THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN.

THE TWENTIETH ANNUAL REPORT.

The Work of this Interesting Charity During the Past Year.

Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto Me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.—Matt. 19; 14.

Their angels do always behold the face of My Father which is in heaven.—Matt. 18; 10.

Of all the charitable institutions in this fair Queen City of Toronto, there is none that appeals more largely to the sympathies of the general public than the Hospital for Sick Children. Can any one help loving children? Their freshness, their innocence, and their very dependence upon us call forth our love in no small degree; and if this be true of those who are full of life and health, how much more so of those who are forced to spend long hours in weary pain and suffering.

In presenting this twentieth annual report of the Hospital for Sick Children the Ladies' Committee desire to return thanks to their Heavenly Father for His continued blessings during the past year. A prayer service is held without fail every Friday morning, from eleven to twelve o'clock. Though the committee numbers twenty-five ladies, it is only a "faithful few" who gather week by week to present the needs of the work before the Throne of Grace and claim the promises of the Lord. These are hallowed seasons, times of refreshing, when, in waiting upon the Lord, our spiritual strength is renewed. Requests for prayer have been offered from anxious, burdened hearts, and often has sadness been turned into joy on account of answers received.

We regret that our President, Mrs. Howland, has decided to remove to Montreux, Switzerland, for two years; we greatly miss her wise and loving counsel, but pray that the Lord will abundantly bless her and her family in their far-away home. During the absence of Mrs. Howland, the committee are pleased that the Vice-President, Mrs. Harvie, has kindly consented to take charge of the meetings. Other members of the committee, having a deep interest in the work of the Hospital, have been missed from our meetings, on account of illness, personal or family, or absence from the city. We hope ere long to welcome them again among us.

The Hospital for Sick Children, College street, is one of the finest and most perfectly equipped Hospitals for the care and treatment of sick children in the world. It is provided with the best and newest surgical and medical appliances, and the staff includes some of the ablest physicians and specialists in our city. There are cots for one hundred and sixty-five children in the building, and at the present time (January 10, 1896) ninety-five of these are occupied. Many of these little patients are of tender years, others are bed-bound sufferers, whose days are numbered, and whose short lives we strive to make happy and comfortable.

Our family in all, children, officers, nurses and servants, numbers one hundred and twenty-five. To provide "daily bread" and other necessaries, requires a large sum of money each month, and, though this institution has many kind and loving friends, who are constantly sending out of their abundance, and the gifts flowing into the treasury have been varied and generous, these gifts must be even more increased and more general, or this Christ-like work must be crippled for want of means.

The kind friends who, in some cases, for years have maintained cots in the Hospital have kept up their contributions. Some of the cots have not been fully paid for, but as times are hard and we know these friends are interested in their cots, we willingly wait till it is convenient for them to pay up arrears. The cost of supporting a cot (and warming it) in the Hospital is $100 a year, and at The Lakeside Home $25 for the summer.

The following is a list of cots supported this year at the Hospital and The Lakeside Home. We are pleased to report several new ones:

A bright spot is the school room. Here about forty children, convalescent and those undergoing surgical treatment, are instructed from day to day. Miss Sams, the teacher, is in perfect sympathy with the little invalids. Many a tedious and wearisome hour is made happy and profitable in the school room. In June, five children, with a nurse and Miss Sams, were chosen to represent our school at the decorating of the graves of the volunteers who fell in defence of their country. Our school took part in the procession. After the speeches were delivered, each school was called in turn to lay its offering on the monument. When "Hospital for Sick Children" school was called, a hush fell on the vast throng. Mr. James L. Hughes came to the carriage, where the little invalids were carefully watching their bouquet of roses, tenderly lifted tiny Lena Duggan, and carried her to the monument, amid loud cheers from the immense crowd gathered there.

The mending and sewing in the workroom goes on from week to week, and we desire to thank the many kind friends who give their valuable time each week to repair or make little garments for our sick boys and girls. We need more workers here, and will be delighted to welcome any who can come to sew on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Another feature of the work which is important is that undertaken by Mrs. Heron, in providing the children with amusement of various kinds. We all know that sick children must be entertained or the hours will be long and tiresome. Two or three times a week Mrs. Heron visits the different wards, giving to each child toys, dolls, books, sewing or wool work, as they may desire. Contributions of wool, canvas, beads or patches will be most gratefully received, as the demand for them is constant, and our store not large.

At times our hearts are cheered by kind letters received from parents or friends of children who have been helped by treatment received in the Hospital. A few days ago, such a letter came to us from the mother of a former patient, enclosing $15 for the benefit of the work and expressing thanks and gratitude for the good done to her boy during his stay in the Hospital. The boy, Leo, came to us a year ago, greatly crippled and suffering intense pain, resulting from hip-joint disease; he returned home a short time ago, his limbs quite straight, and able to walk as other boys, with the exception of a slight limp.

In June the children were moved to their summer quarters, The Lakeside Home on Toronto Island. There, during the four months of fine warm weather, over one hundred children enjoyed the fresh, life-giving breezes from old Ontario. Many were the exclamations of delight from children who had lain in bed for months when they saw the blue waves, with tiny white caps dancing in the sunlight, and behind the beautiful Home, with its wide verandahs and cool, airy walks, waiting to receive them.

Here, in this happy sport, the long days are spent, some of the children paddling in the water and digging in the sand, and enjoying many a picnic down by the lakeshore. Others had to lie in their little white cots, but these were drawn out to the wide breezy verandahs, where the children could see the others at play, and watch for the boats passing the Lakeside Home each day.

The home-coming took place at the close of September, all being delighted with their pleasant holiday, and yet pleased to be settled again in the mother Hospital.

The committee desire to express their grateful thanks to the Toronto Ferry Company for their kindness in providing so generously passes for the staff and nurses.

In response to an article in the press of Ontario asking for gifts of canned fruit, we have received this year fifteen hundred and seventy jars of fruit. In many instances one hundred jars came to us from a small country town or village, gathered by the efforts of those interested in our work. This fruit has been a most acceptable gift, greatly enjoyed by the children in the winter months, when fruit is hard to get; and as it takes 12 quarts to provide one supper for our family, you will understand that we require about as much more this year to supply our need.

Santa Claus paid his usual visit to the Hospital at the Christmas season, bringing joy and gladness to the heart of each child. Some of the children are beginning to ask if we expect him this year, and are anxiously wondering what gifts he will bring to them. Contributions of toys for our Christmas trees will be most acceptable.

