Feeding Chickens.

That four pounds of grain will give one pound of gain in poultry flesh is the interesting fact that comes to the reader of the report of the Ontario Minister of Agriculture. This gain has been made by feeding grade chickens at that. How much profit is there, then, in feeding chickens for the market? The farmer's wife who feeds chicks for profit may not have stopped to calculate just how much money she was making, but she generally finds that her results are reasonably satisfactory.

FARM CO-OPERATION IN IRELAND.

At a time when the workingman is clamoring for a free breakfast table it should not be overlooked that the tariff wall is but one of the many guises under which monopoly press on the community. The profits extracted by middlemen in transportation and distribution fees not only increase the cost of living to the consumer, but also diminish the value of land and labor to the tiller of the soil. How to get rid of this old man of the sea is one of the problems that must be faced. It is interesting to recall what has been done in Ireland in this direction through the foresight and self-sacrificing patriotism of Sir Horace Plunkett.

"We Americans owe much to Ireland and to Plunkett," wrote Mr. Roosevelt, when President, to the British Ambassador at Washington and Professor Robertson of Macdonald College, who has done so much for Canadian agriculture, has stated that he has "learned more from the Irish Department of Agriculture than from any institution." The striking improvement that has been effected in the condition of the Irish farmer during the past ten years has been due to the combined influence of the Irish Agricultural Organization Society brought into existence by Sir Horace Plunkett.

A Unionist in politics, his practical turn of mind revolted against the purely negative side of Unionist policy in Ireland. Frankly admitting the effects of British misrule, he set about removing those immediate causes which it was in the power of Irishmen themselves to control. The results have abundantly justified his forecasts. The annual returns show an increasing export trade in agricultural products. This increase, he noted, is not wholly due to bigger output, but also to enhanced value in quality following the more efficient organization of the farmers in relation to both production and distribution.

The rise of the Irish co-operative movement found the agricultural interests entirely under the control of middlemen. The creameries were commercial undertakings and privately owned, and the farmer was absolutely at their mercy. But they were his nearest and only market. For his supplies he had to go up to the "gombeen man," where high prices, long credit, and money-lending transactions have had a disastrous effect on the country. To-day over one thousand co-operative societies are supplanting the middlemen in every branch of agricultural activity and sending out their own agents, thus giving to the individual farmer direct access to the best markets both for the sale of his products and the sale of his implements, seeds, and general supplies. The Irish farmer not only raises pigs, but cures his own bacon in his own co-operative factories and puts it on the market through his own agents. He also manufactures cheeses and other by-products of the farming industry which formerly were manufactured by the middleman. The middleman is no longer the master but the servant of the agricultural community.

But one great difficulty has yet to be overcome. Transit in Ireland is more of a monopoly than in Great Britain. The result is that while a box of whiskey can be sent from London to Ireland for sixpence, the same weight of eggs from Ireland to London costs a dollar and a half. Without co-operation it would be impossible for the farmer to export his products. Co-operation with his neighbors enables him to secure the advantages of bulk rates, but the transit of his products still leaves much to be desired. Legislative effort, may, however, be given to the recent recommendations of the Irish Railway Commission that may lead to the co-ordination and State control of the Irish railway systems.

Lord French and Lord Pirrie offered a few years ago to finance a road motor service for the quick and cheap marketing of farming products, but a difficulty arose as to the repair and upkeep of the roads, and the scheme fell through. The budget of 1909 in its roads clauses paved the way to road transit in competition with the railways, which may go far to solve the problem of quicker and cheaper access to the markets. It is more and more apparent that the right use of the soil and more efficient organization in production can be of little advantage to the producer and consumer while tolls exacted by middlemen rob the farmer of the legitimate fruits of his toil and reduce to a dangerous level the standard of living in towns and cities. The solution must be found in improved and rapid transit and more direct relations between producer and consumer.—Tor Globe.

THE SITUATION AT OTTAWA.

The Government at Ottawa seems to face with organized obstruction, the object of which is to force a dissolution by a refusal to grant supplies for the country's business. The Opposition is not united in carrying on the campaign of obstruction, but there is a sufficient number of Mr. Borden's followers in favor of the course now being pursued to make extremely problematical the voting of the money required before the end of the current year on March 31. The pretext for this attempt to stop the machinery of government is that the Ministry has no authority from the people to wipe out the duties on natural products, and that the agreement with the United States, under which both countries are to abolish these duties, should not be adopted until the elections have given their endorsement.

The circumstances of Parliamentary life in Canada are such as to permit the absolute dislocation of the public service at any time if a fairly powerful minority is determined on that course. There is no rule limiting discussion on applying the closure upon debate at the will of the leader of the Government. A single item of $1,000 in the estimates may be used as the peg on which to hang a whole day's debate. The Canadian Parliament is one of the few national legislatures left in which there is opportunity for endless obstruction. It is many years since the Imperial Parliament so reformed its rules that at a certain hour, due notice having been given by the Government, a vote must be taken on any matter under discussion.

The western Conservatives who are taking part in obstruction are doing very serious injustice to their constituents. Were a general election to be held before the results of the census in June are known, and the redistribution bill following upon the census adopted, the people of the West would be represented in the new House by far fewer members than they ought to have. With a population unit of 3,000 per member, the country west of the great lakes will have a right to at least fifty-five members in the new House. At the present time Manitoba and Saskatchewan have each ten members, Alberta and British Columbia have each seven, and the Yukon has one, or thirty-five in all. It is quite certain, notwithstanding the bragging talk of the Hon. Robert Rogers, that the West, were its opinion to be taken, as it should be, after redistribution, would a majority of twenty to the new Parliament in favor of reciprocity in natural products. The move of the Opposition is deliberately calculated to stifle the voice of the West on this great issue, and prevent the settlers on the plains from exercising their just and proper influence in determining the country's fiscal policy.

