POLITICAL POSSIBILITIES

Gladstone May Let the Home Rule Scheme Drop,

And Reunite the Divided Liberal Party.

Parnell Strongly Urged to Accept Earl Spencer's Advice.

Proposal to Provide for the Issue of One Pound Notes—Superficial Lupus Cured by Prof. Koch's Remedy—Lieut. Troup Reiterates His Charges Against Stanley.

A Terrible Storm.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A terrible storm is raging on the Black Sea.

Troup vs. Stanley.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Lieut. Troup opened a lecture tour at Exeter last evening. He reiterated his charges against Stanley and defended Barttelot and Jameson.

Lady Connemara's Divorce.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Lady Connemara, daughter of Lord Dalhousie, has obtained a decree of divorce from Lord Connemara, ex-Governor of Madras, for adultery and cruelty.

An Appeal to Parnell.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The News this morning again appeals to Parnell, urging him to accept Earl Spencer's calm and considerate advice and not to give him the painful duty of rejecting him.

A New National Line Steamer.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The new steamer Europe, which was built at Jarrow-on-the-Tyne for the National Steamship Company, was successfully launched yesterday. She will run between Liverpool and New York.

Twenty Persons Perished.

VIENNA, Nov. 28.—Accounts received of the disasters incident to the storms in Bohemia and Bavaria show that twenty persons are known to have perished from cold and starvation in the Saale valley alone.

Italy's New Parliament.

ROME, Nov. 28.—The Reforma says the new Parliament will have both an economic and Socialist character. Lord Salisbury, Chancellor Von Caprivi and other leading European statesmen have congratulated Signor Crispi upon the result of the elections.

Lymph vs. Lupus.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—A case of lupus has been cured by injections of Koch's lymph without subsequent surgical aid. A number of detached places in the skin of the patient where formerly there were lupus pores are now again visible, and the hair is growing over the portions of the skin that were affected.

The Shannon Overflows Its Banks.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—The River Shannon has overflown its banks at Athlone, and the towns which are situated on both sides of the river are submerged. Hundreds of acres of farm land are under water and the crops are destroyed. A large number of cattle have perished. Many families are rendered homeless.

A Steamer and Her Crew Lost.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Norwegian bark Neptunus, Capt. Tobiasen, at London, from Quebec, reports that while lying to, during a gale off Dungeness Sunday evening, she saw a large west-bound steamer turn to the eastward, capsize and founder. A heavy sea was running at the time. No trace of the steamer's crew has been found.

Radicals Elated—A Surprise.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 28.—The Belgian Prime Minister yesterday introduced in Parliament a bill providing for an extension of the franchise. This action was a complete surprise. The Radicals are greatly elated, and the workmen who had intended to inaugurate a general strike as a part of the universal suffrage movement have decided to remain at work. The streets at night were thronged with people and the rejoicing is general.

The Poor Patients.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—The Berlin Post publishes a statement by Danelius, a colleague of Dr. Levy, in which he admits 500 marks was asked and paid for a single injection of Dr. Koch's lymph.

Berlin correspondents say that there is considerable distress among the patients who have flocked to that city in the hope of being treated by Dr. Koch's new method. Most of these unfortunates are poor, and many of them have spent their last penny in the desperate attempt to secure a renewed lease of life.

One Pound Notes.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Spencer asked the Government, in view of the recent financial crisis, to introduce a bill to amend the Bank Act of 1884 by providing for the issue of £1 notes.

MR. GOSCHEN, Chancellor of the Exchequer, declined to make any statement on the subject.

The Times, in its financial article, says there is no doubt if £1 notes are issued it will be on a gold and not a silver basis.

The Biggest.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—M. Pellatan has presented to the Budget Committee a report on the financial situation of France. This shows that the estimated debt of the country is 30,300,813,594 francs of nominal capital, and 22,824,043,690 francs of actual capital. The nominal rate of interest being 3.48 per cent., and the actual rate 4.62 per cent. This, continues the report, is the largest public debt in the world, but French credit is sufficiently solid to allow of French stock being reckoned at 3 per cent. The Chamber of Deputies yesterday, by a vote of 284 to 199, granted a subvention of 12,000,000 francs for public works in Annam and Tonquin.

A Startling Suggestion.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—It is thought quite possible that Mr. Gladstone will announce the impossibility of carrying the home rule scheme any further during his lifetime, and propose the re-union of his party on the basis of the old Radical programme, leaving Ireland out altogether. This would force nearly all the Liberal dissentients back into the ranks and leave the Conservatives in a minority, liable to be turned out of office any evening. Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Hartington might object to go back, but their constituents would say, "You left Mr. Gladstone because you thought his Home Rule Bill put the country in danger. That is off the track altogether, and you must return or give up your seats." Such would be the inevitable summons. If Mr. Gladstone decides to play this card it is all over with the Ministry and the Unionist Alliance. The bare thought of it is causing great agitation in the highest quarters. No rumor of such a possibility has been allowed to reach the press here, but it is working with thrilling effect behind the scenes. Monday's work may decide whether Mr. Gladstone or Mr. Parnell has to go under in the present struggle, and afterwards whether Mr. Gladstone is to find himself once more at the head of the united Liberal party.

Balfour's Land Bill.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Balfour introduced the Irish Land Bill. He said the Government's policy was the same as in 1889, but for simplicity the bill had been cut in two. Both portions, however, were practically the same as in the bill of 1889. One variation of the present bill from that of last year was that it met in some degree Mr. Parnell's views. Mr. Parnell had suggested that the privilege of purchase be confined to tenants whose holdings were under £50 valuation. Though he (Balfour) could not accept exactly that limitation, he had altered the scope of the bill by excluding all purely grazing farms and farms whose tenants did not reside on them. Among other changes embodied in the new bill, one had reference to the objection taken at the last session to a limit of twenty years' purchase then proposed. That limit did not appear in the new bill. Further power would be given the Viceroy to extend the period of five years, during which 8 per cent. of the purchase money was payable. In regard to increasing the powers of local authorities. Mr. Balfour said he considered that the original proposals therein or in the bill were the best that could be fevised. Land purchase in Ireland was not a local question at all. The Government was using the British credit to carry out this vital reform, not primarily for the benefit of this country or that, but for the benefit of the Empire as a whole. Another consideration was the fact that the land question in Ireland was largely used for political objects. It would be absurd, therefore, to leave to communities under the incitement of agitators to determine whether they should adopt a remedy going to the root of agrarian discontent. (Parnellite laughter.) If they were to give local control in any form it ought to be by a plebiscite of ratepayers, enabling them under the safeguard of the ballot to vote upon the question of granting a contingent portion of the guarantee fund for each county.

Mr. Labouchere moved an amendment against pledging the Imperial credit for the purchase of land until the country should have given its consent at a general election. The amendment was rejected—268 to 117. Mr. Gladstone, Sir Wm. Vernon Harcourt and Mr. Morley walked out before the vote was taken. When the Parnellites were flocking into the division lobby to vote on the amendment there was a sudden unusual movement, seemingly instigated by Mr. Healy, who with Mr. Sexton and a large contingent turned back and abstained from voting, while Parnell, Mr. Power and about 30 others supported the Government. The bill was then given its first reading amid the cheers of the Government supporters.

The Chronicle, commenting on the division on Labouchere's amendment, says Parnell has speedily given the Gladstonians a Roland for their Oliver. Regarding the new Irish Land Bill the Chronicle says it is probable Mr. Balfour will prove more squeezable in committee.

When Parnell went to record his vote on Labouchere's amendment, he passed the Liberal benches and his late allies studiously ignored him.

The Irish Leadership

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Dublin Freeman's Journal, upon the request of Parnell, states that he purposes to issue a manifesto to the Irish people to-night, and that he asks them meanwhile to suspend judgment. The Journal suggests that T. P. O'Connor's return from America be hastened, and that the Nationalists wait until he arrives before taking definite action in the matter of the Irish leadership. The paper says it appears that a majority at yesterday's Nationalist meeting in London favored the retirement of Parnell.

Michael Davitt will publish in the Labor World to-morrow an appeal to the Irish race at home and abroad. In this he implores people to rise and show themselves equal to the present emergency, and says that if Parnell remains at the head of the party there can be no hope of saving the cause of Ireland. The Irish party, he says, contains more than one man who is capable of leading it to victory, and there is sufficient patriotism in the party to follow a leader chosen from its own ranks by a majority of its members. In conclusion, he says that whatever decision may be made the Irish cause is imperishable, and he asks the people to pray to God that wisdom and courage may guide those upon whom Ireland's hopes are centered. Mr. Parnell declines to yield to the prayers and requests of his friends. The promptings of duty, patriotism and honor are stifled and in their place are the workings of hidden influences, which, if permitted a free reign, will ruin for a generation the chances of home rule.

A hurried meeting of the Nationalists was called, after the House rose, in the conference-room. Parnell was not present. The meeting was held ostensibly to arrive at an agreement not to mention recent events publicly until after the meeting on Monday, but great secrecy was observed as to what was really done. Sexton emphatically denies that he was aware of the existence of Gladstone's letter to Morley at the time the Nationalist meeting was held on Tuesday.

Lord Spencer, in a speech at Bromley, said the opinion of the Liberals of England was clearly and unmistakably against Parnell's continuance in the leadership of his party. The electors rightly put a high value upon the character of public men. Gladstone's letter had struck a note in harmony with the feelings of all Liberals. The Irish party, Lord Spencer said, had been too severely criticised on account of the attitude they had taken, but he could not blame them for not repudiating Parnell at once. (Cries of "Hear, hear.") They owed a debt of deepest gratitude to Parnell. The members of the Irish party were not indifferent to moral considerations, but loyalty to their trusted leader had made them hesitate before pronouncing against him. He honored them for not, in a moment, throwing over their leader. When the higher consideration of the permanent welfare of the country came into operation they would respond to the appeal of the English Liberals and ask Parnell to retire. If they do not do this the Irish cause would be rolled back, and the ship which was just at the mouth of the harbor, would be driven by storms out into the ocean. It would be a mighty misfortune to both Ireland and the Empire. The Liberals, even if Parnell remained at the head of his party, would not alter their opinions. They would still resist coercion, but they would cut away the old policy and try a new one. (Cheers.)

Mr. Labouchere has written Parnell, urging him to withdraw. Labouchere says Parnell's remaining in the leadership means another six years of Balfour and coercion for Ireland, while his withdrawal will mean the meeting of an Irish Parliament in Dublin in two years at least. It is stated that if Parnell remains in the leadership of the Irish party Mr. Sexton and other Irish members will apply for the Chiltern Hundreds and offer themselves for re-election in order to test the feeling of the electors. It is understood that Monday's meeting of the Parnellites a resolution will be proposed recognizing Parnell's great services, and calling upon him to resign the leadership.

The Dublin Evening Telegraph vehemently urges the country to stand by Parnell and stiffen the waverers. A movement is on foot to hold meetings throughout Ireland on Sunday next for the purpose of expressing confidence in Parnell. The priests are opposed to the scheme. Many Parnellite members of Parliament have declared that they would gladly see the alliance with the Liberal party broken, so the Irish party could resume independence. One of Parnell's closest friends declares Parnell regards the movement to expel him as Radical revenge for his support of the royal grants last summer, and he will resist to the last this attempt to destroy the independence of the Irish party and make them a mere appanage to the Liberal party.

Mr. Parnell, in conversing with colleagues, combats the inference from Gladstone's letter that the Liberal leader threatens to retire in case Parnell continues to lead the Nationalists.

Timothy Healy and Mr. Parnell had frequent conferences yesterday in the library of the House of Commons. Mr. Healy refuses to say anything about the Irish leader's intentions. Parnell appears to be in buoyant spirits and splendid health. The feeling among the Nationalist members of Parliament is more favorable to Parnell than on Tuesday or yesterday, and the opinion prevails that at the meeting on Monday next they will sustain him.

BUFFALO BILL

Sent Out by Gen. Miles to Investigate the Messiah Craze—The Fort Keogh Story Denied.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 28.—Buffalo Bill has arrived accompanied by his old pard, Frank Powell, known as "White Beaver," and R. H. Haslan, known as "Pony Bob," who once rode 108 miles in eight hours and ten minutes. Special conveyances with relays were engaged to take the trio to Standing Rock Agency. Buffalo Bill has a commission from Gen. Miles, which is believed to be the most important of any issued since Sitting Bull's surrender. The party will go direct to Sitting Bull's camp, on the Grand River. It will be remembered that Sitting Bull did not come in on Saturday, the regular ration day, but sent word to Agent McLaughlin that his child was sick. It is believed that Buffalo Bill is sent out to get at the bottom of the Messiah craze, with almost unlimited authority to act. This is Buffalo Bill's first visit to this section since the Custer massacre.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 28.—At the headquarters of the Department of Dakota no news of the reported battle with Indians near Fort Keogh has been received, and it is not thought there is any truth in the report. Lieut. Woodruff states that the Cheyenne Indians near Fort Keogh are all friendly.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 28.—Gen. Wesley Merritt has received dispatches from the Indian Territory to the effect that the Indians in the vicinity of Fort Reno are somewhat unsettled, due to the Messiah craze, but that no trouble is feared. Their religious dances, however, are carried on with much fervor and are participated in by Indians from other reservations.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, Nov. 28.—Unless the Indians are frightened or driven into a fight during the next week there is every probability that the Indian troubles on Pine Ridge Agency will be settled without difficulty. No hostile Indians can be found among the 4,000 gathered here.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The advices received by the War Department yesterday from the seat of the threatening Indian troubles are reassuring, and indicate a gradual subsiding of the ghost dance.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 28.—A special from Wichita, Kansas, says reports from Fort Reno tell of greatly-increased excitement among the ghost dancers, and considerable accessions to their ranks, especially among the Kiowas and Apaches. The more excitable redskins are cutting themselves with knives and spears and the sight of blood has had the effect of greatly arousing the warriors' spirits. Several lodges of braves mounted their ponies, approached the fort and dared the soldiers to come out. The runners sent north by the Caddas and Kiowas have not yet returned, and scouts are on the lookout to intercept them, as it is feared reports of bloodshed may hasten an outbreak. Great uneasiness prevails among the whites on the west border of Oklahoma and Green county, Texas.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 28.—Near Sohomish Wednesday, an Indian, known as Beaver, accused Jerry Gould, a rancher, of assaulting his squaw and threatened to shoot unless he put up $100. Gould refused when the Indian opened fire. Gould then shot Beaver dead. The other Indians took charge of Beaver's body with wild lamentations and swore vengeance. Gould fled.