We could fill pages in recounting only some of the many kindly deeds done in the Hospital "in His name," but we refrain, and send forth this record with much prayer, trusting that the blessed Saviour will use it for His own glory, and as a testimony that He performs His promises. "For all the promises of God in him are yea, and in him amen, unto the glory of God by us."

AN INTERESTING TABLE.

Expenses of Hospitals—What it Costs to Maintain the Great Charities of Ontario.

There is to the citizen of Ontario no more interesting bit of literature than the Government report on the expenditure of hospitals, which is compiled by Dr. T. F. Chamberlain, the skilled inspector of the Provincial Secretary's department, who has the great charities of the province under his care.

In 1889 there were 18 hospitals receiving Government aid, and in 1894 there were 34; while the amount granted by the Legislature in the former year was $68,566.46, in 1894 it was $118,217.40, or an average of 36.77 per cent. of the whole cost of maintenance.

Under legislation at the last session of the Legislature, hospitals that have private patients and those who contribute over $3 per week for their treatment are eliminated from the per capita allowance of 30 cents per day.

Dr. Chamberlain advocated in his last report that every municipality should pay the nearest hospital $2 a week for each sick person coming from the municipality for a period of six weeks, but the recommendation has not been acted upon as yet.

The report is made up in tabular form, ten tables being devoted to recapitulating the work done in the hospitals.

From these tables is extracted the information that more directly concerns the expenditure of the various institutions for the year ending September, 1894:

Hospital.	Location.	Number of Patients Admitted.	Days' stay.	Total expense for Maintenance	Average cost of each Patient.

The first column shows the number of year ending September, 1894, in each of patients under treatment during the the hospitals of the province. The second column give the number of days that each patient has remained in the hospital and for which the Government allows aid. If a patient remains over 270 days in one hospital, the authorities must stand the expense, for the Government only allows 30 per day for 270 days.

†To September 30.

*On account of expense Dispensary closed this year.

7856 162 474 1346 2012 3694 650 3344 3344 $185,825 40 $51,548 21 $195,337 47 $11,942 50 $70,365 90 $32,850 00 $47,809 87

The third column gives the total expenditure for maintenance. This includes such articles as meat, butter, eggs, flour, bread, meal, milk, tea, coffee, vegetables, drugs, light, gas, fuel, soap, brooms, water, ice, salaries and wages, insurance. It is really the entire expenditure incurred by the hospital in caring for the patients during the year. Thus, in the Toronto General Hospital there were 2,666 patients who stayed 78,652 days at a cost of $69,555, or 85 1-2 cents per head per day. The Homeopathic, Toronto, costs 85.67 per head per day, and the Hospital for Sick Children 76.24 per head per day, or 76 1-4 cents.

These three institutions are examples of well managed and economically governed establishments, and will bear most favourable comparison with similar institutions in the United States and Great Britain.

The public have an idea that when maintenance is spoken of in connection with hospital work that the term applies only to the food used in a building. The term maintenance, however, is used as applying to every item of expenditure in connection with the carrying on of hospital work.

TO THE LAKE FOR THE SUN

Excursion of the Ch... to the Island—Part

"They seem to be a little fellow." A group was gathered on the shore on Friday, June 7, when the excursion was made. The boat was a very pretty one, the arms of a uniformed crew with the Hospital fact he was in the boat. He was an exception in his colour, and was of special interest. I was too, and was there with other sick and crippled friends for The Lakes.

Year by year the boats are taken from the shore, and yesterday was no exception. It was a very hot day. They had been thinking about it before blue waves came, and fairy mermaids days at their feet. In "Shut as eight o'clock" of them put on their hats, and were not to go unpunished. They were packed away to be ready for the pain that sent shivering bodies to the beach, rides in the boats among the pebbles of their summer.

Everything at the Children is done in routine, and with minutes before one o'clock, the two city of Officers Five the western entrance, from Mr. lined along Colonel General supervision was in the hands of the Board of Trustees the matron, and to the Island were Howland, Stewa and Miss Buchanan. The attendance new house surgeon, Dr. Cling also lent his assistance. The sick and were unable to fully put into their comfortable ther in the human heart. Not only that, but some of those rough fellows were overheard to express pitiful sympathy for the sick children. In that way even the suffering of the little ones is made a means of blessing.

Mr. Robert Bond, Messrs. J. B. Holland and J. Sinclair Robertson assisted the others in carrying the children to the barge, where the nurses made them comfortable.

"Only one out o' the lot is cryin'," said a labouring man, who had closely watched the transfer.

"That's my little brother there," pointed out a poor, ragged boy, who looked as if he would willingly be sick could he only get a ride in that barge.

"They're all happy when they see her movin'," was what a man said as the Ada Alice slowly and carefully swung her precious cargo out into the bay.

As she slowly steamed away the sight was really a gladsome one, notwithstanding the pity of it. The motion of the tug, the slowly-moving sky above, the bright sunshine bathing it all in a flood of glory—this was like a lullaby that fell peacefully about the little pilgrims and enwrapped them in restful silence.

How they enjoyed it! To some it was the treat of a lifetime, because some of these children had never even been to the Island; others had been at The Lakeside, and knew by happy experience what a delightful home it is for sick children.

And some, alas, who were there a year ago, have gone to a sunnier and brighter home, where pain and sorrow can never again cloud human life.

Slowly, under the pilotage of Capt. Clark, the passage was made through the Western Gap, around Hanlan's Point, along the western shore of the Island until Gibraltar Point was reached. On account of the low water the tug was obliged to anchor some distance out, while the barge was poled to the shore, and the children safely carried to The Lakeside Home.

Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure and safety of the journey. Some of the children were tired, of course, and gladly welcomed the cool, clean, white cots upon which they were placed. The Home had been renovated throughout, and put into excellent condition. The grounds are pretty, the Canadian flag floated out its welcome to the little ones and there we may safely leave them, knowing that the summer months will bring roses into their cheeks, a new sparkle into their eyes, and health to the wasted body and strength to the feeble limbs.

Among the ladies who accompanied the children to the Island was "Kit," the accomplished writer, whose recent account of a visit to the Hospital for Sick Children appeared in the Mail and Empire. Mrs. Ketchum, of this city, and Mrs. Kendig, of New York, also went over on the tug.

"KIT" WITH TINY PATIENTS.

An Hour in the Hospital for Sick Children—
Pen Pictures of the Institution by a Popular Writer.

What draws us child-wards? Cherub charm and grace,

The frolic kitten and the tricky elf,
Or Heaven reflected in the serious face
And the divine unconscious of itself?

