to the commission. I cannot understand what he means, and I would be glad if he would explain. I do not know of any two wharfs belonging to the Harbour Commissioners between which there is room to build another.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman can see the plan showing the point where it is to be built.

Mr. BERGERON. I know the place well, and I cannot see how a wharf can be built there, but of course when I see the plan I may change my view. I reply to my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) the hon. Minister said a moment ago: It is true that rumors were floating around Montreal about the Government wishing to help some syndicate interested in a farm, but the Minister of Public Works has denied ever wishing to do anything in that part of the city. Why, that is mere bluff. His plan was abandoned, for what reason I do not know. But there is a change somewhere. It was understood that $750,000 were to be spent in the eastern part of Montreal on a dry dock. But my right hon. friend has been besieged by people from the western part of the harbour, who said to him: You need not show your face again in the western portion of the city, if you squander $750,000 in the eastern part and abandon the western part. Then the sunny ways came into play again at the expense of the country, and the right hon. gentleman said: We will take $500,000 from that $750,000, and instead of forcing you to spend the $750,000 in the eastern part we will take $500,000 and spend it at Windmill Point, in the western part of the harbour. That was to satisfy the western portion, and conciliate the right hon. gentleman's friends in that quarter, but is that expenditure necessary? What will they do with it? Will they dig in a place, to the depth of 25 or 30 feet, where any one now can walk across. Or is this meant to be purely and simply put on paper so that the western division will see it in print and then nothing will come of it? Then what are the Government going to do with the other $250,000? The right hon. gentleman says it is not to be spent on a dry dock because the fact that it is not to be expended on this farm shows that the dry dock scheme has been abandoned. My right hon. friend can tell us what they are going to do with it, but the hon. Minister of Finance does not know and I cannot blame him. I suppose it will create another row between the Harbour Commissioners and the press and the department of Public Works, and the outcome of the whole thing is that the harbour is in a worse condition to-day than it was five years ago. How long is this state of things going to last? For the best interests, not only of the city of Montreal, but of all politicians, both Liberal and Conservative, the only proper system is to do away with this commission and have the money sent by the department, which is responsible to Parliament for that expenditure. Do away with the commission, if it has not the manliness, energy and pluck to stand up like men and insist on the work being done where it ought to be done in the best interests of the harbour.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). The hon. gentleman's speech shows more heat than knowledge. If he had examined the plan, he would have more knowledge than he has shown by his speech. There is a great difference of opinion between him and his colleague, the ex-Minister of Finance. The ex-Minister of Finance urges that the money ought to be expended by the Harbour Commissioners, but the hon. gentleman contends that it ought to be spent by the department over which we have direct control.

The hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr. Foster) thinks this money ought to be put in the hands of the Harbour Commissioners and not in the hands of the Minister of Public Works. I leave these gentlemen to reconcile their differences of opinion. For myself, I think the people can control expenditures under a Minister of the Crown who is a member of the Government, responsible to the Parliament of Canada, better than they can by commissioners who are citizens of Montreal.

The hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron) has spoken of the $500,000 which was transferred from below St. Mary's current to Windmill Point Basin. He wants to know how this it to be expended, and what is to be done with it. The hon. gentleman has not followed the plans or the discussion upon this matter. It was explained that that money was to continue the dredging in the Windmill Basin and build a pier on the south east side of the basin. At the present time this basin, which is in the western end of the harbour of Montreal, outside the entrance to the Lachine Canal, is dredged along one side only, and only on one side is there a wharf. On the other side is the dump of dredged material which has been excavated from the harbour, along which dump there is no wharf, and alongside of which there is shallow water, which must be dredged, if that side of the basin is to be utilized. At present vessels find difficulty in entering at the basin, and hardly more than one can pass at a time.

Mr. FOSTER. That is, pass the guard-pier.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, inside, between the guard-pier and the entrance to the Lachine Canal.

Mr. FOSTER. Where is the entrance—east or west?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The entrance to the Windmill Point Basin is at the down-river end. A portion of it, as the hon. gentleman will see by the plan, is dredged, and a portion not dredged. The expenditure of this $500,000 is to dredge out the rest of the basin and put the dredged material upon the dump on the south-east side of the basin, and build the wharfs along the dump, and level it, so as to make it available for wharf purposes. The expenditure of that money has been placed, as it was before in the hands of the Harbour Commissioners. The Harbour Commissioners are carrying on the new works with the expenditure of the borrowed money of last year. This expenditure contemplates great improvements, which are necessitated by the increased trade of the port of Montreal, and we expect still further improvements will be necessitated. If this is the national port of Canada, and if the national trade of Canada is going to increase by leaps and bounds, as in the past few years—as we believe it will—we venture to believe that the port of Montreal will require greater facilities than ever. The reason why the export trade of Canada goes largely to United States ports, as we believe, is, that the port of Montreal has not been equipped to handle cheaply, easily and quickly the trade, and the people of Canada look to the Government of Canada to see that the national port is put in a position to handle cheaply, easily and quickly the trade of the country. Until that is done, our trade must go, and will go, through United States ports. This is what is to be done with the $500,000 which has been transferred by the Bill lately passed, from the part of the harbour below St. Mary's current to the other.

Mr. FOSTER. Why has the dry dock system been sacrificed? The hon. gentleman (Mr. Fisher) might explain that. Last year that was to be the salvation of Montreal.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There was a demand last year on the part of a good many, that a dry dock should be built in Montreal. Various schemes were proposed for the purpose of meeting that demand. Amongst others, it was suggested that property be bought on the east end on which the dry dock should be built. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bergeron) who has just sat down, has gone into that matter at considerable length. He has practically accused the Minister of Public Works of having dickered with people, and of having gone about the city of Montreal threatening this one, that one, and the other. I do not know the details of these schemes. They were largely discussed in the public press, and denied, and asserted over and over again. I never was able, for my part, to come to any conclusion in regard to these schemes, and know nothing about them. But I venture to say that if there were such schemes, if there were such attempts to steal public money, we may thank the Minister of Public Works for the fact that these schemes were foiled; and it was because the Minister of Public Works would not allow the public treasury to be pillaged, that these schemes fell to the ground.

Mr. FOSTER. How about Pacaud and Whelan?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not know anything about these schemes. For my part, I do not think there were any such arrangements to pillage the public treasury; but it is evident, from what the hon. gentleman has said, that if there were, it was the Minister of Public Works who foiled them—it was through him that the public treasury was saved. As a matter of fact, the suggestions to build a dry dock there have been reconsidered; and while there is still a hope that, when the necessity arises for building a dry dock in the port of Montreal, a dry dock will be built there. At the present time the circumstances of the harbour of Montreal indicate that there is a greater need for the building of piers and the provisions of more berths of ships in the harbour than there is for the building of a dry dock. And the proposition is, that this $500,000 of the public money voted to the harbour of Montreal shall not be devoted to a dry dock, but to the building of a pier below the St. Mary's current, which shall provide for accommodation alongside, that is, between the two old piers which were built there by the Harbour Commissioners some years ago. I may say to my hon. friend from Grey (Mr. Sproule), who referred to the rumour of property to be purchased last year in the scheme then proposed, in this case there is no purchase of property involved. The pier will be built on Government property, the front of the harbour which is in the hands of the Harbour Commissioners. So, the hon. gentleman may disabuse his mind of the suspicion to which he refers. The work to be done by the Public Works Department is work in the improvement of the harbour, just as the improvement of other harbours is carried on by the department. Being done by the department, the responsibility of the Minister of Public Works and the Government are a safeguard to the public interest. If it were placed in the hands of the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal, we should not have the same control as we have now. The Harbour Commissioners of Montreal are greatly occupied, and the harbour engineer has his hands full in the work which he is doing in the upper part of the harbour, work which is progressing, I am glad to say, very favourably. The work is being done most excellently, and would progress more rapidly, were materials available. I had the opportunity of visiting the work a little while ago with the secretary of the harbour board and the harbour engineer, and was told that the main obstacle in the way of the work was that of finding the necessary material. The timbers were so scarce and so difficult to find that he had some delay, but notwithstanding these delays the work was progressing most favourably. I do not intend to be a judge of that kind of work, but looking at it from a layman's point of view it appeared to be of most excellent character, and to be carried on very successfully. If there is any other information in regard to the details of the work which hon. gentlemen desire to have, I shall be glad to supply it so far as I am able.

Mr. BERGERON. The light which the hon. gentleman has thrown on the subject does not make it look any more favourable, in fact he has confirmed what I have said. There is one fact which no discussion can change and that is that last year, out of the $2,000,000 which were to be spent by the Harbour Commissioners for the improvement of the harbour of Montreal, $750,000 were to be spent in the eastern part of Montreal; that is admitted. It is also admitted, as my hon. friend intimated a moment ago, that there was so much quarrelling between the Harbour Commissioners, the Minister of Public Works, the city council and the press of Montreal, that we laymen could hardly understand anything about it. The consequence was that very little work was done last year. Now what do we find? We find that in consequence of the deadlock created by the fact that $750,000 were to be spent in Montreal east against the wishes of the Harbour Commissioners and of the people in the west end of the city, the Government have yielded, the coon came down, and we find to-day that $500,000 are to be taken from this $750,000 to go into Windmill Point on the western end of the harbour to satisfy those who were opposed to the improvements in the east; and $250,000 still remain for the eastern end. Now, where the hon. gentleman wants to do work at the Windmill Point, according to his plan here, he will have to spend an immense amount of money. Can he tell us what will be the estimate for that work?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The engineer of the Harbour Commissioners told me within the last few weeks that $500,000 would complete the dredging of the Windmill Point basin, and complete the pier I have spoken of. The basin is to be 250 feet wide. The end pier is to be extended about 1,000 feet. On the south-east side of Windmill Point basin there is a short space which has not been dredged out to the full depth. Beyond that is the dump. That dump is to be faced up with timber, and the material taken out of the basin is to be put behind the timber so as to make a proper wharf. This wharf will be utilized for track-laying and for the purposes of the Harbour Commissioners.

Mr. BERGERON. So far as the eastern portion of the harbour is concerned, the Minister representing the Minister of Public Works told me they were going to build a wharf between the two piers of the harbour. Well, this $500,000 which we are called upon to vote and the $250,000 remaining, will make $750,000 available.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, the $250,000 remain in the hands of the Harbour Commissioners to be used by them for whatever purpose they see fit below St. Mary's current.

Mr. BERGERON. That is a club that still remains exhibited before the electors of Montreal east, and it may not be spent. Now, you may spend all the money you wish in the harbour of Montreal, and if you improve it as it should be improved, I would not say anything against it, on the contrary, my impression is that everybody will be satisfied. But if you spend money for nothing, whether you do it in Montreal or anywhere else, I would be the first man to oppose it. Now, where are you going to spend the $500,000? I call upon the right hon. gentleman to go down to the city of Montreal and he will find there about a mile of wharfs, most beautiful wharfs, the finest in the country, and he will not find one vessel there. Last year you might go that distance along the wharfs belonging to the Montreal Harbour Commissioners, and if you can prove that five vessels were anchored there from the wharf of the Longueuil ferry boat down to the lower end, then I will admit that all this money will be a good investment. You have there acres of wharfs which are not used. Now, why are they not used? My hon. friend knows that it is because they are so far away from the central part of the harbour of Montreal that the merchants cannot use them, and they require the navigation companies to go up as far as possible toward the centre of the city. I have met some of them who told me that it cost them as much to cart their goods from the long wharf to their warehouses as to pay the freight from Liverpool to Montreal. If that is the case, and we are bound to accept the word of those gentlemen who are the principle men of Montreal, why should we go and spend money that will be absolutely useless? Now, take these two wharfs between which my hon. friend wants to spend $500,000. Now, I will say a word about expending money through the Harbour Commissioners; I am not only blaming the present Government, but I say that this way of spending money has lasted too long. The old Government did the same thing. What is the consequence? Look at the guard pier in Montreal; it is an eyesore, it is a disgrace. Whoever recommended it, whoever invented it, must have been blind, and the Minister of the Crown of whatever Government who sanctioned it, could not have known what he was doing. I say it has been badly managed in the past, and we ought to try to do better now. Take the management away from those who have been guilty of these blunders in the past and let the Government of Canada do the work themselves; then we shall know where we are.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman is endorsing exactly what we are doing.

Mr. BERGERON. But you are going to do it in the same way the late Government did.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The work is to be done, not by the Harbour Commissioners but by the Government. The hon. gentleman is condemning the guard pier which was started and completed, so far as it is completed, by the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal whom he has just eulogized as being able men.

Mr. BERGERON. I said they were supposed to be able men.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman is only giving hearsay evidence as to their capacity, and is willing himself to condemn the action of the Government at that time. I leave this question to be decided between him and the hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr. Foster). The hon. member for York has just told us that we should do this work through the commissioners of Montreal. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bergeron) tells us that the Harbour Commissioners have been doing the work for many years past.

Mr. BERGERON. But the hon. Minister of Public Works will not allow them to do it, and that is a different matter.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It must have been the hon. gentleman's own Minister of Public Works, because, when the guard pier was built and finished, the hon. gentleman's own party was in power. The Harbour Commissioners who had control of the work were appointed by hon. gentlemen opposite. They supported hon. gentlemen opposite, and it was their Minister of Public Works who authorized the expenditure just as the hon. Minister of Public Works is authorizing this expenditure to-day. I would rather appeal to the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Haggart), who must have had to do with this matter, because the railway lines were going down to the harbour, then as they are now, and who would probably understand it better than the hon. member for Beauharnois. The hon. gentleman's colleague, the hon. Minister of Public Works, has submitted to him and he endorsed the scheme of the guard pier which the hon. gentleman has characterized in such strong terms.

Mr. BERGERON. Where is the Minister of Public Works now?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Unfortunately, the Minister of Public Works is on the Atlantic. If he were here he would be able to answer the attacks which are being made on him by the hon. member for Beauharnois.

Mr. BERGERON. I am not talking about the present Minister of Public Works. I asked: Where is the Minister of Public Works who did that?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think he is on the bench, appointed by hon. gentlemen opposite. I am not quite sure, but I think it was Mr. Ouimet; possibly not.

Mr. BERGERON. The answer to all the hon. Minister of Agriculture has said is given in the way the people of Montreal voted at the last election, and if hon. gentlemen continue the same work they will find where they will land.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I understand that the people of Montreal voted for this Government.

Mr. BERGERON. That is what I say. The result was shown in the way they voted.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. And that out of six representatives, there are four supporting the Government.

Mr. BERGERON. If you continue the same policy you will land in the same place.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. But we have changed that policy. We are taking a portion of this work out of the hands of the commission, and propose to carry it on under the control of the Government.

Mr. COCHRANE. Coming from the province of Ontario, it is a very sad spectacle to me to see this enormous sum of money that we are willing, from an Ontario point of view, to have spent in the port of Montreal, being dealt with in the way that it is being dealt with this morning. It is a humiliating spectacle to any member of this House to see a Minister of the Crown bandying words as to what the Conservative party did in the past. Ministers are responsible for their own conduct, and not for the conduct of a Conservative Minister who is past and gone. I am surprised that an intelligent man will get up, after denouncing the Conservative party for eighteen long years, and after telling me, as a supporter of that party, that the policy of that party was wrong, and justify his conduct by the conduct of the Conservative party. Hon. gentlemen will go back years to find a transaction which is hoary with age, in order to hunt up something that will justify their misconduct in reference to their present expenditures, in order that they may say: You Tories did it. The hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) sits complacently by and sees millions of money thrown away, when he used to tell us that the farmers of the country were being bled white. If he can find anything to whisper to a colleague, to turn the tables on an opponent, he will do it, but he will not get up and justify the course of the Government, and when he cannot defend the course of the Government, he will get up and leave the House. What is the history of this Montreal harbour? The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) gets up to explain it as if we did not know anything, and as if his cranium were full of knowledge. When he gets up, everybody else must subside and listen to his words of wisdom. He says that because this harbour has not been properly equipped, the trade of Canada has passed into other hands. I deny that statement; it has had something to do with it, but not all. When we know that Sir William Van Horne told us that it cost us ninepence more than double to ship a ton of butter from Canada to Great Britain, and double the price to ship a ton of cheese, it shows that, if we have lost the trade, it is not entirely due to the absence of proper equipment in the harbour of Montreal. Hon. gentlemen say that there is no heart-burning and jangling in their party. If so, why was this money not spent last year? If it is necessary that the harbour should be equipped, that dredging should be done and wharfs built—the money was at the disposal of the hon. Minister of Public Works—why was not the work done last year? The reason, to my mind, is that there was so much jangling and trouble and turmoil in the party that they could not expend the money until they had settled that question. Now that the question is settled, they are prepared to go on and spend the money. As a member of this Parliament, representing a constituency in Ontario, I am prepared to vote the sum of money that is sufficient to properly equip the harbour of Montreal, but I want to know that this money is being properly expended. The hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce who used to shed crocodile tears over the money that was being thrown broadcast over this land, has now not so much sympathy with the farmers as he had in those days. But, in the interest of the farmers of this country, I want to know that their money is being properly expended. We do not want hon. Ministers to get up and make political speeches when they are asked for information, and give us no information. The Ministers that I used to support when they came down to the House—the hon. Minister of Agriculture laughs. It is an insignificant laugh that shows that there is not a great deal of brains behind it. The Minister of Public Works that I used to support, when he came down to the

Mr. COCHRANE.

House, brought plans to show how a vote of Parliament was to be expended, and I may tell the hon. gentleman, who is so ready to grin, that, if he wants to get his Estimates through the House he must come down with some definite and well-prepared plan that he is ready to explain, and not make political speeches, and then sit down, leaving the House no wiser than when he got up.

Mr. HAGGART. I may, perhaps, venture a few words upon this subject, as I was one of the committee of the Privy Council to which was referred the matter of the Montreal Harbour improvements. I am a good deal of the opinion of the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron), in reference to the expenditure that is being made at the Windmill Point Basin. Although that expenditure was authorized by a colleague of mine, the former Minister of Public Works, I think it is one which will not be of a great deal of use to the harbour of Montreal. The further expenditure of $500,000, which the Government have authorized in the same direction, is an expenditure which, I think, will be practically useless. These improvements will not do a great deal to increase the facilities of the harbour. I am aware that the commissioners are in favour of this work at the Windmill Point Basin. I am aware that most of the people in whose hands the carrying trade of that port is, are largely in favour of the plan of constructing this work at the Windmill Point Basin.

If the port of Montreal is to be the important port it ought to be, it requires more facilities than it has at present. The quantity of grain at present going through that port is between 30,000,000 and 40,000,000 bushels. To handle this quantity of grain tests the capacity of the harbour to the fullest extent at present; and while that is the case, there is no use of talking about diverting the grain trade of the west to the port of Montreal. The cost of transporting grain from Montreal to Liverpool is about the same as from New York or Boston to Liverpool. While the rate of insurance on the St. Lawrence route is about  $\frac{1}{4}$  cent a bushel higher than from Boston or New York, it costs about  $\frac{1}{4}$  cent a bushel less to bring grain from the west to Montreal than to New York or Boston. Therefore, you are in a position at present to carry grain from the west to Liverpool via Montreal at exactly the same rate as via New York and Boston. That is the reason why our railroads are able to make arrangements in Chicago for this trade.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Will my hon. friend excuse me for a moment? I would like to know on what authority he makes the statement that the present cost of transport to Liverpool via Montreal is the same as the cost via New York or Boston?

Mr. HAGGART. I got the information from the Canada Atlantic authorities no later than yesterday. I inquired how it was that they were able to export grain as cheaply via Montreal as via Boston and New York, and they told me that the ocean freights to Liverpool were exactly the same from Montreal as from New York or Boston. The distance from Montreal is a little shorter; but the rate of insurance on the St. Lawrence is a little greater, largely owing to the neglect of the Department of Marine to light the St. Lawrence properly. But the shippers say that the present facilities of the port of Montreal are tested to their fullest capacity. There will be less grain delivered in Montreal this season than there was last season. If a greatly increased trade from Chicago were brought to Montreal, it would be impossible to handle it, owing to the want of harbour facilities. That was a matter for consideration when I was a member of the Government; and I came to the conclusion along with my friends who were on the Commission, that the only way to remedy that was by an extensive system of docks which would be the terminal of the different railways coming to Montreal, on which they would be able to run their tracks beside elevators. A difference of  $\frac{1}{2}$  cent a bushel will divert the carrying trade of grain or any other produce from the west to one port rather than another. The only practicable means by which it appeared to me the shipping facilities of the port would be made adequate to the trade, was a system of docks such as was proposed to the Minister of Public Works some time ago. But I regret that the control of the port remains as it has always been, and that the picayune system of expenditure for the purpose of keeping up the value of property in the front of the city is continued. The Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railway authorities advised me, when I was a member of the Government, that the only possible plan of providing the harbour with modern facilities was to build an extensive system of dockage such as is to be found in all modern and live cities in other parts of the world, or to provide below St. Mary's current facilities which it is impossible to provide by the present expenditure up at the bridge.

Mr. BRITTON. I want to correct an understatement which I made the other night in reference to the quantity of grain that came down through the Welland and St. Lawrence canals. It will be remembered that the hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) stated that the quantity of grain coming through the Welland Canal was 10,000,000 bushels. On the spur of the moment I said it was 15,000,000 bushels. I want now to correct that understatement made by me. Although I knew that the quantity was greater than he had stated, I did not know the exact quantity. I now find that the quantity of grain that came through the Welland Canal to Kingston last year was 12,714,333 bushels; the amount that came to Ogdensburg was 6,500,000 bushels; and the amount that came to Prescott was 5,500,000 bushels. That makes the total which came through the Welland Canal, leaving Oswego out of the account, 24,714,150 bushels. Some of the grain which came to Ogdensburg was no doubt sent to the Eastern States for home consumption or for export. I estimate that about two-thirds did not find its way from Ogdensburg through the St. Lawrence canals, or about 4,000,000 bushels. This would leave 20,381,000 bushels to go through the St. Lawrence canals if all that came to Kingston went through. But I know that all did not go through. A little of it was for home consumption; so that it would be fairly correct to say that 20,000,000 bushels went through the Welland Canal and through the St. Lawrence canals to Montreal for export. The ex-Minister of Railways is no doubt correct in his estimate of the quantity of grain that was shipped through Montreal, because both the railroads, I fancy, would carry about 10,000,000 bushels; so that you would have between 30,000,000 and 40,000,000 bushels going through that port.

Mr. FOSTER. I just want to say one word more. This is a grave statement which has been made, and it has not been met at all. The statement has been made that between the Windmill Point and the eastern section where the $500,000 worth of work is to be done, there is a magnificent wharfage system, with two well-built and magnificent wharfs going off into the water, and that these two wharfs last season were practically useless and unused.

Now, you go to work and put between these two jutting wharfs, $500,000 more expenditure. Have you any guarantee that that will be used any more than these two wharfs? And if not, are you not going to expend half a million dollars between two wharfs, which have not been used and which they say are practically unusable. Why? Simply because they have no railway facilities, and railway men say it is impossible to make a railway system which you can work to advantage, with wharfs jutting out from the shore. What you want is a system of docks to run in and have their switches and approaches to the warehouses and the transport companies and the like, so that you can load right off from your train into your vessel. I am not a practical man on these points, but that is the statement that is made.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE.
Who makes it?

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend to my left (Mr. Bergeron) and my hon. friend here (Mr. Haggart), who sympathises a good deal with the view of having dockages and is opposed to this expenditure at Windmill Point. He says that the present system is comparatively useless for the reasons I have given. Why do the Government go on spending $500,000 more, a mile away from the business portion of the city, in the very midst of wharfs which are lying there unused, except to a trifling extent?

Mr. BERGERON. They are used only by barges.

Mr. FOSTER. Surely we are not going to spend that money in order to afford conveniences for cordwood barges, instead of trying to make a harbour fit for ocean steamers.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I understood the hon. gentleman to say that there is a long stretch of wharfs along the shore between the upper and lower harbour which are not utilized.

Mr. FOSTER. From the point where the Canadian Pacific Railway comes in, as described on that map.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The reason is that the current is so swift that vessels cannot be properly moored there, and the current also brings in, constantly, silt, which makes the channel very difficult to dredge out.

Mr. FOSTER. At the jutting wharf, would the current be any more free from silt?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, because it will be diverted to the main stream.

Mr. FOSTER. Why were these wharfs not used?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Because, up to the present, they have not been properly equipped with railway tracks. The hon. gentleman says they cannot, and suggests in preference to these wharfs jutting out into the stream, a system of basins inside the shore and docks running in. Well, the docks running in would cost probably three or four times as much as these wharfs out into the stream. And there would be involved in this scheme that which the hon. member for Beauharnois is so much afraid of. He alluded to all sorts of schemes for the purchase and sale of property, out of which would arise various bootling transactions. Well, the proposition of the hon. member for York would be more likely to lead to that sort of thing, because it would involve the heavy purchase of property in that part of the city, while the building of wharfs into the stream would not involve any purchase of property, and, consequently, could be done much more cheaply and provide the requisite accommodation. In that respect, the building of wharfs out into the stream would be much more economical and effective. The hon. gentleman says that the reason why the inland basins are better than wharfs out into the stream is because the latter cannot be reached by railways. But, as a matter of fact, a survey has been made which shows that they can be reached by railways, and it is proposed that the new wharf shall be reached by the railway companies. Those who understand the harbour, know perfectly well that the Canadian Pacific Railway comes into the eastern or lower end below the city, and the Grand Trunk Railway comes into the western end, and these two corporations both utilize the tracks laid on the front wharfs of the city by the Harbour Commissioners, which are open to any railway company that chooses to use them. Take the cattle shipments of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the wharfs in the centre of the city are those from which the steamships take these cargoes. The Grand Trunk Railway yards are at Point St. Charles, in the west, and that company puts its animals on lighters in the Windmill Point basins, and lighters them to the vessels and loads them from the lighters to the vessels. The Canadian Pacific Railway has its cattle yards at Outremont, several miles away from the harbour, and brings them down in trains. The cattle, on reaching the yards, have to be unloaded and kept there some time before they can be shipped. They are then loaded into the Canadian Pacific Railway train and brought down to the wharfs in the centre of the city and across the wharfs on these tracks, and thence loaded into the steamers. That is a most unhandy and, in many cases, dangerous arrangement. These wharfs below would be ideally situated for the purpose of shipping cattle to Europe, and, when properly constructed and equipped, the whole of the Canadian Pacific Railway export cattle trade will be done from them, and the vessels, which have been loaded with their heavy cargo up above, will come down to these wharfs and take the cattle there near the cattle yards.

Mr. WALLACE. Where are the wharfs where the cattle will be loaded?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Below St. Mary's current—these wharfs we are talking about. At present that cannot be done, because there are no tracks on them.

Mr. BERGERON. Has the Canadian Pacific Railway the intention of putting tracks there?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The Canadian Pacific Railway will not do it, but the Harbour Commission will, and the railway will utilize them, but until that is done, the railway companies cannot take their trains down to the ships.

Mr. BERGERON. Why was not that done before?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman seems to think that because a thing was not done in the past it will not be done in the future, or because a thing was not needed in the past it will not be needed in the future. I endorse fully what the ex-Minister of Railways (Mr. Haggart) said, when he said that the port of Montreal was not equipped in such a way that our trade can pass through it to Europe.

It is chiefly because of the ineffective and inadequate equipment of the port of Montreal that such a large proportion of our export trade, the grain trade especially, goes to the American ports. We have facilities through our railways and canals to bring that grain and other products of the west to Montreal. The reason why the trade has not gone to Montreal is not that there is no berth room, or that there is not a channel from Montreal to the sea, or even, as the hon. member suggests, because there is a heavier insurance rate, but simply that when a vessel comes to Montreal, instead of unloading and loading again in a day or a day and a half, it takes four days to unload the cargo and reload. In the United States ports, a vessel can unload in one day, load in another, and within 48 hours at the longest be off again. What the Minister of Public Works has been aiming at in all his plans in regard to the port of Montreal is to provide these means for quick and effective handling of cargo.

Mr. SPROULE. I suppose that was what he was aiming at when he proposed this $700,000 for a dry dock?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The dry dock was another part of the question of the navigation of the river. Representations were made by the people of Montreal, by the Harbour Commissioners and the Board of Trade urging the building of a dry dock there. However, since that time, in consequence largely of the discussions that have arisen in the country that plan has been changed. The Minister of Public Works, who has investigated this question of transportation, I venture to say, more than any other man in Canada, and who has been more instrumental in creating the revolution which has occurred in public opinion in reference to the importance of the Montreal Harbour—

Mr. FOSTER. Cut it short. Let us have the facts, and we will take the eulogies for granted.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I shall be glad to cut it short. If I had not been interrupted I should have finished much sooner. I do not know that there is anything more that I can say. The result of the work below St. Mary's current as above it, will be, as the trade of Montreal develops, these improvements will be fully used. This will demonstrate their utility. And not only that but another result will be that there will be an immediate demand for more extension of the work in the harbour, which will further justify the appropriation.

Mr. WALLACE. I do not believe there is room between Notre Dame Street and the river for the carrying out of the improvements which the Minister of Agriculture has outlined. The whole system, that part of it, I think will be abortive. The scheme that they have to make a dry dock will be a waste of public money, in my opinion. I wish to put myself on record in protest against appropriations such as these, which, I believe, will fail of their object. Every one desires to see the port of Montreal brought up to date, so that it may be prepared for a much larger amount of business, which we are expecting from various sources and as a result of various causes.

The River St. Lawrence ship channel—

To provide for additional work ..... $78,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The chief engineer states that, owing to the time lost during each session and to the fact that the dredges cannot be kept at work more than seven months, it has been decided to provide each dredge with an electric light plant, so that dredging may be continued during the night. The appropriation is required to fit six dredges with electric light plant and to provide maintenance so that we may have a double service.

Mr. FOSTER. Will these electric plants be bought by tender and contract?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Tenders have been called for already.

Mr. HUGHES. I desire to draw the attention of the Minister to a matter which has just come to my notice. I am only voicing the sentiments of navigators of the St. Lawrence when I say, that in the channel which the Government is opening up, I think on this side of Sorel, they are taking what is regarded as not the better channel but the longer and more crooked one, and the one that in the past has been very prolific of accidents.

The PRIME MINISTER. What information has the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes) on the subject?

Mr. HUGHES. I have the word of men who navigate the river. Another matter is in connection with the survey of the river, now being carried on. The draughting has been done in the city of Ottawa, whereas this should be done at the place where the work is done, so that any mistakes, which are sure to arise, may be corrected. If the Government will act upon the hint I have given and investigate these matters they will find that what I say is in accordance with the facts.

Mr. FOSTER. As I understand, the Government are going to equip six dredges with electric light? How much will that cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. About $18,000.

Mr. FOSTER. And what is the balance of $60,000 for ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For maintenance. You are going to have a double service and will have two crews to pay instead of one.

Enlarging Lévis Graving Dock..... $117,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is proposed to be done here ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The graving dock at Lévis is the property of the Dominion Government. At present its length is 488 feet. Hon. gentlemen are well aware that in recent years larger ships are used, and we now have ships coming to the St. Lawrence which cannot be admitted to the Lévis Graving Dock. If we are to have facilities for repairing vessels on the St. Lawrence we must have a dock fitted to the increasing size of the ships.

Mr. FOSTER. Is the graving dock employed the year round ? What is the amount of the business done, and how many vessels were docked ?

The PRIME MINISTER. The revenues last year were $19,839.

Mr. FOSTER. What has been the total cost of the dock ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In the report of the chief engineer, page 175, it is stated that the amount expended is $1,001,490, which is made up of $910,000 construction, and $91,490 for maintenance and repairs.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the expense compared with the receipts ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The expenditure is $6,148.32. The number of vessels docked was seven.

Mr. FOSTER. How much of the dockage time is taken up with active work, supposing the dockage time to last seven months in the year ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Of course, different vessels would represent different times. The report does not state the number of days here. I can get the return if the hon. gentleman desires it.

Mr. FOSTER. It is desirable to know whether the present dock was engaged to its utmost capacity, or what idle time it had.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am advised the dock was busily employed. Before concurrence I will get a memorandum of how many days these ships were in.

Mr. FOSTER. I suppose the people of Lévis will deliver up that endorsed note when this $117,000 is expended, a note which the Minister of Public Works gave just before the elections down there. He gave them a note signed by his own hand, and I think it was endorsed by the Minister of Railways and Canals. Whether he was there to append his signature, or only promised to do it, I am not quite sure. But I am sure that the note was drawn and signed by the Minister of Public Works.

Mr. FIELDING.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I will make it worth while for the ex-Minister of Finance to produce any evidence he may have in support of the statement he now makes, because I have never known or heard of such a transaction before.

Mr. FOSTER. I have only the evidence of the Minister of Public Works himself.

Public Works—North-west Territories—
Lieutenant-Governor's residence at Regina—Improvements, drainage, &c..... $2,500

Mr. FOSTER. There does not seem to be any end to that.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. A demand was made for somewhat more extensive repairs and it was cut down to $2,500. This is chiefly for drainage.

Mr. DAVIN. I may say that Government House is in bad need of works in connection with drainage. The sidewalk is a long one and extends from Government House to the gate, and then from the gate along the Government property in the direction of the Government buildings ; and it is absolutely necessary in the winter time in order to travel down between the Government House and the Government building.

British Columbia—
Rossland, public building..... $15,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is the estimate of that building ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It will cost $20,000, and will be used for all Government offices.

New Westminster, public buildings..... $15,000

Mr. FOSTER. How is that being done ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is to be done by contract.

Nelson, public buildings..... $15,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is proposed there ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is the same as Rossland, the cost is about the same.

Kamloops, public building (revote)..... $3,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is that ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It cost altogether $6,000. There are $3,000 in the main Estimates, and this $3,000 will complete. It was a vote last year unexpended.

Vancouver, drill hall (revote)..... $8,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is work of an expensive character. The contract was awarded for the sum of $65,658.

Viau & Lachance are the contractors. The work is now going on.

Mr. CLARKE. How much did the land cost ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The deputy informs me that this land belongs to the Militia Department, and we did not have to purchase it.

Mr. FOSTER. Is this near that famous spot called Deadman's Island ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No. I am now told that the site was given free of cost by the provincial government.

Gas and electric light, public buildings, Ottawa, including lights and roads and bridges—additional amount required.... $5,500

Mr. BERGERON. I thought you were doing away with the gas.

Mr. FOSTER. What is this for ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This refers to the lights on roads and bridges outside of public buildings.

Mr. FOSTER. What are the items in the estimate ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Twenty-six arc lights on roads and bridges at $85 per year, making $2,200. There is a further sum for the consumption of gas $1,200, and renewals, lamps and fitting, $600, which make $5,000.

Mr. WALLACE. That only makes $4,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Then there is a further sum for the general purposes of lighting of $1,000. In the main Estimates there is a sum of $13,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I think it would be much better to have all these items together, and then we would know what it costs for lighting, because we cannot form a correct idea when the items are scattered all through the Estimates.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the hon. gentleman's argument is a reasonable one and I will suggest to the deputy to follow that plan in the next Estimates.

Mr. WALLACE. When we have items of $13,000, $7,000 and now $5,000, for lighting, I think it shows that this is not a business-like method of preparing these Estimates for discussion by Parliament.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the items ought to be collected together, if possible.

Department of Agriculture—
Steel shelving ..... $700

Mr. BERGERON. What is that steel shelving for ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is steel shelving for the Department of Agriculture.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). This is for the archive records which have been transferred recently to the Langevin Block. The archives used to be in the Western Block, but I gave up these rooms to the hon. Minister of Customs in whose department these records were, and Dr. Brymner has transferred his books and records to the Langevin Block.

Mr. FOSTER. Has the Government satisfied itself that this steel shelving is being supplied at a fair price ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There are two firms engaged in the work, and the deputy assures me that the price is reasonable.

Mr. FOSTER. Have tenders been called for ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They have both been asked to submit prices.

It being One o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

The House resumed at Three o'clock.

Yarmouth Bar, Nova Scotia—

To complete breakwater..... $1,000

Mr. BERGERON. How much will that cost ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have not the figures of the total cost. This covers the work entirely.

Arcadia—

Removal of obstructions, Cheboque River $1,000

Mr. FLINT. This river, when the tide is in, has a depth of 12 or 13 feet, and small vessels go to the wharf near the bridge at the head of navigation. This obstruction has been called to the attention of the Government for the last eight or nine years. A railway has been constructed and passes very near Arcadia, and its business has increased lately. There are one or two large rocks which obstruct navigation, and this is to remove them.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the length of navigation in general in that river ?

Mr. FLINT. From the bridge to the sea, about ten or twelve miles.

Mr. FOSTER. This will make it navigable that length ?

Mr. FLINT. Yes.

Cheggogin—

Extension to breakwater ..... $600

Mr. FOSTER. Where is this outlandish place ?

Mr. FLINT. It is a very important point on the coast between Yarmouth and Digby. The breakwater there was built by the local authorities, and is a very strong, good work, but does not quite meet the purposes for which it was designed, and the Government have concluded to extend it a bit for the benefit of the people. It is a large fishing neighbourhood, and this water protects the entrance to a small stream inside of the breakwater where vessels anchor.

Lockeport breakwater ..... $3,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in the county of Shelburne. It is rendered necessary by the fact that the harbour is filling up. We have had dredging done on several occasions, but the engineer came to the conclusion that continued dredging operation, without building a breakwater, would be an unprofitable expenditure. It will cost probably $4,000, so this vote will not finish it.

Gunning Cove, wharf..... $1,600

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in the county of Shelburne.

East Ragged Island, wharf (revote)..... $1,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is for the balance of work now under contract, and is in the county of Shelburne.

North River—St. Annes—

Wharf at Seymour Point (revote)..... $1,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is in the county of Victoria, and is for balance of work under contract.

Clifton, wharf repairs..... $350

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in Colchester County, and is the whole thing. We own the wharf.

Black Rock, Victoria County—

Boat harbour ..... $500

Meat Cove—

Boat harbour ..... $500

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. These are in Victoria County. These two items are for the removal of rock in boat harbours on the northern coast of Victoria, in the island of Cape Breton.

L'Ardoise—

Repairs to breakwater, to complete.... $1,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in the county of Richmond, to complete work now under construction. It is stone concrete work. This is to repair damages sustained by the breakwater during the storm. It is an old work which was damaged by storms, and this is to repair it.

Gabarus Bay, breakwater ..... $8,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This has been asked for quite a long time. Gabarus is in the county of Cape Breton, represented by the hon. leader of the Opposition. The work has been delayed in consequence of its being somewhat expensive. At that time the engineers reported that the work would cost $40,000, and in consequence of that the department did not undertake it. It has been represented by the people that it was quite possible to put a work there for half the money, and we have taken this appropriation. If we can get it done for about $20,000, we shall proceed with the work; but if it should cost the larger amount, we will not proceed with it.

Mr. FLINT.

Mr. FOSTER. What is there?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is a large fishing settlement on the south coast of Cape Breton.

Mr. WALLACE. The chief importance of the place is historical rather than commercial. It is the place, I understand, where the force landed which marched on Louisbourg. It is a customs port from which a revenue of $32.82, with 72 cents of extras is derived. Therefore, as a commercial enterprise I do not see how this vote can be justified. If the Minister were going to erect a monument to commemorate the place where Wolfe landed, he could get the vote without much trouble.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Suppose we call it Wolfe breakwater, would that settle it?

Mr. WALLACE. I think the Minister will have to give us a little further explanation before he can justify the vote.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I hope the hon. gentleman is not going to apply the test of customs revenue to the erection of a breakwater. In dealing with public buildings, where you want to know the extent of a town, customs revenue may be considered; but it has certainly nothing to do with the construction of breakwaters, which may be required for the protection of vessels at places where there is very little customs revenue, but it is a place of considerable trade in the passing to and fro of vessels.

Mr. WALLACE. In what respect is it a place of considerable trade?

Mr. MORRISON. I happen to know this locality very well. All the shipping from Halifax to the mines and also the shipping going up the St. Lawrence, together with large fleets of outside fishing vessels, pass that way. At times these ports on the eastern coast of Nova Scotia are simply packed with shipping, especially when the equinoctial gales come on in the fall. Gabarus is a most important port of call for the local shipping trade, particularly since Louisbourg has become such an important port. During stormy and foggy weather, I suppose it would have as many ships in it as the harbour of Halifax. If on no other ground than as a harbour of refuge, for the sake of the shipping this expenditure is justifiable.

Mr. HUGHES. What is the depth of water in this harbour? I understand that a vessel drawing more than four feet of water cannot get near the harbour?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, there is a depth of 14 or 15 feet of water.

Porter's Lake—

Dredging and breakwater at entrance of channel ..... $9,000

Mr. BERGERON. Where is that ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In Halifax County. This lake would be navigable, but that a bar forms at the entrance from time to time. The entrance was formerly navigable, and various small expenditures have been made by the Government to keep it open, but the engineers report that it is useless to spend a small sum, and that a substantial work must be constructed if we are to keep it open.

Mr. FOSTER. What is around the lake ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is surrounded by a fishing, farming and lumbering section.

Mr. HUGHES. What is the population of the whole county of Halifax outside of the city ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. About 40,000.

Mr. WALLACE. Have you plans of this work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have an estimate of the work to be done, as follows : earth excavation and dredging, 40,000 cubic yards, $4,200 ; cribwork, $3,200 ; swing bridge, $800 ; contingencies, $800 ; making a total of $9,000.

Mr. WALLACE. This work is at the entrance of the lake ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, entirely at the entrance.

Mr. WALLACE. What is the size of the lake ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is seventeen miles long.

Mr. FOSTER. What depth do you get in the channel ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The channel we propose will give four feet at low water, and as the tide rises six feet, there will be ten feet at high water.

Mr. WALLACE. How far is that from Halifax ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Fifteen or sixteen miles.

Mr. WALLACE. This is an expenditure that cannot be justified, because when the work is done there will only be four feet at low water, and ten feet at high water. What depth of water is there now ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The outlet is closed, and, as a consequence, the whole country is flooded for miles around in the spring.

Mr. WALLACE. Then there is practically no access to it ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There has been, but it is now closed up at low water.

Mr. HUGHES. Then the object is to do some draining for Halifax County which should be done by the municipality. Considering the lighthouses, wharfs, and a few things like that, which are round the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Fielding) county—

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes) should approach this in a more generous spirit. Hon. gentlemen from Ontario ought not to make remarks of these expenditures in the maritime provinces. In proportion to the amount that we spend—wisely and usefully spend—in other provinces, the grants to the maritime provinces are not extravagant.

Mr. WALLACE. I object to the dictum of the Minister of Finance, that no hon. member from the province of Ontario is to be allowed to criticise—

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I did not say that.

Mr. WALLACE. Yes, that is what the hon. Minister says. He says we must put this through because of some covert threat he makes that the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) is getting some questionable votes in his constituency. Even if that be the case, the same does not apply to all the members from the province of Ontario. We hold ourselves open to criticise any vote, whether in Nova Scotia or Ontario. We have criticised some enormous subsidies in Ontario which we have declared to be utterly unjustifiable and which we in the province of Ontario have never asked for and will continue to condemn. So we are not going to have ourselves shut up by the Minister of Finance in this way. His explanations seem to amount to this : Here is a lake which has no outlet to the ocean except when the tide is high. The Government are going to make a channel which, when it is dredged out, I suppose to the rock, will not be more than four feet deep. Vessels will be able to come in only when the tide rises, and the same in going out, though that will be more easily regulated. I do not think that this explanation justifies the expenditure of $9,000.

Mr. HUGHES. The Minister of Finance is evidently very touchy, when he flares up at my reference to this little matter. It does not worry me. Any vote that I approve of, whether it is to be expended in Ontario or the maritime provinces, I am prepared to justify without getting touchy about it. The Minister of Finance does not seem to have got past all twinges of conscience and does get a little touchy at references to expenditures in his locality.

Mr. FOSTER. This seems to me an extraordinary vote. You have here no travelled line of communication. From what the Minister of Finance says this is a lake which is now closed and the water floods the surrounding country. It is deemed necessary to drain the lake and give access from it to its outer waters and the sea, and the simple plan is adopted of getting the Government to undertake it as a public work. It seems to me that is not a thing we can do. If you expend $9,000 which is a large amount of money, you will, after all, only get a channel which will not be useable at all times, and there is no suggestion that it can be made a travelled line for communication. If we undertake that kind of thing there will be no end to it in the interior of the country.

Mr. RUSSELL. If I might be permitted, I would like to say that this is a matter really of very great importance. At one time it was proposed to spend some $35,000 or $40,000 on this work. I have seen elaborate plans, which were prepared some ten or twelve years ago by the engineer of the department in Halifax, the object of which was to restore this harbour to what it was thirty or forty years ago. I do not know the reason that it is choked up, but I have heard that it was due to wrong methods used to keep the channel clear. This is really a harbour, and formerly there was a good deal of shipping there—fishing vessels of all kinds. Of course, incidentally to the good results to flow from this improvement of navigation and fisheries, which comes within the purview of this Parliament, there is also the consideration that it will relieve three important bridges, which have their abutments and approaches at certain seasons under water. These bridges carry roads that are really the arteries of communication from the eastern end of the county—and indeed from the eastern parts of the province—to the city. I admit that that is not a matter that comes within the purview of this Parliament. At the same time, it is an advantage that will be conferred upon the people by the expenditure of this money. I am sure that my hon. colleague (Mr. Borden, Halifax), who has just entered the Chamber will support me in what I have said.

Mr. FOSTER. Before the hon. gentleman (Mr. Russell) spoke this seemed to be an improvement which the municipality ought to undertake, but now it is evident that there is a very large interest of the provincial Government—

Mr. RUSSELL. I say that that is incidental.

Mr. FOSTER. The provincial government has an interest in these expensive bridges, the life of which is imperilled by the channel being filled up. Then, added to that you have the draining of the lake and the consequent benefit to the lands of those who live on it or near it. When you go to the other consideration, it never has been and never can be a travelled route of general communication, so the interest of this Dominion Government is altogether subordinate. Now, there is a bridge, I understand, to be taken off the hands of the local government, and is to be maintained now by this Government. It is a provision for building a swing bridge, and that swing bridge will certainly be needed on a new line of communication, and it will take up one of the lines of communication as at present.

Mr. RUSSELL. No.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, there is a provision of $800 for a swing bridge.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is where the channel is to cross.

Mr. FOSTER. There is a channel there now and a bridge there now.

Mr. RUSSELL. It was called a canal in the earlier stage.

Mr. FOSTER. But the Minister says it was open at high water. The whole discussion shows that this is a provincial and municipal matter entirely. How is this work to be done?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It will be done by contract. The item for the bridge was $800; earth excavation, $4,200; cribwork, $3,200; a swing bridge at Graham's road, $800; contingencies, $800. Graham's road is a travelled road. There is a bridge there at present.

Mr. FOSTER. What justification is there for taking up a bridge belonging to the provincial government, erecting a new structure and maintaining it for ever afterwards? We have not only got to build a bridge, but we have got to put a man there to swing it at a salary.

Mr. RUSSELL. This cuts through some private property, therefore they have to put a bridge there for the owner to cross. The engineer in Halifax explained his scheme to me in that way, and said he could cut through this channel.

Mr. FOSTER. I move that the item be reduced by $800, and that no swing bridge be built there.

Mr. RUSSELL. Oh, no; do not do that. It should have been $10,000, and $1,000 has been cut off already.

Amendment negatived.

Salmon River, Halifax County—

Freight-shed on wharf..... $500

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Salmon River is a village 100 miles east of Halifax. It is proposed to put a shed on the wharf. The wharf is close by one of the most important gold-mining districts in Nova Scotia, and there is considerable travel to it.

Mr. BERGERON. Cannot the people themselves build a shed?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is a public wharf, and we could not allow the people to put a shed on it. It is owned by the Dominion Government. The shed will protect the freight.

Mr. FOSTER. Is not $500 an enormous sum to put a shed there?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The officials inform me that $500 is not more than enough to put up a respectable freight shed, and there is to be in connection with the same a waiting-room. It is a place where steamers call to and fro. In stormy weather there should be some accommodation of that nature for the public.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think the shed is desirable. But I have been informed by a resident of the locality that the title of the land had not been vested in the Crown before the wharf was built.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am informed that the lot on which the inner end of the wharf rests was part of a public roadway. It is public property, undoubtedly.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would suggest that before any more expenditure is made here the department should first ascertain that the title to the land is properly vested in the Crown. I was also informed that the expenditure on the wharf was not by public tender.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, it was not done by contract.

Mr. FOSTER. What did it cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The wharf has cost $1,646.

Young's Landing, wharf..... $900

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in the county of Lunenburg. This sum will complete the wharf.

Mr. FOSTER. What line of travel is it on? What stops there?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a settlement of about 1,500 people. It is not far from the town of Lunenburg, between Lunenburg and Mahone Bay.

Saw's Pit, wharf..... $900

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is also in the county of Lunenburg, on the inner harbour of Lunenburg town. This will complete the work.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not understand the policy of building these wharfs.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Well, there is no new policy in it.

Mr. FOSTER. I never recollect going into wharf building of that kind. What we did was to try and take care of the wharfs handed over to us by the provincial governments. That was the extent of our work. But here is a multiplication of little wharfs all over the coast which afterwards have to be kept up, and which is certainly an extension of Dominion expenditure.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) will find he is mistaken. He will find that quite a number of wharfs were built along the coast of Quebec and the maritime provinces, and I have no doubt, very properly built. There is no new policy in this. We are simply doing what has been the policy of many governments for many years.

Jordan Bay East—

To complete repairs to breakwaters.... $1,200

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Jordan Bay is in Shelburne county. This is to repair the breakwater, an extensive work constructed some years ago, which has been very much damaged. There is a considerable lumber business done there. We have expended a sum of money on it, and this is to complete it.

Newellton, Cape Island—

Wharf ..... $2,000

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is a new wharf in Shelburne County.

Mr. FOSTER. Why is it being built?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Newellton is on Cape Island. It is proposed to build a wharf 150 feet long, 20 feet wide, with a depth of 7 feet of water at low tide. There is a large fishing industry all along that coast.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the population of Newellton?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The population of the island is about 3,000. It would not be right to say the population of Newellton is 3,000, but Newellton is part of the island.

Shag Harbour, wharf ..... $2,000

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Shag Harbour is also in the county of Shelburne. This is a place of about 600 people, eight miles west of Barrington village, and it is a place of some local importance.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this a new work?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. What does it accommodate?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is a fishing section, a fairly well settled country, and there is no wharf in the vicinity.

Mr. FOSTER. Will these be toll wharfs?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Will this be the full cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes. The votes for almost all these works in Shelburne and Queens will complete the works.

Mr. DAVIN. How did the fishermen get along before this?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They got on, but if we expect the fishing population to remain at home, we have to make their lot a little better, because we cannot expect the young people to be content with the discomforts that their fathers submitted to. I think we cannot do a better service than to provide wharfs here and there along the coast in the maritime provinces where the fishing industry is an important one.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, there is some exodus going on yet. I thought the policy of the Government was retaining the people in Canada.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not stop to say whether it is due to the policy of the Government or some other cause, but it is a fact that the exodus has been, to a considerable extent, checked. There has been a strong tendency on the part of the fishermen of the maritime provinces to go away, principally to Massachusetts, and we are trying to see whether we cannot, by such improvements as these, make the conditions of the people along the coasts of the maritime provinces somewhat better. There is still some exodus, but there is less than there was before.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. Minister has spoken with praiseworthy frankness. The information we had at the beginning of the session was that the exodus had been entirely stopped.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. While I will say that the conditions in the Dominion generally have very much improved, particularly in the western provinces, they have not improved in the maritime provinces so much as they have in the west. I hope hon. gentlemen will be considerate towards the efforts we are making to improve conditions along the coast.

Chebogue River—

Town Point wharf, repairs..... $1,000

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In the county of Yarmouth.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it a new wharf?

Mr. FOSTER.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is to repair an old work.

Mr. FOSTER. Do we own the work?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. FLINT. Town Point wharf is one of the oldest wharfs in that part of the country. It was a very well built wharf; I cannot remember the date when it was built, but it must have been fifty or sixty years ago. Town Point Wharf was built in the western portion of Nova Scotia when that country was first settled. The first settlers landed there and proposed that that should be the location of the settlement, but the population subsequently moved away to Yarmouth. However, Town Point and its neighbourhood remained a very flourishing place, and the whole of the country near the mouth of the river is largely populated and is a flourishing section. This is one of the properties which, whether it was in the schedule or not, was handed over to the Dominion. It has never been any expense to the Government, although, I think, within the last seven or eight years, the Government ought to have expended some money there. The people were anxious to have an expenditure made there, but they endeavoured to get along as well as possible by making such local improvements as they could afford. The wharf has now reached a stage where these improvements are necessary, and it is advisable to put it in proper condition. This is an excellent point for landing goods, and the wharf serves the interests of a very large population.

Belliveau—

Repairs to breakwater..... $2,000

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that, and what is accomplished when the breakwater is complete?

Mr. COPP. This breakwater is in the western portion of the county of Digby. The firm of Jones Bros. are situated there; they do an extensive West Indian trade, and also a coasting trade between Digby and the United States. This is a work that must have cost $100,000 in the beginning. We spent $3,500 last year on repairs, but we were not enabled to complete them. This $2,000 is asked for to complete the repairs.

Trout Cove—

Breakwater, new block..... $700

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that?

Mr. COPP. This is in Digby County. The year before last we spent $9,000 on this work. It is a very important place. Last year, during a storm, the approach to the new work was washed away, and this $700 is required to repair the approach to the breakwater.

West Berlin, beach protection works.... $1,500

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that? What is being done?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is in Queen's County. This is required to build beach protection works 1,600 feet long, 10 feet wide and 5 feet high, where the beach has been gradually washed away. This is a new work, and this will be the whole cost. West Berlin is situated east of Liverpool, and is a fishing village of 400 inhabitants. The only harbour there is a small cove, protected by a shingly beach.

Parker's Cove, extension of wharf..... $3,000

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In Annapolis County.

Mr. MILLS. I congratulate the Minister on making this expenditure, which is highly necessary. I presume it is done in response to a petition from parties in that section. I understand that it will be a direct benefit not only to the locality where the money is to be expended, but also to the fishing industry up and down the bay. It has, I understand, a direct reference to the establishment of the extensive fish-drying factory of Collas, Whitman & Co., who are doing a large business, not only in Annapolis, but in Halifax and other ports of the maritime provinces, as well as in Boston and Newfoundland. If all the expenditures will be of as much benefit to the business of Canada as this at Parker's Cove, the money will be well spent. While we are at this item, I could, with a good deal of propriety, call the Government's attention to another matter ; but, as the time is very short, and all of us wish to get away, I will only make a casual reference to it. I referred to the same matter when the Conservatives were in power ; that is, a necessity for a harbour of refuge at Margaretville. This not a local matter, but a maritime province matter. It has been asked for in a petition signed by the leading merchants and maritime men of all classes, from all the constituencies around the Bay of Fundy. The merchants and ship-owners of St. John, the ship-owners of Canning, the ship-owners of Parrsboro', and all the towns and cities around the Bay of Fundy and in the counties of Digby and Annapolis, have petitioned for a deep-water stone pier at Margaretville. As we are in growing times, when money is plentiful, when millions are being spent in other portions of Canada, now is the time for a deep-water stone pier at Margaretville. It is necessary upon numerous grounds. It is necessary, first, for the preservation of life and property. From Digby to Five Islands there is not a harbour of refuge on that rock-bound coast. If a harbour had been placed at Margaretville, hundreds of lives would have been saved in the last twenty-five years. I took the trouble in 1892 of getting all the disasters from the Marine Department that had occurred on that coast, and in "Hansard" of 1892 will be found the list which I gave of those disasters, showing the tremendous loss of life and property that had occurred. One resulted in the loss of the Government steamer "Princess Louise," together with a number of lives. Men of experience, such as captains, merchants and ship-owners, who understand the rise and fall of the tides and winds on the rock-bound coast of the Bay of Fundy, have all given their opinion, that if a harbour of refuge had been within eight or ten miles of Margaretville or of Digby Gut, the "Princess Louise" would not have been lost. I only make mention of that as a single instance. I could bring before this House, if necessary, something like fifty disasters. Not a season goes by without some disaster of more or less magnitude occurring on that coast. Suppose it would require $150,000 or $200,000 to put a harbour of refuge there, it would be money well expended, and a million have been voted here on works of far less consequence. Seventy thousand dollars was voted here the other day, to be expended on a wharf where there was no water at all.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Not voted.

Mr. MILLS. At all events a great deal of discussion took place with reference to it. But here is a matter of the utmost importance to the people of the maritime provinces as regards the preservation of life and property. I will not go into the details as time is short, but I refer to this matter, so that I will have it to say that at least I brought it to the attention of the Government. I can put it also on another ground. If a deep water stone pier were placed at Margaretville, the Nova Scotia Central Railway would extend its road there, which would increase the commercial importance of that locality and the country round about. I hope that because I happen to be a Conservative, the Government will not be influenced by that consideration, for let me tell you, Sir, that there is no place in the county of Annapolis where I have so few political friends. I do not suppose I have ten there, and I have gone there, time and again, and told the people that I did not care a snap of my finger whether they voted for me or not. But the building of a stone pier there is of the utmost importance to the whole country round and to the Bay of Fundy. The town of Annapolis is interested, the people of Granville are interested, the people of Digby are interested, all of the maritime men around the Bay of Fundy are deeply interested in this work.

Harbourville, extension of wharf..... $2,500

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This covers the whole cost.

Wolfville, harbour improvements..... $4,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is a new work, and this will be the whole cost. Wolfville is in King's County and the site of the Acadia University and one of the most beautiful towns in the lower provinces.

Parrsboro', dredging ..... $5,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This dredging work was begun some years ago and the harbour is filling up again. It is an important shipping centre in Cumberland County, the place from which the Springhill mines ship their coal, and the centre of a large lumber industry.

Brulé, wharf repairs ..... $1,200

Mr. SPROULE. My information is that $250 would complete the whole work.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have here an estimate, giving all the details amounting to $1,200, but I shall ask my deputy to see that the divisional engineers is called on to make another examination. I am confident, however, that the hon. gentleman's information is not correct.

Tatamagouche, wharf repairs ..... $350

Mr. SPROULE. I am told that $50 would be an outside estimate.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend's informant is mistaken. It cannot be possible that the divisional engineers would report that $350 were required if $50 would do the work. Here is their estimate :

9,760 feet of plank .....	$136 64
1,760 feet plank .....	93 64
2,040 stringers .....	31 00
2,376 stringers .....	23 00
Renewing outer end of crib.....	25 00

This is in the county of Colchester.

Malignant Cove, breakwater..... $5,000

Mr. COCHRANE. Are all these in Nova Scotia ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I ought to apologize for modesty when we are spending on one harbour in Ontario more than twice as much as all the harbour and river works in Nova Scotia.

Mr. CLARKE. What harbour ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Port Colborne.

Mr. FOSTER. You have not explained this Malignant breakwater ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is to open up a channel of 320 feet long by 30 feet wide to a depth of 3 feet below low water level, to afford access to the boats of fishermen. It is estimated that this will cover the entire cost of the work.

Harbours and Rivers—

Brooklyn, wharf ..... $2,500

Mr. FOSTER. Where is Brooklyn ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is in Queen's County.

Mr. FOSTER. Is this a new wharf ?

Mr. FIELDING.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes. There is a large work there which is to cost a great deal of money, and for which the people have been asking for some years. We think the construction of this small work will serve some of the purposes of the other. This will be the entire cost of the wharf.

Harbours and Rivers—

Chezzetcook, wharf..... $3,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in the county of Halifax—the eastern part. There is a large French section there.

Mr. SPROULE. Will this cover the whole cost of the work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. How many of these works in Nova Scotia are new works ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I cannot give the information at the moment, but I will look them over and let the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) know. In the case of nearly all the works in Nova Scotia, particularly those in my own constituency, they are works of small cost—the items we have given will, in nearly every case, finish the work.

Mr. WALLACE. I am sure that the righteous soul of that severe economist, J. Israel Tarte, will be much disturbed when he returns and looks over these Estimates. He will view with dissatisfaction the riotous extravagance with which—I was going to say hundreds, but that would be a slight exaggeration—of places in Nova Scotia are provided with all kinds of works. There are some commendable works, but we have not been able, and we are not able, at this period of the session, to make a proper investigation or criticism of these votes. The hon. Prime Minister is anxious to push us out of the House. He spoke the other day of that glorious time of prorogation. Though he has been congratulating the country on having men in Parliament who will give us righteous legislation, as he says, yet he seems to be very anxious that legislation should cease and that we should leave this House of Commons for our homes. We are voting millions after millions, putting mortgages on every farm in this country, and loading the country down with liabilities of every description that will have to be explained to the people—

Mr. MCGREGOR. We will explain from his little constituency, fifteen votes in this section alone.

Mr. WALLACE. I do not think the hon. member for North Essex (Mr. McGregor) will do much explaining. He is about ready for the nice job that is waiting for him. He has not the slightest intention of explaining.

Mr. MCGREGOR. Yes, I have ; you come up there and see.

Mr. WALLACE. He will leave explanations to his successor. We are patting through these Estimates in a prefatory way, with only the slightest explanation if any at all. It looks as if the Government did not know what to do with the people's funds, but shovelled out the money to every person who asked for it, or, as we have found in many cases, when it has never been asked for at all.

Mr. FOSTER. It is refreshing to find that, in this hurly-burly, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding), as usual, never loses sight of himself. I find that there are for his little constituency, fifteen votes.

Mr. COCHRANE. You do not say so.

Mr. FOSTER. Last year some one on the back benches intimated that they thought the Minister of Finance was a little selfish in making appropriations, and having got the reputation, I suppose he now wants to justify it.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is it true, that he has 137 miles of railway, too?

Mr. FOSTER. I was not talking about the inland. These are just his coast defences; these are the outskirts. When you come to the internal parts, there are arteries and veins in every direction.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I ought to be obliged to my hon. friend for bearing testimony to my zeal on behalf of my constituents, but I am afraid he is giving me some credit that I ought not to claim. He has taken every little appropriation for repairs to wharfs, and treated the whole thing as if amounting to a very large sum. He will find that most of these expenditures are for extensions or repairs of old works. He will find but few new works in the two counties, because there are two counties I represent, stretching along on a most exposed part of the Atlantic coast for 120 to 150 miles. If you follow the sinuosities of the coast, you have a coast line of 150 miles. The cost of the new works proposed in the two counties of Shelburne and Queen's will be less than the cost of one new work which we have undertaken to do in the county of the leader of the Opposition.

Mr. SPROULE. I want to know the number of places where money has been spent in order to secure the Minister of Finance a seat in this House? We ought to know just how much he is costing the country.

Mr. COCHRANE. I want to ask the Minister of Finance if this money is to be all expended by day's work?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the new works, as a rule, ought to be done by public tender, unless the engineers report exceptional circumstances to the contrary.

That is my own desire, and I shall endeavour to carry it out.

Mr. COCHRANE. Because, although you have no machine there, as they have in Ontario, if you have all that done by day's work, it will be a machine that will do effective work for the Minister of Finance.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am afraid the hon. gentleman cannot conceive the possibility of anybody being elected except by these devious ways to which he refers. I have no expectation of obtaining any credit from the counties of Shelburne and Queen's, except that which comes from doing something for the general good of the community. No individuals are to benefit from these works. These new works, so far as possible, will be done by public tender and contract, and the contracts will probably be taken, as in so many cases, by people outside of the county altogether.

Prince Edward Island—

Pier or breakwater at Rocky Point, Lot
15 ..... $1,500

Mr. FOSTER. We want a full explanation of this.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This wharf is to be built at the south-east entrance of Egmont Bay. There is a large number of fishermen in that locality, and they have no protection from the south-east gales from the sea. The wharf is to be built at the intersection of two ridings, East and West Prince, in township 15, where it almost joins with township 13. It is a modest structure, strongly recommended by Senator Yeo, who lives near the locality, and who understands all about it, and has been pressing for it for some years.

Mr. FOSTER. Then, he still takes an interest in such things.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, he takes an interest in all sorts of good enterprises, and, as my hon. friend knows, he is one of the most estimable men that I think any county could be blessed with, because he is absolutely unselfish.

West Point Pier—

Extension ..... $4,000

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is a pier built some years ago at West Point. It has been a great boon to the fishermen and those who were engaged in shipping in that locality. But it was found that about 100 feet from the end of the present pier there is a shallowing of water. It was at first proposed to dredge through that, but the proposition was abandoned as impracticable, it extending 180 or 200 feet.

Mr. FOSTER. Is this to be done by contract and tender?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Canoe Cove, breakwater ..... $10,000

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This is a work which has been for many years, almost since I have been a member of the House, petitioned for by the people. Canoe Cove is on the south side of Prince Edward Island. It is the only work I have ever managed to get for my constituents. It is 18½ miles from Charlottetown, lying between Charlottetown and the town of Crapaud. It is a thickly-settled community, with not only very large farming interests, but there are many lobster and codfish fishermen. They are entirely exposed, without protection, to the sweep of the sea, when the wind blows from the south-east and the south-west. Three projects were started. One was to build a small independent breakwater, not connected with the land at all, which would afford simply protection for the boats, and would not afford anything in the nature of accommodation for the farmers to ship from. The other was a more ambitious project, to build a lengthy breakwater, running out into the sea, and also making it a pier; but it would cost so much money that I did not feel like recommending it to Council. The third proposition was more modest, and that was for the construction of 500 feet of breakwater, which at high tide and half tide would give a depth of water sufficient to enable the steamboat which runs from Charlottetown to Crapaud, to call, and give accommodation to the farmers to get on the steamboat there and carry their produce to the Charlottetown market, while at the same time affording excellent protection to fishing boats. The local engineer estimates that it would cost about $13,000. We have only taken a vote for $10,000, under the belief that ordinary timber, such as we use in that part of the country, not creosoted, would be amply sufficient for the purposes intended.

Mr. FOSTER. Does that teredo work there?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, to some extent; not so much as the engineers fear, except around the wharfs in cities. It has been very injurious to the wharfs. This will be a great accommodation to the farmers in the district, and will enable them to have communication with the Charlottetown market by sending their produce by the steamer which runs twice a week between Charlottetown and Crapaud. It will also supply a very large need, and will be a protection to the fishermen engaged in fishing on that coast.

Mr. MARTIN. I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Sir Louis Davies), if he has taken into consideration a petition from the people of Wood Islands for the extension of the breakwater there?

Mr. FOSTER.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries who seems to have charge in regard to items for Prince Edward Island, if he proposes any expenditures on the Wood Island breakwater. The hon. Minister told me a year or two ago when I applied for a grant for the Bell River breakwater, that it was the intention of the Government to put the wharf at Wood Islands in good repair to test it and see whether or not it could be made a useful harbour, and thus obviate the necessity of making a harbour at Bell River. I have understood that engineers have been down there making surveys, but I see nothing in the Estimates indicating that the Government intend to do anything. When the hon. gentleman was on this side of the House he pressed upon the Government the necessity of doing something there. The late Government spent some money there, but the hon. gentleman has admitted himself that there is still a great deal to be done. I am sorry that this harbour has been overlooked. The Government two years ago refused to make improvements at Bell River at the request of a large number of farmers who are dependent for shipping their products in having the wharf at this point in good repair, and now I find that both of these works are neglected. I asked a question of the hon. gentleman some time ago in regard to a petition for the dredging of Pinette Harbour. The hon. gentleman said he had received no petition. I am advised that a petition has been forwarded to the Government. I am astonished at the hon. Minister stating that no petition has been received. As far as this whole southern section of Prince Edward Island is concerned, it has received very little attention since this Government came in. I think, considering the urgent demand that the hon. gentleman made on the late Government for wharf improvement in the southern section of the Island, it is rather surprising that he should treat this portion of the Island in this way by neglecting these works.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. As far as I can make out what the hon. gentleman has been saying, I understand that he is asking whether we intend to make some appropriation to further improve the Wood Islands breakwater. Nobody appreciates the desirability of improving this harbour more than I do. It is an important point and the question is whether the present breakwater should be extended. If it is extended we will have to extend it on both sides, and that will necessitate the expenditure of a large amount of money, but that is no reason why it should not be done. As far as I am personally concerned, I did not know that there was a report from a local engineer during this past season, but I will make it my business to inquire at the public department about it. In regard to Pinette Harbour, I have received no petition from anybody. The matter was under discussion some years ago, and it was contended that the rocky bottom could not be dredged to a sufficient extent to justify the large expenditure that would be incurred. I will make it my special business to go to the Public Works Department and see if there is a petition. I have not lost sight of the southern portion of the Island. We have obtained from the Government a very respectable vote for a railway that is needed for the shipment of the produce in that portion of the Island. I admit that they have been at a disadvantage along that coast, but we are trying to improve the conditions there and to overcome these disadvantages. I will do everything in my power to see that the Wood Islands breakwater is improved to the fullest extent possible. I have made a visit there nearly every year and inspected it personally. The work we have built there is in very good condition so far as it is concerned. It may be that that will be extended on both sides so as to form a channel through which the water would rush and give a greater depth, or it may be that dredging would be required. If it required to be dredged it would be impossible for the dredge to go there this year, because it is already pledged to other places. When we have ascertained what is best to be done, I will apply myself to see if the plan agreed upon cannot be carried out.