For that reason we trust that the Government will take the strongest possible measures to combat the obstructionists. The House should be kept in continuous session, the Opposition should be required to all the talking, and the country should be roused by frequent meetings, especially in Conservative constituencies.

to knowledge of what is behind the obstruction. The Liberal party could ask no better fighting ground. There might be a few Liberal seats in Ontario, partly rural and partly urban, in danger if a general election were to come on at once but on the other hand there are a dozen rural Conservative seats held by small majorities that could reasonably be expected to turn over to Liberalism on the reciprocity issue. South Bruce, Conservative by 193, East Huron by 83, West Huron by 62, and Lenox and Addington by 134, would be almost certain gains, while in East Northumberland, Frontenac, the Algonias, and other seats of that sort there would be a good fighting chance.—Tor Globe.

Progress and Its Victims

The virtual disappearance of the horse from the streets of London—or, at any rate, from participation in the passenger traffic of the West End—has brought about many changes. The cabbies of London were the most expert in the world, but very many of them were too old to become chauffeurs, and great hardship resulted as the taxi took the place of the hansom. Among the victims of progress are the pigeons that are still to be found in great flocks in the eaves of such buildings as Westminster Abbey and Parliament House. In The London Spectator appears a letter signed by 'The Westminster Pigeons on Behalf of All Their Kindred...'

It appeals to The Spectator "to remind our London friends that hitherto our friends, the horses and their masters, have allowed us to feed from the corn they drop out of their moushugs. Now, when the needy cabman is obliged even to scrape up the fallen oats for his half-starved horse, we no longer have the same overflowing bounty to count on, but are obliged to wander from door to door and wait outside the baker's in the hope of a crumb. We suggest that the taxicab men might see some corn for us at their shelters, and not forget their feathered friends.

We fear lest the advent of machines instead of horse vehicles is stifling the feelings of humanity to which we precious existence." It will be a pity if the motor car robs London of one of its most picturesque features, the pigeons that give a touch of brightness even to the sombre winter sky of the metropolis.—Tor Globe.

Mexico--United States

The mobilization of an army of twenty thousand men by the President of the United States, who is ex-officio Commander-in-Chief of the national forces, is so exceptional an occurrence that it can hardly fail to become notable in the history of the nation. The reason first assigned for the raising of so many troops on the frontier of Mexico, a friendly nation, was so obviously a subterfuge that the world simply resumed its credence: that it was purely experimental, and was undertaken as a test of the effectiveness of the army organization. A more reasonable explanation was that the presence of the troops was necessary to the preservation of peace along the international boundary, across which Mexican insurgents were in the habit of crossing and recrossing at will. But even this account of the matter has failed to silence conjectures and to dissipate suspicions.

The American Banker, a thoroughly conservative journal, alleges that "in high military circles" the annexation of Mexico to the United States has been regarded as a consummation of the near future. It points out that the intelligence emanating from Washington makes it plain that the mobilization of the troops is a step for which preparations have long been made, and that everything proceeds with the precision of a prearranged program in which the minutest details have been settled in advance. It calls attention to the enormous amount of American, British, and German capital invested in Mexico—more than two billion dollars—and hints that as President Diaz is a very rich man he may choose the absorption of his country by the United States as preferable to his own overthrow by his enemies who are engaged in the present revolution.

This cold-blooded view of the political situation may turn out to be the correct one, but there are several good reasons for not jumping too hastily to conclusions. The most obvious one is that so far as published and admitted facts go, there is as yet hardly a shred of justification for American intervention in Mexican affairs. The insurgents may be hotheads, but they are not savages, and they probably know enough to refrain from acts that would afford occasion for interference. Further, President Taft, if one may judge from his personal record, is about the last statesman who would think of perpetrating an act of national freebooting for which history affords few parallels. Mexico has not so far done any material injury to the United States. But even if injury to the United States. But even if President Taft, who has just signaled himself by his effort to obtain with Great Britain a general treaty of arbitration, were to discredit himself, the great majority of his fellow-citizens would absolutely reprobate such an act of spoliation on a huge scale. The United States has won an honorable record for insisting on the integrity of the Chinese Empire, and it has been the special field for the development of the world-wide peace propaganda. An unhealed attack on Mexico would set the shadow back fifty years on the peace dial.

It is quite inconceivable that President Diaz should be found willing to betray his country after he has served it for a third of a century as its Chief Magistrate having before his election fought strenuously for several years to preserve its republican independence. But even if Diaz were to turn traitor, the Mexican people would still have to be reckoned with, and all the other Latin Americans as well. Present appearances indicate that the conquest of Mexico by the United States would be a task of years, and that the Mexicans could be kept in subjection only by a large army of occupation.—Tor Globe.

Yesterday and To day

Had he lived, Grover Cleveland twice President of the United States would have been 74 years of age on Saturday. Recalling on this anniversary the various acts of his presidential administrations that were construed as hostile to England, the speech of Sir Edward Grey last week in the British Parliament commending to the favorable consideration of his countrymen an alliance with the United States for the preservation of universal peace, is significant of the marked change in feeling toward each other now entertained by the two nations.