What art makes magnets of the helpless hands

That fitfully caress and feebly touch
And hold our grown-up hearts in iron bands;

O, small sick fingers that compel so much!

Pity for helplessness is the first flush of feeling that warms us when we see a little child

"Launched forth, a frail little boat
In the midst of life's turbulent sea!"

And from blessed pity spring three-fourths of all the virtues. The weeny things are so utterly helpless, so absolutely, almost shockingly, dependent on us that the thought almost frightens one. How young mothers tremble over that first bathing of the new baby. He is so small and soft and tender and pink, so large-headed and small-boned, and seemingly out of all proportion—so frail and helpless and noisy—with so much voice to him that he scares the timid mother into dreadful awkwardness, and gets pins run into him through sheer fright, and strings tied tightly where loose bands should be, and powder in his eyes and up his nose. Then those doll's clothes of his! Who ever could get those ridiculous things on this ridiculous young person? How big mothers' hands are! All thumbs. Oh, what a terrible quarter of an hour that new little mother is having, and how she dreads it and loves it, and falls down in delicious adoration of the pink bundle when it is all tied up and sweet and quiet, fast asleep in its cradle presently!

If there is then this tender pity and love over one's own little child, one's healthy, strong child—if one has known the divine delights of maternity—the motherhood that so widens and beautifies the character of the woman; if one has ever watched by the side of one's own sick child, what almost to heartbreak sight of the long row in an hospital ward of little figures in white clothes; at sight of that peer from the sky you in a dim hazy care very much, or wonder very much fact that they are happy, happy children. The Hospital for Sick Children, on College street, is one of the most recent buildings of the city. Perfectly appointed, well-ordered, this to the city of Toronto, the door by the late K. sick child, what unutterable sadness—almost to heartbreak—comes to you at sight of the long rows of little white cots in an hospital ward; at sight of the pitiful little figures huddled under the clothes; at sight of the wan, peaked faces that peer from the pillows, looking at you in a dim hazy way, as if they didn't care very much, or want very much, or wonder very much at anything but the fact that they are lying there while other happy, happy children were out at play. There are many touching sights in a world made up mostly of grieving and pain, and trouble; but, God knows, few sights are more infinitely pathetic, more heart-breaking, to the soul of a woman than that of a crippled child—a small creature fastened to a frame-work, lying there with that strange, unchild-like look upon the poor face, with that queer child's patience that seems a special God-gift to the little creatures in the hour of their extremity, and is so sad a thing to see.

The Hospital for Sick Children, on College street, is one of the most magnificent buildings of its kind in the world. Perfectly appointed, spacious, bright, well-ordered, this institution is a credit to the city of Toronto. We were met at the door by the lady superintendent, Miss K. Underhill, who very kindly took us through the whole building, explaining the uses to which each room was put, showing us the great piles of snowy linen on the shelves of the linen-rooms, the splendid equipments of operating and dressing-rooms, the vast laundry, where huge washings are done by machinery and busy workers are folding and preparing linen for the mangle. From the immense kitchen, with its ranges and pantries and cupboards, to the sculleries, all beautifully neat and a comfort to look upon, and thence to the wards upstairs, where the little sick creatures were lying—everything was in the most perfect condition. A bright and wholesome air of cheeriness pervaded all the place, in spite of the sad uses to which it is devoted. It was as if the exquisite joyous essence of a child danced through the house—the lovely joy-spirit, that even pain cannot wholly banish from child-nature.

There are seventy-eight small patients in the Children's Hospital. We went into the girls' surgical ward first. The youngest patient—a baby a few months old—lay on a cot in a corner. It was suffering from a broken rib, but was smiling an odd three-cornered smile at us as we bent to look closer into the little face. The tiny, beseeching weakness of the mite, the heaven-lit flashes of "knowingness" that skimmed over the small features, the thin wan hands of it, make a queer love for it in a stranger's breast. The idea of such an atom having anything worth calling a rib, and then having broken that small bone!

"A light little bundle of wailing and flannel, Perplexed with the newly-founded fardel of life."

Near by, in another cot, a little girl was sobbing heavily. "What is it, little woman?" I asked her. "What is hurting you?" "I wa-a-nt m-m-y mam-ma," came in a burst of grief from the poor little soul. Her queer small face was puckered with crying and her bad knee didn't hurt half as much as her sore heart. She has not been in the hospital long enough to get to know the kind nurses and feel at home in the place, and all day long she grieves and calls for her "mam-ma," her "mam-ma."

The beautiful ward was spick as a new pin, and there were great bunches of lilies on the table. The nurses, bright, sweet-faced young girls, were a cheering sight in that place of suffering. Not that many of the little patients were not bright enough, too. One mite was nursing her doll. It had been operated on, and had its head bound up, and was kept standing on that member by way of curing it. Fancy the sick children playing such sad little games. The mites go through the whole thing with the dolls. There are dolls' legs in splints, in plaster (make-believe), in bandages and ligaments of all kinds. Certain mysterious operations are performed on the dolls, necessitating small crutches, and arms in slings, and eye bandages. Dolls have been known to get softening of the brain in the Children's Hospital, and to have had their heads opened and something wonderful done to the clock-work inside, and for ever afterwards to go about with hoods on them, like spooks. There are blind dolls, and crippled dolls, and crazy dolls, and dolls with ricketts and diphtheria and hip disease. And, most sorrowful fact of all, there are not nearly dolls enough to go round!

Some of the children—the very sick ones—lie quietly in their cots, their peaked faces and big eyes piercing the very soul of you with pity. You hate to stand there, staring at them, yet you want so much to say something comforting and tender to them. All the "motherliness" stirs in you, and you grow, awkward, and look hard and indifferent—you know you are looking hard and indifferent—when you are very nearly choking with that big lump in your throat. One feels by some cot-sides as if one must speak in whispers. The great Reaper seems so near. The shadow of wings lies dark about some of the little forms, and a great anger at the cruelty of it shakes one. It seems so useless—all this childish suffering. It is bad enough to see grown men and women in such sore straits; but the children, the little children! One has to grasp an exquisite faith for a minute to hold fast, as it were, by the tender One who said that of such as these

Is the Kingdom of Heaven.

We went up to the boys' ward. Here again were flowers and kind-faced women. Christ knew and could understand the reason for this suffering. Be sure of that. Surely, surely, the greatness of faith lies in its blindness.