Mr. MARTIN. I do not think the hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) can shelter himself behind the small grant of money that Prince Edward Island has received for a few miles of railway in the southern portion of the Island. I think if the hon. gentleman will look over the amounts that have been voted since his party has been in office for railways, canals and bridges he will find that a very small share has fallen to Prince Edward Island.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That has nothing to do with the vote before the committee. Do not let us open up that question now.

Mr. MARTIN. The hon. gentleman himself has opened up that question by saying that on account of the proposed expenditure on a few miles of railway in Prince Edward Island there was no money to keep piers and wharfs in repair. These hon. gentlemen boast that they have voted $250,000 for a piece of railway in Prince Edward Island, but I find that over $30,000,000 has been voted by this Parliament for railways and canals since 1896, and I believe the sum is at least $32,000,000. If we had a fair share of the current expenditure it would not be $250,000 that would go to Prince Edward Island, but $750,000 or $800,000. I think the hon. gentleman has made the statement himself, before his party came into power, that Prince Edward Island was entitled to expenditure of $2,000,000, so far as the debt expenditure goes. Since this party came in we have not got our fair share of the current expenditure and the claims for $2,000,000 remains intact. Prince Edward Island has received a much smaller amount for wharfs and piers than she is entitled to, and I am astonished that the hon. Minister should make the statement he has made.

North Cardigan, repairs to pier..... $300

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) Before that item passes I would like to ask whether arrangements have been made for repairs and extensions to Chapel Point wharf, to which I referred last session?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. An arrangement has been made in that direction.

Mr. MACDONALD (P. E. I.) These repairs are going on this season?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

St. Nicholas River, wharf..... $1,500

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). In Kent County. It is proposed to erect this wharf near the mouth of the river. It is an important point for the outlet of the lumber and other products about there.

Campobello, New Brunswick—

Breakwater, repairs and extension.... $10,000

Mr. FOSTER. Does this complete the work?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, the estimate is $19,900.

Mr. FOSTER. What will be done?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Some 200 or 300 feet of extension is required, and the whole work may have to be renewed. It is in very bad shape.

Mr. FOSTER. How will this work be done?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. If it has all to be renewed, it will have to be done by tender and contract. If it is not all renewed, I do not know that that will be practicable.

Hopewell Cape, New Brunswick—

Wharf ..... $6,000

Mr. FOSTER. Is this a new wharf?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. This is a new wharf. Application has been made by the people of Hopewell for an extension and repairs of the existing wharf. The wharf is a very necessary and useful one to the people who use the river from Moncton down. This is the only point in the neighbourhood where access can be had to the shore, and there is an urgent necessity for the extension of this wharf to deeper water. I understand that the estimates made by the department of the cost of the work are very much in excess of this sum, running up to $27,000. Upon ascertaining that, I had a communication with the member for the county and with other people resident in the county as to whether or not equally good facilities could not be provided a little further up the river, at a reasonable and moderate cost. The opinion entertained by the people in the locality is that further up the river a wharf can be built for not more than $8,000 or $9,000, which will answer every purpose, and will not have to be built so far out into the river in order to reach deep water. That would be much cheaper and more economical than to undertake to extend the existing wharf. In that view, I have asked that the appropriation for the work should be included in the present vote. If that should prove to be impracticable, I would not feel, without further inquiry, like asking the department to expend so large an amount as $27,000, even extending over a period of years, for this purpose.

St. John River and Belleisle Bay, N.B.—

New wharfs ..... $2,500

Mr. FOSTER. Where are these to be placed ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. There are, I think, two of them in Belleisle Bay, and one or two along the river. These were inserted at my request—but just at what points they are I am not sure. They are in the counties of King's, Queen's and Sunbury. They are built under arrangement with the provincial government, which contributes half the cost.

Cape Tormentine—

Repairs to breakwater (revote $2,500).. $7,500

Mr. FOSTER. Will that put Cape Tormentine in a good state of repair ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. By no means a perfect state. The proposal is to place a stone embankment around the place to prevent the further displacement of the walls. But this is by no means sufficient to restore the work.

Mr. FOSTER. I did not understand that there was any displacement of the work. I understood that the trouble was with the borer.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. These borers weaken the timbers and make them much more subject to the action of the sea. It is thought that by placing stones along the base of the wharfs they would be strengthened and kept in place and enabled to resist the action of the water, and therefore resist displacement. The expenditure is very moderate in comparison with the needs.

Mr. BLAIR.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the worm still go on ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. There is some fear that it may.

Mr. MILLS. There was an agitation in the Public Works Department to have a sort of factory for the manufacture of a composition of timber and creosote which resist the ravages of the worm.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That matter is still under consideration, and the project is considered very desirable, but quite costly.

Mr. MILLS. It is very desirable that such a thing should be accomplished, because all the works around the Bay of Fundy get wrecked in a very short time by this worm.

Main River—

Wharf ..... $3,800

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is required for the construction of a wharf 150 feet long, 310 feet wide, and 18 feet deep, on the Main River bridge, two miles from the sea, on the Richibucto River. This, with the revote of $200 in the main Estimates, will make $4,000 required for the construction of this wharf.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. It is the centre of a very fine tract of country, which produces lumber on quite a large scale, and it is from that particular point the surrounding country distributes its products.

Mr. FOSTER. Does any line of steamers go there ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. No.

Shippegan, wharf ..... $5,000

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. This is at a point on Shippegan Island, where there is a large fishing village. There are at least forty vessels there engaged in the fishing business, without any wharf accommodation, and it is estimated that at the outside the cost will not exceed $8,000. I am in hopes that it will be brought down below that figure.

Mr. McALISTER. Was there not a grant of $4,000 last year ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The expenditures last year was on the breakwater and there was none on the wharf.

Campbellton—

Repairs to ballast wharf, further amount required to complete (revote) ..... $1,000

Mr. McALISTER. Is that all the repairs intended to be made this year ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a vote in the main Estimates also.

Mr. McALISTER. The town of Campbellton is a large shipping port, where large steamships go to load with lumber for Europe, besides a number of square-rigged vessels. With the present accommodation, it is almost impossible for the merchants to ship from there with any degree of convenience at all. Last year the hon. Minister of Public Works was down and examined the place, and he said he had no idea whatever of its importance, and admitted that the facilities were not at all adequate to the business done. After looking over the whole situation, he told the people that they had been sadly neglected in the past, and promised to send a dredge down to dredge out the river. The ferry wharf, which is of no use whatever, was to be immediately put in shape so that the ferry boat could land there. The ferry boat lands at a private wharf, and should the owner of that wharf refuse permission, the ferry boat could not land at Campbellton at all. The shipping merchants as well as other business people of the town of Campbellton, and also the town of Campbellton, memorialized the Government last winter for a grant to take over the private wharf, which could be purchased and repaired for about $7,000 or $8,000. The public wharf, as it is, is of no use, because you can only get at it, as the engineer knows, by going over the private wharf.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Is that the Mowat wharf?

Mr. McALISTER. Yes; it is owned now by Mr. Shives. I was told that the Minister promised to take over this wharf. I did not hear him say so himself. He promised that the appropriation of last year, $2,500, would be spent on the wharf, and I was present when he promised to have the ferry wharf put in repair. But nothing has been done, and either the Minister has forgotten or else he did not intend to carry out his promise. We have a case where $70,000 was voted for a wharf where there was no water and no business. It seems too bad that an important place like Campbellton, a place, which as the Minister of Public Works said, had been sadly neglected, should be still overlooked, while places of less importance received liberal grants.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. With regard to the wharf to which the hon. gentleman (Mr. McAlister) has referred as having been the subject of an appropriation of $70,000, I may as well explain that that vote is not being proceeded with. As to the present item we have an estimate of $750, and now $1,000, a total of $1,750 available for the work. I admit that that is not enough. The previous vote, unfortunately, was allowed to lapse. We had expected to be able to buy the material with that vote. That not having been done, it will be necessary to provide the materials out of this vote. The total sum available is less than will be required, and we shall have to see if we cannot devise means to add something to it.

Harbours and Rivers—Quebec—

Black Brook, wharf ..... $2,500

Mr. FOSTER. Is that in Northumberland County?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, on the Miramichi River. There is a 9 feet depth of water at low tide. The estimated cost is $5,270. I have asked the engineers if they cannot cut that down, and they demur a little, but I suppose we can try.

Harbours and Rivers—Quebec—

New Carlisle, repairs to wharf ..... $2,000

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that?

The PRIME MINISTER. In Bonaventure County.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it near Maria?

Mr. McALISTER. It is about nine or ten miles away.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is to renew the old flooring and to replace some of the stringers.

Mr. McALISTER. This work is necessary.

Harbours and Rivers—Quebec—

Carleton, extension of landing pier..... $8,400

Mr. BERGERON. Where is that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is in Bonaventure. My hon. friend from Restigouche (Mr. McAlister) knows about it.

Mr. McALISTER. The steamer lands at this wharf going up and down. The present wharf is entirely inadequate to meet the requirements of the place.

Mr. FOSTER. Will this finish the work?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Harbours and Rivers—

Newport, breakwater..... $3,000

Mr. BERGERON. Where is that?

The PRIME MINISTER. It is in Gaspé; a new wharf is being built there.

Mr. FOSTER. What will it cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The estimated cost is $6,500.

Mr. FOSTER. Is that work to be done by tender?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I know of no reason why it should not be.

Mr. BERGERON. I am glad to hear the Minister say that. But we can understand the awkward position the employees of the department are in. It is not the habit of the Minister of Public Works to have these things done by contract, but it should be so, and I am glad that the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance have said it is their opinion that it should be. But they should make a definite promise, and hold the Minister of Public Works to it when he comes back.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In new works especially, the work should be done by tender and contract, unless the engineers advise to the contrary for exceptional reasons.

Mr. FOSTER. I understand then, that this is a statement that this work will be done by tender and contract?

The PRIME MINISTER. I understand that all these works should be done by tender and contract, unless there is a reason which can be stated to Parliament and appreciated by Parliament.

Mr. BERGERON. That is right.

Mr. McALISTER. Did the department receive a memorial from the council of the township of Mann in the county of Bonaventure, asking for $5,000 to build a ferry wharf at Grosse Point?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, there was such a memorial.

Mr. McALISTER. Is it the intention of the Government to make an appropriation towards the building of a wharf there this year?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not at present. The engineers estimate that it is a work that would cost a considerable sum and we are not in a position to make any appropriation this session.

Mr. McALISTER. The municipality asked for $5,000, if they got that they would be satisfied, because it would place the wharf in such a shape that the ferry boat could land there with some convenience. At present there is no landing place whatever, and at low tide the ferry boat has to anchor out from the shore. Teams can only cross at certain stages of the tide. At low spring tide passengers have to run ashore for quite a distance in a small boat, and after that to be carried to the beach. The state of the landing is in a shameful condition. I think the people living there had an engineer examine it, and he came to the conclusion that $5,000 would put it in such a shape that it would serve the purpose for the present. I know that the Minister of Public Works stated last year that it would cost over $30,000, but the engineer who surveyed it estimated that $5,000 would put it in a fit shape for use. I may say that this place is not in my constituency. This is an important place, and has a station on the Atlantic and Lake Superior Railway immediately back of it. A great many people coming from the lower part of Bonaventure County come across there to Campbellton to do business, and stay there all night. The next morning they go across, taking the train at this place for home. Even if it cost $30,000 or $40,000, it would be money well spent. At present passengers can only land conveniently during high water. If they are in a hurry, they very often lose their passage altogether from the fact that they cannot cross at low tide.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I shall ask the department to take note of my hon. friend's remarks. It is a common occurrence that the people of a district assume that a work could be done for a small sum and when we send an engineer he discovers that the popular impression is entirely erroneous. Such seems to be the case in this particular matter. The engineer states that the local opinion that this work could be done for a small sum is a mistake. However, the importance of the work may be such as will amply justify a larger expenditure, and this will have to be considered hereafter.

Mr. McALISTER. It would amply justify the expenditure of $30,000 or $40,000, or even more than that. This is not in my constituency, it is opposite Campbellton. The municipal officers of the township of Mann have been corresponding with me about it and asked me to assist the member of that county towards securing a grant for it. I speak from personal knowledge of the situation, and I know there is great need for a public landing there.

Cacouna—

Extension to wharf, to complete..... $5,000

Mr. BERGERON. What vessels go to the wharf at Cacouna?

The PRIME MINISTER. None at all so far, because there is no wharf; but when there is a wharf vessels will call there.

Mr. BERGERON. Do you mean to say that vessels coming from Rivière du Loup now will stop at Cacouna?

The PRIME MINISTER. Cacouna is further down the river. I do not think the boats of the Richelieu Company will use this wharf; it will be used by local boats.

Mr. FOSTER. There is nothing there, it is only a summer resort, and people cannot use that wharf. It is all dry land when the tide is out, with fishing brush weirs and the like of that here and there. It is absolutely impossible for vessels to come within two or three miles of that, except at very exceptional stages of the tide. I have walked all over these flats and know them well.

The PRIME MINISTER. There may be a good deal of truth in what my hon. friend says; but he remembers that this work was commenced by the Government of which he was a member, and was not completed. In order to make available the money he has expended there, we must expend a little more.

Mr. BERGERON. There may be something useful there, but I do not think a wharf can be useful. If I remember right, there is a pier or block. If it has been of any use in the past, it has only been as a refuge in case of thick fog.

Mr. FOSTER. It is not a wharf in the proper sense of the word.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am informed by the engineer that there is a block which has been there for some years, and this is to extend it to the shore.

Mr. BERGERON. What is the distance between that block and the shore?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Three hundred and four feet. This block occupies a place of splendid isolation.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the best thing the Government can do is to leave it in its splendid isolation.

Mr. BERGERON. I do not see any use for this wharf, except that it may be useful as a place of refuge. It certainly is of no use for anything else.

Mr. FOSTER. Anyway, there is no fishing done there to any extent. Cacouna is not noted as a fishing place.

The PRIME MINISTER. The Deputy Minister informs me that this block has been extended from year to year, and that this is to continue a work that was commenced years ago.

Mr. BERGERON. Well, it has not been a good work.

Les Eboulements—
Repairs to wharf, to complete..... $800

Mr. BERGERON. What boat calls there?

The PRIME MINISTER. All the Richelieu boats stop at Les Eboulements.

Cap à L'Aigle—
Addition to wharf and general repairs (including revote of lapsed amount, $1,245)..... $1,500

Mr. BERGERON. What boats call there?

The PRIME MINISTER. The Richelieu boats stop at Cap à L'Aigle every day.

Mr. BERGERON. Since when?

The PRIME MINISTER. Cap à L'Aigle is on the other side of Murray Bay, and there are just as many tourists on that side as on the other.

Mr. BERGERON. I know that, but I did not know that the boats stopped there.

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. Will that finish the work?

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes.

Ste. Irénée—
Completion of wharf to shore (including revote of balance, 1898-1899, $776.50).. $1,200

Mr. BERGERON. Where is that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in Charlevoix County, west of Murray Bay, and it is the amount required to complete the wharf.

Mr. BERGERON. Do the steamers stop there?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The steamers will stop there.

Kamouraska—
Construction of an "L" (revote)..... $2,300

Mr. BERGERON. What steamer goes there? No Richelieu boats go there.

The PRIME MINISTER. The boats between Quebec and the lower ports of the south shore stop there.

St. André de Kamouraska, wharf..... $7,000

The PRIME MINISTER. This is a new wharf, which will cost, to complete, $13,000.

Mr. BERGERON. It will be done by tender, I suppose.

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes, it comes within the rule.

Mr. FOSTER. What is there at St. André de Kamouraska?

The PRIME MINISTER. There is a prosperous village and a large manufactory of agricultural implements.

Isle aux Grues, North Shore—
Construction of wharf and purchase of land ..... $6,200

Mr. BERGERON. That is a new wharf.

The PRIME MINISTER. This is in Montmagny. It is some little distance from Grosse Isle, and it has one hundred or two hundred families. They have no accommodation whatever, and this work is proposed, so that they may have the service of the steamboats.

Mr. BERGERON. Has the land been bought?

The PRIME MINISTER. No; nothing has been done yet.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The land will cost only $200, and this vote will cover everything.

St. Jérôme, Lake St. John—
Wharf ..... $5,000

Mr. BERGERON. What is the estimated cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This will cost $8,000.

Mr. BERGERON. Will it be done by tender?

The PRIME MINISTER. I have said that so very often.

Mr. BERGERON. Well, during the last two or three years the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) has intimated that works would be done by tender, and we have found that most of them were not done by tender. We are all interested in seeing that these works do not cost the country any more money than they should.

The PRIME MINISTER. Hear, hear.

St. Gédéon, Lake St. John—

Wharf ..... $3,000

Mr. BERGERON. This is a new wharf. How much will it cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Seven thousand dollars.

Baie des Honfleur, Lake St. John—

Wharf ..... $500

Mr. BERGERON. You are going to cover that lake with wharfs.

Mr. FOSTER. I know it will do no good, but I will enter my protest against this. There is an inland lake, that has no communication with the outside at all. It is not a lake around which any large business is carried on, and you are placing about that inland lake, inhabited but slightly, without any towns, $5,000 to $20,000 wharfs, sowing them in every direction. I never saw such an absolute carnival of expenditures in this line in my life. I can tell the hon. Prime Minister that if he undertakes to put these votes into effect, and he may depend upon it that it will be made patent to the country, he will regret it. If the people of this country knew it, they would rise in rebellion against it. There is no doubt about that. The hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) knows that what I am stating is true. Here you are studding the shores of a little inland lake, sparsely inhabited, with little boats going around it, with wharfs that would grace the sea-port towns and the towns along the great lakes in Ontario. And the local government and the municipalities have nothing to do with them. This Government supplies all the money.

The PRIME MINISTER. At the present time there is one line of steamers going around the lake.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the tonnage?

The PRIME MINISTER. I cannot say, but I know that that line is doing a great service there. A great deal of what my hon. friend has said is true; but Lake St. John is an inland sea, and if there is a portion of the country where the Government ought to come to the help of the people it is there. If, as the hon. gentleman says, the Government is to be called to account for this, I am quite able to take the responsibility before the country for what we have done, not only in that section, but in other sections, to encourage the people to help themselves.

Knowlton Landing, repairs..... $750

Mr. BERGERON. What is this for?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is required for repairs. The flooring is much decayed and dangerous.

Mr. BERGERON. By whom was that wharf built at first?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This is a wharf on Lake Memphramagog, built by our predecessors. It has got into bad order and is dangerous for carriages. The wharf is touched at regularly by a large steamer which plies on the lake, both for business and tourist travel. Lake Memphramagog is one of the most beautiful lakes in the country, if not on the continent, and is navigated by large vessels which touch at this wharf.

Mr. BERGERON. Why does the country pay for this wharf for these tourists?

The PRIME MINISTER. The objection of the hon. gentleman would have come in well at the proper time. But the wharf has been built, and this is to repair it.

Mr. BRITTON. A very different principle seems to have been adopted for the lower provinces from what has been applied in the province of Ontario. We have no such thing in the province of Ontario, with very rare exceptions.

Sabrevois, wharf..... $5,500

Mr. BERGERON. Will the hon. gentleman explain this?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This vote is to be applied in the construction of a wharf at Sabrevois on the east side of the Richelieu River. It will consist of pile work, 108 feet long by 30 feet wide, parallel to the shore, with an ice-breaker on its upstream end, and an approach, also of pile-work, 120 feet long by 24 feet wide, connected with the shore by a stone and gravel embankment, 200 feet long and 24 feet wide on top. There will be a depth of eight feet along the outer face of the wharf at extreme low water. The sum of $5,500 covers, besides the pile-work and earth embankment, the cost of erecting a freight shed.

Mr. FOSTER. Here is a wharf and a freight shed erected by the Government on this little river running through the province of Quebec. What is the business at this place, and what steamers call at it?

The PRIME MINISTER. What my hon. friend calls a little river is the second largest river in the province of Quebec.

Mr. FOSTER. I am talking of a river for navigation purposes.

The PRIME MINISTER. If there is a busy river in Canada, it is that river.

Mr. FOSTER. What lines of steamers ply on it?

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not know, but I know that it is covered by steamers.

Mr. BERGERON. I think the right hon. gentleman does know a great deal about this particular scheme. This is part of a scheme, and a very bad one. First of all, the Government of Canada have leased an island there called Isle aux Noix, on which we have fortifications and barracks, which might be used for holding camps or for keeping troops. It is a very nice island, on which there are immense works which were built years ago by the Imperial Government. The Government of Canada have leased the island to a company of St. Johns, Que., in the county of the hon. Minister of Public Works. They are fixing up these barracks, and the Government of Canada is paying for a great deal of the repairs. They are fixing up the place for a summer hotel. It has a club-house, and the friends of the Minister of Public Works have steam yachts and sailing yachts there. The Government built a wharf last year at Iberville, which cost $10,000, and at which only one barge has called since it was built. Otherwise, it has been used for tourists. The Government are building another wharf at St. Johns, where there is no traffic at all. It is built at the end of the property of a friend of the Minister of Public Works. And now they are asking for $5,500 for a wharf at Sabrevois, where there is no possibility of traffic, but the wharf will be for the convenience of the gentlemen from l'Isle aux Noix. I do not think we have ever been called upon in this House to vote anything which so much deserves the condemnation of Parliament as this. There is no reason for it. We are simply voting money to a club of gentlemen who are rich enough to build a wharf for themselves. This vote is wholly indefensible and the right hon. gentleman cannot defend it.

Mr. FOSTER. If the assertion is true, and this committee swallows that vote, we might as well disband and go home and let people of this kind run riot with the finances of the country. For my part, I would feel like doing that. It is an outrage. We cannot describe it by any less strong term. There is no trade there, but there is a club composed of friends of the Minister of Public Works, who are going to run the place and have a high old time. They have their yachts, and the Department of Public Works puts before the committee a scheme of this kind to provide them with a wharf. And yet we are asked to have confidence in the administration of that department. From the Minister down I have not the slightest confidence in the administration, when they put such things before us as the wharf at Maria and this one. It is a perfect outrage, and I am surprised that the right hon. First Minister will lend his sanction to it.

The PRIME MINISTER. There is no call for all this extravagant declamation.

Mr. FOSTER. If it were your money there would be.

The PRIME MINISTER. It is neither mine nor my honourable friend's, but the money of the public, of which we are the trustees. Before coming to a conclusion and using this harsh language, the hon. gentleman ought to have something more than the mere word of the hon. member for Beauharnois who has drawn largely on his imagination.

Mr. FOSTER. Ask your department.

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes, and I will give the hon. gentleman the information which I have from the department, which will show him that there is no connection at all between this appropriation and the invention of the hon. member for Beauharnois. The motive set down for this vote is not at all to help the gentlemen who at present, as the hon. gentleman says, have established a club on that island. That may be true, but I know nothing about it. If the Government have let that property as a pleasure ground, which has been idle for years, I do not know that they have done anything wrong or that the scheme is not a meritorious one in itself. It is a beautiful place, and was of great importance before we had steam navigation, because it commanded the entrance of the Richelieu. It was fortified at the beginning of the century, but as everybody knows, would now be worth very little in case of invasion, because if the country should be invaded, it would not be by the Richelieu. There was a time when any invasion from the south came by that river and a fortification there was necessary, but now that we have lines of railway between Canada and the United States, at all points on the frontier, it is no longer of any importance. It may be that the Government have leased that island, but of that I have no recollection at this moment, and it may be that it has been converted into a pleasure ground. But this wharf is not to be on Isle aux Noix; it is on the east shore of the river, and, therefore, we may discard altogether the fancies conjured up by the hon. gentleman in connection with this vote. The building of a wharf there is another question, which we can discuss, but let us discuss it upon its merits and not upon any fanciful ground, simply to try and make an attack on the Minister of Public Works. What is the object of the vote? Mr. Morin, the proprietor of the land on which the wharf is to be built, will give a very large roadway, 40 feet wide, leading to the proposed structure.

From Sabrevois there are large shipments of butter, cheese, eggs, oats, hay, potatoes and cattle every season. Will the hon. member for Beauharnois deny that that valley of the Richelieu is a rich farming country, from which large shipments of agricultural products are made? This wharf is to be built, so as to give the farmers of that section the means of shipping their produce by the boats which ply on that river, and it is for that purpose it was built, and not at all for the convenience of gentlemen who have a pleasure ground at Isle aux Noix.

Mr. BERGERON. My right hon. friend knows nothing about it. I would like to know if a boat can go there? I do not think that a boat can go there except some yachts which do not draw much water. Where did these people, who are shipping this butter and cheese and other products go before? They would not go that way. Last year the hon. gentleman allowed his Government to spend $10,000 at Iberville on a wharf, and only one barge has gone there since it was built.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. How does my hon. friend know that?

Mr. BERGERON. I know it from the people of the place.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Will the hon. gentleman pledge his word that only one barge went to that wharf last year?

Mr. BERGERON. I will. I rely upon the man who told me. I am not speaking of yachts, but of barges that carry produce. This wharf will be exactly in the same position. What difference does it make to me personally whether the Minister of Public Works spends the public money uselessly or not, but I criticise this expenditure because I am here to do so and to see that the public money is not improperly expended.

The PRIME MINISTER. I give the hon. gentleman's statement a flat contradiction, and I base it on the authority of the engineer's report. There is no use for the hon. gentleman to try and get away from the position. This wharf is to be built on a section of the river where there is a large farming population, and when he says it cannot be approached by steamers I take issue on that point.

Mr. BERGERON. How far is it from Isle aux Noix?

The PRIME MINISTER. I cannot say.

Mr. BERGERON. You can find out from your engineer.

The PRIME MINISTER. Well, find out.

Mr. TAYLOR. Neither this nor any other Government has any right to deal differently with one province than with another. There are lots of islands in the St. Lawrence, in the province of Ontario, where wharfs might be built. There is Howe Island, for instance. Has the Government ever spent a dollar around that island, and from that island there are large shipments of produce. But there the farmers united with the township for the purpose of building wharfs. Take the Rideau Canal from here to Kingston, on which millions have been spent by the British Government, and on which there are lakes three or four times the size of the lakes here. Take Rideau Lake and Portland, the docks at these places were erected by the municipalities. Westport erected its own docks. The business men of the place and the council joined together and built the wharf, and the Government never spent a dollar on wharfs through all that chain of lakes from here to Kingston. Why treat Ontario different from Quebec and Nova Scotia? Why should they not build these at Howe Island, Wolfe Island or Garden Island? These are large farming islands, comprising municipalities, and the Government never came to the rescue of the farmers of these islands who want to ship their butter, pork, cheese and eggs. But if a few farmers in Quebec want to send out a little produce, the Minister of Public Works must come down with a vote of $5,000 or $10,000 for a wharf, so that a steamboat may take the produce away. Why treat one section differently from another? It is simply a job on the part of the Minister of Public Works. I agree with the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron), and I am sure he would not object to a vote for his own province if it was in the interest of the country. You may go the length of the St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario, from Montreal to Hamilton, and you will not find a place where the Government has put up a wharf. Where has there been any such expenditure in such places as Deseronto, Picton, Belleville, and so on? Private enterprise has put up the wharfs, and those using the wharfs are charged dockage. This method that the Government follows is simply spilling money into one province and making the other pay for it.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

Mr. BERGERON. I wish to ask for a few items of information, which the hon. First Minister can look up before we meet at eight o'clock. What is the population of Sabrevois? What is the width of the river where this wharf is to be built? How far is it from where the wharf is to be built to Isle aux Noix? How was the trade of this place done before? What is the number of vessels that pass there? The attempt has been made to give certain information. I do not want to say anything against the officials of the department, but my impression is that if the Minister wants something done, he can always get an official who will report that it is necessary. It is not as it was in the good old times, when the employees were independent enough to give their own opinions. But, now, every one of them, from the head of the department to the lowest officer, is so much afraid of the Ministers and the Government that they will do anything that the Minister wants them to do. So, before accepting any report, we should probe to the bottom of the scheme. If my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) will get the information in answer to the questions I have asked, he will convince himself that this expenditure is not needed.

The PRIME MINISTER. I want to say to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bergeron) that the employees who are in the department to-day are the same as were there in the good old days that he speaks about—there has been no change. And I say for the honour of these gentlemen that I believe that in the good old days as in these days they were conscientious enough to do their duty without fear or favour, and that even in the old times when the hon. gentleman's friends were in office, they could not impose upon them or bambozzle them or bulldoze them. As to the remarks of the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor), he could not resist the temptation to raise a sectional cry. Why, if the Government to-day is building wharfs on the Richelieu River and other rivers—I will not say but that, perhaps, there may be occasion to revise that policy—complaints from the hon. gentleman comes a little late. He has supported the same policy for more than twenty years. We have just passed two votes to improve wharfs at Magog and Knowlton which were built under the same conditions. If there was a reason to build these wharfs at Magog and Knowlton, there is the same reason to build the wharf at Sabrevois.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Sir Richard Cartwright). My hon. friend from South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) should be aware that we have expended a considerable amount of money in improving just such places as Cobourg, Port Hope, Whitby, and others, to say nothing of the large sums we have expended in improving the harbours of Toronto and Hamilton. And not only have large amounts been spent on the shores of Lake Ontario, but considerable expenditure has taken place also on Lake Erie. Very heavy expenditures have been made, as he knows very well, along the entire line of Lake Huron—at Goderich, Southampton, Kincardine, Collingwood, Owen Sound, and many other places.

Mr. TAYLOR. For dredging, not for dock building.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Very large expenditures indeed for the harbours—

Mr. TAYLOR. For wharfs?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Yes, for wharfs, and in connection with the improvement of the harbours. The hon. gentleman and his friends are perfectly in order in criticising any expenditure that may be made for which no good cause can be shown. I have not a word to say against that. But I would say that it would not be desirable for us to introduce a sort of ward appropriation system, under which, if a sum of money is given to one particular province every other province claims a ratable proportion. Nothing could be worse than that, and I would advise my hon. friend and the members on both sides of this House, if they desire the welfare of the country, as far as possible to avoid the comparing of the expenditure in any year in one province with the expenditure in another. It will not tend to economy or to the public good.

Mr. TAYLOR. I am not making any such reference, but I say the Government are taking up works such as they have not done in Ontario. The Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) knows Howe Island, Wolfe Island and Garden Island as well as I do, and he knows that they are better entitled to have a dock built at the Government's expense than some of the places for which votes are now being given. I agree with him that we have spent large sums in dredging different ports that he has mentioned, but we have not built docks in any of these places.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). If the hon. gentleman will refer to the Estimates of this year, he will find that he is in error. There are votes for such places as—

Mr. TAYLOR. I know there are political jobs introduced this year.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This is only in continuation of the system which was commenced before. There are votes for Point Pelee on Lake Erie, and Keene on Indian River, and other places in the province of Ontario—just such wharfs as this.

Mr. TAYLOR. Just such jobs as are put up in the province of Quebec to help supporters of the Government.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, but in continuation of the same system that has been carried on for years.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

(In the Committee.)

Sabrevois, wharf ..... $5,500

Mr. BERGERON. When the committee rose at six o'clock, I had asked the hon. gentleman to give me the population of Sabrevois, to say how far it is from Isle au Noix, the depth of the river at that place, and how the people bring their produce to market.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have procured a memorandum which I think will cover the points raised by the hon. gentleman. Sabrevois is 7 miles above St. Johns and 5 miles below Isle aux Noix. The river opposite the village is 3,200 feet wide. The people of the surrounding district ship to Montreal, by boat and by rail, in large quantities, butter, cheese, hay, oats, potatoes, cattle and sheep. Sabrevois has one of the largest butter factories in the province of Quebec, with a daily output of 700 pounds, part of which is shipped to Montreal by rail, but it will be entirely shipped by boat, when proper landing facilities are provided. There is a daily line of steamboats between Lacolle and Montreal, with Sabrevois as a daily port of call. The proposed wharf will be devoted entirely to commercial purposes. The yacht club is at Isle aux Noix, 5 miles above Sabrevois. The average depth of water is 8 feet.

Mr. SPROULE. What kind of boats would you have calling in 8 feet of water?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. River boats which draw less than 8 feet.

Mr. TALBOT. Some of the finest boats running on the St. Lawrence River from Quebec down to Montréal draw 5 feet of water. We have splendid boats running between St. Antoine and Lotbinière drawing 5 feet of water and less. These boats carry as many as 500 or 600 people on excursions, and tons and tons of freight besides.

Mr. BERGERON. How far is Sabrevois from the upper part of the canal at St. Johns?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Seven miles above the entrance of the canal. There is only 7 feet of water in the canal; therefore, the depth of water in the Richelieu is greater than that in the canal. The population of the village of Sabrevois is 200. Of course, there is a large district of country outside the village served by that wharf. People come from some miles around the district to the Sabrevois wharf with their produce.

Mr. BERGERON. I understand there is no wharf there now. How do they ship their eggs and dairy products from Sabrevois to-day?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is an old landing, which is used to some extent now, and some of the trade goes by rail.

Mr. BERGERON. Is there any boat plying there now?

Mr. SCRIVER. I may inform my hon. friend that a new boat has been constructed at Toronto this year, which, I understand, is to run from St. Johns to Lacolle, touching at this wharf on the way, going and returning. The distance between St. John and Lacolle is about 20 miles. The boat running between those two points often carries excursionists to Isle aux Noix, and no doubt it will be largely used in the future for the same purpose. My hon. friend indulged in some extravagance, when he spoke of the magnificent structures at Isle au Noix. The fortress that was built there years ago by the British Government, is no longer in existence, as he would know, if he had been there himself; and he would know, further, that the whole island has been leased for pasturage for some years past at a comparatively small sum. The arrangement with the Government by which the company has undertaken to construct a hotel and to beautify the island, has been an advantageous one in every respect. Such structures as are on the island are sadly dilapidated now, and the improvements that this company will undertake will, no doubt, be of very great advantage to the surrounding country. As to the produce likely to be shipped from this wharf, I fancy that it is now hauled by vehicles to St. Johns by way of Iberville, where there is a railway station.

Mr. BERGERON. I am afraid my hon. friend was not here the other night, when we had a statement from the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence.

Mr. SCRIVER. I was not.

Mr. BERGERON. The hon. Minister's information was, that the fort is not in a bad condition at all. The walls, I think, are about 4 feet thick. The hon. Minister said that there were some repairs to be made by the Government, because the Government is interested in seeing that the structure does not deteriorate. As far as the dividing up of the fort into a hotel is concerned, that work will be done by the company. The fort is in such a condition that there will be very little to be done to make it a very good summer resort. I admit—and it was the first time that I had heard of this matter—that the old arrangement for the lease of the island was a very bad one. It was leased for $40 a year, and the man who leased it made $400 or $500 out of it from pasture. We have been losing money. I have no doubt about that, and this is a better arrangement, as we are to get $150 a year for twenty-one years. But what I object to is the building of these wharfs, purely and simply for pleasure purposes, and not at all to meet the requirements of business. I have proof that only one barge last year went to a wharf that cost us $10,000. I am under the impression that this wharf, proposed in this vote, will not be used for the purposes of business. A barge or two may go there, but it will not be used for trade, but simply by pleasure-seekers.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend is altogether astray, and the information which he has, as he will see by looking at the map, cannot be accurate. He tells us that this wharf is 7 miles above Isle aux Noix.

Mr. BERGERON. We were told, 5 miles.

The PRIME MINISTER. Suppose you say 5 miles. If the wharf is 5 miles from Isle aux Noix, it cannot serve for pleasure tourists at Isle aux Noix. There has been for a long time an old landing place at Sabrevois, where the people have been in the habit of shipping their produce.

Mr. BERGERON. We are not asked to make repairs, but to build a new wharf.

The PRIME MINISTER. There is an old landing place which does not belong to the Government, which has been put there, I do not know how, for the convenience of the people belonging to that neighbourhood. This is a convenient place to put a wharf in order to distribute the produce of the people at that place.

Mr. BERGERON. This is only the commencement of it. What is the estimated cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This vote of $5,500 covers everything.

Mr. SPROULE. In reference to the statement made by the right hon. Prime Minister before six o'clock, and practically repeated by the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce, to the effect that the same thing was being done in the Georgian Bay right along, I wish to say, as one who knows something about that part of the country and the wharfs that have been built there, that there is no comparison in any way between the expenditures that have been made there and those that are being made here. There are steamers going into those harbours in the Georgian Bay and the upper lakes drawing 15, 16 and 17 feet of water, and a wharf is of little use unless it gives 15 feet of water. These hon. gentlemen forget that there is an immense trade on the great lakes, which is not at all to be compared with the trade that is done at these little places along a river. There is an immense trade passing between Ontario, the Manitoulin Islands, Manitoba and the North-west Territories, and is constantly increasing. This trade is carried by these large steamers, and, therefore, it became a matter of necessity that the country should provide conveniences for these steamers to land and load and unload their freight. When the people on the Georgian Bay want little wharfs, where there are 4 or 5 feet of water, at which to land their skiffs or yachts, they build them themselves, and they do not think of asking the Government to do it for them. It is for the accommodation of these large vessels which are doing this immense trade, that these wharfs are built on the Georgian Bay, Lake Huron, Lake Erie and Lake Superior. There is no comparison between that and what has taken place in Quebec and the maritime provinces. I understood the hon. Minister of Finance to say: You are sectional in your views. Would you deprive us of this expenditure in the maritime provinces and Quebec, when you are getting it in Ontario? We are neither getting it, nor do we expect it, and, in the few cases where such expenditures have been made, we have condemned them, because we regard this thing as an innovation which will lead to unlimited abuse in the expenditure of public money. If it can be shown that a place is of sufficient importance, that trade is to be done at it, and that the people require the convenience of the landing of a boat to do that trade, there is no objection to spending public money. I would not object to it, no matter what part of the country it is in. But it is because this expenditure is taking place all over the country for the construction of these new wharfs, where there is practically no trade to be done, that we object to it as injurious to the country and altogether unjustifiable. I repeat again, that there is no comparison between the expenditures which we have sanctioned in the votes that we have passed for the maritime provinces and Quebec, and the votes that have been passed for expenditures on wharfs on the Georgian Bay and the upper lakes.

Mr. GUILLET. I would like to know whether there is a customs officer at this port, and what the population is?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no town, but there is a small settlement and a scattered population. The argument of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) appears to be, that because one section happens to be favoured with deep water, and another is no so favoured, the latter should not be allowed to carry on their business. Is that the argument?

Mr. SPROULE. It depends on the trade to be done.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Surely, the hon. gentleman would adapt the votes of public money to the commercial necessities of the different districts. If there is a population that desires to get their produce to market, the fact that the water was only 4 or 5 feet deep, is no reason why they should not have a wharf at which to ship their produce.

Mr. GUILLET. I am told that they do the marketing by wagon.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a very considerable amount of produce carried up and down that river on the boats. I have no doubt that if the facilities are provided, the people will use them.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to point out to my hon. friends that they are only laying up dangers for themselves in the future. The argument of the hon. Minister of Finance means that, wherever you have a little farming community on an inland river or lake, you are going to have them coming and asking you for $5,000 or $8,000 wharfs. Let a man put on a boat of very small capacity to skirt the lake, and he has a right to come down to you through his representative and say, "I want three or four wharfs there at $3,000 or $4,000 or $5,000 per wharf," and he will get them, according to the invitation given to-day by the Finance Minister and the First Minister. Are the constituents of any member of this House living on a little river along which little boats of four feet draft can run? Though it has never hitherto been dreamed of, people are now notified that if they ship a few eggs or a few pounds of butter, no matter how small the population may be, they have a right to come to this Dominion, and the Dominion treasury is open to them. I warn the Finance Minister and the First Minister that they are opening up a system of paths setting towards the Dominion treasury which once opened up it will be very difficult to close. By what right can you stuff Lake St. John full of wharfs to the tune of $10,000 or $12,000, and refuse the same thing for any inland lake in the province of Ontario or the province of British Columbia or any other part of this Dominion? You cannot possibly do it. The invitation is out, and the people will avail themselves of it. My only wonder is that the staid members of the Government, who do have some idea of financial expenditure and the lines on which it should go, assent to votes of this kind. The Opposition used to demand strenuously—and they were right in doing so—some commercial basis for expenditures of this kind. That wharf which was built at Iberville last year belongs, I suppose, to the Dominion?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Certainly.

Mr. FOSTER. Then, your wharfinger makes reports, no doubt, to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and I will ask the Minister, before we come to concurrence, to bring down the returns of his wharfingers on this wharf at Iberville and on the wharfs in Lake St. John for the last season, and we will just see what comes of this expenditure. I do not want to talk in an embarrassing or party sense; but as one who has had something to do with some of the expenditures of this country, and who may at some time again have something to do with them, I want to join hon. gentlemen opposite in coming near some well-defined line of expenditure; otherwise, we shall gradually drift into this condition that the provinces and the municipalities and private enterprise will all want to unload themselves on to the Dominion treasury, and through political influence they will be successful. If we could only consent on both sides of the House to come to a well-defined line of expenditure, it would be a great gain. My right hon. friend will see that there is no line at present, but just get it as you can, and the successful one wins. If sufficient pressure is brought, as by the hon. gentleman from the Lake St. John district, who has political necessities, and if he and his constituents are pertinacious enough, and have a yielding compatriot to go to, they will get their demands; but if it is another Minister who is approached, he will reason with them, and say, "You know we do not go into that kind of expenditure; please do not ask me for it." Unless you agree to some well-defined line, you establish a precedent, and you obliterate all lines of distinction between federal, provincial and municipal responsibility.

Mr. COCHRANE. I want to say a few words in reference to a remark made by the Finance Minister about Port Colborne when I referred to the nine wharfs in his constituency. I was astounded that a gentleman occupying the position of Minister of Finance should compare the nine wharfs in his constituency with a great port like Port Colborne, on which the expenditure of money has been of a national character, with the view of attracting the trade and commerce of the great North-west. When I spoke of so many wharfs in his constituency, the hon. gentleman replied to me by saying that there is more money spent at Port Colborne than in Nova Scotia. I do not care where the money is spent if it is spent for the benefit of Canada as a whole. For instance, take my own constituency. It is bordered on the south by Lake Ontario. There is a town in my riding named Brighton, situated on the best natural harbour on Lake Ontario, and there are three wharfs there built by private enterprise. We have a village of 1,200 inhabitants called Colborne, which has a wharf built by private enterprise, hundreds of feet long in Lake Ontario; and I will venture the assertion that there has been more grain shipped from any one of these wharfs than there has been from Prince Edward Island in any one year in the last fifteen or twenty years. In saying that I know what I am talking about why should a farming community in the province of Nova Scotia or in Prince Edward Island, living by a little river or an inland lake have money voted by the Dominion Parliament to build wharfs, and the same rule not be applied to other provinces? My riding has been represented by Liberals and Conservatives; yet there has never been such a thing dreamed of as to ask for a vote to build wharfs in it. There has been no such thing in the province of Ontario as a demand on the Dominion Government to build wharfs, unless it is an important place. We do not complain of the expenditure of money in the maritime provinces. As I say, I do not care where the money is expended if it is spent in the best interests of Canada ; but I join with the hon. member for York in asking the Government where this thing will lead to. It is most absurd to say that because there is an inland river and a few settlers along it, that money should be spent building a wharf at that place. Why, people in my riding drive 18 or 20 miles, and I have known them to draw grain 30 or 40 miles to market, and they never suppose we would grant them federal money to open up and develop these little places which private enterprise and local enterprise should develop. I would call the attention of the hon. Minister of Marine to the returns in his department, and will venture this assertion that from one-third of the wharfs in the province of Quebec there is not a dollar return.

The PRIME MINISTER. How much is paid the collectors ?

Mr. COCHRANE. If the wharf gets nothing, it is because the wharf is not used; or if the wharf is used and he makes no return, it is because he is stealing the money. I am not speaking against Quebec, but trying to convince the Government that it is a mistake to spend money in that way. In Ontario the wharfs that the Government own pay about $120 apiece. The argument of my hon. friend from Grey was that the wharfs on the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron are of national importance, and, therefore, deserving help from the federal exchequer, but these little paltry wharfs in the maritime provinces and the province of Quebec of which the ex-Finance Minister speaks, are only of local importance.

Mr. McMULLEN. I certainly hope that the picture which the ex-Finance Minister has drawn is not true to nature. We are entirely at the mercy of the Government. Hon. members coming from Ontario are not supposed to know what wharfs should be built or should not be built in Nova Scotia or New Brunswick, and must rely on the representations of the Ministers, and I am prepared to accept those representations until I have proof that they are not true. I cannot take the word of hon. gentlemen opposite, because I had too many evidences, when they were in office, of what little faith we could put in their representations. In a year or two, when the returns from these wharfs come in, we will be able to have some idea whether the money was prudently spent or not, and if it is then shown that money has been thrown away, I shall be prepared to give my opinion on such expenditure. So far as Ontario is concerned, we endeavour to act prudently, and I am not advocating expenditure on any wharfs in that province, where they are not necessary or where they should not be built as Dominion works, nor am I aware that other hon. gentlemen from that province are doing so. But we know that the policy followed by the late Government was to go round peddling these wharfs in return for political support. A constituency which returned a member in opposition to the Government had not the slightest chance of having any expenditure on public works in it, no matter how urgent the necessity, whereas those which returned supporters of the Government were treated in a most liberal manner; and we cannot but expect that constituencies which for eighteen years were left without the expenditure of a single dollar on any public improvement, because they were faithful to their principles, should now say to their friends in power: It is time you should do something for us. I repeat that until I have some evidence that the picture drawn by the ex-Finance Minister, which I consider highly exaggerated, has any basis in fact, I shall continue my confidence to the present Administration in this matter.

Mr. FOSTER. If I were to tell the hon. gentleman all that I know about this miserable juggling with wharfs for the last 20 years in this country, the hair would stand up on the top of his head.

Mr. McMULLEN. It did stand up on the top of my head a good many times when the hon. gentleman was in office, and it will stand up again if hon. gentlemen on this side can be shown to have done the things which he says they are going to do.

Mr. COCHRANE. If the hon. gentleman was as assiduous at present in studying the Auditor General's Report, as he was when on this side of the House, he would know more about the public expenditure than he apparently does. He is at present prepared to take everything the Government does on faith. He has even faith enough to believe that he can go back to the electorate and persuade them that he is acting in their interests, as he did when on this side of the House. Was it the hon. gentleman or the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce who said, when the late Government was in power, that the maritime provinces were the wet-nurse of boodlers. I see the Minister of Trade and Commerce assents to it. He was the gentleman who said that the maritime provinces were the wet and dry nurse of boodlers. If ever there was truth in that, he has it illustrated around him to-day. He is there and is dealing out milk copiously to help the wet nurse to sustain these boodlers.

Mr. McMULLEN. I admit that I gave a good deal of attention to the Auditor General's Report, when I was on the other side, and hunted up many things that I found fault with. My hon. friend (Mr. Cochrane) feels sore to this day for some of the things I found. But I am not on the other side now, and it is the duty of hon. gentlemen opposite to find these things in the Auditor General's Report. If they will hunt up such irregularities as I found—as a member selling out jobs for taking care of canal gates, and getting a cow from one man, a horse from another, and a pig from another—we will give them credit for it.

Mr. COCHRANE. If the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) is making that statement with reference to me, if he says he found any such thing in the Auditor General's Report relating to me, then, if it were parliamentary, I would say it was a lie. But, as it is not parliamentary, I cannot say it. But I will say this, that if he tells me such a thing outside, I will slap his chops for him. You mention that to me tomorrow, and I will break your nose.

Mr. SPROULE. I wish to comment on the principle enunciated by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) with regard to the expenditure of public money in the maritime provinces and in Quebec, as shown in the supplementary Estimates. He said that if there was a farming community with produce to sell, and water communication by means of which it could be carried to market, even if the depth of water was only 3 or 4 feet, it was the duty of the Government to provide them with a wharf. This, he said, applied to any part of the country. How would that apply to the case I am about to state? Take Manitoulin Island; it is 180 miles long, and has about 400 miles of coast. Mr. Chairman, I wish you would call upon hon. gentlemen to preserve order.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. member for Essex seems to have taken charge of the House. He has taken charge of the Public Accounts of late, and now he seems to think he has been promoted to take charge of the House.

Mr. SPROULE. On that long line of coast there are many places where there is a sufficient depth of water for the large boats of the lakes to call. There are a hundred places with good settlements in close proximity, where the farmers might avail themselves of the opportunity of shipping, if public money were expended to provide them with a wharf. But in all that length of coast there are only nine or ten places where the boats can call to-day. The Government have refused to spend a dollar on that long line of coast, except at two or three places. It cannot be said that there is no trade to be done. I have here a list of the products shipped last year from that island, from which I take the following items:—

Horses .....	306
Head of cattle .....	3,430
Sheep .....	8,163
Swine .....	1,666
Poultry .....	2,809
Pounds of hides .....	48,575
Sheep skins .....	1,866
Tubs of butter.....	3,656
Cases of eggs .....	856

Mr. McMULLEN.

Cases of bread .....	52
Baskets of cranberries .....	525
Baskets of blueberries .....	11,298
Tons of fish .....	782
Pounds of beef .....	43,808
Bags of potatoes.....	7,102
Tons of hay .....	879
Bushels of wheat .....	7,202
Bushels of oats .....	18,563
Bushels of pease.....	25,072
Bushels of rye and barley.....	495
Pounds of wool.....	79,095
Pounds of cheese .....	34,350
Pounds of dressed hogs.....	38,750
Shingles .....	5,190,000
Feet of lumber .....	2,984,000
Laths, bundles .....	20,000
Posts .....	575,786

Also ties, cordwood and other articles. But on all this long line of coast the Government have hardly thought it worth while to spend a dollar to enable these people to reach the outside world, but on these small rivers, where there are 2 or 3 feet of water, they spend $8,000 or $10,000 to make a harbour, and think nothing of it. In one county we have twelve or fourteen cases of that kind. But in this large island the people can get their produce as best they can over 20, or 30, or even 40 miles of bad roads in order to have it shipped. The First Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) said, with regard to the principle that they adopted in the bonusing of railways—

Mr. MCGREGOR. Oh, give us a rest.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. member for North Essex (Mr. McGregor) has done nothing but rest for the last three weeks, except to interrupt the proceedings of this House, and that is not much trouble for him.

Mr. MCGREGOR. I am ashamed of you.

Mr. SPROULE. And I am ashamed of the hon. member (Mr. McGregor). And his constituents should be ashamed of him. I am endeavouring to do my duty here, and he is not. A gentleman from the Manitoulin district writes to me:

You may have a recollection of our deputation to Ottawa, a year or two ago, on the revote of the subsidy on the Manitoulin Railway. We got a promise that it would be among the first given.—

I note that the leader of the Government says that where the farmers of the older sections of Ontario are 40 miles from market, it would be inhuman to withhold aid to them for railways.

—We are shut out in winter, and the inclosed will show you what we have done under adverse circumstances. Would you, and if you could not do so honestly in your own constituency's interests, ask Mr. Klock or Bennett to ask the Government why this subsidy was withheld from the isolated people of Manitoulin.

Here is what they say. There is not a dollar given for that railway of ours, though we have to carry our produce over 40 miles, at the same time that railways are being subsidized all over Quebec. This is the statement, he says, of the First Minister. Had he carried out the very principle which he enunciated in the House, and had he carried out the promises given to us last year, surely we would have something for the building of that railway in aid of our farmers on the Manitoulin Islands, who are in some instances 40 miles from market, and who have few harbours where boats can run to take their produce to market. Surely he would have thought it worth while to expend a few dollars to bring to their doors the conveniences of life that he is giving to the people down in the maritime provinces and Quebec, where there are only a few farmers to support or use the wharf. There is one principle applied down there and another principle applied to Ontario, and it will be a difficult task for him and his party to square themselves with the people living up in that distant island, when they know that he is spending money so lavishly down there on every little harbour where there is eight feet, five feet, and some times only three feet of water; while the people in the Manitoulin Islands have been for years neglected.

Mr. MCGREGOR. Why did not your party help them when they were in power?

Mr. SPROULE. They did assist, and were going on to assist, and at the very time that they went out they were prepared to assist that railway. There was a promise of aid to that railway, and when the hon. gentlemen opposite came in they refused it, denied the poor farmers of that country the accommodation that they were entitled to, and which had been promised to them. I say it will be hard for the right hon. gentleman and his friends to satisfy these poor people up there who are in such urgent need, that this Government are doing equal justice all round. When they pick up the reports they see that large sums of money have been spent for many harbours down in the maritime provinces and Quebec, along the rivers and along the lakes, and along the bays, starting new harbours here and there where there are perhaps only 100 or 200 people, while up in Ontario the people have been labouring under these disadvantages for many years, and although they have made appeal after appeal to the hon. gentleman for the expenditure of a few thousand dollars to enable them to carry on their business, the Government has turned a deaf ear to them all. I say these poor farmers will not understand that even-handed justice has been meted out to them, and that the same favour has been accorded to them that has been lavishly accorded to other portions of the country where they see so many small harbours bonused with grants of money for the purpose of building up little villages in the maritime provinces and along the St. Lawrence River. What excuse has the Government for neglecting these people on whose behalf I am speaking? It is not for want of trade, it is not for want of settlement, it is not for want of large and important villages. All these things are there; yet the Government have neglected them, and they will attempt to justify their expenditures on little harbours down in Quebec as they have been doing this afternoon from time to time, that is to say, offering no justification at all. On the other hand, the people living in the Manitoulin Islands have no assistance given them to carry their produce to the markets of the world. It is a matter of indifference to this Government how great their hardships are, and how sadly they are in need of a remedy. They will be anything but pleased with the Prime Minister himself and the members of the Government who control the purse-strings to-day.

Mr. DYMENT. I must say that the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) has put in a very eloquent plea for the two items that the Government have been good enough to put in the supplementary Estimates for two wharfs on the Manitoulin Islands this year. There is an item for $3,300 at Sheguiandah, and another for $4,000 at Providence Bay on the south shore of Manitoulin Island. All that the hon. member has said with regard to the people there and the fertility of that island, I can heartily endorse. I do not think that there is a population in any portion of Canada that deserves assistance any more than the people of this island. They number about 15,000, and the population is rapidly increasing. Unfortunately, they have no railway communication, and I think the Government are doing a very praiseworthy thing this year in putting these two items in the supplementary Estimates. I hope the very forceful speech of the hon. member has convinced his colleagues on the Opposition side of the House of the importance of these two works, and that there will be no opposition to them. I may say with regard to the railway the hon. gentleman referred to that we have been looking forward very anxiously—

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Campbell). I think the hon. gentleman had better confine himself to the subject under discussion.

Mr. DYMENT. I only mentioned it because the hon. member referred to it himself.

Mr. WALLACE. The hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) seemed to be in doubt as to the advisability of voting these Estimates as proposed. In his heart I am sure he had very much more than a doubt. He said he supposed that after this money was voted, and after the returns began to come in two or three years hence—but which never come as a matter of fact—then he thought we might be justified in expending this money. Is not that a fine business proposition? It reminds me of the way to distinguish between a mushroom and a toadstool. It is said that if you want to know the difference between them, you must eat them, and if you eat a mushroom you will live, but if you eat a toadstool you will die.

Rivière du Lievre—

Lock and dam, extraordinary repairs.. $1,600

Mr. BERGERON. What is to be done there ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Cribwork to be constructed on both sides of the river. Details of the item are given, the total being $1,600, which is the amount of the appropriation.

Mr. FOSTER. What are you getting out of that work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. About $250 a year.

Beauport, wharf ..... $4,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The Government originally purchased this wharf years ago and began adding to it. This is to make a further addition.

Mr. BERGERON. What depth of water will you have at that wharf ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It will give 14 feet of water at high water.

Ste. Anne de Bellevue—

Extension to wharf ..... $2,500

Mr. BERGERON. I thought that work was done lately ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No. This is to increase the width of the wharf to 30 feet and to make the length 100 feet.

Coteau Landing—

Dredging (revote $2,500)..... $6,000

Mr. BERGERON. How is this to be expended ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is required to dredge a channel from the docks of the Canada Atlantic Railway at Coteau Landing to the entrance of the Soulanges Canal, 100 feet wide and 14 feet deep, 1,000 feet in length.

Mr. BERGERON. How much has been spent ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $17,000 has been spent in dredging.

Mr. BERGERON. And you want $6,000 more ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, to complete it.

Mr. CLARKE. Is that work done by contract ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was done by a hired dredge at so much per hour.

Mr. CLARKE. How much per hour.

Mr. WALLACE.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $8 per hour.

Mr. BERGERON. I want to give my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) the history of how this contract was given, and the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) will please listen to this. It is no wonder that we are always very anxious, when we are passing any vote, to have the assurance of the hon. Minister of Public Works that the work will be done by tender, so that we can keep it in check. This is a most extraordinary way of proceeding. It may take a few moments to state the facts, but I am bound to put them before Parliament and the country to show how this was done. It was brought out last year that Mr. Gauthier, who had the contract, is the father-in-law of Mr. Tarte's son. This is a work which involves an expenditure of $23,000, because it will cost that amount when it is finished. We have spent $17,000 and we are now asked to vote $6,000 more. At the commencement of this transaction the following letter was written from the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, on the 15th March, 1898. It is as follows :—

(Translation.)

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, 15th March, 1898.

Sir,—I am directed by the hon. the Minister of Public Works to inform you that the department is ready to enter into negotiations with you for the undertaking of the dredging required this year at Laprairie and Coteau Landing. Of course a dredge will be required at each place.

Would you kindly let us know at your earliest convenience whether you are willing to undertake that work, and whether you have on hand the necessary plant, and also, if you are ready to start dredging upon the adequate opening of the navigation season. The rate paid by the department for that kind of work, when the dredges have the ordinary normal capacity, is $8 per working hour.

An early reply will greatly oblige.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your humble servant,

(Signed) A. GOBEIL,
Deputy Minister.

Thomas Gauthier, Esq.,
Montreal, Q.

Mr. FOSTER. Is Mr. Gauthier a dredging man ?

Mr. BERGERON. No, Mr. Gauthier is a real estate dealer. Mr. Gauthier got that cinch, that splendid work in which he has nothing to do. The letter was written by the department to him on the 15th of March, and on the 25th of March, ten days after it, Gauthier wrote to the Minister of Public Works as follows :—

(Translation.)

Montreal, 25th March, 1898.

The Hon. Minister of Public Works, Ottawa, Can.

Hon. Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 15th instant, from your department, I beg to say that I am willing to undertake the dredging at Laprairie and Coteau Landing at the prices mentioned in your letter, namely, $8 per working hour.

I have at my disposal a first-class plant, and I will be ready to start dredging immediately upon receipt of your instructions. Of course, the dredges will be subject to inspection by the officers of your department.

As far as Coteau Landing is concerned, as I am told that the work admits of no delay, I would suggest that I might be allowed to begin operations on Monday, the 20th April next.

He was in a hurry to commence.

The dredge I have at my disposal for that place is dredge "No. 5," belonging to Manning & McDonald, and it is near the work.

Hoping that the same will meet with your approval, and that I may receive a favourable reply.

I remain, sir,
Your humble servant,

(Signed) THOS. GAUTHIER.

Manning & Macdonald were working for the Department of Railways and Canals, at the head of the Soulanges Canal, and they had dredges there doing nothing. They had required these dredges for the opening of the canal, but they were not working at that time, and as they were under heavy expense, they were quite satisfied that these dredges should be kept busy. Here is a second letter, and I am at a loss to understand why it is here, because it is almost word for word the other letter of Gauthier. It is dated the 1st of April, and it purports to be about the same thing. Here is a copy of letter No. 191307. The Minister of Public Works makes his offer on the 15th March. Gauthier answers on the 25th of March, and on the 5th of April a letter is written by the Deputy Minister of Public Works to Mr. Roy, secretary of the department, and this is what it contains:

(Translation.)

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, 5th April, 1898.

Mr. Roy,—Please prepare a report to Council stating that the Canada Atlantic Railway Company have asked the department to undertake dredging around their wharfs and grain elevator at Coteau Landing; the original representations being to the effect that this dredging would require the expenditure of $6,000; that from the surveys made, we have obtained more satisfactory data with reference to the cost of the work, which is estimated at $18,000, to give the depth of 14 feet applied for.

The Order in Council ought to point out in a general way the enormous importance to the trade of the St. Lawrence of allowing easy access to such an elevator, where is to be stored the grain brought by rail from the west, and that it is highly desirable to make such an expenditure which though seemingly considerable, will result favourably to the trade in general.

(Signed) A. GOBEIL,
Deputy Minister.

E. F. E. Roy, Esq.,
Secretary, P. W. D.

There must have been something forgotten, because on the 13th of April the Deputy Minister again writes to Mr. Roy:

(Translation.)

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, 13th April, 1898.

Mr. Roy,—Did I forget to ask you to prepare a report to Council stating that the dredging which the department has undertaken to perform at Coteau Landing, in order to allow easy access to the elevator of the Canada Atlantic Railway Company, will cost $21,000—

He had said before that it would cost $18,000.

(Translation.)

—and to ask for a special appropriation in the supplementary Estimates of this year and those of next year, to meet this expenditure?

(Signed) A. GOBEIL,

E. F. E. Roy, Esq.,
Secretary, P.W.D.

The secretary of the department puts himself into communication with the chief engineer, to whom he writes as follows:—

(Copy of No. 109162, letter sent.)

Ottawa, 6th April, 1898.

Sir,—I am directed to inform you that the Minister authorizes you to accept Mr. Thomas Gauthier's offer in No. 191010, herein inclosed, to undertake and execute the dredging required at Laprairie and Coteau Landing, Que., at $8 per working hour.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) E. F. E. ROY,
Secretary.

The Chief Engineer, Public Works Department, Ottawa.

To give a colour to the work and to show that it is absolutely necessary, something must have happened that we have not got here; but we can infer it from the letter which I shall read. It had to be shown to the Council that the work was necessary, and that some people there were interested in it. This is a copy of the letter:

(Copy of letter received, No. 191193.)

Ottawa, Ont., April 6th, 1898.

Dear Sir,—I am directed to state, in answer to yours of the 5th instant, with reference to the possible damage which might result from the dredging at Coteau Landing, that the foundations of our elevator wharfs at Coteau Landing will not be affected by your dredging around them to a maximum depth of fourteen (14) feet below low-water level, as stated in your letter; consequently, no damage can arise thereby.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) A. W. FLECK,
Secretary-Treasurer.

A. Gobeil, Esq.,
Deputy Minister of Public Works,
Ottawa, Ont.

Here is another letter which explains what we can infer of the doings that were going on behind the door:

(Copy of letter received, No. 191772.)

Depot Harbour, Ont., April 23rd, 1898.

A. W. Fleck, Ottawa.

Four vessels in port now, and we expect the "Lynn" to-morrow morning, with six thousand tons of corn, all for Montreal. See letter to me from our traffic manager relative to situation at Coteau Landing.

(Sgd.) E. J. CHAMBERLIN.

All this was done to show that it was necessary to have fourteen feet of water at the Canada Atlantic wharfs for the vessels coming down. I pointed out to the committee last year that there was no use of deepening the water to fourteen feet of water, because no vessels drawing more than nine feet of water would go there until the Soulanges Canal was completed, because all the vessels coming through the Beauharnois Canal drew only nine feet of water. There is another letter from Mr. Chamberlain to Mr. Fleck, saying that it is very important that large barges should be able to come to that wharf; and there is a memorandum which must have been sent with the letter, giving the number of barges and the amount of grain they carry. The following is the report of Council:—

Extract from a Report of the Committee of the Honourable the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency on the 25th April, 1898.

On a report dated 19th April, 1898, from the Minister of Public Works, stating that the Canada Atlantic Railway Company, who are building a large elevator at Coteau Landing, have asked the Department of Public Works to undertake the necessary dredging to allow of boats reaching the wharf upon which said elevator is being built, and that from casual information obtained by them the railway company have represented to the department that the dredging in question to be performed will require the expenditure of some $6,000.

That he, the Minister, having in view the great importance of allowing easy access to the elevator in question, agreed to perform the dredging required, and made arrangements to have the same put in hand immediately upon the opening of the present season.

That meanwhile, in order to obtain more satisfactory data with reference to the quantity of dredging to be performed, he, the Minister, sent one of the engineers of the Department of Public Works to make a survey and report upon the work necessary to be done.

That the engineer now states that in order to give the depth of 14 feet applied for, dredging will require to be done of at least 200,000 yards, at an estimated cost of $21,000 (twenty-one thousand dollars).

The Minister, in view of the result of the survey above referred to, and of the fact that the amount actually to be expended to provide the depth required will largely exceed the amount which it was originally intended to expend, recommends that Parliament be asked to make provision for the appropriation of the sum required.

The Committee submit the above recommendation for His Excellency's approval.

(Sgd.) JOHN J. MCGEE,

Clerk of the Privy Council.

To the Honourable
The Minister of Public Works.
Mr. BERGERON.

Now, it seems that there was some difficulty in obtaining dredges, because here is a letter signed by the Minister addressed to Mr. Gauthier:

(Copy of letter received, No. 191647.)

Ottawa, April 25th, 1898.

Thomas Gauthier, Esq.,
157 St. Denis St., Montreal.

I understand that you intend using the Kingston dredge at Laprairie. Do you know whether there is another dredge available at Coteau now? Please wire immediately.

(Sgd.) J. I. TARTE.

(Copy of letter received, No. 191637.)

Ottawa, April 26th, 1898.

Thomas Gauthier, Esq.,
157 St. Denis St., Montreal.

For how long can you secure second dredge now at Coteau Landing? Please wire immediately.

(Sgd.) J. I. TARTE.

Here is a copy of a letter signed by the Deputy Minister, addressed to Mr. Roy, secretary of the department:

(Copy of letter received, No. 191637.)

Department of Public Works,

Ottawa, April 27th, 1898.

Secretary,—Please notify the Chief Engineer that the hon. the Minister authorizes the employment of a second dredge to do the work required at Coteau Landing. That dredge is to be the "No. 6," now at Coteau Landing, and is to be set to work immediately by the Chief Engineer making the necessary arrangements therefor with Mr. Thomas Gauthier, of Montreal. The price to be paid is to be the same as that now paid for the other dredge, namely, $8 per hour for a working day of 10 hours.

(Sgd.) A. GOBEIL,

Deputy Minister.

E. F. E. Roy, Esq.,
Secretary, D.P.W.

Here is another extract from a report of the Committee of the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency on the 22nd June, 1898:

Extract from a Report of the Committee of the Honourable the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency on the 27th June, 1898.

The Committee, on the recommendation of the Minister of Public Works, advise that the Order in Council dated 23rd March, 1880, be set aside in so far as it can relate to the payments which will have to be made to Mr. Thomas Gauthier, in connection with dredging being executed by him at Coteau Landing, Que., the dredging in question having been authorized to be performed by an Order in Council dated the 25th April, 1898.

(Sgd.) H. G. LAMOTHE,

Asst. Clerk of the Privy Council.

The Honourable
The Minister of Public Works.

