court as it is at present constituted. Coroner Bray took strong exception to Mr. Rankin's statement. In the first place, said he, your premises are wrong, as I am not a salaried officer of the Grand Trunk railway and am not in their employ in any manner whatever. Coroner Bray pointed out that he proposed to investigate the matter and would do it in the most thorough, possible manner, taking evidence from any quarter whence it was offered.

Perham your arms. wrong, as I am not a salaried officer

Perhaps you are not aware, added the coroner, upon what footing coun-sel stands in this court. They are merely here on suffrance the same as any other disinterested person per-mitted to constitute the audience. That they were permitted to question any witness was a matter of courtesy and not because they had any right to do

Mr. Rankin gracefully withdrew whatever he might have said that could be deemed offensive to the court or looked upon as discourteous. Coroner Bray accepted the apology and noted the objection. Mr. Rankin thereupon withdrew.

THE RATE OF SPEED.

Frank McKindsey, signalman at the Erie & Huron crossing, was the first witness called. His evidence brought witness called. His evidence brought out nothing new concerning the accident. He placed the speed of the train at fifteen miles an hour. The train in question did not stop at the Erie & Huroh crossing. The signals were set for her and she had the right of way. They were supposed, according to the company's rules, to slack up.

ing to the company's rules, to slack up.

Mr. McKindsey was asked at what rate trains were allowed by law to run through the city. The witness could not say, he had nothing to do with that; his business was to keep his crossing clear. But Coroner Bray, who has had some experience in these matters, stated that they could run at any speed they wished where the road was properly fenced. Proper fencing did not necessarily include gates. Whitewashed fences running out from the track in the way they do at the Park St. G. T. R. crossing constituted proper fencing. Where there was not proper fencing their speed was limited by law. Detective Day, chief detective of the Grand Trunk, said substantially the same thing when called detective of the Grand Trunk, said sub-stantially the same thing when called upon by Coroner Bray. Running along a highway in the city trains were not to go more than six miles an hour. In case of proper fencing they could cross city streets at any rate they chose. Abraham Cooley noticed a man be-tween the cars when the train crossed the Erie & Huron tracks. There was another on the cars about a car length behind him. Witness did not notice him move.

CONDUCTOR'S EVIDENCE. Kaccked the Maa's Hat Off to Get Rid o

William Freeman, of Windsor, conductor of train, No. 97, on the G. T. R., west bound, was next called. west bound, was next called.

The coroner, having substantially sat upon Mr. DeGear's legal representative, at this juncture informed the father of the deceased that he was at liberty to ask any question he saw fit.

Conductor Freeman stated that on the day in question his train John Finnes, engineer) crossed the Erie & Huron at about fifteen miles an hour. Knew of no rule limiting his speed where the signals were in their favor. He saw deceased on the train. He was between the cars, about ten lengths from the caboose. The man was standing on the ladder, which was on the end of the car. He first noticed the man when they were somewhere about end of the car. He first noticed the man when they were somewhere about the E. & H. crossing. The witness was at that time standing upon the car the deceased was on. He said nothing to him, but stooped down and tipped his hat off with his hand so that deceased would have to go back after it, and could go no further with the train. The hat would not follow the train, but would stop where it fell.

The coroner—It would not roll with the train?

Witness—No.

Coroner—Where were when you tipped his hat off?

Witness—I think I must have been over the Erie & Huron; between that and Park street track.

THEY DIDN'T SPEAK.

The man looked up into the conductor's face. Neither said anything. The witness then started foward the front of the train and did not see deceased again. Didn't see him fall off. When witness last saw deceased he was standing where he had first seen him. He did not look back when he went forward, and did not know until that evening that there had been a man killed. He then saw in the Evening News that there had been a man killed.

fied to sit upon the case. Mr. Rankin then read the amendment in question. We are going, said Mr. Rankin, to sift this thing to the very bottom, and that is what cannot be done in this court as it is at present constituted.

Wm. Turtle, Erie and Huron baggageman, did not think it would be possible for any one to fall or to be thrown off a train going fifteen miles an hour and to land full length and never move from where he fell. He was quite positive that anyone falling in this way would be carried along quite a distance by the impetus of the Suppose a man were to fall from ladder on the end of a car, would be fall on the rail? ask the coroner. Witness—That would all depend up-on how he fell.

Coroner-But it would be possible for him to fall from the ladder and clear the rail?

Witness—Yes. Hubert Eischen, G. T. R. section-man, testified that he was in the handcar house when the train in question went by. The hand-car house would be about 300 feet from Park street crossing. He saw a man between the crossing. He saw a man between the cars but did not see conductor or brakemes. The first he knew of it was when Geo. Allen told the men that there was a man killed at the Park street crossing. Winness and John Woods were first to reach the deceased. While they were there Mr. Weaver came outside and I said to him, "come over here, there's a man laid here." He said he would go in and get his bat and come right over, and he did.

ALD. WEAVER'S EVIDENCE. Coroner-Was that the first time Mr.

Weaver saw the man?
Witness—I can't say. I don't know.
Coroner—He didn't say.
Witness—No.
Mr. Weaver then went in and telephoned Dr. Bray and when he came back he said that Dr. Bray said, take him to the station.

Coroner Bray—Mr. Weaver said that

—that I said take him to the station?

Witness-Yes, sir.
The unfortunate man did not die until he had been removed to the station. Witness, as they were going to the man, had picked up his hat 284 feet from where he lay and carried it up to him, placing it behind his body. Coroner Bray—Did you see Mr. Weaver at all until he came out of his store?

Witness—No, I did not see him at all until he came out, and I called him over.

Further question from the coroner elicited the fact that he had heard Mr. Weaver open his store door and had seen him come out. The gravel, for about 15 feet east of the man, looked as if something had been dragged over it. John Wood, who was with the last witness at the time of the accident, corroborated his testimony. HEAD STRUCK A BOLT.