We went up to the boys' ward. Here again were flowers and kind-faced women. I think the sick boys appealed to me more strongly than the girls. Maybe that is because we women know we are born to more pain than men, and get more patience to bear it with. Pain seems more natural to women than to men. And then, the big fellows make such a to-do about it. Woman is constantly smiling (behind his back) at man whimpering over a bit of pain. She has infinite pity for him, and tenderness, and does her best for him in all ways; but she laughs a little to herself over it. And if men are restless under pain, what of the boys? The dear, clumsy, shambling lads that are always bumping their heads and skinning their knees at home, and eating such stacks of bread and butter. To see them here, with awkward, half-grown legs fastened up in plaster casts, in frames, stretched out with heavy weights attached to lengthen and strengthen a failing limb; to know all there is to a boy's nature, the way mothers know, all the clumsy joyousness of it, the dear roughnesses, the generousities, the need for wild play and "scraps" and fights, and to see it all knocked out of them, is a sore sight. Not but what there are cheery boys in the hospital. There are. Many of them are up and about, sunning themselves at a big window, hopping on chairs minus a leg or foot, but doing the wonders only a boy can do with the remaining member. And good every one of them, from Jackey, the star patient, to dear Bertie, a lovely, gentlemanly lad of a most sweet and loving nature, suffering from that cruellest and most pathetic of all diseases. St. Vitus' dance. Jackey—just look at him in the picture—is a darkie baby, and lovely. He sat like a little sphinx, with his toes crossed (he doesn't seem to have much leg to him), and with never a smile or a word. His bright red frock became his swarthy complexion wonderfully, and he is the pet of the ward. Poor dark mite! There's something the matter with his small back, and he's ricketty and queer in his legs, and will never be very strong.

Little Lord Fauntleroy sat up in a cot, his golden hair falling in a cloud about him. Not much to say, had Little Lord Fauntleroy, not anything at all, indeed. His face was very grave, as if he knew a good deal about the burden of life, and would be glad to lay it down soon. Maybe he will. Indeed, I think he will, for there is a wistful look in his blue eyes, and a shadow on his waxen face that tells me Little Lord Fauntleroy will soon creep away from the weariness and the pain of it; will soon open wide, wondering blue eyes on a beautiful garden, where he can play about—whole and sound—for all time; will soon wear on his small, golden head an angel's crown. Happy Little Lord Fauntleroy!

Up in a corner a sturdy baby boy is sitting. His left hand is tied up in rolls of bandages—something was the matter with his tiny bones, and diseased pieces had to be taken out. But Jimmie didn't mind a bit. He was breaking up a box with his good hand, and gurgling with delight over his work of destruction. It's wonderful what a boy can do with one hand when he has a mind to. Jimmie had no time to talk to us, so busy was he, but when we were moving off he raised a mighty shout, which brought us back immediately to look with deepest interest at a red-headed "gee-gee." A small half-witless creature sat in a big chair. He is a boy from the Shelter, sent up here for treatment. You can see that little Bobbie Brown is "not all there." That wide, ever-open mouth smiling broadly, that narrow forehead, that weak chin, all proclaim something wrong with "the inside" of Bob's head. He was a poor waif taken by the Good Shelter from some drunken mother, a starved, beaten, hunted child. A "God's-little-image" trailed in the gutter, banged and whacked till his small brain gave out and his wits went from him. It was dreadful to see him shrink back when you bent to touch his cheek, shrink and kink his forehead as if expecting a blow; it was quite as dreadful to see the wide, fine smile flash over his face when he found you stroking instead of hitting him; the grateful look of a dog. He was not quite sure of you, was Bobbie.

Every time, and the times were many, you bent towards him there was the same terrified shrinking, the same unutterable look of terror, and the same wide, grateful smile when he found your touch gentle. That look was the only sign of wits that Bob gave.

Bertie is a fine boy of eight. A tall slim lad for his age, shaking with that terrible St. Vitus dance, but with a nobility about the well-cut mouth, an air of breeding about the whole face that tells of good birth. He has the smile of an angel. The poor lad whistled for me, a soft little whistle like the beginnings of a baby bird, and seemed proud and delighted at the perfection of his one great accomplishment. I went down on my knees beside him and told him my name and asked him to remember me. For answer he gave me three great hugs, and the kisses of the child were so sweet and earnest that they were hard to bear. He was so like Thady—strong, young Thady! Only gentler because he was a very sick boy, and had learned patience.

"What shall I say to the people about you, Bertie?" I asked him, as his poor swaying form clung to me.

The lad smiled his serene smile.

"Tell them what a nice boy I am," he said, with difficulty, for Bertie finds it hard to talk, "what an extremely nice boy I am." And he is. The nicest sick boy I ever knew, so patient, so loving, such a beautiful little soul. It will nearly break my heart if Bertie forgets me the next time I visit the Children's Hospital. To see so gentle a creature so afflicted and with it all so joyous, and affectionate, and delighted with himself, was to see a pathetic sight. God knows.

And now a word for this great hospital that to-day is doing God's best and grandest work in this city. Times have been hard with everyone, and money has been scarce; donations and subscriptions have not been coming briskly to any institution of late years, and they are feeling the want of them, feeling it sharply, none more sharply than the Hospital for Children. The sick children need help. Last year the hospital had five hundred children as indoor patients; along with these it does a mighty work in its out-door department. There is a dispensary, where sick children (out patients) are attended, their hurts dressed, their ailments looked after. This in itself is an expensive work. Summer is at hand, and the usual blessed emigration to the Lakeside Home will soon take place. If you knew how the innocents are looking forward to it. How "Jackey" and "Bertie" and Little Lord Fautleroy, and the patient, little sick girls, are wanting it! Do send them some dollars, anything, what you can. It is a wonderful work, a tender work, a magnificent work, one very dear to the heart of the Christian, and, outside all religion, one dear to the soul of every woman with the mother instinct in her, and few are without this. Get your little children, your sturdy, strong ones, to put some of their pennies by occasionally for the sick children. Send the little girls more dolls—the dolls were sadly few yesterday; they are needed for the operating room. Dolls have legs cut off sometimes. Bring a scrap of joy to some little grieved heart. Remember the sick children, the poor darkened lives, the little, pitiful, pain-struck faces. It is very hard to look at them, and keep from crying a bit, but the tears do not help as the pennies will; still, tears are often the precursors of pennies. Times are brightening. Let us make a good summer for the sick little ones. You have no idea till you hear it what joyous tappings can be made by a little crutch going hippety-hop in the sunshine. And here, ending this little sketch, I want to thank Miss Underhill and the good nurses for their kind attention and courteousness to us, and to mention the delightful fact that on every little sick face we noticed a keen affection for the nurse who bent down to tuck or otherwise comfort some small patient. All seemed contented, except the wee, new girl who wanted her mamma so very, very much, and a dot of a boy just come in, who lay under the clothes, his face hidden, and sobbed as if his heart were breaking—the big, loud, boisterous sobbings of a boy. He had a terrible-looking hare-lip, poor chap, which will, I hope, be removed by the time you read this. He was lonely for home, that was all, and for his mother, "his own mother." It hurt to hear him.—"Kit" in the Mail and Empire.