Now, we have a statement of the amount of work done:

The next return we have is a statement of the amount of work done :

shows that the hon. Minister of Public Works wanted to give some work to Mr. Gauthier. He writes to Mr. Gauthier that he wants some dredging done at a certain place, and asks Mr. Gauthier if he could not find some plant, knowing well that he had none. And to give a colour of necessity for that work, to show his colleagues that it was necessary to spend the money, he gets a letter from the authority of the Canada Atlantic saying : You may dredge at our wharf down to 14 feet. We are not afraid that you will injure the foundations of our wharf by dredging at that depth.

He gets Mr. Chamberlain to write down that four barges are coming down with 6,000 tons of wheat, and it is very necessary to have dredging done—when we know very well that vessels drawing more than 9 feet of water could not get down to Montreal. And, although he had got a report that the whole thing could be done for $6,000, he prepares for Council a report to say that he has received information that it would cost

We know that the dredges which did that work belong to Mr. McDonald, who was the contractor for the Soulanges Canal. We have here a memorandum, signed by the acting engineer, which is not quite complete but which I will read to the House and the House can draw its own conclusion. It seemed that these dredges, for which the Government were paying $8 an hour, could not perform the work.

On the 1st of June it was verbally reported to the hon. the Minister of Public Works that the operations of dredge "No. 4" were not sufficient to warrant the payment of $8 per hour. The superintendent of dredging was, therefore, ordered to stop the dredge from working. On June 6th, by order of the hon. the Minister of Public Works, the dredge was again allowed to resume work, but at a reduced rate of $7 per hour. As the amount of work performed by the dredge was again not considered satisfactory, its services were finally dispensed with on the 10th June.

(Sgd.) EUGENE D. LAFLEUR,
Acting Chief Engineer.

All this was found out when the money was paid, and the result of the whole thing

$18,000 for that work. But this is not sufficient, and he pretends to get more information, and the Deputy Minister writes to the secretary. Have I forgotten to tell you that it is not $18,000 but $21,000 that will be required for that work? The report is sent to Council and accepted, and Mr. Gauthier answers—we know how these things are done, they have talked it over—certainly I can do the work; I have dredges. And he gets the dredges of Manning & McDonald, the contractors on the Soulanges Canal. These dredges were idle some days—that always happens—and Gauthier got these dredges. And if we had an investigation—and I think next session we shall have one—we will find that Mr. McDonald got a good deal less than $5 an hour for those dredges, and Mr. Gauthier pocketed the difference. All this was done without tender—entre amis. The two fathers-in-law talked the matter over and decided that $21,000 would be a good sum to spend at Coteau, the job to be given to Mr. Thomas Gauthier. The right hon. Prime Minister need not be surprised, under these circumstances, if, when money is to be entrusted to the present Minister of Public Works, we require every possible assurance that the work shall be done by tender in the ordinary business way—an open call—so that everybody may send in a tender. In my opinion that work was not necessary. It will be a long time before a depth of 14 feet is needed at that place. And where that work was done or should have been done there was an immense vessel which used to carry the cars from Coteau Landing to Valleyfield before the construction of the bridge. So there must be 10 or 12 or 14 feet of water there already. I do not know whether all the papers have been brought down, but I have them here in return to an order of the House passed on the 24th April. There is enough here, at any rate, to show that we cannot take too many precautions before voting our money to be expended under the charge of the Minister of Public Works.

Mr. McMULLEN. We know that for years tenders were asked for dredging, and I believe it was ascertained and generally admitted that for a properly constructed dredge, $8 an hour was a fair price. And that price was fixed and was paid by hon. gentlemen opposite as well as by the present Government. I do not know the gentlemen to whom the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron) has referred. But if that gentleman supplied a dredge and the dredge did that work efficiently up to the standard required, it makes little difference to Parliament or to the people of this country who does that work. I do not care whether he is tailor or a shoemaker, if he supplies the dredges and does the work, he should be paid for it. But if the work is done in an inefficient way, that is a proper question for investigation. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bergeron) says he is going to hold an investigation, and I hope he will, for it is right to get to the bottom of these things. But in my humble opinion, as the Minister of Public Works is away and very ill, it would have been an act of courtesy on the part of the hon. gentleman to postpone any reference to the matter until he is present to take part in the investigation and until the Minister is here to defend himself. He says that Mr. McDonald may have furnished these dredges at $5 an hour. That is not a matter of importance to us, if the work was efficiently done. If next session the hon. gentleman calls for a committee of investigation, he has a right to have it.

Mr. DAVIN. Nothing in connection with the Public Works Department has made a more painful impression than the question exposed by the hon. member for Beauharnois and defended by the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen).

Mr. McMULLEN. I have not defended it. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Davin) was not listening to me.

Mr. BERGERON.

Mr. DAVIN. I will prove that I was listening by repeating what the hon. gentleman said. If I misquoted him, he can correct me. He said it did not matter to Government or to Parliament whether the work was done by the man who got the contract or not.

Mr. McMULLEN. No, I did not say that.

Mr. DAVIN. I understood the hon. gentleman further to say that there were just two questions—whether the work was done well, and whether it was done at the rate which had at one time been settled. My hon. friend (Mr. McMullen) nods his head—what I say is correct. I understood him further to say that if the man worked for Mr. Gauthier for $5 an hour, that is no concern of Parliament.

Mr. McMULLEN. My hon. friend is astray again.

Mr. DAVIN. Will my hon. friend (Mr. McMullen) say what he said?

Mr. McMULLEN. I said that if Mr. McDonald supplied the dredge for $5 an hour, that is no concern to us. The questions we are interested in are: First, did the dredge perform an amount of work to entitle the proprietor to $8 an hour and did it perform that work up to the standard; and, second, was the work necessary?

Mr. DAVIN. I apprehend, and the people of Canada will apprehend that there is another question. Are not the people of Canada entitled to whatever difference there was between the amount of the contract of Mr. Gauthier and the amount he paid to the man who did the work?

Mr. McMULLEN. No. The rate was to be paid was established by the recent Government—$8 an hour was fixed as a rate for a dredge doing work up to a certain standard. Now, I contend that if Mr. Gauthier actually has been able to hire that dredge for $5 an hour in place of $8, or if he got it for nothing, it is a matter of no consideration for us, as long as the work is done in the place where it is wanted.

Mr. DAVIN. The new doctrine of Liberalism, therefore, is this: That in administering the affairs of the Public Works Department we must not seek by means of tender to get work done at the lowest rate that it can be done for efficiently. My hon. friend nods his head to that. What that means is this: That it is of no consequence to the people of Canada what rake-off any friend of a Minister may have. So it is a policy of plunder and a doctrine of rake-offs. Why, Sir, what you want to countenance a policy and conduct like that is what we have, a Government with chemical principles and cotton-batting consciences. Every gentleman on that bench, the whole fourteen of them, have cotton-batting consciences and chemical principles, because they can be changed, the least actual ingredient of interest that is added, changes the character of their principles. The people who have to pay have consciences, they take note of right and wrong, they have got a financial conscience in their pocket which takes note of extravagance, favouritism, public plunder and mismanagement. The people of Canada will not accept the doctrine of the new Liberalism, that it is all right to give contracts to people who know nothing whatever about the work, and who have to farm it out, as was done in the case of Mr. Gauthier; and then to be told what we were told by the Minister of Public Works when it was brought up before. He could make no defence of it. When it was dragged out of him that Mr. Gauthier was a relative of his—because, when first he was accused of having given it to a relative, he indignantly denied it—but when he was asked: is he not your son's wife's father? He raised his shoulders and blinked his eyes and answered: How can I help it if my sons do have fathers-in-law? Now, Sir, I greatly regret that the Minister of Public Works is ill. But the Government knew the nature of the serious illness that, to my regret, as to the regret of every man who knows him, necessitated his going across the Atlantic to get medical treatment. They knew his to be a most serious complaint. I say that the Government has not been true to its responsibilities to the people of Canada, nor true even to the Minister of Public Works himself, in not having relieved that gentleman from the grave responsibilities and anxieties of office, and given him a lighter office, making him, for instance, President of the Council or Secretary of State. I say in regard to these estimates that we have dealt with here, that if we had the actual Minister of Public Works, whether my hon. friend from St. John and Iberville (Mr. Tarte), or any other member, he could not have got these extravagant and monstrous estimates through this House. The only way they have been got through is by the Minister of Finance, who is acting Minister of Public Works, saying to us again and again, as he has said: Well, really, I don't know what the real Minister will do under the circumstances—when we have asked him what will be done in any case—Well, I do not know; I am not the Minister of Public Works. The chivalry of Parliament shrinks from holding the acting Minister of Public Works, weighted down with two great departments, when he comes here shouldering the burdens of another Minister—the chivalry of Parliament shrinks from dealing out to him the same amount of criticism, the same treatment that would be perfectly justifiable if he was directly responsible for the Public Works estimates. I say that if the actual Minister of Public Works were here these Public Works estimates could not have been got through Parliament.

Now, Sir, I say with regard to this job—you cannot call it anything else—it smells of the same scent as the Edmonton bridge job, it smells of the same scent as the Goderich harbour job. What have we heard from the bench immediately behind the Minister of Trade and Commerce? I forget whether it was in 1898 or 1897, when we were pressing home stringent criticisms of a job like this, the Minister of Public Works said to us: It is all very fine for hon. gentlemen to talk in that way; but if I accept these principles, how can I put money into the pockets of my friends? I do not want to put money into the pockets of Tories. When he was asked why he did not give a dredging contract in Ontario to men who owned dredges, he said: The men who own dredges are all Tories, and if I call for tenders they will tender, and they will get the contracts. Now, if there are numbers of people who own dredges, and if we call for tenders, is it not palpable that at a time when mechanical cheapening is going forward, when mechanical power is increasing, when the cost of living is being lowered—is it not certain that if tenders were honestly called for we should have lower tenders than a tender for $8 an hour? Is it not a monstrous thing for any person representing the Department of Public Works to come here and say: Our defence for throwing aside the sound principles of calling for tenders, our defence for violating every sound principle of administrative management, is this: Years ago it cost $8 an hour to do this work, and if under a system that is reeking with a suspicion of jobbery, we can assure our own consciences that $8 an hour work is being done, to the winds with sound principles of administration, and let us throw to one side the Act of Parliament and the Order in Council providing that tenders shall be called for? It is a shameless defence, and a defence like that would never be made except that some kind of madness had smitten the brains of the men in authority in the Liberal party. They think the people will tolerate anything from that party. They think that the Liberal party will bear with anything, but we were shown here the other night, and there is abundant evidence coming to us from every part of the country, that the respectable members of the Liberal party will not bear long to be dragged after obscurantist political misdemeanants. There is the Goderich harbour job of a similar kind, and at an earlier period of the session I went over a number of instances in which the conduct of other departments, not alone that of the Department of Public Works, shows that this Administration hates like poison to call for tenders. Only yesterday a return that I called for last year was brought down, and it showed that, in the department where it was the usage and wont, from time immemorial, to call for tenders, a contract was given without tender. We can go into the Department of Trade and Commerce and into other departments and find the same thing. I hope we will wake up the country; I hope the country is alive to what is going on, and if we can only turn the eyes of the people to what is being done in this House, they will condemn the course of hon. gentlemen. Sometimes when we go into the country the people tell us that it is only a short time ago that they woke up to what is being done here. They did not realize what was taking place. It would take, not newspapers of seventy or eighty columns, but it would take newspapers of one hundred columns, to bring out fully what has been dragged to light this session, the damning evidence of incompetency and worse than incompetency on the part of this Government.

Mr. TAYLOR. I would like to ask the hon. member for North Wellington what is the necessity of expending this money at Coteau Landing for deepening the channel to 14 feet of water, when a boat drawing more than nine feet of water cannot get into the place or away from the place. Is that not proof positive that there was a necessity for looking up a job for the father-in-law of the son of the hon. Minister of Public Works, that he might make some money out of it? The fact is, that a boat loading at the elevator cannot go down the canal drawing more than nine feet of water. Where was the necessity of spending this money or of getting water of that depth there two years before the canals are opened to a greater depth?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The canals are being deepened to 14 feet and it would be unseemly if we were to assume that we were not going to have boats going through them drawing more than nine feet of water. The dredging of this channel was done to 14 feet to correspond with the navigation of the canals. That work is not only done for to-day, but for the future as well.

Mr. TAYLOR. But we did it two years before it was wanted.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is another question. In the first place, it has not been done two years before it was required, because it is not finished yet.

Mr. TAYLOR. It was started two years before it was required.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Well, it is not finished yet. The question is that the rate of dredging has been $8 per hour for all dredges taking out 600 yards a day.

Mr. CLARKE. When was that rate established, by whom, and by what authority?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I understand that there has been no dredging done under the late Government or the present Government, by dredges with a capacity of 600 yards a day for less than $8 per hour. An application was recently made by one of the great railway companies to an American dredging company to do some work at Midland and the lowest rate asked, for ten hours a day, was $100 a day, instead of $80 a day where 600 yards is a day's work. More recently, in consequence of not being able to get dredges, an application was made to see if we could get some American dredges to do some work in the lower provinces, and the lowest quotation that was received was $250 a day. I am satisfied that the rate we are paying is a fair rate. The dredging at Coteau is costing 12½ cents a yard, which is a fairly reasonable price.

Mr. HAGGART. How many yards are still to be dredged at Coteau?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. About 45,000 yards.

Mr. HAGGART. There are 129,000 yards dredged, and this 45,000 will make about 170,000 yards. The hon. Minister of Public Works, in his statement here last year, said that he wanted this work done. As to the necessity of it, my hon. friend from Leeds (Mr. Taylor) is perfectly correct, because if the water had been dredged to a depth of 14 feet, it would not be utilized by any barges. There are no barges on the river that draw more than nine feet of water, which are used for transporting cargoes down to Montreal. I remember perfectly well that the hon. Minister of Public Works stated last year that Mr. Gauthier had come to him and stated that he had a dredge and asked him if he wanted any work done. Here are the words:

Mr. Gauthier came to me, as he had a perfect right to do, and as every other man has a right to do. He offered me a dredge, and I asked him how much he wanted.

When the correspondence comes down, it is seen that the suggestion did not come from Mr. Gauthier at all, but that the hon. Minister of Public Works sent a letter to him in reference to it. I asked him the quantity of dredging to be done, and he said 200,000 yards was the estimate. He also said that he had got it done cheaper than it had ever been done in Canada before:

I asked him how much this dredge could do. Now this dredge is doing 800 to 1,000 yards a day, and I say that dredging which costs 8 cents per yard is very cheap dredging indeed. No man who knows anything about dredging will dispute that. The ex-Minister of Railways and Canals will testify that he has paid as high as 20 cents and 25 cents.

There is the statement made by the hon. Minister of Public Works in this House last session. He says that Mr. Gauthier came to him offering to do the dredging for him, whereas when the correspondence comes down we find that it was nothing of the kind, that the suggestion came from the Minister to a man who never owned a dredge in his life, for the purpose of dredging this place, when there was no necessity at the moment for that dredging, because two years elapsed since it commenced, and there was plenty of water at Coteau Landing. When the information comes to the House, we find that the dredging costs nearly 13 cents a yard, which is a very high price for dredging at that point. This is wrong in principle. The hon. Minister ought to have come and stated the necessity to the House, and he ought to have got his vote for the work before the work was done. Instead of that, he gets an Order in Council passed, and immediately sends to his relative who never had a dredge in his life, and who immediately procures a dredge from parties near the work, who I am sure would have done it for less; and then the Minister tells this House that he is getting it done for 8 cents a yard, whereas we find that the work is not up to the standard, and that it is costing the country nearly 13 cents a yard.

Mr. CLARKE. Before this item passes I desire to enter a most emphatic protest against the practice which it appears has obtained in the Public Works Department respecting the letting of dredging work. I must also express my astonishment at hearing a gentleman who was such a staunch advocate of having public work let by public tender as the hon. member for North Wellington was when in Opposition, get up and defend this transaction. I asked the Minister of Finance a few minutes ago at what date the Department of Public Works determined that for the future it would ask for no tenders for dredging, and that $8 an hour was a fair price to pay under ordinary circumstances; but I have not had any answer yet. I mean to say that it is not in the public interest, and is not in accordance with sound business principles, when a large quantity of dredging is to be done at Coteau or at Toronto or at any other place, to give out the work without competition or tender, and to fix the arbitrary sum of $8 an hour for the work. In the documents read to the House to-night by the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron), we find sufficient evidence to demonstrate how faulty such a plan of operation is. If I understood the statements read by that hon. gentleman, there were three or four dredges employed in this work, and the dredging done by some of these dredges cost 10 cents or thereabouts per cubic yard, while the dredging done by some others cost from 12 to 15 cents; and yet the department was paying for dredges that only did two-thirds as much as other dredges, exactly the same price per hour; and one of the dredges was found to be so inefficient that the department, for very shame's sake, had to cease paying $8 an hour, and reduced the price to $7, and finally put the dredge out of commission altogether. I appeal to the Minister of Finance if this disgraceful condition of things is going to continue until this contract is concluded?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Was it not right to reduce it?

Mr. CLARKE. It was, but it would have been much better to have ascertained the capacity of that dredge before it was started to work, and when it was found that it could not earn more than $7, it was an outrage to allow $8 for its use. I find in the report of the Auditor General for 1897, at page 128—Q, a statement regarding the dredging done in Toronto harbour under contract, showing that up to the time that statement was made 685,633 cubic yards of dredging was done at a cost of 12 cents a yard. I do not know whether that cost was excessive or not; but that work was done after public tenders had been called for, and the Government of that day relieved itself from any responsibility for the work by giving public notice that the work was to be done and asking for tenders. But as soon as the present Administration got into office, the practice of calling for public tenders was abandoned as far as Toronto harbour was concerned, and what is the result? On February 14, 1898, I took the opportunity of asking the Minister of Public Works about this dredging, and I give my question and his reply:

1. What sum was expended by the Government in 1896 and 1897, respectively, for dredging in connection with the works for the protection of Toronto harbour?

2. Was the work of dredging awarded each year by public tender?

3. What was the price paid per yard for dredging in 1896 and in 1897, respectively?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Mr. Tarte). 1. Nothing expended in 1896 for dredging in Toronto harbour. In 1897 the sum of $5,310.26 was expended. 2. The work was not awarded by public tender. 3. The price paid the contractor was at the usual rate paid by the Government for work of that kind, namely, $8 per hour actual working time. The contractor worked from the 29th June to the 26th November, dredging 37,214 cubic yards, the cost per cubic yard being 14½ cents.

I think it surely ought to be sufficient to draw the attention of the Minister in charge of the department to this state of facts, and to urge that in future the public who have dredges and who are in the habit of doing dredging, when the Government have any work of that kind to be done, should be given an opportunity of putting in a tender for it. In the spring of 1898 a bid was put into the Department of Public Works to do the dredging at Toronto at $6 per hour for which the Government of Canada gave a contract at $8 per hour without tender; and if the bid above referred to had been accepted the people of Canada would have saved $2 per hour on that work. I say it is nothing short of a public scandal that this work should be done at the arbitrary price of $8 per hour.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Is the hon. gentleman speaking of his own knowledge?

Mr. CLARKE. I am speaking from a statement made by the hon. gentleman's own colleague within the last half hour, and if the hon. gentleman had listened he would have heard it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman has made another statement.

Mr. CLARKE. I would ask the hon. gentleman to sit down. I have the floor.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I ask the hon. gentleman if he will permit me to ask him a question?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Will the hon. gentleman permit me—

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order, order.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the use of having a chairman?

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Campbell). The hon. Minister asked the hon. member for Toronto if he would allow him to ask a question.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. member for Toronto refused, and said: "I have the floor," but the Minister of Marine and Fisheries persisted, while the Chairman sat as dumb as an oyster.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. member for Toronto did not refuse to allow me to ask a question.

Mr. CLARKE. I did not refuse to allow the hon. gentleman to ask me a question. If he will take his seat for a moment, I will give him any permission he wants. The Minister interrupted me by asking me a question, and I answered by saying that if he had been paying attention to what his colleague had said within half an hour, he would have heard that the statement I made was gleaned from a statement made by his colleague. He jumped up to contradict me. If the hon. Minister has any question to put, I shall be glad to answer him.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The question I wished to put, when I was rudely interrupted by the hon. member for Assiniboia and others, was whether the hon. gentleman was making the statement that an offer had been made for the dredging of the harbour of Toronto at $6 an hour to his own knowledge.

Mr. CLARKE. I made the statement in such a way that every one could understand. I said I believed—and I take the responsibility of saying it—

Mr. CLARKE.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Crawling down.

Mr. CLARKE. I am not in the habit of crawling down. I stated that I believed that in the month of April, 1898, a letter was mailed containing a tender addressed to the hon. Minister of Public Works, offering to do the dredging in Toronto harbour for $6 an hour. But that is aside from the question we are discussing. I have drawn attention to the fact, from the report of the Auditor General for 1897, and the "Hansard" of 1898, that while in the case of Toronto harbour, this dredging, done under contract, cost 12 cents per cubic yard, when it was given out to a political friend, who did good service in the by-elections of 1897, without contract, it cost, according to the statement of the hon. Minister of Public Works, 14½ cents per cubic yard. I am appealing to the business administration that is in office, as strongly as I can, to adopt business methods in carrying on the affairs of the country. There is no reason under Heaven for paying 14½ cents per cubic yard to one man for dredging done in Toronto, Owen Sound or any other place, when another man, who has the plant, declares he is prepared to do it at 12 cents per cubic yard. The most satisfactory way that we know of at present of ascertaining the real value of the work is to give those engaged in dredging an opportunity, by calling for tenders, of putting in their bids, and when conditions are equal, giving the contract to the lowest tenderer. I have brought his matter of dredging again and again before the committee and the House, and when such methods are adopted by the Minister of Public Works, so long as I have a seat in this House, I shall consider it my duty to enter an emphatic protest. There is an item for dredging Toronto harbour in these Estimates to be considered later on, and I hope that $8 an hour will not be given for the work, but that tenders will be invited and the work given to the lowest tenderer, provided he can give the necessary assurance that he can do the work.

I deem it my duty to express my profound astonishment that the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen), who had made such an enviable record as an honest critic of the administration of public affairs, should countenance in any way the practise of giving out work by the hour, no matter to whom it might be given, without any opportunity being given the public to tender for that work. I am astonished that that hon. gentleman should have given expressions to the views he did to-night, and it is because of what he said that I deemed it my duty especially to take up the time of the committee at the length I did.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. What was the quantity of dredging done at 12 cents per yard, and what was the quantity at 14 cents per yard, if the hon. gentleman has the facts at hand?

Mr. CLARKE. I am reading from part Q, page 128, of the Auditor General's Report. This is a contract for dredging that had been going on for years.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am informed that the quantity of work which was done at 12 cents and a fraction was 630,000 cubic yards, which was a large quantity, whereas in the other case the quantity done was some 45,000 cubic yards, and it is well known that you can get a large quantity of work done at a lower rate than a smaller quantity. That is perfectly reasonable explanation.

Mr. CLARKE. I read from the Auditor General's Report of 1897, August 15th, 1896, Murray & Cleveland, dredging, 685,633 cubic yards, at 12 cents, and if you will only give the present contractor time enough he will do all the dredging required. And at page 482, volume 1, of the "Hansard" of 1898, under date February 14th, the hon. gentleman will find the information vouchsafed by the hon. Minister of Public Works.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman, will see the point I desire to make. The work done under contract was a large quantity, extending over a series of years; the total amount done was between 600,000 and 700,000 cubic yards, whereas in the other case the dredge was employed temporarily. You cannot make a contract for the temporary employment of a dredge on the same terms as for dredging a large quantity of work over a series of years. The hon. gentleman has stated that he believed—I do not know whether he said that he knew—that an offer was made to the department to do the dredging at $6 an hour. The officials now present assure me that no such offer ever came to the department.

Mr. BERGERON. The Minister put it in his pocket.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He is away and I cannot answer for him. So far as I have information, I cannot ascertain that such an offer was ever made. If such an offer had been made and was not accepted, there would be some ground for the hon. gentleman's criticism.

Mr. McMULLEN. I would not take up any more time, if it had not been for the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) putting words into my mouth that I never said. He sought to lead the committee to understand that I was opposed to calling for tenders for dredging.

Mr. CLARKE. I did not say anything of the kind.

Mr. McMULLEN. I say that tendering is the proper method, and I would like to see everything let by tender. But some years ago the Minister of Public Works stated in this House that tenders had been asked for, and whether it was owing to a combine or some arrangement entered into by those who had dredges or not, the average price asked was $8 an hour, and he took that as the lowest at which dredging could be done, and the work was let at that price. I believe it would be better to let everything that can be let by tender; and I would further say to the hon. member for Beauharnois that when work is let by tender, the price tendered at which the work is let should be adhered to. He is now long enough in this House to know that after dredging was let by tender by the late Government, and before much work was done, the price was raised from 24 cents to 34 cents. We have had the dredging done at Montreal harbour let at a price, and then had the price raised from 24 and 25 cents to 35 cents. Was that right? Hon. gentlemen opposite should have been prepared to condemn wrong when it was done.

Mr. BERGERON. They have been punished for that.

Mr. McMULLEN. That was done and should not be repeated.

Mr. DAVIN. We are not responsible for that.

Mr. McMULLEN. Tenders should be asked for and the lowest accepted, if the lowest tenderer is able to do the work, and he should be made to adhere to his tender.

Mr. HAGGART. The hon. Minister of Finance, who is in charge of the Department of Public Works, said that a large quantity of work was being done in Toronto harbour, and on that account it could be done a great deal cheaper. I suppose the same principle would apply to this work. Last session when we asked the Minister what the cost was, he said it was 8 cents a yard. How many yards had been done? Over 10,000 yards. But when it comes to 129,000, we find it costs over 13 cents a yard.

Mr. BERGERON. As much as 17.

Mr. FOSTER. I am sorry the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) has gone out. I do not wish to misrepresent his position. I am afraid he and the Minister of Finance have become advocates of a very bad principle, and one I believe the House, and I am certain the country, will not admit. The hon. member for North Wellington said, it makes no difference whether the work was done by a tailor or a dry goods merchant, if you get it done at a reasonable rate. Where does that argument lead to? It is the very basis of the great abuses that have been carried on in the world from the farming system of Roman times down to these times of Thomas Gauthier in 1898 and 1899. We have hundreds of lighthouses in this country. Would the Minister of Marine and Fisheries allow a man appointed to keep a light on Lake Ontario to carry on his business as a dry goods merchant in Toronto and hire a person to keep a light at $100 less a year and pocket the difference? The Minister of Marine and Fisheries would bounce the man who did that the moment the fact came to his knowledge. The Postmaster General wants the mail carried over a route, say, of sixty miles in the county of Grey. He does not care whether the work is done by a tailor or by a road-man, so long as it was well done and done at what he considers a living rate. But would he allow a broker in Montreal to take the contract, carry on his business in Montreal, and hire a man to do it at half a dollar a day less?

Mr. MCGREGOR. Certainly. If he is the lowest tenderer, why not?

Mr. FOSTER. Let it be understood that the principle defended by members of the Government and members who support them is that it makes no matter how many middlemen you have, so long as the work is done and done at a fair rate—

Mr. MCGREGOR. Let me ask the hon. gentleman a question?

Mr. FOSTER. Certainly.

Mr. MCGREGOR. Surely the hon. gentleman sees the difference between the case of a postmaster and that of a man who carries a mail along a road. The lowest tenderer should have it.

Mr. FOSTER. But that is exactly what you prevent. The man who does the work does it, let us say, for $60 a year. But your broker lives in Montreal and gets $160 a year. The lowest tenderer is not getting the work. Lighthouse-keepers in my time were dismissed when the charge was brought that they were not doing the work, but farming it out at a less rate. They were told: You must attend to the lighthouse yourself or give up the job. And in the same way Mr. Gauthier, who knows nothing about dredging, is asked by the Minister of Public Works if he would like to take a job at $8 an hour. He finds he can get Macdonald's dredges at $5 or $6 an hour, and writes: Certainly, I will take all you can give at that rate. The man who does the work does it for the $6, the country pays the $8, and the go-between pockets the $2. Should not the country have the saving? And yet the hon. member for North Wellington says it makes no difference whether the dredging is done by a tailor or a shopkeeper, so long as it is done at $8 an hour and good work is done.

Mr. McMULLEN. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) wants to be fair.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, I do.

Mr. FOSTER.

Mr. McMULLEN. Do not put it too strong.

Mr. FOSTER. I will spare my hon. friend.

Mr. McMULLEN. What I said was that it matters nothing to the country whether a tailor or a shoemaker does the work, if he does the required amount of work, does it well, and does it at the tender price. What difference can it make if done at the tender price? That price was fixed by the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Foster's) Government.

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend was defending the Gauthier transaction. He defended it on this ground: The Minister of Public Works has decided that $8 an hour is a fair remuneration for a dredge that will do a certain quantity of work in a day. Then he says to his friend Gauthier: I have decided that $8 an hour will be paid, will you undertake some of this work? Gauthier replies: I am not accustomed to it, let me think it over. Then, afterwards: Yes, I will do it; and so he takes a contract from the Minister of Public Works to take out 129,000 cubic yards at the rate of $8 per hour for each dredge. Then, he steps across the way to the man who owns the dredge, and who has not had this chance from the Minister of Public Works, and says: What will you do this for? And the answer is: $6 an hour.

Mr. McMULLEN. How does the hon. gentleman know that they supplied the dredge at $6 an hour?

Mr. FOSTER. Does the hon. gentleman think that Mr. Thomas Gauthier has no sense in his head? Does he think he will take a contract at $8 an hour, and take all the trouble of making an arrangement with a man who is to do the work, and then pay him $8 an hour?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). That is not the point. You said he got $6 per dredge.

Mr. FOSTER. I am assuming that it was $5, or $6, or whatever it was; it may be $7.90, if you like; the principle is the same; it is the principle of the go-between. My hon. friend would be right, if the Minister of Public Works had not decided that of himself, but had decided it upon the basis of tenders actually received in answer to a call. Then, if the lowest tenders were $8 an hour, the Minister had a right to decide that is what he would give. But he precludes tenders, and decides for himself that $8 an hour is what he will give, and he gives it to a man who farms it out to another at a less rate, and who pockets the difference as his own profit. Now, I say the member for North Wellington will not defend that.

M. DAVIN. I want just to put the thing before the people as it is. Here is Mr. Gauthier, a real estate agent in Montreal, a father-in-law of the son of the Minister of Public Works, and the Minister thinks it would be a very nice thing to help Mr. Gauthier, and suggests to him what to do. What have we now? We have about $8,000 paid out in the months of April, May and June, and we have Mr. Gauthier sitting, slippers on, cigar in mouth, light wine from the south of France by his side, enjoying himself, taking two or three thousand dollars of the $8,000—

Mr. McMULLEN. You are thinking of the Curran bridge now.

Mr. DAVIN. No, I am not. I am not even thinking of the prostitution of a politician that used at one time to howl for economy here, and now is abandoned as no man in public life has ever been abandoned before. He sits there now, complacently sanctioning every job that can be perpetrated, and then gets up and in a craw-fish style defends what he has denounced. Such an example of political prostitution has never been seen in the history of public life. Here is the picture: On the one hand the farmers of this country, who have to work hard. They have some good years and some bad years. They have to earn their bread by the sweat of their brow. Look at the farmer after he has cleared a farm, with his bowed shoulders, his hands browned with toil, his face wrinkled with labour. These are the men who pay the taxes. Look also at the workingman, who has to work his ten hours a day, or perhaps eight hours, whose wages are cut down sometimes to a very low figure, who gets $1 or $1.50 a day, and sometimes 90 cents. This man also pays taxes, because in every country it is the many who pay, and in every country the many will be the toilers. Now, is it to be borne, that you are to wring the sweat out of the farmer and wring the blood out of the workingman, in order that the Gauthiers in Montreal, the McGillicuddys in Goderich, and some other fellows in Toronto, who have done heeler's work, shall be able to sit in their arm-chairs, smoke their cigar, and drink their light wines, with their Scotch and soda, or whatever else may suit their luxurious palates, and for every $8,000 that is paid out by this Government, pocket $3,000, and with their hands in their pockets, swell around, thinking themselves fine fellows? Is that to be borne? Do you think the people of the country will stand it? Sir, the people of the country would not stand it an hour, if they knew it. If the people of this country knew what is going on here, what is going on in the Public Works Department, what is going on in every department, they would not wait for a general election; they would march on the capital, and they would deal out summary and indignant justice to the fourteen Ministers who have betrayed them.

Mr. BERGERON. I see, by the Auditor General's Report, that the inspector of that work, from the 11th of April to the 30th, was paid $2 a day. Then, I find, in the month of May, that for 52 days he was paid $3.50 per day. I want to know what is the cause of the difference?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. At the beginning he was in charge of one dredge; subsequently he was in charge of two or three dredges.

Mr. BERGERON. Could he really take charge of two or three dredges?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He supervised two or three dredges, and made daily returns.

Mr. WALLACE. Before this item is adopted, I wish to make a remark or two, and first, with reference to the statements made by the hon. member for North Wellington, to which I had not an opportunity of replying before six o'clock had arrived. He said I had voted for $41,000,000 for railway subsidies, and was now kicking against $6,500,000, which was an insignificant amount, compared with the $43,000,000. By the Public Accounts which I have in my hand, I see a statement showing the railway subsidies granted by the Dominion Government, with the mileage of the same, and I see that there was cash paid under these items of $42,966,000, and among them there was $25,000,000 to the Canadian Pacific Railway, which would leave for all other purposes, including a large proportion of the Crow's Nest Pass grant, but outside the Canadian Pacific Railway construction, $18,000,000 for, say, eighteen years, or a million dollars per year. Of course, there were other payments to railways by mileage, such as that provided for in the contract with the Calgary and Edmonton road, but it does not come exactly under this category. There were $43,000,000 of which $25,000,000 was paid to the Canadian Pacific Railway and there is a balance of $18,000,000. The hon. Minister of Public Works during this session laid it down as a proper plan to have no contracts for public works at all so that he could plunder the country. We have found out, in reference to the various public works that have come under our notice, that that system has been carried out in direct violation of the law, and of those principles of good government and economy which should guide Governments in conducting public affairs. I do not think we are exaggerating when we say that these hon. gentlemen are not only providing for their friends, but that they are providing for themselves. When we see the carnival of corruption that is prevailing in the departments, when we see the gorgeousness which is displayed by hon. gentlemen who, before they came into the Government a few years ago, were not noted for their wealth, now rolling in wealth and splendour, I think there is ground for this suspicion.

Mr. MCGREGOR. Give the name. You do not dare to do it.

Mr. WALLACE. What about the hon. member for North Essex (Mr. McGregor) himself?

Mr. MCGREGOR. I am not in the Government. You cannot get out of it in that way. It is a low, mean insinuation.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER. Order, order.

Mr. MCGREGOR. Yes, it is a low, mean insinuation.

Mr. FOSTER. We should have the ruling of the Chair as to that.

Mr. WALLACE. Oh, no; the Chair only looks to one side.

Mr. SPROULE. I wish to ask you, Mr. Chairman, if the observations of the hon. gentleman are within the rules of Parliament, because, if not, he is entitled to withdraw them.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER. Yes, I called the hon. gentleman (Mr. McGregor) to order, and, I suppose, he will withdraw the expression he has used.

Mr. MCGREGOR. I withdraw the expression if it is against the rules. I may do a good deal of thinking, may I not?

The DEPUTY SPEAKER. Order. I suppose the hon. gentleman (Mr. Wallace) will withdraw the expression he has used also concerning the Chair.

Mr. WALLACE. If it is contrary to the rules of the House, I shall not violate any rules of the House. I was proceeding to say—

Mr. MCGREGOR. Would you kindly name the gentleman?

Mr. WALLACE. When the proceedings were interrupted I was proceeding to say that there seems to be no regard for the law of the land. Contracts are given out without asking for public tenders, and we find that a worse system prevails than even that pursued by the hon. Minister of Public Works. We are told by the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence or some other Minister: We asked for tenders, and, therefore, everything was done all right and fairly. Then we proceed a little further and find that public tenders were not invited in the newspapers, but that they wrote letters to a few parties. When the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence wanted some groceries, or dry goods, or clothing, he wrote to two parties in each line of business. Is that making purchases by public competition or is it a proper way of expending the people's money? It is not; it is an improper way and it opens the door to every kind of dishonesty, favouritism, to extravagance and to the squandering of the people's money. The Ministers seem to lose sight of the fact that they are only the trustees of the people's money. The hon. Minister of Public Works speaks as if public business were a personal matter and that his ipsi dixit must prevail. The Government appear to have abandoned the righteous and proper system of bringing all matters before the Government in Council, where they can be properly considered and disposed of. This system conduces to good government, because not only are seventeen men likely to come to a wiser conclusion than one man, but seventeen men will represent interests that one man could not possibly know. We have seen conflicts between various branches of the Government that have cost the people untold amounts of money, and that have cost the people reputation as well. The hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair), corresponded with those who had a charter from the Parliament of Canada to construct a telegraph line into the Yukon country. The hon. Minister of Railways and Canals was in communication with them; he assured them not only of his sympathy with the project, but of the support and assistance of the Government in every way that they could possibly help them. But, Sir, at the time he was giving that company these assurances and telling them: "Go on with your enterprise, raise your money, sell your stock, buy your appliances for the purpose of building this telegraph line," another member of the Government was plotting and planning and contriving to undermine him. I suppose that one did not know what the other was doing. Instead of bringing the matter to the council board and having it considered there, and having the united opinions of the Government expressed upon it, each member was working at his own sweet will. While the Minister of Railways was writing to those men in England, and telling them to go on, that the Government was at their back, the Minister of Public Works was sending out his expedition, and it was actually under way before the Order in Council was passed. Before he was authorized to spend a single dollar, Charleson and the men with him were on their way to the Pacific coast; they had purchased their supplies from Charleson here, had made their arrangements, had drawn their money, and Charleson had a letter of instructions which authorized him to spend money without limit. He was authorized to dredge rivers, to build wharfs or harbours, to improve navigation, to buy steamers, which we see he has done, and to expend money in every possible direction and for any purpose. Such a letter of instruction, I suppose, was never before given to an official. It authorized Mr. Charleson to draw on the Government of Canada without stint and without limit for money for any enterprise he chose to go on with. This is the kind of administration of affairs which we are asked to approve of in Parliament, and which we have been combatting for the last five months; and now that we have to go to the country, we shall find it our duty to expose to the people what we have been exposing on the floor of Parliament.

Mr. WALLACE.

Portsmouth, Ont.—

Repairs to wharf ..... $2,000

Mr. WALLACE. Give us some information about this ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is for general repairs of Portsmouth wharf in the county of Frontenac, a short distance from Kingston.

Mr. WALLACE. Who constructed the wharf ?

Mr. BRITTON. It is a dock that was built by the late Government at the time Mr. Kirkpatrick was the member for Frontenac, and it was no doubt built owing to the influence which he was able to bring to bear upon the Government of that day. Apart from what might be said of it, that it was necessary to improve the harbour of Portsmouth and to make it a better harbour of refuge, it was as indefensible as many of these items which I certainly feel a little like complaining about, and which have been the subject of so much criticism in this House. But the dock is there, and it needs repairs, and unless the Government is prepared to abandon it and to say that the late Government in building it there did wrong, I suppose it will have to be kept in repair.

Mr. WALLACE. I will second a motion of the hon. member for Kingston to strike out this item.

Scugog River—

Dredging channel ..... $5,900

Mr. FOSTER. Is this being done by contract ?

Mr. McHUGH. I may say that I expect that work will be done by the Government dredge which is there. It is to widen the channel in the river coming up to Lindsay.

Otonabee River—

Improvement of navigation ..... $2,500

Mr. WALLACE. Has any money been expended there before ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No. There is no record of any previous expenditure.

Mr. WALLACE. Whereabouts is this to be expended ?

Mr. McHUGH. There are very few here who are not familiar with the importance of the navigation of the Otonabee River which comes into Peterborough. It is a very important river, and there is a great deal of steamboat traffic upon it. I do not see either of the Peterborough members present, but I know the river very well, and I know that there is a great deal of steamboating and lumbering carried on there.

Mr. WALLACE. Is it above or below Peterborough ?

Mr. McHUGH. It is below Peterborough—between Peterborough and Rice Lake.

Toronto Harbour—

Diversion of Don and dredging in the harbour ..... $50,000

Mr. FOSTER. Is this work now going on ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mu- lock). No. The Don River enters the harbour at the east side, and it has been discharging large quantities of silt along the front of the city, filling up the slips. The Toronto authorities have come to the conclusion that it was a complete mistake to allow the Don to discharge its waters into the bay. There was also a cutting made, running east and west, which facilitated the flow of the water westerly and the consequent deposit of silt into the bay. It was an engineering mistake, which could only be proved by experience. It is now recommended by the Toronto authorities that a channel be cut through the marsh land at the east end of the bay, which will divert the waters of the Don into Ashbridge's Bay, where any deposits, instead of doing damages, will do good by making land. The work will not be a very expensive one. The city wanted about $75,000 of work done this year, but owing to the advanced season it will be impossible to spend that now.

Mr. FOSTER. What will become of the old Don habitat ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The stream above the bay, except for a short distance, will continue in its own channel.

Mr. WALLACE. How will a vessel get up the Don ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have never seen a vessel go up the Don. There are fixed bridges there. This work is very necessary, but it is useless to proceed with dredging along the front of the piers or out in the bay until precautionary steps are taken to divert the Don, so as to prevent further accumulations. It may cost $25,000 to divert the Don. It would not be an expensive work and will be put up to tender, and done in a businesslike way. The channel will be cut through a marsh of soft land, and whatever of this vote is left over, after the Don is diverted, will be spent on the dredging. We will have to dredge first where it will be most necessary, namely, westerly of a level drawn from the easterly pier northerly to the mainland. This line will strike about at the foot of Parliament Street.

Mr. WALLACE. Northerly ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. North-westerly, until you come to the shore. The city's plan is to utilize the dredgings to make land, and save the expense of sending the dredging too far out into the lake.

Mr. WALLACE. Is there any further amount to be expended on the Toronto harbour?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. In the main Estimates there is an item of $75,000 to extend the western pier out into the lake. At present that pier is a good deal shorter than the easterly pier, and the seas from the west wash up against the easterly pier and deposit silt in the mouth of the channel. It will be extended into deep water and settle down into the sand, and we will have to keep on building up the top of the pier until it settles down to its final resting place.

Mr. CLARKE. I am glad to hear that this work is to be done in a businesslike manner. Has the department approved of the plan of the engineer and will that plan be adhered to? Also, what depth is it intended to dredge the channel?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Mayor and representatives from the Board of Trade and the council appeared with their plan, which is in the department, and will in all probability be carried out. The engineers have been instructed to make surveys and have an agreement with the city. I think it would be proper to have an agreement with the city, so as to define exactly the liability of the Government. The city claims with some force that the Crown is responsible for the deposit of silt in the bay on account of the Government some years ago having cut a channel westerly into the bay and facilitated the flow of water into the bay, and the city claims that the Crown is responsible. Whether there is any legal liability or not, the navigation was impaired so that vessels are not able now to approach some of the piers at the east end at all. I believe the water has got as shallow as five or six feet in some places.

Mr. CLARKE. Less than that in some places.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The scheme will be carefully considered and carried out on these lines.

Mr. BERGERON. Will the work be let by tender?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. If possible, and I expect it will.

Mr. CLARKE. Will tenders be invited for the dredging?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Of course, but we cannot proceed with the dredging until we divert the Don, except beyond the range of the Don. We will have to see what the contract for diverting the Don will amount to, and whatever amount remains over will be applied to dredging this fall.

Mr. CLARKE. Have any steps been taken with respect to the eastern extension of the eastern part and constructing drawings? There was one or two drawings placed by the officers of the department as an experiment, and one placed by the city; is there any information from the officers of the department as to the effect the placing of these drawings to the south of the island has had for the protection of the island?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The engineer states that the drawings did not extend far enough out to produce the results desired. They have not protected the washing away of the island.

Mr. CLARKE. Will there be any further experiments tried in that direction? Drawings have been placed in other places with most beneficial effect. They have protected parts of the island and have resulted in a lot of land being made. Do the officers intend placing one or more drawings this season?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The easterly pier extends some distance into the lake, and the effect has been to check the flow of sand, and a good deal of land has been made to the east of the island, and, no doubt, when the westerly pier is extended into deep water, as it will be some 800 feet further south, that will check, to a large extent, the flow of water, and may result in causing the sand in solution to precipitate on the shore and make land. It will serve as one groyne at least.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the work of extending the pier be let by tender?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Of course.

Point Pelee Island--

Wharf ..... $5,000

Mr. CLANCY. Can the hon. Minister of Finance give any information as to whether there is any likelihood of dredging being done in the river Sydney this year?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is an appropriation in the main Estimates, but we have no dredge at present available.

Providence Bay--

Wharf ..... $5,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in Algoma, Manitoulin Islands.

Sheguiandah--

Landing pier ..... $3,300

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in the same place.

Mr. FOSTER. Are the two wharfs in the same place?

Mr. SPROULE. They are 34 miles apart.

Mr. FOSTER. Ask the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule).

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the hon. member for East Grey this evening gave us a very strong argument in favour of these two votes. And he was quite right: these are good appropriations.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this a new pier ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. HENDERSON. Before leaving the Ontario items, I desire once more to make an appeal to the acting Minister of Public Works (Mr. Fielding) on behalf of the small harbour to which I drew his attention a month or two ago, the harbour at Bronte, about midway between Hamilton and Toronto. Bronte is a very old place, and at one time a very large amount of business was transacted in that harbour. It was formerly an Indian reserve, and is of some historical note. A considerable amount of fruit is raised in this section, and there is a large fishing industry, because this village is the home of the cisco, the fishing of which gives employment to a very considerable number of people. With fruit-growing and fishing, there is a considerable amount of produce to be shipped from the port, if only some little improvements were made. I have listened very carefully to some of the statements made by the hon. Minister. I have not interrupted him, but have noted what he said with regard to the various appropriations, more especially those for Nova Scotia. I do not desire to draw a distinction as to the appropriations for one province and those for another, for we feel that all provinces are entitled to some consideration. But I feel that the reason that he gave for the grants to many of these small harbours in the maritime provinces, apply exactly to the case to which I now refer. The people there are industrious and have considerable money invested in their fishing and fruit industries. They need a grant to assist them in dredging out the harbour and improving the old pier, which was built there many years ago. This harbour was private property, but the municipal council of the township in which the village lies, I am informed, recently purchased the harbour, with the idea that when it became public property, they could appeal to the Government for aid. A deputation waited on the Minister of Public Works during this session, and asked for aid for the harbour. I do not know what answer was given; but I am sure the Minister will take this into consideration, and, if he has any surplus money from the appropriation for harbours generally, he will do something for the people in the manner suggested. It is of great importance that the water communication be kept up at such places as Burlington, Bronte and Oakville, because fruit can be shipped so much more cheaply than by rail, creating competition and causing a considerable saving to the people engaged in these industries. The friends of the hon. gentleman are pressing this matter as well, and I should be glad if he would do something for this harbour.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have no appropriation; so, we can only make a note of the hon. gentleman's remarks for future consideration.

New Dredging Plant—

Maritime Provinces.....	$50,000
For British Columbia .....	25,000
	75,000

Mr. FOSTER. Give us some explanation of this.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In the case of the maritime provinces, it is proposed to get a new elevator dredge at $50,000. As respects the British Columbia item, it is for a construction of a stern-propelling dredge and scow, and other items.

Mr. FOSTER. Where do you get the elevator dredge ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The one for the maritime provinces will probably be made at Sorel, and the other in British Columbia.

Mr. MORRISON. Surely, this is only an instalment. The dredge for British Columbia will cost more than $25,000. I understood that it would cost $60,000 or $70,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The estimate placed in my hands gives the cost of the dredge contemplated as $25,000. It is probably not the dredge to which the hon. gentleman refers. This is for a stern-wheel dredge, $15,000, and other items, making it up to $25,000.

St. Maurice District—

Improvement to booms between Pointe Marchesseault and Pointe à Bernard, in the St. Maurice River.....	$4,500
---	---------

Mr. FOSTER. Is this for the lumbermen?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. What are we going into now ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is for the improvement of booms already in existence, and which are a source of revenue.

Roads and Bridges—

Belly River Bridge—Aid to the N.W.T. Government towards the construction of bridge at Pace's Crossing.....	$3,000
--	---------

Mr. FOSTER. What is the explanation of this ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is $3,000 for the North-west Territories Government for the construction of steel truss bridge and approaches, estimated to cost $7,000.

Mr. FOSTER. Who does the building of that ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The North-west Government.

Mr. FOSTER. How do you explain that ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. This road became necessary for the settlement of the Swan River district. We have been promoting immigration there, and a large number of settlers have been pointing that way, but it has been impossible for them to get in. After a considerable amount of discussion, I told the Manitoba Government I would recommend a refund of half the amount of the $4,000 if they would expend it on the colonization road.

Mr. FOSTER. I think we will have to protest against that. We have gone a long distance, and surely we will not go so far, when we are spending Dominion money lavishly to get citizens for the province of Manitoba, as to go to work and build roads for the province which lead into the settlements that these settlers are to live upon. I am surprised at the Manitoba Government putting in that claim, and still more at its being allowed.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. My hon. friend is under a misapprehension. It was not what could be called a permanent work for the benefit of the province at all ; it was a road up into the Swan River district, where a railroad was going to run in the following year, and is now going. This is not work which would be of any permanent benefit to Manitoba, but it was for the purpose of enabling the settlers to get in there. They could not have got in otherwise, they would have been simply blocked had not that road been constructed.

Portage du Fort Bridge—

Aid towards reconstruction, provided the Quebec and Ontario and Quebec Governments contribute each $5,000. $20,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is an interprovincial bridge across the Ottawa, constructed some years ago under a joint arrangement between the Dominion and the provincial governments of Ontario and Quebec. The bridge has fallen into decay, one span is now down. It is proposed to renew the bridge on these terms, the Dominion Government to receive $5,000 from each of the two provinces.

Mr. HAGGART. What was the contribution of the different governments on the bridge construction before ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I think the renewal is in the same proportion as the first construction.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the Minister have his officers find out before concurrence ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. FIELDING.

Telegraphs—

Cheticamp and Meat Cove telegraph line ..... $5,200

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is at present a gap in that line of 40 miles between Cheticamp and Meat Cove. The estimated cost is $1,200 per mile.

Mr. FOSTER. When it goes away from Cheticamp, where does it go ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Meat Cove is the extreme northern point of the island of Cape Breton, and is the point at which the cable leaves the Magdalen Islands.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the purpose of building this ? The Meat Cove line that runs to the Magdalen Islands, of course, we know what that is for ; but this seems to be local.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think it follows the north-west coast from Cheticamp. It is practically an extension of the existing line in Cape Breton, running up the north-west coast and getting round to Meat Cove in that way.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It connects with the Magdalen Islands telegraph instead of going round by Sydney.

Mr. FOSTER. We want to know if the Government has now a connection with Meat Cove, and then with the Magdalen Islands that serves all the purposes of the Government for marine information and the like of that. What need have you now for building local lines there ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The deputy informs me that the Minister visited the locality, and the fishermen there were very anxious to have a line along that section, and the Minister was persuaded it was a good thing, and he put the item in the Estimates. The telegraph in that section of the country is entirely in the hands of the Government. I suppose no company would come in and build that little section.

Anticosti Island—

Renewal of line wire between Becksie River and English Bay ..... $1,200

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is the report of the district superintendent, Mr. H. Pope, dated October 19th, 1898 :

For some time past we have found an increasing resistance on the line between here and Long Point ; I consequently instructed our repairer to examine that section very carefully, and he reports as follows :—“The line, especially between Becksie River and West Point is very badly rusted, especially in the joints and at the tie-wires, in some places the line being entirely eaten off. He removed some of the worst places but found he could not remove them all without a great outlay of time and material, besides making many more joints in the line.

In view of this and the increasing traffic on that section, which will also increase more as the north shore line extends eastward, the General Superintendent suggests that the section between be strung with new No. 6 wire during the coming season.

It will require about 30 miles of wire.

Mr. WALLACE. I would like to know something about the position of the ownership of Anticosti Island and the treatment that is being meted out to the settlers there. Propositions have been made to drive the settlers out of that island, although they have been settled there for many years, and it seems to me that a great injustice has been done to them.

The PRIME MINISTER. Although the subject is hardly relevant to the item before the committee, I have no objection to giving the hon. gentleman the information he has asked for.

Mr. FOSTER. It has caused a great deal of discussion.

The PRIME MINISTER. In the early part of the session, the Government brought down a return moved for by the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor), I think, which gives the whole history of the case. It has been stated that Mr. Mernier, the present owner of the island, had not a title to it. The papers which I brought down, show that Mr. Menier has an unbroken chain of title coming down from the French King in 1640 or 1660. There are some settlers, or rather fishermen, who have been squatters upon the island for twenty years or so. The question of the ownership of the island is now before the court. As these fishermen are not rich enough to undertake the cost of their own defence, it has been undertaken by the Quebec Government; Mr. Davidson, a gentleman connected with the bar of Quebec, has been retained as their counsel, and he has been paid by the government of Quebec. In the meantime, these people are not disturbed in their possession. A Methodist clergyman came to me to ascertain whether it was not possible to remove them and give them land in the North-west Territories. Without consulting my colleagues, knowing very well that I could speak in their behalf, I said that I would be very glad to favour anything that could be done to give them land in the North-west Territories. These men had been chiefly fishermen all their lives, and it was thought that we might give them land on the shore of Lake Winnipeg, where they could pursue an avocation similar to the avocation that they had followed for generations, and where they might have an opportunity of going into farming.

Mr. WALLACE. As I have been told the story, it differs very materially from that told by the right hon. gentleman. He has told us that Mr. Menier has an unbroken title from sixteen hundred and something to the present day.

The PRIME MINISTER. That is my belief.

Mr. WALLACE. That is a matter that is in dispute, and it is now before the court. These men have rights, as well as Mr. Menier.

The PRIME MINISTER. Hear, hear.

Mr. WALLACE. And stronger rights, because they have been here, as citizens of Canada and British subjects, for twenty years. They originally came from Newfoundland, having been invited by the owner of the island at that time, and they came on the terms of settlement that were well understood to prevail throughout the province of Quebec. This is a part of Quebec, and, as such, it is amenable to the laws of Quebec and of the Dominion. But, under the present circumstances, this man has assumed the right, not only of ownership, but of kingship. Mr. Menier is the king and ruler of the island. Mr. Menier, a foreigner, not living in Canada, not a British subject, appoints a governor to rule over this island, and he does rule over it in truly despotic style. The first thing that they do is to deprive the people of the rights they undoubtedly possess.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Are the courts not open to them?

Mr. WALLACE. Yes, the courts are open to everybody. An attempt was made to turn these men off the island in November, or late last season, and a Dominion policeman—not a Dominion policeman, but a provincial policeman—went there to arrest them, although the hon. Minister of the Interior, with his usual sneer, asks if the courts were not open to them. Where were the courts then? Here were men going to arrest these people and put them in confinement, if they did not clear out.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Did I understand the hon. gentleman to say that a Dominion policeman went to arrest them?

Mr. WALLACE. The hon. gentleman can hear what he wants to hear, but he cannot hear what he does not want to hear.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. That does not alter your statement.

Mr. WALLACE. The first statement I made was, that it was a Dominion policeman, but I corrected myself, and said that it was a provincial policeman. The question is asked: Could these men not go to the courts? Where was the opportunity for these men to go to the courts, with not a dollar in their pockets, in the fall of the year, scores of miles away from the mainland, with the probability of their homes being burned, in their absence, and their families being left unprovided for? The whole case, to my mind, is one of hardship, of brutality, and of interference with the rights of Canadian citizens and British subjects, settled upon British soil. We passed a resolution the other day, sympathizing with British citizens who went into a foreign country, and who claimed to have the rights of British subjects extended to them under British suzerainty.

But, Sir, such a storm was raised that the Government of Quebec was compelled to step in and give legal assistance to these men, and to pull off the provincial police who were sent down to arrest them. The whole machinery of the Government of Quebec apparently was being used at first to obey the demands of Mr. Menier and take away the rights of these British subjects and Canadian citizens who were settled on the Island of Anticosti. The statement is made that they were criminals of the deepest dye, and had done deeds which should have consigned them to the penitentiary if not to the gallows. It has been proved, I think, to the satisfaction of anybody who desired satisfactory proof, that these charges were baseless, slanderous and untrue, and that these men were a God-fearing, law-abiding class of citizens. What is the charge made against them? A gentleman who went to Anticosti as a minister of the gospel, a leading member of the church to which these people belonged, says:

Will you allow me to call attention to a statement recently made by the Hon. Mr. Tarte on the floor of the House of Commons, in which he states that "the twenty Methodist families at Fox Bay, Anticosti, are professional wreckers—men who lure ships by displaying false lights: that they may possess themselves of the resulting spoils." Allow me to assure you that I have the most reliable and unimpeachable evidence that this statement is not in accordance with the facts, that it is utterly false and malicious. The men who have lived among these ten or twelve—not twenty—families as teachers and missionaries, and who have no motive to speak other than the truth, declared them to be honest, hard-working people.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman is not in order. First, he is referring to a previous debate.

Mr. WALLACE. Who said it was a previous debate?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The statement made by the hon. gentleman—

Mr. WALLACE. I said nothing of a previous debate.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I understand that the hon. gentleman is quoting from a previous debate. I ask him if he is?

Mr. WALLACE. I reply no.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I will accept the hon. gentleman's statement.

Mr. WALLACE (reading).

There seems to have been a determined effort to traduce these people, and to destroy their character, that they may be more easily banished. Every article that has been written against them has been inspired by Mr. Menier or his friends, and has had but one object—to discredit these people in order to ruin them. The advice of Mr. Menier's counsel in serving them with an action in ejectment, summoning them to appear in court hundreds of miles from their island home, and to show cause for their continuance in homes built by them and their fathers in good faith as permanent residences, twenty-six years ago, and sending the citation by the last mail and boat to touch at that port for the season, was a piece of practice worthy of the most barbarous ages.

Mr. WALLACE.

And yet, Sir, the Minister of the Interior gets up and says: "Why don't they go to the courts? Why wasn't the law open to these men?" In the statement I have read, made by a distinguished citizen of Canada, the hon. gentleman has his answer:

If it is not because of "rule" or "religion" that these men are maligned, which we doubt, it is a case of the strong attempting to crush the weak by the meanest of all expedients—illegal process and defamation of character. Mr. Tarte should have known these people better before he proceeded to defame them. If reports are true, even to a small degree, he has traduced men with a more honourable record than his own. If his slander of these defenceless people, who live in poverty, and for five months in the year without any postal communication with the outside world, is a fair sample of his conduct with other people, it is high time the prefix now associated with his name should be substituted by one of a different significance.

The Methodist church does not need to apply to such a source for her ethics, or a credential of character, or for a testimonial regarding her missionary work. This church will bear favourable comparison with the one at whose shrine the hon. gentleman bows, and she will on occasion most assuredly know her duty towards the man who presumes to slander her in the Parliament of our country.

This is not the first time Mr. Tarte has gone out of his way to insult Methodists, and it has been endured in silence, but longer silence might be deemed cowardice or sin.

With that statement of the case, which I believe is an accurate one, with the statements which have been made defaming these men's characters, with the facts of the case, as we know them, that these men have been basely persecuted, maltreated and threatened, and that they have had a charge made against them for the purpose of dispossessing them and depriving them of their rights and privileges at a time when they could not bring in their defence, we find in the province of Quebec men who will defend the men who are making the charge which they have never attempted to prove that these men were luring vessels by false lights in order that human life might be destroyed and that they might have a chance of plundering the vessels. If that is true, it is the duty of the men who make the charge to bring forward the proof and protect the country from such miscreants as these men would be. But in face of the fact that the characters and reputations of those men, as proved by the missionaries who have been among them during all these years—

Mr. DAVIS. I rise to a point of order. I think the question under discussion is a vote of $1,200 for the construction of a wire between Bessie River and English Bay on the Island of Anticosti, and the speech which the hon. gentleman is making has nothing to do with the question. I ask your ruling.

Mr. WALLACE. With regard to the point of order raised by the hon. member, the Island of Anticosti, every acre of it, is said by the First Minister to be the private property of Mr. Menier, and we are asked to approve of a vote of public money for the construction of a telegraph line on that island, in which Mr. Menier probably claims much more than the right hon. Minister says he has a right to. I might have moved an amendment in going into Supply or waited for this vote to come on, and I chose to take the milder course of bringing the matter before the attention of the House when some vote was up that would justify a reference to it.

The PRIME MINISTER. I thought that there was a great doubt whether the question was in order, but did not press the point, because, if we are to have a discussion, we may as well have it now as later. The hon. gentleman could have brought this up on a motion to go into Committee of Supply, and that would have been perfectly regular, but I doubt whether he is in order in bringing it up on this vote.

Mr. DAVIS. I shall not press the point of order.

The PRIME MINISTER. I tell the hon. gentleman that Mr. Menier claims the ownership of the whole island, and he apparently claims it with a good title. But, of course, my judgment goes for nothing in that matter, and the courts will have to determine finally the value of his title. It is quite true, he is not a British subject, but he has bought his land from a British subject, who had bought it at a sheriff's sale, under the authority of Her Majesty, and has all the rights of a British subject to the island. It is true, that he has given the title of governor to his manager, which is a very pompous, but very inoffensive, title. He recognizes fully the laws of Her Majesty, and has shown the best recognition of those laws by being a suitor in our courts. He also pays our customs dues, and has never thought of claiming any title, except under the suzerainty of Her Majesty.

As to these men whom he is attempting to eject, it is only fair to say an attempt at a compromise was made, and on its failure, he went before the courts. What more can be done in a British country than, in the case of a failure to come to an agreement, between two contending parties, to have their difficulties settled by the courts? These men are poor, and Mr. Menier is a millionaire. These men, therefore, could not have gone into court on equal terms, but their case was so strong that the government of Quebec came to their rescue, and engaged counsel, and they are being defended by a counsel of their own selection, Mr. Davidson, who is paid by the province of Quebec. Surely, nothing could be fairer. As to the character of these men, I never heard anything said against them, except some references on the floor of this House, but if anything was said against them, it was not at all because they were Methodists, and it will be found that the gentleman who made the remarks, stated that there were on the island French Canadians and Irishmen, presumably Catholics, as well as Protestants, and although a certain reputation was attached to them, I do not know anything about it, and will not countenance anything of the kind. But I disclaim any desire, on the part of my hon. colleague the Minister of Public Works, to attack any religion. His words do not warrant anything of the kind. Moreover, I may say that, for all I know of these men, I never heard a word to their detriment in Quebec.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The reference my hon. friend (Mr. Wallace) made to me, causes me to say a word or two, not however by way of explanation of this matter, because the right hon. First Minister has explained it very clearly, and I have no personal knowledge of it at all, but simply to explain that when I asked the hon. member (Mr. Wallace) whether the courts were not open, I did so in perfect good faith, because it seemed to me that the proper remedy would be found in the courts, and I wanted to know whether there was any sound reason why that remedy was not open to these men. We have the statement of my right hon. friend, that, on account of their poverty, which made it difficult for them to appeal to the courts, the government of Quebec came to their rescue, and, in doing so, they did what has never been done in any other case that I know of, and that is, pay counsel to defend the rights of private individuals to property they claim in a private way. With regard to the remarks of the hon. Minister of Public Works, to which the hon. member for West York referred, when he said that the Minister of Public Works had gone out of his way to insult the Methodist Church; I happen to be a member of that denomination myself, and I was very close to the Minister of Public Works when he made that speech, and I am bound to say that I utterly failed—though I listened to him very carefully—to find in it the slightest indication that he intended in any possible way to reflect on any denomination. Anybody who knows that hon. gentleman, knows that, however, bluntly he may express his opinions, he would be the last man to attack any particular denomination. I heard the remarks he made in the House, and I think that the gentlemen in the Methodist Church who, no doubt in good faith, expressed their opinion that he made an attack on that church, and was animated by hostility to it, gathered an altogether erroneous idea from the perusal of his remarks, and I am satisfied that no gentleman in the House at the time he spoke, had any opinion of that kind. The opinion of these gentlemen must have arisen from an incorrect report of what he said, taken in connection with the circumstances that a clergyman of the Methodist Church was specially interested.

Mr. BOURASSA. As this matter has been discussed, not only in the press of this country, but also in the British press, and as references to it are now going into the pages of "Hansard," I wish to state a few facts of which I have personal knowledge. I happen to be personally acquainted with some of the gentlemen who have taken an interest in the legal dispute, as well as in the settlement of the island. It has been said that Mr. Menier is a foreigner. That is true, but I hope that other foreigners will come to Canada and spend as much money as he is doing, and give our people the same benefit of their expenditure. He has made a special point, by instructions to his manager, to induce, as much as possible, Canadians to settle on the island. To his manager he has given the title of governor, but this gentleman is none the less simply a manager. The title of governor is one which is often given to persons holding similar positions on large private estates, both in England and France, and in the French colonies. The settlers brought on the island since Mr. Menier is its proprietor, are, without exception, all British subjects, and all the expenditure made on the island has been made in favour of Canadian interests. Canadian building materials and supplies have been purchased to a large amount for the island at Quebec and Montreal. I may say, further, that when Mr. Commettant came to the island, he made it a special point to go and see all the settlers, including those of Fox Bay and English Bay, and offered them titles of occupancy from Mr. Mernier, on the same conditions as those on which titles are offered to all other settlers there. And a good many Protestants as well as Catholics, Englishmen, Frenchmen and Irishmen have accepted those titles. Others have refused to accept them claiming that they had titles of their own. Then, Mr. Menier, before taking any proceedings, sent Mr. Commettant to Quebec. Mr. Commettant notified the Attorney General of Quebec, and asked what were the proper proceedings to take in order to have the question settled before the courts. He was advised, as I understand it, to take the proceedings that have been taken with the understanding that the Government would appoint a counsel to appear for the settlers. So that this question of delay which was brought up by the hon. member for West York as though it were an act of persecution against the settlers, is really nothing of the kind.

Mr. SIFTON.

A counsel has been appointed to appear for them and the case will be heard. So Mr. Menier has not only dealt fairly with them, but has taken every trouble to put himself in the proper position to have his rights tested before the Canadian courts.

Mr. WALLACE. Would it be better if he had the defence as well as the prosecution in his own hands?

Mr. BOURASSA. He took the trouble to ascertain what were the proper proceedings to take. What more could he do? Those people claimed the right to stay there, and he had to proceed as he would against people who attempted to settle on his property without leave. So when the writ of ejectment was served on them they had to appear and plead that they were owners. The writ of ejectment was to be served by a bailiff, but no bailiff dared to go there because of the reputation of these people—justly or unjustly deserved—unless he was accompanied by force. The object was not to put them out, but to serve them with a writ. After it was served, it was understood that the case would be discussed before the courts, Mr. Menier to be represented by his counsel—a Canadian counsel—and the so-called settlers to be represented by their counsel appointed by the province of Quebec. No matter when the writ was served, nothing would be done before the case was dealt with in the courts.

Mr. WALLACE. That is very good. The hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) says that some people accepted the title and some others did not. But he has not told us what those titles were.

Mr. BOURASSA. Certain titles of occupancy.

Mr. WALLACE. Shall I read them, as the hon. gentleman has failed to do so:

Mr. Menier made false charges against these people, the provincial police were sent down to tear down their homes, and expel them from the island, not because they were pirates or invaders, but because they would not be subject to Mr. Menier as absolute sovereign of the island and its waters. He demanded not only the seigneur's fee for right of occupation, but a title of wild animals captured. He forbade any one to leave the island or to land upon its shores without his permission. He forbade them to trade with the outside world, or the outside world to trade with them. They must sell all to him, and buy all from him or forfeit their residence on the island. After twenty-seven years' freedom on Canada's free soil, they refused to sacrifice their manhood to be made serfs.