Wm. Entwhistle, road-master of the Erie & Huron, did not see the accident He was upon the tract at the time, directly behind his own house. He overtook Allan who told him as they walked to the crossing where the man lay, described the accident so Mr. Entwhistle during that walk as he af-ward did to the Coroner. From an ex-amination of the spot Mr. Entwhistle

MONEY IN CHEESE.

In 1883 Untario made $5,589,000 worth of cheese. This year the value of the product exceeds $15,000,000. How much of this fifteen millions will come to Kent, the best pastoral county in Canada? Very little? We have within our borders only two or three factories, whereas we ought to have two or three dozen. Middlesex, Oxford, Perth and Elgin, without half our advantages in that line, each make more cheese in one summer than Kent does in twenty years. And the greater part of the cheese product of the above named counties is sent to England, sold at good prices, paid for in good gold, and the money returned to the factory patrons who supplied the milk. Why cannot this county imitate the others mentioned in this industry? Why do not the farmers of the various sections get together, agree to supply so much milk each, engage competent cheese-makers and dot the county with factories from end to end? There would be millions in it.

THE PORK MANUFACTURER. The Hamilton Times seems to be of opinion that the present government made corn free that Canadian "farmers" might have cheap corn for "feeding purposes," says the Spectator. We believe that the distinguished municipal statesman who mixed up the tariff said something to that effect as an excuse for his folly.

But the farmer's business is to grow grain to sell, either as grain, or as beef, pork, mutton or fowl. Free corn cheapens the native corn of the Ontario corn belt, and damages the farmoats, peas and barley, and damages the farmers who grow them. The purchasing of cheap American corn and converting it into beef or pork is not farming. That sort of "farming" would in a few years lay waste every farm in Canada. Cheap corn favors the man who grows hogs in large numbers or purchases young hogs in large numbers, and feeds them for the market. He doesn't farm. He never uses a plow or a reaper. He produces no grain, no fruit, no dairy products. He is simply a manufacturer of And he not only injures the bona, fide farmer by importing free corn to cheapen the price of the latter's product, but he ruins the market bona fide farmer's pork by manufacturing an inferior article,

Dr. Chase's K.-L. Pills Loose the Shackles of Consti-pation and Stomach Disorders.

In summing up the causes of human misery it will be found that by far the greatest sources of disease originate in derangement of the Stomach and Bowels. People will abuse their stomachs and neglect the calls of nature till they bring on themselves her vongeance. To get back to nature's paths, to have the Stomach and Bowels once more fulfilling their function properly, to clear the system of all the results and cousequences of poisons accumulating and circulating in the Blood is the work of Dr. Chase s Kiduey-Liver Pills.

Mr. Thos Miller, Lucknow, Ont., says Mr Thos Miller, Lucknow Chi., says that he was afflicted with Stomach Trouble and Constipation for about 20 years, during which time he tried almost everything he heard of, but to no purpose. Mr. H. Day, the popular druggist, sent him a sample of Dr. Chase a K. L. Pills. In the near future the subject of the adge doctor is going to become a live one in medical circles. It is not un likely that the medical council will step in and put an end to the practice of having court physicians altogether. RUSSIA'S RULER'S RICHES.

Bothschild Among European Sovereign In the Cuar.

The Emperor Paul, whose reign was certainly not one of the most brilliant, was nevertheless one of the greatest benefactors of the dynasty. He not only settled the order of succession on a permanent basis, but also endowed his posterity with the material means of maintaining their position. It is claimed that no other position. their position. It is claimed that no other reigning family in Europe is so well pro-vided for Paul I set aside a vast amount of landed property, under the name of the imperial appanages, for the sole benefit of all grand dukes and grand duchesses not in the direct line of succession, while the in the direct line of succession, while the sovereign and the heir apparent, together with their respective families, were to be supported out of the funds of the state.

These appanages of the Russian imperial family now cover the enormous total area in different sections of Russia of 21, 200 000 acres, an extent of land larger by

000,000 acres, an extent of land larger by

2,000,000 acres than the whole of Scot-land. This total includes 15,000,000 acres of wood and forest, producing yearly more than 5,000,000 rubles. The total annua revenue of the imperial appanages now reaches 20,000,000 rubles or more than £2,000,000, and, with no fewer than 46 members of the imperial family to support, the expenditure at present amounts to a yearly average of over 5,000,000 ru-bles. In 1891 it was over 6,000,000 rubles. The appanages are quite separate and distinct from extensive private property, and from the crown or state domains, administered by the minister of agriculture, and they do not contribute toward the annual expenditure of the imperial court, amounting, as far as can be ascertained, to about £1,000,000, nor toward providing dowries for imperial grand duchesses. Before the emancipation of the serfs the appanages possessed over 800,000 peagants, who paid annually in land and poll taxes for the benefit of the imperial family nearly 3,000,000 rubles and during 68 years, up to their liberation, altogether 119,000,000 rubles, or £12,500,000. The department of imperial areas and the state of the ment of imperial appanages has since be-come the largest landed proprietor, the largest agriculturist and the largest wine largest agriculturist and the largest with producer in the empire. Its industrial en: terprises in timber, sugar, cotton and other products are rapidly developing on a proportionately large scale. During a century of existence it has furnished the collateral branches of the imperial house and the collateral branches of the imperial house see 100,000 miles and with altogether 236,000,000 rubles, and

While the introduction of portable fire-arms into Europe is of comparatively re-cent date, their use was frequent among the Mohammedans of eastern Asia at a very early period. La Brocquiere, who made a journey to Jerusalem in the mid-dle of the fifteenth century, and who trav-eled extensively in the east, mentions the firing of small arquebuses at the great festivals in Damascus.