COMING TO THE CITY.

Return of the Little Lakeside Dwellers From Their Summer Home—Lame, Blind, Sick but Happy.

"What a patient, happy-looking lot of children they are." This was one of several complimentary remarks made on Friday, 27th September, down at the wharf, foot of Bay street. It referred to a lot of forty-four sick and crippled children being carried from a tug to carriages in waiting. It was the day fixed for the return of the patients of The Lakeside Home for Little Children at Gibraltar Point on the Island.

Perhaps the strongest argument to show the beneficent work of that institution lies in the fact that, four months earlier, 78 children were taken from the Hospital on College street to the Home on the Island, and only 44 were returned. Thus 34 patients have been either entirely cured during the summer or so far benefited that they could be sent home.

In addition to this, about 75 children besides these have been at The Lakeside during the summer, and enjoyed its hospitality and medical treatment without any charge whatever. These figures alone speak more eloquently than words of the blessings bestowed.

It is always noticeable that these children seem so happy and contented. Not only is their physical being well cared for, but their mental and moral training are carefully considered. During the summer the school was kept open, with an aggregate attendance of 70. The little ones take great pride in this school, and exultingly show fine specimens of drawing, penmanship, kindergarten and other school work.

With all this goes the love treatment—the kind, gentle, persuasive force that does so much not only to make life pleasant and bright, but to upbuild a good, strong, moral character. From the superintendent down through the doctors, the nurses and other attendants the manner is always patient and kind.

There is always something about little children that attracts and interests. More so is it the case when they are sick and helpless. This is always especially notable when they go to the Home early in the summer and return in September.

Friday afternoon a stalwart policeman, a muscular labouring man and men used to the rough-and-ready life on the water and about the wharves became anxious and even gentle helpers to carry up the lame and blind little folks, who could not help themselves. A large crowd collected on the dock, made up mostly of young men, who either by compulsion or of choice are idle and rough-looking young men. Yet they were heard to speak kindly words of the little sufferers and the charity that shelters them and tries to win them back to health and life.

The moving day is ever an anxious and interesting one for all concerned—for those in charge, lest some untoward occurrence should mar the occasion, and for the children, who are always eager and excited about any change. The day did not seem propitious. True, the sun shone brightly and kindled the blue waters of the great lake into a pavement of sparkling beauty; but the scurrying wind lashed the waters into white-crested billows that charged angrily up upon the sandy shore. It seemed a doubtful day for the trip to Toronto.

The veteran Capt. Claple and his sons, who are experienced in the handling of this precious cargo, took the barge around to the western side of the Island. The waves assailed it, and flew high over the bulwarks. It was found impossible to take the outside route, so the captain lined up a string of hand-carries, and upon these the children, attended by the nurses, were carried to Hanlan's Point, where embarkation was easily made.

The tug McEdwards had been chartered, and safely conveyed the party over to the city. Here P. C. Fyfe had a city ambulance in waiting, and the President of the Board of Trustees met the excursionists with 14 carriages. Soon the transfer was made, and the procession went up Bay street to King, to Yonge, up Yonge to College, thence to the Hospital, where another band of nurses received the children and distributed them to their respective wards and cots.

All summer long the Canadian flag is kept floating above The Lakeside Home. Watchers in the tower of the Hospital on College street keep their eyes on it on these flitting days. When the flag goes down they know that the party has left the Home, and will soon be on hand for the winter.

The procession attracted, as it always does, a great deal of public attention. Even cars were briefly stopped and teamsters drew up, while every one looked pityingly upon the bandaged limbs, the covered eyes and the crippled children. Then, if never before, people practically realized the blessed work done in befriending these little people and giving them the best medical treatment in the city, the most experienced and careful nursing—and all for the love of them.

A Look Into a Children's Hospital—What a Writer in the Chicago "Interior" Saw Where Sick Children Are Cared for.

Miss Jennie Brooks, a writer in the Interior, a Chicago weekly, paid a visit to one of the large hospitals of Chicago, where wards are set apart for the care of children.

What Miss Brooks has written may be seen in real life any day in the week at The Lakeside Home for Little Children at the Island Point, Toronto, or at the Hospital for Sick Children on College street. Miss Brooks says:

two little, thin, white hands, whose fingers were trembling through the intricacies of a lace pattern. Something big and unwieldy lifted the pure white coverings high above her, and I, in my ignorance, wondered what it could be. That was the first time I saw her, and she gave me a happy smile in rich exchange for my yellow roses. On Thursday, when the 'House Beautiful' had again drawn me beneath its portals, Elvina was trying to eat her dinner. The little plate lay on her breast, for the 'something big' I told you of left no room for the little bed-tray used in most cases; but when the sweet-faced nurse bending over her asked, 'Have you eaten your dinner?' Can't you eat your rice?' a low, soft voice answered, 'No, ma'am,' and then I sat down to hear her story. You don't like to ask these little suffering babies what's the matter; it seems kinder to ignore the ghoulish pain that haunts the corridors, where there is no one but babies and little children to bear its brunt, and they cast it in the back-ground themselves, and will show you their cats and dollies and dogs, chattering about their virtues so happily. With wide brown eyes, and tiny fingers interlacing each other restlessly, Elvina whispered, 'I love the flowers,' and with little pauses for rest between the words she continued: 'Long time ago I was vell and strong—oh, so fat, so round I was! Then I go to school. I have step-mother, six children we have beside me, my father he keep saloon one time—now he in brewery—he work dare. Some children come the school, they not know much, my teacher she say I should go and show them after school—I go 'long the street, den I fall down the cellar—some mans they takes me out and takes me home—I so lame—my leg it hurts me all the time. I go the school all the time, but it hurt me, oh, so bad. Then my father he send for doctor—he say very bad my hip vas, very bad. I in the bed at home all the time—long time. He makes holes in my hip for let out the matter. Den they bring me to hospital—so nice here—I cries when they dress my hip—I can't help it. They dress it seven times—four times the day, three times the night. I had two, three operations—the doctor he tell me I have one more. I oh so frightened den—den my hip will get well—he say he take the bone out—that's all—' and the patient eyes light up as she lifts the flowers, and smiles across the narrow aisle on a jolly little baby not quite three years old. Her soft fuzz of hair reminds you of a downy yellow chick, and she sits in her crib, gowned in a bed jacket with rosy strips, laughing and crowing and showing her pretty teeth as though curvature of the spine, and the plaster jacket which are her dower, were the most delightful things in the world. The two kittens that she tosses about, comfortable calico cats, she declares keep her awake at night, when they cry 'Miauw—miauw.' Elvina smiles again when I ask if they disturb her and coyly answers, 'No, ma'am.' These little ones have come from darkness into daylight, from neglect to kindest, most intelligent care. Above the clouds of dull gray smoke that ever hang over the city, far out and up on a hill top where the sunlight falls in gladness all day long, where the birds nest and joyously sing, and splendid breezes come sweeping across the river and over the hills, there stands the emblem of a lovely thought, born in the hearts of two good men, who talked long over their idea, and pondered ways to accomplish their desire, until finally the hearts of two other men kindled with the fire of a great benevolence, and they generously gave a large tract of land and also builded thereon the "House Beautiful," and called it a "Children's Hospital." Over its portals is carved in stone these words, "No creed, no colour, no country," and in proof of this the first to greet me in the school-room was Willy, a little coloured boy, confined to a rolling chair while his crooked little legs are being straightened, and the little maiden named Elvina comes from a family whose faith is Catholic, with a patient suffering that is Christ-like. The cheery comforting face of the head nurse, Miss Dickey, would hearten up almost anybody, and the loving care, the tender ways of all the nurses, mere girls themselves, so sweet and hopeful-looking in the pretty caps and aprons, are indeed "a sight for sair e'en," or "sair" bodies either. To children who, most of them are digged from the pit of squalour and vice, of cruelty and neglect, the transition to lovely wide rooms, immaculate beds and tender care, must seem a foretaste of that Heaven to which some of them are speeding.

But come with me through the "House Beautiful." Over the mantel in the reception room a few words are painted on wood—"Teach us what we shall do unto the child." On the left of the hall is the school-room, where convalescent children happily pass a part of each day under the care of a teacher who knows just how much a weakened little body can endure. The children are busily at work, but they sing for us the morning and evening hymns, clustering around the teacher like pale little storm-blown flowers as they lean on diminutive crutches. The nurse drops a yellow rose over the shoulder of one little lad, who solemnly and laboriously inserts it into the button-hole of his flannel waist with much satisfaction. Go into the ward with a handful of posies, and see what the children will do. Eyes of shining expectancy greet you, and in happy, serene trustfulness one baby calls out, "I'll take mine." "Little Emma" is the pet of all the children, a wee tot of five summers, who sits always in her bit of a rocking chair with her little legs extended on a board attached to it. Here she has sat or a year or more, while the little legs were made straight, and now she must try to learn to walk. A tiny set of dishes comes out from a beloved calico bag, and she regales us with a cup of imaginary tea, sweetened by a pinch of the same kind of sugar from her baby fingers, and the richest of fairy cream. Her big brown eyes dance with delight as she exhibits her doll, who, alas, has lost both legs, and whom the surgeons have shamefully neglected to furnish with new ones. The wards have a "minstrel troupe," consisting of "Willy," who fingers the autoharp with true southern vigour, and Emma, who does the singing, accompanied in a chorus by the other children. The brown-eyed girlie sings alone about her "little husband no bigger than my thumb," holding up an infinitesimal thumb to show his size, and also a jingle of these words:

"I had a little niggeh,
He wouldn't grow no biggeh,
I put him in the window for a show;
He fell out the window
And broke his little finger,
And couldn't pick the old banjo."

The girls' ward is on the south side of the house, where the sun peeps into the windows at early morning, streams across the floor through the south windows at noon, and as he wheels into the west sends into the room from that side a rosy glow to bid the little folks "good-night and happy dreams" ere he drops behind the Kentucky hills. What most impresses in a children's hospital is the happy peacefulness all about. No fretting or crying among the rows of babies who are confined to the little white beds, and all of them are sorely diseased. The first day after an operation they fret a little from the pain and unusualness of the bandages or casts, but after that they simply bear it, and, with childhood's happy faith, look for to-morrow when they will be well.

Hip disease is the most prevalent of all among these children, either from insufficient nourishment, from accident, or from the carrying of younger children, so often seen among the poor. Many children in the "House Beautiful" are under treatment for this disease, but little Elvina's was the most desperate case. When the pretty nurse came in with her appliances I left the bedside to occupy myself with baby Emma, but the sound of a little shivering pain-pierced voice drew me back, and, as I watched the operation the horrors of hip disease were unveiled to my eyes. Could such things be? Is this what the clean white sheets hid beneath them? Cruel ulcers, above, beneath and inside of the hip; the bone protruding and decayed. Into each of these ulcers disinfectants and curatives must be injected, and from the child who bears it comes only a low pitiful whining. The big tears drop over her face, the little white hand is stretched out imploringly, but with no protest, and the trembling lips cry in low, heart-broken tones, "Oh Miss Murray—oh, Miss Murray." Something almost suffocates me, and the room whirls round, but the dressing is quickly finished, and, as I step to the other side of the bed, only a tear drop hangs on the long lashes as little Elvina lifts the flowers to her flower-like face and smiles pitifully, as I tell her how brave she is. The child had lain so long in bed before she came to the hospital and had drawn her well leg up so many months to keep off the weight of the covering that it had finally grown stiff, and it is now impossible to straighten it out, but a cage now upholds the cover from contact with the little sufferer, and this was the "something large" that I did not understand.

WITH THE SICK CHILDREN.

Unique Entertainment in a School Where Not One Pupil is in the Enjoyment of Health—What Was Said and Sung.

An entertainment of unique character was given in the Hospital for Sick Children on Thursday, Dec. 19. In the upper ward of the eastern wing a large company of ladies and gentlemen was gathered to hear the speaking and singing in connection with the closing exercises of the school connected with the institution. While children are being cured of disease and lameness, their mental necessities are cared for by the management, assisted by the Public School Board of the city. A school is kept open constantly, the teacher, Miss E. Y. Sams, being provided by the Board.