To no one more than the dead President would the growing improvement in the relations of the States with the mother country as indicated by recent occurrences give greater satisfaction were he alive today. It will be 23 years next August since he sent to Congress a message affirming a policy of retaliation against Canada in connection with the acrimonious Newfoundland fisheries question, amicably adjusted recently through a court of arbitration. The following October he dismissed Lord Sackville-West, the Minister of England to Washington for venturing to advise a fellow countryman, who had become an American citizen how to vote and in 1895 during his second administration he stirred a wide-spread feeling of resentment toward his country by attempting to interfere in the dispute over the boundary line between British Guiana and Venezuela, then assuming an acute stage.

Under the sobering influence of time the rancor and bitterness which formerly needed little to inflame the smouldering embers of national prejudice have given way to a spirit of mutual toleration forbearance and appreciation. Twenty years ago, a reciprocity agreement with Canada such as has been sponsored by President Taft and Premier Laurier would have been condemned as evidence of national weakness and commanded scarcely a single vote in the Congress or Parliament. Now we welcome it as a good thing and acclaim it a necessary feature in the commercial evolution of both countries. Twenty years ago, a suggestion for any sort of alliance between the States and England, offensive or defensive, would have aroused the fire of every jingo in the land and destroyed the future political usefulness of the statesman who recommended it. Now not a leaf's asir or a bird's flutter in the whole land.

England sends her surplus millions to the United States to finance some of the foremost industries in the east and help James J. Hill and other railroad builders develop the tractless wastes of the west. American money, with the encouragement and cooperation of the English Colonial government, finds profitable investment in rubber cultivation in British Guiana, public service corporations in Canada, fruit in its West Indian possessions and tin in India. Our children inter-marry with more frequency, our navies vie with one another in hospitality, our scientific and research bureaus work in unison for the common good and there is less suspicion, less jealousy less disposition apparent to impute to each other questionable motives and sinister ambitions in our diplomatic and commercial relations than there used to be.

In a closer business union, we have buried, let us hope forever, old animosities and come to a better understanding, which the years will strengthen and fortify as they glide by.

Important Moves In

I. O. F. Foresters

Toronto, March 25.—The government of the Independent Order of Foresters in all parts of the world by the Supreme Court is expected to follow the next Supreme Court session to be held in Toronto, commencing May 2 next. This is a radical change and will throw the responsibility for the direction of the order upon the Supreme Court which meets every four years.

The proposal is to dispense with the annual meetings of the High Court and devote the money saved thereby to the work of the orphan's home at Deseronto, Ont., and the consumption sanatorium at Rainbow Lake in the Alton-Jacks, New York State.—Exchange.
The mineral output of Canada for the year 1910 was $105,048,958. This was an increase of $78,200,000 since 1909. New Brunswick cuts a very poor figure as a contributor to the mineral wealth of the Dominion. Its figure for 1910 was only $88,800, while Nova Scotia went to $14,054,000. Nova Scotia is ahead of Ontario in its total results, for Ontario's figures are $13,005,000. British Columbia leads all with $24,200,000. Of the precious metals silver leads with $17,000,000. Gold gives $10,000,000. Coal is the most valuable mineral, for it yielded $29,830,000.—Exchange.

The last to be taken was the "Jessie Anderson" owned by Somerville Anderson of Eastport. Norman Clark of Pembroke, Me. spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Cook.

The Liquor Traffic

We cannot too often or too emphatically reiterate the fundamental proposition that the liquor traffic is inherently destructive, anti-social and utterly bad. It is not to be classed with the production or distribution of commodities that are useful, or even harmful. Its place among the agencies that deplete, degrade and corrupt. It is among the evils which all good citizens must seek to exterminate. This traffic depreciates the actual value of the raw materials with which it deals. Its product is an injury and a curse to society, instead of a helpful contribution to industry and enjoyment. It must be classed with the vices and crimes which war against the advance and success of civilization. As far as society is concerned, the pro-

ALEXANDRA'S SECRET

London, March 21.—The secret of Queen Alexandra's wonderful youthful appearance never ceases to interest feminine England and some details of her diet have been imparted to the curious. Queen Alexandra never touches red meat. She eats only chicken, turkey, duck and game. The vegetables she has served to her are cabbage, spinach, peas and beans. She does not eat pudding or pastry, and for dessert has simply fruit cooked or uncooked and nuts and raisins. She is particularly fond of nuts and has been known to make an entire luncheon of almonds and walnuts dipped in salt. She eats toast rather than bread and very little butter, but quantities of cream. She drinks nothing but hot milk, having given up tea, coffee, cocoa and wines years ago. On this diet with a moderate amount of exercise, Queen Alexandra keeps wonderfully well and preserves a girlish symmetry of figure and softness of skin which makes it difficult to realize that she is well past sixty.

FISH NOTES

Let Isn't Living up to It's Reputation for Diet

As a fish-consuming season, says the Fishing Gazette, Lent is not living up to its reputation. Whether this is due to what is called "the increasing irreligion of the masses" or to something else, it is hard to determine. But it is a fact that the annual consumption of fish is on the increase. This seems to mean that sea food is used more as a staple throughout the whole year. And after all the Church's loss, if any, is economy's gain. Domestic airlines are steady on the better grades. It is believed that there will be practically no stock at the opening of the new packing season on April 15. The Eastport and Lubec factories are now in the preliminary activities of getting ready for the base season. Some new machinery is being installed. At 65 cents a pound, lobsters crawled up to a high price in Boston last week. Most of the receipts at this time of the year are from Nova Scotia, but the supply from that quarter has fallen off to 300 crates compared with a thousand crates received in the corresponding week a year ago, and nearly four hundred crates brought in last week.—Eastport Ctm.