The first use of muskets in Europe was at the slege of Rhege in 1591 by the Spanish soldiers. These arms were so extremely heavy that they could not be used with out a rest. They were provided with matchlocks, and were effective at a considerable distance. While on the march the soldiers themselves carried only the ammunition and the rests, and boys, bearing the muskets, followed after, like caddies on a golf course. Loading these cumbersome arms was alow operation. They were clumsy and awkward to handle, the ball and powder were carried separately, and the preparation and adjustment of the match took a

Before long, however, improvements be-can to be made. The guns became lighter in construction, and the soldiers carrie their ammunition in broad shoulder belts called bandeliers, to which were suspended a number of little leather covered wooder cases, each of which held a charge of powder. A pouch, in which the were carried loose, and a priming horn hung at the side of the soldier.

As late as the time of Charles I musket with rests were still in use, and it was not until the beginning of the eighteenth century that firelocks were successfully employed .- Harper's Round Table.

The Big Brother.

Children early learn to adopt the man ners and the speech of the elder brother the small boy is educated by the one who is at college or in business much more than by his governess or his tutor. Said wise observer once: "If only you can get your eldest son well started, if he is manly, truthful and of high principles, the others in the family follow right on in the same direction. The judicious father will take great pains with his oldest boy."

In a neighborhood or a school the large oys influence social opinion and set the fashion for the rest. Always there is ome larger boy whom the little lad great ly admires, who is his model, whose smile or whose frown makes or unmakes his happiness. The big brother does not know it, but he is in this changeful world the one personage whose scepter never totters, whose popularity never wanes and who never goes out of fashion.

To his sisters he has the opportunity of showing chivalry, kindness and the deference of the aironger to the weaker. To the baby of the household he is little short of a king. The big brother, bless his heart, when he is a nice, obliging, affectionate and generous fellow, is as important a member of society as any one who can be

The old story about the French marquis who opined that the Almighty would think twice before damning a gentleman of quality, doubtless finds an echo is all genuinely "armigerous" bosoms, but there is another tale is Evelyn's diary which puts what I believe to be the English position as pointedly as the other does that of the ancient regime: "March 10, 1682.—V told a friend of mine who accompanied him to the gallows and gave him some advice that he did not value dying of a rush and hoped and believed God would deal with him like a gentleman".

E. J. Musson, Jr., sings the Praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills—He was Bed-ridden for montas and his strength was sapped by Diabetes—He found his cure in six br xes of Dodd's Fidney Fills Dodd's Kidney Pills.

St. Catharines, Nov. 1.—For several months E. J. Musson, Jr., one of the most capable painters in the city, was confined to his bed, a sufferer from that painful disease—diabetes. The complaint sapped his strength, fed upon his muscles, and reduced him to a skeleton almost. Then, providentiupon his muscles, and reduced him to a skeleton almost. Then, providentially, he heard of what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done in similar cases. He bought six boxes. This is what he says of their work: "After using the third box, I could lift light weights. I used the other three boxes, and now I am well. I have tried many other medicines, and consulted many doctors. All gave me poor encouragement. But Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me."

LAID TO REST. The Victoria Daily Colonist says: The Victoria Daily Colonist says:

"The funeral of Mrs. A. W. Semple took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence in Victoria West, Rev. Donald McRae officiating and the various temperance organizations of the city attending, in addition to very many representative citizens of the suburb of which the deceased lady has been so much esteemed a resident. many representative circles of the suburb of which the deceased lady has been so much esteemed a resident. Messrs. William Mable, Thomas Gold, T. Tray, John Meston, J. Park and D. McBeath—intimate friends of the bereaved family—acted as pall-bearers, and the services throughout were unusually impressive. To-morrow morning special services in connection with Mrs. Semple's demise will be conducted at St. Paul's church by Rev. Mr. McRae. The late Mrs. Semple had been during all her life a resident of the western suburb, where her father, Mr. A. Oldershaw, has his home. She was but thirty-one years of age when consumption claimed her for the grave."

The deceased lady was a cousin to Geo. Bartlett and a former resident of the Maple City.

The Loyal Home Workers is an associ ion numbering over 15,000 members scattered throughout the states and territories and the Deminton of Canada. The fad indulged in by many women of wearing black underclothing has a more serious significance than the wearers im

The body, especially the nervous sys tem, is greatly benefited by sunlight, as we all know, sleeplessness, nervous disor-ders, headache, etc., being often cured by esorting to simple sun baths.

It is reasonable to suppose, therefore, that nothing dark should be worn next the skin, and the more white predominates in the whole costume the better for the indi-vidual's general health and mental equi-

A wealthy woman, who had fallen into a peculiarly nervous state and who were deep mourning, was told by her physician that he could not continue to treat her un-less she would give up wearing black, as he attributed her neurotic condition large-ly to this fact. When he learned that not only her out ide dress, but also every article of her parel, was black, he was more than e convinced of the truth of his theory, a he gave her the alternative of changing her entire underwear to white, also using as much white in her outer garments as was practicable, or of employing another physician. As his services were valued, he succeed ed in effecting the change demanded, and the patient seen began to improve. It would be as reasonable to cover up a growing plant with layers of black cloth and then expect it to flourish as for a woman to swathe her delicate body in fold upon fold of sable silk, cotton or wool and expect to remain healthy, wholesome and Then think of the effect on the woman's spirits every time she robes or disrobes with only funeral black to meet the eye A woman naturally strong minded, cheer ful and sensible was one day lying weak and depressed on her bed, when a black cloth cape which hung near her so worked upon her nerves, suggesting sorrowful possibilities, that she imagined herself go-ing insane, and struggled desperately to her feet to throw a white garment over the gloomy thing.

The matter of wearing outside black must always be determined more or les by individual preference, but every in-stinct of good taste, delicacy, cleanliness and health, physical and mental, demands that the underwear should be spotlers

It would do no harm-rather a deal o good-if some of our ultra fashionable dames would read up on this ancient form of religion and then relegate their hide black undergarb to the ragbag or use it in patching old umbrellas. - Doctor.