Mr. BOURASSA. May I ask if the hon. gentleman is quoting from the text of the title furnished by Mr. Menier or from a letter by the gentleman—

Mr. WALLACE. I am quoting from a letter written by a gentleman who was a missionary for a long time, and who knew what he was writing about.

Mr. BOURASSA. I do not discuss the good faith of the gentleman who wrote the letter, but the accuracy of his report of the title.

Mr. TAYLOR. Twenty years peaceable possession gives a title.

Mr. BOURASSA. That question has to be settled by the courts, whose authority is greater than that of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor).

Mr. WALLACE. I have here some of the history of these people.

The north shore coasting steamer "Otter" arrived up here from the gulf on Monday, bringing among her passengers two men named Edward Osborne and Hoyles Whiting from Fox Bay, Anticosti, delegated by their brother settlers there to appear and answer for them at Murray Bay, the judicial chef-lieu of the district of Saguenay, to as many actions taken out against them by Mr. Menier, and calling upon them to show cause in the Superior Court there to-morrow why they should not be ejected from the Island and their homes and buildings thereon demolished. In their natural alarm at the terrors of the law and the fate overhanging them, these two poor men, owing to the impossibility of getting to Quebec otherwise at this advanced stage of the season, had been obliged to make the journey from Fox Bay to Esquimaux Point, on the north shore, a distance of 95 miles, in an open boat, and from Esquimaux Point, where they caught the coasting steamer, to Quebec as deck passengers, exposed to all the inclemency of the weather, and virtually without sleep since their departure from Fox Bay, over a week ago; but time and tide wait for no man, and the poor and penniless must perforce suffer inconvenience and hardships which more fortunate humanity can scarcely realize. In their case, however, their little all in this world was at stake, and what dangers and discomforts will men not cheerfully face under these circumstances? And no finer specimens of hardy, modest, unassuming manhood it would be difficult to find.

It describes the men, and goes on:

They say that in the spring of 1873, while living at their homes in the channel, Port au Basque, Newfoundland, they or their parents in some cases received from Mr. Forsyth, the then owner of Anticosti, paper signed with his own name, inviting them and other Newfoundland fishermen to go and settle on Anticosti, where, he stated, he had houses, boats and fishing gear for them at four different stations, namely: Ellis Bay, McDonald Cove, South-west Point, and Fox Bay, and that they could settle at whichever of these places they chose for and could build, fish and hunt. As fishing was just then poor on the Newfoundland coast and the prospects held out by Mr. Forsyth at Anticosti were brighter, they accepted the invitation and, disposing of their homes and belongings in Newfoundland for whatever they would bring, devoted the proceeds to the purchase of a schooner and two months' provisions, arriving, some thirty persons in all, at Fox Bay, on August 23rd, only to find that they had been deceived; that Mr. Forsyth was not there; that there were no houses or provisions awaiting them, nothing but a few fishermen from the South Shore, who had merely erected little huts on the beach for their own convenience. On August 24th, a heavy gale sprang up, which drove their schooner ashore, and which left them in a still more hopeless condition, as they were unable to go elsewhere. Some of them made two trips around the island in small boats, but found no aid, while the others sheltered themselves on the beach or in the bush as best they could.

Then it gives their history in this matter, and it says:

We were in too poor circumstances to pay for newspapers and were, moreover, so situated that we only got the mails from the outside five times a year, from June to October. So that we had very little opportunity to know what was going on in the outside world. When the English company wanted us to pay rent and come under their rules, we told them of our rights from Mr. Forsyth, and they could not and did not dispute them. But since Mr. Menier has become the owner of the island it seems to be a different thing.

In the spring of 1896, Mr. Menier made his first appearance amongst us with Mr. Commettant, the governor and manager on the island. They made us a great many promises, for which, in return, we made some promises to them. But before one year had passed they broke some of theirs, which we can prove. During the same season (1896), Mr. Menier went away, leaving Mr. Commettant in charge as manager, and a hard manager we have found him to be.

Last spring (1898), he came to Fox Bay with a police force from Quebec, and ordered us to get ready to leave the island within 24 hours, on board the "Savoy," which would land us on the north or the south shore, whichever we chose. We told them that we could not leave on such short notice, whereupon they stated that, if we did not go, they would handcuff us and take us by force, and that if they could not take us alive they would take us dead, burn our houses on the spot and also handcuff and take the females. Seeing that this threat did not have the desired effect, they surrounded us with police, armed with revolvers, clubs, &c., and compelled us to sign a paper that we would leave at our own expense and of our own free will.

Yet, we are told that the Quebec Government is looking after the interest of the people, protecting them and getting lawyers to defend their cause before the courts. That may be true to-day, but this is the course the government of Quebec took in the first instance. They sent their provincial police to drive out these men, to threaten to murder them, to threaten to burn down their houses.

Mr. BOURASSA. I made the statement that before any proceedings were taken it was perfectly understood that the government of Quebec would appoint counsel, that was understood at the time of the serving of the writ. Therefore, the hon. gentleman should accept my statement before saying that it was the force of public opinion that compelled the Quebec Government to adopt that expedient.

Mr. WALLACE. I do not wish to deny a statement of the hon. member as to the facts within his own knowledge. But I understand that the situation was different from what he states it, that while they did that later on, they did not do it in the initial proceedings. The initial proceedings were to carry out the wishes and desires of Mr. Menier, and to that end they sent the provincial police—

Mr. BOURASSA. Only to protect the bailiff in serving the writs, otherwise he did not want to go.

Mr. WALLACE. There is no law that authorizes a bailiff to burn houses. He says they had orders to.

“Take us by force, and that if they could not take us alive they would take us dead, burn our houses on the spot, and also handcuff and take the females.”

Mr. BOURASSA. That is the romantic part of it.

Mr. WALLACE. That is the brutal and unjustifiable part, and it will not do to have a laugh, and to say that is the romantic part to these poor men who are threatened, in the fall of the year, with no means to keep them over winter, with the destruction of their homes, if they did not consent to the cruel demands of Mr. Menier. It was not romantic—

Mr. BOURASSA. I call it romantic because it exists only in the imagination of the gentleman who wrote it.

The PRIME MINISTER. Were they manacled?

Mr. WALLACE. No they were not, apparently. The report says:

A statement in writing to this effect, and in very much the same terms, which they called “A statement of their rights and grievances,” was drawn up and signed at the time by the settlers in their own simple unadorned way, and this statement, Osborne and Whiting, the two delegates, have brought to Quebec, together with the following letter of recommendation or introduction.

Then follows a letter of the Rev. Mr. Argue, the Fox Bay missionary, among those people, who denies all the statements that have been made as detrimental and injurious to the character of these men. I will read an extract or two:

They are having a great deal of trouble owing to Mr. Menier, who is endeavouring by very harsh and, no doubt, unjust means to route them as well as many others of our people out of their hard and honest-earned moneys.

There is the religious question here, which I will leave out, because I do not want to mix that up with it, more than is absolutely necessary. But I say that these men were cruelly treated, I do not care what their religion was, nor what was the religion of the man who ill-treated them. This letter by the Rev. Mr. Argue is dated September 30th, 1898. He is the missionary on the ground, whose statements must be considered trustworthy:

Some three months ago, by Mr. Menier's authority, armed police endeavoured to bluff and frighten the people out of the place; but, failing in their attempt, they then compelled the people to sign documents agreeing to leave the island by September 10. And since that time he has entered the case in law to try to force the people out, summoning them to appear in the Superior Court, Saguenay, within twenty days from September 24. They are on their way, and any assistance you can give them in the way of advice, sympathy, or recommending them to a good lawyer, will be gratefully received. * * * Many of them have been living in their houses here for twenty-five years, and if Mr. Menier gets his ends accomplished, the result will assuredly be that scores of our brethren will be homeless. Already the matter has given us untold trouble and anxiety, but we hope that Christian patriotism will manifest itself and that the citizens of Fox Bay will be allowed to dwell together in peace.

Yours fraternally,

REV. A. B. ARGUE,
Fox Bay, Anticosti.

Now, this is the statement of their case. It shows a most extraordinary state of affairs. I would like to ask the Government in connection with it some other questions. Mr. Menier comes in from France with his own vessel; where does he make entry of customs?

The PRIME MINISTER. In the city of Quebec.

Mr. WALLACE. Does he make entry at the city of Quebec before he lands on his own island?

The PRIME MINISTER. I think so. All the information I have leads me to that conclusion.

Mr. WALLACE. I am sorry the Minister of Customs is not here, who has that matter in charge.

Mr. BOURASSA. Mr. Menier has two boats; he has one boat, the “Savoy,” making regular trips between Anticosti and Quebec, and that never goes to France. All the goods transported to the island are transported from Quebec by the “Savoy.” Mr. Menier has already expended on the island millions of francs in Canadian goods, or goods imported into Canada on which customs has been paid. The only boat that comes over from France is the private yacht of Mr. Menier, which simply brings what he requires for his trip.

Mr. WALLACE. The vessel going from one Canadian port to another, of course, that is all right. But the other one coming from France—

Mr. BOURASSA. It has come twice in three years.

Mr. WALLACE. I have a letter asking me to get information where that vessel makes its customs entry, who examines the cargo, if the customs regulation are complied with. If I am correctly informed, there is no customs officer at Anticosti.

The PRIME MINISTER. If the hon. gentleman puts those questions. I may say that if he will give me a note of them I will get him the exact information. In the meantime, speaking subject to correction, I make bold to say that all the entries are made at Quebec.

Mr. WALLACE. But the law could not be complied with even if the entries were made at Quebec, because the law says they are to go to the customs-house within 24 hours. They are not to land goods at any place except at a customs port. They are not to land goods on the island of Anticosti at all, because if they do they violate the customs law.

The PRIME MINISTER. My pretension is that they do not do it.

Mr. WALLACE. In coming from France they must not go to the port of Quebec without calling at Anticosti. Do they do that?

The PRIME MINISTER. That is it.

Mr. WALLACE. That is not the information I have from the parties on the island. But I will be glad to get definite information about that. Then, Mr. Menier appoints a governor. The governor rules in an arbitrary, despotic and tyrannical manner.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He is the manager.

Mr. WALLACE. Some governors are managers, and some governors have not quite as much power as managers. The Governors of our provinces have responsible Ministers who advise them, but this governor has no responsible ministers. He is the manager, the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries tells us. He takes the whole matter in his own hands, and in the style that I have described to this House. Then, there is the fact that the Imperial Government recognizes that there was something of national importance in Mr. Menier, this celebrated Frenchman, getting possession of the entrance to the St. Lawrence. I will quote a paragraph here:

Mr. Menier, a few years ago, during one of the Francophile manias which periodically sweep over this province, purchased from the provincial government the Island of Anticosti, which, as any one who will take the trouble to look at the map will see, commands the entrance to the River St. Lawrence just as effectually as the French Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon command the entrance to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. His object, as stated then, and many times since, was to provide for himself and his friends a game and fishing preserve where they might spend their summers with profit after the exacting duties of chocolate-making in Paris.

He got possession of this island, which commands the entrance to the St. Lawrence, and which, in the event of war between Britain and France, would be an invulnerable point for an enemy of Britain and Canada. What was his first act?

To warn the English-speaking settlers on the island that they must move, that they had no longer any rights there, that all their years of labour in making a home for themselves and families must go for nothing. He had no use for any one on the Island of Anticosti who could speak English. They might prove troublesome in some future time.

And so the English-speaking settlers of Fox Bay received notice from Mr. Commettant, who was appointed "Governor" of the Island of Anticosti by Mr. Menier, and who has been given social rank by the Lieutenant-Governor of this province, although he is no more in the eyes of the law than a steward upon an Irish landlord's estate), that they must leave. It was nothing to him that these poor people had made their homes out of the wilderness of this barren island, that their children had been born there, and their old folks buried there—in a word, that they had made it their home—what was that to him? He had simply to carry out his orders, which were to remove every English-speaking man, woman and child from the Island of Anticosti. Mr. Menier, the chocolate man, did not want anybody who spoke English to be a witness of his sport.

This discloses a very unsatisfactory state of affairs. It is not satisfactory to find a foreigner coming in and claiming what no citizen of Canada ever claimed in any part of this Dominion, what no British subject has ever claimed—an extensive right of ownership, as if he were the king or the sovereign of that possession.

Mr. BOURASSA. Simply the owner, just as you would be of a property you had bought.

Mr. WALLACE. Simply the owner! It is nonsense to say that because, whether these men have the right or not to their possession, because although they had been there for 25 years, Mr. Menier recognizes no right. He got the assistance of the provincial police and set the machinery of the law in motion, for driving these men out without going to the courts. It is true that afterwards the local government did step in when public opinion became aroused. Our hon. friend says that the government were doing right before that. I will not dispute that, but they did wrong in the first instance without a doubt, because afterwards they had to retrace their steps. To me it appears that a gross outrage has been perpetrated on loyal British subjects, men either born here or born on the island of Newfoundland. When a member of our Canadian Government described them as murderers, he was bound to prove that statement or be condemned for making such an assertion against men who have been proved to be a law-abiding and peaceable community by their missionaries and teachers. The course which the Dominion Government, or a member of the Dominion Government, took in regard to that matter was most reprehensible. Whoever permitted a foreigner to exercise such tyranny over the Canadian subjects of Her Majesty are responsible, and their conduct has been most reprehensible. Whatever is the result of the trial of this case in court, under technical rules, I am quite sure that public sentiment will not permit foreigners to drive them out of their homes without assisting them to obtain new homes in Canada, but better still to retain the homes, surrounded by many hardships as they are, where they have settled and where they have lived for the last 25 years.

Mr. FOSTER. We want an explanation of this.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The estimated cost of the work from Cariboo Crossing to Selkirk is placed at $100,000, in accordance with the following estimated details :—

	$100,000

Mr. FOSTER. What sort of a road are you building ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. A party has been sent up under the supervision of Mr. McArthur, a surveyor connected with my department, who has been exploring that country for the last two or two and a half years. His instructions are to make a trail from Bennett to Dawson by as direct a route as possible. He has already explored a trail up the valley of the river which runs on the west side of Lake Bennett, coming out at Rink Rapids. His instructions are to make a trail which will answer for an express trail in winter time and be open to foot travelling in summer. The object is to have a route which will be open when the ice breaks up in the river in the fall and in the spring. For a couple of months in the fall, and also in the spring, the ice breaks and forms again, so that it makes travel along the river impossible. In order to have continuous communication, it is necessary to have a road by land, and this trail is for that purpose. The instructions are to make as good a trail as possible, and to construct small buildings fifteen or twenty miles apart for the accommodation of people using the trail.

Mr. FOSTER. What kind of a road ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Just such a road as is made for opening up a bush country. The idea is to have a road that will be practicable as soon as the snow falls.

Mr. WALLACE.

Mr. FOSTER. Not a road that you can take a wagon over ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Not in the first instance. According to our estimate, it would not be possible except at great expense to make a good wagon road. If heavy traffic were taken over it, the road would get into ruts in a short time. An attempt to make a good wagon road in that country at the present time would be absurd ; it would be almost as cheap to build a railway. The route would have to be drained out first, and it would be enormously expensive ; in fact practically impossible, to make such a road. All we hope to have is a road by which, as soon as the water communication is closed, communication can be had by sled.

Mr. FOSTER. Tell us about the mechanism you are using to control this money and do the work ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Mr. McArthur is there in an advisory capacity. He has nothing to do with the money.

Mr. FOSTER. Who has to do with the money ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Mr. Charleson is the general manager of the business.

Mr. FOSTER. Tell us what Charleson is doing ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He is doing the work described in this estimate, constructing a telegraph line over the route I have just given, with a party of men who accompanied him from Ottawa for that purpose. What more does my hon. friend wish me to say ?

Mr. FOSTER. What is your mechanism for paying the supplies and everything like that ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The supplies are being obtained from the North-west Mounted Police, and that department will be recouped the amount. Mr. Charleson received a certain amount in advance, but no further money has been paid to him.

Mr. FOSTER. What force of men has he got ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He took 18 from Ottawa.

Mr. TAYLOR. Are these men engaged on the work in question ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I presume they are still on the work. We know nothing to the contrary.

Mr. TAYLOR. I am credibly informed that they are all prospecting.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have no information of that kind.

Mr. WALLACE. Has Mr. Charleson a son and a brother who went out on that expedition?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Neither of these persons was taken from Ottawa by him. He has a son who was engaged in the Atlin district, and we have no information whether he is working with his father or not.

Mr. WALLACE. Is he on the pay-list?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The pay-lists are on their way down, but not received.

Mr. FOSTER. What time did Mr. Charleson get to work?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He left Ottawa on the 13th March and reached Skagway the 30th, and started work at Bennett the first week in April.

Mr. FOSTER. And no pay-list received yet?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No. An arrangement was made that the families of the men who lived at Ottawa might receive money on account here. Some have claimed it, and others have not.

Mr. FOSTER. That does not explain why, when you have ten days communication from Vancouver to Bennett, you have no pay rolls or reports.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There were two parties. The first went to take charge of the telegraph line, and the second party left here about the 10th or 12th July.

Mr. FOSTER. How many had Charleson in the first party?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. About 18 from Ottawa. Mr. McArthur, who took the second party, had about the same number.

Mr. FOSTER. Then you have Charleson leaving here with a party of 18 men, and he got there about the 1st April, and has been at work four full months now. It seems almost incredible that he has not sent in his monthly pay roll.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It does seem remarkable, but the officials of the department inform me that they have not received any.

Mr. FOSTER. That argues badly for Charleson. His instructions were explicit to send in his reports and pay rolls promptly. When you send out a man and entrust him with the expenditure of money in the neighbourhood of $400,000 or $500,000 and give him explicit instructions, and when the whole Government is here and liable to be called to account for this expenditure, and when you have not, although four months have elapsed, received any report at all, I think that looks very badly for Mr. Charleson. Has any inquiry been made?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, the deputy has called his attention, both by letter and telegraph. He replied that he is forwarding the pay sheets by a man returning to Ottawa.

Mr. FOSTER. Is there not a mail. Surely he is not going to send his papers by a man who happens to be coming to Ottawa.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. One of the men of the department is returning. He might as well have sent his papers by mail.

Mr. FOSTER. Better, because the mail is more safe. You do not know what may become of the man. He might get drunk.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The mails get lost, too, sometimes.

Mr. FOSTER. But there is not anything like the same risk. What reports have been received?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. None later than those I brought down.

Mr. FOSTER. That is equivalent to none at all. Had he not entered on his work then?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. There must be three months of work done in that case, and yet you have neither report nor financial statement nor pay roll. Have you any reliable man alongside Charleson who keeps the time of the men or the accounts?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is an officer of the department with him for that purpose, Mr. Harding.

Mr. FOSTER. What was his work here?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He was a clerk in the accountant's office. He left two weeks ago.

Mr. FOSTER. The department evidently became thoroughly alarmed. This man, who, like Joshua, was going to lead into the promised land, who was sent out entrusted by the Government, has not sent in any report after having been on the ground for four months, and it is only two weeks ago that the department became frightened and sent out a man to find out what is the matter. If this had been in the early time, when we had no communication, or if it had been in a different season of the year, there might be some excuse, but here is the best season of the year for communication and when it is fairly quick. What amount of money was sent to Mr. Charleson altogether?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He received advances to the amount of $12,500, and has forwarded accounts to the amount of $43,813.11.

Mr. BERGERON. Did he send that by special messenger or by mail?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. By mail. It is a fortnight or thereabouts since his last accounts were received.

Mr. WALLACE. Up to what date did they amount to $43,000?

Mr. FOSTER. The accounts would be dated.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. But we have not the accounts themselves at hand. I will have the accounts brought down. It would be probably a month ago they amounted to this sum.

Mr. BERGERON. Is it all left with Mr. Charleson?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, construction is in the hands of the technical officers.

Mr. BERGERON. But he signs everything and sanctions everything.

Mr. WALLACE. They must obey his orders.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He has general instructions and must certify all accounts.

Mr. FOSTER. What are the items of these accounts for $43,000?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Here is a memorandum showing some items: Freight paid to the White Pass Yukon Railway Company, $1,686.84; H. A. Munn, on account of freight, $500; Upper Yukon Trading Company, purchase of steamer, $1,800; C. Racine, building scow, $1,400; Victoria Yukon Trading Company, scows, $3,987.68; Parson's Produce Company, provisions, $199.75; W. H. Roger, drugs, &c., $253.92; Bilobeau & Wise, board of men, $70; Jas. W. Woods, sundry supplies, $374.66; Dominion Express Company, expressage, $8.45; T. W. Fuller, on account, $1,500; sundry persons on account of wages—these are payments made in Ottawa to wives and their representatives of employees in the Yukon district, $2,283.50.

Mr. FOSTER. These accounts come in certified by Mr. Charleson and the department pays them here by issuing cheques?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The accounts for the river work are certified by the engineer, Mr. Taché, and countersigned by Mr. Charleson. For the telegraph work, the accounts are certified by Mr. Robertson, who is in charge of the construction of the telegraph, and countersigned by Mr. Charleson; they are forwarded, and on this they are paid.

Mr. FOSTER. With reference to the men here whose families are paid, you have not received a pay roll and do not know that they are still in the employ. How, then, can you advance to their families?

Mr. FIELDING.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They have been paid up to the 15th of June, but the deputy informs me that in the absence of pay-rolls, he has declined to make further payments.

Mr. TAYLOR. I am credibly informed that a large proportion of them have located and staked claims, and some are prospecting. I have that from a party who returned from the Yukon a few days ago.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have no information.

Mr. BERGERON. Would it not be a good thing to find out if it is true?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, if we had any means of finding out.

Mr. BERGERON. If you do not send him any more money he will probably write or do something to enable you to know where he is.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He does not receive a penny of money except on certified accounts.

Mr. BERGERON. But Charleson himself certifies.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. But he must get the certificate of the technical officer.

Mr. BERGERON. He can get that easily.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He cannot get it easily, if they are capable and independent officers.

Mr. FOSTER. Besides the money that he took with him, has he sent drafts on the Government to the banks?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No drafts except those accompanying the certified accounts to which I have referred.

Mr. FOSTER. How does he make drafts on the Government? The Government would send cheques with these accounts to the parties to whom the money is due, would it not? Surely you do not send the money to Mr. Charleson and ask him to pay the bill?

Mr. WALLACE. He is authorized by his letter of instructions to draw.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, there have been no cheques sent out. Mr. Charleson makes drafts to the amount of the accounts, which are certified, and these drafts pass through the bank. They are paid when the accountant certifies the accounts.

Mr. FOSTER. That is, Mr. Charleson certifies to the bills there and sends them on here?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The accounts are attached to the drafts, they pass through the hands of the bank, and the draft is presented by the bank accompanied by the account, presented by the bank through its agency here, and the deputy informs me that the certified account to the amount of the draft is attached to it.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The draft is paid up there. the draft is made through the bank up there.

Mr. FOSTER. I want to find out whether Mr. Charleson has drawn for $43,000, has received that money under the supposition that he has paid these bills.

Mr. WALLACE. Mr. Charleson has a letter of credit on the authority of the Government that he is to draw money at any bank or from any Government officer who has a dollar up there, on his personal authority.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Mr. Charleson has got the drafts cashed by the bank in Dawson, and a draft has been forwarded here and paid here, so that he drew the money on the draft.

Mr. CLARKE. I understand that the draft that is made by this gentleman is attached to these certified accounts. Then, is it a fact that these certified accounts are presented to the Government here through the bank?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, the deputy informs me that the drafts go through the bank that way.

Mr. CLARKE. So the Government have the first intimation of these certified accounts through the bank which has paid the money, and presents it to its agency here?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If it is all right we accept the draft; the bank has paid it on Mr. Charleson's draft; but if it is not all right, the Government do not pay it.

Telegraph lines in British Columbia and Yukon district—From Bennett to Dawson, and branch to Atlin City..... $147,500

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The telegraph line is constructed now from Bennett to Little Salmon River, a distance of 216 miles. It is expected to be on to Selkirk by the 26th of August, as Mr. Charleson reports, and by the 15th of October through to Dawson. Mr. Charleson has charge of the telegraph and the river improvement. The amounts to which we have been referring relate to the telegraph, because the road party has not been long enough away. We have a telegram this past week from Mr. Charleson from Bennett.

Mr. WALLACE. We would like to have the instructions to Mr. Charleson.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They were laid on the Table some time ago. The hon. gentleman will find them in the "Hansard."

Mr. FOSTER. How much has been spent on telegraph lines?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $24,701,-43 for 1898-99, and in the current year, $4,551.69; making a total expenditure on that part of the work of $29,253.11. Then, on the telegraph line up to the 30th of June, $12,560.

Mr. FOSTER. What are your last reports from Mr. Charleson?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have no reports from Mr. Charleson except the telegram of last week.

Mr. FOSTER. Have you no report of his progress from day to day?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There were some reports which I brought down earlier, but there are no recent reports.

Mr. FOSTER. That is most incomprehensible.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is strange, I confess.

Mr. FOSTER. You have a man here in charge of expenditures amounting to $350,000, he has been away nearly five months, and the department cannot lay its hand upon formal reports of progress from week to week by this gentleman.

Mr. HAGGART. Have you an estimate of what this 216 miles are going to cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $225 to $250 a mile.

Mr. HAGGART. Then, your estimate is about double what it ought to be.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That refers to the portion already constructed. There is a large portion yet remaining, there is the line to Quesnel, not included. The total is 660 miles.

Mr. HAGGART. Have you 216 miles already constructed?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. So it is reported.

Mr. CLARKE. How much has been paid on account of these 216 miles?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I read this statement a moment ago. There was $43,813, including $2,000 for the roadway, and besides there is an advance made to Mr. Charleson of $12,500.

Mr. CLARKE. That figured out comes to $225 a mile for 216 miles, and the total would amount to $48,600. There have been accepted drafts amounting to $43,813. $2,000 expended on account of the roadway, and this sum is in addition to the $12,500 given to Mr. Charleson when starting.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. On account of the telegraph line, $12,560 has been paid to Mr. Charleson. The other items refer to the improvements of rivers.

Mr. BERGERON. Those are the accounts that are coming and that are expected.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The accounts include both the improvements to the rivers and the telegraph line, but they are separated, and the only items we have are those in connection with the telegraph line on account of which there has been paid $12,560.

Mr. FOSTER. Has the department received any accounting for the money advanced to Mr. Charleson?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is on the way.

Mr. FOSTER. Five months after the man started.

Mr. TAYLOR. Has the one draft of $43,000 been the only draft presented by the bankers?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There were several drafts, but this is the amount. There was this $43,000 and then the advance of $12,500 made to Mr. Charleson.

Mr. BERGERON. How much has he cost us?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $43,813.11 includes the payments on various drafts advanced to Mr. Charleson, and an advance of $2,000 to Mr. McArthur.

Mr. BERGERON. Were the accounts he incurred before he started paid out of that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, they have been forwarded to Mr. Charleson to be certified, and they have not been paid.

Mr. FOSTER. Were the accounts for the supplies he got before he left here all sent away up to the Yukon? Have you not a supply officer to make these purchases?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Mr. Charleson bought his supplies himself.

Mr. BERGERON. Who was the wire bought from?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Mr. W. G. Charleson.

Mr. BERGERON. Who were the provisions bought from?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. From Bate & Sons.

Mr. FOSTER. When you have a supply officer in your department why did you not let him buy these supplies if you were not going to buy them by tender instead of letting Mr. Charleson buy these supplies, passing over the supply officer, the clerks, the Deputy Minister and the Minister, sending the accounts all the way to Bennett and Selkirk, and waiting until they come back again? You seem to go out of the way, over half of the globe, to put everything in Charleson's hands, when you ought to keep as much as possible out of Charleson's hands. Would it not be a more business-like way to have the accounts made out and certified to by Mr. Charleson, sent to the department, and then have the cheque to the department issued in payment of them?

Mr. FIELDING.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I do not think the hon. gentleman's suggestion is practicable at this time. That is the ordinary way of doing business where there is no difficulty about banking facilities. I am speaking of the purchase of supplies up there.

Mr. FOSTER. Where is he getting his supplies there now?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. From the Mounted Police at present.

Mr. FOSTER. And paying for them?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, we will have to arrange with the Mounted Police.

Mr. FOSTER. What is he getting that he is paying for?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I read a series of articles showing the nature of the expenditure. One item was the board of the men.

Mr. FOSTER. When you take up each item of supplies you will likely find that they are such as the large trading companies would furnish. These companies are quite well satisfied to sell to the Government, send in their bills and get their cheques from the Government in the course of thirty or sixty days. Would it not be far better to have it arranged in that way, so that bills could be certified to and the department's cheques issued? It seemed to be necessary that every single thing should be transmuted into dollar bills, and that they should be passed through Charleson's hands. He lets his department go five months and sends not one single report in reference to what he is doing.

Mr. CLARKE. Were tenders asked for the wire for this telegraph line?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Invitations were sent to three parties, and Charleson's being the lowest tender, it was accepted.

Mr. CLARKE. Who were the other parties?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Lewis Bros., of Montreal, and Wurtele, of Ottawa.

Mr. FOSTER. If the lowest tenderer got it why are you sending the accounts up to Charleson to be certified?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The goods were delivered out there, and Mr. Charleson had to certify to their receipt. They were delivered at Vancouver and they charged freight. The accounts have not been paid and will not be paid until Mr. Charleson certifies.

Mr. BERGERON. What were the prices of the other tenderers?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not remember the figures, they were given in a previous debate.

Mr. FOSTER. When Mr. Charleson is taking the place of the supply officer, the deputy, the secretary and the accountant of the department, and it is in his hands to purchase this wire, if he determined to buy it from his son he would buy it from his son if he asked for five thousand tenders.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No matter what price you pay.

Mr. FOSTER. No matter what price you pay. His son will very easily know what price to charge.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think that is very unfair.

Mr. FOSTER. The department put itself in that position when it went out of its way, when it put the purchasing of supplies into the hands of Charleson instead of in the hands of the purchasing officer.

The PRIME MINISTER. I understand from the deputy that the inference of the hon. gentleman is all wrong. The department itself sent circulars for tenders to the three firms mentioned—Mr. Charleson, Mr. Wurtele and Mr. Lewis—the department got the tenders, and the tenders were opened by the department.

Mr. TAYLOR. Why were these circulars sent to retail stores? Why was one not sent to the Dominion Wire Company?

The PRIME MINISTER. That is not the question at present. I understood the hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr. Foster) to state that Mr. Charleson got a tender from his own son, the inference being that Mr. Charleson and his son had been conniving, while the truth is, that the circulars were sent, not by Mr. Charleson, but by the department, and the three tenders were opened by the department.

Mr. FOSTER. That is not the information we got, when discussing this matter before. I asked if these materials were bought by the supply officer, and the information I got in the House was, that Mr. Charleson had bought them.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is a mistake. What I said was, that there was no supply officer for the provisions, and that Mr. Charleson had made the arrangement for them; but for the wire, I stated that the department had invited tenders from the three parties mentioned, and gave the contract to the lowest.

Mr. FOSTER. We might have the tenders.

The PRIME MINISTER. We will have them on concurrence.

Mr. CLARKE. The names of three firms in Toronto present themselves to my mind, at the moment, who are in the business of supplying wire for such a purpose: Rice Lewis & Son, who have a reputation as wide as the Dominion; M. & J. Vokes, another large firm, and Aikenhead & Co.—the three largest firms doing business in wire supplies in Toronto. Would it have been unreasonable for a Government that was going to invest a large sum of money in wire for these telegraph lines, to have sent a circular to these three firms by mail, and ask them to tender by telegraph the next morning? Is there any good reason why the firms in Toronto and Montreal who are in this business legitimately, were not given an opportunity to tender?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman's view may be quite correct as to what ought to be, but the fact is, that the tenders were invited from the parties named. I think myself that in a case of that kind it is desirable to have public tenders and a sufficiently broad competition to insure a fair price.

Mr. CLARKE. Two of these firms were retail firms, and it was not fair that other firms should not have had an opportunity to tender. It was not fair to the Government itself.

Mr. FOSTER. I want to know whether the Government are going to take any efficient steps to see that track is kept of that expenditure? It has transpired that Mr. Charleson, under the most positive orders to report regularly and fully, has been away from this city for five months, and that there is not a report that can be laid before this House yet received from him. There are two telegrams and some scraps, I believe, but there is no weekly statement of his disbursements; neither has a single payroll been received by the department. Are the Government going on with an expenditure of about $500,000 in Mr. Charleson's hands in that way, or will they take some efficient steps? What ought to be done. I think, is to send an officer of the Auditor General, or some one appointed under his authority, to examine the accounts.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a vote in the Estimates to enable the Auditor General to send an officer out to inquire into all the Yukon accounts, and that officer, I believe, is now on his way out. The hon. gentleman is not correct in saying that there have been no reports from Mr. Charleson. There have been reports, but not recently. I agree with the hon. gentleman, however, that reports should be sent regularly. Mr. Charleson has wired that reports are on the way. If these reports are not satisfactory, it may be necessary to send some one out.

Mr. FOSTER. I think a policeman should be sent out.

The PRIME MINISTER. The hon. gentleman says these accounts ought to be audited by the Auditor General. I quite agree with that, and we have taken steps to have the Auditor General send out an officer to audit all the Yukon accounts. If those of Mr. Charleson are not included, they ought to be.

Mr. BERGERON. Why would Mr. Charleson mind the officer from the Auditor General's Department any more than he minded the instructions of the Department of Public Works? He does not care a snap for the department or for anybody.

The PRIME MINISTER. I have known Mr. Charleson for twenty years, and if he turns out anything but an honest man, I shall be very much surprised. If he has not sent his reports, there is something to be accounted for; but I think we should wait before condemning him. At present I refuse to accept any insinuation against him.

Mr. FOSTER. But he has condemned himself, because he has not taken any steps to carry out the instructions of the department and to send these reports.

The PRIME MINISTER. The hon. gentleman is in error. No doubt, we have not the reports from Mr. Charleson that we ought to have. That may be voluntary or accidental, criminal or innocent, regular or irregular; but at the present time I refuse to believe there is anything wrong. I think it is premature to condemn Mr. Charleson.

Quesnelle to Atlin, B.C., via Stikine River and Teslin Lake, about 900 miles of telegraph lines..... $225,000

Mr. FOSTER. Who is doing this?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This has not been done at all yet. Mr. Charleson and the men with him are building the line from Selkirk to Dawson and a branch line to the foot of Atlin lake. This proposal is to extend the line from the foot of Atlin Lake to Quesnelle, where it will be connected with the existing line reaching to Ashcroft, on the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Nothing has been done, however, beyond the foot of Atlin Lake up to the present, but the desire is to push that work this fall.

Mr. FOSTER. What is to be gained?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It gives us connection with the existing telegraph lines in British Columbia, and affords us direct communication with Dawson City.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the estimate for this 900 miles?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is $250 a mile.

Mr. FIELDING.

Mr. BERGERON. What does the department rely upon on making that estimate?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The estimate is made by the superintendent of telegraphs in the department at Ottawa.

Mr. BERGERON. What does he know about that part of the country?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I understand that Mr. Hosmer, of the Canadian Pacific telegraph, who has knowledge of constructing telegraph lines out there, has confirmed that estimate.

Mr. HAGGART. Has the hon. Minister that in writing?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, I am informed that there is a letter from Mr. Hosmer giving that as his opinion.

Mr. BERGERON. Can that be brought down?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. On this whole item, I wish to call attention to the unconstitutional course pursued by the Government to take advantage of Parliament. Parliament never authorized the Government to go into the business of constructing a telegraph system to the Yukon. The Government never had the courtesy to ask Parliament whether it would favour that policy.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Is my hon. friend sure of that?

Mr. FOSTER. I think so. And as I am reminded by my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor), Parliament, when it was deliberating did grant a franchise for the construction of these lines by private company. And it was supposed and hoped by Parliament—and believed also, or Parliament would not have granted the franchises—that these companies would undertake and carry out the work. No subsidy was granted to either of the companies incorporated. The members of the Government expressed themselves in written letters in favour of these companies taking up the work and carrying it out. Such letters are on record, dated but a short time before a different course was decided upon. But suddenly, a few days before Parliament met the Government decided to build the line themselves. Money was filched from votes from which it should not have been taken, as the Prime Minister himself had to acknowledge in this House, and Mr. Charleson was hurried off with a part of that filched money in his pocket just before the members of Parliament showed their faces in Ottawa. And so an expense was undertaken for which we are now taking votes of $400,000 or $500,000, and it may run up to much more. There is an example of a Government forcing the hand of Parliament against the express policy of Parliament, so far as it could express it by granting franchises to companies to build these telegraph lines. And we have not yet heard any reasons as to why the Government felt itself necessitated to enter upon a course of that kind. There was no war, there was no urgency which would prevent the Government waiting for two or three days to meet Parliament and lay its plans before Parliament and get the assent of Parliament to enter upon this expenditure. If a Tory Government had undertaken such a thing, Liberals might say that they were surprised, and rightly so; but that a Liberal Government should undertake it seems to be very much a matter of course.

The PRIME MINISTER. We have discussed this question once before. I do not care to renew the discussion, but it may be worth while to refresh the memory of my hon. friend (Mr. Foster). He says Parliament was not consulted. I say Parliament was consulted, that he had an opportunity to speak and did not speak; and if my hon. friend's memory is so defective, I will refresh it. Parliament was convened on the 16th March, and on that day the Speech from the Throne contained this sentence:

Much information has been obtained since you last met relative to the extent and value of the deposits of gold and valuable minerals in the Yukon and other parts of Canada. The returns from the Yukon have so far proved sufficient to meet the heavy expenditure it was found necessary to incur for the purpose of preserving law and order, and it has been thought expedient in the public interest to authorize the construction of a line of telegraph for the purpose of maintaining speedy communication with the people of those distant territories.

To this there was an Address moved in answer, which Address contained this paragraph:

We are glad to learn that much information has been obtained since we last met relative to the extent and value of the deposits of the gold and valuable minerals in the Yukon and other parts of Canada, and that the returns from the Yukon have so far proved sufficient to meet the heavy expenditure it was found necessary to incur for the purpose of preserving law and order, and also that it has been thought expedient in the public interest to authorize the construction of a line of telegraph for the purpose of maintaining speedy communication with the people of those distant territories.

That Address was debated for six weeks and an amendment was moved, but one that did not refer to this subject. Except for this amendment, the Address was approved in its entirety. The hon. gentleman had then an opportunity to condemn the policy of the Government which frankly announced to Parliament that it had taken the precaution to build a system of telegraph to the Yukon. But the hon. gentleman never opened his mouth upon it. And why? Because there is not a man who will condemn the building of a line of telegraph to the Yukon, for it is a most necessary improvement. The hon. gentleman said that charters had been granted to companies to build the line. That is true, and we would have been glad to have them build these lines. But these companies allowed months to elapse without doing anything, and the Government determined not to lose another year, but to build a line of telegraph during the season.

Mr. FOSTER. This is one of the most amusing things I have seen yet. The very ground of my complaint was that the Government had notified Parliament after it had done the business. Does my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) think that he has met the constitutional requirements by showing that, after the back of Parliament was turned, he and his colleagues decided to build this line, they took this money to start it and sent out their men, and then called Parliament together, and notified Parliament what their high lordships had done? He says we could have challenged it then. Yes; and we can challenge it now. And it would have been as fruitless to challenge it then as it is now, because the Government had actually commenced the work, without a single line of approval from Parliament, without their having courtesy to consult Parliament as it is their duty to do in a matter of such vast concern. Why, on the very same principle, my hon. friend some time this autumn could authorize the building of a Government road from Ottawa to the Pacific, send out surveyors, take this money from votes not appropriated for that purpose, start the whole arrangement, send out his paymaster, and tell him to draw on the Government for whatever was necessary. Then when Parliament met the right hon. gentleman could notify Parliament and would consider that he was fulfilling the constitutional requirement of getting the authority of Parliament before undertaking the work. That is exactly what he has done. He has forced the hand of Parliament, relying upon his subservient majority to see him through no matter what he does. That majority may be subservient in this Parliament, but there is a majority behind it which I do not think will be quite so subservient in the country. My hon. friend says that the private company did not do as it should have done. That is not the reason. He was forced by the master of the administration, who laid this whole plan to do this. The Minister of Railways and Canals was informing certain gentleman that the Government in general, and he in particular, were anxious that it should be built by a company, and that his company was the chosen one, and that he was going to be watch dog for it and see that no rivals would get ahead of it; but after the Minister of Public Works had prepared his plan and had chosen his men, and had started it into operation without even going to Council. That company did everything which a company could do, and was more expeditious than most of the companies with which my hon. friend has had to do.

I remember that the Petersen firm were given a broker's contract to get a fast line of steamers. They did not do it, and yet they were continued, and the right hon. gentleman himself and the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce, and the travelling Minister of the Cabinet, all declared for years in this House that it was all right, that Petersen should be given one more chance, and still one more, and more time was given him. But when this company was performing its part of the work and pushing its operations with the help of the Government itself, through the Minister of Railways and Canals, all at once the Master of the Administration brought down his scheme which he had prepared beforehand, having chosen his men and got them booted and spurred for the journey, and said: This is my plan, that other arrangement you have entered into must be set aside, and I am going to have this carried out by Charleson. Some conscientious member of the Government might have said, Parliament has not sanctioned it, but he replied: Parliament does not count, we will do it and then notify Parliament.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The main point of the criticism of the hon. gentleman is that Parliament was not consulted. It is an awful thing, he said, to commit the Dominion to an expenditure without the authority of Parliament, but it was only a few days ago that his attention was drawn by the right hon. Prime Minister to a case in which the hon. gentleman committed the Government to an expenditure behind the back of Parliament. In the year 1896, the hon. gentleman had barely left Parliament, when he entered into a bargain with an American company to do certain work in the harbour of Port Dover. That was a bargain made, without any authority of Parliament, without even going through the formality of an Order in Council. He gave the assurance to a brother Minister, who gave it to the American company, that he would authorize an expenditure of $25,000, chargeable to the Government of Canada. There are cases where urgency may be pleaded, and I presume he thought that was one of them. In this case there was also urgency, the construction of this telegraph line was urgent, and the preliminary expenses were paid out of another appropriation. Without any authority the hon. gentleman opposite made this bargain with an American steamship company that he would spend $25,000 in the harbour of Port Dover. I presume it was a justifiable expenditure, and we have evidently thought so, since we have undertaken to implement the bargain made, but when the hon. gentleman remembers that, he ought to be a little more considerate.

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend is quick in getting out at what he thinks is a parallel but he is very unfortunate if he thinks that what he has quoted is a parallel. What did I do? When the hon. gentleman brought down millions of dollars of Estimates, did he go behind the back of Parliament? Does he go behind the back of Parliament, when he brings his Estimates down? It was to bring an estimate down.

Mr. FOSTER.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. But the hon. gentleman did not.

Mr. FOSTER. But the hon. gentleman would if he had remained in power. The arrangement was simply this, that the company were going to a large expense in a productive trade between a port on the United States side of the lake and a port on this side. For their business they were fitting up the harbour on this side. They were putting a large expenditure in the harbour, and they approached the Government with this proposition: If we expend so much money in that harbour, will you give a subvention of so much. After consulting the Council, we came to the conclusion to recommend it as an estimate to the House, and that was all we did. There was not any money filched from other votes, and a man was not sent down to Port Dover to spend the money. There was no expenditure of money beforehand, and the two cases are not parallel at all.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The hon. gentleman would preserve the respect which the committee would like to have for him as ex-Minister of Finance, if he would simply admit the facts instead of making the lamest possible explanation. He says that he agreed to submit an estimate to Parliament. That is all this Government has done. If Parliament did not pass the estimate, we would be able to go on and construct a telegraph line. The hon. gentleman says we have got a majority. The hon. gentleman expected to have a majority, and that is the reason why he made the promise. The point is this: The hon. gentleman entered into a contract which committed the Government of Canada to the expenditure of $25,000. He did that without parliamentary authority. The transaction is so simple that any attempt to explain it simply exposes the fact more clearly that the hon. gentleman did it. I do not blame him in the slightest. Cases of urgency will arise, and if the circumstances were such that the Government, after consideration, decided that this company was going to do the work, and that a refusal to promise might affect substantially the question of whether the work would be done, and the Government was prepared to take the responsibility of doing it. I do not say that that would in itself be a reason for the Government not doing it. But I say the hon. gentleman is unfair when he ignores the question of urgency. Nobody suggests that, under ordinary circumstances, and without any extraordinary reason of urgency, it is proper for this Government to incur a large expenditure of public money. No member of this Government undertakes to assert any such proposition. But every member of this Government undertakes to say that the construction of a telegraph line this season to Dawson City was a matter of urgency, and that to that end it was necessary that a party should be sent out as early in the season as possible, and in order that that might be done, it was necessary that an expenditure should be incurred before we were in a position to get an estimate from Parliament.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the hon. gentleman will allow the question of the respect that will be given to me in Parliament to rest upon my own action and the good sense of Parliament. But we have heard the hon. gentleman before. We heard him two years ago about that matter of urgency, when, in the face of the members of Parliament, on their way to Ottawa, he shut the doors on every public offer and closeted himself with chosen contractors with whom he had very intimate operations before; he chose to shut the doors against every reputable financial man in the world, and behind closed doors, with the tramp of the feet of members of Parliament coming to Ottawa sounding in his ears, he chose to make a contract which proposed to give away millions of the best gold land this country possessed, and to commit this Parliament to a large expenditure. The hon. gentleman says that I made a contract, that I went behind the back of Parliament, and that his case in this respect is no worse. I want to show what the difference is. With reference to the appropriation for Dover harbour, there was no contract, no understanding with the other party, but only that we would recommend to Parliament an estimate for it. They took all the risks in the case if the estimate was not presented, or if it was not granted by Parliament. They spent their own money, and the Government did not spend a single dollar of money. In this case it is quite different. These hon. gentlemen, without any urgency worth the name, brought this country into an expenditure of five or six hundred thousand dollars, and commenced the expenditure beforehand, and did it within two or three days of the meeting of Parliament. Would the country have gone to ruin if they had waited for three weeks longer and got the authorization of Parliament? They would have had their telegraph line through. They started two days before Parliament met, and they are going to have the line through in October.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I made the remark when I rose to reply to what I took to be an argument of the hon. gentleman, that we would have had higher respect for him if he had confined himself to the argument. I think I may now say that when a gentleman in this committee is met with an argument and he turns to make a contemptible insinuation against a member of this committee in the nature of a personal attack, he does not strengthen his position in this House. He turned to make contemptible insinuations in connection with my action in the proposed Yukon Railway contract, by saying that I closeted myself with a contractor.

Mr. FOSTER. So you did.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. If the hon. gentleman means anything by that, let him get up and say it, let him have the courage, let him have the manliness, to say so openly. I say that I closeted myself with my colleagues who were instructed by Council to hold consultation in regard to making the contract, it was made by the members of the Government and was submitted to this Parliament, and was submitted by this Government for reasons which they conceived to be sufficient and proper. I am bound to say that my hon. friends on the other side of the House did not distinguish themselves in answering the arguments which were presented to this House. And I have this to say that we have the spectacle of the leader of the Opposition the other day proposing to this Parliament that, instead of this railway which we speak of being constructed without the cost of a dollar to the people of Canada, as it would have been had we been able to carry our Bill through the Upper House, he submitted the proposition that that railway should now be constructed out of the public exchequer at a cost of millions of dollars. The hon. gentleman is not happy in being compelled, in a discussion about a very simple matter, to resort to a personal attack in the effort to try and draw a herring over the scent, and to repeat an objection to a policy which has been abandoned by the hon. leader of the Opposition himself. I only rose to make these few remarks because the hon. gentleman was drawing a red herring over the scent by introducing a matter that has nothing to do with the discussion of this telegraph line. The hon. gentleman took what seemed to be a most unfair course, a course that was altogether unjustifiable, in returning to matter which has been fully discussed, and which does not require to be discussed again, although we are prepared to discuss it at any time that it may be necessary.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sifton), with his usual unfairness, has stated that we have been driven to back up his position, and that the hon. leader of the Opposition accepted it, and bound his party to it, only a few days ago. The hon. leader of the Opposition, standing in his place in this House, and making the statement that he did, no more confirmed that proposition, that immoral proposition, from a patriotic sense, which was brought forward by the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat, than I am affirming it now. It only shows the unfairness of the hon. gentleman and the keenness with which he appreciates the position in which he and his party are placed before the country, when he is driven into the necessity of attempting to torture the statement made by the hon. leader of the Opposition into an acceptance of the outrageous proposition that the hon. gentleman, after having closeted himself with the contractors, brought down and tried to force through this House.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. It was passed through this House.

Public Buildings—

Yukon district ..... $152,500

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I beg to move that this item be reduced to $134,700.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. BERGERON. Is this work going to be done under the direction of Mr. Charleson?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, Mr. Charleson has nothing to do with it.

Mr. FOSTER. What is to be built with this money?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is proposed building at Dawson City a post office, costing $13,500; Gold Commissioner's office, $10,000; commissioner's house, $10,000; Crown timber land office, registry office, with rooms above, $10,000; commissioner's and controller's office and council chamber, $10,000; house for commissioner, controller, timber and land agent, legal adviser, and register, $7,000; house for officials, $6,000. Stewart River: house and offices for Crown timber and land agent and mining records, $6,000. Dominion Creek: house and office, $2,500. Teslin Lake: house and office, $2,500. Fittings generally, $15,000; fuel and light, $6,000; buildings, $15,000; fuel, $12,000; rent, $3,700, furnishings, $4,000, making $134,700.

Mr. FOSTER. Are these to be built by tender and contract?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not know whether we can build them by tender and contract out there. I am told that Mr. Ogilvie had some buildings constructed by tender and contract. If it is possible at all, I think they should be done in that way, but I cannot say. Conditions are peculiar out there.

Mr. BERGERON. What amount of royalty have we received for the last year?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have just passed the turning point of the year, where we pass from one year into the other.

Mr. FOSTER.

We have received on this season's operations between $400,000 and $500,000 up to the 30th of June, but considerable sums were probably paid in immediately after that. I cannot possibly give a full statement at present.

Mr. FOSTER. It is stated that the clean-up this year will be $20,000,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think it will be as much as that. I think the statements in the newspapers are somewhat exaggerated.

Mr. BERGERON. How much have we received since the country was opened up?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I cannot remember at the present moment.

Mr. BERGERON. How is it received?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is deposited in the Bank of Commerce at Dawson City, and accounted for to the Finance Department, like any other bank in any other part of Canada.

Mr. WALLACE. How can the Government erect these buildings by a private arrangement or by day's labour? It appears to me that, of all places in the world, this is the place where this work should be done by public contract. There are more reasons for doing it in that way in the Yukon than in the city of Ottawa, because here the Government have a staff in the Public Works Department, and they have inspectors and workmen, besides which, materials can be purchased at well-established prices. The proper way for the Government to have this work done in the Yukon is to ask for tenders. There are tens of thousands of people in the country, there are men who have all kinds of qualifications—carpenters, builders, painters and contractors—some of whom have been building houses in Dawson City, and who are in a position to know what a building would cost. The Government is in no position to undertake this work. In fact, they have undertaken more than they have successfully carried through. Their officials, we are told, are overworked. They have proved, in the special work they have undertaken to do, that they are utterly incapable, and their direction from here has been of the same incapable character. Therefore, there is every reason why the Government should not undertake another task and add to their long list of blunders in this direction. It is the duty of the Government, in regard to every building for which they are asking for an appropriation from Parliament, to give us the assurance that they will ask for public tenders and have the work performed by open competition.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have not sufficient knowledge to say whether that can be done or not; but I think it ought to be done, if that is the practice in Dawson, and there are contractors there who have been in the habit of doing work of this kind.

Mr. WALLACE. The Minister knows that the city has been built up by mechanics and contractors of every description who have the material and the skill necessary for this work; and, therefore, there would be no justification for the Government undertaking to do it by day's work, and leaving the door open to all kinds of crooked work.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the committee will accept the assurance that these works ought to be done by tender and contract, and that they will be so done if it is found feasible.

Trail from Edmonton towards Yukon district (revote)..... $14,700

Mr. FOSTER. Are you going on with that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes. The North-west Government is doing the work. This money has been actually expended by the North-west Government, but they did not make the application in time to prevent the vote lapsing.

Mr. SPROULE. How many miles were built last year?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Work was done on the trail between Edmonton and Athabasca Landing. It crosses the Smoky River, and goes to a place called Peace River Crossing, where there has to be a ferry. The work done was scattered over 300 or 400 miles.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood that about 200 miles were built before that, and that this expenditure was to extend that road further?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The hon. gentleman may be right as to the part between Edmonton and Athabasca Landing. I think that had been completed before this vote was taken.

Customs ..... $23,000

Mr. WALLACE. I am sorry the Minister of Customs is not in his place to-night, because I had intended challenging this vote and the accuracy of the statements the Department of Customs has made. I shall take occasion to do so on concurrence.

Mr. FOSTER. I have a matter that I want to discuss in customs also; and we might pass this item with the understanding that on concurrence we can discuss one or two matters as though we were in committee.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Very good.

Amount to pay Mr. J. B. Brousseau for services and expenses as commissioner to investigate alleged irregularities in connection with the election of chiefs for the Abenakis Indians of St. Francis, Que..... $1,052 81

Mr. BERGERON. What is that paid for?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Mr. Brousseau was appointed commissioner to inquire into complaints with regard to alleged irregularities in connection with the election mentioned. I received petitions, and found it utterly impossible to come to any conclusion with regard to the merits, and I appointed Mr. Brousseau commissioner to investigate, and he took the evidence and made a report. It is a very voluminous report, more exhaustive than I expected, but it had the effect of satisfying everybody, and we have had no more trouble about the election.

Mr. FOSTER. Who is Brousseau?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. He is a lawyer at Sorel. The investigation lasted longer than I thought it would, but it satisfied the people, and there has been no further complaint.

Additional amount for boarding-school... $4,860

Mr. FOSTER. Is this distributed over different boarding schools?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. It includes a building for the Pine Creek boarding school, $2,500, and an allowance for five additional pupils at $72 each. The building was insufficient, and the church authorities agreed to put up a new building that would cost $6,000 if the Government would contribute $2,500.

Additional amount for industrial schools.. $1,000

Mr. SPROULE. Is this spread over several industrial schools?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. It is for one school, and is for the purpose of putting hot water apparatus into the building. It is under the charge of the church, and they will probably do the work themselves under the supervision of the inspectors of the department.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the size of the school?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. It has 225 pupils.

Travel and expenses of commissioners and staff negotiating new treaty, from which payments can be made to the Hon. D. Laird and J. A. J. McKenna, Indian Treaty Commissioners, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act..... $16,500

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The time of the commissioners is calculated from the 3rd of May to the 30th September. Hon. David Laird has $6 per day, $906; Mr. McKenna at $6 per day, $906; Father Lacombe at $10 per day, $1,516; the secretary at $6 per day, $906; C. H. Wood, physician, at $6 per day, $906; clerks, $500 and $675, and $1,500 allowed for an interpreter and two servants. Travelling expenses from Edmonton and return, $2,000.

To purchase provisions for half-breeds and Indians during treaty negotiations. $10,480

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. This is for the purpose of feeding the Indians when making the treaty. When they are gathered together for the purpose of meeting the commissioners, they must be fed. These provisions were purchased after tenders were advertised for, and the Hudson Bay Company was the lowest tenderers.

To pay veterinary surgeons of the North-west Mounted Police for services rendered by them to the Department of Indian Affairs, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act ..... $100 00

Mr. SPROULE. Is not the veterinary-surgeon employed by the year and paid by the year?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The veterinary surgeons of the Mounted Police force sometimes render services to the Department of Indian Affairs for which they claim payment. It has been customary to pay them, and for this purpose, to take a small vote. I confess, I have not looked into this particular vote before.

Mr. SPROULE. They are employed by the department?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Not the same department. The Mounted Police is a branch under the President of the Council.

Mr. SPROULE. Still, they are in the employ of the country and paid by the year.

Mr. DAVIS. These veterinary surgeons are members of the North-west Mounted Police, and paid so much for their services as such. Occasionally some cattle on the Indian reserves get sick and the veterinary surgeons are asked to go. It is no part of their duty and they are allowed a small fee for their services.

Mr. SPROULE. But it may be that a man is paid $1,000 a year, and has no more to do than a man could easily do in two weeks. Because he does extra work, surely he should not be paid extra.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. These veterinary surgeons do constable service as well as veterinary work.

To meet cost of probable elections under the Canada Temperance Act..... $1,000

Mr. SPROULE. Where is this probable election?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In the county of Westmorland, they may probably have one. I understand an attempt will be made to repeal the Act.

Mr. SIFTON.

Printing Dr. Rand's English-Micmac dictionary ..... $750

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This dictionary was prepared some time ago at the instance of the Government and was partly printed. It is in possession of the library, and the object is to complete the printing.

To take to the Privy Council the case of Wentworth vs. Mathieu, in order to test the powers vested in the courts by the Dunkin Act ..... $8,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is the explanation of this?

The PRIME MINISTER. The Dunkin Act has been in force in the county of Richmond for many years. Mr. Wentworth, who represents the Dominion Alliance in the county, has taken several prosecutions against one Mathieu, who was alleged to be an inveterate and persistent liquor-dealer. Prosecution was taken and Mathieu was condemned to pay a fine. He continued to sell and another prosecution was taken. At last there were twenty-six prosecutions taken against him, and he took out twenty-six writs of certiorari, and the Superior Court of the District of St. Francis maintained the certiorari and quashed the prosecutions on legal grounds. If this is maintained it will render the Dunkin Act absolutely nugatory. The Dominion Alliance applied to us and we thought it better to take the case to the Privy Council.

Mr. FOSTER. Where else is the Dunkin Act in force?

The PRIME MINISTER. Nowhere else than the county of Richmond, I believe.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it not an obsolete Act? I mean if it were repealed in any county it would not be taken up again, but the Scott Act would be taken up.

The PRIME MINISTER. I think so.

Mr. FOSTER. It seems a large amount of money to use for a purpose that does not seem to have any after effect.

The PRIME MINISTER. It has this effect, that the people of the country believe in the Dunkin Act. They have had it for many years. There have been three or four attempts to have it repealed, but the people would not vote for repeal. As this decision, if maintained, will render the Act absolutely nugatory, we thought it better to have a judicial authority and determined to carry it to the Privy Council.

Mr. SPROULE. Has it ever been tried in the lower courts and the Supreme Courts?

The PRIME MINISTER. Under the law of the province, it would not have been carried to the Privy Council either from the Supreme Court or from the court of appeal. It has to be taken to the Privy Council as a matter of grace.

Mr. BERGERON. Do I understand the hon. gentleman to say it is before the Privy Council now ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes.

Mr. BERGERON. Who are the lawyers acting for the Government and for the Alliance respectively ?

The PRIME MINISTER. There are no lawyers acting for the Government, but we have determined to pay for the counsel on both sides. Mr. Smith, who acts for the Alliance, and Messrs. Panneton and Belanger, who are acting for Mr. Mathieu.

Mr. BERGERON. I was told that the Quebec Government had engaged Messrs. Belanger and Panneton.

The PRIME MINISTER. No, this Government.

Mr. BERGERON. And the Quebec Government has nothing to do with it ?

The PRIME MINISTER. No.

Amount required to pay Mr. Charles Bremner, of Bresaylor, for value of furs entrusted by him to Dominion Government authorities at Battleford on the 26th May, 1885, and never returned to him ..... $5,364 50

Mr. FOSTER. Why is this being paid ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I suppose the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) does not want an explanation of the circumstances, because the matter was investigated by a committee of the House, and it was discussed at great length in the House.

Mr. SPROULE. What was the finding of the committee ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I do not remember. The hon. gentleman, I believe, was here when the report was presented. The late Minister of the Interior, either Mr. Daly or Mr. Dewdney, made a report in favour of paying $3,500. There does not appear to be any reason why the full amount should not be paid.

Mr. BERGERON. Who is going to reimburse the Government for that money ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The officers of the Government of Canada received this property, and they should have rendered it up. When property is taken forcibly from the hands of a subject, the Government of Canada ought surely to hold itself responsible for the value of the property that is placed in their hands.

Mr. BERGERON. I think there was a report on that matter. Where is that report ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I believe a report was made in 1889 or 1890. I do not exactly remember the tenor of the report, but I have a strong impression that it was to the effect that this man had been illegally deprived of his furs, and that the furs had been taken by officers of this Government.

Mr. TYRWHITT. I have some recollection of the causes which led the late Government to resist the payment of this claim. The chief reason was that this man having participated in the rebellion, having taken an open part against the country, he was not entitled to any compensation. However, as the members of the present Government sympathized with the late rebellion, I am not astonished at their paying this claim.

To make good to persons in Prince Edward Island amount of duties paid to the United States customs on fish and fish oil, being amount paid by Messrs. Hall and Myrick..... $15,029

Mr. FOSTER. This is a matter which will cause a good deal of discussion ; and there is another matter here which will cause a good deal of discussion, that is the matter of the Ryan claim for $210,000. We have some papers that were ordered and brought down, with the exception of the evidence. Those papers are not at all, in our opinion, favourable to the payment of that claim. My suggestion to the right hon. leader of the Government is this : That that be left over until another session, and until we have an opportunity of looking at the evidence. It is a monstrous claim, $211,000, arising out of a case in which final estimates were certified to by the engineer, in which the first Order in Council takes it away from the place to which it ought to go, namely, to the Exchequer Court, and sends it over to the arbitrator ; where afterwards there is a second Order in Council which varies the conditions in order to make it more favourable for the claimant before the arbitrator. Then, the sum, which is not certified to by the engineer, which is outside entirely of the final progress estimates certified to, mounts up to a sum of $210,000. I submit that there is not evidence enough before the committee to justify us in voting that. It has been kept so long it will not harm to keep for another year. I should like to see that and the Maria wharf business go over for another session.

The PRIME MINISTER. I will take the hon. gentleman's suggestion into consideration.

The committee rose and reported progress.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 2.50 a.m. (Thursday).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, 10th August, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

PRAYERS.

INSPECTION OF CATTLE AT MONTREAL.

Mr. FEATHERSTON (by Mr. Davis) asked :

Has the Government received any communication, by letter, telegraph or otherwise from Gilchrist & Munroe, cattle shippers and shippers' agents at Montreal, or any person else, complaining of the present system of inspecting cattle at that port ?

If so, what reply has been sent, or is the Government going to make any change in the regulations which will be more satisfactory to those who are interested in the welfare of the cattle trade of Canada ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). The Government has received a communication from Gilchrist & Munroe complaining of the system of inspecting cattle before they are put on the ships at the port of Montreal. The Government has replied to that by requesting a report upon the condition of affairs from the chief inspector of quarantine at Montreal. That report has recommended the adoption, somewhat modifiedly, of the recommendations of Gilchrist & Munroe, and the orders of the department have been issued in accordance therewith.

PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS COMMITTEE.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called I should like to say to the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), as I do not see the Chairman of the Privileges and Elections here, that I think there ought to be some motion in reference to the report that the committee gave in two directions. Has my right hon. friend thought of that subject at all ? I think the members would like to have copies of it for their use and something ought to be done to keep the committee alive until the next session of Parliament.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I think, Mr. Speaker, that the only motion we could make is that the report be printed. That would be quite proper. As to making any motion to keep the committee alive I do not think that is feasible. That will be a matter for the next session. I beg to move :

That the evidence given by the witnesses who were examined before the Select Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections be printed for the use of members of the House.

Motion agreed to.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

INQUIRY FOR RETURN.

Mr. DAVIN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to mention to the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), that the return to the order of the House for all copies of Orders in Council respecting contracts made without tender has not been brought down.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I brought down those for my department. I will take a note of the matter.

Mr. DAVIN. The order was passed early in the session for copies of all Orders in Council respecting contracts made without tenders having been called for.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

Mr. FOSTER. There is another committee which reported to the House, the Committee on Public Accounts, and I would like to have the same motion made in reference to it—that the report of the evidence be printed for the use of members.

The PRIME MINISTER. The report has been printed in the Votes and Proceedings.

Mr. FOSTER. Merely for the journals of the House.

The PRIME MINISTER. I have no objection that the report be printed for the use of members. I therefore beg to move :

That the report of the Committee on Public Accounts, together with the minutes of evidence, be printed for the journals and proceedings of the House.

Motion agreed to.

STENOGRAPHERS' FEES AT PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS COMMITTEE.

Mr. SPROULE. There is another motion that was left over in connection with the fees of the shorthand reporters of the Privileges and Elections Committee. The right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), desired a little delay that he might look into the matter. Has he done so in the meantime, because the question which was raised seemed to me to be one of some importance ? It would really mean the employment of three men, whereas we never employed more than two and I think that only one was paid, and that he arranged for the other.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The motion that was made is quite proper, and the exception that was taken was not justifiable. The motion was simply to have the usual fee paid, nothing else.

Mr. FOSTER. You had better dispose of it.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I beg to move :

That the second report of the Select Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections be adopted.

Mr. SPROULE. I think the adoption of the second report would mean the paying of three stenographers.

The PRIME MINISTER. No, the report said distinctly that it was simply to pay the usual fees.

Motion agreed to.

LIGHTKEEPER AT WOOD ISLANDS.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies) a question in regard to the dismissal of William D. McMillan, lightkeeper at Wood Islands, and also in regard to the appointment of his successor. The hon. Minister told us that an investigation was to be held, or was being held, in regard to the dismissal of William D. McMillan, or in regard to the appointment of his successor. I called his attention to the fact that there was evidence that the new appointee to the position was over sixty years of age. I would like to know if the investigation is concluded, or what arrangements have been made in regard to the appointment that he has made. The appointment is clearly an illegal one, and I would be glad to know the position of affairs now. I would remind the hon. gentleman that I asked for this return some time ago, that it was passed on the 16th of June, and I would like to know if the hon. gentleman proposes to bring it down?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). I told the hon. gentleman (Mr. Martin) yesterday that I would speak to my deputy about the return, and if I had not been detained so long in the House I would have spoken to him, but as the hon. gentleman knows I was here until half past three this morning and I could not get over to the department. As soon as I can get down to the department I will see about the matter.

Mr. MARTIN. It was not yesterday, but the day before yesterday that I mentioned the matter to the hon. gentleman.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I got a note from the hon. gentleman across the floor of the House yesterday, and I sent it down to the department. I gave instructions to have the return prepared. I promised the hon. gentleman that I would see about it, as I could not understand the delay. I will see about it to-day whenever I have five minutes to go down to the department, or whenever my deputy comes up here.

Mr. MARTIN. I sent the note across the floor of the House day before yesterday.

Will the hon. gentleman say whether the appointment which has been made of a man who is clearly over age, and which is illegal, is to be continued?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have not seen the report I was told that the agent had reported, but I have not seen the report yet.

SUPPLY—POSTMISTRESS AT SINTULATA.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. DAVIN. I would like, as this is the last opportunity I shall have, to mention the case of the postmistress at Sintulata. I asked the hon. Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock) about her dismissal a few days ago, and he told me that the reason she was dismissed was that it was found that her husband was a hotel-keeper and that it was inconvenient. As I am informed the hon. Postmaster General must be mistaken about that, because she has held the position since 1890. Since the change of Government in 1896 various efforts have been made to have her dismissed on political grounds; but these efforts were unsuccessful, I am informed, because the officers of the department reported, what was really the truth, that she was an excellent postmistress, most attentive, and that nobody had any complaint to make against her. I believe the reason why efforts were made to get rid of her was, not that her husband was a hotel-keeper, but that he was a Conservative, of which there is no doubt. At this time of day, when passions have cooled, it seems more harsh than anything that was done in 1896, when passions were violent, to dismiss a person on political grounds furnished not by that person, but by a relative; and my information is that her husband has not made himself offensive as a politician. This is the history of the case as given to me, and I have some little knowledge of it myself:

The postmistress, Mrs. Elizabeth Rowe, of St. Sintulata, has been very recently dismissed from the position she has occupied for eight years under such circumstances that I think it would properly make a subject for discussion in the House. Mrs. Rowe has held the position since 1890, and I am informed that no complaint of any kind has been made against her. Immediately after the election of June, 1896, a cry was raised for her dismissal, and complaints sprung up, the reason given being that her husband was a Conservative. Recently, however, a new aspirant of the same political kidney as the Rev. Mr. Douglas, the member for Eastern Assiniboia, seems to have been more successful in pressing his claim for recognition than others. The first intimation Mrs. Rowe had of her dismissal was the inclosed order instructing her to hand over the office to Mr. Cairnes, the inspector. The officials of the Post Office Department have frequently expressed their appreciation of the manner in which the post office at Sintulata has been conducted by Mrs. Rowe, and her dismissal, without any fault having been found with her, seems to be cruel and unwarranted, and an explanation is certainly called for.