A Boston clergyman in the course of a sermon recently declared that if he could have his way he would tax some bachelors $1000 a year for ten years and if they were not married by that time he would burn them. Another managed to gain a prominent position with large headlines in the Monday morning papers by asserting that blushing is a lost art. If these are fair samples of the average Boston sermon it is not to be wondered at that there is much complaint in that city in the falling off in church attendance.—Springfield Union.

FATHER MORRISSEY'S REMEDIES.

Cured a Truro Lady of Both Lung and Kidney Troubles.

Truro, N.S., Jan. 14th, 1910.

Father Morrissy Med. Co., Ltd.

For some time I had been troubled with a very dry cough and pain in my side or back. I spent quite a lot of money in medicine, but none of the remedies I tried ever helped me, until a lady friend showed me your advertisement. I am now fat and healthy, and your remedies have saved me from the grave.

(Miss) MARTHA WHITE.

None of Father Morrissy's remedies have ever been heralded as "cure-alls." The wise priest-physician presented a special remedy for each kind of disease—a remedy skillfully devised to cure that particular trouble and that only.

No. 10 (Lung Tonic), besides curing colds, inflammation, pneumonia, bronchitis and other diseases of throat and lungs, strengthens these organs and gives them vigour to resist a return of the trouble.

No. 7 Tablets stimulate weak kidneys so that they can properly perform their function of filtering from the blood the impurities that cause rheumatism.

The action of both these remedies is hastened if Father Morrissy's Liniment is applied freely externally.

No. 7 Tablets for Kidneys and Rheumatism are put up in 50c. boxes; No. 10 (Lung Tonic) in 25c. and 50c. bottles, and Father Morrissy's Liniment in 25c. bottles. At your dealer's, or from Father Morrissy Medicine Co., Ltd., Montreal, Que.

Local Legislators

In the legislature, on Monday, a bill was introduced for the relief of Cadwalader C. Flagg. It was explained that this bill related to land in Campobello Island which had been left by Mr. Flagg's wife, who died without issue, and it now seemed that the land would probably revert to the crown. It appeared to be an injustice for the government to take possession of the property. The bill provides that Mr. Flagg have the property during his life, and that then it will pass to the Church of England Synod--Beacon.

Securing Early Potatoes. The Farm

Potato buyers are constantly calling attention to the unmarketable character of the ordinary potato crop. One man who has dealt largely in potatoes for years past said to the writer a few days ago: "Please tell the farmers of this country to grow one kind of potato, and one kind only. If they desire to grow red potatoes grow them. If they prefer white potatoes, why, grow them. But to mix up the varieties, and to have the crop part one color and part another, with varying cooking qualities, means that their crop cannot be marketed to advantage, and the result is that it does not pay the dealer to handle it, and, of course, cannot pay the producer."

The advisability of following the advice given in the foregoing paragraph cannot be too emphatically pointed out. There is no reason why the Canadian potato growers may not compete successfully with the growers in the United States, or why all the growers in the country may not be just as successful as those who have made a reputation for themselves in this respect. When growers take care to grow a good variety, then select their seed with care, give the soil proper cultivation, keep the soil moist, and protect the vines from the attacks of insects, they will not fall very far short of profitable crops.

A few enterprising growers fully recognize the advantage in having the crop mature early. To do this, they so arrange their seed that there is an inch of bud on the sets when put into the ground. The sprouting is brought about by spreading the seed out over a few weeks before planting on the floor of a loft. It is said that this practice is better than planting without sprouting. Perhaps a better method is to store the seed in boxes in the autumn, so that at planting time in the spring each potato has thrown out strong, stiff buds not readily broken by ordinary handling. For each hundredweight of seed there ought to be five boxes. The boxes should be so constructed that they can be piled one on top of the other to a height of eight or ten feet. There are several advantages in this plan, among them the possibility of overhauling the seed potatoes during the winter, and removing any diseased or decayed tubers. Boxed seed keeps better than in any other way. The grower is less dependent on the weather, and may refrain from planting his seed until the land is in perfect condition. The crop matures earlier, which means an earlier harvest and a better quality. In some instances, under favorable conditions, this sprouting of seed before planting has meant an increase in the production of about two tons per acre.—Tor. Globe.

Telephone Interrupts Who a Patient Would Have to Wait.

(London Lancet)

Before the introduction of the telephone it was the general habit of medical men to permit no interruption of a consultation for anything short of an imperative necessity.

Once the patient was in the consulting room the practitioner's undivided attention was given to that patient until the close of the consultation and trivial messages and communications had to wait until the medical man was at liberty to attend to them.

Now, however, with the telephone on every desk it is no uncommon thing for a consultation to be frequently interrupted while queries are answered from some other patient, or appointments made, some of which may even have no bearing on professional work at all.

Many patients resent this, and we think not unreasonably; and in the matter of one well known consultant formal complaint has been made to us.

This situation is not so common in the routine of general practice, and here it may be to some extent inevitable, but as far as possible it should be avoided.

When a patient is called to the office, he should be told that he is to be seen at a certain hour, and that he should be ready to be seen at that hour. If he is not ready, he should be told so, and he should be told that he will be seen at a later hour.