POLITICAL POINTS.

The petition in Welland was dropped yesterday.

The bill of particulars in the Hamilton election protest has been served on Mr. Stinson. Seven personal charges are made against the respondent.

Owing to illness in the family of Mr. S. B. Burdett, M. P. for East Hastings, the meeting announced for Monday at Canifton to be addressed by Sir Richard Cartwright has been postponed.

In the East Durham election trial, opened at Millbrook yesterday, counsel for the petitioner argued that sixteen tendered ballots presented in the township of Hope be added to the vote. These ballots were deposited by voters whose names were accidentally omitted from the final list. The judges allowed the tendered ballots to be counted, and then to avoid the cost of a scrutiny both parties consented to the voiding of the election, each party paying its own costs.

Interviewed a Bear.

PALGRAVE, Ont., Nov. 28.—While walking on the N. and N. W. Railway track, about half a mile from this station, Wednesday evening, W. Brown, telegraph line repairer, of Hamilton, came upon a bear lying between the tracks. The animal was resting quietly, and Brown was not aware of what it was until he had almost trod upon it. The bear did not relish being disturbed and showed fight. Brown had nothing with which to defend himself except his climbing spurs, but by making good use of his legs he managed to distance the brute and reach the station platform.

Temperance in Brant County.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 28.—The annual meeting of the Brant county branch of the Dominion Alliance, held here yesterday afternoon, was an event of unusual interest. Every part of the county was represented, about 100 delegates being on hand. Mr. D. M. Lee, of Paris, presided, and among the prominent prohibitionists around him were Charles Grantham, Rev. Jas. Mooney, T. Howell, Rev. John Kay, Dr. Lowrey, George W. Lambkins, Rev. J. Sinclair, Theodore Thomas, Rev. J. W. Cooley, Alex. McIrvine, Rev. T. S. Johnston (formerly of London), W. F. Chapman, Rev. W. N. Vollick, Charles Cox, Rev. E. C. Cockburn, John Jull, J. S. Brown, Israel Swazie, Dr. Trembert, Jos. Carter, Dr. Nicol, Rev. James Webb. There was also on hand a strong representation of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Mr. Spence, secretary of the Dominion Alliance, spoke at length detaining the provisions of the new amendments to the license laws. His address was warmly received. A lively discussion sprang up over a resolution in favor of an immediate local option campaign, some delegates favoring delay in the matter of submitting the act in Paris and this city, while others favored a general advance in both rural and urban municipalities. It was ultimately decided that vigorous work should be immediately begun, each locality to be the judge of its own ripeness and to direct its own work. Mr. Lee was re-elected president and Rev. J. W. Cooley was chosen secretary. A rousing mass meeting was held at night in Wycliffe Hall, presided over by the Mayor of the city and addressed by Mr. Spence. The new movement is attracting much attention, and its promoters are sanguine of success in their crusade.

THE ORESCH SISTERS.

Latest Reports from the Little Martyrs at Grace Hospital.

Detroit Free Press: The residents of this city have continued to receive all reports from Grace Hospital as to the condition of little Matilda Oresch with eager interest. The two girls, Matilda and Emma, who were released from the uncomfortable position in which they had remained for 3½ days late Sunday night, are both quite comfortable. It is hoped that the wound on Emma's side will be sufficiently healed so that she may leave the hospital in about ten days.

The original wound left as nearly as can be expressed in figures about 140 square inches of skinned surface. Of this the larger graft covered about 40 inches, and a number of other small grafts of pieces of skin have already been made. The top of the scalp is entirely bare, the periosteum having been destroyed by the accident. It is of course impossible to graft skin over this surface. To obviate the difficulty thus presented, Dr. Morley intended, when the patient had gained a little more strength, to bore through the outer table of the skull at various spots about 100 small holes slightly larger than a pin until the inner table is reached. On this table there is a growth of tissues somewhat similar in nature to the periosteum. From these holes small quantities of this tissue will ooze up and granulate, forming a living covering, over which the skin might then be grafted, as on the other parts.

It would seem that this experiment, however, has proven to have been somewhat unsuccessful. As a matter of fact, the sisters were separated from each other about 60 hours after the experiment. This was done for the reason that the injured sister developed fever and to guard against serious results to the older girl who had heroically offered herself to the experimentor's knives. It was considered by the physicians in charge as advisable to remove any danger to the older sister from the feverish indications of the younger by severing the flap and this was performed last Saturday. Up to this time it was thought that the experiment had been attended with complete success. Since that time, however, the symptoms have been so unfavorable and the sloughing process has continued to such an extent that of the 50 square inches of skin which were laid over the wound but 16 square inches remain.

A more conservative method has now been adopted, this being known to the medical profession as skin grafting. Minute particles have been taken from the arm of a nurse as well as from two of the attending physicians and a rabbit, and by this means there is a prospect that the skin may be formed.

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC

Considering a Practicable Scheme to Enter New York City.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—For a long time past the Canadian Pacific Railway has been endeavoring to discover a practicable project for getting into New York City, and the officials have now under consideration two such schemes, both of which are likely to be adopted. The first one is to run a road across New York State with a starting point on the St. Lawrence, either opposite Rockville or a point between that town and Montreal. Along the west side of the Hudson River is the West Shore Road, but it is learned that the Canadian Pacific can secure a new and independent route down the river, the proposed railway to be located some fifteen miles west of the West Shore. It is stated that the construction would be easy and that the new extension would provide not only a splendid through line for the Canadian Pacific to New York, but also supply an important section of New York State with much desired railway accommodations. The strong scheme—the one which is said to have taken President Van Horne and Assistant President Shaughnessy to Buffalo Wednesday and the one which will probably be first realized—is an American route via Buffalo to Winnipeg. It is generally believed that Canadian Pacific trains will in the near future be running from Buffalo east and west.

UNDER THE SEMAPHORE.

New Time Table on the M. C. R.—Double Tracking—The Steel Brake-Beam Industry—Railway News in General.

President Van Horne while at St. Catharines on Wednesday is reported to have said that the C. P. R. would build no new railroads in this part of the country for the next twelve months.

One of the first results of the railroad alliance brought about by Jay Gould and John D. Rockfeller was developed Wednesday when the roads which run through trains to the Pacific coast decided to run trains alternately and not in competition with each other.

A St. Thomas item says: During the summer the M. C. R. have laid 45 miles of double track, and work will be stopped on Saturday, when 200 men will be laid off. Early next spring work will be resumed and the double track extended between Springfield and Cayuga, Ont.

A new time table comes into force on the M. C. R. on Sunday. There is very little change in the running of trains Nos. 19 and 20. The fast North Shore limited express train from Chicago to New York will hereafter run over the New York Central via Buffalo instead of via Lockport, as at present.

"We're going to shut up shop and put crape on the doors," said R. G. Butler, of the Wabash, yesterday. "What's the matter? Why, we can't get any cars. The road is very busy and every car is in use. The Wabash has a great many more cars this year than it ever had before, but they seem to be all in use."—[Detroit Free Press.

In its issue of this week the Engineering News publishes statistics showing the progress of railway construction in the far Western States. According to the statistics, which cover ten states and territories, there have been 1,404 miles of track laid since Jan. 1, 1890, and there are now 2,617 miles under construction, 3,920 miles under survey and 4,977 miles projected for future construction, principally in Washington, Montana and Colorado.

The Michigan Railway Supply Company, of Detroit, has received orders during the past month for 11,000 "Central" steel brake beams. Over 3,000,000 pounds of No. 9 steel, 22 inches wide and 69½ inches long, and 1,000,000 pounds of malleable iron, in the shape of brake-heads and brake-lever fulcrums, have been used in manufacturing these brake beams during this year, and the outlook for the coming year shows that three times that amount will be needed for 1891. A semi-annual dividend of 5 per cent. has been declared and paid during the past month. Truly this is a remarkable showing for a business which started but three years ago.—[Railway Review.

SUES HER FATHER FOR DAMAGES.

Peculiar Family History That Is Revealed by a Lawsuit.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Regina Clement, a young woman residing with her mother at No. 151 North Paulina street, has commenced a suit for $10,000 for false arrest against her father, Frank Clement.

Twenty-three years ago Clement lived with his wife and their infant daughter, Regina, the plaintiff, in Montreal. He was seized with the western fever, and one day left his family and went West. The deserted wife heard nothing from her husband until last spring, when he suddenly put in an appearance.

Mr. Clement was a young man when he disappeared from Montreal, but the man that presented himself at No. 151, North Paulina street was old and wrinkled and white-bearded. The wife at first refused to believe the man to be her husband, but was finally convinced. Miss Regina, the daughter, seemed to have a peculiar aversion to her father. She claimed he was rough in his ways and her abhorrence increased, as she claimed she noticed he was miserly and failed to give his wife any money. Her father had little to say about his strange actions and his life in the West, but enough was learned to convince his family that he had accumulated considerable property, while away. He was a strange man, his daughter said, and had a habit of burying his money. Several hundred dollars, she says, he buried in the backyard.

One day this money disappeared and the old man hinted that the daughter knew something about the lost funds. Besides having secret hiding-places in the earth for his wealth Mr. Clement carried $700 in a safety belt around his waist—or claimed he did. One day this disappeared also, according to the old man's story. He sought out a detective and asked his advice. The result was that a warrant for the arrest of the daughter and Adolph Seligman, a guest of Mrs. Clement, was sworn out before Justice Scully.

The parties were arrested and taken before Justice Scully, who, after a short hearing, dismissed the case. The result was the suit now begun. Mr. Seligman also commenced a similar suit in the Circuit Court.

A Lead Pencil Causes a Wrestler's Death.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Tuesday evening two friends, Daniel W. Gerry and Nelson B. Call, while conversing about the abilities of a certain catch-as-catch-can wrestler, engaged in a friendly tussle themselves. Gerry had a lead pencil in the upper left hand pocket of his vest, point up. Call got a good hold on his friend and threw him heavily to the floor. In some way the lead-pencil was driven four inches into Gerry's neck. He was taken to his home in Charlestown, and, despite the most skillful medical attention, he died.

Frightening the Fish.

QUEBEC, Nov. 28.—The Quebec Board of Trade are looking into the question of the destruction of our fishing grounds by Newfoundland fishermen. Evidence shows that the depredations committed by reckless fishermen will ruin our fisheries in a few years if the Government does not take necessary steps to stop it. A vast quantity of non-marketable fish is taken with purse nets and afterwards wantonly destroyed. The depredators also use a ringing mechanism which, when put in motion, frightens the fish and causes them to rush into the nets. This process prevents the multiplying and hatching of eggs by the different species of fishes which form our national wealth. The Federal Government will be asked to protect the fisheries.

Mr. S. Cunningham, of Waterford, has been appointed clerk of the township of Townsend, clerk of the village of Waterford, and secretary-treasurer of the Townsend Agricultural Society.

It appears that the electric light will not be introduced into Exeter until the company can dispose of the plants. Efforts are now being made to form a joint stock company for the purchase of the same.

Rev. G. W. Kerly, pastor of Dundas Street Methodist Church, Woodstock, and R. J. Elliott, of Hannah Street Church, Hamilton, will exchange pulpits if the Stationing Committee is agreeable.

About 30 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, of Stratford, surprised Rev. Dr. Kilroy the other evening with a presentation of a handsome $50 bronze clock, it being the 50th anniversary of his birthday.

John McMillan, of Petrolea, is at Kingston endeavoring to secure capital to re-establish a distillery for the manufacture of malt whisky on the old Morton premises in that city. If $100,000 is secured in Canada, $500,000 will be put into it by English capitalists.

At Exeter the other evening a deputation from the congregation of the Main Street Methodist Church presented Mr. and Mrs. Ross each with a handsome easy chair, in appreciation of Mr. Ross' efficient services as leader of the choir.

At 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon the small frame building used by the Dunn Varnish Works at Windsor took fire. The firemen responded quickly to the alarm and most of the varnish was saved. The loss is about $100. Uninsured.

An interesting marriage ceremony took place on Wednesday, at Guelph. The contracting parties were Miss Marie Josephine Hazleton, fourth daughter of the late Mr. James Hazleton, of Guelph, and Mr. Hugh F. McIntosh, of Toronto.

Mrs. L. Beatty, of Varna (nee Miss Mary Spackman, formerly of Exeter), died very suddenly the other day. She was about the house and on her husband returning from the stable he found her speechless; she died about 25 minutes afterwards. She was a daughter of the late R. Spackman, of the Sauble Line.

Mr. Robt. Murdock, of the Tiverton road, who left about three weeks ago for the Toronto Hospital to have his eye treated, returned home a few days ago. While in Toronto he had his injured left eye removed. This has had the effect of greatly benefiting the other eye and there is every reason to believe that it will become quite strong again.

Fire was discovered in the stable of Mr. Thos. Freele, on lot 11, in the 3rd con., N. E. R., Adelaide township, a few days since, and in a short time, on account of a strong west wind, the whole of the outbuildings were totally consumed. The loss is said to be quite heavy, although an insurance for about $500 in the London Mutual existed.

At Woodstock the Magistrate gave decision on the four charges preferred against Dr. Adams, of Embro, of selling liquor without a license. Two of the charges were dismissed. The other two were held to have been proven and a fine of $75 and costs in each case was imposed—netting a total of $150 in fines, and costs amounting to at least $15 more.