A Woman's Lungs.

As a matter of fact, says a medical writer, not one woman in a hundred breathes normally. The respiration of the average woman varies with every change of mental state or physical condition, and it is a rare thing for a woman to use her lungs to the test possible advantage without a previous knowledge of physiology and an appreciation of the merits of physical culture. Desirable as is a thorough exercise in breathing, it is not safe to experiment in the

A very little instruction on the subject will enable any woman to compre-lend the precise art of filling and empty-ing the lungs on scientific principles. Aft-er this has been acquired the chief thing is to breathe in as much sunshine as possible and to believe in the efficacy of oxygen as

Wallace—What's the reason little Johnny isn't wearing his 'Little Defender' badge any more! Mrs. Wallace—He doesn't seem to be so fond of ministering to dumb animals since he put a poor, little, half-frozen been in his pocket to get it warm."

The following are some excellent rules for improving the respiration and bringing it up to a normal condition: Stand at an open wisdow or recline on a couch, with the wast and chest unconfined; held the chest walls high and inhale in slow, long breaths, exhale as slowly, three times only at first. Gradually the number of times may be increased and the time lengthened for the breathing exercises. Fifteen minutes, twice a day at least, should be devoted to this exercise to accomplish the desired result. Mrs. Emma Eames Story, whose full and generous sutlines are a beautiful example of the sesults of vocal and breathing symnastics, is not only fond of outdoor life, of walking and horseback riding, but the requirements of her art demand continued daily practice of the exercises that develop the muscles of the throat, chest, back and abdomen.

Truths Told In a Few Words. A child's respect for its parent is not seured by overleniency any more than by A daughter should never seek or be allowed to "outdress" her mother. In every family the mother should be the

The discarded finery of a daughter The discarded finery of a daughter should never constitute a mother's wardrobe. No one feels especially dignified in the presence of one whose old clothes she is wearing, and a mother should at all times preserve her dignity before her children. The mother who never loses her queenliness will never lose her crown.

Preventable misfortunes consist chiefly of manifeld things, little to do, but immense things to have done.

ruin and safety.

Parents generally receive that measure of filial respect they deserve—not always perhaps, but very generally.

When a mother allows her daughter to appropriate her wraps, gloves, veils or other articles of personal attire, she begins a policy of familiarity which sooner or later breeds contempt. A respect for one's belongings engenders a respect for their possessor.—Ladies' Home Journal.

To Put Out Clothes on Fire. There have been such shocking instances of death and injury in the past by clothes catching fire that people of an altruistic spirit are moved to make the danger impressive and offer a means of prevention It is well to show the means of compara-tive safety and exhort the public to employ them. To cultivate presence of mind in children when burning accidents occur s good, but perhaps more difficult than to clothe them in slow burning fabrics. The fire drill in schools is a good thing because tre urill in schools is a good thing because it tends to reduce the danger of panic, but to teach young children control of their faculties and the exercise of judgment when actually attacked by fire is not easy. Still, presence of mind is common enough, even in childhood, to make the experiment of cultivating it worth trying. If the child whose clothes catch fire, or the grown person either, would wrap some heavy stuff about the flames or roll over on the ground, the fire would soon be extinguished while running only adds to the danger. Muslins and tarlatans, the jost inflammable goods, when treated with tungstate of soda, cannot be made to burn with a blaze. If all cotton dresses and underclothing, especially those of children, could be treated in this way, a great number of lives would be saved and much suffering prevented. - Woman's Journal.

When Children Ask Questions. A lawyer in high standing and a thoughtful father says that whenever that if he cannot he confesses frankly that the matter is too difficult to explain and can give a simple explanation too hard for the child to understand. If he does not know he admits his ignorand promptly, but adds that he will try to find out. James Sally mentions the case of a little girl 41/2 years old who chased her mother into one of the most abstruse problems of metaphysics. She saw a was on the window pane, and desired to touch t. Her mother said: "No, you must not will sting you." The child queried, "Why doesn't it sting the glass". The mother answered, "Because the glass can't feel." Again the child queried, "Why doesn't the glass feel?" Again the mother answered, "Because it has no nerves."
And again the child queried, "Why do nerves feel?" Sully fails to give the mother's answer at this the most critical point He merely adds that children must be exercised in taking some truths on trust without aking the why of everything, and quotes George Eliot, who says somewhere, Reason about everything with your child you make him a monster, without reverence, without affections."—New York

Teacher's Quarterly. The Society Girl.

Taste, grace, kindliness, the art of putting people at their case, the ready jest, the quick repartee, belong to the outfit of the society girl. A certain dainty finish distinguishes her. She has savoir faire. She is not readily thrown from her poise Her background is secure, and she has the immense advantage of knowing that her world is at her feet. Her mother, always at her side, judicious, considerate, affec-tionate, probably contentedly allows herself to be thrown into the shade by this seil to be thrown into the snade by this second self, who seems to her the very crown and flower of her life. The father, the brothers, the cousins of the slander sweet maiden are all intensely proud of her, and the first simply lives to serve her. to gratify her caprices, to furnish he oney, to wear her on his heart as one wears a white rosebud on his buttonhole. But, being an American father, he would resent with scorn the allegation that his resent with scorn the allegation that his fair daughter is merely an ornament. He knows her underlying strength, her reserves of force, her possibilities. If the need comes, this father will tell you that his girl could and would do just what his boys here. She would go just what his his girl could and would do just what his boys have done. She would go into busi-ness and make a fortune or at least hold her own among fortune makers.—Harper's Bazer.