Sixteen Stories C. P. R.'s New Building

Toronto, March 23.—The new bank building at the corner of Avenue and Colborne streets, which has the distinction of being the tallest commercial building in the British Empire, is to be overshadowed by its neighbor on the north at the corner of Yonge and King streets. Here the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will erect a structure sixteen stories high, the storey higher than the bank building.

Robert says the Company will erect a large block in the neighborhood in the near future.

A Naval Discoverer

(Boston Record)

President Lowell of Harvard, speaking of the English admiral, used the story to illustrate the fact that the admiral is chosen rather for his executive ability than for his knowledge of naval affairs. The admiral, shortly after his appointment, went down to the decks to inspect the ships and to show his interest in the navy. As he approached the first large ship, whose portnotes were open, his interest increased, and his step quickened. When he finally was near enough to look inside the ship, he exclaimed in amazement: "Why, the old thing is hollow, isn't it?"

Manitoba's Fish Trade Is Growing

Washington, March 23.—Wheat is now the leading product of Manitoba, but according to United States Consul General Jones at Winnipeg, the fishing industry has developed to such an extent that it ranks second to wheat in importance, says the consul.

For years the states along the international border were dependent upon Manitoba for fresh fish, but recent years have witnessed the introduction of Manitoba fish on the general markets of the United States. The Middle States are the principal consumers, but frequently fish from that district have found their way to the markets as far south as Maryland. The catch is made in Lake Winnipeg.

Trade With France

Canada's trade with France today is nearly double what it was ten years ago. Imports from France amount to $5,500,000 in 1901, and total $11,700,000 today. Exports have increased from $2,580,000 to $2,160,000. What Canada sells to France may be covered in three principal articles:
Fish, mainly canned lobster, about $2,000,000; agricultural implements and minerals, $932,000; and bread stuffs, $337,000. Canada buys from France various kinds of dairy products. France is famed for its gloves, and Canada bought $556,000 worth of these from France last year. Paris is the arbiter of fashion for the world, and fancy goods were imported, chiefly for use in millinery, to the value of $178,500. France is noted for its perfumes and soaps, and Canada imported about an equal amount of each—$133,000 worth of perfumery and $137,000 worth of soap. A very large trade is also done with France in spirits and wines. Last year's imports of these were over $417,000.

Perfume From Bulgaria

Although it is not easy to realize, there is a peaceful side to life in Bulgaria, the two main industries of this unenviable State being the cultivation of tobacco and roses. Only one crop of the latter is obtained each year. The season for gathering blooms begins towards the end of March and lasts, according to whether the season is warm or wet, from eighteen to thirty days. Early in the morning boys and girls make their way to the rosearies and pluck the young, half-open buds, covered with dew. The rising sun dissipates the light morning mist and gradually illumines the bright petals of the roses, and the even brighter hues of the national costumes. The plucked flowers are conveyed in baskets to the place of distillation. In each alembic is placed from twenty to twenty-five pounds of roses, to which is added one hundred and fifty pounds of water. A first distillation, which takes three-quarters of an hour, yields from thirty to thirty-five pounds of a liquor already perfumed, but weak in strength. This is concentrated and reduced to a third of its value by a second distillation, which yields the true essence of rose. In this liquid are found little oily globules of a yellowish tint. These are gathered and placed in special receptacles. They form the oil of rose, which serves all over the world for the fabrication of perfumes and costly-scented soaps.

G. H. Putnam's Sons.

The occupation of G. H. Putnam's Sons in March, 1911, for their publishing and manufacturing business, and for the extension of their retail department, of the premises of Forty-fifth street and Fifth Avenue, New York, gives a convenient text for recalling the history of the firm. The late George Palmer Putnam, the founder of the House, began his career as a publisher, in partnership with John Wiley in 1836. The operations of the publishing concern of Putnam, may, however, be said to date from 1841, when Mr. George P. Putnam opened in London the first American Book House established in Great Britain. In 1889 the manufacturing department was incorporated under the name of The Knickerbocker Press, and in 1892 the Press took possession of its new plant at New Rochelle. In 1847, Mr. Putnam, returning from London and beginning business at 155 Broadway, brought into publication Taylor's "Views Afloat," a book which is still, sixty-four years later in steady demand. In 1848, he began the publication of the Works of Washington Irving, and sixty-three years later the House of Putnam is still busily engaged in the printing and sale of the Works of Irving. In 1872 occurred the death of George Palmer Putnam, the founder of the House. Since that date, the firm has borne the name of G. P. Putnam's Sons.

In 1905, the G. P. Putnam's Sons became the American publishers for The University Press of Cambridge publications. The list of publications of the House now includes the titles of some four thousand volumes.
The retail department of G. P. Putnam's Sons, since the first of March, operated two complete book stores, one on the Forty-fifth street premises, and one at 28-29 West Twenty-third Street. Each store includes a thoroughly equipped stationery department. These two book stores have the advantage of making purchases direct, through the London House, of the supplies required of English and Continental publications and of rare books.

THAT ROLLER BOAT Knapp's Brilliant Craft Is Up Again In Law Courts

"Bang went saxophone."
Multiply the "tanner" several thousand times and add to it large quantities of annoyance and you have a partial financial history of the Knapp Roller Boat, which is again figuring in a law suit.

Years ago, before automobiles and aeroplanes were in operation, Mr. Fred Knapp, of Prescott, Ont., had a dream founded on the student lilt: "Merrily we roll along, o'er the deep blue sea."