On Tuesday night, while a party was in progress at the house of a farmer named Lazarin, near Windsor, thieves stole the shawls, overcoats and robes that were locked up in a barn. Warrants are out for the arrest of the thieves, one of whom, J. Halstead, has been arrested. Several others of those who are wanted have crossed for Detroit. The stolen property has been recovered.

Alexander Gibloe, a Sandwich butcher, got inebriated and narrowly escaped death. His horses got unmanageable and he wripped them, colliding with the electric light pole at the corner of Sandwich and Ouellette streets. He was thrown under the horses' feet, and would have been horribly trampled to death but for W. T. Marsoff, who rescued him.

At the last meeting of the Windsor Council it was decided to pay the lessees of the cricket club $250 for their right, title and interest in the grounds. It is claimed that all the club made out of the ground last year was $137 and they only have a lease until June, 1892, and the committee think $250 is all it is worth. The club refuses to accept that amount.

The other day as the Misses Blake, of Strathburn, were driving to town their horse took fright at something in the road when about half a mile from the village, and turning short around threw the occupants out and upset the buggy. Miss Amy had her wrist and ankle sprained, while her sister received some painful bruises. Before the horse could be stopped it had made a wreck of the buggy.

The Chatham Chancery Sittings opened promptly at 10 Wednesday morning, Chancellor Boyd on the bench, and the first case on the docket, Fewster vs. Raleigh, came to an early close by being referred to V. Sankey, C.E., of Toronto, who will ascertain the facts, inspect property and report. The question of damages (if any) and costs was reserved until after the Engineer makes his report.

At a special meeting of the Chatham Presbytery held the other day, a call to Rev. R. M. Croll from Dresden was sustained and accepted, and his induction was appointed to take place on Dec. 2; another call to Rev. John A. Morrison from Dawn was sustained, and has since been accepted, and his induction is to take place at Dawn Center on Dec. 3, and a third call was sustained from Duart to Rev. W. Malcolm Kay, and his induction is to take place on Dec. 19.

The death took place at Brantford, Wednesday, of Mrs. F. W. Haycock, widow of the late F. W. Haycock, formerly collector of customs at Paris, and daughter of the late Judge Ransom, of Lockport, N. Y. The deceased, who was 59 years of age, had only been sick for a few days, undergoing an operation on Monday, from which she failed to rally. Three sons and three daughters are left, the former including Mr. A. Haycock, of Montreal, and two boys at home, and the latter Mrs. A. J. Wilkes and two daughters in Brantford.

Mr. James McPherson, a farmer living about two and a half miles out of Stratford on the Huron road, was in that city last Thursday night with a team of horses hitched to a lumber wagon, and called at a grocery about 8 o'clock to make some purchases. While he was in the store the horses disappeared. Chas. O'Brien and Dennis Quinlan were seen in the neighborhood of the store just before the horses disappeared and suspicion was cast on them, and, sure enough, the horses were found opposite Quinlan's farm. The horses were separated, one horse lying in the ditch with one of its legs fractured, and the other on the opposite side of the road. Both have been arrested, O'Brien having admitted the theft and implicated Quinlan.

On Saturday last Murdoch McDonald, an unmarried man in his 29th year, lot 21, con. 7, Huron, died suddenly at Hodgin's Hotel, in Ripley. The father of the deceased, believing that in the interest of justice an inquest should be held, made the necessary declaration, and on Monday an inquiry took place in the Township Hall before Corner Martin, of Kincardine. The following verdict was returned by the jury: "We, the undersigned jury, empaneled to ascertain the cause of death by Murdoch McDonald, find that the deceased came to his death from an over-indulgence in alcoholic beverages, and that we hold the electors and public at large responsible for having intoxicating liquors for sale throughout the community. As the present law now stands we, the said jury, insist that the Crooks Act be more vigorously enforced in future."

One of those happy social events in which all are interested occurred on Wednesday, Nov. 19, in Florence, at the residence of Mr. John Webster, reeve of Euphemia. The contracting parties were his daughter, Miss Maggie Webster, and Dr. Charteris, also of Florence. The officiating clergyman was Rev. A. Russell, of Bothwell. The bride was handsomely and becomingly attired in a dress of cream luster, and wore a tulle veil and orange blossoms, and carried in her hand a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Miss Unsworth, cousin of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and was dressed in cream cashmere, and carried a bouquet of the same flowers as the bride. The groom was supported by his brother, F. Charteris, of Chatham. The presents received by the bride on the occasion showed the esteem in which she was held by her many friends. There were about 60 guests present to partake of the hospitality offered them on that occasion. The Doctor and his bride left about 8 o'clock for Toronto, where they intend remaining for two weeks. The happy couple have the warmest wishes of their many friends for a bright and prosperous future.

On Sunday evening while Mr. Alfred Martin, son of Mr. Geo. Martin, 10th line of East Nissouri, and cousin to Martin Bros., St. Marys, was leaving the home of a friend where he had called during the evening, he was passing behind the buggy holding the lines. The horse started suddenly and pulled him up between the buggy box and hind left wheel, his arm passing between a gearing bar and the box. His coat sleeve cought on a bolt underneath the box and held his arm fast. The horse continued at full speed for two and a half miles, with Mr. Martin dragging behind. By some turn in the arm or extra jolt of the buggy, his arm was released and he fell to the ground. Mr. Martin through all this trying ordeal never once lost consciousness, and at once started for the nearest house, which proved to be Mrs. Aesthorp's. Word was at once forwarded to his father, who hurried to his son's assistance and conveyed him home. Upon examination it was found that his boots had been torn from his feet, as well as the greater portion of his trousers, and the flesh was all torn to the bone on the side of both feet and about half way to the knee; the ankle joints also having about a half inch worn off them. The side of one of his legs is terribly bruised all the way to the hip, by the constant rubbing and bumping of the wheel against it. It is almost miraculous that the young man escaped with his life. The attending physician, we believe, holds out hopes of his ultimate recovery.—[St. Marys Argus.

The public can save time and trouble in looking for drays by telephoning 721, T. J. Garner, York street, who has probably the finest double dray in the city, also three singles. Mr. Garner has been in the dray business for some years, his business has increased year by year, and he is now prepared to take contracts for moving furniture, pianos, baggage, etc., at low rates. In another column will be found his advertisement containing a few names of his many customers, to whom the public are referred. b

The Handsomest Lady in London remarked to a friend the other day that she knew Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs was a superior remedy, as it stopped her cough instantly when other cough remedies had no effect whatever. So to prove this and convince you of its merit any druggist will give you a sample bottle free. Large size 50 cents and $1. zxv

ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Canton Victoria, No. 5, Patriarchs Militant, of St. Thomas, on Saturday evening showed its appreciation for the services of Major Fred Doggett and Captain J. B. Squance by presenting them respectively with a siver water pitcher and a patriarch's jewel. The pitcher presented Major Doggett was a trophy won by the canton at the prize drill at Kingston in August.

The report of the Grand Secretary of Illinois, as read at the last session of the Grand Lodge in Springfield on Tuesday, showed a total of 720 subordinate lodges in the State with an aggregate membership of 36,261; 75 encampments with a net aggregate membership of 2,211 were represented at the 43rd annual session of the Grand Encampment of Missouri held in St. Louis last Tuesday.

A canton of Patriarchs Militant was mustered at Woodstock on Tuesday with a total membership of 46. Among the prominent officers who assisted in the inauguration of the canton were Brigadier-General P. J. Slatter, Colonel F. W. Unitt, Grand Secretary J. B. King, Toronto; Major Stenberg, London; Major Fred Doggett and Capt. Squance, of Canton Victoria, No. 5, about 25 strong, St. Thomas. The following officers were elected: Captain, A. Somerville; lieutenant, W. R. Watson; ensign, B. J. Ray; clerk, H. M. Bauslaugh; accountant, P. Johnston. The Captain made the following appointments: Standard bearer, Robt. Wilson; guard, Geo. McGregor; picket, E. F. Nickerson; sentinel, James Collins.

Dominion Lodge, No. 48, has made arrangements with the London Harmony Club to give their first entertainment in the Oddfellows' Hall, on Tuesday, Dec. 18.

ANCIENT ORDER UNITED WORKMEN.

The late J. B. Freeman, M. P. P. for North Norfolk, was a charter member of Lynn Lodge, No. 28, Toronto.

ROYAL TEMPLARS OF TEMPERANCE.

At the last meeting of the directors of the Royal Templars it was decided to establish a temperance publishing house, under the management of W. W. Buchanan, of Hamilton. The order has acquired Pronguey's block on James street north, and begun the work of refitting it for the purposes required. The order will still retain the offices at the Central Hall on Vine street.

ANCIENT ORDER FORESTERS.

Speaking on the question of removing the endowment fund of the order from this city to the Executive Council in Toronto, the Woodstock Sentinel-Review says: "The directors of the fund are mostly members of the order in London, and no reason, other than that of centralization at Toronto, has been adduced, so far as a perusal of the letters show, in favor of the change."

A new German court of Ancient Order of Foresters, known as Germania Court, No. 7,905, has been organized in Detroit.

KNIGHTS OF SHERWOOD FOREST.

Frontier Conclave, No. 66, Knights of Sherwood Forest, of Detroit, gave their second annual ball Wednesday evening at the Scott Guard Armory under very pleasant auspices. There was nothing except of a purely social order and a large number of knights and their ladies, together with invited guests, were present. The programmes for the ball were very handsome souvenirs.

MASONIC.

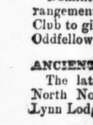

At the last meeting of Palestine Chapter, No. 54, G. R. C., St. Thomas, the following officers were elected: N. W. Ford, past Z.; J. Willis, Z.; J. R. Martin, H.; John A. Squance, J.; W. E. Idsardi, scribe E.; Hugh McIntyre, scribe N.; R. A. McKay, treas.; Henry Bradshaw, P. S.; Wm. Scott, janitor.

There were three Provincial Grand Lodges in Upper Canada, one in 1792, 1822, 1845, and the Grand Convention at Kingston in 1817-21.

Hamilton Masons are already discussing arrangements for the annual Masonic ball, which will be held in the Drill Hall about the end of January. It is the intention this year to make it better than ever.

E. S. Whipple, the well-known Hamilton real estate agent, died recently at Holyoke, Mass., after an illness of ten days. Deceased came to Hamilton in 1849, and held various positions before settling down in the real estate business. He was treasurer of Barton Lodge, A. F. and A. M. for 21 years, and held a similar position in St. John's Chapter, R. A. M., for sixteen years. The deceased was 74 years of age. The funeral took place at Hamilton and was attended with Masonic honors.

ORANGE ORDER.

The Orange Grand Lodge Executive met in session at Hamilton yesterday. Those present were: Grand Master N. Clarke Wallace, Past Grand Master W. W. Fitzgerald, Q. C., of this city, and Ald. Nicholson, of Hamilton, grand master, Ontario West. Mayor Clarke, of Toronto, deputy grand master, was unable to be present, and Grand Secretary Birmingham could not attend owing to other duties. The chief subject for consideration was whether ladies should have the power to form lodges in affiliation with the order. The Executive decided that ladies can form lodges in connection with the order, and hereafter the Ladies' Benevolent Lodges will have an official standing with those of the sterner sex. In the evening the local brethren tendered a banquet to Grand Master N. Clarke Wallace. About 125 members sat down, with Richard Ailes, district master, in the chair. The banquet was followed by the usual toasts and speeches from the visiting notables and city brethren.

FORCE OF PUBLIC OPINION.

The general sentiment of the Canadian and United States press is that Parnell is selfish and callous in desiring to hold on to the leadership of the Irish members in Parliament despite his lapse from virtue and the protests of many of those who have admired his course as a politician. As an evidence of the outspoken sentiments of the United States newspapers, we quote the following from the Chicago Tribune:

Throughout this whole business Mr. Parnell has shown that he is not a man of fine sensibilities or of lofty patriotism. His callousness is almost shocking. His selfishness has dimmed the recollection of his services. To retain the nominal and temporary Irish leadership in the face of Mr. Gladstone and of all that is best and purest in English Liberalism will be to wreck the hopes of Ireland. The Liberals cannot co-operate with the Irish party so long as Mr. Parnell leads it. That would be treason to Mr. Gladstone, a true and noble leader whose private life is as stainless as his public career and whose unselfishness is as marked as his lofty patriotism and love of justice. And what can the Irish party do without the co-operation of the English Liberals? What could they have done without them during the last five years? Mr. Gladstone's advocacy of home rule made that issue possible. He took large risks and made great sacrifices when he adopted it as the foremost question of British politics. When just on the eve of triumph, as it seems, Irishmen will not be so ungrateful, so unwise, so lacking in common sense as to abandon this grand old man for the sake of one who has periled their cause for his own personal gratification. It would be treason in Mr. Parnell himself to ask the Irish nation to make the sacrifice. It would be national lunacy for the Irish people to cling to his dishonored leadership. It is true that the Irish people owe Mr. Parnell much. But they have been generous with him. They have given him loyal support. They have contributed to his greatness, such as it was, by their devotion. They gave $200,000 or more to his private purse. They have not paid him all perhaps. But they have paid him well. He should not be ungrateful. He should not allow their cause to suffer. The sands of Mr. Gladstone's life are rapidly running out. England will not soon have another Gladstone. Ireland's opportunity is near at hand. That opportunity ought not to be destroyed by Mr. Parnell's infatuation or by his treason and the blind allegiance of Irish parliamentarians to his leadership.