Dress and Gown. "It may seem inconceivable," says the New York Sun, "but it is none the less New York Sun, "but it is none the less true, that there are still a number of women in this world who need to be enlightened as to the true significance of the word 'dress." At a woman's meeting the other afternoon, convened for the express purpose of considering the clothes question and nothing else, the abuse of the word was flagrant, striking and general. Instead of 'gewns' or 'frocks, speaker after speaker talked of 'dresses' until at least one listener longed to let them know of their misapprehension of the term. 'Dress' means attire, habiliments, clothes in general and never clothes in particular. You may speak of a woman's dress when you you refer to one particular part of it. You might just as well call her headgear her 'dress' as her frock. It is quite as much a 'dress' as her frock. It is quite as much a part of it. A 'man's dress' is as permissible an expression as a 'woman's dress,' implying, as it does, not skirts alone, but the complete attire. It's a ease of language, no less than mathematics, sanctioning the proposition that the whole is greater than any of its parts."

Cooking and Skimming.

One of the niceties of cooking which mark the difference between the expert and the novice, or the careful and the careless cook, is found in the operation of skimming. Many cooks caunot, skim successfully. They do not get all the grease off the soup, and they fail to touch just the right moment for attacking the scum which rises on the first boiling up of potatoes and other vegetables. Soup should be skimmed patiently and thoroughly, and at the last moment any globules of grease that remain before pouring it into the tures should be taken up with a piece of clean blotting paper, hald edgewise. Grease from the invalid's cup of beef tea or from a bowl of gravy can be removed in the same manner. For the scum from vegetables or broths it is the first boiling up which brings it to the surface, where it up which brings it to the surface, where it should be quickly skimmed before it is drawn back to separate and disseminate beyond all power of removal.

The telling details of a woman's toilet are the petticoats, shoes and gloves which she wears. The proper observance of the laws governing them is an infallible indication of a woman's station in life and of her social training. A woman minus the finer instincts of the lady, if her source of supply is limited, although her social definer instincts of the lady, if her source of supply is limited, although her social de-mands may not be, invariably economizes in these details. This is not the case with the innately refined woman—a lady bern and bred. She first of all provides herself with well fitting shoes, dainty under-skirts, and what is left in her treasury after providing herself with these funda-mentals goes for the remaining necessaries mentals goes for the remaining necessaries in her wardrobe. Devices and thoughts are misapplied, and the goal of "ladyisms" is defeated when one is obliged to keep one's feet out of sight in consequence et being carelessly shod, or to resort to similar means to hide the shortcomings one's petticoats. - Vogue.

To Stretch a Glove. How very provoking when a glove fits erfectly, save in one place, where it is too ight! A remedy lies in a simple plan used by Frenchwomen, who nearly always buy their gloves a number smaller than they wear and stretch them to a perfect fit. Wring out a towel or handkerchief, fresh from its drawer, in clean water. Lay the glove between the folds of linen until the skin is thoroughly damp through, then h on a glove stretcher. If the whole love is too small, all of it should be wet, but if it is too tight only in certain pla say the wrist or the fingers, then the wrist or fingers only should be dampened, the rest of the skin left dry. This process will not injure the most delicate shade of color in kid or suede gloves. The only precau tion needed is to be sure the hands of the operator and the water used are absolutely clean, then lavender, gray, cream and even white gloves may be so treated with impu-

A Safe Remedy.

Where a little child is inclined to constipation and it is the desire of the mother not to begin by giving it medicine, the following simple remedy will be found effectual, and is commendable, as it contains no drugs of any kind: Put 8 tablespoonfuls of sweet cream in a cup or saucer (do not use tin) on the stove, allowing it to cook slowly till a

The Right Sort of Teacher For Girls. The wisest and most helpful teacher is not the one whom the girls themselves "rave over" and find most "magnetic."
It is she who carefully avoids the appeal to the emotions, and who, without repelling the affections, knows how to check hysterical excess and keep the young naure cool and steady by a delicate reserve and a gentle decision at the first indication of need. It is a curious fact in psychology-or is it physiology-that while hero worship is a good thing for a boy it is seldom a good thing for a girl.—Helen Watterson Moody in Scribner's.

Clear starching is accomplished in this way to the best advantage: Wash the ar-ticles in three waters, dry them and dip them in a thick starch previously strained through muslin. Squeeze them, shake them gently and again hang them up to dry. When dry, dip them twice or thrice in clear water, squeeze them, spread them on a linen cloth, roll them up in it and let them lie an hour before ironing them. A small piece of white wax added to the starch prevents the iron from sticking and gives a glossy surface to the material

As his services were valued, he succeeded in effecting the change demanded, and the patient soon began to improve. As a matter of fact, says a medical writer, not one woman in a hundred breathes normally. The respiration of the average woman varies with every change of mental tate or physical condition, and it is a rare thing for a woman to use her lungs to the test possible advantage without a previous knowledge of physiology and an apprecia-tion of the merits of physical culture. The following are some excellent rules for improving the respiration and bringing it up to a normal condition: Stand at an open window or recline on a couch, with the waist and chest unconfined; held the chest walls high and inhale in slow, long breaths; exhale as slowly, three times only at first. Gradually the number of times may be increased and the time longthened for the breathing exercises. Fifteen minutes, twice a day at least, should be devoted to this exercise to accomplish the desired result. Mrs. Emma Eames Story, whose full and generous sutlines are a beautiful example of the sesults of vocal and breathing gymnastics, is not only foud of outdoor life, of walking and horseback riding, but the requirements of her art demand continued daily practice of the exercises that develop the muscles of the throat, chest, back and abdomen.

A daughter should never seek or be al-owed to "outdress" her mother. In ev-ery family the mother should be the best

The discarded finery of a daughter should never constitute a mother's ward-robe. The mother who never loses he ueenliness will never lose her crown. Preventable misfortunes consist chiefly manifeld things, little to do, but im

Parents generally receive that measure of filial respect they deserve—not always perhaps, but very generally. When a mother allows her daughter to when a mother allows her daughter to appropriate her wraps, gloves, veils or other articles of personal attire, she begins a policy of familiarity which sooner or later breeds contempt. A respect for one's belongings engenders a respect for their possessor.—Ladies' Home Journal.