As the result he interested Mr. Alfred Lauria, a Toronto financial agent, in the invention and construction of the now famous Knapp Roller Boat. It was a novel idea, to have a boat so constructed that no matter how high the waves might dash, the inner compartments of the boat would remain stationary, being swung on an axle which ran the full length of the ship.

In shape, it was not unlike an airship, but was constructed of sheet-iron.
The boat set out one day on her trial trip and just by way of showing her independence was wrecked a short distance out of the harbor. Since that time she has been on the go.

Her first trip after being tied up for repairs was down to the bottom of the bay near Poison's Iron Works. There she lay for some years, while the soft, gooey mud gradually covered her iron sides.

Then one day it was decided to raise her and the resurrection took place successfully, the hull still being intact. It was thought that it might be put to use as a coal boat, but as amphibious captains and crews are extinct something had to be done to stop her rolling habits. Therefore large quantities of cement weighing hundreds of tons, were forced down into the lowermost portions of her interior economy as ballast. Men went down into the rusty hold with steel set-pieces and for months were busy removing the corrosion and getting things looking as ship-shape as it was possible to make such a creation. The work had the effect of awakening the waterlark of the craft. The years spent in the solitude of the bottom of the bay had produced a desire for company and in the winter of 1906 the opportunity came one night in the shape of a violent storm. The cables were broken and in the darkness of

STOMACH LIVER LUNGS

Each of the chief organs of the body is a link in the Chain of Life. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link, the body no stronger than its weakest organ. If there is weakness of stomach, liver or lungs, there is a weak link in the chain of life which may snap at any time. Often this so-called "weakness" is caused by lack of nutrition, the result of weakness or disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases and weaknesses of the stomach and its allied organs are cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When the weak or diseased stomach is cured, diseases of other organs which seem remote from the stomach but which have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, are cured also.

The strong man has a strong stomach.
Take the above recommended "Discovery" and you may have a strong stomach and a strong body.

early morning off she started to do some visiting. Straight down the bay she went toward the west, taking in all the local improvements and noising her way quietly along the water front. Finally, she spotted the Turbina and with a forward lurch made straight for the trim raft. Gentleness had not been included in her rollers and the meeting was so rough that the Turbina was badly damaged and that cut short the adventure, for the hoodoo was towed back and tied up again.

The next journey was a little pleasanter jaunt over to Fisherman's Island, where after vainly trying to crawl up the shore she gave up the attempt and quietly submitted to being again taken back and tied up. There she is yet, rusting her heart out in the sorrow of a blighted career hoodooed at every stage and good for nothing much but the scrap heap.

The iron alone in the original construction cost over $10,000, and since that time Mr. Lauria, the financial agent, claims the boat has run up a bill of costs of $30,000. The returns have been nothing at all as she has never made an official trip and therefore earned nothing but catumny.

A Minister and His Salary

(Winnipeg Tribune.)

When the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York, called Rev. J. H. Jowett, of Birmingham, England, nothing was said about salary. Dr. Jowett accepted and was informed this stipend would be $12,000 a year. Now, although Dr. Jowett is one of the very great preachers of Europe, his salary there, if changed into the currency of coin on this side would be a little less than $5,000. Moreover, it is becoming in higher ministerial circles, exceedingly bad form to accept calls that bear a increase in salary. The self-respecting minister, if he has been comfortably cared for by his parish, desires to be able to leave his people as one minister did not long ago, saying: "I do not go for money. I am to receive there what I receive here, not one cent more nor one cent less." But here was an increase over $7,000 a year offered Dr. Jowett. It was what his predecessor received, and what, in the nature of the case, Dr. Jowett would be entitled to. What was to be done? Dr. Jowett simply writes a letter.

"May I be allowed to add that I shall not need the large stipend you so graciously offer me? When I meet the officers of the church I shall seek their judgment as to what is the equivalent to the stipend I am receiving in my present charge."

Well, the cost of living. And, besides a minister making parish calls afoot among millionaire homes is maybe not preferred above the one who comes up in an auto.

Dr. Jowett is a giant, spiritually and mentally, and his invasion of the high salary field, with his gentle deprecations, will be watched with interest. He is not a man who will allow his people to put that extra $7,000 back in their pockets. He is a man who will preach, as he has always preached, the gospel of giving—not giving to himself, or to a church organization, but to those who need it. There is a Philadelphia minister who receives $7,000 a year which he does not use for himself. He has a privy income and he preaches for nothing, but he does not allow that circumstance to rid his people of their responsibilities. He makes them raise that $7,000 that his services are worth to them, and then he distributes it among those who need it. Dr. Jowett apparently chooses another way, but the millionaires of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church will discover in addition to a man who does not want money for himself, a man who will teach them that the way to help themselves is to put to good use some that they have.

London, Mar. 10.—Dr. B. Murray Leslie, in the current number of National Health, makes the startling assertion that there is far more secret drinking among upper and middle class women than is generally known. The consumption of whiskey, brandy, and even eau de Cologne, is far too common. In the industrial centres, this Harley street physician says, women are drinking more than ever. In London Glasgow and Dublin the public houses may be seen crowded with women.

On the other hand, when a woman of the upper classes becomes addicted to alcohol, she nearly always drinks in secret.
She soon becomes such an adept in cunning and dissimulation that she is often enabled to carry on the practice of being without any of her friends being aware of the fact.