Simultaneously with the kindergarten closing exercises throughout the city yesterday, this school was in line. It differed from all the others, because not one of the 45 pupils is in health; either some wasting disease or some pitiful lameness attached itself to each one of those bright-eyed and happy children. Save for a pain spasm that would draw down the lines of the face, or for the bandages and crutches and splints, one could scarcely believe that they are sick children, so pleased and happy they seemed. And their conduct was simply perfect;

they were polite to visitors, and, excellent discipline.

they were polite to each other and to the visitors, and, evidently, were under excellent discipline.

Mr. J. Ross Robertson, President of the Board of Trustees, was in the chair, and introduced the programme by saying: "This annual prize-giving in the Hospital has been customary for years. Before the summer holidays a similar meeting is held. Our purpose is to give these little ones here not only a renewed body, but an improved mind. These book-tokens are given as a stimulus to those who go out and join in the public school exercises, so that they may work as energetically there as they do here.

"I cannot say much that is new about the work of the Hospital for Sick Children. The work of the past five years is a remarkable page, not only in civic, but in provincial history. This is the mother charity Hospital for Children in the Dominion; it is the second in the world in size, and elegance and perfection of equipment. It is doing a work in caring for sick children that commends it to every one in Toronto and throughout Ontario. By the aid of the Government we carry on a work here that is not surpassed on this side of the broad Atlantic.

"It is strictly unsectarian; it receives patients irrespective of creed, colour or nationality. We are only too glad to do what we can to help the little ones. Since its organization we have helped 14,000 such children as you see here. Last year more than 3,500 sufferers were treated in this building, either as inmates or as out-door patients. This is evidence of a work that should commend itself to every one in the land.

"It costs $80 a day to keep this building open; it costs $1.05 per day to keep each child in these cots and beds; it costs 72 cents per day for food for each one; it costs $26,000 per year to operate the institution. Of this the Ontario Government contributes $10,000 and the city of Toronto $5,000, leaving $11,000 to be made up by voluntary contributions.

"Our Christmas appeal has already borne good fruit. Yesterday the T. Eaton Company sent me a cheque for $200 from the firm and from Mr. E. Y. Eaton. The Canada Paper Company has sent $50, and many thoughtful citizens from $25 to $50 each. We are as grateful for the smaller amounts as for cheques drawing hundreds.

"The people have an interest in this Hospital. Last year they gave us between $11,000 and $12,000. We aim to do the greatest good to the greatest number. Last year 85 children per day were treated here and 20 per day were given outside treatment; next year the average number for outside treatment we think will be 100 per day, and we expect to handle 6,000 cases during the year.

After a few words of welcome to the friends present the children sang a "Song of Welcome," and Rev. W. A. Hunter, of the Erskine Presbyterian Church, spoke: "This city is noted for the philanthropy of its great men. This institution has been made a grand success. Everything has been done to make the children happy and comfortable; there is no better home anywhere than this; the little ones are always bright and happy. Every church in the city might do something for it, and every Sabbath school should support a cot, thus making Christmas here happy and joyous. We should deny ourselves to stand by this institution."

After the scholars sang "Only an Armour Bearer," Rev. W. F. Wilson, of Trinity Methodist Church, gave them a bright, sparkling little talk. "Your nice recitations and the songs you sang a year ago when I was here linger in my memory.

Reference was made to the skill of the doctors, "the tender hands and sweet and kind voices" of the nurses. "This is the children's world," continued the speaker. "Great men are writing books for boys and girls; they write songs for them, they make laws for them, doctors are studying for them. This is Christmas time, isn't it? It is a bright world all the time. Why should the snow go away if there were no birds? This is the most peculiar and nicest family I know. There is a growing spirit among the people for the Hospital, and an increasing interest in it throughout the province. A Sunday school collection in every church the last Sunday of each year would be a good thing."

The school sang "Fluttering Down," and then Warden Massie, of the Central Prison, spoke, saying, among other things:—"No institution in Toronto has stronger claims upon the citizens than this hospital. People generally have no idea of the number of children who go through it in a year. The work so ably and admirably established by your chairman gives him every confidence in its increasing popularity. It is not confined to the city; it has gone abroad; the doors are wide open to the suffering little ones; no work more strongly appeals to the sympathy of the public. Many rich men have not given anything to this charity; we should try to get them to give and be their own executors!"

The chairman here remarked that the school accommodation in the Hospital would be increased. Soon a gymnasium would be established, something essential

Mr. James L. Hughes, Public School Inspector, was introduced and said he was the bearer of a letter from Mrs. Gzowski. He gave it to one of the tots, who, in turn, handed it to Mrs. Heron, of the Ladies' Committee, and then it was found to contain a gift of money. Mr. Hughes suggested that the taxpayers would not complain if the School Board furnished the best desk and apparatus for the new school room.

"To-day," he continued, "the kindergarten children of the city gave away thousands of presents. We should teach children to give; if we give to them all the time it makes them selfish. I would like the Public school children to see this building and this school, and go back and tell of the good work being done here and aid it by their contributions."

The chairman, deprecating personal references, stated that each one of the trustees is personally liable for the $100,000 debt upon the building until that is reduced to $50,000. Each one has to personally pay out $500 interest on this debt and must do it again in a few days. An appeal has been made to every minister in Ontario, circular letters have been sent out to citizens. The Ladies' Committee is enthusiastic and thoroughly harmonious and earnest. There is no greater claim upon us than to look after every sick child; every sick and poor child has only to knock at the door and it will fly wide open.

Prizes were then given to these children: Fourth book, Hugh Patton; Third book, Maggie Cowan, Maggie Jeffery, equal; Second book, Olive Wright, Jennie Ross, equal; part two, Alice Brooker; part one, Frances Pollard; juniors, Ida Dodds, Evelyn Kew, equal; good conduct, Beatrice Stewart.

Mrs. Timothy Eaton presented the children with confectionery, and they returned thanks in a little song. Ida Dodds and Evelyn Kew sang a duet, "I Dreamed that I was Grandpapa."

Mr. Walter S. Lee, Public school trustee, said that this Hospital is a most useful institution, and the city could not do without it; it is a monument of great labour, and it is regrettable that it should be hampered with a large debt; the country should not allow one man to do so much. Mr. Lee suggested that the Government should aid more, but the chairman suggested that "the Government had acted handsomely, and materially aided in keeping cases two years.

We must be reasonable. There are many other hospitals to be supported. Hon. Mr. Gibson and Hon. Mr. Hardy have visited the institution, and take a deep interest in it."