To Put Out Clothes on Fire.

There have been such shocking instance of death and injury in the past by clothe atching fire that people of an altruistic pirit are moved to make the danger imressive and offer a means of pre-It is well to show the means of compara tive safety and exhort the public to employ them. To cultivate presence of mind in children when burning accidents occur is good, but perhaps more difficult than to clothe them in slow burning fabrics. The fire drill in schools is a good thing because it tends to reduce the danger of panic, but to teach young children control of their culties and the exercise of judgment when actually attacked by fire is not easy Still, presence of mind is common enough even in childhood, to make the experime of cultivating it worth trying. If the child whose clothes catch fire, or the grown person either, would wrap some beavy stuff about the flames or roll over on the ground, the fire would soon be extinguished, while running only adds to the danger. Muslins and tarlatans, the most inflammable goods, when treated with tungstate of soda, cannot be made to burn with a blaze. If all cotton dresse and underclothing, especially those of chil-dren, could be treated in this way, a great number of lives would be saved and much uffering prevented. - Woman's Journal.

When Children Ask Questions. A lawyer in high standing and thoughtful father says that whenever h can give a simple explanation he does so; that if he cannot he confesses frankly that the matter is too difficult to explain and too hard for the child to understand. If he does not know, he admits his ignorance promptly, but adds that he will try to find out. James Sally mentions the case of a little girl 4% years old who chased her mother into one of the most abstrusproblems of inetaphysics. She saw a wasp on the window pane and desired to touch it. Her mother said: "No, you must not. It will sting you." The child queried "Why doesn't it sting the glass". The mother answered, "Because the glass can't feel." Again the child queried, "Why doesn't the glass feel?" Again the mother answered, "Because it has no nerves." And again the child queried, "Why do nerves feel?" Sully fails to give the mother's answer at this the most critical point. He merely adds that children must be exercised in taking some truths on trust without aking the why of everything, and quotes George Eliot, who says somewhere, "Reason about everything with your child, you make him a monster, without reverence, without affections."—New York Teacher's Quarterly.

The Society Girl.

Taste, grace, kindliness, the art of put-ting people at their case, the ready jest, the quick repartee, belong to the outfit of the society girl. A certain dainty finish distinguishes her. She has saveir faire. She is not readily thrown from her poise. Her background is secure, and she has the immense advantage of knowing that her world is at her feet. Her mother, always world is at her feet. Her mother, always at her side, judicious, considerate, affectionate, probably contentedly allows herself to be thrown into the shade by this second self, who seems to her the very crown and flower of her life. The father, the brothers, the cousins of the slender sweet maiden are all intensely proud of her and the first simply lives to serve her. ber, and the first simply lives to serve her. to gratify her caprices, to furnish her with money, to wear her on his heart as one wears a white rosebud on his buttonhole But, being an American father, he would resent with scorn the allegation that his fair daughter is merely an ornament. He knows her underlying strength, her knows her underlying strength, her re-serves of force, her possibilities. If the need comes, this father will tell you that his girl could and would do just what his boys have done. She would go into busi-ness and make a fortune or at least hold her own among fortune makers.—Harper's mean her entire costume, but not when you refer to one particular part of it. You might just as well call her headgear her 'dress' as her frock. It is quite as much a part of it. A 'man's dress' is as permissible an expression as a 'woman's dress,' implying, as it does, not skirts alone, but the complete attire. It's a case of language, no less than mathematics, sanctioning the proposition that the whole is greater than any of its parts.'

Cooking and Skimming.

One of the niceties of cooking which mark the difference between the expert and the novice, or the careful and the careless cook, is found in the operation of skimming. Many cooks cannot skim successfully. They do not get all the grease sff the soup, and they fail to touch just the right moment for attacking the soum which rises on the first boiling up of post-toes and other vegetables. Soup should be skimmed patiently and thoroughly, and at the last moment any globules of grease that remain before pouring it into the turens should be taken up with a piece of clean blotting paper, held edgewise. Grease from the invalid's cup of beaf tea or from a bowl of gravy can be remerved in the same manner. For the scum from vegetables or broths it is the first boiling up which brings it to the surface, where it should be quickly skimmed before it is drawn back to separate and disseminate beyond all power of removal. Cooking and Skimming.

The telling details of a woman's toilet are the petticeats, shoes and gloves which she wears. The proper observance of the laws governing them is an infallible indication of a woman's station in life and of her social training. A woman minus the finer instincts of the lady, if her source of supply is limited, although her social demands may not be, invariably economizes in these details. This is not the case with the innately refined woman—a lady bern and bred. She first of all provides herself with well fitting shoes, dainty underskirts, and what is left in her treasury after providing herself with these fundamentals goes for the remaining necessaries in her wardrobe. Devices and thoughts are misapplied, and the goal of "ladyima" are misapplied, and the goal of "ladylsm" is defeated when one is obliged to kee one's feet out of sight in consequence of being carelessly shod, or to resort to sim-ilar means to hide the shortcomings of one's petticoats. - Vogue.

To Stretch a Glove. How very provoking when a glove fits erfectly, save in one place, where it is too ight! A remedy lies in a simple plan used by Frenchwomen, who nearly always buy their gloves a number smaller than they wear and stretch them to a perfect fit. Wring out a fowel or handkerchief, fresh from its drawer, in clean water. Lay the glove between the folds of linen until the skin is thoroughly damp through, then stretch on a glove stretcher. If the whole leve is too small, all of it should be wet, but if it is too tight only in certain places. say the wrist or the fingers, then the wrist or fingers only should be dampened, the rest of the skin left dry. This process will not injure the most delicate shade of color in kid or suede gloves. The only precaution needed is to be sure the hands of the operator and the water used are absolutely clean, then lavender, gray, cream and even white gloves may be so treated with impu-

A Safe Remedy. Where a little child is inclined to constipation and it is the desire of the mother not to begin by giving it medicine, the following simple remedy will be found effectual, and is commendable, as it contains no drugs of any kind:

Put 3 tablespoonfuls of sweet cream in a cup or saucer (do not use tin) on the store, allowing it to cook slowly till a thick scum is seen on the top. Remove this and beneath will be found a thin oil, which give when cooled in doses of a teaspoonful at a time till the desired effect is produced. If the case is severe, larger doses may be given without any bad results. This is not in the least an unpleasant dose. - Housekeeper.