There was a summary intimation from Mr. McLeod, the inspector at Winnipeg, to Mrs. Rowe that Mr. Cairns would call on a certain day and take over the post office from her. I am sorry that the Postmaster General who seemed to have got a little ahead of the vengeful condition of mind that was universal in 1896, has lent himself to the dismissal of this deserving woman, and on no ground except that her husband is a Conservative. I may say to my hon. friend that the papers of the Queen vs. Skelton have been brought down, and while I do not intend to go into them from the point of view of the administration of justice, I find, on reading them, that the Department of Justice does not allow the least standing ground for the action of my hon. friend in regard to Mr. Mercier, the postmaster at Battleford. If my hon. friend will send for those papers, he will find on reading them that the affidavit that was made by Skelton and others calling on him to dismiss Mr. Mercier was not true, and the position taken by the Department of Justice is that while the allegations are not true, the deponents believed them to be true. So that the dismissal of Mr. Mercier from the postmastership of Battleford was a very gross injustice. I do not know whether at this time the Postmaster General can repair his error and correct the wrong which he committed at that time; but having before his eyes the fact that in so solemn a matter as an affidavit he was deceived, he should do something. I think my hon. friend and the Government might lay to heart the lesson that it is not always wise to act on the advice of supporters in this House who may be impelled by rancorous feeling rather than by wise conceptions of the situation.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I cannot find the answer I gave, but my recollection is that it was to the effect that it was not advisable to have a post office in a hotel and public opinion was against it. It is not right that children and others should have to go into a hotel for their mail, and besides the office was conducted in a very negligent manner. There was not the slightest tinge of politics in connection with the dismissal of this postmistress, but she was dismissed purely from the stand-point of post office efficiency.

Motion agreed to, and the House resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

(In the Committee.)

Department of Justice—Increase of salary,
J. Mullin, second-class clerk..... $ 50 00

Mr. CLANCY. I would like to ask the right hon. First Minister what progress has been made with regard to the claim of Thomas Meagher, who was arrested and his boat siezed and sold by the customs authorities of the United States? Since his release some considerable correspondence has taken place. I understand that he has made a claim through the Justice Department for compensation for the loss of his property, and that he sent in his claim some time ago. Can the hon. gentleman inform the House whether that claim is now being considered by the Department of Justice with the view of seeking compensation through the proper channel. There is not much chance of his getting compensation for his arrest and brutal treatment, but he certainly ought to be compensated for the loss of his property.

Mr. DAVIN.

If the Department of Justice has taken any steps to secure to Meagher payment for the boat that was seized, I shall be glad to learn that fact.

The PRIME MINISTER. I will very gladly give the information I have before me at this moment. I am sorry, however, that my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) did not send in particulars as to the nature of the questions he wanted to have answered, for I am afraid that I cannot give the information to the full extent that he desires. I can only say, speaking generally and broadly upon the case, that it is a fact of public notoriety that this Mr. Meagher was arrested by an officer of the United States Customs Department on the River St. Clair and he was no doubt very badly treated. Meagher complained that the arrest was illegal and that, in fact, he had been arrested in Canadian waters. Whether he had been arrested in Canadian waters is not very clear though the balance of opinion is that he was. But the best defence that could be made by the American officer was that he had arrested Meagher in American waters but that Meagher had attempted to evade arrest, and had steered his boat toward the Canadian shore, and that there had been a continuous arrest and therefore it was legal. The Department of Justice protested that there was a breach of international law, and, in my judgment and, as practically admitted by the United States authorities, it was contended successfully that the arrest had been illegal. And in the month of January last, Sir Julian Pauncefote, Her Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, transmitted to His Excellency the Governor General a letter he had received from the Secretary of State, which is as follows:—

Department of State,
Washington, 21st January, 1899.

Excellency:—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Note of the 5th instant, inclosing a memorandum from the Minister of Justice of Canada, in relation to the case of Thomas Meagher.

After due consideration of this case, I take pleasure in saying that your request will be granted and the said Meagher will be discharged from the arrest made and from the bail given by him for his appearance. This will relieve him from the necessity of any further action on his part, as it leaves him at liberty.

In reference to the other suggestion made in regard to Mr. Avery—

Mr. Avery was the United States customs officer.

—I beg to say that as this Government is advised the facts are not precisely stated in the memorandum of the Canadian Minister of Justice, that this Government is persuaded that even on the facts stated in the memorandum, there was no felonious intent on the part of Mr. Avery, the deputy collector of customs, and if he did the act complained of yet, as this Government understands the facts, he did not commit any intentional violation of British sovereignty, and if such violation was committed, it was done involuntarily and unintentionally in the endeavour of the deputy collector to effect an arrest which in his judgment, he had a right to make and which he believed was undertaken within the territory of the United States.

This Government disavows any act of force, if any was executed, against Meagher in Canadian territory, and regrets the unfortunate occurrence; and in view of the sentiments of friendship existing between the two Governments, it is hoped that these explanations and expressions of regret will be accepted as a satisfactory conclusion of the incident.

I have, &c.,

(Sgd.) JOHN HAY.

H. E.

Sir Julian Pauncefote.

So far as the international feature of the case is concerned, this is as satisfactory as could be. Now as to the feature of the case to which my hon. friend has called my attention—the remedy to which this man who, undoubtedly, has been illegally arrested and who, in my judgment, has been rather severely treated—to put it very mildly—is entitled. The papers that have been placed in my hands do not disclose whether Mr. Meagher has or has not placed any claims in the hands of the Department of Justice. My hon. friend says that he has, and I presume it is so. What action has been taken by the Department of Justice upon this question I am not in a position to say at this moment.

Mr. CLANCY. There is another point than those to which the hon. Prime Minister has referred. There is not only the question of reparation for the ill-treatment and arrest, which probably might be somewhat difficult to deal with, but it will be remembered that the man's boat was seized at the same time and sold, and he has never received any compensation. I understand that the claim particularly made is for payment for his property taken on that occasion. That is what I desire to call the right hon. gentleman's (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) attention more particularly, and I would be glad if it would be possible for him to give some intimation on the subject even yet, before the House closes.

The PRIME MINISTER. I will send a note to the Department of Justice at once.

Department of North-west Mounted Police—
To provide for the appointment of a 2nd class clerk..... $100

Mr. DAVIN. Is this here or in the west?

The PRIME MINISTER. This is to provide for the promotion of a clerk in the accountant's office here. Mr. Galwey is the officer, a very good officer. This is strongly recommended by the Controller.

Mr. BRITTON. I observe that there is nothing in the Estimates for the revision or consolidation of the statutes. I called attention to the need for this work early in the session, and now can do nothing more than express regret that the revision is not provided for. The last revision took place in 1886. The usual course prior to this was to have a revision every ten years—we had one in 1876 and one in 1886, and, in the natural order should have had one in 1896, but so far nothing has been done. This is a matter that calls for the earnest attention of the Government, and I hope that next session provision will be made for another revision of the statutes.

Mr. SPROULE. I have already asked for what district the new judge was to be appointed.

The PRIME MINISTER. Manitoulin Island district.

Mr. SPROULE. That will be the whole district?

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes, so far as I can judge from the papers before me.

Administration of Justice—North-west Territories.
Office for Clerk of the Court and Judges' Chambers, Prince Albert..... $240

Mr. DAVIN. I would like to ask the Minister of the Interior a question in relation to the position of librarian at Regina. The librarian was appointed by Order in Council some years ago. On the change of Government, some intimation was given him that his services might be dispensed with, or that the salary might not be paid, or something like that. His services have never been dispensed with and he is still librarian, and, as I am informed, there has never been an Order in Council passed rescinding the Order by which he was appointed. There should be an arrangement to pay him until the Government appoints a successor. At the present time these duties of the librarian are discharged by Mr. Dixie Watson. He was appointed librarian some years ago by Order in Council. There are a large number of valuable books there which cannot be left without a librarian to guard them, and to be responsible for them. I think the man should be paid for his services up to the present time, as he has been doing the duty; and if the Government does not wish him to continue doing it, then they should appoint another librarian. But the hon. gentleman will see that the Government is liable. The Government never perfected its intention, they just intimated to him that they did not intend to continue this. The consequence is that he has been going on and doing the work in the ordinary way.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. This is a matter of which I cannot speak with knowledge, as I was not aware the hon. gentleman was going to bring it up. According to my recollection, when the subsidy to the North-west Government was increased by $40,000 two years ago, it was arranged between the members of the North-west executive and myself that they should pay the librarian.

Mr. DAVIN. If that arrangement was made, they would have to pay him.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I am satisfied that was the arrangement, they were to pay the librarian and arrange with him.

Mr. DAVIN. But technically this Government is liable?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I am satisfied that Mr. Watson has not made any complaint to me, otherwise I would have looked into it.

Mr. DAVIN. I do not think he has made any complaint. The fact is that Mr. Watson is a generous, kindly, easy-going man, but that is no reason why, if the money is due him, it should not be paid.

Enforcement of the alien labour law... $ 5,000

Mr. CLARKE. Where has this alien labour law been enforced, and to whom has this money been paid? It is news to the working people of Canada to learn that this law is being enforced. The Minister of Justice, in reply to a communication sent to him last fall complaining of the dereliction of duty on the part of the officers appointed in Toronto, and of their failure to enforce the law, said it was not the intention of the Government to enforce the law. There have been flagrant violations of the alien labour law, and I am surprised that any sum is asked for the enforcement of it. Certainly in the city of Toronto the law is not enforced.

The PRIME MINISTER. I have had occasion to state to the House already that pending negotiations between the Canadian and the United States Commissioners it was not our intention severely to apply the alien labour law; but there may be occasions where it is advisable to do so. As I stated to the House some time ago, during the present session, there had been between the American Commissioners and the Canadian Commissioners a tacit understanding that on both sides of the line we would discharge as far as we could the putting in force of that law. We could do nothing more than come to a general understanding, because, until the treaty was concluded and ratified by the Parliament of Canada and the Congress of the United States, we could not interfere with the laws actually on the statute-book. Our intention was simply to discourage its enforcement as far as possible. Now representations have been made to me that there may be cases where it would be advisable to enforce the law. I can see that a case of that nature would be this: If a strike occurred, and if an attempt were made by the employers to import labour from the United States on such an occasion I think it would be advisable that we should exercise the power we already have, on application, to put the law in force. During the strike which took place some time ago on the Grand Trunk Railway, the statement was made on the floor of this House that the Grand Trunk Railway authorities were at that time importing labour from the United States to replace the labourers who were on strike. I immediately communicated with the Grand Trunk Railway authorities to ascertain the facts, and was told that it was not so, that the Grand Trunk Railway authorities had not imported a single man from the United States to take the place of those who were on strike. But other strikes took place, though luckily they were not carried very far, and no great mischief was done—because all strikes are fraught with more or less disturbance. But in the meantime I may say that I entered into correspondence with Senator Fairbanks upon this subject, and advised him that if a strike took place we would feel ourselves justified in enforcing the law, and I have had a reply from Senator Fairbanks acknowledging that it was quite proper. I shall lay the correspondence on the Table of the House.

Mr. CLARKE. I should be the last member of this House to ask the Premier to violate any arrangement or agreement that might have been made, pending a settlement of the matters in dispute between Canada and the United States, and so far as any agreement was made and observed by both parties I have nothing to say. But it is a notorious fact, patent to every person who takes any interest in the affairs of organized labour in this country, that the Alien Labour Law of the United States has been enforced just as if no such arrangement had been arrived at to which the Premier has referred. That being the case, I submit that the Premier and the authorities in this country are relieved from the duty or obligation imposed upon them not to enforce the Act. Resolutions have been passed by the Trades and Labour Councils of the province of Ontario in various places, drawing the attention of the Government to the unsatisfactory way in which this law has been administered, and to the enforcement of the alien labour laws which exist in the United States. I think there ought to be some limit to the time within which this agreement made between the Canadian Commissioners and the American Commissioners should continue. If the alien labour law commissioners in the United States persist in enforcing this law against Canadian workmen, I hope the Prime Minister will see to it that Canadian workmen on this side of the line are protected by the provisions, poor and miserable as they are, of the alien labour law being put into force.

Mr. McMULLEN. I have no objection to the Government protecting Canadian labourers; but let me tell the hon. member from Toronto (Mr. Clarke) that in my opinion he is making a mistake in trying to make popularity for himself in the city of Toronto with the labouring and manufacturing classes by calling attention to the non-enforcement of this Act at the present juncture. I know myself cases where very great inconvenience and persecution have been submitted to by manufacturers, owing to the fact that they had got into a little tangle with some of their men. I do not want to interfere to prevent the labour men securing their just rights, but, at the same time, I think that the law should not be used for the purpose of persecution rather than for the purpose of securing justice for those whose rights are interfered with. If ever the Alien Labour Law is brought into force again, I hope that it will be amended, and that the labour organizations themselves will assume the responsibility of enforcing the Act instead of placing all the responsibility upon the Government in regard to who shall be prosecuted under the Act and who shall not. My own opinion is that the Alien Labour Law as it now stands is entirely objectionable, and ought to be amended.

Mr. CLARKE. Mr. Chairman, I have been identified with labour organizations of this country for thirty years; I have had the honour and privilege of membership in the oldest labour organization in Toronto, the Toronto Typographical Union, for more than thirty years, and whenever I rise in this House to advocate the cause of organized labour, I do not rise for the purpose of obtaining popularity amongst the working people of Toronto. I have lived amongst the working people of Toronto nearly all my life. I think I have enjoyed the confidence of a majority of the working people of Toronto all my life, and that I enjoy their confidence to-day, and it is because the Government, supported by just such hon. gentlemen as the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) has professed to do simple justice to these men, and to others, in other parts of Canada, by the passage of an Alien Labour Law and has then allowed that law to become a dead letter, that I have been compelled, as a matter of duty to those whom I represent, to rise up from time to time and protest against the conduct of the Government. If the hon. member for North Wellington had any real sympathy with the working classes of this country he would rise in his place and insist that this law should be either repealed or enforced. It is a matter of gross injustice to the workmen of Canada, that, while they are debarred from going across the border to seek employment, American workmen, especially in cases of strikes, are permitted to come into Canada and take the places of those who have had differences with their former employers. I am astonished that the hon. member for North Wellington should charge me with having a desire to obtain some cheap popularity, because I have felt it to be my duty, again and again, to bring this matter to the attention of the House. My hon. friend knows it to be a fact, that while what professes to be an alien labour law to protect Canadian workmen, was placed on the statute-book at the present time, that law is a dead letter. The hon. gentleman admits that it is a dead letter. Why should that law not be enforced? If it cannot be enforced it ought to be repealed, and the workmen should not be given to understand that a law has been passed by the Parliament of Canada to give them that reasonable measure of protection that they are entitled to when that law is permitted to fall into desuetude.

Mr. McMULLEN. My hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) knows that the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has stated clearly the reasons why the law in the meantime remains a dead letter. The hon. gentleman, in his previous remarks, sanctions the course that the Government have taken and which has been taken simply because the Government are trying to negotiate a treaty that may possibly do away with the necessity of the law altogether. While the hon. gentleman has been connected with the labour organizations in Toronto for thirty years, and while he has been an active member of the Conservative party, how is it that he never secured an alien labour law from that party and that it remained for the Liberal party, when they came into power, to pass such a law? How is it that he never exercised his influence to relieve the associations in which he has been prominent for so many years and to secure the passage of such a law by the party to which he belongs?

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) suggests that the Government should amend the law and leave it for the labourmen to enforce. He voted against the Bill that I introduced in regard to which the Government got the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan) to supplant him. The right hon. Prime Minister promised to give the workingmen a law word for word as it existed in the United States, and I had such a Bill before the House for several sessions. But the Government put up the hon. member for South Essex to supplant me. He brought in a Bill which the hon. member for North Wellington supported, taking away from any individual, who saw an infraction of the law, the right to enforce it, and placing that duty upon the Government, or upon the Solicitor General, so that the law could not be brought into operation, except by the action of the Government. The hon. gentleman voted against my Bill, and supported one which was placed on the statute-book and which has proved a delusion and a snare, as far as the protection of the workingmen of this country is concerned. To-day he says that the Government ought to change the law and put it upon the lines of the Bill that I introduced year after year.

Mr. McMULLEN. No, I did not say so.

Dominion Police—

To increase pay of force..... $2,250

Mr. FOSTER. Is this a general increase ?

The PRIME MINISTER. There are two police forces in the city of Ottawa, the Dominion and the city police force. The rate of pay of the two forces is not the same. The police force of the city receive larger pay, although they do not do more duty. We are asking a vote of $2,250 to increase the pay of the force, to be distributed as follows: One inspector, who now receives $2.50 a day, to receive $2.65 a day; three sergeants, $1.90 a day, increase to $2.15; fourteen grade A police constables, $1.65, to $1.90; eight first-class constables, $1.65, to $1.80; two second-class constables, $1.50, to $1.65; five third-class constables, $1.25, to $1.30.

Expenses in connection with printing the voters' lists ..... $34,000

Mr. FOSTER. Would the right hon. gentleman give us an idea of what he proposes to do with the voters' lists.

The PRIME MINISTER. We propose, as fast as we can, to have them collected from the different provinces and to keep them printed for delivery to members who may ask for them.

Mr. FOSTER. Under the terms of the law ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Under the terms of the law.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the trouble ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I will take the province of Quebec, with which I am more familiar than with the other provinces, and perhaps the condition of things that prevails there will prevail in other provinces. The lists are prepared, first of all, by the secretary-treasurer of the municipal council, and they are revised by the municipal council in public sittings. The work has always been very smoothly and correctly done, and there although there will be an appeal here and there to the courts, there are very few of them. The councillors know every child in the parish; they know every man who comes in, and the lists can thus be correctly prepared. But while the lists are well prepared, the secretary-treasurers are very negligent in complying with the law in sending them to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery at Ottawa. We must get the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to write and write again to these officials to collect as rapidly as they can all the lists from the province of Quebec. The same thing will apply to all the other provinces. As soon as the lists come in, they will be printed, and any member who wants them will have to apply to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery.

Mr. SPROULE. Does that apply to the lists of this year or the lists of last year ?

The PRIME MINISTER. All the lists do not come into force at the same time. In the province of Quebec they come into force in the month of April, immediately after revision.

Mr. SPROULE. In the province of Ontario our lists are being revised now. Is it the new list which the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery is collecting, or the old one ?

The PRIME MINISTER. The new list. I suppose the list was revised last year, and printed with the necessary corrections made. The work will be to revise it and add the names that should be on, or take away the names that should be dropped.

Mr. SPROULE. Can the right hon. gentleman state what lists were received last year, because I understand that very few were received ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Some weeks ago I gave a list, which I obtained from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, of the lists that were received. I do not know whether any others have been received since that time.

Mr. FOSTER. If the right hon. First Minister can tell us what lists have been received, that will enable us to tell what lists are not in. What strikes me is this, from a practical point of view: suppose the Governor General were to insist on the dissolution of the House now. What state would we be in with reference to the electoral lists ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not think there is any difficulty. We have been accustomed to have our lists printed at Ottawa, and we have been depending on that. But previous to 1886 the lists were not printed. Suppose the Governor General were to dissolve Parliament to-day, my hon. friend asks in what condition we would be in. Candidates could get from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery what lists we have. I dare say that at present the supply would not be very large but they could get from the municipal authorities in the respective counties the lists they required. The system is pretty uniform in every part of the Dominion that the lists are prepared by the municipal authorities, and it is an easy thing to get these lists. But it will be more simple to have them in Ottawa, and we purpose to collect them as far as possible.

Mr. HAGGART. That would not be the legal list for an election.

The PRIME MINISTER. Absolutely legal. The list that is legal in the province is legal here; but for greater convenience we have taken the power to have the lists brought here and printed.

Mr. MILLS. I desire to call the attention of the committee to one or two facts which obtain in the province of Nova Scotia in connection with the provincial lists. I do this in view of an observation made by the Finance Minister (Mr. Fielding) last session, and repeated by him to a certain extent this session, that there never was any complaint with reference to the preparation of the voters' lists in the province of Nova Scotia, and that the machine was not in working order there. Now, though very briefly, I intend to call his attention to the facts which I will put before the House, so that hereafter he cannot be in a position to truthfully make any such assertion as that. Last summer I paid particular attention to the preparation of the voters' lists for the county of Annapolis, and by the greatest exertion we succeeded in getting a much better list as a local list than ever obtained before in that county. But at the same time there have been a great many gross iniquities perpetrated. For example, there was one court where the commissioners were Dow, I. Morse, Arthur Burns and William McBride. All these courts for the revising of the lists convened in one day, and there was something like six or seven of them throughout the county. I succeeded in having every one of them attended by a good legal authority, and the court I refer to was attended by a lawyer on behalf of the Liberal-Conservative party. Dow, I. Morse was absent in New York at the time, and the court was run by Arthur Burns and William McBride. It was proved conclusively that four voters were proved to have no right to be on the list at all, and that was admitted by the commissioners, who adjudged them there and then to be taken off the list. The lists have been printed—and I must here express my satisfaction at having obtained my list quite early from the printing bureau—and these names are now on the list. As soon as I got the list, I wrote to William McBride and to the attorney who attended that court. Both of them expressed their great surprise that these names should be on. William McBride, the commissioner, wrote to me stating that he signed no list with those names upon it. We have no recourse. The time for the appeal to the sheriff has passed by, and I may here remark that the appeal to the sheriff is a blooming farce. It purports to give a remedy for a wrong; but it is a hypocritical remedy; it is no remedy at all.

I believe the sheriff acted in a fair and impartial manner and I am satisfied with his conduct, but it is the law I complain of. He carried out the law, which is a hypocritical law that purports to give a remedy and gives none whatever. Here is an iniquity in one division of at least four or five names being on the list, that had no more right to be on it than Zulus or Hottentots. I could go further into details, but want to be brief. I could tell you what occurred in other counties, in each of which some ten or dozen names, that were judged to be off, were allowed on. That is the result of this hypocritical law. I understand that the right hon. First Minister gave his pledge that if the Senate would allow the last Franchise Bill to go through, he would use all his influence with the local Government to have the law so amended that an appeal would be given to the judges, who are the proper authorities to deal out justice. It is a burning shame and disgrace to any province to have such a partisan law on the statutes. I call this emphatically to the attention of the Minister of Finance, so that he will not be in a position to say, with any show of truth, that his attention was never called to the fact that matters are not going along smoothly with reference to the franchise law in the province of Nova Scotia. However, we have a great deal better list in the county of Annapolis to-day, owing to the determined fight that was put up in that county during the last revision, to have the lists properly made out, but still there are many iniquities perpetrated which would not be perpetrated if this hypocritical law were not on the statute.

Mr. FLINT. I would ask the hon. gentleman how it is, if the sheriff of the county of Annapolis is the respectable and high-minded gentleman he describes him to be, that an appeal to him is so ineffective?

Mr. MILLS. There is no chance of an appeal in the case of these parties that were judged by the courts to be left off and were left on the list.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am satisfied, so far as my own knowledge and observation goes, that the Nova Scotia franchise law is thoroughly fair and just and eminently suited to the people of Nova Scotia. It is very strange, if there are these iniquities, that we never hear anything about them in the legislature of the province of Nova Scotia and only hear of these complaints in this House, some 1,500 miles distant from that province. You can take the fairest law under heaven, and find some men who will abuse it, but that proves nothing. I regret that the hon. gentleman so persistently endeavoured to discredit the beautiful county of Annapolis. If the condition of affairs he describes exists in that county, it can only be through the barbarism of the people, for no intelligent, honest, God-fearing people, as I believe the people of Annapolis to be, would allow such a state of things to exist.

Mr. MILLS. That is mere clap-trap.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am willing to leave the people to judge whether that is clap-trap. When this matter was discussed a year ago, the hon. gentleman's ground of complaint was that the sheriffs were partisans and not to be trusted.

Mr. MILLS. I say so still.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. To-day he is obliged to admit that the sheriff is an honest man, anxious to carry out the law honestly. The law was designed to give an appeal, which would not be used very often, but would be the means of preventing a partisan revising officer from exercising his partisanship. The chief purposes of all courts of appeal is not so much to try cases as to prevent the necessity for trying them by letting men know that there is such a court which will reverse judgments if wrongly given. This was a court of appeal, which would serve as a warning to revising officers that if they allowed their partisanship to lead them astray their decisions would be reversed. But the hon. gentleman says that after the appeal was taken and judgment given two names were found on the list, which the revising officers said should not have been on.

Mr. MILLS. I said there were four, and was entirely within the mark.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Well, four names were on the list, which had no right to be there, and were on contrary to the decision of the revising officers and after the list had passed through the sheriff's hands. The only logical deduction is that the custodian of the list inserted these names, but could he not do that just the same after its revision by a judge as after its revision by the sheriff?

Mr. MILLS. I do not care what it means, there are the facts.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman admits the logic; that is what it means.

Mr. MILLS. I do not admit any such thing.

Mr. FIELDING.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The charge he makes is one against the custodian of the list, who is the municipal clerk of the county of Annapolis, and who, if he did put these names on, was guilty of fraud. And if, after having committed such frauds he is retained in office, it is only because there is a condition of things in the county of Annapolis, which would not exist among civilized, intelligent and God-fearing people, and I do not believe that condition exists in that county. If the statement of the hon. gentleman were true, he should have taken his complaint to the local legislature and the local Government, if he had any complaint to make against the sheriff. And if he could show that the clerk of the municipality of the county of Annapolis had been guilty in that particular, he should take his complaint to the municipal council and demand that the clerk be dismissed. All that the hon. gentleman has said applies, not to the law, but even if his statement be correct, it applies to an abuse of the law. For my part, I do not believe that that abuse has been committed. But even if it is committed, it does not in the slightest degree affect the law, for it is a good law.

Mr. MILLS. I did not wish to go into the particulars of this matter. I said before that I only wanted to touch upon it briefly so as to call the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Fielding's) attention to it. But if he desires to go into the matter fully, I am prepared to do it and show it up in every particular. The hon. Minister says that I am very anxious to talk about matters in Nova Scotia when I get twelve or fifteen hundred miles away from Nova Scotia. Let me tell the hon. Minister that I have always been taught, and I have always felt, that Nova Scotia was not twelve or fifteen hundred miles away from Canada. This is the capital of Canada. I have always felt that Nova Scotia was here, a part of Canada and not separated from it. The contrary may have been the idea in the mind of the Finance Minister at one time; and he has not got over it yet, although the Liberals in Nova Scotia, and he among them, have been tumbling over one another in their anxiety to get at the loaves and fishes here at Ottawa, after having preached secession, repeal, and even annexation for eighteen or twenty years. The hon. Minister says I have nothing to complain of as to the sheriff being in the position in which he is. I make the same complaint to-day as I did last session. The sheriff is a partisan—there is not the slightest doubt about that. I said that last session, and I say it now. These men have not legal minds and cannot interpret the Franchise Act. That Franchise Act is an intricate law. We have had sheriff's courts in Annapolis lasting three or four days, with all the lawyers of the county of Annapolis attending those courts; and even the leading lawyer on the Liberal side admitted that he could not understand the Act, and did not understand it. He is an eminent lawyer, and when such a man cannot understand the law how is a partisan sheriff going to interpret it? When he is in doubt, he gives his party the benefit of that doubt—and I am not saying a word against the honesty and integrity of these men when I say that. But what the Finance Minister has said about the county of Annapolis is mere clap-trap, only used to blind the eyes of some partisan individual. I care not a snap of my finger for such talk as that. He asks: Why not take the complaint with reference to names being left off the list to the legislature? I did not know it until a month ago, when the list was placed in my hands by the Queen's Printer. And let me tell you, Mr. Chairman, that steps are being taken at this moment for the very thing that he suggests. I said to the people of Annapolis when I went through the county: Do not think I am going through this country for fun; I mean business. And as a result, we got a far better list in the local than we had before. And we are going to get a better one next year. But what I complain about is the farcical law. It is a mere hypocritical farce worthy of emanation from the mind of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding); for, take his career from the start and it has been a hypocritical career—purporting one thing and being another.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mills) is going a little too far—

Mr. MILLS. I have not said that the hon. gentleman is hypocritical now.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. At the request, I think, of the hon. leader of the Opposition, the other day, when a similar expression was used, I had it withdrawn. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mills) should do the same thing.

Mr. MILLS. If I called the hon. gentleman hypocritical at this time, I would withdraw it. But surely I am not asked to withdraw the expression that his former course was hypocritical—he may have reformed—he may have reformed since last night.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I think the hon. gentleman should withdraw the expression.

Mr. MILLS. I have no wish to transgress the rules of the House and I withdraw the expression. Leaving that portion of the subject, I desire to point out that we have not heard from the Prime Minister with reference to his pledge that he was going to lay the matter before the local legislatures and use his influence to have an appeal allowed to the judges and not to the sheriffs. I am very much mistaken if that is not the understanding, and I would be glad to know what has been done?

The PRIME MINISTER. That was the understanding. I communicated with Mr. Murray; but my desk has been in such a condition, I have fumbled papers so, that I cannot find the correspondence.

Mr. COCHRANE. I desire to know if I understood the Prime Minister correctly with regard to the voters' list. For instance, in the riding I represent, the revision of the voters' list will be taking place from a fortnight to a month hence. In my riding there are four townships, and we have a court in each municipality. The voters' list from one township is in my hands to-day and in a month from to-day the list will be revised. I had a case last year where the list in a municipality was not revised for a month afterwards. If an election were to take place say on the 1st January in that constituency, what list would be used?

The PRIME MINISTER. My answer would be—suppose an election for the provincial legislature were to take place in that riding, what list would be used. The same list is in force for the Dominion as for the provincial elections.

Mr. TAYLOR. I would like to inquire from the Prime Minister if I understood him to say that the lists, as soon as printed, would be ready to deliver to the parties entitled to them when they called for them. I understand the law to be that certain copies are to be sent to certain persons. Is it obligatory on those who have the right to these lists to go and ask for them? Also, I would like to ask if I am credibly informed that the list for some of the constituencies in Quebec are being printed in the "Herald" office in Montreal?

The PRIME MINISTER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) may have been informed, but not credibly informed, because no lists are printed outside of the Printing Bureau. As to the other point, subsection 4 of section 10 of the Act says:

Immediately after printing such list, the Queen's Printer shall send, by registered mail, twenty copies thereof to the sitting member for the electoral district to which the list belongs, and twenty copies to the defeated candidate at the last Dominion election therein; and the Governor in Council may, by regulation, provide for the issue to members and candidates of such additional copies as are thought proper.

The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery and the Queen's Printer shall supply copies of any lists so printed to any person applying therefor and paying for them a price proportionately sufficient to cover the cost of printing them.

Mr. COCHRANE. I want to draw the Premier's attention to the opinion I got from him a few minutes ago. If a local election took place in our province under the circumstances to which I referred, it would be held under a list prepared by the municipality, the last one revised. But I understand the Premier to read now from the statute that applies to Dominion elections, according to which the lists are printed here, and it is the duty of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to furnish the lists to hold the election on. The law that applies to an election in Ontario cannot possibly apply to that clause of the statute.

The PRIME MINISTER. The hon. gentleman is in error. As soon as the election list comes into force in Ontario, or any other province, that list has to be transferred to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and when it is printed, that is the list upon which the election takes place. But suppose that before the list comes into force in Ontario, and before it has been printed, then the list mentioned in subsection 10 of section 10, would be the list in force in the province :

So long as and whenever, for any reason, a certified copy of any list of voters as finally revised has not been transmitted to or received by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery pursuant to the provisions of this section, the original and legal list for Dominion elections shall be the same as that for provincial elections.

Mr. CLANCY. I would like to call the Premier's attention to what may lead to serious difficulty. He will see that, in having the lists standing in type here at Ottawa, and new lists coming in to be corrected upon them, there is a chance of errors creeping in. Now, we have found ourselves in difficulty on account of the delay that occurs here in consequence of the mere fact of furnishing additional lists. Now, if it were necessary to pay a larger sum to the municipalities where the lists are finally revised and completed, and the only thing to be sought afterwards is an additional list for convenience, let that additional sum be paid, and let the final list be made up in the municipality, and so do away with the printing here. There would then be no chance of making what is almost a revision here. I say such a thing is possible, though I do not mean to say that it is done. It seems to me that would be a step in the right direction. I do not think that it would cost the country as much as it does now, because these lists are already in type.

The PRIME MINISTER. I must say that the views of the hon. gentleman are largely my own views. But last year, in accordance with wishes which were expressed in the House, we put in that clause to have the lists printed here.

Mr. DAVIN. Is this sum for the payment of the officers referred to under section 10 ?

The PRIME MINISTER. The sum of $34,000 is only for printing. We have provided another sum to pay for the custodian of the lists.

Mr. COCHRANE.

Mr. DAVIN. I understand that very few returns have been made by this provincial custodian. Has there been any attempt to put that subsection 3 of section 10 into force ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Not so far.

Mr. SPROULE. Do I understand that this first item of $5,000 is struck out ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. I desire to ask the Premier a question. When this Franchise Act was being considered by the House, it was pointed out that, so far as cities were concerned, this provision of section 9 which provided that if the registered list for the provincial assembly was not more than a year old, it would be used for a Dominion election, if such took place, and, under that condition, if the provincial law was not amended, hundreds of registered voters would be disfranchised. The Solicitor General, I think, stated that the attention of the provincial authorities of the province of Ontario would be drawn to this condition. I would like to ask the Premier if such has been done. The provincial law is very stringent with regard to the residence of these men who register within thirty days before the holding of an election for the provincial assembly. As the registered list would be used not more than twelve months old for an election to this House, these registered voters who move from one subdivision to the other, although still in the constituency, would be disfranchised. I think the Solicitor General was seized of the fact that it would be a great cause of inconvenience and trouble, and that hundreds of men would be disfranchised, unless an amendment was made to the law ; and I think he promised to draw the attention of the provincial authorities to that fact. Has that been done ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I am not aware at this moment that such a promise was made by the Solicitor General. So far as I am personally concerned, I stated that we would communicate with the governments of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick with regard to the appeal, and this I have done myself.

Mr. CLARKE. There will be hundreds of these enfranchised votes disqualified, unless the necessary amendment is made by the provincial authorities.

Mr. COPP. I may say, in reply to the hon. member for Annapolis (Mr. Mills), that if we do not defend the provincial law, it is because we do not wish to take up the time of the House, not because we consider it a bad law, because it is a good law, and is satisfactory to the people of Nova Scotia. I think the members of the House on both sides will be satisfied that the complaint made by the hon. member is purely imaginary.

Allowance to C. Barnett, 120 days at $2.50 per day ..... $300

Mr. BERGERON. This would be a good item on which to express an opinion. I do not remember since I have been in Parliament that the restaurant down stairs has been so inferior. At the commencement of this Parliament we were to be so good that the restaurant was to be simply a place for obtaining sandwiches, ginger ale, and so on. We might as well say it openly, what we all know. If there is one thing I hate more than another it is hypocrisy. In spite of the fact that it goes out to the public that we have no liquor in the House of Commons, it is well known that any member can go down stairs, ring the bell, and that the boy goes over to the Senate side, and brings back anything a gentleman may want. So far as this is concerned, we are no better to-day than we were before. But the fact is that, as a result of the present system, the place down stairs is very badly kept, and it cannot be taken otherwise. It is necessary for us to pay $300 to the man in charge who should be able to make money in doing what is required of him down stairs. If the place were kept as it should be we would have a real restaurant down there where we could go at any hour and get something to eat. During the late sittings that have taken place within the last two months, we have found the need of the restaurant to a greater degree than at other times. I have gone down stairs without being able to get anything to eat, because we are starving the restaurant by the conditions that we are imposing upon the caterer. This man should be able to make the restaurant pay. He has no rent to pay; we furnish everything necessary to a first-class restaurant, and still we have to pay $300 to the man who keeps that place when he should be in a position to make money out of it. I see Mr. Speaker is in the House, and I would call his attention to the fact that a change should be made in the restaurant. During the twenty-two sessions that I have been here, previous to the adoption of the system which now prevails, we had a good restaurant and we were never called upon to pay an extra allowance to the man who keeps it. We should go back to the old system, and do away with this hypocrisy which seems to be so prevalent amongst some hon. gentlemen here. Let us have a good restaurant, well kept. There is no use of having a restaurant if it is to be run as it has been run during the last two or three sessions.

Mr. DAVIN. I occasionally use the restaurant for my meals, and I may say that the cooking at the present time is better than it has been for some years. The cooking leaves nothing to be desired, and this is a very important thing, because, in the past, and for this the present Government is not responsible, that restaurant has been destroyed by political appointments. There was a time when we had a very poor caterer there, but that was when the man was appointed on political grounds. I refer to a time before hon. gentlemen came into office. A man was appointed on political grounds as caterer, and he thought he could do just as he pleased. Then, people kept away from the restaurant. Another man came and he was no better than his predecessor, but the present man's cooking leaves nothing to be desired. It is an important thing, when we are kept here late and require any food, that we should be able to get it properly cooked. The condemnation the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron) makes of the restaurant does not apply to the way the food is cooked.

Mr. TYRWHITT. I, too, have been a frequenter of the restaurant since 1837, and my experience is much the same as that of the hon. member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Davin). I believe the cooking has been better this year than during the term of the predecessor of the present occupant of the office. In regard to the allowance given him, I am not prepared to express an opinion. I think the present caterer is one of the best men we have had during my experience of the restaurant. He is a man of extensive experience; he was butler to the dowager Duchess of Dufferin, and several other people in England, and he was brought out here by the Grand Trunk Railway Company to superintend their restaurants. In my opinion, he is a first-class man. He has paid high salaries to his cooks, this and every year, and he has employed these people at high salaries chiefly for the convenience of the Speaker. He and the late Speaker were on the best of terms, and if the late Speaker were the occupant of the Chair to-day, I feel confident that he would retain the services of Mr. Barnett.

Mr. BERGERON. I do not blame Mr. Barnett; I have said nothing against him. What I have spoken against is the system. I believe, as far as Mr. Barnett is concerned, he is the best caterer we have had for some time back, but we have clipped his wings, and he has to come before the House and ask to be paid for occupying the position in which he would be able to make money if the system were changed. In so far as the food is concerned, I cannot speak, as I have never taken a meal there, but I have gone down there during late sittings of the House, very often, and found that the service was very bad. I have been obliged to wait half an hour before I was served.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend (Mr. Bergeron) has just stated that he never took a meal there.

Mr. BERGERON. I never took a regular meal there. I have gone down at night to get something to eat, but I would not call that a meal. I have gone down for a sandwich, or something like that. It may be that the regular meals are all right, but I have not tried them. Upon going down at one or two o'clock, during a late sitting, for a sandwich, I have had to wait a long time. I do not blame the caterer, but I do blame the system that is in force, and I would be glad if it were changed.

The PRIME MINISTER. It cannot be the fault of the system, because the restaurant was worse in former times when the system was different.

Mr. CLARKE. I have taken most of my meals down stairs in the restaurant of the House, and I can bear testimony to the fact that the meals served during this session are equal to the meals served in any hotel, or restaurant, in the city of Ottawa. If complaints are made as to the method of conducting the restaurant, the fault certainly does not lie with the caterer. Sometimes not more than three or four will take breakfast in the restaurant, and sometimes not more than three or four will go to lunch. Yet this man has been compelled, in order to maintain the reputation he made, when he served as the butler to the dowager Duchess of Dufferin, to maintain a well-qualified chef. The character of the food is indicated by the appearance which the hon. member for South Simcoe (Mr. Tyrwhitt) presents after his stay in Ottawa of four or five months. I understand that a movement is on foot to displace that gentleman from the position which he occupies, but, I think, it would be well to proceed slowly before removing him, and I think if hon. members would patronize the restaurant they will find that the quality of the food has improved in comparison with what it was before. It is hardly fair to compel the caterer to keep a staff of waiters, cooks and assistants, when at some meals not more than three or four members avail themselves of the privileges of the restaurant.

Additional French translation during recess ..... $500

Mr. SPROULE. What is the cause of this increase for French translation ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I cannot exactly say, but I believe it is due to the increase in the volume of "Hansard."

Additional amount required for stationery. $5,000

Mr. SPEAKER. The House has had an unusually long session. It will be remembered that it was recommended that hon. members should be placed on the same level as the Senate in regard to the supplies of stationery. There was not an appropriation sufficient to cover that expenditure for supplies except by taking the stationery from the stock that was furnished ordinarily to the members by the stationery department. The result has been that the stock has been depleted, and this additional amount is recommended to bring the stock up to the average.

Mr. BERGERON.

Library of Parliament—

Payment of two sessional messengers during the session of 1900..... $500

Mr. DAVIN. What are the names of these two gentlemen ?

The PRIME MINISTER. One is Micklejohn and the other Bordeleau.

Mr. DAVIN. I would be very sorry to say anything individually in regard to a vote like this ; but I must say that those who are responsible for appointments for the library should take care that any persons they recommend shall not interfere with the work of members when they go there to study. There have been times when it was not possible to carry on any reading or work in the library by reason of the talk going on, not between the superior officers of the library, but between the recently appointed messengers. I do not want to say anything harsh of these persons, but for the efficiency of the library we must insist that the messengers shall not hold a little conclave of their own while members of Parliament are trying to do the work of the country.

Mr. SPEAKER. I should think that difficulty might be obviated by calling the attention of the Librarian to the matter.

It being One o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

The House resumed at Three o'clock.

Paris Exhibition ..... $175,000

Mr. FOSTER. We want a complete and full explanation of how this will be expended.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). The hon. gentleman will remember that last year I obtained a vote of $20,000 for preliminary work in connection with the preparations for the exhibition. In the winter arrangements were made for an organization to bring about a proper representation of Canada at the exhibition, and it was decided to appoint a commission, which was done. This commission was composed of four officers of the civil service—Dr. Dawson, of the Geological Survey ; Prof. Saunders, of the Experimental Farm ; Prof. Robertson, the Dairy Commissioner ; and Mr. Gourdeau, the Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries. With these four, who have some expert knowledge in particular branches, we join four gentlemen, one of whom is supposed to represent the province of Ontario, in order to collect exhibits, give explanations, and see would-be exhibitors from that province.

Mr. CLANCY. Who is the gentleman for Ontario ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. Jardine, of Toronto. Mr. J. X. Perreault, of Montreal, was appointed for the province of Quebec; Mr. A. H. Gillmor, of St. Stephen, N.B., for the maritime provinces, and Mr. W. B. Scott, of Winnipeg, for the western part of the country. These eight gentlemen have been holding meetings steadily, and laying out plans to see that Canada is properly exhibited. We have advertised throughout the country, calling for exhibitors, and announcing in what way they would have to make applications for space, and giving all the information we had received from the Imperial commissioners in England, through whom only we can work. We have also laid out a scheme for the proper representation of Canadian natural products at the exhibition. For instance, Dr. Dawson is preparing a thorough representation of Canadian mineral products; Prof. Saunders is preparing a thorough representation of fruits and agricultural products; Prof. Robertson is working in his department; and Mr. Gourdeau is preparing a careful representation of Canadian fishery and sports-and game products. We have been obliged to give a great deal of information to applicants for space at the exhibition, and this has been the work that has been done up to the present time. I may say that the rules of the exhibition require that all applications for space should be sent into the Imperial commissioners before the 30th of June, and we have sent in the great bulk of these applications. Since that time some others have been received, and we are now in negotiation in hope that these also will be admitted, although the rules of the exhibition are very strict. We have obtained space to the extent of 25,000 square feet in what is known as the British Colonial Building, and 12,000 square feet amongst the Imperial exhibits. In the latter case the Canadian exhibits, like all others, are divided into groups and classes, according to the quality and character of the exhibit, and lot according to the country from which they come. Under these circumstances, our exhibit amongst the Imperial exhibits will rank with the other exhibits from all over the world in that particular group. In our own sectional building, we group them to suit ourselves.

Mr. CLANCY. Are these exhibits supposed to be duplicated in the Canadian department?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No. Certain classes have been put into one building and certain classes into the other. Commissioners have had a great deal of trouble in arranging them; but eventually have classed that as seemed to be best. We have consulted with intending exhibitors to try to meet their views; but we are strictly bound by the rules of the exposition and the restrictions that have been imposed upon us by the authorities in Paris through the Imperial commissioners.

Mr. FOSTER. What proportion does the space bear to the exhibits offered?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We have not nearly enough space for the demands of applicants. We have had to tell the applicants that they cannot get the space asked for, and we give them as much as we can. Up to the present applicants have accepted the space we have given them.

Mr. FOSTER. Will that have the effect of making our exhibits less representative?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, I hope not. We have been able to give space to all applicants, but not as much as has been asked for. I know that some applicants have asked for more space than they expected to get, on the principle that if they asked for a great deal, they would get some; but when we have begun to discuss the matter with them, they have been content with a great deal less space than they asked for.

Mr. FOSTER. Are the applications that are now in fairly representative of the advanced interests of the country?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, fairly so. I have here a list of all the applicants, but, of course, the House does not care to hear that, but I can go over the classes generally. In the first place, we are to have an educational exhibit, to be prepared by the educational departments of the different provinces. There will be an exhibition of musical instruments, one of photography and literature and processes relating to them; one of machine tools; an electrical exhibit; agricultural implements, a large exhibit. Forestry, sports and fisheries are grouped together. Of food products we have a large exhibit. There will be a very fine exhibit—prepared by Dr. Dawson—of mineral productions; a small exhibit of internal decorations of buildings; a large exhibit of heating apparatus, stoves, &c.; a large exhibit of the chief textile fabrics, cottons and woollens; a very fine representation of our pulp and paper industry—one of the most important, I think. We have a small exhibit of tobacco and its manufacture. Then, we have a number of smaller lines of manufacture. We have a large exhibit of bicycles; another of agricultural implements in the Imperial space; a good display of horticultural and fruit products; and a good exhibit of forestry; an exhibit of metal-working, and a very considerable exhibit of furniture. These are the main groups.

Mr. BERGERON. Are the local governments working through the Department of Agriculture here?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes. We are working under the Imperial commissioners, and they will only deal with the Dominion Government. I have entered into communication with the provincial governments, and asked their co-operation, and have received from them their support; and in a number of instances, such as forestry, the departments in the various provinces are working with the commissioners here, and, as a matter of fact, are preparing exhibits for us.

Mr. BERGERON. At their own expense?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Ontario, Quebec, British Columbia, and, I think, one or two of the maritime provinces, have voted sums of money to prepare for the exhibition, and are bearing the expense so far as these votes will allow them.

Mr. BERGERON. How much money has been voted besides this?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There was $20,000 voted last year, and then there is this $175,000. I may say frankly that it is not at all certain that this will pay the whole of our expenses in connection with the exposition.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the estimate?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We have not completed the estimate of the whole expenditure yet. We have a careful estimate made that this total of $195,000 will cover the expenses to the 1st July. As we work on we shall say what further will be required. I hope it will not be more than $50,000.

Mr. FOSTER. When does the exposition open?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think it is on the 1st or the 15th of April, and it lasts until the 1st of November.

Mr. FOSTER. Are these gentlemen whom you appointed last year those who are to represent us at Paris?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The four commissioners appointed outside of the department—yes. Whether any departmental officers will go will depend upon the work. I must say, in regard to that, that I propose to appoint a chief commissioner. Up to the present time, I have been acting as chairman of this commission. But I propose that we appoint a commissioner to go to Paris and stay all the time as the official representative and head of the Canadian commission.

Mr. BERGERON. At what salary?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have not fixed that.

Mr. BERGERON. Would it be a Minister of the Crown?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No; some gentleman who could go to Paris before the exposition and remain there to represent Canada and deal with the other commissioners and represent Canada there.

Mr. FISHER.

Mr. BERGERON. What are the names of our commissioners?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. J. X. Perrault for Quebec, Mr. Gillmor for the maritime provinces, Mr. Jardine for Ontario, and Mr. W. B. Scott for the western country.

Mr. BERGERON. These besides the local men?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I gave the names of the others a few minutes ago.

Mr. FOSTER. Have these men had experience in exhibition matters?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. J. X. Perrault has had a good deal of experience. I do not think that the other gentlemen have had a great deal.

Mr. WALLACE. Is Mr. Perrault the gentleman who was connected with the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. The man who can crack the champagne bottles?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not know about that; I was not then in public life. He seems to have thorough experience in connection with exhibition work. The other commissioners I found to be extremely satisfactory.

Mr. WALLACE. Where is Mr. Jardine from?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. From Toronto.

Mr. WALLACE. Is he the grocer?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am not sure what his business was.

Mr. McMULLEN. He was in commercial life.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. My recollection is that he was connected with the boot and shoe trade.

Mr. SPROULE. What experience would he have to fit him for this position?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He was generally well acquainted with commercial life and of the manufacturing industries, especially of Ontario.

Mr. BERGERON. Does he speak French?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He lived in Montreal, and for some time before he went to Toronto and has a fair acquaintance with French.

Mr. BRITTON. I have been requested to ask whether, if central Ontario prepared a special mineral exhibit, it would be possible to have that placed in the exposition on the application of the Dominion Government?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The whole exhibit is intended to be a national, and not a local one or a group of exhibits. We have had a good many applications from different parts of the country, asking that each locality should keep its own exhibit without reference to the rest of the country, but the whole scheme of the exhibition is, that the exhibits should not be grouped according to localities, and we have tried to carry out that idea in our Canadian exhibits and group the whole of them together, so as to make a national exhibit, without reference to the particular localities. In that way we believe that we will make a better impression for the national character of our products than in any other way. That will give every opportunity, and the arrangement is to give every opportunity to each locality to be represented, and each exhibit will have a proper description of not only what it is, but the locality from which it comes.

Mr. WALLACE. The Government is proposing to expend $175,000 in this enterprise, they should demonstrate to us that, as a commercial undertaking, as a matter of business—for that is the only view in which we ought to regard it—that the expenditure is likely to have some commensurate result. It may be quite true that people will go to that exhibition from all parts of the world, but none the less it is largely an exhibition of the city of Paris and the surrounding country. Like every other exhibition of that kind, it partakes largely of a national character, and is supported largely by the nation. People from other countries will come in as visitors, perhaps to do business, but we do not know that they will. What is our business with France to-day? Of the products of the mine, we send them $150 worth. Of the products of the fisheries, we send them $381,000, and of the forests, $315,000 worth, or, in round numbers, $700,000 worth of these two, showing that we are doing a very small trade, although that is the bulk of the trade we do with that country. As regards the products of the forests, Canada commands the markets of the world. We have not to go and beg a market for them, but Canada can send them anywhere and everywhere. We have the best pine timber perhaps to be found in the world, and would find a ready market in any country, so that we are not under any compliment to any country which takes the products of our forests, and the same may be said of our fisheries. What else do we send? Animals and their products, $4,479; agricultural products, $154,000, or about one-sixth of a million of the products of the farm, as compared with the tens of millions which we send elsewhere. Last year we sent, in round numbers, $160,000 worth of manufactures, and of miscellaneous articles, none at all; and our total export to that country was $1,015,612. We send seventy or eighty times as much to Great Britain, and thirty or forty times as much to the United States. This is all we send to France, notwithstanding the fact that we have had a commercial treaty with that country for a number of years, and that we have been courting assiduously reciprocal trade and business with it. We purchased from that country $3,975,000 worth last year, or nearly four times as much as it bought from us. To my mind, a wiser and more judicious expenditure could be made of that money in promoting the trade of the country in other ways. If the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce were to carry out a well-considered and a wisely extended scheme of promoting trade with other countries, and we should find it necessary, not to expend $175,000 in one year, because that would be a very large sum, but sufficient money for that purpose, that would be a much better way of utilizing our revenues than this means of largely throwing away this amount for fancy purposes, for the purpose of enabling some people to sport around the city of Paris, which is certainly a very beautiful and attractive city.

But I do not believe we would be justified in expending the money of the people of Canada where they cannot point out more tangible results that would be likely to flow from it than we can see from that expenditure. I say that of this million dollars, the great bulk of it, nearly three-fourths of it, are the products of the sea and the products of our forests, products for which we can obtain a market anywhere without difficulty, because they are in demand all over the world. But for all the other products, the miserable sum of less than one-sixth of a million of the products of our farms go to France. We can produce cereals, animals and the products of animals, butter, eggs, cheese, &c., and yet, though we are exporters of those products to the extent of tens of millions of dollars to Great Britain, we do not send one-sixth of one million to France. Therefore, while it may be considered necessary that we should put in an appearance at Paris and take part in that exposition, I say we are doing it on too prodigal a scale, and where results are not in sight, or any reasonable return for the money to be expended. I, therefore, say that the Government, in proposing to expend $175,000 in this regard, are wantonly throwing away a large portion of that money that might be devoted to promoting our trade otherwise with greater advantage than that expenditure will do. Then with regard to the parties to be entrusted with this expenditure, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) tells us he is going to appoint a commissioner. Well, commissioners have been appointed before. We have had knowledge of Mr. Perreault at the Philadelphia exposition of 1876. He is quite a number of years older since that time and may have gained wisdom, yet his extravagant expenditure there, producing no results for the benefit of Canada, were a scandal to this country. History may repeat itself, and history probably will repeat itself, and we will have a recurrence of those extravagant expenditures which we condemned in 1876. Now, Mr. Jardine, of Toronto, is selected by the Minister of Agriculture to represent the province of Ontario. I do not know that Mr. Jardine has had any manufacturing experience, as the Minister has told us, further than the grinding of spices. He may, however, have the qualifications that would fit him for the position. I presume the Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock) or some other person will be able to give us a little information concerning his qualifications. But I say that the expenditure of $175,000 for having a carnival in Paris is not a justifiable expenditure of our money, and that money could be expended much more profitably in opening up markets in other ways for Canadian trade, and I would advise the expenditure of larger sums than the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) thinks necessary for that purpose.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Sir Richard Cartwright). There is one point I think my hon. friend has overlooked. My own impression is that we will not, probably, to a very great extent, extend our trade with France, although we may do more in that respect than he expects. But the House will remember that at such an exhibition as that which is proposed to be held in Paris the whole world and his wife will be present; every conceivable nation will be represented there, and we will have an opportunity of exhibiting the products of Canada and the progress we have made, not merely to the people of France, although that is an important thing in itself, but to every European nation, and probably to all the nations of the world. Comparisons will be made by them of our products with the products of other countries. It is, therefore, of considerable importance, if we appear at this exhibition at all, that we do so in a manner fitted to maintain the reputation of Canada. It is quite true that the great bulk of our trade has been and probably always will continue to be with the remainder of North America and with the British Islands and their dependencies. Still, there are a good many places where we hope to extend, and I think will succeed in extending our trade. Now, representatives from all these countries will be flocking to Paris, and a careful examination and comparison will be made by these people of the products of Canada.

Mr. WALLACE.

Mr. WALLACE. I pointed out that while people will go there from other countries, they will go more largely for pleasure than for business.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. They will be there for pleasure no doubt, we all know what Paris is. I do not know whether the hon. gentleman has taken that city in in his peregrinations. He may probably be sent there one of these days to examine. But apart from that side of the question, which some members of the House may be better qualified to speak of than I am—or more recently qualified—it is to be remembered that when Canada appears at the Paris Exposition she will find herself literally in the presence of all the nations of the world, and I think we may assume that however on pleasure bent, they will be on business bent too, and that very considerable results may be expected to accrue to us from the exhibition of our products if properly carried out, and I am certain that my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture will take pains that our part in it will be attended to properly and well. It would not be at all prudent that any undue stint should be manifested by us if we appear there at all. There is no doubt that, particularly as regards the Mediterranean littoral, which is a portion of Europe where I am in some hopes of extending our trade, no place could well be selected where more representatives of the people could well be found than in Paris; and for that reason I think there is fair grounds to believe that the sum expended on this exhibition will fully repay itself in proper time.

Mr. FOSTER. I think everything will depend on the manner in which this display is carried out, and a great deal of that will depend on the kind of men we choose to represent us there, not only as being able to represent the life, and intellect, and peculiar spirit of Canada, but also from a business point of view. We want a man who is able not only to make things go but to make them go in the right way. You have, I dare say, fairly good men, but I doubt if the men you have chosen so far have the experience necessary for taking part in an exposition as large and important as that in Paris. I think that very great care should be taken to get the right man as commissioner. I do not believe, if you are going to do it at all, in doing it with a stinted hand, but I would not like that to be taken as any excuse for extravagant expenditure. I am favourable to the exposition in Paris, not so much that we hope to make our trade very large with France, because we have not any considerable trade with France, but because Paris is probably the greatest show place on earth and at this exposition probably a larger number of representative men from every quarter of the globe will be congregated there than you could get together in any other place in the world. I think, in that respect it would be remarkable, and remarked, if Canada were left out, and if we make a thoroughly representative exhibit, the opportunity is one which may rebound greatly to the benefit of our country. The dependence is chiefly on the representative nature of the exhibit and upon it being thoroughly Canadian. There are some things which every country does, and does well, but there are some certain things which Canada is able to do better than any other country, and special prominence ought to be given to those things. If that is done, and if a proper exhibit is made, Canada will advertise herself to the world.

Mr. HENDERSON. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Agriculture who Mr. W. B. Scott is, whom he intends to send as one of the representatives; what has been his previous occupation, and what qualifications he has for his work.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). Mr. Scott was recommended to the hon. Minister of Agriculture by myself. I am thoroughly familiar with his character and qualifications. He was early in life connected with the land department of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Winnipeg; he had some years' experience in the office there, and had experience in travelling around the western country, which gave him a very considerable knowledge of that country. About ten years ago he entered the employ of the Manitoba Government in the immigration branch, and has been superintendent of their immigration work for about ten years. He had charge of their Toronto office, and from time to time during the last ten years he has had charge of the preparation of all the exhibits which the province of Manitoba has sent to different places. Many of these exhibits have been sent to Europe and different parts of the United States, and exhibits have constantly been made at the Industrial Fair at Toronto and other places. Mr. Scott was the best man that I knew of for that work, because he had had a very wide experience in it. He is a thoroughly good office man, experienced in connection with the preparation of exhibits, and knows the western country well. In addition, he is an active, capable, pushing man, and I think is the proper man in every way for the purpose.

Mr. DAVIN. What arrangements have been made up to the present time to secure a good exhibit from Manitoba and the North-west Territories?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. After the few months' experience I have had with Mr. Scott, and after having come in contact with him, I can thoroughly endorse what the hon. Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton) has said in regard to him. Mr. Scott seems to be, not only thoroughly well acquainted with the whole of the western country, but he understands the necessities in preparing an exhibit, and thoroughly understands the business connected with that kind of work. To reply to the hon. gentleman's question, I would say that Mr. Scott has already twice visited the whole of the western country; that we have made arrangements with the Department of Agriculture of Manitoba to prepare an exhibit of agricultural products; that we have made arrangements with the government of the North-west Territories—Mr. Peterson, I think, is the name of the gentleman in charge of the agricultural department—for a similar exhibit, and also the same arrangement with British Columbia. In addition to that, the three experimental farms in Manitoba, the North-west Territories and British Columbia are growing special crops this year for the purpose of being able to select the best varieties of grains and other products to exhibit. The reason is not that the experimental farms will grow these crops so very much better than others, but the managers of these farms have been accustomed for years to prepare the exhibits of agricultural products for exhibitions, and we desire to secure fine specimens of these products. We also hope to get representations of the forestry and mineral products of the western country.

Mr. SPROULE. What arrangement has been made for the collection and transportation of the goods from each district?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We have issued a complete list of the classes and grades of the exhibits, and in a supplement to that we have given instructions as to how exhibitors shall proceed to get their exhibit entered, packed and delivered. Speaking from memory, the goods will have to be delivered at either Montreal, Quebec or Halifax for shipment. The present proposition is, that we shall get one of the Government vessels to take the goods over to Rouen, a port of France, on the Seine River, at what we may call the head of ocean navigation, and they will be taken in lighters from Rouen to Paris.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, all exhibits will be sent to Quebec?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. To Montreal or Quebec.

Mr. SPROULE. Are they collected there, or collected at some other place and sent there?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Exhibitors will deliver their goods at the ports of Montreal or Quebec. The vessel will go to Montreal, as well as Quebec.

Mr. SPROULE. What arrangement has been made for the transportation of goods from the locality from which the goods are sent?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Speaking from memory, I think that exhibitors are expected to deliver the goods at the port of shipment at their own expense, but we take charge of them there, carry them free of charge to France, see that they are put up in the exhibition, and return them, if they are such things as require to be returned, free of charge.

Mr. SPROULE. What check will there be on the expenditure in connection with the exhibition?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. All the accounts will go through the accountant's and the Auditor General's office.

Mr. SPROULE. Will it be under the control of your commissioner? I take it that you will have a commissioner, who will have charge of the whole exhibit.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Up to the present I have been acting myself as chairman of the commission, but I hope soon to appoint a commissioner, who will be the chairman of the commissioner, or chief commissioner, who will be at the head of the whole business, and who will look after the expenditure. There is a secretary of the board of commissioners, who looks after all these expenditures which have been going on; but so far the accounts have been submitted to myself, and have been initialled by me. The chief commissioner, when appointed, will take that duty off my hands. That is one of the reasons why I want to have the commissioner appointed as soon as possible.

Mr. SPROULE. I think it would be very important to appoint a commissioner who would have some regard for economy, as well as for display, because the history of the past in connection with these exhibitions is, that the accounts are, in many respects—I will not say, scandalous—but very extravagant, to say the least. I think it would be well to have a commissioner who has some regard for economy, and who would not allow any sub-agent to spend whatever he likes because he is drawing upon the treasury.

Mr. WALLACE. Would the hon. Minister say what space Canada has now received, and what this space costs?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We have in the colonial building 19,000 square feet net, exclusive of the main alleyways and passages of the building, and amongst the Imperial exhibits, 7,625 feet net, making a total of 26,585 feet net. With regard to the expense, we are obliged to contribute our proportion of the cost to the colonial building, according to the plans submitted by the Imperial Commission, which will amount to $85,000. Then, we have to pay four shillings a foot for the gross space in the Imperial buildings, which will amount to about $12,000. That makes a total of $97,000 which we have to pay for space. It seems an enormous charge, but we have not been able to change it.

Mr. WALLACE. Are the exhibits returned to Montreal or Quebec, or to the exhibitors' residences?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The first arrangement was to pay just the sea transport. There was afterwards some discussion in regard to the payment also of the land transport of exhibits from the far west; but I am not quite sure what the decision was in regard to that.

Mr. WALLACE. I understood the Minister to state that the producers, at their own expense, were to send the articles to Montreal or Quebec.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Or Halifax.

Mr. WALLACE. I presume that it will be Halifax, because they will be sent away before the opening of navigation at Montreal.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, we hope that the vessel will be loaded at Montreal with all the products from the west, go on to Quebec and take up what is there, and then go on to Halifax. On their return the Ontario manufacturer and the Manitoba producer will have to pay for the return of their products from Montreal to their places.

Mr. WALLACE. It looks to me as if the expenditure was not divided in the proper proportions; for $97,000 is to be paid for the space in the buildings, and only $78,000 for all the other expenses. From our experience in the past, we know that quite a large staff is required to manage and control the exhibits in order to give them due prominence. I would like to ask the Minister if he is going to produce detailed statements of the expenditure?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Certainly, that is the intention. Some of the details of former exhibitions made more trouble than the lack of them.

Sault Ste. Marie Canal—

To pay Messrs. H. Ryan & Co. amount of award on claims in connection with their contract for the construction of a canal and lift-lock at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., referred to W. Shanly, Esq., C.E., as arbitrator.... $211,505

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As the hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr. Foster) has intimated that he desires to go more fully into the papers in regard to this item, I think the probability is that we may not press that item. The Government have looked into it and are satisfied that the report of the arbitrator entitles Ryan & Co. to this amount; but the hon. gentleman thinks the papers are incomplete and wishes to look over them. The estate of Ryan & Co., is probably, not in need of money ; but if we have to carry the matter over for another year, it means another year's interest which they will have to receive if their claim is ultimately paid.

Mr. FOSTER. Even that is better, I think, than the feeling that we did not have all the information before us.

To pay Heney & Borthwick extras in connection with their contract for drainage works, reported in their favour by Mr. Walter Shanly.....$8,932 86

Mr. FOSTER. What is the meaning of this ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I thought that had been explained. It is a recommendation made by Mr. Walter Shanly in accordance with the reference to him, and I was under the impression that the papers had been submitted and explained by the Minister of Railways.

Mr. HAGGART. It was not explained. It was for a bridge made to connect the town of Lachine with the little river there, and this claim was for extras. Before the late Government went out of office, an Order in Council was passed giving them power to refer to the Exchequer Court.

The PRIME MINISTER. Instead of referring it to the Exchequer Court, we referred it to Mr. Walter Shanly, and this is to carry out his report.

Mr. FOSTER. Would my right hon. friend not think it would be more satisfactory, in the long run, to have these claims sent to the Exchequer Court. There is nothing in the argument that because such claims involve questions of engineering they should be sent to an engineer, because in every one of these cases before the Exchequer Court the judge must avail himself of the best expert evidence. We instituted the Exchequer Court for the purpose of settling these claims against the Government, and we did so because we had been mulcted in an immense amount of money for damages by arbitrators, and Parliament came to the conclusion that a court properly constituted would be the best tribunal to settle them.

The PRIME MINISTER. I largely agree with my hon. friend. Many of these cases will have to be judged finally by an engineer, but it is probably better that the reference to an engineer should be made by the court itself.

Rainy River, Ont.—

Lock and dam ..... $25,000

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The navigation of the Rainy River is difficult and dangerous at a point called the Long Sault, where there is a mile of rapid water, and above which there is another rapid. How best to overcome that has not yet been determined. I need not point out the importance of improving the navigation of that river. Between Fort Frances and Lake of the Woods it is some 85 miles in length, and flows through rich agricultural lands, and beyond Fort Frances and along Rainy Lake there is large mineral wealth. The work is one which no doubt will be productive of great advantage. At present the machinery and supplies brought into that district are brought in at great expense and great inconvenience, for the most part in scows, involving a portage of 25 miles across the neck of land between Vermillion waters and Rainy Lake. As to how best to overcome these rapids, I do not think the engineers have agreed. One possible way would be to erect a dam, which would give a uniform depth of water of 7 feet from the foot of the Sault to Fort Frances locks, but would cost about $225,000. Another plan would be to remove the obstructions, but the opinion prevails that, apart from the expense, such a proceeding would have the effect of facilitating the flow of water and rendering the stream not navigable at all. At present vessels are wharfed up the river, past these rapids, where the Government has constructed piers. The vessels are dragged up with a great deal of toil and trouble, and take the best part of the day to overcome the rapids. Another possible plan would be the erection of wing dams, which is adopted on some rivers. This money will be expended on whatever may be considered the best plan to meet the case.

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend has struggled manfully with generalities, and I admire his skill. I strained my ears to find out what was the plan on which this money is to be expended, but could not, and I do not suppose that either my hon. friend or the department knows. If there is any idea of spending $200,000 or $250,000 to overcome these difficulties of navigation, that will be an expenditure which I do not think could be justified. There is no sensible man who lives there who would think of asking for an expenditure to that extent, because when the railway is built it will go right through the whole of that agricultural section, and take a large part of the traffic, but these little river boats can stop anywhere at the bank, wherever there is a basket or barrel to put on and do a peddling business for the farmers that front on the river. Did I understand the hon. gentleman to say that there was an idea of utilizing Fort Frances Canal ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I did not refer to that.