Rev. Dr. Thomas, of the Jarvis street Baptist church, came in just in time to speak a few encouraging and helpful words. "It is a work that appeals in every direction, and is worthy of all appreciation and praise."

The interesting exercises were brought to a close by all singing "God Save the Queen," followed by the benediction pronounced by Dr. Thomas. Then the visitors were escorted through the building and shown its operations.

SANTA AND SICK CHILDREN.

How the Merry Monarch of the Magic Land Surprised His Favourite Little Ones—The Pretty Picture He Saw.

"It is a veritable fairyland," said a gentleman, as he stood in the doorway of Ward "J" in the Hospital for Sick Children on College street on Tuesday evening, Dec. 24 (Xmas eve). In Christmas trees, glittering with their burden of gifts. The green branches were laden with brightly-painted toys, gaily-dressed dolls, and every conceivable thing dear to the heart of a child. Festoons of ground pine ran from the tops over to the walls of the room. Along the west wall a set of white screens cut off an avenue leading to the side of a cottage, leaning against which was a large red chimney.

This of itself made a pretty picture. But the real interest centred in the eighty sick and crippled children clustered about the beautiful trees. On cots, couches and chairs they were ranged along the room in the form of an ellipse, all facing inwards. For weeks they had heard whispers of the mysterious Santa Claus, growing up out of a chimney and bringing them "something nice." Many an ache and pain seemed less severe because of this dream. And now the time for the merry monarch's visit had come! How the eyes grew big with wonder as they looked upon the magnificent trees and their pretty burdens! How they smiled up into the kindly faces of their gentle nurses! Some poor tots who had never before seen fairyland could only gaze with a surprise that sealed their lips; it was too wonderful to talk about.

The friends who were present to witness this annual distribution of gifts to the sick children stood in a line behind the cots; the nurses were clustered near, their white habits in fitting contrast with the dark street dresses of the visitors; the clean white cots, with their groups of eager children, the and shimmer of th in a thousand refl down over all from ed the room into a made a picture, never be lost fro little ones.

Signor D'Alesandro's orchestra had been engaged and entertained the audience with excellent music until Old Santa could get around. An official of the Hospital, came down the room and said, "I've just had word from Santa Claus. He's at the Union station and will be here directly. The roads are so bad that he had to take the train ten miles from Toronto. He'll be here directly."

No more welcome tidings could be brought, and the announcement was received with generous applause. Then there was a momentary silence; the orchestra struck up a lively dance and

ENTER—THE MONKEY.

The Simian was represented by a rising scion of "the noble ward." He came cavorting down the passage, bowing here and there, shaking a grimace at this child, picking up his tail and waving it at another—all the while keeping excellent time in a grotesque dance that fairly set the children wild with glee. They stood up—those who could—they shouted with merriment, they clapped their hands, they laughed until they were tired. No encore was ever more vigorous than that which followed the comical monkey as he shuffled himself out. He graciously responded and repeated his dance.

Then there was another commotion at the door; a huge figure slyly glided behind the screens, there was a burst of music and up out of the chimney rose the children's friend, the wide world over—jolly old Santa Claus. Mr. Jack Robertson, eldest son of the President of the Board, who personated the rosy old man, did him justice. He told the children he had given them all he had, but would give them more next Christmas. He wished them "A Merry Christmas" and slid down the chimney. Presently the door of the cottage opened and out he stalked.

He ordered his henchmen, the doctors, to cut down the gifts, and then with resonant voice he called out the name written on each. If the children were happy in anticipation, how much happier were they in realization. If the friends of this Hospital who have so generously ministered to its needs could have seen the joy of those little sick children when they received their presents, they would feel in their hearts the merit, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

The gifts on the trees in the Hospital were not only pretty, but substantial and valuable. They were donated by ladies and gentlemen who always remember these children at Christmas time.

Mrs. Charles Heron, of the Ladies' Committee, energetically superintended the Christmas arrangements, and did it well. Miss Underhill, the matron; Miss Twomley, the housekeeper; Mr. John Gordon, the secretary; and others connected with the Hospital contributed by every means in their power to aid in making the celebration a memorable one for the little sufferers.

After all the gifts had been distributed a little girl, Beatrice Stewart, stepped forward and, in a clear, distinct voice, read this address to the President: "Dear Mr. Robertson, all the girls and boys know how very kind you are to us, and we thought at Christmas time we would like to give you a little present. So we ask you to take from us this clock, to remind you we all love you very much, and we wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

Then the children clapped their hands and waved their handkerchiefs; some who had none waved their toys. Little Joey Conroy, a crippled boy seated in an invalid chair, handed to Mr. Robertson a pretty little Swiss clock.

"This china candlestick," continued Beatrice, "is presented to Miss Underhill by the girls of the surgical ward as a mark of true love towards her. She's ever been kind and patient, and we thought it would be nice to show our love to her by presenting her with it."

Responding, Mr. Robertson said: "Well, my little friends, boys and girls of this Hospital, sometimes the unexpected happens. Though you have had great pleasure in getting gifts from Santa Claus, you have good marks in his books. I am sure this token of your love for me gives me a thousand times more pleasure than even the great pleasure you have in giving it to me. All I can say is that if you are as eager to please me as I am to do what I can to make your lives comfortable and happy then we are all well satisfied. It is needless to say I wish you a Happy Christmas and a pleasant New Year. I hope this time next year I will see none of you here."

This last remark was so much of a surprise to the children that a great hush of disappointment came upon them. They thought it could not be possible that any one should wish them out of that Hospital, so happy and contented are they. Gradually it dawned upon them that they were there not to remain forever but to be sent home cured and well.

"I hope you will all be in your own fathers' and mothers' homes, with your brothers and sisters and friends, enjoying Christmas there. While I value this clock and will keep it where I can see it and where it will remind me of your pleasant faces, yet I am glad that others have received kind notice from you—the officials of the Hospital and all who contribute to your happiness and enjoyment, to say nothing of the doctors who are invited to visit you here. Thank you."

Dr. Primrose stepped up and thanked the children for their beautiful gift to Miss Underhill, the matron. Then old Santa Claus called up the monkey and, strange to say, began tearing down the chimney. The bricks were found to be red boxes filled with confectionery and each child got a brick from the monkey. Once more the door opened, Santa entered, his jolly round face and long, white beard appeared out of that part of the chimney that was left, he waved his hands to the children in a long goodbye and sank out of sight—leaving behind him one of the most delightful memories—one that, for many a long, weary day, will cheer the hearts of the sick and suffering children.