The ground taken by a comparatively few that are favorable to Parnell's brazening his offense out is not tenable. It is that inasmuch as several members of the House of Lords have figured in divorce cases, and have been adjudged guilty as co-respondents in unsavory suits, therefore there is no incongruity in Parnell remaining at the head of the Irish delegation in the House of Commons. The parallel cannot be maintained. The House of Lords, unfortunately, is not amenable to public opinion. It is a scandal, it is a disgrace, that the most open and shameless profligacy has no effect on the standing of a member of the House of Lords. He is born a lord, and he remains a lord, no matter how tough he may become. It is time that a change were effected, but until such time as it is brought about, and the House of Lords is either abolished as a useless and expensive appendage to popular government, or brought under the control of the electorate, it is well to keep the popular Chamber already answerable to public opinion as pure as possible.

How could reformers of abuses constantly agitate for the reformation of the House of Lords, so as to be able to drum the immoral men out of it, if they condoned the gross offenses of members of the popular Chamber? The stand which Gladstone has taken is impregnable, whatever its present effect may be.

AN ARGUMENT FOR HORNED CATTLE.

The Cornwall Freeholder recalls a remark made two or three years ago by Hon. Mr. Dryden, which shows the prescience of that gentleman as a practical farmer.

Mr. Dryden was addressing a meeting of farmers and he was urging them to give more attention to the breeding of cattle and less to the breeding of horses; or, rather, he was urging them to bestow greater care upon cattle than horses. And he did so upon this ground, that steam and electricity promise to take the place of horses to a considerable extent in the near future as motor powers, whereas no substitute is likely to be found for the beef, milk, butter and cheese products of horned cattle. There were not many people three years ago who foresaw what has already come to pass by the substitution of steam and electricity for horse power on steel railways, and although the progress is not yet very great it has been sufficient to produce a marked effect on the price of horses in many districts of the United States.

Ten years hence we need not be surprised to find the electric motor used on the tramways in all the principal towns and cities of this country and the United States, and this will mean the displacement of horses by the hundred thousand. To what further extent the revolution may be carried we cannot conjecture, but we can at least feel assured that the demand for beef, milk, butter and cheese is not going to undergo diminution by reason of any use to which steam or electricity may be applied.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

—Gladstone's articles on "The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture" will soon be translated into Welsh.

—The Canadian frog promises to become a great institution. A Campbellford man in three weeks caught frogs enough to get 2,023 pounds of hind-legs, which he sold for $500. This seems to be a profitable industry, the market for which, like that of many others, has to be found in States.

—British trade with Canada fell off considerably during the first ten months of the year. According to the Board of Trade returns, in the exports from the United Kingdom to the Dominion, there was a falling off last month of £69,647, equal to 13.94 per cent., the total value being £429,806, contrasted with £499,453 in October, 1889. For the ten months to date the decrease was £595,847, or 12.14 per cent., the aggregate this year being £4,309,877, and last year £4,905,724. Turning to the other side of the account, namely, to the imports from Canada to the United Kingdom, there was a reduction for the month of £37,000 or 2.99 per cent., the total being £1,199,738 compared with £1,236,738, while for the ten months the falling-off amounted to £391,018, equal to 5.37 per cent., the total to the end of last month being £7,663,153 compared with £7,272,135 to the end of October last year.

—Lord Aberdeen has been interviewed by a representative of the London Canadian Gazette on his return to Scotland. The noble Earl says he had a very enjoyable visit. He says:

The Canadian atmosphere is so rarefied that it often has as happy an effect upon human kind as upon nature. The cloud effects and sky scenery, for instance, have a charm quite their own.

He found the Crofter settlement at Kilarney, Man., getting along, despite some difficulties. As to the liquor question, he said he was delighted to note the general sobriety of the people. To further promote temperance, he suggests that Canadians should try the effect of high license fees. The permit system in the Northwest is abused, and there are many evasions of the law. Lord Aberdeen praised the loyalty of the people, and said it was exemplified on all hands. He made no exception of any class in the community. As to Imperial Federation, opinion in Canada differed on its feasibility. Though the French-Canadians were loyal to British institutions, there is little disposition on their part to promote Imperial Federation. Whatever race difficulties there now are Lord Aberdeen believes will be overcome by the growing sense of Canadian nationality.

MAGAZINE NOTICES.

Our Little Men and Women (Boston: D. Lothrop Company) is a magazine intended for youngest readers at home and in school. Each number is fresh and interesting, and its prospectus for 1891 contains attractive hints of serials and short stories, little articles in history, natural history and botany, verses and jingles—all illustrated.

The Pansy (Boston: D. Lothrop Company) contains Pansy's "Golden Text Stories," under the general title "The Exact Truth." This deservedly well known writer has also prepared a new serial for her magazine called "Twenty Minutes Late." The other departments, the publishers say, will be much better that ever before.

Babyland (Boston: D. Lothrop Company) is the delight of the nursery. It will contain a dozen stories next year of the doings of Ditto and Dot, a very small boy and girl, with illustrations by the author. There will be a great many other stories of other little children and their pets, together with nursery rhymes and beautiful pictures.

Harper's Magazine (New York: Harper & Bros.) makes a strong bid for popular favor in its Christmas number. The bubble-blowing cherubs on its title page have donned their winter garments, and are scattering gifts from full baskets. Fruits, fish and fowl adorn the lower part of the page; but in one corner is an object that awakens feelings of pity and sorrow rather than of festivity—the body of a dead stag, its beautiful head and throat outstretched. The "Editor's Easy Chair" is as appropriate to Christmas as allusions to plum pudding, snap dragon, Maid Marian and the sweet rites of the mistletoe can make it, and the "Study" so far forgets itself as to make a reference to Old Scrooge, but it hastens to explain that it was dreaming when it did so. There are half a dozen short stories—all good—and but one poem, and it only passable. The only articles approaching solidity are, "The Winter of Our Content," "A Pre-Raphaelite Mansion," and "Japanese Women." "As You Like It" is illustrated by E. A. Abbey, and commented upon by Andrew Lang. Altogether it is a superb Christmas number.

The Thanksgiving number of Harper's Bazar abounds with fashion talk and fashion pictures. There are two Thanksgiving stories, one in prose, the other in verse, and articles on "Whist," "Women and Men," "Rings, Antique and Æsthetic," and "A Word to a Wife."

New England Magazine (Boston: 86 Federal street). The article of most interest to Canadian readers in the November number is "Fifty Years of a Canadian University," by J. J. Bell, M.A., with illustration of Queen's University and portraits of Chancellor Fleming, Principal Grant and others of the faculty. Edward Everett Hale, in "The Professor of America," offers a number of arguments in support of his claim that the United States of America is a nation different from any other nation in the world. It frequently happens that the same word means one thing in the States and another in England, because the noble language which is our own is a language formed by Englishmen, who had been trained under feudal institutions. "For instance, the central word of all, 'The People,' meant to the poet Cowley, the vulgar and mean in contrast with the good and great. With Shakespeare it meant the greater body of citizens, as contrasted with the smaller body of their rulers. With us people is not a class; it is the whole, and this whole is sovereign. And with us any language which speaks contemptuously of this people is treason against the sovereign." Mr. Hale speaks of the absurdity of calling Mr. Harrison, the "ruler of the nation," when he is the chief magistrate of the nation, which is a very different thing. President Garfield's saying that all the people are wiser than any one of the people is greater than all Carlyle's trenchant satires upon democracy.

Lippincott's Magazine (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia) shows no recognition in its December number of the Christmas season, but it is perhaps the more welcome on that account to those who dread a miniature deluge of holiday literature. It is filled chiefly with a military novelette, "An Army Portia," by Captain Charles King, U. S. A.—a story told with directness and simplicity. In a poem by Walt Whitman, "To the Sunset Breeze," it is called "Universal concrete's distillation, all astronomy's last refinement." A sketch very attractive at this season is that of "The Bermuda Islands." Bermuda is most generally known through Mark Twain's "Rambling Notes of an Idle Excursion," in which the humorist describes himself as greatly disappointed by the huge india rubber tree not far from the steam boat landing, because there were no rubbers nor suspenders growing upon it. He comes to the conclusion that it was out of season. Relative to the dazzling whiteness of the white coral roads, it is said that an old sea captain kept wandering unrestfully from side to side upon it till finally he exclaimed, "Well, I chew, you know, and the road's so plaguey clean."

The Woodstock College Monthly (Woodstock, Ont.), under the management of W. H. Huston, M.A., aims to be a first-class publication. Its first object is to serve the students past and present by affording an opportunity for the expression of their thought, and for the dissemination of information concerning their life and doings. But friends of the college everywhere will be interested in reading articles of as high a grade as those contributed to this unpretending and carefully-edited periodical.

In The Atlantic (Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co.) "The House of Martha," by Frank R. Stockton, goes on its entertaining way. The numerous scattered glimpses of his wife, which Mr. Samuel Pepys gave us in his "Diary," are collected under the title of "The Wife of Mr. Secretary Pepys," and many amusing inferences are drawn therefrom. They were evidently a pair of grown-up children. Loving each other very honestly, they fell out and made up over baubles and real troubles alike. He is vexed with her for leaving her clothes lying "carelessly laid up"; for using the word "devil" when she is displeased; for her letters being "so false spelt that I was ashamed of them," and for buying "a most fine cloth of 26s a yard and a rich lace for her petticoat." But interspersed with recriminations are such passages as, "Up by and by my wife comes, and good friends again, and to walk in the garden, and so anon to supper." The Atlantic's poetry is nearly always of the highest class, as for instance that on "Pan the Fallen," by William Wilfred Campbell, our Canadian post, from which we extract two verses:

"He saw the mob's derision
And took it kindly, too;
And when an epithet was flung,
A coarser back he threw;
But under all the masking
Of a brute, unseemly part,
I looked and saw a wounded soul,
And a godlike breaking heart.

And back of the clfin music
The burlesque, clownish play,
I knew a wail that the weird pipes made,
A look that was far away,—
A gaze into some far heaven
Whence a soul had fallen down:
But the mob only saw the grotesque beast,
And the antics of the clown.

TORONTO LETTER.

Off to Berlin—Fatally Mangled—Charged with Fraud—Mr. Stanley's Lecture.

TORONTO, Friday, Nov. 28.

Dr. Thorburn, who is off to Berlin to study the Koch remedy for tuberculosis, is being sent by the University of Toronto Medical Society. Part of his instructions are to render all assistance in his power to Prof. Ramsay Wright.

John Gimlet, the man whose legs were cut off by a train yesterday morning died at the hospital yesterday afternoon. He comes from Palmerston, where he leaves a widow and two children.

Tobias Levy, aged 14 years, in attempting to get off a street car while in motion, fell under the wheels, and one leg was so badly crushed that on his removal to the hospital it had to be amputated.

Dr. James D. Thorburn goes to Germany to spend the next two months studying Dr. Koch's consumptive remedy.

The Rev. C. O. Johnson has declined the call to Trinity Methodist Church.

Moses Rosenburgh appeared at the Toronto Police Court on a charge of defrauding his creditors out of about $25,000 by conveying all his lands to other parties. He was a contractor, and built a large number of houses in the city, and last week called a meeting for the benefit of his creditors. He was remanded for a week and bailed.

In the will of the late Miss Mary Caroline Jarvis the bequests include a large quantity of china, silver plate, pictures, etc. Edward Henry Bernard, nephew, of the India service, receives $500; Helen Grace Gillespie, a diamond cluster ring and $2,000 in cash "in memoriam of the mother of deceased," to be spent as she may deem best for the comfort and care of the Helpless, Aged and Old Folks' Home. The executors are instructed to pay the legacies and divide the balance equally among her two nieces, Isabel Grace Jarvis and Emily Maud Jarvis, after the death of their mother or at their marriages, whichever event shall first happen. The total value of the estate is $17,819.

Mr. Henry M. Stanley lectured here last night to an immense audience, only a few seats being vacant in the large and newly reconstructed Shaftesbury Hall. Mr. Stanley was listened to throughout with almost breathless attention, and was frequently applauded. At the At the close of the lecture Mr. and Mrs. Stanley were escorted to the large parlors of the hall, where they were received by the Ontario Society of Artists, Mrs. Stanley being presented with an address and a moroon morocco-covered portfolio album which contained photographs from some of the best works of the following artists: G. A. Reid and Mrs. Reid, William Revell, Robt. F. Gagen, F. M. Bell-Smith, F. McGillivray Knowles, Fred Challener, Carl Ahrens and J. W. L. Forester.

A HEALTHY CITY.

Such London Has Proved During the Year.

Annual Report of the Medical Health Officer—The Death Rate the Lowest Yet—Important Suggestions.

The Board of Health met yesterday afternoon with the following present: Aldermen Taylor (chairman), Boyd, Wallace, Anderson, Dr. Niven, Medical Health Officer Dr. Hutchinson, Inspector Bell and Secretary Graydon. Mr. William Brown's communication set forth his grievances. He could not rent his house at 423 Ontario street on account of the stench arising from the buildings on John Hayman's adjoining property. The M. H. O. and the Inspector said they had examined the premises and found them as Mr. Brown represented. The Board ordered an examination, and if a nuisance was proved, the necessary steps to be taken to abate the nuisance. It was also decided to empower the Inspector to take the requisite legal steps to collect accounts due Coursey for cleaning places as ordered by the authorities. The annual report of the Medical Health Officer was read, as follows:

In laying before you this my fifth annual report upon the sanitary condition of the city for the year ending Oct. 31, I have again much pleasure in stating that the health of the city has been exceptionally good, the death rate being the lowest yet reached, viz., 13 per 1,000 of the population. The total number of deaths for the year, including those from the new ward, was 373; of these consumption carried off the large number of 32, and cancer 12. Seventy-one cases of scarlet fever were reported, with 3 fatal cases. Of diphtheria there were 19 cases reported, with 3 deaths, and typhoid fever is credited with 5 deaths.

The same number of violent deaths took place as last year, viz., 9, as follows: One by suicide, 1 by murder, 1 by hanging, 1 by the street railway, 2 by railroad accidents, and 3 by various other accidents.