Mr. FOSTER. Of course, that would only be possible by a large expenditure, but when you would have it done you would find there is absolutely no traffic for it nor will there ever be any. What can be done and what is best to do, to overcome these two rapids, would be to erect a wing dam and try and raise the volume of water somewhat. Even then, it is difficult to say whether that would be sufficient, because the larger volume of water that runs over, the greater power it will have against the vessel going up. But that seems about the only thing that will help. It does not take long to get over the rapids. You can warp over them in an hour or an hour and a half. There is one feature about it that, probably, the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton) would be very loath to have interferred with if he knew of it. The ropes for warping the vessel over the rapids are taken to the pier and put around a post by Indians. It is a very pleasing exhibition to see the Indians trooping to the spot ready to get hold of the rope, for which they always get a bag of flour as the vessel goes past. It would be a painful thing to the Minister, no doubt, to have that taken away, but if we could secure a great improvement in navigation, perhaps we could compensate the Indians in some other way.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Government has not been committed to this proposition. But vessel men give the advice that my hon. friend refers to, and the advice has been used with success in other rivers, notably the Rhine.

To pay salary and expenses of experts to gather information and prepare a uniform code of rules and regulations for the railways of Canada..... $2,000

Mr. FOSTER. Is that necessary now ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The Minister of Railways and Canals had included in a Bill a clause which would give power in relation to this. We have dropped that clause, but I think the desirability of collecting the information still exists, and hope that the House will vote this item.

Mr. HAGGART. It is the same as in the classification of freight. The proper way is to have the representative of the Government and the great railway companies meet and draw up, by mutual consent, a system of rules and regulations. There is no necessity to get experts for this purpose.

St. Andrew's Rapids—

Red River ..... $150,000

Mr. FOSTER. Let us have an explanation of what is to be done.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. This is to make a canal in the Red River, some miles below Winnipeg, for the purpose of permitting the continuous navigation from Lake Winnipeg to the city of Winnipeg. A portion of the river is somewhat shallow and at low water the river is not navigable. This improvement will be a great advantage to commerce. The matter is one which has been agitated for many years, and has been brought before successive Ministers and Governments. It was several times brought before the late Government, but, until 1896, that Government never signified any intention of doing anything with it, though, from time to time, it was under consideration. The necessity of the work was brought to the attention of the Minister of Public Works in the year 1896, and he made a personal inspection of the work, and also sent an engineer to make an inspection. It was afterwards examined by an officer of the department and the plans and specifications were prepared. The estimate of the work is about $650,000. It will, when completed, afford seven feet of water from the mouth of the pier to the city of Winnipeg. I may say that Sir Charles Tupper, when in the city of Winnipeg, declared his intention of proceeding with this work. I do not give this as a justification for the work, if it is not otherwise justifiable, but state it as the position taken by the late Government. This facility to commerce will conduce very materially to the trade of Winnipeg and the surrounding district. Lake Winnipeg has a length of forty miles, and there is at present a very considerable trade done upon that lake ; and a very much larger trade will be done when navigation is continuous to the city of Winnipeg.

Mr. FOSTER.

Mr. DAVIN. Before the item passes, I desire to express my great pleasure in seeing this amount in the Estimates this year. The leader of the Opposition had promised these great improvements to the people of Manitoba ; and if that Government had been sustained at the polls, long before this, this work would have been done. I am very glad to see the work here now.

To defray the expense of procuring the attendance of witnesses in inquiries before Railway Committee of the Privy Council into charges of discrimination in rates by railway companies..... $2,000

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Sir Richard Cartwright). I explained to the House, when the main Estimates were before us, that I expected to have to pay this additional $1,000. We got the service a little cheaper one year, but on asking for tenders again, we are obliged to pay the usual amount, to make up which this $1,000 is necessary.

Steam communication during the season of 1899, i.e., from the opening to the closing of navigation between Pictou and Cheticamp ..... $2,000

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. This is the vote that usually appeared in the main Estimates for a number of years.

Steam communication from April 1, 1899, to March 31, 1900, daily between Port Mulgrave, Arichat and Canso ; three times a week between Port Mulgrave and Guysboro', and from the opening of navigation in 1899 to Nov. 30, 1899 ; twice a week between Port Mulgrave and Port Hood, such trips to be extended once a week to Margaree and Cheticamp ..... $8,000

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. This is also a vote which usually appeared in the main Estimates, but was held over for some slight alterations.

Mr. FOSTER. What changes have been made in the running ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Very little, except that, I think, some alterations have been made in the extension of the trips to Margaree and to Cheticamp. I wish to alter the wording. It is provided here "from the opening of navigation in 1899 to November 30th, 1899." I wish it to read "from the opening of navigation in 1899 to the close." Sometimes the season extends beyond the 30th of November, and we wish to give the people the benefit of it.

Mr. HAGGART. Does not the hon. Minister intend to drop that soon? When we built that Cape Breton road it was understood that these subsidies should be dropped.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. The people there object strongly to dropping this.

Mr. HAGGART. I am confident that this is one that was to be dropped.

Steam communication from July 1st, 1899, to June 30th, 1900, between Quebec and Gaspé Basin, touching at intermediate ports ..... $2,500

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. This, I may explain, is an additional vote to the $5,000 taken in the main Estimates. We were unable, on tendering, to obtain a single offer which was not in excess of the sum already asked. For $7,500 we can get this service done, but not for less.

Mr. FOSTER. How often are the trips ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Three round trips per month. The boat is the "London," of the North American Company. The hon. gentleman is aware, I suppose, that this is the only means of communication the people of that peninsula have got.

Mr. BERGERON. If the hon. gentleman means during the summer, the "Admiral," I believe, goes there.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. No, it does not call at any of these small ports.

The PRIME MINISTER. The service the "Admiral" performs is on the Baie des Chaleurs, from Dalhousie to Gaspé. This is a line of steamers serving the north shore of the St. Lawrence.

Mr. BERGERON. The "Campana," of the Quebec Steamship Company, passes there every week.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. This vessel will make three round trips each month, calling at probably some 25 or 30 places which are not served by the "Admiral."

Steam communication between Halifax, N.S., and the Island of Porto Rico..... $8,000

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. This is a service which has been earnestly petitioned for by a number of gentlemen in the maritime provinces, in the hope of securing and regaining a portion of the trade which subsists between those provinces and Porto Rico. As the hon. gentleman knows, the coast trade there has been kept open for us by the efforts of the English Government, and if it is to be done we must have a service there. The most we expect to get will be eight trips a year.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I may add that the trade of Porto Rico with the maritime provinces has always been considerable, but owing to the new conditions arising out of the Spanish war, there is considerable anxiety lest that volume of trade may be reduced if not destroyed, and the people down in that section have been talking about steamship communication. Two parties approached the Government. One of them wished to contract for several years at a much larger sum, according to my recollection it was $24,000 a year; the other party was willing to give us an experimental service, eight trips at $1,000 each. The Government decided that the experiment was worth making. The gentleman who made the offer was Mr. J. T. Hamilton, mayor of Halifax, with whom a number of other gentlemen are associated. This is only an experiment, and the amount is not very large. We thought, in the interest of the West India trade, particularly in its present fitful condition, the effort was worth making.

Steam communication between Murray Bay and River Ouelle ..... $5,000

Mr. BERGERON. We want full explanations of that.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend knows that the county of Charlevoix is a judicial district, the chef-lieu of which is at Murray Bay. In the summer time there is good communication between Murray Bay and all parts of the country, but in the winter time Murray Bay and the county of Charlevoix are absolutely cut out from communication by water as well as by rail. There is no railway nearer than 60 miles at least to Murray Bay. Therefore, the object of this vote is to give them steam communication in winter with River Ouelle. It is intended that there shall be six trips a week. River Ouelle is almost exactly opposite Murray Bay, the width of the river at that place is at least 45 miles.

Mr. BERGERON. When this communication is established it will no longer be necessary to carry the mails by land as before. Why not use the money we are voting to carry the mails from that part to River Ouelle where they strike the Intercolonial Railway?

The PRIME MINISTER. That is a suggestion which is worthy of consideration, and which can be embodied in the contract.

Mr. BERGERON. This will afford a great deal better communication than we have now. The parishes nine miles above Murray Bay and the parishes around and below, will be better served by this boat than by land.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. We take power in our contracts to use the service for mails.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the population of Murray Bay in winter?

The PRIME MINISTER. I will not say of the hamlet itself, but the population of the parish of Murray Bay must be three or four thousand.

Mr. BERGERON. I know of a case where a judge in that district I think has taken 10 days to go from one place to another in winter. No doubt this is needed.

The PRIME MINISTER. I may say that this is an experiment which was attempted some years ago, I think between 1879 and 1882, but it did not succeed. My hon. friend knows that we are putting a permanent light at the Traverse, and I think it will be possible to have navigation all the year around with the aid of that light.

Mr. FOSTER. This is an extension of the bonusing system which is entirely new. My hon. friend knows of one instance, a long while ago, which was not a success. This means that we are going to establish a system of bonusing ferries to run from one side to the other in the winter season.

The PRIME MINISTER. These are very exceptional circumstances. As to the width I was in error. I understand it is thirty miles.

Mr. HAGGART. Does the right hon. gentleman think he can possibly run a ferry from Murray Bay to Rivière Ouelle in winter time. I am afraid he will find that he will require a steamer like that plying between Prince Edward Island and the mainland to go through the ice, and that the expenditure will be enormous in order to succeed.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend may be right or he may be wrong. At all events, we do not intend to give more than this item. The money will be available, and if we find that it cannot be done with the money we will have to drop it. As to the character of the ice in the St. Lawrence, my hon. friend is entirely mistaken. The ice is moved from one side of the river to the other, and it will not offer as great an obstruction as the hon. gentleman thinks. The difficulty before was that there were no lights, but with the help of the new light that we are providing we hope that this service will be a success.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the provincial government give any aid to it?

The PRIME MINISTER. No.

Mr. FOSTER. Ferries in the provinces are under the provincial governments. Are we going to undertake to go into the subsidizing of ferries. It may be very grateful to the gentleman who represents or wants to represent, a strip of territory on each side of the river, but my right hon. friend will see that the step he is taking will go forward, and it must simply be that you are undertaking a system of bonusing ferries in the different provinces.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend is mistaken. This is a case that is absolutely exceptional.

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to ask the right hon. gentleman if he has any information to communicate to the committee respecting the progress of the negotiations for the fast Atlantic steamship line. It has been repeated from time to time that negotiations are in progress between the Government and the Canadian Pacific Railway looking to the establishment of a fast line by that company. Is the right hon. gentleman in a position to say how far these negotiations have proceeded?

The PRIME MINISTER. I am sorry to say that I cannot give any information today to my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke).

Mr. FOSTER. How many trips has this boat to make?

The PRIME MINISTER. Six trips a week.

Mr. FOSTER. What vessel is going to get it?

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not know yet. It will be a passenger steamboat.

Mr. MORIN. Will the right hon. First Minister say whether the mail carrier will be paid by the month, or season, or trip, for crossing?

The PRIME MINISTER. We will give $5,000 a year for the service.

Mr. MORIN. I would suggest that the Government pay by the trip, because if they know that they will get a certain amount for the year, they will not make a trip every day, whereas, if they are paid by the trip they will carry out the arrangement. I know that country well, and I know the difficulty that will be experienced in crossing the river during the winter on account of ice. Even between Baie St. Paul and Isle au Coudre, which is only two miles across, the ice packs to such an extent in the winter time that people have to cross on snowshoes. It is impossible to establish a ferry route between Murray Bay and Rivière Ouelle.

The PRIME MINISTER. We will see whether it is a success or not.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the suggestion of my hon. friend (Mr. Morin) is an eminently wise one—divide your trips into 5,000 and pay so much a trip.

The PRIME MINISTER. The rule of the department, when they bargain for a certain number of trips is that they are paid for by the trip.

Mr. MORIN. It does not make any difference about the bargain.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. It makes a good deal of difference.

Mr. FOSTER. Is this service to be done by tender ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes.

Revote being part of construction cost to pay fifth instalment on new steamer "Minto" ..... $42,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is the total cost of the "Minto" ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. With extras, including Capt. McElhinney's expenses and the furnishings, $185,368, $5,000 more than the vote.

Removal of old piers in Bear River, Digby County, N.S. .... $1,000

Mr. BERGERON. My hon. friend from Annapolis (Mr. Mills), before he left to-day, desired me to say that he was very glad to see this amount of money placed in the Estimates. It is most important that these piers should be removed. But he expressed the desire that the Government should take into consideration damages which have been claimed for three or four years by Capt. Norman Chute. His vessel was damaged by one of these piers which the Government find that they were morally obliged to remove. I mention the fact now because I am inclined to believe that my hon. friend will bring the matter up later. He asked me to mention the matter to the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries and to express his belief that, since money is to be expended upon this work, there should have been embodied in the vote, at the same time, what would have been compensation to Capt. Chute for the loss he has sustained. It will be a small amount for the Government, compared to the loss of that man, which would be about $1,000.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not know anything of the facts, and I would not express an opinion which might commit the department.

Mr. BERGERON. Then, my hon. friend has not received any claim ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, I am perfectly ignorant of the matter.

Further amount required for the construction of a permanent pier and lighthouse at the Traverse, to replace lightship..... $20,000

Mr. FOSTER. Would my hon. friend tell me whether that cribwork has been started from Quebec to Traverse ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It has started out from Quebec, and I am very happy to tell the hon. gentleman that its transfer was, very fortunately, a complete success. I have the report of Mr. Anderson in my hands. I think it was on the 3rd of July, but at all events it was in the first week in July. He wrote the report on the 5th, saying that he had got the cribwork down, and described how it had been transferred, giving the number of steamers employed to tow it and telling how it was put in its place, as well as the expense up to that time.

Mr. FOSTER. Was it on the 3rd of July ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The 2nd or 3rd of July. It was in the first week of July. On the 5th of July he reported that it was in place.

Mr. FOSTER. Did they have any difficulty in putting it in its place ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, a good deal. There was very stormy weather at first ; but they took advantage of a lull between two heavy blows, and, having five steamers, they loaded it down with stone and got it sunk exactly in position. Col. Anderson was there himself from day to day. It held until the tide came, when it rose 8 feet ; but, having other batteaux loaded with stone, they threw in stone until the pier was permanently fixed. The fixing of it was a complete success.

Mr. FOSTER. What was the cost ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Up to that time, $19,329.

Mr. DAVIN. I would like to ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries whether his department has finally shut down on all inquiries respecting Hudson Bay ? Has the report which was given of the very ineffective exploration that was made, finished the matter with the Government ? I see no signs of any activity of any sort respecting this much-needed route. In all the subsidies I seen nothing that looks in that direction. It seems as if the department of my hon. friend, since that report, had gone to sleep.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not quite understand what my hon. friend is driving at. There is nothing in the estimates before us with reference to Hudson Bay. The report was brought down last year, and my hon. friend had an opportunity to study it. I have not heard any one in this House this session to intimate that he desired any discussion in regard to it. If my hon. friend had given me the slightest notion of his desire to discuss the matter, I would have posted myself. The hon. gentleman knows what the report was. So far as the bay is concerned, there is not much controversy, because the bay itself is capable of navigation every month in the year; but the great question was in regard to the straits.

To assist in the establishment, maintenance and inspection of cold storage for bait for deep-sea fishermen, under conditions to be fixed by the Department of Marine and Fisheries..... $25,000

Mr. MARTIN. Where will this expenditure be made?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This vote is asked for from Parliament to endeavour to meet a danger, which is increasing every year, respecting the bait required by our fishermen for deep-sea fishing. The matter has engaged the attention of the department for some years. In 1893 some reports were made by Commander Gordon, who made an investigation into the subject, on the request of the then Minister of Marine and Fisheries. He reported the necessity of providing fresh bait in some way or other; but what was known on the subject of cold storage was crude, compared to what is known to-day. Since then we have applied cold storage to agricultural products, and the same principle has been applied commercially by merchants engaged in the fishing business, for the purpose of transporting fish to where they are consumed, and not only the fish of Lake Winnipeg and the other lakes in the Northwest Territories, but also the fish of the maritime provinces. The department does not in any way contemplate touching the commercial aspect of the case. This vote has nothing to do with the cold storage of fish taken for sale or transportation. It simply has to do with the question of bait. This question of bait is becoming from year to year a very serious one. Very many of our fishermen in the maritime provinces depend largely on the bait they get from Newfoundland; but the Newfoundland Government, having come to the conclusion that it was not in the interest of their people to permit fish to be exported for any other purpose than for food, our fishermen are now precluded from getting bait there. In the spring of the year nature furnishes the maritime provinces bountifully with bait, which fill our rivers, and bays, and creeks; and our fishermen along the coast take them in very large quantities. During the time these small fish last, the fishermen are amply supplied with bait. But the question is, how are they going to get fresh bait in the summer season, after the run of small fish goes by? We think that trouble will be solved, if the fishermen can be induced to build small cold-storage buildings, where the same plan which has been so successful in regard to agricultural products, can be applied in regard to bait. It is proposed that our officials should visit the different localities and inform the fishermen of the necessity of co-operation, that is, that in every small village or settlement the fishermen should have pointed out to them the easy means at their disposal, not only of getting bait in ample quantities in the spring, but of keeping it fresh through the summer months by means of cold storage bait houses. These would be built on somewhat the same lines as those on which farmers have built their cheese factories. There should be so many fishermen partners in the association, and the building put up by them under their control and under the supervision of an officer of the department. It is proposed that the department should offer some inducement to the fishermen to form themselves into these associations, and the intention is that the Government shall pay one-half the original cost of the building, and also that a very small assistance should be given for the purpose of running each factory, amounting to about $50 per year, for a period of not more than three years. After going into the matter thoroughly with Prof. Robertson, we concluded that the only mode of assisting the fishermen is in the direction I have indicated. He is of the opinion, in which Prof. Prince concurs, that these buildings could be put up at a cost of from $500 to $600 each, and the Government would contribute to the extent of 50 per cent of that cost. These buildings would be 150 feet square, with a floor ten by fifteen, and would be capable of holding, say, ten tons of fish. The ice part of the building would have to be about 200 square feet, and be 15 by 18, and the building would be about 9 feet high, so that the entire building would be 9 feet high, 15 feet wide, and 30 feet long, and would cost on an average, according to Prof. Robertson, 15 to 20 cents per cubic foot. The inspector would submit plans, and from time to time inspect each building as it was being constructed, and one member of the association would have to be appointed to receive the bait and deliver it. If fifty freezers should be erected, the Government contribution would come about to $12,500, and the expenses connected with the inspection and with the actual working operation of the bait freezers would largely increase that amount.

Mr. DAVIN.

Mr. MARTIN. Has the hon. Minister any idea where those are to be erected?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. They will be erected wherever associations are formed for their erection.

Mr. MARTIN. Are they to be for the exclusive benefit of the deep sea fishermen?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Any fishermen.

Mr. MARTIN. Then, why use the words "deep sea fishermen"?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Because we do not want this to apply to any other.

Mr. MARTIN. You do not apply it to any but deep sea fishermen?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) In the case of parties who have started institutions of this kind, will they be considered as well as those who propose to start such institutions?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have considered that point. Individuals have started commercial institutions for the purpose primarily of freezing fish for sale, and attached to that they also have appliances for the freezing of bait. But they are not associations of fishermen to which only this is intended to apply. They are simply commercial institutions, built by private parties for their own personal benefit. Of course, where there is any such institution we will not encourage the building of a cold storage bait house in opposition to it.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) The hon. Minister made reference to Captain Gordon, who was a very efficient officer, and I may say that I myself brought the matter under his notice, and like the intelligent man he was he agreed that if such a thing could be done, it would be a step in the right direction. What the Minister says is correct; early in the season we have an abundance of bait, but as the season advances, the bait goes off the shore, and, for want of bait, the fishermen cannot make a catch. I am much in favour of anything of this kind, as it will be a benefit to the fishermen. I suggest the advisability of not losing any time inaugurating the system.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am only waiting for the vote to pass.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) Time is required to organize the system, and the fishermen require to know beforehand in order to arrange for the construction of buildings and to be ready, when the winter comes to lay in their ice. Private enterprise has gone into this matter in some sections of the province of Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia. Particularly is this the case in Canso, where it has been gone into quite extensively. If it is put fairly before the fishermen, they will be inclined to go into it much as the farmers have gone into the cheese business. It will not require a great deal of money, but it is well that the Government should give assistance in starting it. It is one of those things that only require to be started and there will be little trouble about it. I heartily commend the Minister for taking this matter up. It is a step in the right direction.

Mr. McALISTER. The item respecting fish hatcheries escaped my notice. If I may be allowed, I would like to ask the Minister if steps have been taken to erect a fish hatchery at Restigouche?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Within the last week, I received notice that our fish hatchery at Restigouche had been burnt down—the work, my officers report, of an incendiary. I have arranged with my deputy that instructions are to be sent—and I suppose they have been sent—to Professor Prince, who is at present engaged in the biological fish observatory at St. Andrews to proceed to the spot, investigate the case, and, if possible, ascertain who was the culprit and place his prosecution in the hands of the officers of the law, and also to take immediate steps for the reconstruction of the building. Until I have his report, I cannot do more.

Mr. McALISTER. It might be worth while to examine the situation.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I omitted to say—and perhaps my hon. friend (Mr. McAlister) will allow me—I gave express instructions to examine the conditions of the locality to see whether the fish hatchery should be rebuilt in that locality or in some other.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) Is there any intention to have fish hatcheries around Prince Edward Island for the propagation of the lobster?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Not at present. The fish hatchery at Pictou supplies the wants of the Island as well as if it were situated on the Island. It is in contemplation to combine at Gaspé the salmon and lobster hatchery together, so that we may have one on the east and one on the west.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) Are the young lobster fry put in the water on the coast of the Island?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, they are put in about 10 miles outside of Pictou.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) Would it not be better to place them somewhat further from the hatchery—along the coast of the bays of Prince Edward Island the natural home of the lobster?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No; I have consulted Mr. Ogden who has had charge of the hatchery since it was built, and it is his opinion—concurring in by Prof. Prince that the best place to deposit the lobster fry is in the centre of the Straits. The main object is to disperse them so that the natural enemies may not devour them. The more and quicker they are dispersed by wind and tide the better. They remain at the surface for six or eight days, when, as they develop, they drop to the bottom.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) Without pretending to be an expert, I must say that that is rather contrary to what I should suppose, because it is well known that the lobsters come into the shallow water for the purpose of depositing their spawn. I should think, therefore, that the shallow water, particularly in Sandy Bay, would be the natural home of the young fry.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am very anxious for information, and would be glad to know if the hon. gentleman (Mr. Macdonald, P.E.I.) is sure that the lobsters go into the shallow water to deposit their eggs? I do not think that has been proved.

Amount required to pay Mr. Charles Bremner, of Bresaylor, for value of furs entrusted by him to Dominion Government authorities at Battleford on the 26th May, 1885, and never returned to him ..... $5,364 50

The PRIME MINISTER. This is a very old claim, going back to the year 1885. In 1890, Charles Bremner presented a petition to this House, and on the presentation of that petition a committee of the House was appointed to investigate it. That committee was composed of Messrs. McNeill, Chairman, Tisdale, Wood (Westmoreland), Girouard, Weldon (St. John), Casgrain, Holton, Lister and Kirkpatrick. They reported unanimously in this way:

The Select Committee appointed to inquire into the statements made in reference to furs taken from Charles Bremner, a half-breed, residing at Battleford, beg leave to report unanimously:

1. That during the North-west rebellion of 1885, and on the day of the surrender of the Indian chief, Poundmaker, who had been in arms against the Government of Canada, a number of half-breeds came into Battleford, among whom was Charles Bremner, a half-breed trader and farmer, a resident of Bresaylor, 22 miles from Battleford, having in his possession a large quantity of valuable furs.

2. General Middleton being in command of the Canadian forces engaged in the suppression of the rebellion, and being in Battleford, and having information that these half-breeds had come in from Poundmaker's camp, and that the furs being carried, gave orders that they should be put in charge of the Dominion Mounted Police, and they were accordingly placed in the police barracks at Battleford for safe-keeping.

3. Some weeks later, while General Middleton was at Fort Pitt, Mr. Hayter Reed (a member of his staff), who had then just returned from Battleford, called attention to the furs, and reminded General Middleton that the person from whom they had been taken was said to be a rebel. Thereupon, after consultation with Mr. Reed and Mr. Bedson (another member of his staff), General Middleton assumed to confiscate the furs.

4. At the time of the confiscation General Middleton directed Mr. Reed to send an order in writing to the police officer at Battleford who had charge of the furs. The exact wording of this order cannot be clearly established, as it was destroyed a few days after it was written. But it is proved to have been of the following tenor:—

That General Middleton had confiscated the furs, and had ordered that two packages of them should be put up for himself, one for Mr. Hayter Reed, one for Mr. Bedson, and one for another member of his staff, selecting the best; and that receipts should be taken for, or a memorandum made of, the furs thus distributed.

5. Packages were put up in conformity with this order—two for General Middleton, one for Mr. Hayter Reed, and one for Mr. Bedson. The furs thus put up were in quantity about one-eighth of the whole, but of much larger proportionate value.

6. It has been proved before your committee that the furs put up for General Middleton and Mr. Bedson were placed on board the steamer which conveyed General Middleton and Mr. Bedson from Battleford to Winnipeg. But it would appear that Mr. Bedson, who had promised to give a receipt for the furs, refused to do so, alleging that they had not reached Winnipeg; and your committee find that the packages of furs so shipped for General Middleton were not received by him.

7. The furs put up by Mr. Hayter Reed were forwarded to Regina and received by him there. He subsequently returned the package unopened to the police authorities at Battleford, alleging as his reason for so doing that the propriety of the confiscation was questioned.

8. Your committee consider the confiscation of the furs unwarrantable and illegal; and in his evidence General Middleton admits that he has recently become satisfied it was not legally justifiable. Your committee are further of opinion that, if the confiscation had been legal, the confiscated property vested in the Crown; and, while your committee believe that General Middleton acted under an unfortunate misconception as to his powers, they are of opinion that the appropriation of any portion of the property, under such circumstances, by General Middleton to his own use, and that of the members of his staff, was highly improper.

9. On behalf of Bremner it was stated to your committee that he was willing to accept $4,500, inclusive of interest, in compensation for his loss, and this your committee consider a fair compensation.

This is the basis of the vote we now ask from Parliament.

Mr. FOSTER. What was the action of the House on that?

The PRIME MINISTER. No action was taken. That was the unanimous report of the committee.

Mr. HAGGART. Was it not referred to a commission appointed for the purpose of inquiring into the North-west rebellion claims ?

The PRIME MINISTER. No. A commission was appointed to investigate the losses suffered from the rebellion, but they did not inquire into this matter at all. The furs were confiscated on the pretext that Bremner was a rebel. Now, this was altogether disproved before the committee, at least the proof was made somewhere that he was not a rebel. Bremner was a trader in furs. He had spent all the winter in the north, trading with the Indians, and was coming back home with a package of furs valued at $20,000 or over. He fell in with the camp of Poundmaker, and, being found with him, was taken to be a rebel. But it was obvious that a man who had spent all winter trading with the Indians, and had come back home with such a valuable supply of furs, would not take any part in the rebellion.

Mr. FOSTER. It is unfortunate that this comes at a time when we cannot look into it. The only thing I know about it is that report of the committee.

To make good to persons in Prince Edward Island amount of duties paid to the United States customs on fish and fish oil, being amount paid by Messrs. Hall & Myrick..... $15,029

Mr. FOSTER. I hope my hon. friend will not push that at this time of the session. I think that might well go over to another year.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I think I can convince the hon. gentleman that it should be paid, at least it must be disposed of one way or the other. Parliament has already settled the principles connected with the payment of these claims. The facts out of which they arise, are these : Some years ago the American Government applied to the Dominion Government and to the Prince Edward Island Government, then separate, for liberty to use the waters surrounding the shores of the Dominion and the Island, pending certain negotiations which were then going forward for a settlement of the fishery question. The Home Government wrote a despatch to the Dominion Government, and a separate despatch to the Island Government, strongly urging them to accede to the wishes of the American Government, the American Government expressing at the same time their desire, not only to obtain these privileges, but promising that if they were given, they would urge upon Congress, at the end of the session, the remission of the duties which were then charged upon Canadian fish exported to the United States. The Prince Edward Island Government, at the instance of the Imperial Government, accepted the offer made by the United States Government, or the offer supposed to be made by the United States Government. The Dominion Government at that time did not accept that offer, and the American fishermen used the waters surrounding the province of Prince Edward Island during those years before the Washington Treaty came into force, irrespective of the restrictions contained in the old Treaty of 1818, and used them at the request of the Imperial Government, conveyed in consequence of the application made by the American Government to them. They could not use the waters of the rest of the Dominion, because the Dominion would not accept the offer. Now, the merchants in Prince Edward Island, assuming they would get, in pursuance of the promise made by the American Government, a return of the duties, went on purchasing fish which was caught that year, for export, and paying a price for it to the fishermen on the assumption that they would get a refund of the duty. As the season went on, disquieting rumours were circulated, to the effect that there was a doubt whether they would get that duty refunded to them ; and Messrs. Hall & Myrick addressed an official communication to the Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island, calling his attention to these disquieting rumours, and asking whether there was anything in them, and whether they would be safe in going on and purchasing fish on the assumption that these duties would be refunded to them. The Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island replied to Messrs. Hall & Myrick's application officially, one paragraph of which reply I will read.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the date of that ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. September 9th, 1871 :

The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that your apprehensions are unfounded. An arrangement, sanctioned by Her Majesty's Government, has been entered into between the Governments of the United States and Prince Edward Island ; and the Lieutenant-Governor does not apprehend that the action of Canada, in withholding her assent from a similar arrangement, will be attended with the prejudicial result which you have recently been led to anticipate.

With this official statement from the Lieutenant-Governor that there need not be any fear, that their apprehension was unfounded, that the agreement would be carried out, that they would have the moneys refunded to them—

Mr. FOSTER. It does not go that far.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I think so. The Lieutenant-Governor says that he thinks their apprehension unfounded; that, inasmuch as Canada did not join in the agreement with the United States and would not carry it out, therefore, they would not get a refund of the duties. That is the official way of saying that there were no grounds for their fears at all, in the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion. Coming from the source it did, this document was published in all the Island papers, and all those engaged in commercial pursuits in Prince Edward Island, and in the fishing business, acted upon it in good faith, purchasing fish on the assumption that they would get a refund of the duties. At the end of the year they were notified that they would not get a return of the duties, because Canada had not become a party to the arrangement. The proposition that was made by the United States was made on their part on the assumption that Canada would respond. Inasmuch as only a small part of Canada, namely, Prince Edward Island, had responded, they were not disposed to carry out the arrangement. Time went on and an arbitration was held at Halifax to determine the amount which should be paid by the Americans for the user of our waters between 1873 and 1886. Before the commissioner appointed on behalf of Canada came these gentlemen to press for a refund of this money upon the commissioners. The commissioner pointed out that it was not possible to press it upon the commission, because it did not come within the purview of the reference, and it would have to be claimed diplomatically through the respective Governments. It was not submitted to the commission, and they afterwards came to the Dominion Government. The Dominion Government, in 1883, agreed to indemnify those claimants who were British subjects for the moneys which they had outlaid. A vote was brought down containing lengthy reasons why they should have this money, and Sir John Macdonald said: We have received $5,000,000 from the Americans for the use of these fisheries, and although strictly and technically speaking, the damages which these people have incurred should not be considered to form a part of the award, still we have received it, and in equity it may be said that we can afford to be generous and to pay out of this award the money—

Mr. FOSTER. As a matter of grace to our own citizens.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes. Then I asked for the names of the parties who were to be paid. Sir Leonard Tilley, who was Finance Minister, gave the names, among which were those of Hall, Myrick & Co., and two or three others. I asked him expressly and specifically whether they were to be paid, and as a result of the discussion which took place in 1883 the vote was withdrawn. In 1884 a vote was again brought down, and the discussion which took place resulted in the

Sir LOUIS DAVIES.

Government refusing to give any statement that Hall, Myrick & Co. and H. M. Churchill, who had incurred these losses, would be paid.

Mr. FOSTER. They were both United States citizens.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Technically they were citizens of the United States, but they were men who had lived in Prince Edward Island, who had conducted their business in Prince Edward Island, and whose employees were all British subjects. They were merely the conduit pipes through which the actual fishermen sell their fish to the United States. They were agents for the fishermen.

Mr. FOSTER. They were more than conduits; there was a certain amount of precipitation in the process.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Hall & Myrick claimed the indemnity that was paid to British subjects in Prince Edward Island. In 1884, that vote was again asked by Sir John Macdonald, and he was again pressed to state to whom this money was to be paid. He said he would appoint a commissioner. I thought it was a very proper proposal that a commissioner should be appointed. Mr. Justice Fitzgerald was appointed a commissioner, and he went into all the claims, which amounted to $54,000. Mr. Fitzgerald held court in different places, received evidence and made a report to the Government as to the claims that should be paid and those that should not be paid. In regard to the claim of $20,000 made by Hall, Myrick & Co., he reported in favour of allowing $15,029. His report went on to say:

Some of the merchants, previous to the inquiry, opened their books of account to the fishermen for examination that they might obtain information as to the quantity of fish sold and the price received. Notable among these gentlemen was Mr. Myrick, of the late firm of Hall, Myrick & Co., who kept his book-keepers in constant attendance at the court of inquiry to afford this information. But, unfortunately, the books of this firm, in Queen's County, entirely, and in King's County, partly, were consumed by fire some years ago.

Other merchants refused to do this, and only after the fishermen had given their testimony was this information given to the court.

If to this amount is added—

That is the $24,120.63 to other parties.

If to this amount is added the claim of C. C. Carleton and of Messrs. Hall & Myrick, as found by me to be correct, viz., the sums of $208.50 and $15,029 respectively, it will appear that a total amount of $54,213.15 will pay off every legitimate claim brought before me—for both years, as in 1872, by the express declaration of Mr. Myrick, his firm can have no claim for that year.

If, without exceeding my duty, I may recommend this full settlement, it is only done, bearing in mind the fact that with the last-named claimants have been doing business in this province for many years, and that the large business done by Messrs. Hall & Myrick, now extending over some thirty years, has greatly stimulated the industries of the province, and that, though American citizens, their citizenship has in no way affected their commercial relationship with its people.

The matter went on, and when Mr. Fitzgerald's report came down, a vote was brought down to the House for $38,086.34. The matter simmered, and in 1885 and in 1886 constant demands were made by Hall, Myrick & Co., Churchill and Carleton, to the Government for recognition of their claims in the same manner as Parliament had recognized other claims. In 1887, the then Government came down to Parliament with a vote of $10,200 for the payment of all the other claims, including the claim of H. M. Churchill. I asked why the claim of Messrs. Hall & Myrick was made an exception, and Sir John Macdonald's answer was that we would deal with that claim when it came before us. There is no doubt that Parliament took a generous view of the matter when they paid the other claims; and the view that Parliament took can be defended. In view of the fact that we received such a large amount for the fishery award, it was only right that these people, who had suffered so severely in the pocket by reason of the failure of the American Government to carry out their obligations, should be reimbursed for their losses. Be that as it may, Parliament voted the money to all the other claimants except Messrs. Hall & Myrick. The matter remained in abeyance until the present Government came into power, when a memorial was submitted to them by Messrs. Hall & Myrick. It was referred to a committee of Council. I think the Minister of Trade and Commerce, the Minister of Finance, and the Prime Minister were members of that committee. After listening to all the facts, we determined that there was no ground for refusing payment to these men in view of the fact that all the others had been paid. No interest was added because it was not a debt on which interest would accrue; but Parliament, out of its generosity, was to indemnify them for the loss they had sustained. In all the circumstances of the case, I think in equity and justice this is a grant that should be voted by Parliament.

Mr. HAGGART. I know nothing about this case, except what I have learned from the statement made by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries; and if his statement is correct, it seems to me that it is a claim that ought not to be paid by the Parliament of Canada. The hon. gentleman states that under a treaty arrangement made between the Imperial Government and the United States, it was agreed that certain fish products should be taken free into the United States. The Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island, who was an Imperial officer, announced to the inhabitants of that colony that this would be the case. The Imperial authorities have kept faith in the matter. The United States authorities said: "No; as the whole of Canada did not come into the arrangement, we will not continue it with Prince Edward Island." Then, it became a question of grace with the people of Prince Edward Island and the people of Canada. It was only a question of faith, which could only be applied to British subjects. Why should they indemnify the inhabitants of the United States or the subjects of a foreign Government, because that Government did not keep faith with the Imperial authorities? To me it is the most ridiculous proposition in the world.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Why did you do it in 1887, then?

Mr. HAGGART. I have no evidence of our doing it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The evidence is before us. Here is the item:

To make good to persons in Prince Edward Island amount of duties paid the United States customs on fish and fish oil, including amount paid by H. M. Churchill.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) Mr. Churchill was naturalized.

Mr. HAGGART. I am taking the report of Mr. Fitzgerald, the officer who reported on the claims, and he reported that Hall & Myrick were American citizens.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Mr. Churchill was an American citizen when he was paid the money?

Mr. FOSTER. No, you are mistaken in that.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, I am not. He was an American citizen in 1871 and until 1884; and for the purpose of getting this payment, he went into court and became naturalized a day or two before it was paid. The right of all these men to be paid was discussed and settled by Parliament in 1887, and it would be a most monstrous thing to refuse to pay Hall & Myrick after having paid the others. I admit that there would be good argument for not doing it in the first place, but Parliament has done it in the other cases.

Mr. HAGGART. I do not know anything of what was done in 1887. I am dealing with the evidence produced by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries before this committee for this payment. The only reason assigned by the judge why these men were not paid was that they were American citizens. Look at the absurdity of the hon. gentleman's claim—that we are to indemnify American citizens for losses sustained in consequence of a customs regulation the control of which was entirely in the hands of the United States Government. To me it is no justification of it to say that Mr. Churchill was also an American citizen. I think it would be monstrous to pay him, even if he did take the oath of allegiance after the losses were incurred.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Were you not a member of the Government when that was brought down?

Mr. HAGGART. I was not in the Government in 1887, and I never heard of it. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries has made no case whatever for his proposition to pay American citizens, because their own Government did not keep faith.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Of course, my hon. friend understands that Hall & Myrick, though not British subjects, have been residents of Prince Edward Island for forty years, and have been carrying on a large business there and employing many British subjects.

Mr. HAGGART. That may be; but the hon. gentleman has made no case at all that would justify this Parliament in paying this claim. At any rate, it was a debt that accrued in Prince Edward Island before confederation. The amount should be charged against the Prince Edward Island government.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That was another point.

Mr. HAGGART. The whole amount should be charged against that Government. It was a debt of that Government to these individuals, if it is a debt at all, and should have been taken into consideration when settling the terms of confederation. The hon. gentleman said it was an account of the handsome award we got in the Washington Treaty that we dealt generously with these people. But we have disposed of that. After all it was a matter of grace that should only apply to our own people, and there can be no justification in applying it to American citizens.

Mr. McLELLAN. To all intents and purposes Mr. Myrick is a British subject, although technically he is not. All his interests are in this country, where he has been doing business the past forty years, and the men employed by him are British subjects. The ex-Minister of Railways is mistaken when he says he is a foreign resident.

Mr. HAGGART. I did not say he was a foreign resident at all. I took the statement from the Minister of Marine, who read the report of Mr. Fitzgerald, who said that Hall & Myrick were American subjects.

Mr. McLELLAN. Yes, but a part of the firm is composed of British subjects, and as pointed out by the hon. Minister of

Mr. HAGGART.

Marine, the firm was led to pay this duty to the fishermen of Prince Edward Island on the understanding that they would be recouped. They had more than one reason to believe that they would. They had, first, the promise of the American Government, which was afterwards violated, and then the assurance of the Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island, which led them to understand that the money paid by them would be refunded. This money was actually paid out by them to the fishermen, and it is only fair that it should be refunded. It is useless now to go into the question as to whether this money should be paid by Prince Edward Island or not, or whether it should be paid at all or not. As a matter of fact, the other shippers in the island were refunded the duties paid by them or such as they could prove before the commissioner they had paid to the fishermen from whom they bought the fish, and Mr. Myrick, who is the largest dealer in fish in the Island, remains to this day unpaid, and there is not the slightest reason why he should not receive the justice dealt out to the other shippers in the Island. As the hon. Minister of Marine has pointed out, an American by the name of Churchill was paid the refund.

Mr. FOSTER. Not when an American subject?

Mr. McLELLAN. It is true, he was not an American subject when he was repaid, but he only came a British subject for the purpose of receiving this money. What difference does it make in justice whether he became a British subject in 1883 or 1884 or not. I do not see any weight in that argument.

Mr. HAGGART. I do not myself.

Mr. McLELLAN. We must bear in mind that this firm proved before the commissioners that they had actually paid this $15,029 to the people from whom they got the fish, and that every cent of it was paid to British subjects, and in all justice, they are entitled to get the money back. They had the word of the Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island as a guarantee that they would be repaid, and I think in all fairness we should put them on an equal basis with those who received the refund years ago.

Mr. MARTIN. I am sorry I cannot agree with my hon. friend. This is a claim which this firm have actually against the United States. As a matter of grace, as the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries has said, British fishermen were paid by the Canadian Government, but I do not think at all that there is any obligation on our part to pay American fishermen. When the hon. gentleman says that we paid one American fisherman, that is not in accordance with the facts. When Mr. Churchill was paid he had become naturalized.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Would that make any difference in the case? The ex-Minister of Railways has just said that it makes no difference, either in justice or equity.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) It is a matter of grace, like the rest.

Mr. MARTIN. Let me quote the language of the hon. Minister himself, which he used in 1883 on the subject. In "Hansard," page 1381, I find that hon. gentleman reported as saying:

Those gentlemen have a good claim against the United States. If an American citizen has a good claim against the United States, that is the place for him to collect it.

Sir Leonard Tilley, on page 1382, said:

American citizens fishing in Canadian waters should not be paid out of the funds of the Dominion, and should look to their own country for payment.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. These men were not fishing in Canadian waters at all.

Mr. MARTIN. I think they were. Sir Charles Tupper drew the distinction very fairly and squarely between the positions of those who were American citizens and those who were British subjects. In 1887, the present Minister of Marine again said:

There was no legal or moral obligation on the part of Canada to pay those men at all.

But because the money was paid to British subjects, as a matter of grace, the hon. gentleman presumes to ask us to pay an American citizen, and an American citizen who went before that Halifax Fishery Commission, as a special witness in the interest of the United States Government to depreciate the value of the fisheries of Canada. I hold in my hand the report of the Halifax Commission of 1877. I find on page 2854, No 71:

Isaac C. Hall, of Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Winthrop, Massachusetts, fish merchant, called on behalf of the Government of the United States, sworn and examined.

The hon. gentleman knows that Mr. Hall was for years the consular agent of the United States, and if he will follow the evidence that Mr. Hall gave, he will see that Mr. Hall tried to depreciate the value of our fisheries.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Nothing of the kind.

Mr. MARTIN. I will read it for the hon. gentleman. Here is the first question asked:

By Mr. Foster:

Q. You are a citizen of the United States?—

A. Yes.

Q. You have a house in Charlottetown?—A. A commercial house.

Q. And you live part of the year at Charlottetown, and part of the year at Winthrop, Massachusetts, near Boston, Suffolk County?—

There is one distinction between Churchill's claim and Hall's claim. Churchill lived in Prince Edward Island.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He lived every winter in Boston.

Mr. MARTIN. The hon. gentleman is by no means correct.

Mr. MACDONALD (P.E.I.) Not every winter.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have known him all my life and he is in the same position as Hall exactly.

Mr. MARTIN. The hon. gentleman says Mr. Hall did not attempt to depreciate the value of the Canadian fisheries. At page 2857 the question is asked and answered as follows:—

Q. As a matter of observation, do they usually fish in as far as the boats do?—A. They don't, they fish further out.

Making it appear that they fished beyond the three-mile limit. Then, the hon. gentleman who was counsel before the commission corrects him in giving his evidence—page 2859:

By Mr. Davies:

Q. I think you are wrong about that year?—A. The catch on the American coast in 1870 was the great catch.

This gentleman, in order to make a case for the country to which he belonged, actually misquoted one year for another. I do not wish to detain the committee, but I think that it is wrong for the hon. gentleman to come before this House with this vote. Some years ago, he stated, dealing with this case before the House, that this man was a strong Liberal, and that, I believe, is the best reason he can give the committee for this vote.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Perhaps that is the reason why he was not bracketed with Churchill in 1887.

Mr. MARTIN. We expected this item in the Estimates last session, at least it was rumoured, because Hall & Myrick exerted themselves for the Liberal party in the by-election in West Prince the vote would be made. That is one of the most forcible arguments that the hon. gentleman could bring forward. But I do hope that a vote which cannot be justified on any good ground, will not be pressed.

Mr. McMULLEN. I have never before heard of this claim, though I have sat in this House for many years. I am not going to challenge the payment of it, if it is an honest claim. It is said that this man is an American citizen, though he has lived in Canada for years. But the fact that he is an American is no reason why he should not be paid anything he is justly entitled to. If the claim is not a just one, it should not be paid on any account. If the claim is justly due by the United States, Canada has no right to pay it. I was not present at the commencement of the explanation by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. But if this man was refused payment of his claim because he was an American citizen, an injustice was done him. He is accused of having given evidence favourable to the United States in the fishery dispute. That is no reason why he should not be paid. I presume the Government have looked into this claim and have come to the conclusion that it is just, and, if it is just, it should be paid.

Mr. SPROULE. I have always looked with suspicion on these old claims. They seem to be brought forward when half the people who know the circumstances are dead and gone. The information given by the hon. member for East Queen's (Mr. Martin) is very important and suggestive. It seems that the hon. Minister is now advocating a claim similar to one which formerly he opposed.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I did not oppose it. When the matter came before the House I said there was no legal claim upon the Dominion of Canada, but if we choose to take out of the award a certain sum, and, in our generosity refused the money, these men had been deprived of, we ought to do it fairly all round, and to admit one while excluding another. One claim was paid in 1887 to Mr. Churchill, but Mr. Hall was not paid.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. Minister admits that there is no legal claim. That is a very strong reason for believing that there is no moral claim. This is an affair which happened, I believe, before confederation. At what time in the life of the country shall we have these ante-confederation claims settled up. If there is moral claim, let Prince Edward Island pay it. We are told that the claim stands against the United States. Then, if generosity should be exercised in any quarter, it should be exercised by the United States. The fact that this claim has been left so long is enough to arouse suspicion, and the acknowledgment that there is no legal claim is another strong reason why we should refuse to recognize it.

Mr. DAVIN. The hon. member for West Prince (Mr. McLellan) said that the United States owed this money. And the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies) was quoted by my hon. friend from Queen's (Mr. Martin) as having said the same. Well, Sir, these Estimates are generous Estimates. They cover many doubtful claims. But, for Canada, with five millions of people, to undertake to pay the debts of the United States—why, it is simply wanton. If the hon. gentlemen go to the country, they should inscribe upon their banner: We have swallowed all our principles; we appear in Tory clothes; we ask for votes because we masqueraded in characters that we denounced for eighteen years, and we pay the debts of the United States.

Mr. McLELLAN. Mr. Chairman—

An hon. MEMBER. Carried.

Mr. FOSTER. No, it is impossible to carry it. I wish to speak, if the hon. gentleman (Mr. McLellan) does not.

It being Six o'clock the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

(In the Committee.)

To make good to persons at Prince Edward Island amount of duties paid to the United States customs on fish and fish oil, being amount paid by Messrs. Hall & Myrick.....	$15,029
--	----------

Mr. SPROULE. I move that this item be struck out. I think it is only giving away public money we have no legal right to give away, and I do not think we have any equitable right.

Mr. FOSTER. One can hardly see why this is brought up at this particular time of the session. It is an illustration of what is deplorable, that important and debatable claims are left to the last hours of the session. In what way can we get a representative opinion upon this claim which is before us now, a claim which dates back to 1871 for its foundation, and which from that time up to this has lain, with the exception of one or two occasions, entirely dormant? What possibility is there that we can get a representative opinion upon this claim at a time when we are wishing to go into concurrence and to close up business? I think that my hon. friend would do well to take that fact into consideration, and, as this has already kept so long, it could keep one year more, and let him bring it up at the next session, when we would be better disposed to give a fair consideration to the claim. I would like to hear from my hon. friend in that respect.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We must decide it one way or the other.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, the claim is one which the hon. gentleman himself has uttered an opinion upon. It is not a difficult matter to get to the ground-work of the claim. An agreement was supposed to be possible between the Imperial Government and the United States, whereby certain products taken from Canadian waters should go into the United States market free of duty. That agreement was not carried out. The parties in question were buyers of fish, or fishermen. If they were simply buyers of fish—and the hon. gentleman seemed to think there was something to be gained by stating that they were not fishermen themselves, but were simply buying fish caught by Canadian fishermen, and, therefore, were, so to speak, doing a favour to Canadian fishermen by buying their fish. But, of course, these gentlemen were there on a business speculation, and they were buying raw material at the cheapest rate they could. Their market was the United States. They were looking for a profit. If the duties were taken off, their goods went in free of duty, and their profit would be greater; if they had to pay duty, it would by that much reduce their profits. These gentlemen were United States citizens, and were living mainly in the United States, being in Prince Edward Island only as a basis for operations. For the purposes of their business, they were in Prince Edward Island, and for the purposes of domicile, they were citizens of the United States.

Some stress has been laid upon the fact that these parties took the opinion of the Governor of Prince Edward Island at that time. Evidently, the Governor could not give an opinion which bound to damages or payments, nor did he, in that opinion. He was simply asked: What do you think the prospects are? Very naturally, he said: Why, it would seem to me that if Great Britain and the United States have practically made an agreement, that will be carried out, and your risk will be very small in the matter. Therefore, I do not think that binds anybody; but if it does bind anybody, it binds Prince Edward Island, and not the Dominion of Canada, because Prince Edward Island at that time was not a part of the Dominion of Canada. I do not argue, however, that that bound anybody; it was simply an expression of opinion, in answer to a request; and it was an opinion which almost any person would have given, because the idea was general at that time that the United States would carry out the agreement. Now, the United States did not carry out the agreement; they exacted the duty, and the duty was paid into the United States treasury; that is, a United States citizen had to pay into the United States treasury the impost upon his imports into that country. Against whom was the grievance? Not against Great Britain. Great Britain was willing to carry out the agreement, and anxious to do so. Not against Canada, because Canada was not a party to the arrangement. He could really only have his grievance, as a citizen of the United States, against the government which got his money, and which mulcted him in the amount of the impost put upon his fish. My hon. friend is of that opinion. He has been quoted, and when, in 1883, the matter came up, it was expressly set out in a resolution, the words of which could not be plainer:

To make good to those merchants of Prince Edward Island, who were British subjects, the amount of duties paid by them to the United States customs on fish and fish oil in the year 1871, under the arrangements entered into in advance of the legislation necessary to bring the Treaty of Washington into force, by which arrangement United States fishermen were granted liberty to fish in the territorial waters of Prince Edward Island on the understanding that the President of the United States would ask Congress to refund these duties, which arrangement the President subsequently declined to carry out, on the ground that the proposal contemplated the united action of all the British North American colonies, which was not had, and that it would not be practicable to separate the colonies or carry into effect for one what the President was willing to effect for all, it not having been deemed advisable in the general interest of the British case to put forward and press the claim of these merchants before the Halifax Commission.

Now, the whole grounds are set out. The United States fishermen had a privilege in Canadian waters; they availed themselves of that privilege, for which they paid nothing. The United States refused to carry out the agreement, and so these fishermen and traders took their product to the United States, to which Government they paid duty. Both of them had grievance, if anywhere, against the United States. They had no legal or moral grievance against Great Britain or the Island of Prince Edward. They carried out their part of the contract, allowed them to fish without restriction in Canadian waters. So that they had a grievance, if they had any, simply and solely against the United States Government. The United States Government refused to listen to the grievance, whether the persons who were aggrieved were British subjects or United States citizens. What did the Dominion of Canada do? They said, simply as a matter of grace: Here are British subjects, Canadian citizens, who have been mulcted in the manner in which they have been, by reason of an agreement which was practically on at that time. The United States has violated that agreement; there was an agreement made, and the United States has received the money; the United States ought to pay the claim, if anybody, but these are our subjects; the United States will not do it, therefore, we will as a matter of grace, pay these Canadian citizens and British subjects the amount of the duties they had to pay having worked under an agreement which they supposed guaranteed them from these duties. There was no legal or moral claim; there was none before; there was none after. The Dominion of Canada could have said: If there is any grievance Prince Edward Island should bear it, but the Dominion did not say that. They simply said, as a matter of favour, we will not discuss that question with Prince Edward Island, but rather than that these men should suffer the loss we will pay out of the treasury a sum sufficient to recoup our own people. This was done and my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries took strong ground at that time. One of his arguments was that these people might have put their claims before the commission at Halifax. My hon. friend said there is no case, and there was no case. I do not suppose that it would have been laid before that commission. It was not a germane claim and my hon. friend said that there was no claim to be pressed there. He said that there was a claim against the United States and that that was the power which ought to pay it. What he is quoted as saying in the "Hansard" of 1884, is as follows:—

There is no claim that could have been put before the Halifax Commission. * * * *

These gentlemen have a good claim against the United States; there is no doubt about that.

That was the opinion of my hon. friend then, and I suppose it is his opinion still. Sir Leonard Tilley, in speaking in the subject, said:

The Government arrived at the conclusion that American citizens fishing in Canadian waters should not be paid out of the funds of the Dominion Treasury a debt which should have been paid by their own government.

That was exactly at one with the contention of my hon. friend to this extent, that if they had a claim it was against the United States. Mr. Mills, of Bothwell, now the Minister of Justice, said:

The mere fact that one of the parties became a British subject, by being naturalized, would not revive a claim that had no value prior to that time.

His contention is two fold, but he proves my contention in this respect, that they had no claim, as American citizens, against Canada, and it should not be revived. Mr. Mills said, even though they had become naturalized. But he is clear and emphatic on the point that they had no claim. Sir Charles Tupper said:

We cannot pay this money, except to British subjects.

The hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries said:

I said there was no legal or moral claim on the part of Canada to pay these amounts at all. * * * These claims were presented, which had no moral or legal sanction. * * * It was charity we were dealing out. * * * There was no legal or moral claim, and I said their being American citizens should not put them (Hall & Myrick and Churchill) beyond the claim of our charity. * * * He is paying the money of Canada to an American citizen.

The first contention, and still the contention of the hon. gentleman was that they had a claim against the American Government. He says that we might treat them with charity anyway, even though they be American citizens. Sir John Macdonald is quoted as saying:

If the others are not British subjects, they will stand in the same position as Hall & Myrick. * * * The United States has committed the wrong on them, and as citizens of the United States they can go to their own government and get redress.

We were all clear, so far as that: I do not think there was a dissenting voice in Parliament with the exception of the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries who was friendly with Hall & Myrick, and would not like to see them placed beyond the charity of the Government, but the opinion in this House at that time was, that being American citizens they had no right to come to the Dominion of Canada to have their claim paid, but that their claim was against their own Government which had made their grievance and which had mulcted them in the impost upon their imports. My hon. friend relies upon another argument, leaving that for a moment. But in 1887, he says, we paid Churchill, who was, in 1871, a United States citizen and not a British subject.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. And up to 1886.

Mr. FOSTER. That although in 1871, when the grievance culminated, when the basis was given for it, Churchill was an American citizen he was paid, while Hall & Myrick who were plainly American citizens and not naturalized, were not paid in 1887. There was a vote which paid Churchill. There may be two opinions about that. You may hold the opinion unjustly that Churchill was an American citizen in 1871, when that transaction took place, and thereby was barred from making any claim on the grace or charity of the Dominion, that he never could become an applicant for that claim no matter whether he had changed his allegiance, because the transaction did not take place after he had become a naturalized subject. There is a good deal of strength in that position. It really does not in so far as the equity is concerned, in so far as the moral claim is concerned, affect the case a single iota, but when a man becomes a citizen of our own country, becomes naturalized, incorporates his public life with ours, becomes a fellow-citizen with ourselves, he has a greater claim upon the charity and grace of the Government than he would have if he remained in the position of a subject of a foreign power and did not identify himself with the citizens of this country. That was the view that was taken, that as he had become a naturalized British subject, joined his fortunes with those of our own people, had become one of ourselves, that though he had made the loss when he was not a naturalized citizen, grace and clemency should be extended to him because he had identified himself with the life of the Dominion and had become a British subject. Then it was that Parliament said to him : We will extend our grace and charity to cover this man because he has become one of our own people and we will treat him as we treated the others. You may have whatever idea you like of how far that should have been allowed to have force, but that it did have force there is no doubt.

If Hall & Myrick were to-day naturalized citizens of this country, I, for one, could not oppose the payment, I would not oppose it, and I do not think there would be any question of it in Parliament. But they are not naturalized citizens. They are citizens owing allegiance to another country, the country that wronged them, if they were wronged, the country that got their money, and the country that ought to pay them. They cannot claim from this time forth that they have become members of our community, so far as the rights and duties of citizenship are concerned. They are just where they were before, and they have not established the claim—one of secondary character, I grant you, but still of some weight—that they have become naturalized British subjects, and in that respect they have not the same claim that Churchill had, and there is no doubt that they have not the claim that British subjects had in 1871, to the grace and charity of this Parliament. That is the reason why amongst others I oppose this claim. I do not think we ought to pay it. I do not think there is any ground, legal or equitable, why we ought to pay these gentlemen. They are citizens of a foreign country, respectable citizens ; they have cast their lot among us to a certain extent for business purposes, and we are glad to have them ; but they are not part and parcel of ourselves, and, therefore, cannot have a claim upon the grace and charity of this Parliament.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). I have no fault to find with the manner of the hon. gentleman's argument. But I do not think he put his case fairly, or that the conclusions he reached will be the conclusions of the House, and I think he himself was cognizant of the great weakness of his argument when he attempted to draw a distinction between men who are American citizens to-day and men who were American citizens at the time the claim occurred and for fifteen years afterwards, and who in 1886 became naturalized for the purpose of getting payment.

Mr. FOSTER. That is an assumption which I would not agree with—that they became naturalized for that purpose. That is hardly fair.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman has stated fairly enough that there was no legal claim against the Dominion or against anybody. The money was voted by Parliament because an international wrong had been done and these parties were sufferers. The original intention of Parliament was to confine the payment to British subjects ; but after the matter had been threshed out three times in the House, Parliament departed from that basis, and eliminated the words confining the payment to British subjects, and so far as Parliament knew Mr. Churchill was not a British subject.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman himself in that debate acknowledged that he had been naturalized.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I acknowledged that he had been a few months before, because I was in court and heard his naturalization papers read. I said : " You are going to pay a man who for fifteen years after the claim has been an American citizen, and I am perfectly satisfied that you should pay him if you put every other man who has a claim in the same category." I said : " You are drawing a distinction because one is a Conservative and the other a Liberal," for Hall & Myrick are a strong Liberal firm. I do not believe that in his heart and soul my hon. friend, who can be just as well as generous, believes that that is an honest ground for refusing payment. If the hon. gentleman turns to the debate of 1884, he will see that this very question was before the House, and Sir John Macdonald admitted that these gentlemen could not be fairly refused payment. He said :

I think these gentlemen have in fairness a claim for consideration. The hon. gentleman, as a guardian of the rights of Prince Edward Island, has pressed very strongly the view there should be a specified sum handed over to the island out of the $5,000,000 that were awarded ; we agree with the hon. gentleman as far as this vote is concerned, by giving those people a certain portion of it.

Sir John Macdonald placed the matter solely on this ground : " An award of $5,000,000 has been made and paid over to the Dominion, and these people have a good and equitable claim, though not a legal one, and we will extract from the $5,000,000 a sufficient sum to pay that claim."

Mr. FOSTER. As a matter of fact, the money did not come from the award, but was a vote of Parliament from the consolidated fund.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. On the same occasion, Mr. Blake said :

But I do not suppose it was ever presented, because, I fancy, in the strict letter of the law, it has been recognized that the United States, in this matter, have no quasi-legal liability. Then, if the case is so weak as has been brought forward, if, in point of fact, it is an act of generosity, if it is to be bolstered up by the statement that Canada has received a large award, and that it is not unreasonable, under the circumstances, that she should make good the loss, I think the hon. gentleman has some difficulty in meeting the argument of my hon. friend behind me, because he finds that the very gentleman who made the application to the Lieutenant-Governor, who received the Lieutenant-Governor's assurance that such and such would be the result, and upon the faith of that assurance invested his money, is to be cut out on account of his technical citizenship of the United States, while he is making a present to all these other worthy gentlemen.

There are the two leaders of the House placing the payment on that ground. Mr. Blake said he saw no reason why the mere technical fact of a man being a United States citizen should debar him from the generosity which Parliament was exercising. What was the fact? Hall & Myrick did business in Prince Edward Island; they were domiciled there; they had their homes and their families and children there; they were accepting and discharging all the duties of citizenship.

Mr. FOSTER. Not at all.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Why not?

Mr. FOSTER. They could not.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Their sons do, I suppose. They were discharging the duties of citizenship in that respect, and the moneys they paid were paid to British subjects, who could have forwarded the goods and got the return payment. But Parliament adopted the view of Sir John Macdonald, and having adopted it and paid the men who were British subjects in 1871, Parliament decided in 1887 not to confine the payment any longer to British subjects, and voted a sum to pay Mr. Churchill, although he remained an American citizen for fifteen years after the claim. Parliament having adopted that principle and paid Mr. Churchill, there is no reason why Parliament should refuse to pay Messrs. Hall & Myrick. The thing will not bear argument before any tribunal in the world. I do not complain of the manner in which my hon. friend has presented his argument, because I acknowledge that if the case were to come before Parliament for the first time, his argument would be cogent; but it did not convince Parliament in 1884 or in 1887. Sir John Macdonald did not himself repudiate the claim of Hall & Myrick. He simply said: "We cannot pay these men without a new message."

Mr. FOSTER. That was with reference to the part of the proceeding which was criticised by my hon. friend.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The two men, Myrick and Churchill, were both living in Prince Edward Island, both buying the same goods, both sending them to the States, and both paying the same duty. Can you justify paying one of those men and withholding payment from the other? You cannot do it. It would be injustice of the grossest kind. Parliament, having come to the conclusion to pay the one is bound in honour, equity and justice to pay the other.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman deals differently with the members of his own family, I am sure, than with the members of his neighbour's family. One who may be an alien to a family at one time may become a member of it afterwards, and then the relations change. The relations between the members of the one family and the family itself are far different from those between the family and aliens. It is no generic difference at all; it is a difference simply of relationship. The state is a family, of which the subjects or citizens of the state are members and the citizens of foreign countries are aliens. If an alien transfers his allegiance, then he becomes a member of the family, and he will be treated on the same footing, and the duties of the state towards him are different. You may be as cosmopolitan as you like, but you cannot ignore the sympathies that ought to exist between the citizens of the state, and you cannot pretend that the state does not owe more to its own citizens than the citizens of a foreign country. That does not imply that you need be unjust while giving a preference to your own people.

Mr. SPROULE. If we make this payment we will be establishing a very bad precedent, namely, the payment of old claims against the provinces before they came into confederation. This claim has been running since 1871, and Prince Edward Island came into the confederation in 1873. This claim, therefore, is twenty-eight years old, and by the statute of limitation, it should have run out four times, but, unfortunately, we have no statute of limitation against the Crown, or we would have nothing to do with such a claim. The Minister admits that we are neither legally nor morally bound to pay this claim, and the only ground on which he urges the payment is the ground of charity. I could understand that if we were dealing with the heirs of some parties who had suffered by the state and who were in abject poverty, but this firm is wealthy, and, therefore, the payment cannot be defended on that ground. This is really a claim set up by some parties who think they ought to be paid this money, although the judgment of this country for twenty-eight years has been that they ought not. If hon. gentlemen force this vote through, they will not hear the last of it, and will be called to account for it in the future.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This is one of a class of claims introduced in Parliament in 1883 and recognized by Parliament in 1894.

Mr. SPROULE. Why did Parliament not pay it them ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Because Parliament chose to confine it to British subjects, but in 1887, Parliament authorized payment to Churchill, who was exactly in the same category as this gentleman.

Mr. FOSTER. No, he was a naturalized citizen.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In 1871 he was an American citizen, and remained an American citizen until 1887.

Mr. WALLACE. The bald statement of the case is quite enough to condemn the very idea of paying this money. This was a debt due by the United States if due by any one. They repudiated it. That created a case of hardship, and Canada, having taken Prince Edward Island into confederation, without regard to the fact that if there was any claim it ought to be against that province, in a fit of generosity, as an act of grace, paid the amount lost by our Canadian fishermen and our Canadian business men. But that we should pay the claims of American citizens is so utterly preposterous, so opposed to all ideas of fair play, that there can be no possible justification for it. The hon. Minister of Marine says that this is exactly the same case as a claim paid since. He knows better. While there may be a question as to whether Parliament should have paid that claim or not, no one can pretend that the two cases are on all fours. The other case is that of a British subject. Even in that case the claimant became a British subject after the event, he, at any rate, threw in his fortunes with us. He became one of us, he took the solemn oath of citizenship and became a Canadian citizen, with his duties and obligations. I do not know why he did not become a Canadian citizen before nor do I care ; I do not know whether his domicile or residence had been here before nor do I care. All I know is that he became a Canadian citizen. The hon. Minister says he became a Canadian citizen in order to strengthen his claim, but that is a mere statement advanced without any shadow of proof. At any rate, he was a Canadian citizen when he received the money, and the present claimant is not, notwithstanding the long years he has been doing business here. According to the Minister of Marine, he has his domicile here and has been making his fortune here and yet has not become a citizen. Therefore, he still further forfeits any claim he might have on the people of Canada. To think that the hard-earned money of our farmers, artisans and fishermen, and the other classes of this country are to be handed out to an American citizen, who has no claim legally or morally or of any kind whatever against us, except the fact stated by the hon. Minister, that he is a strong supporter of the party opposite. I would consider it an act of impudence for a foreigner coming to this country to interfere in the political affairs of this country, and instead of that being an argument in his favour it is another argument against him. They have not produced a single reason or a single particle of evidence that would justify the people of Canada in consenting to their representatives voting away $15,029 of their hard-earned money to pay to aliens, whose Government had acted so unfairly in this matter that Canada came voluntarily forward as an act of grace and relieved her own citizens who had been wronged by the Government of the United States.

Mr. MARTIN. There is another phase of this question. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries has told us that this firm is only the medium through which the fish are bought and shipped to the United States.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, not exactly that.

Mr. MARTIN. But I have here the words of the hon. gentleman, and that is exactly what he said in 1884. When these firms bought these fish, they bought it, less the duty, and if the duty was to be refunded, the British fishermen should get the refund. Now, how is this to be voted ? Is it to be voted absolutely to Hall & Myrick, and if so, where are those who caught and sold this fish years ago ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Surely, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Martin) is only talking. He has not posted himself. He ought to know that there was a commission issued, as I explained, to Mr. Justice Fitzgerald. He took the evidence, and went through Mr. Hall's books, and every British subject who had a claim, came in, and if he had not been paid the full amount, his claim was passed upon and reported. And Mr. Justice Fitzgerald reported to the Government that, in his judgment, the claim of Hall & Myrick for $20,000 should be reduced to $15,000, as the amount properly payable to them—and that is the amount we ask Parliament to pay.

Mr. MARTIN. The hon. Minister is at sea. I have the "Hansard" of 1884 here, and, on page 313, I find a statement by himself, that there was a claim by Hall & Myrick for British subjects of $9,983.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. If the hon. gentleman will permit me—

Mr. MARTIN. I would ask the hon. Minister to permit me to ask him a question. What has become of the claimants of this $9,983 ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. They were reported in their own names by Mr. Justice Fitzgerald, and paid.