The Right Sort of Teacher For Girls. The wisest and most helpful teacher is not the one whom the girls themselves 'rave over' and find most "magnetic. It is she who carefully avoids the appeal to the emotions, and who, without repelling the affections, knows how to check hysterical excess and keep the young naure cool and steady by a delicate reserve and a gentle decision at the first indication of need. It is a curious fact in psychology-or is it physiology-that while here wership is a good thing for a boy it is seldom a good thing for a girl.-Helen Watterson Moody in Scribner's.

Clear Starching.

Clear starching is accomplished in this way to the best advantage: Wash the articles in three waters, dry them and dip them in a thick starch previously strained through muslin. Squeeze them, shake them gently and again hang them up to dry. When dry, dip them twice or thrice n clear water, squeeze them, spread then on a linen cloth, roll them up in it and let them lie an hour before ironing them. A small piece of white wax added to the starch prevents the iron from sticking and gives a glossy surface to the material.

Children's Character "There are fwo traits of character 1 should do my numest to develop if I had children to bring up," says a woman who meets many different people. BLACK PATTI'S TROURADOURS.

The highest tokens of approval mark it has appeared and its performances are said to be a revelation. The stage idea is a very happy and novel one. In the first part rollicking fun accompanied by up to date singing, dancing prevails, and in the operatic finale "Black Patti" lends her glorious voice in the rendition of one of the most at-tractive musical schemes ever offered to a public. This embraces reminiscences from "Faust," "Carmen," "Trovatore." Bohemian Girl." "Maritana," tron, 'Bohemian Girl,' 'Maritana,'
'Daughters of the Regiment,'
'Lucci,' 'Rigoletto' and 'Tar and
Tar Tar. It is a happy mediev of the best selections of the grand and comis opera magnificently sung by fifty artists clothed in beautiful costumes and surrounded with appropriate stage effects.

There was a full meeting of the club last evening, Manager John Piggott presiding.

A resolution of regret at the treatment accorded the Windsor club by some hoodlums in this city was adopted and ordered to be forwarded.

An assertion in the St. Thomas Journal that the members of the Chatham club were the rotten-eggers, was handed to Solicitor J. B. Rankin, with instructions to demand an apology. If the apology is not forthcoming a writ will be issued.

The sensational report in the Windsor Record was also condemned as grossly exaggerated.

THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY

Shareholders.

London, Nov. 4.—(Special).—The official report of the directors of the G. T.
R., just issued, together with the statement of the accounts for the half year ending June 30, 1897, is a very meteresting document, and a carefult pernsal shows that the G.T.R., whatever this great institution has been in the past is now run as a commercial enterprise.
Mr. Chas. M. Hays, the Gen.—Manager, came to Canada at the instance of the President of the company. Sir Chares Rivers-Wilson, apparently on the understanding that the road should be kept up to the American standard and at the same time that expenses should be cut down to the finest point. Mr. Hays has succeeded in carrying out his trust, because, during the six months in question, the working expenses have been cut down from 71.34 per cent. of the gross receipts to 67.49 per cent. of the gross receipts to 67.49 per cent. of the gross receipts for the corresponding half year. This decrease means a saving to the shareholders of £55.677. To give Canadians an id a of the magnitude of the work the St. Louis man has tackled it is only necessary to state that the gross receipts for the six months were £1,722.491, as compared with £1,707,540 for the corresponding six months of the year previous, while for the six months were £1,162.568, as compared with £1,218.245 for the corresponding period of last year. It is only fair to give Mr. Hays credit for this increased business, as he has hustled for it. Thus it will be seen that in the decreased operating expenses and increased receipts which are directly under the control of the General Manager, the shareholders were better off by £70.628—or $345,000 in round Canadian figures—at the end of the six months ending June 30, 1897, than they were as com-control of the General Manager, the shareholders were better off by 170.628—or $345,000 in round Canadian figures—at the end of the six months ending June 30, 1897, than they were as compared with the corresponding six months of 1896, which proves that the Grand Trunk Railway is making steady progress towards bettering the shareholders condition. It speaks well for the care ful management in detail exerce sed by Mr. Hays. A peculiar feature of the report, however, is that Mr. Hays shines in the freight business. While the company's passenger traffic decreased during the six months—by 0.12 per cent the freight traffic increased by 1.49 per cent. This, it is altogether probable, is due to the discontinuance of periodical suburban tickets and to the fight that the new General Manager has put up for the through freight traffic carried by the Grand Trunk from Uncle Sam's western domain to the seaboard.

resulted in the Oxford movement, the Tractarian controversy, and the going over to Roman Catholicism of many of those engaged in the movement. That was the path John lienry Newman took, and in course of time he resigned his position in the Church of England, became a priest in the Catholic church, the founder of a monastic establishment, the Birmingham oratory and subsequently a Cardinal of the Roman church.

The younger brother, equally gifted and learned, took a different course. Both began by a strong aniagonism to the Catholic church and to sacerdotalism in general. John Henry Newman was gradually drawn by his spiritual nature in the direction of the church he began by hating and of which he died one of its brightest ornaments. Francis William, equally spiritual and conscientious, studied himself into a deeper distrust of sacerdotalism, and coincidently into doubt of the soundness of theological dogmas.