An epidemic of influenza or la grippe, which appeared to have been universal, visited the city during the months of January and February, and, although only immediately fatal in a small number of cases, was the predisposing cause of many deaths, particularly among the aged. The exceedingly small number of deaths from typhoid fever and diphtheria, diseases which have their origin in impure water and filth, is evidence of the good sanitary condition of the city. The people are becoming convinced of the fact that the cleaner their yards and premises are kept, and the more the substitution of pure city water for the foul, contaminated wells—just so much less will they have of sickness, expense and mortality. Notwithstanding this, there are many who will allow themselves to be summoned before the Police Magistrate rather than comply with the requirements of the Public Health Act to prevent their premises being a danger to themselves and their neighbors.

The Carling Creek sewage problem is still in statu qua. Year after year the question of constructing a trunk sewer is brought up, but the enormous cost of transforming the creek into a sewer of sufficient capacity, together with the uncertainty of how the suit, now pending against the city for discharging its sewage into the river, will end, have prevented any action being taken by the Council. The least costly and probably the best way is that suggested by Dr. Bryce, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, and concurred in by the City Engineer.

Namely, to lay a 12 or 14 inch sewer pipe along the bed of the creek for sewage only—leaving out storm water—and let the creek take care of itself. In this way no sewage would enter the creek, which would then be kept free from pollution, and restored to what it once was, a very pretty stream of clear water. The river has been blamed by some for being the cause of much sickness in its neighborhood, which is not borne out by facts. During the four years from 1886 to the present time the total number of cases of infectious diseases in the city was 219, distributed among the different wards as follows: The first ward had in the four years 16 cases; the second 29; the third 59; the fourth 61, and the fifth 54. Thirteen of the 29 cases in the second ward occurred in St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, introduced by a child recovering from diphtheria, brought there from Hochelaga; leaving sixteen cases only for that ward. It will thus be seen that the first and second wards, lying along the muon-abused river, had only 32 cases of infectious diseases, while the other three wards not near the river had 187.

In some of the larger retail stores of the city, where numbers of young females are employed, some of whom come long distances and remain the whole day, separate conveniences are not provided, and several cases of serious illness have resulted in consequence.

Efforts have been made to induce the proprietors to make the necessary additions, but so far with little success. Although there is no way of compelling the proprietors to do what they should in the matter, it is hoped that public opinion and their own sense of what is right will force them to remedy the evil.

I desire especially to call the attention of the Board to the unsanitary condition of the new sixth ward, which is very much in need of more sewers and better drainage. A large stagnant pond on the flats, west of Victoria bridge, is not only a nuisance but dangerous to the people of the ward. Quantities of sewage from Craig street and the Wortley road empty into this pond, and is also deposited along the base and sides of the hill for want of sewers, especially on Craig street. The owners of the land refuse to make the drain, but the drain and sewer on Craig street should both be constructed before the warm weather of spring and remove this element of danger from the people of the ward.

The City Council has done excellent sanitary work, for which they deserve the gratitude of the public. By block-paving so many of our streets this year, which not only vastly improves the streets, but by removing so much filth and substituting a pavement which can always be kept clean, will be an important factor in maintaining the public health. Another good work would be the block-paving the public lanes which are generally the most unclean parts of the city. The benefits derived from this, in a sanitary point of view, would far outweigh the cost. These lanes could then be kept clean, which, in their present condition, is almost an impossibility.

A report upon the inspection of dairies, cowbyres and quality of milk sold in the city during the year will be made in a short time.

On motion of Col. Moffat the report was adopted.

CRIMINALLY DEPRAVED.

Mr. Tarte's Opinion of the Public Work Department.

QUEBEC, Nov. 27.—Le Canadien says: "Sir Hector Langevin stated a few days ago that he had no knowledge of the frauds committed by McGreevy et al. This is the only defense remaining to him, and, without distinction of party, it is to be hoped that it will be supported with indestructible proof. Personally, the Minister may escape from the disaster, but his department is criminally depraved; and the irreparable wrong committed by the man to whom in so many arduous struggles we have given our aid, has been to let himself be circumvented to the length of being dominated, involuntarily, no doubt, by the parvenu whose career has at last been cut short by a just Providence.

Addressing Sir Hector Langevin, Le Canadien remarks: "Thomas McGreevy has coined money with your authority, with your name, Mr. Minister. That authority, that name, was worth gold to him like his mandate as a member."

But read: "I have had a long interview with Perley on the harbor works and graving docks at British Columbia. Fleming was to have signed his report to-day on the harbor works. It will be shown to me as soon as signed. I will see it to-morrow and Sir Hector and myself will decide what is to be done for the future. He will adopt my views. I will see you and Murphy about it before doing anything. It is a big thing for the future." This was written on paper marked with the stamp of the Public Works Department of Canada, and signed "Thomas McGreevy."

Sir Hector's organ, Le Courrier, says that the accusations made by Tarte will be refuted immediately after the Canadien has finished.

L'Electeur says that enough has been published to require an immediate answer.

'VARSITY DEFEATS DETROIT.

DETROIT, Nov. 27.—The match between 'Varsity and Detroit to-day was played on the Olympic Athletic Club grounds. Unfortunately for the 700 or 800 spectators, the weather was miserable. The ground was covered with snow to the depth of about two inches. The game began at 2:44, and at 4:31 the referee called time, with the Toronto men in the lead by 3 goals to 1. Loud were the cheers of the Toronto supporters. The game was a very fast, hard one notwithstanding the wet and heavy ground. One feature was the great good feeling existing among the players. The Detroit team is made up altogether of players from the old country and of Canadian players, who have located in the States. They propose to take a trip through Canada about the 24th of May next, and it is safe to say that they will make it exceedingly interesting for any of the teams with which they come in contact. The only drawback to the game to-day was the wretched state of the grounds, which make otherwise an excellent football field, being very level and smooth.

CANADIANS BEATEN AT FALL RIVER.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 27.—The Canadian Association football team which left Toronto Tuesday played their first match this afternoon with the Fall River Rovers. All the attendant circumstances were favorable to a splendid exhibition of kicking, and nearly 4,000 people were present to witness the football event of the season. At 2:30, the time for which the game was called, the men lined up, and when the whistle blew the score was 3 to 1 in favor of the Rovers. The Rovers, as a team, played a fast and combined game. The Canadians individually played their usual game, but as for combination they were nowhere.

PRINCETON FAILS TO SCORE—A BAD ACCIDENT.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 27. — Yale to-day downed Princeton in the great football game at Eastern Park. Princeton's defeat was complete, the score being: Princeton, 0; Yale, 32. The game was witnessed by at least 30,000 spectators. Long before 2 o'clock every seat on the grand stand and in the boxes was filled. About 12:25 o'clock the crowds seated on the free stands on the eastern side made frantic endeavors to get a place of vantage. A vast throng standing in front thought they could see a way to get seats in the rush. They crowded on to the seats, which were ordinary portable baseball seats made of cast iron supports with planks across. The minute the rush began an ominous crack was heard. It was followed by a crash and then a roar, which was soon drowned by the voices of men and women crying out in distress. The north end of the eastern bleachers had fallen, carrying down everyone upon it. It took half an hour to extricate those pinned in the debris. The part of the stand that fell was occupied by 3,000 people. Over 500 persons were seriously hurt and half a dozen were injured internally, but none were killed. Among the more seriously hurt were John Weed, of Yale; John Carruthers, of Wesleyan; Mr. Curley, of Princeton 94; Mr. Leonard, of New York; Percy Barney, of the Peekskill Academy, and Geo. Johnston, of the Hotel Normandie, New York. This terrible accident cast a gloom over the entire crowd, and the cheers and horns were hushed. It was half an hour before the crowd recovered their wonted gaiety. As the hour of opening for the contest approached the shock of the accident was forgotten. Never before had such a crowd assembled in America to witness a football match, or in fact to witness any kind of a game.

KICKS.

The public can do something better than to condemn football as brutal while it goes to see nothing else, to applaud the winners, no matter how the victory is secured, and to condemn all discussions of questions of honor and fair play as "squabbles among the boys." The public see a great deal better and honester game of football than it deserves. The standard of honor among football players is far from being as high as it ought to be, but it is higher than it is in business, and positively sublime as compared with the morals of politics. We shall not deserve to see any improvement until we preach to the "boys" some higher word of advice and encouragement than our favorite maxim and compendium of all that is mean and vulgar—that "nothing succeeds like success."

THE TURF.

Pierre Lorillard will have the largest stable in training in the east next year.

The stallion Hyder Ali has been sold to Montana breeders for the reported price of $6,000.

August Belmont, jun., will manage the stable of thoroughbreds owned by his father next season.

A summer trotting meeting for Independence, Ia., has been announced for next year, with $75,000 added money.

Green B. Morris has signed G. Covington to ride at 108 pounds from April 1 to Nov. 30, 1891, for $4,500, and $25 for winning and $10 for losing mounts.

Oscar Le Seur, a prominent horseman of Plymouth, Mich., who has been confined in the Pontiac Asylum for the past two years, died there on Sunday.

According to the Sporting Times, Senor Bocan, of Buenos Ayres, the owner of Ormonde, will never part with the renowned son of Ben d'Or and Lily Agnes. This gentlemen is quoted as saying that there is not money enough in the land to take the horse away from his South American home. This effectually puts a quietus on the many rumors that Ormonde was to return to England.

THE TRIGGER.

Miss Ollie Owen, daughter of a farmer living north of Bellbrook, Ohio, is but 13 years old, yet she is one of the best field shots in the Miami Valley. In the field she wears a natty suit of blue, shoots a twelve-gauge gun, loads her own gun, and has a brace of pointers that are perfectly trained. She killed ten strait quail the other day.

THE WHEEL.

BILLIARDS.

The first series of 500 points in the 1,500 point, 14-inch balk line, game of billiards, for a purse of $500, between Frank Magillo, the southern champion, and Eugene Carter, of Chicago, was played at Denver, Col., Wednesday night, and resulted in Magillio winning by 128 points, with an average of slightly over 7.

CRICKET.

Several of the dates of the leading cricket matches in England for 1891 are already announced. Oxford vs. Cambridge will take place at Lord's on Monday, June 29, and following day, and then after the Gentlemen vs. Players matches at the Oval on July 2 and at Lord's on July 6, Eton vs. Harrow will follow at the last-named venue. The match is still confined to a couple of days—Friday and Saturday, July 10 and 11.

THE RING.

At South Omaha, Neb., Tuesday night Mike Mooney and Harry Allen, both of St. Louis, fought 45 tame rounds. Allen then refused to continue, claiming his left arm was broken. The fight was then given to Mooney.

FRIGHTFUL TRAGEDY.

Archibald McIntyre, of London West, is Choked to Death.

A frightful tragedy was witnessed last evening by the family of Mr. Archibald McIntyre, in their residence, Oak street, London West, when they were compelled to watch the head of the family breathe his last in the greatest of agony, while they were totally unable to render any assistance whatever. The little circle was seated round the table partaking of the evening meal about 7 o'clock, when they were horrified at seeing Mr. McIntyre and turn black in the face. The unfortunate man held out his hands beseechingly to the other members of the family with a look that they will never forget. They quickly guessed that he was choking and immediately resorted to several of those simple remedies which are known to every household. One member of the family noticing that Mr. McIntyre was made haste in search of medical assistance. Dr. Jones was soon found and he lost no time in making his way to the place, but when he arrived the victim was dead. His struggles and convulsions had become feebler and feebler after the doctor was sent for, and from the time he had first been distressed, he was dead. Dr. Jones made an examination of the body, which explained the cause of his death—a large piece of beef had become firmly lodged in the larynx.

FALL BACK IN HIS CHAIR

Deceased was a silver-plater and was about 52 years of age. He leaves a wife and grown-up family. It is uncertain as yet whether an inquest will be held or not.

Qualifications Before Marriage.

Angelina—The man I marry must be handsome, brave and clever.

Tompkins—Dear me, how fortunate we have met!

It would be exceedingly fortunate for some men, we think, if they carried a time before annexing themselves to some of Eve's fair daughters. Some women demand certain qualifications in them; why should not men have the same privilege?

It has been affirmed that one young man a short time ago said that the girl he would marry must be loving, generous, industrious and economical, and able to use Diamond Dyes.

The young man who thus spoke was in a good position and able to marry, but did not require for a wife any of the handsome butterflies who were lazy, listless and useless. He wanted a happy, comfortable home without useless extravagance and felt sure that a girl who could use Diamond Dyes would fill the bill in every particular.

This young man's mother had used Diamond Dyes in her happy home, and he was fully aware of the great benefits they had conferred. Young ladies, it will undoubtedly be an advantage to you to learn the use of Diamond Dyes and Diamond Paints, and if some young man makes this point a "sine qua non," you will be ready for him.

THE SCHOOLBOY DAYS.

Some Reminiscences of the Old Central School.

The Good Old Days When Leading Citizens Were Young and Lively.

The Names of Many of the Pupils and What Some of Them Say—Changes Wrought by the Hand of Time.

Some of the pupils of the old Central School have been indulging in reminiscences connected with their respective terms as pupils in the institution, a place where many citizens received their earlier education. The building which has just been torn down was opened in 1850 for school purposes, but few are at present living who were students at the inception. The first head master was Mr. Nicholas Wilson, now of the Collegiate Institute, who, in conversation with an ADVERTISER reporter, related some interesting facts associated with what is now a heap of ruins.