Mr. MARTIN. That makes the case much clearer to me. British subjects have been paid. This American citizen has a claim against his own government—let them pay it. I do not think that any Minister of the Crown has the right to stand up and propose such a motion as this. The Minister himself has stated time and time again that this is a claim against the government of the United States. And yet he appears before the Parliament of Canada now, and says that we should pay this claim of an American citizen, who has a good claim against his own government. This man has not been domiciled in Prince Edward Island, and never resided there continuously. He came there during the fishing season, and remained in his own country during the greater part of the time. He has done the work of his government in Prince Edward Island for years. He did the work of the United States Government before the Halifax Commission. And yet, after having been in the service of the United States, and done all he could against the just claims of Canada, he comes here and asks for money that should be paid him by his own government. It is most surprising to me that a Minister of the Crown can propose such a thing.

Amendment (Mr. Sproule) negatived: Yeas. 9; Nays, 14.

Mr. DAVIN. I would like to point out that there are five Ministers who carried that.

Mr. BERGERON. Seven Ministers.

Administration of Justice—

Additional judge of the Yukon Territorial Court ..... $4,000

Mr. BERGERON. Who is the new judge?

The PRIME MINISTER. He has not been appointed.

Mr. BERGERON. What is the salary of Judge Dugas?

The PRIME MINISTER. Four thousand dollars.

Mr. BERGERON. And perquisites? What is there besides salary?

The PRIME MINISTER. He has living expenses.

Mr. BERGERON. How much does that amount to?

The PRIME MINISTER. Up to the present we have given him maintenance, like all our officers, from the store of the Mounted Police. But now that the country is getting more advanced, the officers demand to have their living expenses; and I think we are asking a sum for that purpose.

Mr. FOSTER. What he gets is $6,000. Here is another item: "Living expenses

Sir LOUIS DAVIES.

for two judges in the Yukon territory, $4,000."

Mr. BERGERON. Were all Judge Dugas's travelling expenses paid from Montreal to Dawson?

The PRIME MINISTER. I think so, but am not sure.

Mr. BERGERON. Could we not find out?

The PRIME MINISTER. Certainly. If my hon. friend had let me know that he wanted this information, I would have had pleasure in getting it for him.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the state of the courts there, that they require two high-class judges? Have they a stipendiary magistrate, or any such officer, in Dawson?

The PRIME MINISTER. No.

Mr. FOSTER. Would it not be well to have something like a police magistrate and a judge?

The PRIME MINISTER. The Mounted Police have discharged the duties of police magistrate, so far, at Dawson City. But in the vast extent of territory that we have now it is necessary to have a second judge, because he must go on circuit, he cannot distribute justice at Dawson only, he must travel about a good deal. For instance, there is a place for holding court at Bennett and such establishments are scattered along the rivers of the Yukon system. My hon. friend cannot think it extraordinary that in a country of that extent one judge is not sufficient to administer justice to the active population who are living there.

Mr. FOSTER. The Mounted Police still do the work of a judge.

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes, a judge of petty jurisdiction.

Mr. DAVIN. I think it would not be necessary to have stipendiary magistrates. I suppose the state of things is something analogous to what we had in the North-west Territories. I think it is to be regretted that the early judicial system of the North-west Territories was not adopted, which was to have police magistrates with power of a judge of a superior court. I suppose, however, that these judges do the work of a stipendiary magistrate, of a county court judge, and of a superior court judge. But even if the present judge does that, he will not have too much to do. I cannot myself realize conditions that make it necessary to have more than one judge there. Judge Dugas, or any other competent judge in Dawson, could go a distance of 30, 40, 50 or 100 miles, come back, and go somewhere else, because we are familiar with that condition of things in the North-west Territories, where one judge has been accustomed to take charge of a vast area, an area of some 600 miles by 600 miles; and in the early days one stipendiary magistrate did a great deal more than that.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Suppose a judge took ill.

The PRIME MINISTER. Occasions may arise where a judge will be busy holding a court at one place and another judge may be required in another part of the territory. Two judges in a country like that are certainly not too many, because they may have to discharge the initial duties of a superior court judge and also the duties of a county court judge. Having therefore to administer a good deal of petty justice, they have to go about a good deal.

Mr. BERGERON. Under what law do the judges act there?

The PRIME MINISTER. The common law of England.

Mr. BERGERON. I asked that because Judge Dugas is trained in the laws of the province of Quebec, except in the criminal law, which is of course that of England. Does he have to exercise jurisdiction in civil matters as well as criminal matters?

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes.

Mr. DAVIN. In the North-west Territories we thought at first that Judge Rouleau, because his education had been in civil law, would be unequal to administering the common law, but we found in a short time that he is one of our best judges.

The PRIME MINISTER. The record of Judge Dugas in the Yukon speaks for itself.

Mr. FOSTER. Is there any report upon the administration of justice there being in a crowded state, upon which this is based?

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not know whether there is a report upon which the Minister of Justice has based this request.

Amount required to make the salary of the Clerk of the Territorial Court, Yukon territory, $2,000 per year..... $1,500

Mr. DAVIN. Is not that a high salary for a clerk?

The PRIME MINISTER. We have heard the statement made during this session by a prominent gentleman on the other side of the House that all our salaries in the Yukon were inadequate.

Mr. BERGERON. I think so.

Living expenses for two judges in the Yukon territory ..... $4,000

Mr. DAVIN. Who will administer justice there?

The PRIME MINISTER. I presume it will be the commissioner and his council.

Mr. DAVIN. Miscellaneous justice in the North-west Territories has always been administered by the Lieutenant-Governor.

The PRIME MINISTER. I presume in this case it would be the commissioner and his council.

Mr. BERGERON. Have instructions been given to these judges that they are not to speculate in mining claims?

The PRIME MINISTER. They are not to buy claims, I am sure of that.

Mr. BERGERON. Because, I saw in the newspapers that one judge there wrote that he had bought some claims in an ordinary way on the market in which he thought there was no harm. He said it openly, there was no concealment. But it might be dangerous to allow judges to go into that business, it might be dangerous for the litigants.

The PRIME MINISTER. I am sorry the Minister of the Interior is not in his seat this moment, because he could give my hon. friend more information than I can.

Mr. BERGERON. But the opinion of the right hon. gentleman is that they should not buy claims?

The PRIME MINISTER. Decidedly.

Mr. FOSTER. The right hon. gentleman must know, if he reads the papers, that one of these judges wrote a letter which appeared in one of the Montreal papers, in which he stated that he was very sorry that he had not made as much wealth up there in mines as had been credited to him; he had made some purchases of interests and the like of that in mines, but if he only had all that was credited to him he would be very proud of it, and he would be willing to get up on the top of Notre Dame and proclaim it.

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not think it would be proper for a judge to record claims, but whether he should be allowed to trade in properties in the market, is another question. We have passed an Order in Council upon this subject giving directions to our officers, but at this moment I cannot speak accurately of its terms. The Minister of the Interior may give the information later on.

Mr. CLANCY. As this may be the last opportunity, I would like to ask the First Minister if he can give me an answer to the question I asked him this afternoon.

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes; my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) is referring to the Meagher claim. Looking over the record of the case which was placed in my hands by the hon. Minister of Justice to-day, I have to tell my hon. friend that on June 21st, 1899, Mr. Cowan wrote to the Department of Justice in these terms:

Dear Sir,—I desire to draw your attention to the wrongful arrest and subsequent imprisonment of Thomas Meagher, a Canadian citizen, by an American customs officer named Avery, and to ask you to take immediate steps to secure from the American Government damages for this unwarranted outrage, also the value of his boat, which was appropriated by the officer immediately after the arrest. The papers were brought down, asked for some time ago, and they have been brought down.

Yours truly,
M. K. COWAN.

The following day this reply was sent by the Department of Justice to Mr. Cowan :

22nd June, 1899.

Sir,—Referring to your letter of 21st instant, asking this department to take steps to secure from the American Government damages for the arrest of Thomas Meagher and the value of his boat, I have the honour to request that you submit for the consideration of the department a statement showing in detail the nature and amount of the damages claimed, including the value of the boat, and stating also the circumstances of the seizure and sale of the boat. No reference has, I think, been made to the latter subject in the previous correspondence.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) E. L. NEWCOMBE,
Deputy Minister of Justice.

M. K. Cowan, Esq., M.P.,
House of Commons, Ottawa.

I am not informed that the desired statement has yet been placed in the hands of the Department of Justice.

Mr. CLANCY. Then there was no further correspondence or claim made.

The PRIME MINISTER. So far as I can see nothing more has been done.

Mr. CLANCY. I understood a few days ago that a claim had been made to the Department of Justice.

The PRIME MINISTER. No.

Mr. CLANCY. According to the statement the right hon. gentleman has made I understand that no action can be taken until a statement is made to the department.

The PRIME MINISTER. Our attention was called to the illegal arrest, unfair and rather cruel treatment to which Thomas Meagher had been subjected, but the claim for any damages arising out of the seizure of his boat or, as I understand, for any damages, has not been placed in the hands of the Department of Justice, except on the 21st of June, 1899.

Required to pay cost of maintenance of prisoners in Yukon territory ..... $15,000

The PRIME MINISTER. The statement I have from the Department of Justice in regard to this vote, is as follows:—

We have an agreement with the Controller of the North-west Mounted Police to pay $1 per day for the maintenance of prisoners in the Yukon district, but the Controller represents that the actual cost is about $1.30 per day. During the past winter the average number of prisoners confined in the guard-room was 60, and it is estimated that $15,000 will be required for the maintenance of prisoners there during the ensuing year.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

To pay his legal representatives the balance of sessional indemnity of the late Senator Sanford ..... $258 80

Mr. FOSTER. How does this come to be a revote ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There has been no administration of the estate and in order to make it effective it is necessary to vote the money to the widow.

To pay Lady Edgar balance of salary of the late Sir James D. Edgar to 30th June, 1900 ..... $3,666 67

Mr. FOSTER. What is the total salary ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $4,000.

Mr. WALLACE. I think that Sir James Edgar died on the last day of July and would be entitled to salary for a month. This is a proposition that he shall be paid for the eleven months following. This is a matter that deserves consideration. Will the Government say why they propose to vote this amount ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think there are several precedents for making the grant to the widow of the deceased member of prominence. There are certainly precedents in the case of deceased members of the Cabinet.

Mr. WALLACE. There was a grant made to the widow of the late Thomas White, I think. But this is a proposal to pay the balance of the salary.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Well, it is the same thing ; it is a grant.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. I think the form it took in the case of the late Mr. White was a grant of a certain number of months' salary. Probably the hon. ex-Finance Minister (Mr. Foster) will remember. I think it was analogous to this, and that we paid a certain number of months' salary.

Mr. DAVIN. I think it was.

Mr. FOSTER. How is the Auditor General going to pay two salaries ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If we vote two salaries he will pay them. We will vote one by the general statute and one by this.

Mr. DAVIN. I would like to say that there is no item that can be passed that I would more heartily vote for than an item of this sort. The late Sir James Edgar gave his whole life to the service of his country, according to the best of his lights, and for a long life spent this is a very small return.

Mr. WALLACE. I think the case of the Speaker of the House and the case of a Minister is not analogous with the case of a Minister, because a Minister devotes his whole time to the public service, while the Speaker of the House devotes just as much time as a member of Parliament does.

Mr. DAVIN. Yes, a member of Parliament devotes his time.

Mr. WALLACE. The Speaker may do a little more. He comes down two days before we do and stays a day longer than we do. The Speaker of the House, so far as I know, has no more arduous work than a member of the House who conscientiously performs his duties, and he has not nearly so hard a task nor so much responsibility. A member of Parliament who attends conscientiously to his parliamentary duties physically goes to the limit, because he has to be in constant attendance at committees of the House, while the Speaker never attends committees, and he has to be at his duties here in Parliament incessantly, while the Speaker is not here when the House is in committee.

A member of Parliament who performs his duties like my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule), or like my hon. friend the late Minister of Finance (Mr. Foster), performs more arduous duties than any Speaker can possibly be called upon to perform. Therefore, I do not see a justification for a grant in this case of eleven-twelfths of a year's salary for the family of the late Speaker. I do not wish to speak personally, and I speak with a good deal of hesitation on that account. But we are voting away the people's money; we are not disposing of our own; and while Ministers may very readily vote away the people's money, I have never seen any of those gentlemen who are so ready to expend their own money in such a reckless fashion as they are spending the money of the people. I think this is hardly a justifiable expenditure—I do not wish to say anything further than that—for the reasons I have stated, that the Speaker has no arduous duties to perform, either mental or physical, that he receives a salary of $4,000 a year in addition to his sessional indemnity; and that he does not perform those severe duties that fall to the lot of a member of Parliament; and why at his decease his family should be given eleven-twelfths of his year's salary, I cannot very well make out.

Mr. CAMPBELL. How much did you vote to Lady Thompson?

Mr. WALLACE. The State undertook to provide for the widow of the late Sir John Thompson, under a straight consideration of the question. If the state proposed in a case of this kind to make a grant, for certain understood reasons, that would be another consideration; but this is simply voting a further salary. It is not a good way to put the case, and it is hardly justifiable.

Mr. FOSTER. I did not notice at the first that the amount was $1,900, and the Chairman may remember that I asked him what the whole salary was, because it struck me that the amount was large for the balance of the salary. I took for granted that it was for the salary of the year just expired, and I was raising no objection to it at all. I do not wish to discuss this vote with reference to any names at all; but it does raise a principle. The sympathy and good will which we feel on the death of a colleague binds us to a certain extent to be generous with the money at our disposal; but, after all, when you come to think of it, what does it mean? We might have lost a colleague sitting on either side of this House, a man who got for his indemnity $1,000 a year, who sacrificed three-fourths of his business in order to come here and attend to his public duties, who left his family when he died without any very large means of subsistence, who worked here faithfully all the hours of the session, who attended to a very large correspondence, who looked after committees which, if a man does it well, is a great tax upon him, who had no person that he could put in his place for a single moment to act as his deputy to do his work and allow him to rest even for a moment. Is there not a stronger claim on our sympathy for a man in that case than there is in the case of a man who does not have those duties to perform, who gets five times the amount of salary, and who has a deputy to relieve him to a certain extent of the hard part of his duties. These are considerations which will occur to the public, and which we ought not to lose sight of. The mere fact that a man dies when we are here does not alter the case at all. This brings up the whole question how far we can go in these cases without making a rule, and are prepared to make a rule? I do not know how the subvention to the widow of the late Thomas White was voted; but I would much rather see this voted, not as a salary, but as a direct vote, because this is not, correctly speaking, salary. Next year we shall have to pay a salary to the occupant of the Chair. I hope that no one will misunderstand my position in discussing the question. It is a delicate question to discuss; but we are within our rights in discussing it.

The PRIME MINISTER. It seems to me that it would be a very false conception to place the position of the Speaker of the House on a level with that of an ordinary member of the House. The Speaker is the first Commoner of the land. He has not only important duties to perform, but he has a station to maintain; and I differ altogether from the view just expressed by the hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace). The duties of the Speaker are, in my estimation, of the highest importance. They are as important as the duties discharged on the floor of this House by anybody. The gentleman who has to sit in this Chair and maintain the even scales of justice between the two parties has duties the burden of which is of the greatest magnitude, and it requires a man of very extraordinary qualities to discharge those duties successfully. He has to study the rules of the House and the history of parliamentary procedure; he has to be prepared at all times to decide on all questions that may arise, and he has to maintain the dignity of the office. He has to entertain largely—to offer the hospitalities of the House to the members and others. All these duties are a heavy drain upon him, and for my part I would be sorry to weigh too nicely the question of the services on one side and the remuneration on the other. We have not been accustomed to consider the position in that way. If we are expected to defend this appropriation upon any logical rules, I say at once that it would be hard to find any such rules; but the sense of justice which is within the heart and conscience of every man has impelled the Parliament of Canada on certain exceptional occasions to deal exceptionally with cases of this kind. Such was the case of Lady Cartier, to whom, after the death of her husband, we paid a pension during her life. Such has been the case of Mrs. White, whose husband died and left her in rather destitute circumstances. Such has been the case of Lady Thompson, to whom Parliament voted an appropriation—an appropriation which I supported without any reluctance, but, on the contrary, feeling that I was discharging a public duty. Such is the case of Lady Edgar on this occasion; and I believe that when this matter is scanned, the best sense of the country will justify this vote. As to the technical suggestion of my hon. friend in regard to the form of the vote, I, for my part, will have no objection to accept it.

Mr. DAVIN. A very wide and important question which has been discussed in the British Parliament in modern and less modern days by such great men as Mr. Burke and Mr. Gladstone, has been raised on this occasion—the economy to the public of keeping the minds of men who happen to serve the public in high offices free from anxiety regarding, either their own fate when they may be past the power of work, or the fate of those who are dear to them. It is quite clear, that if you have before the mind of men occupying, say, a high position in Parliament, such as my hon. friend from York (Mr. Foster) referred to, and before the mind of men in office, the fear of destitution, they may be exposed to temptation, which they never would be exposed to, if a generous State took care that servants having served them faithfully, should not be forgotten when beams are broken and sails shivered in the stress of public life. Now, although it is late, may I, on so important a question, read what Edmund

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

Burke said—for it is really the same question, though they deal with it in a much better way in England, and there must come a time when we shall deal with it better in Canada:

Conceiving it to be a fundamental part of the constitution of this country and of the reason of state, that there must be means of rewarding public service, those means will be incomplete and indeed wholly insufficient for that purpose if there should be no further reward for that service than the daily wages it receives during the pleasure of the Crown. * * * Indeed, no man knows when he cuts off the incitement to a virtuous ambition and the just rewards of public service what infinite mischief he may do his country through all generation. Such saying to the public may prove the worst mode of robbing it. The Crown, which has in its hands the trust of the daily pay for national service ought to have in its hands also the means for repose of public labour, and the fixed settlement of acknowledged merit. There is a time when the weather-beaten vessels of the state ought to come into harbour. They must at length have a retreat from the malice of rivals, from the perfidy of political friends, and the inconstancy of the people. Many persons who in all times have filled the great offices of state have been younger brothers, who had originally little, if any, fortune. These offices do not furnish the means of amassing wealth. There ought to be some power in the Crown of granting pensions out of the reach of its own caprices.

The time must come in Canada when, in loyalty to the people, and in order to secure the best kind of service, this whole question will be considered and put on a logical basis. My hon. friend from York raised the question of men giving long life of service in Parliament, yet never holding an office under the Crown. Well, I believe in such a case, even, there ought to be, in a scientific machinery of government, a means of giving harbourage in which such a ship might come to anchor. But especially ought it to be the case where service has been rendered in high office. When I spoke of the services of the late Speaker, I was thinking of him as a prominent member of party—which I regard as part and parcel of our constitutional government—and as a member of Parliament in one of the great parties, active and prominent. And, under the circumstances, I cannot but feel, accepting our system of government heartily, as I do, as the best possible under our conditions, that any man who serves so prominently as the late Sir James Edgar, must have laid the state and the people of this country under obligation to him.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I propose to change the wording, so as to make it correspond with previous cases, making it read: "gratuity equal to the balance of salary of the late James D. Edgar."

Amendment agreed to.

To pay the legal representatives of the late Hon. John F. Wood his sessional indemnity ..... $1,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I regret that I am obliged to ask to drop the item to pay the indemnity of the late Hon. Mr. Wood. At the time it was inserted, I was under the impression that Mr. Wood had died during the session of Parliament—and that was the rule adopted, that we should pay those who died during session. I have since been informed that he died before the beginning of this session. It is a pity we inserted it, under the circumstances, but, as the precedent has always been clear, I think it should be withdrawn.

Mr. FOSTER. This shows how arbitrary a distinction may be. I do not think I am violating any confidence, when I say that the late Hon. Mr. Wood was the sole support of some members of his family. In his attention to his public duties, his practice has been utterly destroyed.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Under the circumstances, even though some day it may be quoted as an inconvenient precedent, I will ask leave to withdraw the motion, and let the item stand.

Mr. WALLACE. Is it well to make this amount payable to the legal representatives?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The object is, that the grant should go directly to the immediate family of the deceased.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Better leave it to be determined by the Treasury Board.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I move that it be amended to read: "to pay the representative of the late Hon. John F. Wood, as may be directed by the Treasury Board."

Amendment agreed to.

The House proceeded to consider and concur in resolutions reported by the Committee of Supply.

Railways and Canals—

Beauharnois Canal..... $5,600

Mr. BERGERON. I am sorry the Minister of Railways and Canals is not here when we are on the item of canals. I want to draw the attention of the Government to the fact that there have been a good many accidents on the Beauharnois Canal the last couple of years. This year there have been two very bad breaks. One was at lock No. 7, at which time I drew the attention of the First Minister to the fact that damages had been done there, and it was important that an inspector should be sent to make a valuation of those damages. They are to be paid by the steamboat company, but through the Government. Since then there has been another break at lock No. 5, which,

I am told, is causing a good deal of damage. I want to point out that there have been more accidents during the last three years than ever before. I have no doubt that it is due to the fact that good employees, men who had been on the canal for many years, and who were performing their duties with thorough efficiency, were dismissed because it was supposed that they were political opponents of the present Administration. They were replaced by men who know nothing at all about the work and who, no doubt, are less efficient than their predecessors. It shows how injudicious it was for the Government to dismiss these capable employees without cause, and to replace them by men who cannot do the work properly.

The PRIME MINISTER. What is the nature of the accidents?

Mr. BERGERON. Boats going through carried away the gates.

Civil Government—

The Post Office Department..... $203,055

Mr. FOSTER. I want to ask the Postmaster General if he can give me information as to the amount of money that has been received from newspaper postage?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I can give that information for five months up to the 1st of June. It showed over $19,000, or supposing it to be $22,000 for six months, that would be $44,000 for twelve months. That was at the rate of a quarter of a cent per pound. It will amount to about $75,000 a year, commencing the 1st of July, assuming that newspapers continue to be sent by post.

Mr. FOSTER. Perhaps the hon. gentleman could have his officer give me a statement for each month—and have it tomorrow before the Supply Bill goes through.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will try and get it.

Amount required for mail service..... $103,000

Mr. FOSTER. I asked for a return showing the time of the departure of the mails from Vancouver and Victoria for Dawson, and the departure from Dawson for Vancouver and Victoria, over the period that was mentioned in the report. The Minister said he had not got the information, and I wish he would inquire again and have it brought down.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is not possible to give the date of the arrival of a mail. We can give dates of the departures and dates of the arrivals, but we cannot identify the bags that arrive so as to say when they left, because there have been changes. We cannot say that a bag left on a certain day and arrived on a certain day. They were laid up during that period when they could not be moved at all.

Mr. FOSTER. Another question was brought up with reference to newspaper or parcels for Dawson that were intercepted on the way and sent back to persons who transmitted them. I wanted to ask the Minister if that is still being done. For instance, I send a parcel to Dawson by parcel post, is it thrown out on the way or sent back to me?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. During the period of navigation all mailable matter goes forward to its destination, but when navigation closes we can only carry letters, there is no way of carrying anything beyond a certain number of pounds. When I was passing my Estimates I stated that I was hesitating to take the mails entirely away from the Mounted Police during the winter, although I was desirous of divorcing the mail service from the police as rapidly as possible. We advertised for tenders for carrying the mails for four years during the winter. Several tenders were received, among them one from the Canadian Development Company, a large steamboat company, the manager of which is Mr. Maitland Kersey, a very enterprising man, and the company possesses a great deal of credit. They tendered for the service for four years, not only for a winter, but for a summer service as well. They tendered for a weekly service during the winter, and they also tendered for a twice-a-week service at least between Bennett and Dawson and between Bennett and Atlin, and as more frequently as the steamers plied between these respective points. Their tenders covered the period we asked for and they also covered a period that was not asked for in the advertisement, namely, the summer. Their tender for the year round was $75,000. The lowest tender for the winter service was $64,000, $49,000 for the service between Bennett and Dawson and $15,000 for the service between Bennett and Atlin. We are paying now at the rate of about $14,000 for the summer service by a special contract made last winter for the same service between Bennett and Dawson and between Bennett and Atlin. That was the result of the tender. So that I had to determine whether to accept this tender at $75,000 which embraced the winter service for which we had asked tenders and the summer service for which we had not asked tenders. I concluded, after very careful consideration that it would be safe to risk the service with that company, and that it would be better performed by this company, because having steamboats on the river they will be able to continue the service later in the fall when the ice is forming and begin earlier in the spring when it is thawing and places are being opened up in the river. I made a contract with the approval of the Government with the company for four years. This is a strong company financially. They have a number of vessels; they are building huts, procuring supplies and they are identified with the trade of the country. They are catering for the passenger and freight traffic, and this will offer an inducement to them to give a good service to the department.

Mr. FOSTER. With all these improvements going on you may have a railway service in there in four years.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. There is a clause in the contract making it terminable.

Mr. SPROULE. I noticed in the paper, I think, to-day, that the last mail got there in six days from Victoria and in ten days from Ottawa. Was that carried by this company?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It was by the Development Company.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it expected that they can make their usual trips in that time during the season of navigation?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Well, there are dangerous places. We allow them five days from Bennett to Dawson.

Railways and Canals—

Income ..... $4,741,100

Mr. BERGERON. Mr. Speaker, before we go from the items on Railways and Canals there is one matter that I would like to bring to the attention of the House. I am sorry that the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair) is not here, because it puts me in rather a difficult position. I want to bring to his notice and to the notice of the House a case, which I think, is a very hard one—a dismissal which took place at Rivière du Loup. I also notified the hon. member for Temiscouata (Mr. Gauvreau), that I would bring this case up because he is concerned in it, but he is not here. It may be that I could have done it before, but I had not the occasion. I do not know whether I should go through the whole case or simply put the facts before the House and leave it to be discussed at another session. We may be here very soon again, because we are going away so late, and if the Government carry out this new idea that has been broached so often of calling the session earlier we may be here at an early date. This case is one which refers to a man named Bernier, a blacksmith, employed in the shops at Rivière du Loup. This man Bernier has always done his duty and has been looked upon as a good man. Trouble arose last spring when they were making the electoral lists for Temiscouata. The workers for each party were at the municipal hall and they were preparing the lists when somebody said: There is a young man by the name of Bernier who wants to be put on the list, the son of the employee of whom

I spoke. His name was put down, but some objection was made to this. Somebody said that he was not 21 years of age, and that consequently he could not be on the list. It was suggested that his father, who was working not far away should be called in and asked to say whether his son was 21 years of age or not. This idea was accepted, and the father came and declared that his son was 21 years of age, and that he was in a position to be put on the list. For that reason, a few day afterwards the father was dismissed for political partisanship. This created a certain uneasiness amongst the people of the place. The man was known to be a very respectable man, and a very good worker. The papers, of course, took hold of the matter, and there was some correspondence. In "Le Courrier du Canada" the facts were mentioned, and a letter appeared, signed "A Liberal," which I want to read and put in "Hansard," so as to show how these matters of partisanship are looked upon by our Liberal friends in the district of Quebec. It has gone very far in the province of Quebec. I think the word "tyranny" is not too strong to express what has been done by the Liberal workers in that province, particularly in that part.

Mr. LAVERGNE. What is the name ?

Mr. BERGERON. There is no name.

Mr. LAVERGNE. It is written by a Conservative.

Mr. BERGERON. I said I notified the hon. member for Temiscouata (Mr. Gauvreau) that this letter, signed "A Liberal," was believed to have been written by him. It is not my fault that the hon. gentleman is not here ; but, when he reads this another session, he will declare whether it was written by him or not. This is the letter—I will read it in English :

To the Editor.

As there seems to be a desire to make some noise in Temiscouata anent the dismissal of Mr. Nap. Bernier, permit me as a friend of the Liberal party, cognizant of the facts, to put the matter in its true light.

Mr. Bernier, an employee in the Intercolonial Railway shops, is a Conservative, like many of his fellow-workmen in the Rivière du Loup shops.

Desiring to enter his son on the voters' list, he had the bad luck to apply to Mr. S. C. Rioux, the grand Conservative leader of the town, in order to carry out his purpose. It was not until after a contestation that he made oath that his son was 21 years of age.

Hence he was not dismissed solely for having taken the oath, but for having intrusted his case to one of our opponents.

He should have known that parties are sharply divided at Frazerville, and that being an employee of a Liberal Government he was rash in applying to the opposite party in order to make another Conservative voter in his family.

This is most unfortunate for him ; but is it not still more so to see the fathers of families who have been life-long Liberals wanting the means of earning their bread and finding no employment whatever, whereas in common justice they ought to have a share of the positions of those whom their friends have placed in the shops after discharging a host of good Liberal workmen ?

Naturally the Conservatives will seek to make political capital out of this dismissal, but fortunately their past history is there to afford us an unanswerable defence, and when the day of reckoning comes it will be easy to strike a balance between us.

Naturally, also, our member, Mr. Gauvreau, comes in for his share of the blame ; and "Le Courrier du Canada," with other papers, at the instigation of one who is well known, attacks the member for Temiscouata in relation to his dismissal.

We are convinced he will be none the worse of the attack, and that he will continue to promote the interests of his county, and to make like examples as often as circumstances justify him in making them.

In cases of dismissal, Hon. Mr. Blair, on the affidavit of citizens of the county, promptly gives orders to Moncton to carry out his decisions—orders which are not always executed with promptness, but which are executed in the end, all the same, in the interest of the party, in the several counties traversed by the Intercolonial Railway.

In the case of Mr. Bernier, Hon. Mr. Blair found the charges sufficiently weighty to order his dismissal, which is now irrevocable—and it must be so, for a Minister who orders a dismissal must do it with knowledge of the case, and there are few cases of precedent here where a Minister has revised a previous decision, unless where he has been deceived as to the facts, and this is of rare occurrence.

By the way, is it not strange to see so much ado about the dismissal of one Conservative, when we know that some twenty more of them might have justly been so treated, but have been spared for reasons which it would be too long to enumerate. When the proper time comes, our member will give an answer on all points to all.

A LIBERAL.

I may say that there is another letter here, which I will not read. The whole story is denied. Mr. S. C. Rioux, the Conservative lawyer who was accused of putting this man on the list, denies that he did so. The man had his name brought there by some of the workers, and the story is, that the father went in and swore that his son was over twenty-one years of age, and for that reason the father, who is a blacksmith, occupying a very ordinary position in the shops at Rivière du Loup, was dismissed. I was asked to bring the matter before the House, and it was my duty to do so. This will go on record with the other cases of dismissal for which the Government are answerable.

Customs ..... $399,090

Mr. WALLACE. I wish to make a few remarks on the subject of the customs ; and at this late stage of the session, I shall make them as brief as possible. I regret that the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) is not here. I left this matter over last night because of his absence ; but as he is not here now, there is nothing for me now but to go on with the statement I have to make. It is a matter of the utmost importance that the Trade and Navigation returns should be a correct statement of the business affairs of the country so far as we can ascertain the facts. In the past, they have been fairly accurate. In the case of our exports to the United States, we have added ten per cent, as that seemed to be a fair addition in view of the fact that some who were exporting to the United States did not make the customs entry. In our statements of the business of the country, imports have been divided into two classes—imports for home consumption, and imports of goods in transit through the country. Our exports have likewise been divided into exports the product of Canada and exports not the product of Canada. In the Trade and Navigation returns for the year ending 30th June, 1898, we have statements which are very wide of the fact. If you turn to page 539 of these Trade and Navigation Returns, you will find that the imports of Indian corn are given: Imported, 19,770,000 bushels; entered for home consumption, 19,771,000 bushels. The value in round figures is $7,000,000. I need hardly say that that is not a correct statement. Members on this side during the present session have asked questions about this matter, and members on the other side have said: Do you know that these 19,000,000 bushels were entered for home consumption, but were simply in transit. That is actually the state of the case. When we look to the exports, at page 666, we find we have exported Indian corn, not the product of Canada, 14,330,000 bushels, valued at $5,165,000. So we retained for home consumption the difference between 19,770,000 and 14,330,000, or say, 5,500,000 bushels in round figures. But the Trade and Navigation returns, in order to impress the people of Canada, and of the world with the size of Canada's trade, put forth a statement which is absolutely false and misleading. The imports of Canada for home consumption are given at $130,000,000. But this item alone reduces them by over $5,000,000. When an article is brought in for home consumption, the money of the people is used to purchase it, and it is converted into something that produces wealth, or goes to the sustenance of the people. It is an addition to the wealth of the nation. But this corn that went through the country cannot be classed in that way. A great part of it came over the Parry Sound and Canada Atlantic Railways from Parry Harbour to the harbour of Montreal, and the only advantage that Canada got from it was the few cents a bushel earned in transferring it from the vessel at one end over the line and into the vessel at the other end. Then, there were other means: some of it came down the Grand Trunk Railway, and the same would apply to what came down by the Grand Trunk Railway. But part of this American corn came from Chicago, from Milwaukee, from Duluth, in American vessels, down the great lakes, through the Welland Canal, down the St. Lawrence, and were transferred in Montreal; and Canada did not get a dollar's worth of benefit out of a thousand bushels of this grain that was landed in ships in the port of Montreal. In that case, this $7,750,000 that are credited to Canada as the trade of Canada, represented simply articles passing in transitu in American vessels from the port of Chicago to the port of Montreal, where they were landed on ocean vessels. Thus, the statement which says that this was part of the trade of Canada and part of the goods of Canada, entered and used for home consumption, is entirely misleading. But the Minister of Customs said: Oh, look at my explanatory notes.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Of course, my hon. friend knows these goods were entered for home consumption, and if they were entered for home consumption, and the exporter saw fit to export them afterwards, how would you deal with that?

Mr. WALLACE. They were not entered for home consumption at all, because there was a through bill of lading; they were only in transitu, and should be so entered.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He knows that in former years, when they were dutiable, it was necessary to enter them that way. But the corn being now free, how can you oblige a man to enter it in any other way than for home consumption?

Mr. WALLACE. For this reason, that the corn which comes through now, was exactly the same corn and under the same conditions as in former years. This was not a through entry; it was not an entry at all. Does the hon. gentleman tell me that that corn that came from Duluth, or Milwaukee, or Chicago, in an American ship, down through the lakes, and through the canals, and was loaded on a vessel in Montreal—that it was entered for home consumption in Canada?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If the book says so, I say it is correct.

Mr. WALLACE. I say the facts are not so, and the hon. gentleman knows that the facts are not so, and the books cannot state a falsehood—the customs officers cannot permit a falsehood to be inserted. The Minister of Customs found that out, and he put some explanatory notes in the Trade and Navigation Returns for this year. He says:

In General Statement No. 37, of imports and goods entered for consumption, the term "entered for consumption" is the technical term in use at the custom-house, and does not imply that the goods have been actually consumed in Canada, but that they have passed into the possession of the importer, and that duty has been paid on that portion liable for duty.

What does that mean? Simply that they were entered for consumption, a term which we thought indicated, and was the barometer of, the business of this country. The Minister of Customs tells us now that it has no meaning at all, that it is a technical term used by the customs officials for their own convenience. He says: Look at General Statement No. 37. Suppose we look at General Statement No. 37, page 609. We find there: Total value of imports entered for home consumption, $130,000,000; imports of goods in transit and not entered for home consumption, including all the imports, $140,000,000. So, what we could justly regard as the business of the country, goods entered for home consumption, amounts to $136,698,000. But the Minister of Customs tell us: Do not regard what I said about that; do not regard that solemn statement entered here on page 609. Set that at naught, because it is only a technical term used by the customs officials. Well, thousands of people who use this book as a book of reference to calculate the trade and business of the country—yes, and the Ministers themselves—tell us: See how our trade has grown, the greatest in the history of the country. Our imports for home consumption are $130,000,000, when at the same time they know that they are only $125,000,000, when by their own statements the trade is only $125,000,000. Sir, that statement is not to be regarded as accurate, as meaning what it may be taken as saying. But what about the other statements? In general statement No. 37 you are warned that this does not give an accurate statement of the business of the country. What about pages 626 and 627? What do we find there? We find another somewhat similar statement of the goods entered, an abstract of the countries and the provinces, dutiable and free goods entered for consumption. We find they are stated to be $130,698,000. We turn to page 626, and find another case of misleading the public. We find there: "Imported from the United States and entered for consumption a total of dutiable goods of $38,000,000; of free goods, $40,000,000, or a total of $78,000,000. We know, by the statement I have made with regard to the importation of corn and its exportation, that there are 5,000,000 bushels of corn carried through the whole book, through all the statements, misleading the people; so that, instead of $130,000,000 worth for home consumption, there are only $125,000,000. Then, you turn up statement No. 1, on page 1, and you find the same extraordinary state of affairs. There you will find entered for consumption in 1898 $130,698,000, which should be reduced by $5,160,000. In No. 2, on page 2, you find the same incorrect statement of affairs: you find there a total of imports and of exports which is misleading. In No. 5, page 5, you find the same inaccuracies prevailing, the same old figures, $130,698,000, entered for home consumption, and purporting to be consumed in this country, when the Minister himself announces that it has not been consumed in this country, that we did not import and consume in this country 19,725,000 bushels of American corn in the year 1898, and that 14,000,000 of that went out of the country, leaving 5,000,000 only to be consumed here. Then you find the same misstatements occurring in statement No. 10, page 21, in statement No. 3, page 24, in statement No. 18, page 126, and in several places through the book. This book that we have been supposed to regard as giving a fairly accurate statement of the business of the country is misleading and untrue in that respect. Hon. Ministers boast that the percentage of duty is at a certain figure, that on the total value of goods entered for consumption, dutiable and free, in 1898, it was 16.95 per cent. But, Mr. Speaker, deducting that $5,165,000 worth of corn, which was not used in this country and which had no right to be classified as having been entered for home consumption, you will find that instead of having 16.95 per cent, you have 17.65 per cent. In making a comparison for the last five years, 1892 to 1896, inclusive, it will be found that the average rate of duty on goods dutiable and free was 17.47 per cent. In 1898, the average rate of duty is given as 16.95, or a little less. But, deducting this $5,165,000, it gives 17.65 per cent, a little more than the average of the last five years. The percentage of taxation is an important factor because hon. gentlemen will say: We have reduced the taxation of the people. That statement conclusively proves that they have increased the burdens of the people. The average rate of duty on the imports entered for home consumption and consumed by the people, dutiable and free, was 17.47 per cent for the last five years of the Conservative Administration and 17.65 per cent, or one-fifth of 1 per cent more during the year 1898, and for 1897 still more than that, being 17.87 per cent, according to their own statement. There are many reasons why there should be accuracy, correctness and exactness in the preparation of these returns, but they have made them inaccurate and inexact for the purpose of swelling up the trade returns and making the trade of the country appear larger than it is, although it is larger, I have no doubt, than it was before. They surely ought to be satisfied without making an incorrect statement of the business of the country. The total imports of corn in 1892 were 3,700,000 bushels; entered for home consumption, 1,685,000, and exported, not the produce of Canada, 2,050,000, showing that of the 3,700,000 bushels not more than 1,685,000 were entered for home consumption, remained here and paid duty and that 2,050,000 bushels were exported again. The same state of affairs is shown in 1893. Of the total imports, 5,100,000 bushels, 2,131,000 bushels were entered for home consumption and 2,969,000 were exported, not the produce of Canada, making pretty nearly the same figures and accounting for all the corn that came into the country. One-half of it was entered for home consumption and paid duty, and the other half was sent out of the country, passing through simply in transit. If you come down to the year 1896 you find total imports amounting to 6,050,000 bushels, 2,763,000 entered for home consumption and 2,489,000 exported, not the produce of Canada, accounting pretty nearly for the amount that was imported, almost one-half of it simply passing through in transit. When you come to 1898 you have 19,770,000 bushels of imports, 19,771,000 entered for home consumption, valued at about $7,000,000, and there was exported, not the produce of Canada, 14,330,000 bushels at a valuation of $5,165,000. What we claim is that you should have accuracy in these matters, that you should have a proper statement of the case and that you should not put in this return statements which are not only misleading, but are inaccurate and untrue. Another matter closely allied to this that I called the attention of the hon. Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) to last year, was the statement that the wheat exported from Canada was, in many instances, counted twice for export, that it was returned at such ports as Duluth or Fort William, and that it was again counted at Montreal, or at some other point where it made its exit from the country. I told the hon. Minister of Customs then that I thought it was a duty that he owed to Parliament to make a close investigation into this matter, and to ascertain the truth of that statement as to which I had pretty reliable information. So far as I can learn from the hon. Minister he has made no examination into that statement which, if it were true, would swell the exports of our products beyond what they should properly be, and I have no doubt they have swelled these exports to make them appear larger than they are to-day. At any rate, our imports entered for home consumption are something like $5,000,000 more than they should be, and the same inaccuracy, I have no doubt, prevails in regard to the exports of the country. I call the attention of the House and the country to these facts, because I think it is important that we should realize that the Trade and Navigation Returns should be a reliable statement of the business of the country and not a misleading statement. Business men base their anticipations of the future and conduct their business on the assumption that the Trade and Navigation Returns are a correct representation of the business of the country. If their faith in those returns is shaken, as it will be if they look at them, and if they find that they are not a correct representation of the trade of the country there will be a suspicion of them in other respects, and the people will not have that confidence which it is desirable they should have in official statements made by the Government.

Mr. SPROULE. I would just like to say, since this subject has been brought up, that in looking over that book very carefully, I have noticed pretty much the same thing. It has been a great mystery to me why a book like that should not be made up in such a way that it can be understood by ordinary business men. It seems to indicate a lack of business intelligence on the part of those who get it up. To say that the importations for home consumption are not importations for home consumption is something that seems to me to be absurd. It is confusing and misleading, and does not enable the business community to understand exactly how the trade of the country is.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace) started to attack the Minister of Customs for the unfairness of his report; but all he has proved is that the Minister was so anxious to have it fair and just that he rather went out of his way to insert explanations in it that would prevent misunderstanding. If this corn is entered for home consumption by the people who import it, I do not know whether we have any means of preventing their doing so. Years ago when duties had to be paid on corn, of course it was in the interest of the importer to discriminate carefully between corn in transit for export and corn for home consumption, because corn for home consumption had to pay duty and corn in transit for export was free of duty. But when corn was made free, it was a matter of no consequence so far as the revenue was concerned, whether the importer entered it for home consumption or for export. But it appears from the hon. gentleman's statement that so careful was the Minister to guard against misunderstanding that he discriminated the corn imported for export from the corn entered for home consumption. So that my hon. friend, who started in to curse the Minister of Customs, has had to end by blessing him.

Mr. CLANCY. I am sorry the Minister of Customs is not in his place, especially as some returns have been brought down, and I had his promise that he would consider this matter when the returns were brought down. It is in itself probably not a matter of great magnitude, but since it affects the rights of the civil service and the citizens of Canada, the amount of dollars and cents involved does not determine the importance of the question. I refer to the dismissal of Mr. Caldwell. I will read a report that has been made, and I will ask whether in all fairness a sufficient reason has been given for dismissing this man and depriving him of the sum of money which he would be entitled to have recouped to him from the superannuation fund. It is a serious thing to deprive a man of his position, but it is still more serious to deprive him of what little he has paid into the superannuation fund, and still more serious when you consider his dismissal as a violation of a sound principle. This report was made on the 3rd of March, 1897, by Mr. Colcock, a gentleman who was only a short time in the service, and who, when making this report, seems to have felt that he was skating on official thin ice, and that he might go down himself. Although his own head has come off since, I confess I am not greatly grieved that he went down with those to whom he did not do justice. He says:

Amherstburg has a preventive station under its survey named Anderdon, which I visited on the 25th February ult., and have the honour to report thereon as follows:—

The customs office at Anderdon is the ticket office of the old depot of the Michigan Central Railway at that place, and is situated on the river bank. The waiting-room of the depot is generally open for some time before the arrival of trains to accommodate passengers, and the railway company supply the heat and arrange for a man to look after the building and keep it warm and clean.

It was about 2.30 p.m. when I arrived at the customs office, and found it locked. Procuring a key from the caretaker of the building, I entered the office and found everything in a very disorderly and apparently abandoned condition. No care had been taken of the books, papers, &c. In fact, the books did not appear to have had any entries made therein for some time, and such as had been made did not conform to the regulations.

I subsequently learned that Officer Caldwell was very seldom at his post of duty, most of his time being spent in the town of Amherstburg on other business than customs matters. In his present position, therefore, his services are of little or no value to the department.

No railway business is done at Anderdon that requires the attention of a customs officer, and there does not appear any necessity for an officer to be permanently located there during the winter season. True, there is a long stretch of frontier (some seven miles up the river from Amherstburg), and the river is only about a mile and a half to two miles wide; but from all I could gather there does not appear to be much if any smuggling attempted. During the season of navigation a few small vessels require to report at the dock called "Texas Landing," just above Anderdon. It is the opinion of the collector at Amherstburg that the work at Anderdon could be done as cheap as at Colchester, viz., $50 per year.

In view of the above, I deem it in the interests of the department to suggest that a change be made at the above station, and would recommend that the office be closed during the winter months and arrangements made for the employment of a temporary officer at that point during the season of navigation, the cost not to exceed $50.

Officer William Caldwell was 64 years of age last October. He first entered the service on the 27th October, 1882, and received his appointment as a preventive officer 5th May, 1886. He is, to all appearances, a strong, healthy man, and thoroughly able for active work. His disposition, however, is not active, and when left to himself takes no interest in his work. If he were transferred to a port where he would be under a first-class officer, his services, no doubt, could be utilized to advantage.

I ask if that is a sufficient reason for dismissing an officer and depriving him of his superannuation allowance? I am going to ask the Minister of Finance to give Mr. Caldwell an investigation. It is not safe to take the tittle-tattle you hear on the streets against an officer. Mr. Colcock was called on to make another report. He simply confirms this report, so far as it is any confirmation, merely on street talk. He gets his information from a man who was known to be on bad terms with Mr. Caldwell. I am not going to discredit the report, but it is not the kind of evidence on which a man should be dismissed. I think in all fairness that Mr. Caldwell should have a proper trial, and if he has done no wrong he should be reinstated. If it was thought well to dispense with his services, that would be another matter. The department has every right to economize and to close up a port if necessary, but I understand that another officer was appointed there, notwithstanding Mr. Colcock's recommendation. I am now going to ask the hon. Minister of Finance not to deal with Mr. Caldwell in a summary manner, but to give him an opportunity to defend himself, and deal with him as any Canadian citizen ought to be treated.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE. I shall draw the attention of my hon. colleague the Minister of Customs to my hon. friend's remarks, and he cannot expect me to do more, under the circumstances.

MR. CLANCY. Unless there is grave reason for his absence, the Minister of Customs ought to be here. I admit that the hon. Minister of Finance cannot say more, but he must agree that what he has said is not sufficient, and I take it for granted that he will press the matter on the Minister of Customs and endeavour to have Mr. Caldwell fairly dealt with.

MR. SUTHERLAND. If the hon. Minister is not here, it is because he was unexpectedly called away on private matters of great urgency, and we are all likely to be called off on family business. It was with great regret he found himself compelled to leave.

MR. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman must acknowledge that I made no charge at all.

MR. SUTHERLAND. I quite agree that on general principles the Minister should be here.

Salaries of agents and employees in Canada, Great Britain and other foreign agencies ..... $90,000

MR. WALLACE. I beg to move that this item be reduced by the amount of $3,000, being the amount of Mr. Preston's salary. The disclosures that have been made and the dishonour that would attach to Canada by retaining in our employ, without making him to come here and justify his conduct, a man who is so deeply implicated in occurrences that have come before the courts and the committee of this House, compel me to make this motion. We would be derelict in our duty and disloyal to the best interests of Canada, if we were to allow this item to go through without entering our emphatic protest, and I hope that the Government will accept the proposal, and thus show that they are sincerely desirous of purging the public service of men who have thus besmirched the record of Canada.

Mr. SPROULE. I regard it as a matter of great importance that civil servants should keep out of politics. This man Preston has been the handman of the party opposite for a number of years. He has been in and out of the civil service of the province of Ontario, according as it suited his party. At the time he was employed as librarian he would resign his office and present himself as a candidate, and when defeated would be restored to his office again. He is always at the head of the organization that carried on the elections for hon. gentlemen opposite, and which has been shown to have been guilty of so many discreditable transactions. As head of that organization, Mr. Preston must shoulder the fullest responsibility. It was he who carried on the elections, and he was always available for that purpose, notwithstanding the fact that he was on the civil list of the province. Three years ago the provincial government passed a resolution, that it was vicious in principle for any civil servant to be engaged in election contests, yet, despite that resolution, here was a man, right in the employ of that government, taking part in these contests. Evidently there was an understanding between him and the leaders of his party or he would not have been able to thus violate the law. And at the very time that he was likely to be called on to be examined before the courts in connection with election cases, he was conveniently appointed immigration agent and sent out of the country, where he could not be subpoenaed. That may not have been intentionally done, but the coincidence was remarkable. Though ostensibly in the civil service, during election time he was found constantly attending to the conduct of elections, and drawing a salary at the same time that he was paid for doing his party's work. The sooner we come to an understanding that any man in the employ of the Government shall not take part in elections, the better it will be for the good reputation and pure administration of this country, and the proper conduct of elections. I strongly support this motion, and will welcome the day when such shabby people and shady transactions are banished from public life.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have been over this question before, and it is only necessary for me to state that when anything is proved against Mr. Preston, inconsistent with his duties as an official, then my colleague the Minister of Justice will deal with him.

Mr. SPROULE. How can you do that when you allow him to leave the country?

Mr. WALLACE. Is that telegram of his sufficient proof?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is nothing in that telegram to justify the charges made against Mr. Preston. Hon. gentlemen opposite would have us adopt the old familiar method of hanging a man first and trying him afterwards.

Mr. WALLACE. Does the hon. gentleman propose to try him?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Whenever there is necessity we will, but he will not be hanged first.

Mr. WALLACE. He will not be tried either. Hon. gentlemen opposite dare not try him.

The House divided on amendment (Mr. Wallace.)

Administration of Justice ..... $93,755

Mr. BERGERON. I think this the proper occasion for me to say a few words with reference to a discussion which took place some time ago in this House concerning our judges. I had expected an opportunity to say what I have to say on the Bill relating to the administration of justice that has been standing 'on the Order paper in the name of the Solicitor General (Mr. Fitzpatrick) for three months past, but the right hon. Prime Minister has dropped that Bill. I speak as a representative of the province of Quebec, and I think it is only right that I should say a word in justice to our judges. It has been intimated that the salaries of our judges were not high enough to attract the best men, and so our judges were not first-class lawyers. There has been some correspondence in the press arising out of this matter, and some hon. gentlemen have felt themselves called upon to give some explanations in the House. I am sure that the right hon. First Minister will feel it his duty to concur in what I am about to say. I will not touch upon the question whether the judges' salaries are high enough—that is a question that could not be fairly discussed unless it were treated at a length which would not be acceptable to hon. members at this period of the session. As a matter of fact, whether the salaries are high enough or not, I think the judges we have are as good as we could have, even though we paid more. My impression is that we have on the bench the best lawyers that are to be had. That may be a reason why the salaries have not been increased before now. I do not make any distinction. I have known some of them long before they were appointed to the bench, and I have known them since, and the opinion I have heard expressed on all sides is that our judges work hard, that they are learned in the law, and that their reputation is above reproach in every respect. So far from anything being said against their capacity, they are universally respected for the work they do and the knowledge they display. We know that to-day there are very few things remaining which enjoy public respect, as for politics, they have ceased to be respected long ago. But there is one thing that the masses of the people still respect, and that is the bench, and it would indeed be a sad thing if the time should ever come when the people ceased to respect the bench. I have thought it my duty to say this much in justice to our judges in the province of Quebec, than whom no better men could be found for the position.

Militia ..... $77,199 30

Mr. FOSTER. I wanted to ask a question of the Minister of Militia and Defence. What time do the 8th Hussars go into camp?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think it is the 12th of September.

Mr. FOSTER. Are there any changes yet?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The general is absent, and is expected back here on Tuesday. The changes the hon. gentleman refers to are going to be made within the next week.

Public Works—Quebec—

Victoriaville, public building, &c..... $8,000

Mr. FOSTER. As a protest against the appropriation of money for building post offices and public buildings in small places with very small populations and very small revenues, I beg to move:

That the amount of the vote for the Victoriaville public building be reduced by the sum of $8,000.

Motion negatived on the same division as the last.

Harbours and Rivers—

Nova Scotia ..... $108,050

Mr. DAVIN. I wish here to enter my protest against this long string of wharfs which appear, on the face of them, to be electioneering votes. I will not, at this late hour, divide the House. I beg to move:

That the appropriation for Cribbon's Point, repairs to breakwater, be reduced by $1,000.

Mr. SPEAKER. I declare the motion lost.

Mr. FOSTER. On the same division.

Mr. ROGERS. Why should it be declared lost on the same division, as one of the members has left and gone home? How can it be on the same division?

Mr. SPEAKER. Lost on division.

Harbours and Rivers—

Quebec ..... $113,450

Mr. BERGERON. I move :

That this resolution be reduced by $5,500, being the appropriation for Sabrevois wharf.

Motion negatived on division.

Mr. WALLACE. I beg to move that this resolution be struck out.

EXPROPRIATION ACT.

Bill (No. 185)—from the Senate—to amend the Expropriation Act, read the second time, considered in committee, read the third time and passed.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 12.10 a.m. (Friday).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, 11th August, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

PRAYERS.

THE PRIME MINISTER'S INVITATION TO CHICAGO DEMONSTRATION.

Mr. DAVIN. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I should like to call the attention of the House to a newspaper statement that is made this morning, to the following effect :—

Chicago, Aug. 10.—In a personal letter to H. H. Kohlsaat, of the Chicago "Times-Herald," Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian Premier denies the truth of an interview recently given out by F. W. Fitzpatrick, of the Treasury Department, Washington,—

And so on.

In his letter Premier Laurier says : " You are at liberty to say that I have paid no attention to an interview published recently in a Washington paper, in which the reporter purported to give to the public words not spoken to him by me, but somebody else. Life is too short for a busy man to take notice of this kind of hearsay evidence. If I had any communication to make to the public I would prefer to make it directly and in my own words. It seems to me that I need hardly add that the invitation of the Chicago authorities will receive from me the most courteous consideration."

I should like to ask the right hon. gentleman whether that is authentic ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I would not say to every word, but the substance of it is authentic.

REVENUE FROM WHARFS.

Mr. FOSTER. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to remind the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that he was to bring a statement of the revenue of certain wharfs.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). I may say to my hon. friend that I asked my officers for that, and they say that the wharfs have been just completed, but have not yet been handed over to the department.

Mr. FOSTER. The wharfs of Lake St. John must be completed.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The information I have from the deputy accountant is that they are not.

Mr. FOSTER. All I can say is that the deputy accountant must be wrong. There have been wharfs on Lake St. John for years. There may not have been fees collected, but there should have been.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The memorandum I have is that the wharfs on Lake St. John are not under the control of our department, as they have not yet been transferred by the Department of Public Works, and, therefore, there is no return of fees.

Mr. FOSTER. The Minister had better look into that.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I will, of course.

DISTURBANCE IN THE LIBRARY.

Mr. DAVIN. Before the Orders are called, I should like to make mention of a circumstance in order to do no wrong to any one. I asked the Premier the names of two messengers for whom a vote was taken, and in connection with that I made the statement that the peace of the library had been very much disturbed. It is barely possible that the inference may have been drawn that one of the messengers mentioned by the Premier was responsible for that disturbance. I have identified the persons mentioned by the Premier, Bordeleau and Meiklejohn. I have to say that Meiklejohn is a most exemplary servant, not only a good messenger, but whenever I have asked him to find books for me he has shown intelligence. The offender undoubtedly is Bordeleau. I have been called to task by some members of the House for not having earlier called attention to Bordeleau's conduct, but I did not like to do it. He has time now to consider how he will act.

THE GASPE ELECTION.

Mr. FOSTER. There are two matters which I have informed the right hon. gentleman I would bring before the House, and while we are waiting we might as well dispose of them now. The first is with reference to an officer of the Customs Department, and I am sorry the hon. Minister of Customs is not present. I have been asked to bring the matter before the House, but have not brought it up previous to a request being made repeatedly to the Government itself to take it up and investigate it, and it is because the Government has not taken the matter up that it has been placed in my hands to bring before the House. I could not do this better than by reading a copy of the statement made by Mr. Thomas Ennis, a physician of Grand River, in the county of Gaspé, who was a candidate in the constituency of Gaspé at the last election against the present member (Mr. Lemieux). I gave notice that I would bring this up, and Mr. Lemieux was informed of my intention, but he is busily engaged in Montreal, and I held the matter over yesterday, hoping he might be here to-day, but as he is not, and as this is the last day of the session, I am obliged to bring it up now, although I did not decide to do so until after consultation with the right hon. First Minister.

The accusation is that a gentleman in the employ of the Customs Department was guilty of a grave offence during the elections of 1896, at which the complainant, Mr. Ennis, was a candidate in the Liberal-Conservative interest. A copy of the declaration made by Mr. Ennis is this :

CANADA.
Province of Quebec.
County and District of Gaspé.

I, the undersigned, Thomas Ennis, physician and surgeon of Grand River, in the county of Gaspé above named, do hereby solemnly declare as follows :—

That I have copied the hereunto annexed letter purporting to be one sent by Samuel E. St. O. Chapleau, Clerk of the Crown in Chancery of Canada, to Lawyer Auguste Beaudry, of Percé, Gaspé County, from the original now in the possession of the said Mr. Beaudry.

That the name of Mr. H. A. Lamirande, mentioned in that letter, is the false and assumed name taken by H. A. Lemieux, Esq., of Montreal, assistant inspector of customs, who, in June, 1896, made himself so known during an electoral campaign in Magdalen Islands.

That the said Mr. H. A. Lemieux was at that time a clerk in the Montreal customs office, but played the role of an active political partisan by working and canvassing in the political interests of his son, Rodolphe Lemieux, now a member of Parliament, and at that time a candidate for election to Parliament.

That on the 23rd day of June, 1896, the said H. A. Lemieux acted as representative of his son at poll No. 41, Basin, Magdalen Islands, and took the required oath of such representation, which he signed as H. A. Lamirande, whom he personated.

That in the presence of witnesses, Mr. R. Lemieux, M.P., called his father by the name of Lamirande, whilst the father called him Lemieux, in order to conceal his identity, and that the Government of Canada has been made aware of his active political partisanship and the personation which he has been guilty of on that occasion.

That I have repeatedly brought this serious matter to the notice of the Government of Canada, by letter and solemn declaration sent to the Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Hon. Mr. Paterson, and to the Hon. David Mills, Minister of Justice.

That notwithstanding the gravity of the offences charged against H. A. Lemieux, the Government refuses and neglects to investigate the same, whilst they have dismissed, at the bidding of Mr. R. Lemieux, M.P., a great number of office-holders in Gaspé County on the ground that they had been active political partisans.

And that I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and having the same force and effect as if made under oath, and I make it under authority of the Canada Evidence Act, 1893.

(Sgd.) THOMAS ENNIS.

Signed before the undersigned, one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the district of Gaspé, at Grand River, in the aforesaid county of Gaspé, on the 23rd day of June, 1899.

(Sgd.) M. J. AHERN, J.P.

The letters to which Mr. Ennis refers are as follows:—

Office of the Minister of Justice,
Ottawa, 4th October, 1898.

Dear Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter, and in reply beg to say that the subject to which it refers is not one within the jurisdiction of my department. The inspector of customs is an officer of the Minister of Customs, and if any action is called for in respect to his conduct it is for the Minister of Customs and not for the Minister of Justice to act. I have forwarded your letter of the 28th ultimo to the Minister of Customs for his consideration.

Yours faithfully,

(Sgd.) DAVID MILLS.

Thomas Ennis, Esq.,

Grand River, Gaspé County, P.Q.

The following is a translation of the letter referred to, as well in the declaration:—

Office of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, Ottawa, 14th September, 1897.

A. Beaudry, Esq., Percé, Que.

Sir,—In answer to your letter of the 9th instant, I must say that H. A. Lamirande appears to have taken his oath as the representative of one of the candidates at the election of the 23rd June, 1896, at polling booth No. 41.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your humble servant,

(Sgd.) SAMUEL E. ST. O. CHAPLEAU,
C.C.C.

I do not propose to make any comments upon these, further than simply to say that here is a solemn declaration made by a gentleman who, from all the information I have, is a thoroughly reputable and honourable man. He was a candidate in the election at which this occurrence is declared to have taken place. He has himself personal knowledge of what took place, and the House has heard the declaration which he made and to which he appended his signature. The person charged with the offence was an assistant inspector in the Customs Department. At that time he was not performing the duties of his office at Montreal, but was in the county of Gaspé, as a political partisan and acting, as is stated as the representative of the Liberal party in that election. That itself constitutes, I think, a gross offence. It ought to, at least in the opinion of hon. gentlemen opposite, but the larger, the graver offence is the charge made that Mr. Lemieux, inspector of customs, absenting himself from his duties in Montreal and vicinity, and taking the part of a political worker in Gaspé County, represented the present Government at poll No. 41, and represented it under the name of H. A. Lamirande, and signed the declaration "H. A. Lamirande," instead of his own name. That is the offence which, if proved—and I have read the allegations made by Mr. Ennis—constitute an offence which deserves not only dismissal from office, but something more than that. The attention of the Minister of Justice is called to it. He washes his hands of all responsibility—he transfers the question to the Minister of Customs. The attention of the right hon. Premier is called to it. He washes his hands of all responsibility, he says it is a matter within the province of the Minister of Customs. And the Minister of Customs does nothing. No, I am wrong in that, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Customs does do something; for I am credibly informed, that since that time and with a knowledge of this allegation, this gentleman has not only not been dismissed, but has actually been promoted in the service of the department. Now, I leave that case with the House, more especially with the Government, most especially with the Minister of Customs and the right hon. gentleman who leads the Government. I say from my place in the House that it is a matter which when brought before the House, which demands serious and instant investigation; and if the charge made is true, it demands instant and speedy punishment.

Mr. FOSTER.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Sir Richard Cartwright). I am not familiar with the matter that the hon. gentleman has laid before the House, in fact I have now heard this affidavit for the first time. Unfortunately, the Minister of Customs has been called away by some urgent business, and it is rather difficult to say in his absence what action has been taken. Of course, the matter will be brought to his attention now that the hon. gentleman has mentioned it here. It is just possible that the Prime Minister who, I think, had some conference with the ex-Minister of Finance (Mr. Foster) on the subject, may know something more about it than I do. All I can say is that I will call the attention of the Minister of Customs at once to the statement made by the hon. gentleman.

INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

Mr. MARTIN. I desire to ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies), when I may expect the return that I asked for—

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). It has been brought down. I promised the hon. gentleman yesterday, or the day before, that I would send over for it. I sent over for it, and it is in the Clerk's hands.

Mr. MARTIN. I made inquiry and was told that it was not there.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. All I can say is that it was presented by my own hand.

WAYS AND MEANS—INSPECTION ACT.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. DAVIN. Before the House goes into committee, I desire to say, very briefly, one or two things. I wish to say how gratified, and at the same time somewhat pained I am by what recently took place in regard to the North-west Territories in this House. It will be remembered that when the Bill to amend the Inspection Act was before the House, I moved to add a clause. That clause was vehemently opposed by the North-west members on that side, with the exception of the hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Oliver), and when it came to vote, the whole Liberal party, with the exception of the hon. member for Alberta, voted against me. Shortly after that—it is now common property—the Government acknowledged that what I proposed to do was the right thing to do, that the Bill needed such a clause to complete it. I may explain that the clause I moved was necessary in justice to the small farmer, for whom no provision had been made in the Bill. Now, the Bill goes up to the Senate, and in the Senate the very clause that was voted down here is adopted; and back the Bill comes and is approved. I am very gratified to know that the clause which was so much needed became part of the Bill by reason of the action of the Senate and of this House. You, Sir, as a man with great agricultural knowledge, will be interested in a brief explanation of the matter. The clause of which I am now speaking, which I am glad to say will now become part of the law of the land, is, as I say, a clause to meet the needs of the small farmer. Section 14 of the schedule would meet the case of a large farmer who would have a whole car-load of wheat to ship. But when the small farmer comes in with a load or two loads, what happens is this: Two or three buyers rush for their lives to reach him, and the first buyer who gets up on the load looks at the grain and probably calls it No. 2. No other buyer will dissent from that. More than that, he will probably tell the farmer exactly what price he will get for it, and the other buyers will not dissent from that. And for this reason—that a telegram comes from Winnipeg every morning fixing the price. It was to meet that case that I wanted to put in the clause, which there was no use whatever in attempting in the face of what had occurred to the clause providing for a sample being sent to Winnipeg. I want to point this out, that the reason given—and I can prove it—why that clause was not allowed to go through in this House was not because the conscience and opinion of this Government were against it, but because the North-west members, namely, the member for Saskatchewan (Mr. Davis), the member for East Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas), and the member for Macdonald (Mr. Rutherford)—the members for Saskatchewan and Macdonald, those two charming specimens of humanity, and the member for Assiniboia—did not want this reform, which they admitted was necessary, to pass in this House, forsooth, because Davin had proposed it and because Davin would get the credit of it. Why, if the old Government had acted in that way, and if this Government for the four sessions it has been in power acted in that way, and would not do anything that Davin proposed because he proposed it, no matter how good it was, then some very necessary reforms which have taken place would still remain to be accomplished.

WAYS AND MEANS—LOST POSTAL NOTES.

Mr. BERGERON. I desire to ask the Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock) a question. I have a letter here addressed to a colleague of mine, who is absent, explaining that the writer lost through the mail two months ago two bons de poste, and wants to know if duplicates will be issued or the money refunded?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I suppose those are postal notes?

Mr. BERGERON. I do not know. I can send the letter to my hon. friend (Mr. Mulock).

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Does he state the amount?

Mr. BERGERON. No.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. If the letter refers to postal notes, the rule of the department is that at the expiration of three months, if they are still missing, we issue duplicates. Postal notes are another form of money order, representing sums from 30 cents up to $5.

Mr. BERGERON. He does not mention the date, but the letter is dated 28th of July.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. At the end of one month more, we will issue duplicates, if the postal notes do not turn up.

Mr. BERGERON. I will answer this man.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Send me that letter, and I will attend to it for you.

Mr. WALLACE. I would ask the Postmaster General if members of Parliament have the right to send parliamentary documents from their homes during recess.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The privileges of members are determined by the Post Office Act, and it is not in the discretion of any Minister or the Government as a whole to give those rights.

Mr. WALLACE. Is there anything definite in the Act on that point?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. If my hon. friend wants me to give him a legal opinion, of course I will have to refer him to the statute. I think there is a clause in the Post Office Act saying that all documents published by order of Parliament or any provincial legislature, are entitled to transmission free.

VIOLATIONS OF INLAND REVENUE ACT.

Mr. BERGERON. There is a question I want to ask the hon. Minister of Inland Revenue about some tobacco seizures, which took place on the 16th of February, 1898, from Joseph Hudon and Alfred Lafontaine, at St. Paul de Chester; and on the 7th of March, 1898, from one Contant, a merchant of the village of Warwick. A demand was made upon Mr. Simpson, collector of revenue at Sherbrooke, to proceed against those people, and the answer was given that he had done everything in his power, but no instructions had been received from Ottawa, and he could do nothing more about it. I want to know why, if such orders have been given, proceedings against these people have been stopped.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière). There was a seizure made against Lafontaine for one pound of smuggled tobacco that he had bought from a passing peddler. In the case of Hudon, 46 pounds were seized, and in the case of Contant, 48 pounds were seized. In all these cases the parties asserted in the most positive manner that they had got that tobacco from a peddler, a man with whom they were not acquainted, who went about the country selling that tobacco. I may mention, what the hon. gentleman will readily understand, that seizures are one of the greatest difficulties we have to contend with. When a seizure is made for illicit distillation, I do not hesitate for a moment to take proceedings at once, and to impose the full penalties of the law, but in cases like these I have mentioned, I must say that I consider I have a right to exercise my judgment. In the cases of these seizures for such small quantities of tobacco, I could not bring myself to apply the law. The statute says that in such cases the penalty should be $200, there is no discretion to make it any less. I may add that I confiscated the tobacco, but I could not bring myself to impose that penalty.