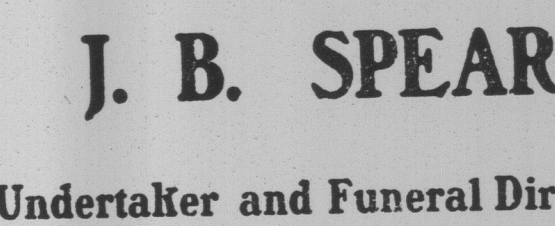

The most cunning secret drinkers appear to be old maids or married women without children. Loneliness and monotony, with no outlet of the expression of the natural emotions of joy and love, are the main causes ascribed by the doctor inducing inebriety in women.

Among the effects of drinking on women he names the loss of will-power and self-control and the blurring of the sense of right and wrong. In conclusion, Dr. Leslie says, drinking women become creatures of

Glasgow to Have Big Exposition

Glasgow, March 24.—The spacious exhibition palaces that have been going up in Kelvingrove Park are rapidly nearing completion and the indications are that everything will be in readiness for the opening of the great international exposition at the beginning of May. The two largest buildings are to be devoted to exhibits illustrating the history of Scotland and to a display of the work of Scottish artists. Another notable feature prepared specially in honor of the memory of Lord Kelvin, will be an exhibit to illustrate the progress of electrical and engineering discovery and invention and the development of electricity as an applied science.

Among the lighter features of the exhibition will be a procession of historical vessels on the river. Ships of all kinds, from the earliest Viking galleys to the present day ocean liners and battleships will be represented. The pageant will be largely illustrative of Glasgow's part in the progress of steam navigation.

Canadian Trade
The Portland, Maine, Argus notes that Canada keeps up her swift pace in industrial and commercial development. For the first eleven months of the current fiscal year, Canada's total trade has been $687,377,488, an increase of $76,709,507, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, and within six millions of the record total for the whole of the twelve months of 1909-10. For the full year ending with this month, it is expected that the Dominion's trade will run close to $780,000,000, or more than double the total trade of nine years ago, and an increase of over two hundred millions in two years. That is "going some." Doubling the amount of trade in nine years is doing well, but the next nine years will tell a better story even, when reciprocity is developing the trade between Canada and the United States. New Brunswick will have its share in this growth. A St. John river steamboat owner looks for trade in the river section being quadrupled in the very first year.

A good position can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway telegraphy. Since the 8 hour law became effective, and since the wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of R. R. and wireless officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Cincinnati, Ohio, or Philadelphia.

Glass That Will Not Break

Baccarat, France, has the honor of producing the first glass that is unbreakable. The new process has been successfully applied to the manufacture of lamp chimneys for use in coal mines containing much fire damp. The glass-makers of Baccarat have also succeeded in increasing the elasticity of the glass. This they accomplish by adding magnesia and oxide to the ordinary crystal glass. --From Success Magazine.

Wedding can be Held

Erile Has Scarlet Fever, and Br degroom and License Clerk are Disinfecting.

Washington, Pa., March 17.—Overcoming the obstacles of quarantine and the Board of Health regulations by means of rubber clothing and sterilized pens and paper, Dr. Eliot Round Clark, a member of the faculty of Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore, this afternoon secured a license to wed Miss Eleanor McLeson Linton, who is ill at the home of her parents, Prof. and Mrs. Edwin Linton.

The young couple were to be married next Tuesday evening. This week Miss Linton was stricken with scarlet fever, and her fiance came to Washington and took charge of the case. To-day Miss Linton insisted that the wedding proceed as scheduled.

Clerk of Court David L. Williams agreed to assist, and, securing a rubber suit and a liberal supply of disinfectant, he went to the Linton home. Wearing rubber clothing and gloves, Dr. Clark appeared at a rear window, which was closed sufficiently for him to reach through and sign the necessary documents. This done, the window was closed, and, standing outside with raised hand, Clerk Williams administered the oath to the respective bridegroom inside. The papers were then disinfectant and placed in a file. In the house of sickness the plans for the wedding are going on toward completion.

America Found by

Accident, He Says

Mr. Henry Vignaud, in forthcoming book on Christopher Columbus, Makes Surprising Statement.

Paris, March 20.—Mr. Henry Vignaud's critical study of the life and work of Christopher Columbus will be issued next Saturday in two large volumes. Since retiring two years ago from the office of Secretary of the American Embassy, Mr. Vignaud has been able to complete at the age of eighty-one years what he had been preparing for fifty years.

In the forthcoming books the author tells a story differing materially from that told by Columbus, and designed to show that, contrary to general belief, the discoverer originally had no idea of reaching Asia by a Western route, but sailed simply to make discoveries near land. It was only when he found the Western Hemisphere and supposed that he had reached Asia that he asserted that such had always been his object.

Changes in the Militia Service

Kingston, March 21.—The Militia Department, having decided to accept Gen. Sir John French's recommendations for a reorganization of the military forces of the Dominion, is making the following changes:

Colonel Thomas Benson, Ottawa, comes to Kingston in command of the Eastern Division here.

Colonel T. D. R. Hemming is appointed A. A. G. at Toronto, D. O. C. having been done away with.

Major L. W. Shannon, London, comes to Kingston as D. A. A. G., in succession to Lieut. Col. D. D. Young, who is retired.

Lieut. Col. Burstall, of the R. C. H. A., goes to Quebec, taking the place of Lieut. Col. English, who becomes A. A. G. at Montreal.

Col. J. A. G. Fages returns here from Halifax as A. A. G.

Brig. General W. H. Cotton, who now commands the western Ontario command will have command of the second division.