At the age of 25 he gave up the idea of taking holy orders, and resigned his fellowship of Balliol coilege from conscientious scruples on the subject of infant baptism. He went to Bagdad to assist in Christian missionary work, but conscientious doubts of his fitness for the work, caused his speedy retirement, and he returned to England to engage in the work of classical teaching, in which he continued until 1863, During that period and since, Professor Newman continued his investigations and reflections on religious matters, and drifted as far away in the direction of freedom of religious thought from the common starting point of their youth as his elder brother had gone in the direction of absolute dogma. His numerous works show a steady progress from orthodox Trinitarianism to pure Theism. He long ago ceased to call himself a Christian, and his position, as stated by himself, some years since, was that of

How It Came to Hang With Two Other sting sketch of the career of Charles In Her Dining Room-The Great Poet's Interest In the Cause of Greece-Grief at His Untimely Death.

Between the windows of a pleasant Chicago dining room hang three crossed weapons. Worthy companion blades are these, each drawn in the cause of freedom—two by plain Maine Yankees and one by an English peer. They and her father's portrait are the most cherished possessions of a gentle, white haired widow. They are the precious relics she strained every nerve to save on that Oc-York, in 1833, and arriving there, reached Buffalo by way of the Hudson River and Erie Canal. A fellow passenger on board the vessel had engaged him to go with him to work at 88 per month. The gentleman located in Beverley township, and there the sower immigrant first made acquisint. tober day a quarter of a century back when she saw her home and her husband's business and the whole great city go up in flame.

One weapon is a yataghan gallantly wielded by her father in the war for Grecian independence; another is a plain United States army saber, worn by her husband in our own civil war; the third was carried by a more illustrious and a more unhappy though no braver soldier, George Gordon Noel Byron, sixth Lord Byron of Rochdale and greatest poet of his age.

This one has an embossed silver scabbard, a Damascus blade with a golden sentence in Arabic engraved upon it, which it chances has never been trans lated. It may be something quite com-monplace—"Great is Allah, and Mohamgeant. When the company was dismissed in 1839, Mr. Grant and his family returned to England, where, upon presenting his recommendations signed by the officers of the 1st Kent Militia, and Col. Chechester, commander of the Western district, to Lord Surrey, late Duke of Norfolk, he got a situation in the excise department, doing duty first at Brighton, and then near Red Hill, charging duty on bricks used in two tunnels. He then went to London, thence to Glouchester, where he remained until 1851. In that year Mr. Grant and family returned to Canada, locating at Ridgetown, where he has since remained. In 1832 he was appointed township clerk of Howard. Mr. Grant hold a commission as Ensign in the 1st Battalion of Kent Miltia, dated April 2, 1837, as Lieutenant and Adjutant of the same battalion, dated November 11, 1838, and now ranks as Captain and Adjutant, of the same. These commissions were given by Sir Edmund Walker Bond Head, Governor-General of British North America.

During the Fenian troubles of 1866 med is his prophet"—or perhaps the mere name of the maker. Still it never has been translated and adds one more element of romance to the coronet and the initial B upon the hilt.

Byron, as every one knows, never lived to draw that sword himself for Greece, though he threw himself into Greece, though he threw himself into her quarrel full of military ardor, though he gave her his fortune, his mighty name and in the end his life. As his friend Trelawney wrathfully puts it, he was induced to stick for three months at Missolonghi, "that mud bank, shut in by a circle of stag-nant pools which might be called the bolt of death."

Here he raised loans, drilled troops negotiated the release of prisoners, la-bored to reconcile the various Greek factions, faithfully performed all the less showy parts of war, till fever clutched him, and suddenly the news of his death shocked Europe. It was the extinction of a luminary at the zenith. It was the useless sacrifice of a splendid genius in the prime of fame and of manhood. Scott said it seemed as if the world had come to an end. No man but Napoleon an auction of the effects of a young Greek captain to whom Byron had presented it shortly before his death. Colonel Miller lent the sword and some valuable costumes to one Castinos, an errant Greek lecturer. His lecture tour over, Castinos sailed back to his own country without troubling himself to return these borrowings. All trace of them was lost, and one would suppose America had seen the last of Byron's sword.

Colonel Miller's daughter was but a child at this time. She grew up. was married to Abijah Keith and took up her residence in Chicago. In 1853, long after her father's death, she was traveling with her husband in Greece, being everywhere well received out of respect for his memory, and the desire to get back the sword he had valued so highly grew upon her. One day in the Mediterranean boat she was led to speak about it to a Greek fellow traveler. It seemed an absurd and useless thing to ask him if he chanced to know a Greek named Christopher Plato Castinos.

"Absurd or not," said he, "I know the man. He is keeping school in the island of Syro.

To Syro accordingly the travelers proceeded. Here the American consul proved to be Mr. Evangelides, the adopted brother of Julia Ward Howe. He stood ready to do anything in his power for friends of Dr. Howe. Castinos was seen and made no difficulty about returning the prize, with humble apolo gies. Mr. James Ross, the millionaire contractor, who has just returned from the west, says regarding the proposed Winnipeg and Duluth Railway scheme: "The enterprise is absurd, and if carried out will bring financial disaster to the province. The friends of the scheme are not the farmers and business men of Manitoba, but rather certain people who have already had dealings with the Manitoba Government." Mr. Ross says that the people will not soon forget the agitation which culminated in the entry of the Nomeron Pacific into Winnipeg, with the fesuit that the Canadian Pacific retained their business and the with the result that the Canadian Pa-cific retained their business and the Northern Pacific got little or no traffic from Manitoba. He added that paulic must not forget that the Northern Pa-cific has already connections with Du-luth, and is thus so beneficial to Win-nipeg and the province at large that an-other road should not be subsidized. No doubt, he declares, the promoters of the Winnipeg and Duluth will make a good thing out of the bonds, but the rea-will be ever a burden upon the people