"I remember the old school well," said he. The corner stone was laid in 1849, in the month of June, I think, with imposing ceremonies. The school children of the town—for London had not attained the dignity of a city then—marched in procession to the spot, where the stone was well and truly laid, accompanied with speech-making by the prominent men of the district, and other demonstrations. At that time there were four public schools in London—St. George's, St. Andrew's, St. Patrick's and St. David's. These schools were closed at the end of 1849, the pupils moving into the new building on Jan. 2, of the following year. There were six rooms in the old school, three above and three below. I was appointed headmaster, with Robert Wilson as first assistant and Peter Murtagh as second, two lady teachers, Miss Haight and Miss Wharin, coming subsequently from Toronto; they are all dead but myself now. Mr. Hamilton Hunter succeeded me in 1851, retiring to edit the Free Press in '55, Mr. Boyle, the present inspector, being then appointed. Yes, I remember some of the pupils at the old school. They had few holidays then—only short periods at Christmas and Easter. Many of them are now dead, some are prominent citizens, and others have left the old town to seek their fortunes elsewhere. Mr. John Cameron, now the proprietor of the ADVERTISER, and his brothers James and William, who are dead, were former students. Then there are Messrs. Ed Meredith, Frank Love and James Magee, now well-known members of the legal fraternity. Wm. Carey and Wm. Southam, of the Hamilton Spectator, were also old-time pupils. Mr. C. H. Mackintosh, M.P., received his early education at the old Central. Many's the time I've had to whip Charley," added Mr. Wilson, with a smile. "There are a good many more whom I have almost forgotten. Among them might be mentioned Mr. John Tierney, one of the first editors of the British Columbia Colonist; Mr. Manville, who, I believe, is now a high official on the Santa Fe Railroad; Mr. Wm. Buckle, the present city assessor; Mr. Fred Ashton, of the postoffice, and others whose names have escaped my memory."

CITY CLERK ABBOTT.

"I can clearly remember the circumstances connected with the founding of the Central school," said City Clerk Abbott. "I was tax collector then, and it occurred to me that the city might better have the lot called Union square than let it fritter away in the Government's hands. I went into Dan Smith's hat store on Dundas street, got some paper and commenced on one side of the street, canvassing to the court house, and then back on the other. William Begg and myself went down to the Grammar School, where John Wilson was teaching, and got him to promise to interest himself, for he was the member of Parliament. Well, sir, we had the land within a month. At the laying of the foundation stone in June, 1849, there was a grand parade of school children, with music, and speech-making by the members of the School Board, John Wilson (afterwards judge), Mayor Dixon and others. The stone was laid with Masonic honors by the master of St. John's Lodge, 209, John McDowell, the fraternity being present in large numbers, and marching in procession. There was an old log school at that time on the site where Pocock's store now stands, and the old Grammar School was situated near the Court House. I have the old minute book in my office now which contains a record of the proceedings of the Board of Education."

COL. MOFFATT.

"Yes," said Col. Moffatt, a Mason of long standing, "I was present at the laying of the Central School corner-stone, and was a member of the Board shortly after. It was a great time in educational matters, the controversy over free schools being at its highest. The free system, I think, had just been introduced. On the day the stone was laid the town was en fete, crowds being present from a distance. If I mistake not, it was the first stone ever laid in London with Masonic honors, and you may depend the fraternity were out in strong force. I well remember marching in the parade, though the greater number who took part are now dead. The only Masonic lodge in London at that time was St. John's, 209, of which the two present lodges—St. Johns 209a, and St. John, 20—claim to be the descendants."

MR. A. SCREATON.

"I can lay claim to having been a student at the old Central," said Mr. A. Screaton. "We had the usual school-boy frolics, including many a free fight with the students of the barrack's school, situated then near the site of Victoria Park, and conducted by a clergyman named Hughes. In those days the pupils had to copy a verse every month to be handed to the Board of Education for the purpose of showing the trustees how they were progressing in writing. Associated with this I have an interesting memento in my possession which money could not buy. It is a small book containing a number of these slips of paper, with the handwriting and signatures of many of my contemporary school chums, the greater part of whom are dead."

The book consists of about 40 bound foolscap slips, on each of which is inscribed, in characteristic schoolboy handwriting, bearing traces of the greatest care, as if expectant of the close scrutiny of the trustees, the following:

LONDON, April 20, 1854.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene,
The dark unfathom'd caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

MR. FRANCIS LOVE.

Mr. Frank Love had a few recollections of the old school as it was when he attended it. "Jim Magee, Jack Dixon and Jim Craig were the big boys in my class then," said Mr. Love, "and we 'greenhorns' were admonished to look upon them as models of perfection. I was sent there from what was called the barracks school in charge of an English Church minister named Hughes, the building being near what is now Victoria Park, which at that time, with adjacent property, was studded with tree stumps in place of the pretty spot it has since been converted into. Many a scrape we boys had in that day There used to be a sandy portion of the ground where pitched wrestling battles were held between chosen sides. One by one the contestants would be beaten out until it came to the last two, and then there was generally a grand wind-up. 'Billy' Strong, the druggist, had an interesting fight once with one of the teachers named Brown. Then Mr. Hamilton Hunter, another teacher, introduced an original mode of punishment by abandoning the birch and utilizing the fists, a pupil named Jackson coming in for the operation. A good many of the schoolboys of that time are scattered. There was Ed. Paull, now in a real estate agency, Chicago; Bob Murray, who is in Port Huron; Bill Nash, registrar at Emerson, Man.; Jim Harris, now of Chicago; Sam and Archie Screaton, of this city, and others of whom I cannot at present think. Mr. J. B. Boyle was the principal and Misses Corrigan and Dorcas Robinson the lady teachers. We started military drill in those days when the soldiers were here, and it made an astonishing improvement in our appearance. I can remember the inspector coming up to me one day and patting me. 'My,' says he, 'but you're getting a fine chest on you, boy.'"

MR. WILLIAM STRONG.

Mr. Wm. Strong recollected a few schoolboy pranks at the time he attended the old Central. "I remember," said he, "when I was in Miss Corrigan's room, that John Magee played truant one day. She saw him on the opposite side of the road, and sent a deputation of the boys to capture him. Jack had some friends with him who came to his rescue, and we had a pretty lively time of it. Fancy such a thing occurring in this day! Then there is Jack Bland, of the firm of Wright & Co. If we were absent a day we were compelled to bring notes the next to excuse ourselves. Well, Jack had no note that morning, and the teacher asked him the reason he had stayed away. 'Please, our cow had a calf yesterday,' replied Jack, in such an innocent manner that he caused the whole room, both boys and girls, to roar with laughter. There used to be a school teacher there named Taafe, a typical little Irishman, that was a character; all the old students will remember him. In that day there were galleries in the rooms extending from the floor and slanting upwards. Some of the boys obtained a cat and fastened the animal in the gallery with a rope attached so that every time it was pulled the cat would squeal. Everything was in an uproar, when McLaren, in the adjoining room—he was a most passionate man—rushed in and cut the string in the greatest state of excitement. The boys were made to stand up against the wall, and then forced to arm themselves with old bones, ink rags and other rubbish. Thus embellished they were marched through the other rooms for the admiration of the girls. Yes, I was personally engaged in a fight myself once. J. C. Brown, one of the teachers, a peculiar fellow called me out one day to give me a thrashing for something I had not done. I wouldn't hold out my hand, so the encounter came as a result of my disobedience. Jack Magee was sent with a note to my parents, but I caught him en route, gave him a thrashing and sent him back to school. Another of our teachers was Hamilton Hunter. One day a rat started to run around the room and he after it. When he got through chasing that rat those pupils who had not escaped through the doors and windows while he was so occupied numbered about a dozen. There was also a joke played on Crosby. Some one brought a bottle of bees and while the class was proceeding the teacher and a good many scholars were suddenly brought to think that an adjacent hive had been opened by the way in which the insects swarmed. The class had to be dismissed. Mr. Boyle was called in and ten or fifteen of the boys transferred to his room for punishment. The next day Hunter went for one of the Lawless boys and accused him of starting the row. He started to come down, when Lawless let fly a book at him. Just then Jack Moule—now alderman—entered the door, as Lawless disappeared through the window, and Hunter, wishing to wreak vengeance on somebody, seized on poor Moule, who was entirely innocent, and gave him a sound thrashing. There used to be an old couple named Byron who kept a candy store opposite the school. Mr. Boyle discovered that a good many pennies from the scholars found their way to the shop in exchange for taffy, and tried to put a stop to it. I can remember old man Byron standing at the school gate with a formidable-looking cane in his hand waiting for the appearance of Mr. Boyle. There were numerous other affairs of the same nature which I can recall. A large number of the old pupils are dead, and a good many scattered. I could name A. W. Porte, Geo. Cox, Watson Griswold, A. Grannan, J. K. V. Agnew and others who were schoolboys at the time. The teachers could do nothing then with Mr. Porte; he seemed quite unmanageable and didn't appear to fear them very much. Jack Agnew, who was French, used to cause a great deal of amusement by coming to school in wooden shoes, which looked curious to the boys. He is now a prominent railway official in the States."

MR. S. H. CRAIG.

"I remember my first day at the Central school," said Mr. S. H. Craig. "I was walking along with my father on the way to the place and just as we struck the corner of Bathurst and Wellington streets we met Mr. Nicholas Wilson, the headmaster, who took me by the hand and carried me off to school. It was before the Great Western Railway had entered the city, and where the Grand Trunk freight and round houses now stand was then the old Fair Grounds. The boys used to have their 'shinny' and skating there in the winter, the whole place being railed in. Many of the old pupils will also recollect the circus which come to town, and was held on the vacant lot at the corner of Wellington and Bathurst streets. They will also bear in mind how the boys rushed out of school to see the first train on the Great Western Railway that ever entered London. There was a great deal of trouble given the teachers with truants in those days. I think Dr. Mackenzie and other citizens will remember the cockfight which they went to—to see. Mr. Boyle heard about it next day, and in my opinion that was the first and last main they ever attended. A great number of the pupils at that time are dead. The Clark boys are now operators at the G. T. R. station, and among others there were the Gorman boys, who are dead, John Cousins, Wm. McDonald, Ed. Wheaton and James Craig, who is doing well in Maine."

MR. WALTER BARTLETT.

Mr. Walter Bartlett was a pupil of the Central in his boyhood days. "I will never forget the day after Mr. Hamilton Hunter, one of the teachers, was married. He came into the school next day, feeling in pretty good spirits, so the pupils took advantage of the fact by asking to be allowed to sing, a request which "Ham," as he was called, readily granted. We started singing "Dixie" for all we were worth, and it seemed as if everyone in the room took up a different portion of the refrain, making an awful discord. Poor "Ham" became frantic and implored us to stop, but we only became the more boisterous, until suddenly Mr. Boyle appeared at the door. We quieted down with astonishing rapidity. Poor Hunter is dead now, as most of the teachers of that time are, including Mr. Crosby, who was a splendid instructor and well liked by the pupils. We used to receive prizes as tokens of merit, and if I mistake not Jim Magee, the present barrister, received thirteen or fourteen in one term. I think that D. W. Blackwell and myself are about the oldest pupils in the city."

ALD. MOULE.

Ald. John Moule was also a pupil in his boyhood days. "We had excellent teachers in those days," said he, "but there did not seem to be such restraint as at present practiced. Among those attending at that time were Frank Love, A. W. Porte, Guy, Jonathan and James Magee, Bill Nash, William Strong, Lawrence Lawless, Dr. Ross (now in England), John Cameron and others. Mr. Amos Bradford was one of the older pupils, many young men taking advantage of the first-class educational facilities afforded at the school. I remember that Lawry Lawless, now of the postoffice, used to be a great clip, getting into many a scrape. Mr. Strong, the present druggist, also had a personal encounter with a school teacher named Brown. Of course fights were every day occurrences, and it used to be previously whispered around among the boys when a battle might be expected with the pupils of the barrack's school. This institution was conducted by a clergyman named Hughes, and although not free, had a large attendance."

MR. G. G. MAGEE.

Mr. George G. Magee remarked, "I am getting pretty old now and cannot remember the details connected with the building of the Central School. Although I was on the Board at that time—over 40 years ago—I can only recollect there was a grand time at the laying of the corner stone."

ALD. MURRAY ANDERSON.

"We had a big day in London when the corner-stone of the Central School was laid in 1849," said Ald. Murray Anderson. "As a Mason I took part, of course. Hyman, Francis, Daniels and other prominent members of the order were there, but all are dead."

MR. JOHN COUSINS.

"The opening of the Central School is associated in my mind with the first appearance of the Great Western Railway in London," said Mr. John Cousins. "It was all stumps around where the school now stands. I remember the next day after the railroad came into the city; the firemen were given a free trip to Ingersoll, and would you believe it? They actually charged the boys 30 cents a drink there at the hotels. I tell you there was a big kick made about it. When the line opened up west the firemen were given another trip to Detroit. There was over 2,000 bottles of champagne drunk at a banquet given there that night. Why, the firemen used to be everything in those days. A bylaw was passed once compelling all the ratepayers to furnish themselves with leather buckets for fire protection purposes. When a blaze occurred each man was compelled to come around with his pail. There were no steam engines then, so they used to place the workers in two rows from the fire to the nearest well. One row would pass the buckets of water hand to hand, and the other would return the empty ones back to be filled. We used to have lots of fun, I can tell you."

OTHER NOTES.

Mr. Marcus Gunn was the printer of the "Gospel Messenger" found in the corner stone of the school, and published in St. Thomas, where he took up his residence in 1847, coming to London in 1852, and remaining here until his death in 1878. He was a prominent Mason and was present at the laying of the corner stone. He took considerable interest in politics, identifying himself with the Reform party, and in educational matters was especially enthusiastic, associating himself with every movement of that nature. Mrs. Catharine Gunn, his widow, resides at 311 Oxford street, with two daughters, the remainder of the family being scattered.

Mr. J. B. Cook, the present trustee, is a son of Captain Cook of the Sappers and Miners, and when attending the Central School about 20 years ago, filled the box stove in Ham Hunter's room with gunpowder, good, strong British stuff, such as the regiment used for blowing up rocks, etc. The result was quite an explosion, filling the room with ashes and the inmates with consternation.

A copy of the school minutes from 1848 to 1856 still remains in the office of the City Clerk. It shows the Board in 1848 to have been composed of Samuel Eccles, now living near St. Thomas; Wm. Begg, since dead; Harding O'Brien, dead; Harry Dalton, father of Mrs. John Carling, but since dead; John Buchanan, dead; Henry Mathewson, now of the Free Press. The Mayor at that time was T. C. Dixon, and the position included the chairmanship of the School Board.

MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—About 600 head of butchers' cattle, 1,500 sheep and lambs and 25 calves offered at the East End abattoir to-day. The few head of tolerably good cattle were bought up early at from 4½c to 4¾c per lb. A dealer from Toronto bought about 70 steers to feed at the distilleries at that city, the prices paid being 3c to 3½c per lb. Common dry cows sold at from $20 to $30 each, or from 2½c to 3¼c per lb., with some of the leaner beasts at less than 2c per lb, while a considerable number remained unsold. Five of the best cattle on the market sold at $60 each, or about 4¾c per lb; four good calves brought $38. Sheep were much more plentiful than usual, but they were generally of indifferent quality, and all but the best brought lower prices and sold at from $3 to $5 each, and lambs at from $2 50 to $4 50 each. The supply of fat hogs was not large, and prices continue about 4¾c per lb.

Petrolea Oil Market.

PETROLEA, Nov. 28.—Oil, $1 35.

THE WORKING WORLD.

Hard Times in Ottawa—Heads of Families Working for $3 20 a Week.

The British Seamen's and Firemen's Union has resolved to establish boarding places in every port where the present boarding masters aid the shipowners to obtain non-union labor. Shops are also to be established where sailors and firemen may procure any necessities and comforts they desire.

All the Australian colonies have agreed to a conference, as suggested by Premier Monro, of Victoria, to prevent the recurrence of strikes. The families of the leading strikers, who have been unable to obtain work, are supported by contributions from England.

An Ottawa correspondent telegraphs: "A state of things exists in Hull among the workingmen which during Mr. Mackenzie's regime would have been heralded over the country as evidence of the necessity for a change of Government. Workingmen with large families are receiving 80 cents a day and only get four days' work out of the week, and some of them not even that. As the present Government assured the workingmen that they would participate in the new era of prosperity inaugurated by a high tariff policy, the workingmen of Hull are now holding meetings to ask why they are expected to support themselves and families on $3 a week with living higher than it ever was before. The problem is how these poor people are going to endure five months of severe winter, many of them without even the poor employment now found inadequate to procure food and clothing."

FOOTBALL.

The Cornell University eleven played the All University team at Chicago on Thursday. Score: Cornell 12, Chicago 8.

AN UNFORTUNATE CELEBRATION.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 27.—The Butler eleven defeated the Purdue University team in a game of football to-day, winning the State championship. The members of the victorious team determined to celebrate their victory and shortly after 7 o'clock to-night began to make the rounds of the city in a tally-ho coach. While crossing the street railroad track in the center of the city the king-bolt of the vehicle broke and the occupants were precipitated to the ground. There were 30 persons inside the coach and on the roof at the time. The following were injured: Theodore Layman, both legs broken and injured internally; Robt. Hall, shoulder crushed and hurt internally; Walt Newcomb, badly cut about the head; George W. Dean, back injured; E. W. Bray, shoulder crushed and injured internally; George Linkenfelter, injured internally, will probably die.

THE TRIGGER.

The annual shooting match of Nos. 1 and 5 companies, Twenty-First Essex Fusiliers, was held at their new range on the Patterson farm Thursday. About 40 members were present, and the shooting was remarkably good, considering the bad state of the weather. A supper at the Manning House in the evening wound up the day's sport. The following are the principal winners: Patterson challenge cup, won by Pte. Barr, of No. 1 Company; he also won the aggregate medal of No. 1 Company. Sergt. Cassidy won the small challenge cup, and Lieut. Ponting won the No. 5 Company medal.

THE OAR.

At Sydney, N. S. W., Thursday, Bubear, of England, beat Matterson, of Australia, in a sculling race for £100 a side.

A Venerable Masher Horsewhipped.

ANDERSON, Ind., Nov. 28.—William F. Hill, a widower, aged 60, was publicly whipped on the streets of Perkinsville Tuesday night by two young ladies named Florrie Farres and Bessie Dyer. Daniel Farres, father of the former, held him while the girls vigorously plied the buggy-whip. Hill, it seems, is a gay old masher who became so deeply enamored of the young ladies that he became a pest.

Mr. Harry Lenox has a fine lot of suitings on hand, and solicits orders. Good workmanship and elegant goods. b

London Doctors Off for Germany.

Doctors John D. Wilson, of Queen's avenue, and George Wilson, of Dundas street, will leave on Monday for a three months' visit to Germany. They go to the fatherland for the purpose of continuing their medical studies of the chest and lungs, and particularly to apply their attention to the Koch consumptive cure, of which the world has heard so much, with a view to introducing the lymph method in Western Ontario. The gentlemen in question are two of London's most prominent physicians, and their enterprise is commendable.

The Coroners Disagree.

There appears to be some difference of opinion between Doctors Smith and Flock, the rival coroners, as to the necessity of holding an inquest on the body of the late Samuel McDowell. The former, under the date of Nov. 26, sent the following document to Undertaker W. Hinton:

Having heard the particulars connected with the death of Samuel McDowell I do not think an inquest necessary. You are at liberty to dispose of the case as you please. JAMES SMITH, coroner of the county of Middlesex.

On the strength of this City Clerk Abbott registered the death in the customary manner as "instantaneous and accidental." Coroner Flock's jury has not as yet brought in their verdict. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, the interment to be made at Brown's Hill, Nissouri.

All About a Tobacco-Cutter.

Mr. Neil Cooper was charged at the Police Court this morning with an offense for which the minimum penalty is six months' imprisonment, without even the option of a fine, namely, obstructing Revenue Officer James Stewart in the discharge of his duty. The evidence of the latter was the same as given in the previous examination, where he stated that Mr. Cooper shoved him aside when he attempted to seize a tobacco-cutter on the market Saturday morning, the article in question being in his (Cooper's) possession for sale, contrary to the Revenue Act, which states that such should be registered at the department. On behalf of the defendant, Mr. Love submitted that his client had no idea that Stewart was an officer (not having seen his writ), and would not have opposed the seizure had he known it to be the case. Had Mr. Alexander or somebody of any discretion been there the difficulty would not have occurred. Mr. McKillop, for the Crown, said that rather than subject Mr. Cooper to a heavy penalty, the prosecuting parties would prefer withdrawing the case. This was agreed to, and the case dismissed. The accompanying charge against Mr. Cooper of unlawfully having the tobacco cutter in his possession will come up before the county judge. No evidence was offered against Neil Cooper this morning when he was arraigned before Judge Davis on a charge of having a tobacco cutter in his possession without a permit. The prisoner was accordingly discharged.

Opened With Songs and Speeches.

The opening of the extensive addition to the Hamilton road school, was celebrated yesterday afternoon in a very pleasant manner, with songs by the children, under the direction of Mr. Barron and Miss Brock, and speech-making by prominent gentlemen. A large and appreciative audience lent tone to the event, which marked an epoch in the history of the school. Mr. Albert O. Jeffery was chairman, and gracefully introduced a musical programme, interspersed with the speech-making: Song, "Our Native Land;" kindergarten song, "Jack Frost," fifteen children; song, "With a Light, Cheerful Song;" kindergarten song, "Old Winter," fifteen boys; song, "Gliding Through the Meadow;" song, "The Gay Young Rider;" song, "Good Night;" "God Save the Queen." The oratory was credited to Rev. Canon Richardson, ex-Ald. W. H. Winnett, Rev. W. M. Roger, Inspector Boyle, Mr. R. M. Graham, Dr. Gardiner, Trustee Tanton, Principal Wright and Trustee Brady

OLD WORLD NEWS IN A LINE.

The trouble which the Mahdi is undergoing comes from his two brothers. Each wants to succeed him.

Prof. S. Keat has at last found a satisfactory origin of toboggan in the Micmac word tobaakum, accented on the aa, meaning a sled.

The British Shipping Federation, by the addition to it of the London Association of Ship Owners and Brokers, now represents nearly 7,000,000 tons.

In the German army the Emperor is known as "Alarm Fritz," on account of his habit of rousing the garrisons in the middle of the night. In the navy he is known as "Gondola Billy," from "gondoling" about, as they call it, anywhere and everywhere.

In the debate on the navy estimates in the French Chamber M. Raspoil stated that France had fewer fighting ships than in 1871, although between then and now she had expended on the navy $200,000,000 in excess of that spent by the powers of the Triple Alliance.

Last summer the London County Council acquiesced in the eight-hour demand and made eight hours a day's work for a large number of men employed in the drainage works. A few days ago it was compelled to pass a regulation forbidding these men to spend their leisure hours in earning money elsewhere.

A Protestant clergyman in Vienna, feeling himself called upon to stem the public esteem of Prof. Koch, reminded his congregation that, whatever Koch might still discover and invent, and whatever methods of death he might do away with, he never could drive death out of the world, and that religion had lost none of its importance by the advance of science.

FACTS WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

FACT 1.

To know how to secure the best value in Drygoods is extremely difficult. Everyone wants bottom prices. Few get them. Purchasers are influenced (and properly so) by a variety of considerations. But one thing should ever be remembered: Quantity is not a test of cheapness; quality should first be considered.

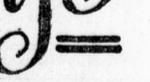

FACT 2.

No better stuff can be found in any market than is shown by Bayley's. Quality seems to be their first effort; and watching closely you'll find their prices the lowest possible, and variety and style the most extensive and fashionable.

FACT 3.

Our endeavor is to conduct our business so that every purchaser will be glad to trade with us. And at this time our Clearing Sale in Dress Goods, in Trimmings, in Cloakings, in Sealettes, in Flannels, in Cottons, in Gloves, in Corsets, in Hosiery, and in every department is specially pleasing to the hundreds who are doing business with us every day.

When you have thought about the facts come and trade with us.

THE LIGHT THAT FAILED.

fortuna[te] the we[ll] was [a] abo[ut] BY RUDYARD KIPLING.

Author of "SOLDIERS THREE," Etc.

Torpenhow watched Dick's face and whistled.

Dick walked up and down, thinking. He saw the whole of his little stock in trade, the first weapon of his equipment, annexed at the outset of his campaign by an elderly man whose name Dick had not caught aright, who said that he represented a syndicate, which was a thing for which Dick had not the least reverence. The injustice of the proceedings did not much move him; he had seen the strong hand prevail too often in other places to be squeamish over moral aspects of right and wrong. But he ardently desired the blood of the gentleman in the frock-coat, and when he spoke again it was with a strained sweetness that Torpenhow knew well for the beginning of strife.

"Forgive me, sir, but have you no—no younger man who can arrange this business with me?"

A[h] I speak for the syndicate. I see no reason for a third party to——"

"You will in a minute. Be good enough to leave me back my sketches."

The man stared blankly at Dick, and then at Torpenhow, who was leaning against the wall. He was not used to employes who ordered him to be good enough to do things.

"Yes, it is rather a cold-blooded steal," said Torpenhow, critically, "but I am afraid, I am very much afraid, you've struck the wrong man. Be careful, Dick. Remember, this isn't the Soudan."

"Considering what services the syndicate have done you in putting your name before the world——"

This was not a fortunate remark; it recalled Dick of certain vagrant years lived apart in loneliness and strife and unsatisfied desires. The memory did not contrast well with the prosperous gentleman who proposed to enjoy the fruit of those years.

"I don't know quite what to do with you," began Dick; meditatively. "Of course you are a thief, and you ought to be well killed, but in your case you'd probably only do it. I don't want you dead on this floor, and besides, it's unlucky just as one's portion is coming in. Don't hit, sir, you'll only excite yourself." He put one hand on the man's left arm and ran the other down the plump thorax beneath the coat. "My goodness!" he said to Torpenhow, "and this gray oaf is going to be a thief! I have seen an Eseneeaster cab-driver have the black hide taken off his body in strips for stealing half a pound extra at dates, and he was as tough as a whipcord. This thing is soft all over—like a 3,000 man."

There are few things more poignantly humiliating than being handled by a man that does not intend to strike. The head of the syndicate began to breathe heavily. Dick walked round him, pawing him, as a cat plays with a soft hearthrug. Then he traced with his forefinger the leaden pouches underneath the eyes, and shook his head. "If you were going to steal my things, mine, all mine, mine!—you, who don't know when you may die. Write a note to your office—you say you are the head of it—and order them to give Torpenhow my sketches, every one of them. Wait a minute; your hand's shaking. Now!" He thrust a pocket-book before him. The note was written. Torpenhow took it and departed without a word, while Dick walked round and round the spell-bound captive giving him such advice as he conceived best for the welfare of his soul. When Torpenhow returned with a gigantic portfolio, he heard Dick say almost soothingly, "Now, I hope this will be a lesson to you; and if you worry me when I have settled down to work with any nonsense about actions for assault, believe me, I'll catch you, and manhandle you, and you'll die. You haven't very long to live, anyhow. Go! Imshi, Vootsak—get out!" The man departed, staggering and dazed; Dick drew a long breath. "Phew! what a lawless lot these people are! The first thing a poor orphan meets is gang robbery, organized burglary. Think of the hideous blackness of that man's mind. Are my sketches all right, Torp?"

"Yes; 147 of them. Well, I must say, Dick, you've begun well."

"He was interfering with me. It only meant a few pounds to him, but it was everything to me. I don't think he'll bring an action. I gave him some medical advice gratis about the state of his body. It was cheap at the little flurry it cost him. Now, let's look at my things."

Two minutes later Dick had thrown himself down on the floor and was deep in the portfolio, chucklingly lovingly as he turned the drawings over and thought of the price at which they had been bought.

The afternoon was well advanced when Torpenhow came to the door and saw Dick dancing a wild saraband under the skylight.

"I builded better than I knew, Torp," he said without stopping the dance. "They're good. They're d——d good! They'll go like flame. I shall have an exhibition of them on my own brazen hook. And that man would have cheated me out of it. Do you know that I'm sorry now that I didn't actually hit him."