REVIEW OF THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Mr. FOSTER. At the risk of taking up a little time before a small and impatient audience, I am obliged, out of considerations of public duty, to make a few remarks with reference to matters that have been more or less before the country for the last three years, and especially during this session of Parliament. Just on the eve of passing the Supply Bill, I do not think it would be without service to the country that a fair statement should be made from the point of view of the Opposition with reference to matters appertaining thereto; and I intend to end the few remarks I make with a motion which will represent, I think, very fairly the views of the gentlemen on this side of the House with reference to these matters. It would take an acute power of analysis and the tongue of more than one Demosthenes adequately to investigate and portray the lapses, and omissions, and the wrongful commissions of this Government since they have come into power. Lacking both of these, I will have to content myself with a plain and simple statement.

Now, Sir, in the first place, what do I find? I find that the Liberal party went to the country with certain well-defined principles, which, bound together, constituted what they called their policy, and upon which they appealed to the country for support, for a change of administration, and for the elevation of themselves and their party to the seats of Government in this country. Without taking all these into account, briefly, these principles of their policy were as follows: First, a reduction in the taxation of the country; second, a decrease in expenditure; third, a diminution in the public debt, or at least that the public debt should hereafter cease to grow; again, the extermination of the principle and practice of protection; again, the independence of Parliament and the purity of the electorate. They also were in favour of the abolition of railway bonuses or subsidies, and they were in favour of, and pledged themselves to, an honest and economical and business administration. Well, Sir, let us take up, briefly, the different principles enunciated by the party as I have stated them to-day, and see what the outcome has been. First, with reference to customs taxation. We find by the public accounts that the average customs taxation from 1882 to 1896, inclusive, was $19,839,684. That takes in the period of the last five years of Liberal-Conservative administration. In 1896, the last year of that Administration, the customs taxation was $20,219,037. These gentlemen came into power in 1896. In 1898, during the first full year of their tariff, they took as customs taxation, $22,157,788, and for the year 1899 the unrevised figures stand at $25,157,931. That relates to customs taxation alone. It is a well-known fact that the two branches of taxation are customs and inland revenue taxation. If you take the two branches of taxation, customs and inland revenue, the average for the period from 1892 to 1896 was $27,710,432. For 1896 it was $27,759,285; for 1898, $29,576,456. The unrevised figures for 1899, taking in only eleven months of excise taxation, amount to $33,805,374. Making an estimate of $700,000 for the twelfth month of excise, it gives a total of $34,505,374. So that the total taxation, customs and excise, in 1899, raised by a party which was pledged to reduce the volume of taxation is, in round figures, $6,000,000 more than it was on an average from 1892 to 1896.

Another way of looking at it is the percentage rate of duty. The rate per cent of duty collected on dutiable goods entered for home consumption, on the average, from 1892 to 1896, was 30.25 per cent; in 1896 it was 29.94 per cent; in 1898, 29.22 per cent, and in 1899, 28.74 per cent, a reduction, measured in that way, of only about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent in the rate of taxation which is collected upon dutiable imports. But perhaps a fairer way would be to measure the imposts upon all goods imported for home consumption, whether they were dutiable or free, and if you take that basis, the figures run as follows:—From 1892 to 1896 the average rate was 17.47 per cent, while for 1898 and 1899 the average rate is 16.76 per cent, or just  $\frac{1}{100}$ th of 1 per cent, as a reduction from the average for the years 1892 to 1896. If you measure the amount of total customs and excise taxation on a per capita basis, you will find that the average rate per head of taxation from 1892 to 1896 was \$5.63. In 1896 it was \$5.42; in 1898, \$5.63, and in 1899, about \$6.50, or an increase in 1899 over 1896 of \$1.08 per head of the population. When you take the total revenues which are collected from the pockets of the people in all ways, the figures stand as follows:—The average for the period from 1892 to 1896 was \$36,412,378. In 1896 the amount collected was \$36,618,591. In 1898 it rose to \$40,555,238, while for 1899 the unrevised figures are \$44,698,155, or an increase over 1896 of a little over \$8,000,000, in round figures. Taking the rate per head, we find that the average rate per head of the total revenue collected from 1892 to 1896 was \$7.27; in 1896 it was \$7.14; in 1898, \$7.73, and in 1899, at least \$8.41 per head, or an increase of \$1.27 per head over the average from 1892 to 1896. So, we find that the planks of the platform which declared for reduced taxation, for a reduced rate of impost and reduced expenditures, have been completely disproven, after three years of administration, by the astounding figures which I have read before this House to-day.

When we come to the total expenditures, must I read again something that has been said by hon. gentlemen opposite, lest they forget? Then, I shall have to do it, and I will commence with the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen), at one end of the scale, who declared, and it is a sample of many of his declarations:

I believe we could reduce the expenditure of this country by five or six millions if the Government were only ready and willing to consent to it.

I shall take one step further, and quote what the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) said:

The Liberal party, if in power, could at once reduce the public expenditure, and effect other savings to the extent of $5,000,000 per annum, without impairing the efficiency of the public service.

I will go one step further, and quote what the hon. leader of the Opposition then, the right hon. leader of the Government now (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) said, speaking before a Toronto audience at that time:

The Conservatives say to us, "If you were to come to power you would not be able to decrease the expenditure and practice economy." I do not believe that that would be a difficult task. It would not be difficult to economize one, two, or three millions. Mr. Mills declared to his constituents the other day that it would be quite possible to diminish the expenditure by four millions annually.

Going still another step up the ladder of financial genius, I quote from the present hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright), who declared in this House:

I say it is a disgrace and a shame to the Government that has been intrusted with our affairs that they come down to us and ask for an expenditure of $38,000,000 a year for federal purposes. Sir, the thing is utterly unjustifiable. I have said before, and I repeat it, that $38,000,000 is in my judgment a monstrous sum for this people to be called on to provide.

These hon. gentlemen acceded to power; they took the reins of government; they cut out the lines of expenditure, and with the result that I am going to name now. The total expenditure on all services and all works, which is one of the fairest ways of taking it, was, on the average, from 1892 to 1896, $42,141,763. In 1896 it was $41,702,383; in 1898, $45,334,281, and in 1899, though the figures are not revised yet, it will be in the neighbourhood of $50,000,000. Now, if you take the expenditure per head, it shows in this way: From 1892 to 1896, $8.41; in 1896, the last year of the Conservative Administration, $8.14; in 1898, $8.64, and in 1899, $9.40 per head of the population. New counsels have prevailed, new masters have arisen, and I will now go to the apex of that ladder, that ascending scale, of which the bottom rung is the member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen), and I will read from the authority who is to-day perched upon the apex, to wit, the hon. Minister of Public Works, the Hon. J. Israel Tarte, whose latest deliverance is this:

Thank God, I am not one of those who believe that a country can become great with a decreasing public expenditure. It is only big fools who use such language as this.

What will become of gentlemen who are shrinking and cowering on the bottom rungs of this ladder, when from the apex, their master, and evidently the director of this extravagant expenditure, says to those persons below him, looking down on them, "You are big fools; I am not; I am a wise man; my belief is that no country can ever become great with decreasing expenditures." So much with reference to the plank of the party with regard to decreased expenditures.

With reference to the public debt, that was to decrease, or at least was not to increase; but whereas in 1896 the net debt was $258,497,432, it is now at least $264,283,937, or an increase in the neighbourhood of $6,000,000 in the time that these gentlemen have been in power. So that every one of the financial planks of hon. gentlemen opposite, which they made the essential planks in their platform, on which they stood before the people and asked the people to entrust them with government—all these principles, in the practise of three short years, have been repudiated and utterly thrown to the winds, and a progress has been made in the opposite direction as astounding as it is grave and alarming for the future of this country.

These hon. gentlemen had another plank. They were going to exterminate the principle of protection, and were going to eliminate its practice from the tariff and fiscal system of this country; and what have they done? Why, instead of bringing in the era of free trade as it is in England and a tariff for revenue only, they have—led again by gentlemen who are stronger than perhaps the majority of the Cabinet—incorporated the principle of protection into their Tariff Acts of 1897 and 1898; and, as a result, as the figures which I have read show, whereas under Liberal-Conservative rule the rate of customs taxation upon dutiable and free imports for home consumption into this country from 1892 to 1896 was 17.47 per cent, it has come down now, comparing 1898 and 1899 to the average which I have mentioned, an insignificant reduction of 72-100 of 1 per cent.

The independence of Parliament and the purity of the electorate was a favourite plank in the platform of hon. gentlemen opposite. In what way have these hon. gentlemen illustrated the independence of Parliament and the purity of the electorate? They have done it by an open traffic in seats in both Houses of Parliament. When the present Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair), cannily waiting till the results were decided before he imperilled the position he held in the province of New Brunswick, was called to the Government here, and had perforce to find a constituency for himself, that Minister, like a true peripatetic, went from one end of the province of New Brunswick to the other, seeking rest and finding none—seeking, by means as unworthy of the public life of this country as they ought to be humiliating to himself, to induce men who had been elected to support the principles of the opposite party, to sell out their constituencies in order to give him a place on which he could rest the soles of his feet. No Liberal-Conservative could be seduced, and what happened? By a shuffle, a gentleman who had been elected by his constituents to represent them in this Parliament, the member for Queen's County, was induced to give up his seat, with the promise that he should get a seat in the Senate. The Senate was to be used as the machinery for securing a position in order that the Minister called to the Department of Railways and Canals might find a constituency for himself. But there was no vacancy in the Senate, and one of its members, for the consideration of the governorship, was induced to make a place in the Senate for Mr. King, and Mr. King, in consideration of a senatorship, made a place for the Minister of Railways and Canals in the constituency of Queen's and Sunbury. N.B.

Take the professions of hon. gentlemen opposite and contrast them with this action, and you will easily see how hollow were their professions, and how far they had retrograded and backslidden since they came into office. The same thing with reference to the present Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte). He did not get a constituency at the general election. He wanted one, and how was he to get it? Again the machinery of the Senate was put into operation, and the member-elect for a county was offered and given a seat in the Senate in order to make a vacancy for the present Minister of Public Works. Again, a traffic in the seats of this Parliament. Why should I go further? The Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) was also one of those canny ones who did not intend to jump into the breach until he found which side would be victorious ; and after he saw the smoke of battle had cleared away, so that none of its grime even might soil his immaculate self, he acceded to the pressing request of the present Prime Minister and became Minister of Finance, much to his surprise, and much, I think, to the surprise of another hon. gentleman who sits to-day close beside him. He had no constituency ; when should he get one ? And the simple expedient was again to traffic in public offices. By the simple expedient of giving first a hundred-dollar preventive office, and afterwards a judgeship, to a gentleman who was better qualified for a judgeship by the work that he had done for his party than by his reading or experience in law, this hon. gentleman obtained a seat for himself ; and he sits to-day in this House because the machinery and emolument of an office was used to get him a place which otherwise he could not get. And yet this hon. gentleman—to make a personal allusion—had the poor grace to retail a story with reference to my last electoral contest in King's County as devoid of foundation as it is possible for anything to be—to retail it from a source which he knows himself he would not trust in a financial or any other matter ; no, not for a single shadow of an instant—and in which there was absolutely no truth. It is by traffic such as this that these hon. gentlemen are lifting the standard of the independence of Parliament and the purity of elections. Why should I speak of appointments to office that have been made over and over again with nothing but party advantage and interest in view ?

But to go still further, the Prime Minister himself has set the example, which those under him are only too ready to follow, and the little spark of natural depravity which is inherent in man, has been, by the force of that great example, fanned into a flame which, at times, has absolutely destroyed the better principles of the men who yielded to this pernicious influence. What has the Prime Minister done ? He who held for the independence of Parliament, he who threw back the lapels of his coat and bared his breast in the city of Toronto, as he declared : Put out these corrupt men and put me into power, and, at least, I will give you pure government and honest methods of administration, and I will elevate public morals above the low plane to which they have fallen. He did this—how ? By promising, before those words were cold from his mouth, to Mr. Francois Langeller, of Quebec, that if he would do so and so, he would reward him. Reward him—how ? By giving him something from his own pocket, something that cost him any sacrifice ? No, but he would traffic with him in judgeships and governorships ; and if Mr. Langeller would only do so and so, he would give him a judgeship or the governorship of his province ? Mr. Langeller took the bribe, and kept the promise in his pockets for two years. Finding that the promise was not likely to be quickly performed, he raised such a storm among the faithful old guard in the province of Quebec and hit so hard that this promise had to be implemented, nearly two years after it was made, and after Mr. Francois Langeller had sat in this House and voted faithfully for the Government, many times against his own convictions, as he himself has indicated.

Further still, and I will shock still more my hon. friend from Russell (Mr. Edwards), by going against his favourite doctrine and having something to say in matters not affecting directly the province from which I come. There is a member of Parliament who has a seat in this House—but is not sitting here to-day, he has gone—who got a written promise from the Prime Minister, and who retailed that promise on the hustings in the county of Quebec, in which the Prime Minister pledged himself, over his own signature, to have certain subsidies granted to railways in that county, and used it as an electoral machine. This is the way in which the independence of Parliament, the purity of the electorate, and the general standard of public morals is elevated by the present Administration.

What more ? They have practically repudiated the sound principle, the old-time principle, of awarding contracts for public works and services after public competition and tender. Need I give any instances ? They are everywhere. What have we seen this session in this House ? From the Prime Minister down to the most insignificant member of the Cabinet, not one of them, in the absence of the Minister of Public Works dared stand up and give a straight answer to the question as to whether they would put such and such a work up to public tender. What was the subterfuge ? They said : It ought to be done, I think it should be done, other things being equal it will be done. But behind it all was the reservation : We cannot promise, because the Minister of Public Works is not here. Had the Minister been here, he would have said very quickly, as he did last year : I take the responsibility of doing this by day's work, let the Opposition say what they like.

Shall I take another instance ? There is the instance of militia supplies—$37,000 worth of supplies in one bunch, given without a shadow of public competition and tender. Then there is the clothing contract, given under the assumption that the anti-sweating Act was incorporated in it, but $1,960 was paid for one particular item, which the man who got the contract had full liberty to have made outside of the sweating clause.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). That is not the fact. He had not liberty except to the extent of getting 500 garments made, which it was absolutely necessary, in the public interest, should be made before the men began their drill.

Mr. FOSTER. I am very glad my hon. friend has substantiated my statement. Tenders were called for, and the contract was awarded in September, before there was an attempt to make one of these great-coats, and between that and January all these were made and permission given by the Minister to have them made outside the sweating clause.

Shall I give another instance?—that of Thomas Gauthier, the father-in-law of Mr. Tarte's son? There was some dredging work which was possible; it is not on the public records that the Canada Atlantic, or anybody else, ever asked or pressed for it. It is within the knowledge of Parliament that that dredging was not necessary for two or three years. It is on the papers brought down that the first step taken was a letter from Mr. Tarte to Mr. Gauthier, who was not engaged in that business at all, asking him if he would like to have the dredging to do at so much per hour. Mr. Gauthier took the work, and farmed it out, and pocketed the difference between what the owners of the dredges got and what the Government paid him. That stands clear upon the records of Parliament and is indisputable. The Minister of Public Works defended it by saying: Well, I had to do something for our friends; the Tories had all the dredges, and consequently I could not get any patronage into the hands of our friends unless we accepted the farming out system. This is the way in which this principle of having works done after competition and tender has been repudiated.

But what have this Government done in the bonusing of railways. The Minister of Trade and Commerce in the office-seeking days stood straight and clear—what for? For the abolition of bonuses and subsidies to railways. He formed an alliance with the Patrons, and that was one of the links in the chain of the alliance. Their election literature got out under the sanction of the party and as authoritative as any literature could be distinctly stated that one of the principal planks in the Liberal policy was to do away with this corrupt system of bonusing railways. That was read only a day or two ago in the House by the hon. member for Assiniboia, and is in "Hansard"; I shall not take up time by quoting it again. This declaration was made by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, and also by the Postmaster General, and also by the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen), who said that this principle had been fought for by him and by others in this House and the country, without any rebuke from the leaders of his party, and, therefore, was assented to by them. But what are we doing now in railway bonuses? Why, in what you may call general railway bonuses, this is the banner year in the history of Parliament. $6,500,000 is the minimum sum voted for subsidizing railways, all and sundry, between the Rocky Mountains and the Atlantic coast, in the non-settled and well-settled and other portions of the country, running parallel, running crossways, running every way, unnecessary in many cases, laudable some of them in some respects, but administering to that party, from its own acts, the sternest and strongest rebuke that could be given to their past policy, their past principles and their past professions.

Well, Sir, they promised to maintain an honest, economical and businesslike Administration. How have they illustrated that? By entering upon enterprises involving expenditure of large amounts of money, without having the slightest authority of Parliament to undertake them, and providing the initial expenditures in some cases from votes which had been solemnly passed by Parliament for other and well-defined and well-known services of the country. You may instance this Yukon scheme as an example of entering into prospective expenditure of a vast amount without any authority from Parliament, and binding the Government by a solemn contract a few days before Parliament met. The same thing took place with reference to the Drummond County and Grand Trunk arrangement, in which an expenditure capitalized at $7,000,000 was undertaken by this Parliament without any previous authorization by Parliament, and but a few days in advance of the meeting of Parliament. And, this year, this Government which was pledged, if it could be pledged at all, to the building of telegraph lines into the Yukon by private companies to which Parliament had given franchises, suddenly and within three days of the assembling of Parliament enters into the initial expenditure of a Government telegraph line under the most extraordinary circumstances, and proceeds with the work to-day at an expenditure, which, in the end, will amount to over half a million dollars at the lowest calculation.

Another plank in the platform of the party, as regards its economical administration, was that in small towns and villages care should be taken that large expenditure for public buildings and public wharfs should not be made. When they were in Opposition and the Liberal-Conservatives were in power they challenged us on that principle with reference to the expenditure of public money. To-day what do we find? There is a perfect carnival of expenditure upon public buildings and public wharfs in small and comparatively insignificant places, where there are no revenues, where there is no public necessity on which to base a claim for these expenditures. We can come to no conclusion other than that these are expenditures meant for party purposes. We know that they are expenditures which should be left to municipal and provincial and private enterprise, if they are necessary at all, and not to the subventions of this Government. As a case in point, let me take the village of Victoriaville, not because I wish to single out one in the Premier's constituency, but for the sake of illustration. Victoriaville has how many people? Only about 2,200—it is a mere village. It has a customs revenue to the magnificent amount of $696; it has a post office revenue rising into the astounding sum of $1,900 per year. And yet this village of 2,000 inhabitants with its insignificant revenues and little trade, this village, by the grace of the Prime Minister is to be bedecked with a public building, which at the lowest will cost $8,000, but more probably, from $12,000 to $15,000.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) does not mention the Inland Revenue, which is very considerable, amounting last year to over $10,000, and this year to about $20,000.

Mr. FOSTER. And will my hon. friend (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière) say what in the world the erection of a tobacco factory in this little village, which manufactures the tobacco for a large part of the surrounding country and yields a large revenue to the Government, has to do with the necessity and construction of a public building in that community?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. The hon. gentleman mentioned the revenue for customs and post office as showing the locality had really not contributed to the revenue of the country. Since he has mentioned the post office and the customs, I wondered that he did not think well to mention the excise revenue.

Mr. FOSTER. I will tell my hon. friend why I did not mention it, if he does not understand. I mentioned the customs revenue, because the customs office is a place in which the general commercial and trading public must do business, and, of course, you require a reasonable place in which to do it—

Mr. LAVERGNE. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) will allow me, I will correct an error into which he has fallen. The hon. gentleman says that the customs revenue was $696. It was really $7,300 for the fiscal year ending 30th June last. The excise is $23,000 and the postal revenue is $1,900. Moreover, the Government was paying $200 a year for a building for post office purposes, the lease under which that was having been made by the Government of which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) was a member.

Mr. FOSTER. Not being able to look up everything myself, I am obliged to have recourse to the information given me in this House. The information given me by the gentlemen who are putting the vote through was that the customs revenue was $696. I find, on looking at page 31 the 16th statement of customs duties in the last report, that Victoriaville is given as an outpost and its customs duties are stated to be $696.08. I was in error—by 8 cents.

Mr. LAVERGNE. But that does not cover the latest returns—

Mr. FOSTER. I do not doubt the honesty of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lavergne's) contention, but I can only go by the printed returns and the information given me by the Ministers. If they have made a mistake I am not responsible, and if the hon. gentleman is right, no one will be better pleased than I. This is an example of how public buildings are being scattered over different parts of the country and wharfs are being built on inland lakes and rivers everywhere, to quote the expression used by the Minister of Finance where you find some commercial or manufacturing or industrial or agricultural community which has something to market and which wants facilities for marketing it. These are samples of the expenditure of public money which under this Government has grown to alarming proportions and has taken a course and tendency which, I fear, it will be impossible for this Government or any incoming Government to withstand after the impetus which has been given to it. The knowledge of those things spreads quickly from community to community. It is absolutely impossible that the people of the province of Ontario who, with their private or municipal funds have been building the wharfs along the lakes and rivers, managing them as commercial ventures—it is impossible that that intelligent people shall long be ignorant of the fact that all they will have to do is to approach the Government and have these works paid for out of the funds of the Dominion, as is done in other sections of the country.

With reference to the Yukon management I am not going to dilate upon that. That has been sufficiently discussed, possibly, in this House during the present session. I merely wish to say that in my opinion, and I think it will be the opinion of the country, what has transpired in the Yukon has been of sufficient gravity and sufficient weight to have induced the Government, in justice to themselves, in justice to the country, and in justice to the officials whose names have been mixed up in it, to undertake and facilitate an independent judicial inquiry into those charges; nor do I think that the public sentiment of this country, or of any country which is cognizant of the facts, will come to any other conclusion. Men reason this way: If the Government were not guilty, why do they fear an inquiry? If these things were done, why do they for a moment hesitate to clear the skirts of Canada from the opprobrium which, an account of the alleged maladministration of that country attaches to her? One thing or the other must be true; and the conclusion that will be come to by many people in this country is that the Government refused an investigation because they were afraid of the consequences, and because they did not care to face the consequences. That will all the more be the case because people are quick to see that when there was a party advantage to be gained in Manitoba the Prime Minister gave his promise to a man who was the Attorney General of another province, and dipped his hands into the public treasury without authority or warrant, to the tune of $19,000 or $20,000. To do what? To undertake political prosecutions in the province of Manitoba which should have been undertaken solely and entirely by the province itself. They did it because they wished to clear the good name of the public life of this country from possible wrongdoing in the elections in one of its provinces! But to-day in Dominion elections in this country, and in provincial elections in the province of Ontario, the most undoubted facts of corruption and ballot-box stuffing, and ballot-stealing, have been brought to light, yet you do not find either this Government or their right hand in the province of Ontario, taking any official steps towards punishing the wrong-doers and towards bringing the malefactors to justice. Rather than that, they single out the originator, the prime and sole manager of that machine which the Toronto "Globe" now repudiates in advance of the feeling of its leaders, they single out the originator and manager of that infamous machine as the man to whom they will give the largest salary in the gift of the immigration department, giving him the widest mission in Europe and other countries, on their behalf, providing at one end for the man who did the work on behalf of this Government and of the Ontario party which is the right hand of this Government, as was stated by the right hon. gentleman in a speech made by him in Ottawa at the last local elections.

I do not want to prolong this unduly, but I must touch upon one other thing, and that is the failure of this Government in many ways in a business point of view. We have been in this session five months. Some gentlemen were here the first day and are here now; and I call to witness these gentlemen, from this year's experience and their knowledge of the history of Parliament in this country, if there ever was a Parliament which was called and kept in session for so long a time and which accomplished so little that was of any good to the country as this present Parliament. What is my argument from that? My argument from that is this: That, in the first place, this Government lacks the business ability to properly conduct the affairs of Canada in Parliament. They have been unready, they have been fitful, they have been vacillating, they have been dilatory, they have shown neither tact nor management in conducting the business of the House. It has drifted out from under their hands again and again, and the business of the House has been allowed to go to loose ends. What is more, they started with two principal measures. Where are these two principal measures now? One was a redistribution of the seats, in which they put themselves in the grave position of violating the spirit of the British North America Act, and of introducing into this country an innovation which, if kept up by other political parties, would make of every Parliament a machine of the party which, by virtue of its majority, would fix the districts for the elections upon which that party expected to go to the country. Once in ten years we have to meet that difficulty and overcome it as best and as fairly as we can. Difficult indeed to do it fairly with two parties in the House, even once in every ten years; but if you are going to adopt the idea that any year, whether it is one year before the census or two years after the census, you can undertake a redistribution of seats in the interest of the dominant party, you will bring the public life and the party politics of this country to a condition which will conduce neither to the fair fame nor to the good government and best interest of this country. That measure they have failed upon. The other was a crusade against the Senate. That they have withdrawn.

Another important measure they have been trying to get through this House for two or three years; they passed it this year but they had to revise it of many of its objectionable features, and had to admit here that they were contemplating a bargain which they declared to be a good bargain, but which they had to revise to the extent of saving to this country in expenditure something near three-quarters of a million dollars at least. What have these gentlemen done? What legislation have they passed this session for the good of Canada? Where is the fast Atlantic service? Where is the boon of insolvency legislation? Where is the settlement of those vexed international questions which they were to solve when they came into power, and not one of which is yet solved? Where is this mutual preferential trade that the Prime Minister pledged himself, on the basis of a mutual and common preference, to get for this people if he possibly could, a promise made before the elections? Where is a single market anywhere in this wide world which has been opened up to the people of this country for their products, by any advantage, by any reciprocal tariff, or in any other way, since these gentlemen have come into power? The finger cannot be put upon any one.

Sir, I think the people of this country may be trusted to feel that there is something like honour in politics and something like good-faith that is required of public men; and that despite the majority at present in the House, the arbitrament, after all, is to be before the great tribunal of the people, and the honest heart and intellect of the people in this country will not be satisfied to condone a party which promised one thing in order to gain a seat and repudiated that promise the moment it got the coveted seat. One thing do I say? No, it promised many things and repudiated them all when once it gained the coveted place. There is a spirit among a certain class of men that will allow smartness to take the place of principle, the old fashioned British principle of good faith, but that does not constitute the majority of the people of this country. You may meet a man now and then you will say: The Liberal party got into power, they tricked you, they showed superior smartness. But, after all, what does it matter? They showed that they were more clever than you were. That represents one set of opinions, but there is an old-fashioned honesty, a feeling of British honour in this country which will demand an accounting from men who gained power by pledging themselves solemnly to economy, to lessened expenditure, to lessened taxation, pure administration, independence of Parliament and the purity of the electorate, and who, as soon as they came into power, forgot these promises, who have pursued most diligently the opposite course, and who have sought advantage for themselves by pursuing an opposite course. At this hour, I do not propose to take up any more of the time of this House, but I wish simply to put this statement before the House, and I desire to conclude my remarks by moving the following motion:—

That the following facts with reference to the taxation, revenue, expenditure and public debt of Canada are established from the official records:—

That the Liberal party went to the country in 1896 with a policy declaring, among other things, for:

- (a) Reduction in taxation.
- (b) Decrease in expenditure.
- (c) Diminution of the public debt.
- (d) The extermination of the principle and practice of protection.
- (e) Independence of Parliament and purity of the electorate.
- (f) The abolition of railway bonuses or subsidies.
- (g) An honest, economical and business Administration.

That comparing 1899 with 1896, the amount of customs and excise taxation has been increased by nearly $7,000,000, or by over $1.30 per head of the population, and the total amount collected from the people by over $3,000,000, or about $1.50 per head.

The total expenditure has been increased by about $8,000,000, or over $1.50 per head, whilst the total amount, not including next year's supplementary voted for the year 1899-1900, reaches the astounding sum of $51,796,344, or $13,000,000 more than was voted, and $14,847,197 more than was expended for the year 1896.

The net debt has increased about $6,000,000, and must be seriously augmented by the enormous expenditures authorized at the present session of Parliament.

That instead of exterminating protection and establishing a system of free trade, or tariff for revenue only, they have incorporated the principle of protection into the Tariff Acts of 1897 and 1898, and the results of the year 1898-99 showing that they have imposed a rate of 28.74 per cent on all dutiable goods imported for home consumption as compared with 29.94 per cent in 1896, or upon dutiable and free imports for home consumption of 16.57 per cent as compared with an average of 17.47 per cent for the years 1892-96 inclusive.

That the independence of Parliament and the purity of the electorate have been illustrated by the traffic in seats in both Houses of Parliament for purely party purposes; by the arbitrary and indefensible dismissals from and by interested and unnecessary appointments to public offices in all branches of the service. By the written and authorized promises of office, emoluments and subventions given to members of Parliament and others by the Premier and other members of the Government for electoral and party purposes; by the practical repudiation of the safe principle of open competition—tender and contract as applied to the expenditures of public money, and the giving of contracts by private arrangement to party friends, who thus make profit for themselves at the expense of the country.

That instead of abolishing the system of bonus and subsidies to railways, they have this year, in addition to the payment of $1,600,000 for the Drummond County Railway, and $140,000 yearly for ninety-nine years as rental to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, authorized the expenditure of not less than $6,500,000 for general railway bonuses, in many instances for unnecessary and parallel lines.

That the promise to maintain an honest, economical and business-like Administration has been illustrated by:

(a) The entry upon enterprises unauthorized by Parliament, and for which no appropriation had been made, which involved the expenditure of millions of dollars, and the diversion of moneys specifically voted for distinct and well-defined services to these purposes, thus setting at naught the constitutional principle of parliamentary sanction and appropriation.

(b) By undertaking the construction of public wharfs and buildings which are either totally unwarranted on grounds of public necessity, or which should be left to provincial, municipal or private enterprise.

(c) By an extravagant, inefficient and useless expenditure proposed and carried out in the Yukon district, and a management of affairs there which has exposed the whole system to general suspicion and provoked charges seriously affecting the character and efficiency of the Administration and its officials, and compromising the good name of Canada, which have been refused thorough and adequate investigation before an independent judicial commission.

(d) By its inefficient conduct of the business of Parliament, its failure to achieve much-needed legislation for the good of Canada, to secure a fast Atlantic service, to settle any of the vexed international questions at issue, to induce any mutually preferential trade with other portions of the Empire, or to open up a single new market under improved conditions, reciprocal or otherwise, in any quarter of the world.

That this House is of the opinion that the violation of public pledges, made definitely and solemnly by a party when seeking to change the Administration of the country, is corrupting to public morals, and reprehensible in the highest degree, and, in the case of the present Government, calls for the severest condemnation.

That the astounding increase in all manner of expenditures by that Government, and in the indefensible nature of many of these expenditures, enhancing as they do the already too heavy burdens of taxation, is cause for anxiety and alarm, and threatens great public danger.

That the extravagance, lack of principle and incapacity shown by the Administration calls for censure by this House and the country.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). Mr. Speaker, the spectacle of the hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr. Foster) delivering a homily upon public morality is a very delightful one, and it affords a most inviting subject, if time only permitted. I am going to make a suggestion. As we are all anxious to facilitate the business of the House, and as the Supply Bill ought to be sent to the Senate, and there are one or two other matters, I am going to ask the House to permit me, after the luncheon recess, to make a few observations in reply to the hon. gentleman. In the meantime, I suggest that we use the few remaining minutes before one o'clock to dispose of the business of the House and send it to the Senate; and, after the House resumes, I may be permitted, on a motion to adjourn, to make a few observations in reply to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. FOSTER. I have no objection as to that, so far as I am concerned. Of course, we shall have to dispose of this motion now, and the hon. gentleman can take his chances on the motion to adjourn.

House divided on amendment of Mr. Foster:

Mr. TALBOT. I am paired with the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson). Had I voted, I would have voted heartily for the amendment.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I may say that I have made a full list of the pairs, so far as they are furnished, and have sent them to "Hansard." If they will not print them, it is not my fault.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am glad the hon. gentleman has mentioned the pairs. I paired very early in the session with Sir Hibbert Tupper, and I have noticed that in fifteen or twenty divisions no mention is made of the pairs.

Mr. WALLACE. I think the pairs should be abolished.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Since attention has been called to the pairs, I may say that I am paired with the hon. member for Provencher (Mr. LaRivière). If I had not been paired, I would have voted against the amendment.

Mr. LAVERGNE. I am paired with the hon. member for Restigouche (Mr. McAlister). If I had voted, I would have voted against the amendment.

Mr. SAVARD. I am paired with the hon. member for Montcalm (Mr. Dugas). If I had voted, I would have voted against the amendment.

Amendment negatived.

Motion agreed to; resolution considered in committee, read the second time and concurred in.

SUPPLY BILL.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No.

192) for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money required for defraying certain expenses of the public service for the financial year ending the 30th June, 1900, and for other purposes relating to the public service.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first and second time, considered in committee, read the third time and passed.

PROROGATION.

Mr. SPEAKER. I beg to inform the House that I have received a letter from His Excellency's secretary to the effect that His Excellency will proceed to the Senate Chamber to prorogue this session of the Dominion Parliament on Friday, the 11th inst., at four o'clock p.m.

It being One o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

The House resumed at Three o'clock.

DISMISSAL OF RABBI VELDT.

Mr. BERGERON. I wish to know if it is true that Rabbi Veldt has been dismissed as chaplain of the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary. I do not see the right hon. First Minister here, but, perhaps, the hon. Minister of Marine can give me the information.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have no information whatever.

Mr. BERGERON. Then I will give the information. Rabbi Veldt has been dismissed and replaced by a gentleman who is not a British but an American subject. I do not suppose that his nationality will impair his spiritual advice, but the fact remains that Rabbi Veldt was dismissed without cause and replaced by an American citizen.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Are there three chaplains in St. Vincent de Paul?

Mr. BERGERON. Yes, Roman Catholic, Protestant and a rabbi.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Paid by the Government?

Mr. BERGERON. Paid very little, but paid something.

REVIEW OF THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). We are at the close of a very long and laborious, and I am sure we will all now say, somewhat tiresome session, and at this moment, even if the time were at our disposal, I do not think the House or the country would be disposed to encourage any very long speeches. The House has had its fair share of long speeches this session, and those hon. members who have done us the honour to remain here until the end, and the long suffering public outside, will, no doubt, feel relieved to be given a rest from parliamentary speech-making.

The hon. member for York (Mr. Foster) undertook to review, from the Opposition standpoint, the work of the session. Doing so he covered very considerable ground, some of it, perhaps, somewhat hastily and necessarily so, but he opened up a wide range of questions, each one of which, if time permitted, would invite reply. I desire now, in the short time at my disposal, to devote myself chiefly to presenting to the House some facts and figures bearing on the financial position of the country, which, I am sure, will tend to assist those who wish to make an intelligent study of the subject. I shall be obliged, therefore, to refer only hurriedly to some other questions to which the hon. gentleman alluded, and yet I would not pass these questions altogether.

The hon. gentleman quoted the utterances of a number of members of the Liberal party, and then proceeded to claim that the policy of the Government had not been in all respects in accord with these utterances. Well, every man who knows anything of parliamentary government knows that the gentlemen in Opposition have always a wider latitude than those on the Government side. The responsibilities of Government do not rest upon hon. gentlemen to the left of the Speaker. They will always, no matter which party may be in power, claim a wider range of discussion and opinion than is liable to be claimed by those charged with the responsibilities of Government; and it would not be surprising, no matter which party was in power, that hon. gentlemen in Opposition should be found expressing opinions that represent their own political ideas, but not necessarily the views of the party at large. Then, it is the very essence of the Liberal party that there shall be liberty among its members to differ on many points, provided they be united on the main questions. Look at what we find in this House to-day. We find hon. gentlemen opposite on great questions differing widely. We find the hon. leader of the Opposition announcing at one moment that a certain policy brought down in relation to the opening of the Yukon was a good policy; and so anxious to endorse that policy that, not content to wait for its parliamentary announcement, or for a newspaper reporter to come and interview him, he actually sent for a reporter in Montreal, to whom he unbosomed himself, and declared that, in his judgment, the contract for building a railway to the Yukon was an excellent measure, and the contractors who had undertaken the work were, perhaps, the one set of men in the whole Dominion to put through a project of that character. But a little while afterwards, we find him in this House, under the whip of the lash of the hon. member for East York (Mr. McLean), entirely changing his policy and declaring that the whole thing was most ruinous for the country.

We found on vital questions this session the hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace) advancing one view and the hon. members sitting around him advancing another. We found the hon. member for York (Mr. Foster) laying it down as a grave principle that in dealing with the great harbour of Montreal, it would be an unsound policy for this Government to do anything directly, but everything should be done through the Harbour Commissioners. A few minutes later the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron) came in and declared, as warmly and eloquently as he could, that it was entirely unsound to do anything through the Harbour Commissioners, and that everything should be done direct by the Government. If, by and by, in the dim and distant future, these two gentlemen should come into power and have to deal with the commission and harbour of Montreal, how would they square themselves one with the other? Each one might be quoted as having announced the policy of the party. So it was with a number of other questions. We found the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), who, I believe, for the first time, is not in his seat this sitting—

Mr. WALLACE. We must give him the medal.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, he deserves a medal for assiduous attendance. He also repeatedly expressed views differing from those of his associates. I refer to these things to show that in Opposition there are always somewhat wider differences of opinion than exist in the ranks of the Government. It would not be strange if, during all the years the Liberal party sat in Opposition, there had been some differences of opinion among its members with regard to public questions. No one will say that it is a fair criticism to quote the utterance of some particular member of the party, and then say that because the policy of the Government has not exactly complied with the lines of that quotation, therefore, the party has been false to its pledges.

The policy of the Liberal party, Sir, was declared in a formal way. In the convention which was held in Ottawa in 1893, certain resolutions were passed. These were the policy of the Liberal party and by these the party is to be tried. And I venture to say that, in the whole history of parliamentary government in Canada, there never was a political party which carried out so fully in so short a time the pledges with which they went to the country. By one of these resolutions we pledged ourselves to reform the tariff. The tariff has been reformed; it has been reformed so that hon. gentlemen opposite, though they talk about it, though they denounce it, have never dared to come before this House and place on the Journals of the House a resolution condemning it. It has been reformed to the satisfaction of the Liberals of the country, while fair-minded Conservatives from ocean to ocean have acknowledged that the change which has taken place has been proved to be adapted to the industries of the country, and that under that change Canada has prospered as never before. The Liberal party promised to introduce a Redistribution Bill. They have fulfilled that promise; and if that Bill is not on the statute-books of the country today it is not the fault of the Liberal party. You may take the whole range of matters discussed at the Liberal convention at Ottawa, and you will find that in almost every instance the pledge given by the Liberal party has already been fulfilled by them in letter and in spirit. The hon. gentleman today referred again, for the thousandth time, to the Yukon matter. Sir, there is no part of the administration of this Government on which we are prouder to appeal to the country than our administration of the Yukon district. If hon. gentlemen will but think—as I am sure fair-minded people outside will think—of the difficulties that had to be encountered in the administration of the government of that country, I am sure there will be a general belief that the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton), who is particularly charged with the responsibilities of government in that section of the Dominion, deserves the highest credit for the manner in which he has carried on public affairs there. It is easy for us here, thousands of miles away, to talk of things that went wrong out there in the Yukon. It would have been a marvel indeed, if, with all the disadvantages, with all the difficulties of distance, the absence of railways, telegraphs or other means of communication, you had had a perfect human government in Dawson City. You do not get a perfect human government even in Ottawa, with all the advantages you have, with an organized civil service and the thousand and one facilities for carrying on a Government. When you consider the difficulties, the only marvel to my mind is that so few things occurred in the Yukon district of which the Government or the people have a right to complain. However, hon. gentlemen opposite harp on what they call the refusal to investigate. Sir, the thing that greatly troubles these hon. gentlemen is, not that we refused to investigate, but that we did investigate and showed that there was no foundation for the statements made. There was an investigation, an investigation by a man capable in the highest degree of carrying on that investigation in such a country as that. What was the class of people with whom he had to deal? A mining population, largely a rough and rugged people accustomed to the ways of the mining camp. They want to feel that the man they are dealing with is a man of independence and sturdy integrity. I venture to say that the average miner in the Yukon district would far sooner have an investigation of any matter in which he was concerned by such an honest, independent, fearless man as William Ogilvie, whom they had known for years and whom they had honoured and esteemed, than by the ablest judge of the Supreme Court that Canada could send out there. What were the charges? Charges against minor officials, such as might occur in any country. When these matters were brought to the notice of the Minister of the Interior, they were investigated, and the trifling irregularities are not to be considered for a moment in judging of the administration of the country. The investigation proved that the Minister of the Interior has every reason to congratulate himself upon the results of his administration of the Yukon district. There was one phase of the subject that was not investigated. And it was not investigated because hon. gentlemen opposite took very good care not to permit us to have an investigation. They endeavoured by every insinuation, by reference to rumours and stories and tell-tale talk, by reference to what somebody said on an ocean steamer, and what somebody else had whispered on the streets of Vancouver, and what somebody else was reported to have said elsewhere—by such means they endeavoured to convey the impression that the Minister of the Interior was in some way affected in his position as a Minister of the Crown and as a man by the transactions of the Yukon district. But when that suggestion was made, the Minister of the Interior and his colleagues on his behalf met it with the demand: If there is one man in this Parliament of Canada who knows of or believes that he can establish any facts against the reputation of a Minister of the Crown, let him stand up in his place and say that he can establish those things before a committee of the House, and the committee shall be granted, an investigation shall take place and justice shall be done to the fullest degree. But not a member opposite was prepared to make a charge. They continued to suggest, to insinuate, to whisper, to retail what had been said here, there, or elsewhere; but when the demand was made, as the hon. Minister had a right to make it on the floor of Parliament, that an investigation should take place before his peers, before a committee of this House, before that tribunal which the principles of Parliament have established as the proper tribunal for the trial of a Minister of the Crown, his demand was met by silence on the part of hon. gentlemen opposite. And so we are able to sum up this Yukon matter, that the charges made affected no member of the Government, and when they were subjected to an investigation by an honest, independent, fearless inquirer, it was fully established that in no material matter was there anything wrong in the administration of the Yukon district. Small irregularities occurred—I do not pretend to deny it—but it would be a marvel if such had not been the case. The only wonder is that there were not more. If we wish to be fair, we must acknowledge that the Minister of the Interior met his accusers in a fair, honourable and manly way, and that hon. gentlemen opposite, though they were ready to insinuate and to suggest, failed completely to establish one iota that would reflect upon the honour of the hon. Minister or lessen his reputation or usefulness as a Minister of the Crown.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) had much to say about money having been spent without due parliamentary authority. I thought we had threshed that out pretty well. But for the hundredth time, the hon. gentleman told us, that in connection with the initial proceedings of the Yukon telegraph, money voted by Parliament for other purposes was improperly used. I shall make but a brief reference to this, because it is an old story. The Government, recognizing that there was urgent need that immediate steps should be taken to construct a telegraph line to the Yukon district, authorized the Minister to appoint an officer and a party of men to go there and take the initial proceedings; and for that purpose they advanced him, out of the public funds, a sum of $10,000 or $12,000. Now, suppose there was absolutely no foundation in parliamentary authority for that, suppose it could be shown that there was not a shadow of foundation, is it an offence for which this Parliament or the people would be disposed to condemn any Minister? No man questions the urgency. If ever there was a question of urgency, it was that we should proceed to open up telegraphic communication in that country. I do not think it would be necessary to refer to any fact at all to give such a vindication of the action of the Minister of Public Works in that respect as would be accepted by the country at large. But, as I had occasion to point out to the hon. member for York, N.B., (Mr. Foster) the other night, that such a charge comes very strangely indeed from him when we have upon the records of this House the fact that at the close of the session of 1896, no sooner was Parliament prorogued than the hon. gentleman, without any law, without any Act of Parliament, without going to Council and getting an Order in Council, as the Minister of Public Works did, entered into a bargain whereby this country was committed to pay $25,000, twice as much as the Minister of Public Works advanced to Mr. Charleson, to pay $25,000 to an American company for harbour work in the harbour of Port Dover. I say there was not a shadow of authority for the position the hon. gentleman took. If you want to look over the whole range of our parliamentary affairs and select a public expenditure, or a committing of the Government to a public expenditure, without a vestige of authority, that one item is the one which would be selected above all others. Yet we have not condemned the hon. gentleman for it; we have accepted his own plea, that it was an urgent matter. All we have done is to say that, in the light of that transaction, it would be strange indeed, if the hon. gentleman should come here and ask us to condemn the Minister of Public Works because he made an arrangement, not with a foreign steamship company, not with some persons to do work in a harbour that might possibly have been delayed for a few months without serious consequences, but because he advanced to a public official some $10,000 or $12,000, in order to start at once the construction of a telegraph line which will give us communication to that distant section of Canada.

Mr. FIELDING.

Then, the hon. gentleman had very much to say about giving contracts, and doing the work by day labour. Now, as I have repeatedly stated in this House, I am disposed to think that, in dealing with public moneys, the safer policy will be, as a rule, and subject to the necessary exceptions, to do public work by public tender and contract. I believe that is so to a very large extent indeed. But let us not run away with the idea that tender and contract is a perfect system. Tender and contract not infrequently puts works into the hands of irresponsible and incapable people, people who, at the time they undertake the work, persuade you that they are capable and responsible. But it often happens that the result of your giving that contract is that you give the work to people who are not able to do it satisfactorily, and the result is very serious delay and injury to the public service. There may be exceptional circumstances which will justify a departure from the tender and contract system, and my opinion is, that in many cases the public interest might be advanced by doing the work by day labour, if you are quite sure of getting thoroughly independent, honest and capable men to put in charge of the work. I do not say that we are laying it down as a principle, that we should abandon tender and contract; on the contrary, I advocate the reverse policy; I think, as a rule, as I have said before, it is a sound principle, it is a safer principle, notwithstanding its disadvantages. But there is another point to which I would like to call the attention of the House, concerning what has been said with regard to the doing of work by the Minister of Public Works without tender and contract. No instance has been given, so far as I can remember, where, as a result of that, the people of Canada paid one cent more than a fair and honest price for anything that was done. Whether or not, as a theory, it was better to have done the work by contract and tender, is fairly open to discussion, and my own judgment leans towards the tender and contract system. But let it not be supposed for a moment that in these departures from that system by the Minister of Public Works there has been any evidence whatever that the public interest has suffered.

The hon. gentleman went into the West Huron election case, and undertook to show, although that committee has only made a partial report of that investigation, and that investigation is not completed, although but little has been established there which proves anything—notwithstanding that, the hon. gentleman treated it as a fixed and settled fact that there had been gross wrongs in the West Huron district by the officials, because it is only with the officials that we have to deal. It is rather a curious fact that the hon. gentlemen interested in West Huron did not avail themselves of the privileges that were open to them in the courts. It has been established before this committee that all the facts which they have now brought to the notice of this committee were in their possession before the time had expired for presenting a petition. It is a very strange thing, and not without its significance, that the hon. gentlemen who are now so much interested in West Huron, did not avail themselves of the machinery of the courts. However that may be, they have seen fit to neglect the courts and to bring the matter before this House. I say that if the right hon. the Prime Minister had refused that investigation, when it was demanded, he could have done so with very much justice on his side. He could have pointed to the fact that they had the courts open to them, and they had neglected them. But so anxious was the right hon. the Prime Minister to remove the shadow of doubt from any action on the part of the Government, or on the part of the officials in connection with West Huron, that he immediately assented to the proposition, and so we have had the investigation.

Curiously enough, however, Mr. Speaker, while these gentlemen are declaring that great wrongs had been done in West Huron, and that these wrongs should be punished, they have devoted a large part of two sessions to the work of covering up the wrongdoing that occurred in the province of Manitoba in connection with the ballot-box stuffing in that district. For a long time last session, and for a considerable time this session, the hon. gentlemen opposite have been trying their best to cover up the wrongs that took place there, and to condemn the Government because the Government applied public moneys to the punishment of the wrong-doers. That matter has been fully investigated by the committee, and here is the report which the committee has presented to the House on the Manitoba case. I will only quote a single passage, and it is worth placing on record :

That the evidence laid before the committee conclusively proves that there was an organized system of tampering with the ballots in said election, in said district, and that in the opinion of your committee the circumstances referred to amply justified the expenditure of the sums disbursed by the Government, and the Government was acting in the public interest in the course which it has pursued in regard thereto.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the hon. gentleman read the report of the minority committee ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am reading a single sentence from one report. I am willing at once to assume—I do not want to detain the House by reading it—but I am willing at once to say that the minority of the committee dissented from that finding. But still the fact remains—for I was present, as a member of the Public Accounts Committee, and heard most of the investigation—I say that the evidence produced before that committee was most conclusive as to the rascalities that took place in the district of Macdonald. I say that, with that knowledge before them, with all these facts before them, produced by themselves, the hon. gentlemen opposite have spent a very considerable part of the last two years in trying to condemn the Government for applying a portion of public money for the exposure and punishment of the persons concerned in that rascality.

The hon. gentleman had much to say to-day regarding the action of certain Ministers in connection with elections to this House at the beginning of the present Parliament. My hon. friend the Minister of Railways and Canals, he said, had actually endeavoured to obtain a vacancy through the retirement of an hon. member who was elected on the other side. The hon. member also stated that when I, in assuming the position to which I had the honour of being chosen, to a Minister of the Crown, required to obtain a seat in this House I did so by trafficking in public offices, and had given an hon. member of this House the promise of a judgeship in order to obtain my seat. Sir, there is not the shadow of foundation for the statement. If we are both spared to come back here again, I challenge the hon. member to bring the matter up before any committee of this House, and if he can show that I ever gave any person a promise of a judgeship to obtain my seat in this House. I will not hold that seat for a single day. But suppose that was correct.

Mr. FOSTER. There was a wicked partner.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, there was no wicked partner. The hon. gentleman has had more to do with wicked partners than I have. But suppose it were true, suppose it were as true as it is untrue, in what position would the hon. gentleman be, or anybody opposite be, to assail an hon. member of this House on that ground? Does he forget that he sat in the Ministry with a Minister, who subsequently became Prime Minister, who obtained a seat in this House by inducing a member to take a place on the bench in order that he might obtain his seat? Does he forget that an hon. member of a different political party from his own was approached and induced to resign his seat for the gentleman who was then appointed to be Minister of Justice?

Mr. BERGERON. That is very hard upon the hon. member for Antigonish.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. member for Antigonish resigned his seat. I make no complaint against him; he had a perfect right to accept a judgeship if hon. gentlemen offered it to him. I am not dealing with the question of the hon. member for Antigonish, because he had a perfect right to accept an honourable position on the bench when hon. gentlemen opposite offered it to him. But the hon. gentleman opposite, if he is now sincere, was not in a position to approach that hon. member to ask him to vacate his seat and take a position on the bench. And, so, with that fact in the mind of the hon. gentleman, I venture to think that it might have been wiser if he had not referred to any trafficking in public offices on the part of the Government.

But I prefer to devote the little time we have to the financial question, and necessarily one must hurry over it very rapidly. I have noticed that there is a disposition on the part of hon. members in this House, and of their press, to repeat an old trick of theirs, and it is that of grouping together all the expenditures of the year, all the estimates of the year, capital, income, railway subsidies and everything else, and placing them in comparison with the expenditures on consolidated fund account of the late Government in the last year that they were in office. The hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr. Foster) did not do that to-day. He is too keen a critic to do that here because he knows that it would be instantly seized upon. But it has been done in the House by other hon.

Mr. FIELDING.

gentlemen, and it has been done by the press outside. It is well to remember that the sum of something less than $37,000,000, for which they say the late Government carried on the affairs of the country in 1896, was not the total sum of their expenditure, but only the sum of their expenditure on consolidated fund account. They are constantly quoting their expenditure for that year at $36,000,000 or $37,000,000—it was nearly $37,000,000, but they generally speak of it as $36,000,000—and placing it in comparison with the total expenditures of this Government, while the fact is, that, instead of expending $36,000,000 as they claim they had in that year an expenditure of $43,959,198. In one year these honest, economical gentlemen, who now talk of extravagance, and who now roll up all these items together and place the total in comparison with their expenditure of $37,000,000 or less in 1896, submitted to this House in 1884 votes of various characters, capital, income and supplementary, aggregating $53,500,000. Yet, hon. gentlemen opposite and their friends outside will constantly refer to the expenditure of the country as being $36,000,000 in 1896, and they will place that against the total votes and appropriations of this Government, including all the various charges. Hon. gentlemen have a great deal to say about increases in the expenditure, but they have given the best evidence of not believing in what they say, because, while they have constantly talked about these expenditures, with the exception of one or two paltry items to which I will refer later on, they never mustered up courage enough to challenge it by a vote of the House. These hon. gentlemen have responsibilities; if we are expending extravagant sums of money, if we are lavish in the money voted for railway subsidies, wharfs and public buildings, why do not these hon. gentlemen take the responsibility which attaches to their position? Their responsibility is to select the items which they say are not warranted, to call the attention of the House to them and to challenge them with their votes. They do not deny that responsibility, they have accepted it, and now, when we are at the close of the session, when they say the public money is being lavishly squandered, out of $50,000,000 odd laid on the Table of the House, they have ventured to challenge with their votes $32,000. They ventured to challenge a vote of $8,000 for a public building in one instance; they challenged a vote of $5,000 for a wharf in another instance; they challenged a vote of $1,000 for another wharf; they challenged a vote of $3,000 in connection with immigration, and they challenged a vote of $15,000 in connection with the payment to Hall & Myrick, a claim which is due, not by virtue of any principle that we ask the House to adopt, but by virtue of a principle that hon.

gentlemen opposite adopted and established long ago. Without discussing the merits of that matter, I want to call the attention of the House and of the public to this, that while these hon. gentlemen make speeches, and while they arraign this Government for an expenditure of $50,000,000 or more, when they were brought face to face with the items of this expenditure, they were not in a position to proclaim their opposition by embodying it in a vote and placing it on the journals of the House. I think I am correct when I say that a reference to the journals of the House will show that they only challenged the soundness and propriety of items amounting to $32,000 out of a total expenditure of $53,000,000. These hon. gentlemen are not likely to be accepted by the public as economists. While they have challenged the soundness of no votes except these paltry sums—paltry in proportion to the total aggregate—amounting to $32,000, again and again, they themselves have made proposals involving the country in additional millions of expenditure. When the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) brought down liberal and generous estimates, he was assailed by the hon. leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper) who said that instead of $20,000 in one item, he ought to vote $100,000. The hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace) said a day or two ago that the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) ought to have brought down much larger appropriations to extend the trade of the country.

Mr. FOSTER. Hear, hear.

Mr. WALLACE. What I said was, Mr. Speaker, that instead of $175,000 for the Paris Exposition that money could have been more prudently and properly used, or a portion of it, by the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce in promoting the interests of trade.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Well, I will accept the hon. gentleman's statement. The hon. gentleman attacked the vote for the Paris Exposition, but he had not the courage to challenge it by a division of the House.

Mr. WALLACE. Is that the only way to challenge a vote?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is the way my hon. friend challenged a vote of $3,000 in connection with immigration expenses.

Mr. WALLACE. Cannot I challenge a vote by my voice, and did I not do so?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman cannot challenge a vote by his voice and then shirk the responsibility of placing a motion on record because I tell him if he had made that motion the hon. gentlemen around him would not have supported it, and he would have been alone in this House in voting for it.

Mr. WALLACE. The hon. gentleman is not a good prophet.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the hon. gentleman will find that I am right. But when the hon. gentleman attempts to assail this Government for placing $175,000 in the Estimates for the Paris Exposition, it is another indication of the nagging politics of that hon. gentleman, but he is not prepared to challenge the vote and let us see how the House stands on the question, and whether he has the support of his party in condemning this Government for co-operating in the Paris Exposition.

Mr. WALLACE. I will have to take the opportunity of correcting the hon. gentleman again. The hon. gentleman made a statement of which he could not positively know the truth.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend can accept either horn of the dilemma that he pleases. His opposition to the Paris Exhibition is either his individual opinion, and, therefore, only entitled to the respect which is due to that of one hon. member, or it is the policy of his party, because my hon. friend claims, and perhaps with some justice, to be one of the leaders of his party, and if that be the case we must hold it responsible for his utterances. The hon. gentleman had much to say on another point. He asked us: Why do you not give us a fast Atlantic line? There is much to be said in favour of a fast Atlantic line, but a fast Atlantic line, according to the estimates of hon. gentlemen themselves, must mean an expenditure of three-quarters of a million per year. Thus again their complaint is, not on our side, of a lack of economy, but it is that we do not expend $750,000 more. A leading member in the Opposition ranks rose, when we proposed to vote $25,000 for a public building in one of the cities of the Dominion, not to condemn it, but to complain that we had not brought down a vote of $100,000 or $200,000. These, and I have only given a few instances, are some of the many evidences of economy that we have received from hon. gentlemen opposite. Nor is that all. Do we forget that after opposing the Government's proposal of last session for building a railway to the Yukon district, although that proposal would not have cost the country a penny, the leader of the Opposition gravely rose in this House this session, and proposed that we should spend millions of dollars of the public money to build that very railway together with 200 miles more down to Kitimat Arm? The hon. gentlemen when brought face to face with the expenditures of this Government, could only find in the whole range of the $50,000,000 odd, $32,000 which they were prepared to challenge; because my hon. friend from West York (Mr. Wallace) did not take a vote on the appropriation for the Paris Exhibition. Yet hon. gentlemen were willing to throw across the House suggestions which, if we had adopted them, would have led the country into an expenditure of many millions more than we proposed.

Mr. FOSTER. Did we not offer many suggestions for economies in other votes?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I decline to have any regard for the hon. gentleman's suggestions for economy when he is afraid to follow them with a division in the House. What the hon. gentleman wants to do is to pose in this House and before the country generally as an economist, and then go to various parts of the country interested in these expenditures, and say: "Support me, dear friends, because I did not oppose these votes for your part of the country; I only occupied time in the House to talk against them; I did not vote against them, as I admit these to be great improvements for the country." The hon. gentleman said this was the banner year in the matter of railway bonuses. It was not, because as I have shown, in 1884 the hon. gentleman proposed railway bonuses to the amount of $9,176,000; and having proposed these, he comes into the House and declares that we are extravagant. The hon. gentleman says that many of these railways are unnecessary. Which of them? He must have known, and if so his duty as a servant of the public was to have come before this House with a motion to strike out any railway bonus which he regarded as unnecessary. But the hon. gentleman did not do it. He knows that he would not dare to do it. He knows that railways are not unnecessary, but great factors in the development of the country. But he says some hon. gentlemen in the Liberal party opposed the bonusing of railways. Whether the bonusing of local railways was a wise policy to enter on in 1883 is a fair matter of debate; but after that policy has been pursued for many years, and many millions have been voted for railways in many sections of the country, are we to be told that it is now to stop? Is there any inconsistency in saying that as this has been the fixed policy of the country, and as you have scattered your millions in building railways in many sections of the country, it is only fair that other sections should receive their share of these appropriations? The hon. gentleman had much to say with regard to the new policy of voting money for the building of wharfs. This is not a new policy. This Government is but carrying out the policy which former Governments had followed for years. The hon. gentleman has charged us with adopting the new policy of building wharfs on Lake St. John. Why, Sir, the hon. gentleman's own Government built wharfs on Lake St. John and in many other parts of the country years before this Government came into power. The hon. gentleman is not above trying to raise a little sectional feeling by saying that this policy of building wharfs ought to be condemned because it happens to be applied more in one part of the Dominion than another. That was an attempt to appeal to sectionalism which was not creditable to some hon. gentlemen opposite.

Mr. FIELDING.

Mr. FOSTER. It was the member for Kingston (Mr. Britton).

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, it was not the member for Kingston. It was some hon. gentlemen opposite who complained that we were not applying that policy to the western portions of the Dominion. The Estimates show that where the necessities arise in the central and western portions of the Dominion, they are met; but because some sections of the country by nature require more than other sections, is that a reason why the requirements should be denied? If some one in New Brunswick should say to us: "You do not build canals in New Brunswick; why should they have canals in Ontario?" That would be considered rather absurd. It so happens that the conditions of the country are such that a certain class of public works are needed in one section and another class in another section; and what the Government should do is to see that these different sections are provided for according to their needs, and that the public money is fairly and equitably expended. The hon. gentleman had something to say about public buildings. He could not approve of the building of a small structure at Victoriaville, which he says has only 2,200 inhabitants. After the hon. gentleman has succeeded in having a handsome building in every Tory town in Canada, he is going to mark the Liberal towns of the country by an absence of public buildings. I do not think that is a policy that would commend itself to the people of this country. The hon. gentleman has said that in this matter he reformed in his later years. He did not do anything of the sort. One of the last acts of the hon. gentleman, before going out of office, was to place before this House an appropriation of $8,000 for a public building in Marysville, a little village in his own county of York. Victoriaville, he says, has only 2,200 people. Marysville had only 900 people, and the hon. gentleman brought down an appropriation for a public building for that town, not in the olden time when they were wicked, but in the last year of his Government, 1896, in those Estimates which did not get through Parliament. Does the hon. gentleman deny it?

Mr. FOSTER. Yes.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman denies that he made an appropriation?

Mr. FOSTER. If the hon. gentleman will allow me, I will tell him just what I deny.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If the hon. gentleman wishes to contradict me, I will give way. Does he deny the statement that he brought down an appropriation of $8,000 for a public building in Marysville?

Mr. FOSTER. I am denying the statement.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Is the hon. gentleman saying that statement is not true? I will not give way to the hon. gentleman unless he denies my statement.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman dare not give way. He knows that he is misrepresenting the fact.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If there is any man within the sound of my voice who wants the information, here are the Estimates; and if the item is not in the Estimates which were brought down by the hon. gentleman, then I am wrong, and if he will call my attention to the matter next session, I will publicly apologize.

Mr. BERGERON. We will give it to you next session.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I shall be here next session; I do not know whether my hon. friend will be here or not. So I might follow my hon. friend through all the moods and tenses of his speech. I am reminded that there was a town called Cayuga, with only 500 people, and that the hon. gentleman had a large sum of money voted for a public building there. I have not the pleasure of knowing the place; and as I did not want to make references to the other provinces, I preferred to cite cases in the maritime provinces and in the hon. gentleman's own county; and his own actions show that the ground he now takes is not sincerely and honestly taken. With regard to the public expenditure, I have shown that in this growing time there is need for large expenditures on the part of the people of Canada. The hon. gentleman talks of the total expenditure of years ago and the total expenditure now. He takes no account of the growth that has taken place in Canada during these years. I venture to say—it is only a matter of opinion, but an opinion with which I believe most thoughtful observers will agree—that Canada has made more progress in the last three years than it had done in any ten previous years. It was necessary that we should meet these growing conditions with growing expenditures; but the volume of the expenditure is to be judged in proportion to the burden it imposes on the people. What is the fact? Though we have had an increased expenditure, we have had a reduction of taxation. We present to the country the proud record of a Government which has met all the obligations of a great and growing time, which has spent money liberally, hon. gentlemen opposite say lavishly, on useful public works for the development of the country, and which is able to point to the fact that these large expenditures for good purposes are accompanied by the very unusual sight for the hon. gentleman of a reduction in the rate of taxation. The hon. gentleman quibbled about the rate of reduction, but the very figures he submitted to the House today recognized the fact that there was a reduction in the rate of taxation. If you take out the increases which have been made on some articles of luxury, and look at the reduction of taxation on the great list of articles which the masses of the people need and consume, you will find that there has been an enormous reduction of taxation.

Sir, in this House, not long ago, I presented a statement showing, item by item, what the reductions in taxation were, comparing the old and the new tariff, and what was going to be the result at the next stage of the new tariff, and the result, now that the tariff has come to its fulness—

Mr. DAVIN. Is discrimination against the farmers..

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no discrimination against the farmers. We have shown that we have reduced the rate of taxation, and at the same time have met all these enormous burdens on the country.

Hon. gentlemen opposite have tried to alarm the country on the question of the public debt. They talk constantly about its increase. Well, I have here a statement showing the increases in the public debt from 1879 down to the year 1896, covering the last term of the Conservative regime, the total increase of debt was $118,135,353, and the average increase—

Mr. FOSTER. Put it all in "Hansard."

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Very good; I shall adopt the hon. member's suggestion.

* Approximate—accounts not closed.

The net result was this. In the eighteen years under Conservative rule the average increase in our public debt was $6,563,075 per year. In our three years the average increase was $2,186,321.

Mr. BERGERON. Wait until we see you next year.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman has been crying that out for the last three years. The hon. leader of the Opposition, in the first session, said that we were going to plunge into lavish extravagance and create enormous deficits. But instead of deficits, we have handsome surpluses. We have carried on the public service and enormous public works with a reduced taxation and the smallest perceptible addition to the public debt. I stated several months ago that we would come out of the year, closing on June 30, 1899, with an increase of debt of only about $1,700,000, as against an average of $6,500,000 in every year under the administration of hon gentlemen opposite. Though the accounts are not closed, and I can only present an approximate statement today, I can say that the statement I made, namely that the increase of debt would only be $1,700,000, which was regarded by the House as eminently satisfactory, will be found well within the mark. And I venture to predict that when the Public Accounts are laid on the Table next session, we will have the satisfactory exhibit of having carried these great public works with a reduced rate of taxation and an addition to the public debt of, not $6,500,000, but very little more than $1,000,000.

Mr. FIELDING.

If time would permit I would like to call the attention of the House to the question of the per capita rate.

Mr. DAVIN. May I ask a question? Do I understand the hon. gentleman to say that he has increased the debt by only $1,000,000?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I say that the increase of debt during the year just closed, for which the accounts are not absolutely complete, but which are in a condition that enables me to speak with approximate accuracy, instead of being $6,500,000, as it was under hon. gentlemen opposite, will be a little more than $1,000,000. I say that, and I venture to say that it is a statement which will have a very strong effect on the public mind of Canada, when the people remember the heavy burdens we have had to bear and the great public works we have carried on.

My attention has been called to the vote for Marysville building in the year 1895, $5,000. I said $8,000. I have not the later Estimates, but my impression is that the vote was increased to $8,000.

Mr. BERGERON. How much was spent?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think any was spent. It was the fashion to make appropriations and leave them dangling before the people.

Mr. FOSTER. Will my hon. friend say when the first one was?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend distresses his soul about an appropriation of $8,000 in the village of Victoria-ville with a population of 2,200, but is quite prepared to vote for a public building in the little village of Marysville, which has less than 900 inhabitants.

If you have a population of 5,000,000, you can bear an expenditure of, say, $40,000,000, which is $8 a head. If you have a population of 6,000,000 you could bear an expenditure $48,000,000, and there would be no greater burden on the people. The question is, what is the per capita expenditure? If I had the time, I would like to go into this and show that the expenditure per head of the population has been well kept down. We had $7.39 per head in 1898, chargeable to consolidated account. The year just closed the total expenditure will be about $7.77, an apparent increase, but if you take out of that the Yukon expenditure, which is entirely exceptional, and the additional expenditure on the Intercolonial Railway, consequent upon its extension to Montreal—both of which are profitable investments, bringing back more money into the treasury than was paid out—leave out these two exceptional expenditures, and you will find that the expenditure of 1899 is approximately $7.31, which is lower than the usual expenditure of the late Government for a long period of time. I do not propose to keep the attention of the House further, but if time permitted I would be able to give at every point most ample vindication of the expenditure which this Government has made. In this growing time, the demand of the people is not for niggardly economy. That is true economy which adapts itself to the new and growing conditions of the country. If the people of Canada, above all, if the Liberals of Canada, could be shown that there had been expenditure made through corrupt means and for corrupt purposes, they would be prepared to condemn the Government. But, so long as these expenditures can be shown to have been made for the development of the country—honestly and faithfully made—I have no fear of the criticism which the public will bring to bear upon us for these expenditures. The hon. gentleman to-day ventured, Sir, to read us a lecture upon public morality, upon faith and honour. Surely, the hon. gentleman was not serious; surely, with the record of the Ministry of which he was a member, surely, with the record of the events in which he was a prominent figure, he will not venture to call public men in question on the point of their public morality, or of faith, or honour. The hon. gentleman sat in a Ministry, and acted with a party, which for a quarter of a century pursued a policy of plunder, a policy of corruption. Why, they do not deny it. The hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron), in this House, when reference has been made to these matters, says: Oh, but these men were punished. True, they were punished. They were expelled from office, and will remain out of office a long time. But, when they come forward and talk of faith, and honour, and public morality, we have some reason, I think, to call attention to the position in which they stand.