Colonel W. E. Hodgins, D. O. C., M. D., No. 1, will command the first division.

A new office will be created, namely, that of Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General for each division, and Capt. C. C. Bennett, D. S. A., M. D., No. 11, of Victoria, B. C., will go to Toronto to fill this office in the second division.

A radical departure will be made in the appointment of an officer of the Imperial Army to each division to act as Chief Staff Officer. The work of the Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General for the second division, which for many years has been performed by Lieut. Col. J. Galloway, will be divided between the Chief Staff Officer and the D. A. Q. M. G. Lieut. Col. Galloway, on account of ill health, is retiring.

Lieut. Col. J. C. Leighton, Senior Army Service Corps Officer, who is retiring on account of the expiration of his term of office, will be succeeded by Captain A. de M. Bell, of Kingston.

Major A. H. Macdonnell, C. S. O., western Ontario command, will go to London as Administrative Officer.

The system of reorganization, it is understood, will go into effect on May 1 next.—Exchange.

What is the Camorra?

Day after day the newspapers publish despatches regarding the trial of "Camorristi" in the town of Viterbo, Italy, for the crime of murder. The trial is of unusual importance, for it is the final step in an effort to end a reign of terror in Sicily. The murders with which the prisoners are charged were committed in Naples, the persons killed having been members of the Camorra, but the trial could not take place there because of the influence of the society in that city, and the impossibility of securing an impartial jury. Therefore, Viterbo, 180 miles away was selected. The case excites great interest on two continents. The New York World briefly describes the history of the blood-thirsty organization.

The Camorra will soon reach its centennial if it is not put down; but it amounted to little until political favor was shown it by the corrupt Bourbon monarchy in Naples, which used its members as spies. Soon it grew so strong that King "Bombal" turned upon it. In 1848 it became Liberal and aided the party of freedom and unity, so the new Kingdom of Italy sought to use it in suppressing brigandage after 1850, but met quicks of its unmanageable ally.

This mischief was not easily undone. The Camorra is still in politics for plenty. By 1900 it had become so absolute in Naples that the city, the largest in Italy, was deprived of self-government and reorganized by a Royal Commissioner, a common Italian procedure. Next year the "Clique" Union beat the Camorra at the polls and since then the government has waged constant war on it.

The Camorra is unlike the Sicilian Mafia. Mafia or "Mala Vita" describes a condition rather than a society. It is mainly rural and the bands have little connection—which makes them the harder to quell in this country. The Camorra is civilized, centralized, organized. It lets tourists alone, as they "bring money into the country," but with connections in the highest circles and in the police it levies toll upon native industry. The government must in the end conquer the Camorra. Crime may then become as rare in Naples as in Venice. At present, according to Nicotro, murder is nearly five times as frequent in South as in North Italy.

American interest has been aroused in the Camorra because of the murder in 1908 of Police Lieutenant Petrosino, of New York, who, in seeking to put a stop to black-hand outrages, was making investigation in Italy. Leading Camorristi are believed to have been directly implicated in the crime.—Exchange.

Children Shot Before Their Parents' Eyes

Douglas, Ariz., March 24.—Harrowing details of the tragedy of real war are coming out of Mexico. A military engineer who arrived here from Montezuma to-day, told of the execution of children before the eyes of their parents.

When Jose Chiapas, Prefect of the Montezuma district, captured general Talamantes, said the engineer, two sons of the general were also captured and condemned to death.

General Talamantes addressed the authorities, saying: "I do not ask anything for myself, but if you will spare the lives of my two young sons, I will turn over every penny of my fortune. They are young and have practically their whole life before them."

"They must be shot," was the reply.

A detachment of Col. Ojeda's federal soldiers were lined up and the two young men, blindfolded, were led out. Their father covered his face with his hands and wept when the fatal volley rang out and the boys fell, their bodies riddled.

General Talamantes was then led out and within a few minutes his dead body lay across those of his sons. The widow of General Talamantes, who is wealthy, has set about forming a company of soldiers which she threatens to lead in person against Montezuma in order to avenge the death of her husband and sons.

A New Pasture Crop.

Where cattle are pastured in large numbers on limited areas either for dairy purposes or beef it is important to secure the best possible results throughout the whole season.

One of the difficulties, especially in view of our dry summers, is that the supply of green food is not continuous and abundant during the whole period. How to overcome the difficulty is a problem that has merited the attention of the Experimental Station at the Ontario Agricultural College.

From numerous tests that have been made in the growing of annual crops, both singly and in combination for pasture purposes in the same year in which they have been sown, it has been ascertained that a mixture of 51 pounds of oats, 30 pounds of early amber sugar cane, and seven pounds of common red clover seed per acre sown in May will yield a satisfactory crop in about six weeks time. The crop provides abundant and continuous growth throughout the season. It is healthful and appetizing for the stock and produces good results.

Dehorning Cattle.

Men who buy cattle are almost constantly complaining because farmers do not dehorn their steers and heifers that are sent to the block. In certain sections of the country dehorning is common practice, but in other sections it is not. The cattle ship much better and are far quieter when they are dehorned. They sometimes do great injury to one another if they are not dehorned, especially during a railway journey and during the time they are in strange surroundings. The ment is marked and sometimes ruined for marketing purposes. The horns can be so easily removed when the calves are small that it seems a pity not to do it. If all cattlemen would dehorn their young steers and heifers intended for beef the prices paid would go up. Anything that will improve prices is not a bad thing for the farmer.