"Go out," said Torpenhow—"go out and pray to be delivered from the sin of arrogance, which you never will be. Bring your things up from whatever place you're staying in, and we'll try to make this barn a little more ship-shape."

"And then—oh then," said Dick, 'we will spoil the Egyptians!"

CHAPTER IV.

The wolf-cub at even lay hidin the corn,
When the smoke of the cooking hung gray;
He knew where the doe made a couch for her fawn,
And he looked to his strength for his prey.
But the men swept the smoke-wreaths away,
And he turned from his meal in the villager's close,
And he bayed to the moon as she rose.
—In Seonee.

"Well, and how does success taste?" said Torpenhow, some three months later. He had just returned to his chambers after a holiday in the country.

"Good," said Dick, as he sat licking his lips before the easel in the studio. "I want more—heaps more. The lean years have passed, and I approve of these fat ones."

"Be careful, old man. That way lies bad work."

Torpenhow was sprawling in a long chair with a small fox-terrier asleep on his chest, while Dick was preparing a canvas. A dais, a background, and a lay-figure were the only fixed objects in the place. They rose from a wreck of oddments that began with felt-covered water bottles, belts, and regimental badges and ended with a small bale of second-hand uniforms and a stand of mixed arms. The mark of muddy feet on the dais showed that a military model had just gone away. The watery autumn sunlight was failing, and shadows sat in the corners of the studio.

"Yes," said Dick, deliberately, "I like power; I like the fun; I like the fuss; and above all I like the money. I almost like the people who make the fuss and pay the money. Almost. But they're a queer gang—an amazingly queer gang."

"They have been good enough to you, at any rate. That tin-pot exhibition of your sketches must have paid. Did you see that the papers called it the 'Wild Work Show'?"

"Never mind. I sold every shred of canvass I wanted to; and, on my word, I believe it was because they believed I was a self-taught flagstone artist. I should have got better prices if I had worked my things on wood or scratched them on camel-bone instead of using mere black or white or color. Verily, they are a queer gang, these people. Limited isn't the word to describe 'em. I met a fellow the other day who told me that it was impossible that shadows on white sand should be blue—ultramarine—as they are. I found out later that that man had been as far as Brighton beach; but he knew all about Art, confound him. He gave me a lecture on it, and recommended me to go to school to learn technique. I wonder what old Kami would have said to that?"

"Where you under Kami, man of extraordinary beginnings?"

"I studied with him for two years in Paris. He taught by personal magnetism. All he ever said was 'Continuez, mes enfants,' and you had to make the best you could of that. He had a divine touch, and he knew something about color. Kami used to dream color. I swear he never could have seen the genuine article; but he evolved it; and it was good."

"Recollect some of those views in the Soudan?" said Torpenhow, with a provoking drawl.

THE RESURRECTION.*

BY THE REV. LYMAN ABBOTT.

The resurrection of Jesus Christ does not seem to me the stupendous and incredible event it does to many. It transcends, but does not contradict; anticipates, but does not contravene, human experience. Without here attempting to discuss the reasonableness of Christian faith, I simply try to state it in an intelligible form, in order to recall from the realm of legend into the realm of history the story of the Resurrection.

It is the Christian belief that man is both body and spirit. The body is the organ; the spirit is the player on the organ. When he pushes in the stops, and locks the instrument, he does not cease to be. The music remains to him, though he has ceased to express it audibly through keys and pipes. Looking down into the eyes which look up appealingly or confidently into hers, the mother sees a soul looking through them, and in the mutual glance soul touches soul. Closer than words can bring us is the intercommunion of heart with heart in moments of most expressive silence, when not even a glance of the eye or a pressure of the hand is needed as interpreter. Science may not be able to explain these experiences of the invisible life, but in vain it denies them. The poets bear witness to them, and the poets do not create imaginary worlds, but interpret a world that is real, though unseen. The truth of their interpretation is attested by a universal experience.

Now, what happens in what we call death is the separation of spirit and body. Science can define neither life nor death. We only know that this spirit withdraws and leaves the dwelling untenanted; the musician stops playing, locks his instrument, and goes away; the king abdicates his sovereignty over his earthly domains and departs. And presently the kingdom, with no king on the throne, dissolves; the organ, with no organist to play upon it, falls to pieces; the tent, abandoned by its tenants, drops in hopeless ruin on the ground. But this affords no slightest reason for thinking that the king is dead, the organist is extinguished, the tenant has ceased to be. One may guess this, but guesswork is not science. We look into the eyes, and no soul looks out of them; we clasp the hand, and no will answers with responsive clasp. But because the friend is not looking out of the window, we do not conclude that he has ceased to exist. We look about us, as the last breath is drawn, and see no shadowy and ghostly presence; listen, and catch no faintest rustle or footfall. But it is no incredible faith, this, that there have been times in which the eyes generally holden have been able to see, the ears generally too dull have been quickened to hear.

We do not believe that Jesus Christ was the only one that ever rose from the dead. Every deathbed is a resurrection; from every grave the stone is rolled away; by the side of every weeping wife stands the luminous figure of her loved companion, calling her by name, which she, alas, cannot hear. We wonder not so much that the disciples were permitted to see the true Christ emerging from the tabernacle in which he dwelt upon earth as that we are not all permitted to see the real and veritable soul when mere image and clayey statue lies speechless and motionless before us. The marvel is not that one resurrection was witnessed by many witnesses, but that every resurrection has not some visible appearance, that in every so-called death-hour there are some with spiritual vision keen enough to discover the spirit in its departure from the empty habitation. The theologians have hotly discussed the question whether the body of Jesus which was buried in the tomb rose from the tomb, or whether the disciples saw the spiritual body released from its earthly habitation. As the question is one impossible to answer with certainty, so it is one not important to answer. Comparing the Gospel narratives, something can be said for either hypothesis. But whether the spirit returned to the habitation which it had for a season left, and made use of to attest the truth that life is immortal, though the body is not, or whether the disciples were given liberty to see invisible and tangible form the spiritual body which is generally concealed from our gross senses, is a matter of small importance. The one significant fact is that the resurrection which takes place at every death has been once attested by witnesses permitted to have sensible evidence of that which is evident to most of us, if at all, by experiences which defy criticism and analysis, and so transcend explanation and interpretation.

To those of us who thus believe in the spirit world—a spirit world which environs us and influences us, though through no interpretation of sight or sound—the story of the resurrection of Jesus Christ will seem no myth or legend, but an interpreter of experiences when our hearts have burned by the way under influences which we understood not, under the communion of a personality invisible but not unfelt, which came and went as mysteriously as Christ to the disciples in their walk to Emmaus. In the Gospel story of the resurrection we find an interpretation of those heavenly visitations when a voice unheard and a presence unseen has spoken comfort or strength or hope or warning, and see in Easter not merely a memorial of a long gone past, but a witness to the truth that the grave is always empty, that the living are never to be sought among the dead, and that a divine presence ever walks the earth, the champion now, as then, of those whose eager questioning needs answer, and whose earnest but perhaps almost despairing hope needs inspiration, which only he can give.

A Sure Remedy for Neuralgia.

Neuralgia is one of the most common and distressing complaints incidental to this climate. It is not confined to any particular season, for whilst most general in the winter seasons, yet many suffer its excruciating agony in the heat of summer. In late years this form of disease has become better known, and consequently the means of relief have become greatly increased in numbers, as well as in efficacy. Among the most powerful and penetrating combinations, placed within the reach of the public for the relief of neuralgia, we can mention Polson's Nerviline. Its power over pain is something wonderful, and we advise a trial for neuralgia, or any other painful complaints.

The Late C. W. Kent's Will.

At Osgoode Hall, Toronto, yesterday the case of Kent vs. Kent came up. Gibbons, Q.C., for the plaintiff, appealed from the judgment of Boyd, C., in an action tried before him at London, in so far as that judgment is against the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs claim under the will of the first wife of the late Charles W. Kent and seek to eject his widow (his second wife) from certain land conveyed to the first wife by the husband directly. After the death of his first wife the husband continued in possession and devised all his estate to his second wife. The Chancellor held that the deed to the wife passed the land to her as her separate estate, and that the husband had no tenancy by the curtesy therein, and therefore that his possession after her death was adverse to those claiming under her will, and that he had acquired a title by possession at the time of his death, and had the right to devise it to his second wife. W. R. Meredith, Q.C., for the defendant, supported the judgment of the Chancellor, and also argued that in the event of the court being of opinion that the Statute of Limitations did not apply that the deed from the husband to the wife passed nothing, and the husband remained the owner of the land after it, and had the right to devise it to his second wife. Judgment was reserved.

The Young W. C. T. U.

The regular monthly meeting of the "Y's," which took place yesterday afternoon in their rooms, Nitschke Block, was one of the most enthusiastic and auspicious yet held since the formation of the union. The superintendents of departments presented encouraging reports, and new departments were opened to meet the increasing demands of the work. The free kitchen garden class was started on Saturday morning with a good attendance, and the paid class was formed Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Young Women's Christian Association reports a rapid increase of membership, with good prospects of being still further largely augmented during the winter. Arrangements are being made for a large addition to the library and increasing the stock of magazines and papers, so that the reading-room now open from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. may be fully equipped and made a most attractive feature of the work. It has also been decided to open a juvenile class for scientific temperance instruction immediately after the holidays. Charts have been secured illustrating the physiological effects of alcohol on the various organs of the body, and the teachers appointed will be in preparation to commence promptly in the New Year. Arrangements are also made to open a class in the elementary English branches for girls between the ages of 12 and 16 who are engaged during the day and unable to attend school. This class will be quite distinct in a room set apart for themselves, and when reaching the age of 16 will be eligible for membership in the Young Women's Christian Association. Although the "Y's" have lost some of their most active members through illness or removal from the city, their place is being supplied by a noble army of volunteers, and the union is in a most healthy condition, showing every indication of progress.

Lecture on "China."

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Dundas Center Church, instead of holding their regular quarterly meeting last night, secured the services of Rev. Mr. Hart, of Burlington, to deliver his illustrated lecture on "China." A report of the work done by the auxiliary during the past quarter was read by the recording secretary, Mrs. Beal. The lecturer, until recently, was superintendent of the Episcopal Methodist Mission in China. For twenty years he labored as a missionary in that field, learning the language, preaching, training native helpers, and distributing religious literature. He gave an interesting topographical description of the country, and spoke of the productions, institutions, commerce, literature and religions of that heathen land, which he claims to be by far the most in need of Christianity in the world, there being only one Christian teacher to 10,300 inhabitants. The Chinese are the Anglo-Saxons of Asia, and are not unworthy of the name, being a commercial people, working their way, in pursuit of wealth, into all countries. As agriculturists they are industrious, frugal and thrifty. Missionaries must master the elements of the three great religious beliefs is the Chinese, i. e., of Buddha, Confucius and the religion of Reason, in order to reach the followers of each. Their literature consists chiefly of religious and historical works. Every province, every county, every town and village has its local historian, who carefully records the events transpiring from time to time and in the same complicated language used by their ancestors over 3,000 years ago. Concerning the superstitions of the people, the thrilling experiences and hairbreadth escapes of himself and other missionaries, he had much to say, and concluded his very interesting lecture by urging the people to increased action in the furtherance of the great Christianizing work in China. The music was furnished by Mrs. Courtice and Messrs. Carrol and Belcher. To Mr. Carl Beal credit is due for the well arranged and artistic map prepared for the lecture.

"The Saloon vs. the Home."

A large and appreciative audience filled the school room of the Askin Street Church, South London, last evening to hear the Rev. J. W. Bell lecture on the above subject. The lecture was in behalf of the Royal Templars of Temperance, the object of which was to form a council of the order in that part of the city. The lecturer declared that it was not always possible to save a man from the curse of drunkenness, but the best way was to save him from sin, and then the drinking habit would leave him. In many places it was the custom to hold a prayer meeting at the house of a victim of drink, who had pleaded his inability to attend one anywhere else through lack of suitable garments, and the consequence was that many of these men, who had appeared to be on the road to a drunkard's grave, were now members of the great Christian Church. Many people said they had no need to join a temperance society or to sign a temperance pledge, as they never drank liquor, but these were the men who alone could form a temperance society, because it could not be formed by drunkards, any more than a church could be established by drunkards. It was not to save themselves that temperance men joined a society of this kind, but to try and save others. The Royal Templars believe in preventive work rather than reformatory work, as a means of preventing drunkenness and a good branch of work was that of the Cadet Templars, which was composed of young people of both sexes. Mr. Bell spoke of the objects and aims of the Royal and Select degrees, the Knights, and the White Cross and White Shield movements. The White Cross, for men alone, aims at the social purity of the people. At the present time there are two moral laws, one for men, and one for women, but the teaching of the White Cross movement was that there was but one moral law alike for man and woman, the law which treads down a woman is not God's law, and it ought not to be man's. As for the White Shield movement, Mr. Bell explained that it was intended for similar work, but was composed of women alone. The women of the city of London could vote down the saloons if they had their minds made up, and it was something they ought to do at once if they intended to save their boys from the clutches of the "licensed robber."

Mr. Bell, by means of a lantern, threw on a screen several comparative tables, prepared by Mr. Neilson, actuary to the British Government, the British Registrar-General, and the editor of the Voice of New York. All these figures confirmed the arguments he used to prove his proposition that the saloon robbed the home of many articles necessary to adequate comfort. A number of other views showing the downward path of the drunkard and the misery of the drunkard's daughter brought this part of the meeting to a close.

A number of ladies and gentlemen interested in the subject of Royal Templarism stayed behind, and after the Rev. Mr. Bell had explained many matters to them ten gentlemen expressed their willingness to become charter members of a new council, which was forthwith organized, Mr. J. G. Shuff, S.C., and several other members of London Council assisting. The name of the new council is South London Council, and meets in the Baptist Church next Monday evening. Mr. N. F. Yeo was elected select councilor.
