good."-Eec. xi. 6. Sow ye beside all waters, Where the dew of heaven may fall; Ye shall reap, if ye be not weary, For the Spirit breathes o'er all.

Sow, though the thorns may wound thee, One wore the thorns for thee; And though the cold world scorn thee, Patient and hopeful be.

Sow ye beside all waters, With a blessing and a prayer; Name Him whose band upholdeth thee; And sow thou everywhere. Sow where the applicht sheddeth

Its warm and cheering ray, For the rain of heaven descendeth, When the sunbeams pass away. Sow when the tempest lowers,

For calmer days will break,

And the seed, in darkness nourished, A goodly plant may make. Sow when the morning breaketh In beauty o'er the land, And when the evening falleth.

Withhold not thou thine hand. Sow, though the rock repel thee, In its cold and sterile pride; Some cleft there may be riven,

Where the little seed may hide Feer not, for some will flourish, And, though the tears abound, Like the willows by the waters,

Will the scatter'd grain be found. Work! while the daylight lasteth, Ere the shades of night come en ; Ere the Lord of the viueyard cometh,

And the laborer's work is done.

Work! in the wild waste places, Though none they love may own; God guides the down of the thistle The wandering wind hath sown.

Will Jesus chide thy weskness Or call thy labor vain? The word that for Him thou bearest Shall return to Him again.

On! with thine heart in heaven. Thy strength-the Master's might. Till the wild waste places blossom In the warmth of a Saviour's light. Sow by the wayside gladly,

In the damp, dark caverns low, Where the sunlight seldom reacheth, Nor healthful steamlets flow;

Where the withering air of poison Is the young bud's earliest breath. And the wild, unwholesome blossom Bears in its beauty-" Death."

The ground impure, o'ertrodden By life's disfiguring years; Though blood and guilt have stained it, May yet be sofi from tears.

Watch not the clouds above thee. Let the whirlpool round thee sweep; Gad may the seed-time give thee,

But another's hand may resp. Have faith, though never beholding The seed burst from its tomb;

Thou know'st not which may perish, Or what be spared to bloom. Room on the narrowest ridges

The ripen'd grain will find, That the Lord of the harvest coming, In the harvest sheaves may bind.

" I Come Again." A dear child who had early learned to love the Lord Jeaus, was sometimes led astray by the exceeding liveliness of her disposition, and brought in condemnation by trifling words and ways. Her mother, a christian lady of eminent piety, one day witnessing Margaret's levity. asked her, how she reconciled it with the enjoyment of a present sense of pardon. " I do not attempt to reconcile them mother," Margaret replied, " I come again."

I come again; to the open fountain, to the speaking blood, to the interceding Saviour. In some blessed measure Margaret had learnt the lesson taught by St. John : " My little children these things write I unto you, that ye sin not, and if any man sin, we have an advocate with salary. Of course, there is no excuse for brusqueness on the part of the physician; he ought to be gentle and kind. But if his sympathies become too deeply enlisted, his judgment will fail him, and for this reason. physicians generally, we believe, do not practice in their own families. It must also be remembered that ground for complaint is not confined to the patient. The doctor is sometimes tried by the unreasonable and impossible things that are required of him; by the failure to attend to his directions, and by the hard work he sometimes has to collect his bills. The English plan of collecting at each visit would save a vast amount of trouble here. The amount of money actually given away by the physicians of this country in gratuitous practice, and in practice that never pays, must be enormous. Some consider a doctor's bill a sacred debt, while many consider it as an imposition not to be submitted instructive paper on this topic was read by the Sid inst., in Brunswick Street Church, before the Young Men's Weslevan Institute of this city. The Rev. lecturer showed that true worth consists not in what a man has, be it large possessions or the heritage of a name which the deeds of others have made illustrious, but in what he is. The importance of attention to the physical in connection with the mental and moral was dwelt upon. The difference between character and reputation was pointed out, and the common desire rather to appear than to be good rebuked. Neither high social position nor great mental power was abbrightest examples of this were found in the walks of lowly life. Integrity and conscience were essentials; nor could the character referred to be acquired without industry, frugality, and definiteness of purpose. Since "the Christian is the highest style of man," our full moral stature could never be attained without a loving and obedient faith in the world's Redeemer.

This is of course a very meagre sketch of lengthy paper, which, apart from the excellence of its matter, was distinguished sometimes by the elegance and semi-poetry, and at others by the straight-forwarrdness and vigor of its style. On some topics which are not often alluded to in public addresses, remarks were made that might very well be repeated in the hearing of young men exposed to the snares of city life. It is well sometimes to "call a fig, a fig; and a spade, a spade." Nothing could be added to the panegyric passed upon Her Majesty and the princes." late Prince Consort; whether anything might better have been modified or omitted is another question. With all our loyalty, and with all our gratitude to God for so good a Sovereign, we could not help feeling that some passages were a little too strong. But perhaps we do not make sufficient allowance for the poetic element. It just occurs to us that of a king and prince of the olden time who fell in battle, it was said or sung,-" They were swifter than eagles; they

The Bible and Creeds.

The Bible is recognized by all who accept the divinity of its teachings as the supreme creed book. God is its author. He speaks on its pages. He inspired its sublime revealings-This makes it the highest law-the supreme and life. By its utterances all human creeds, proved and condemned. As men differ, and will differ, in their interpretations of Bible teachings, is it right for them to conformity to them for the better erdering of the Church? To us this not only seems right, but the only right way. Our chief reason for this is the diversity of views prevailing among men All Christian sects and peoples have a creed written or unwritten, as an expression of their views in Bible teachings. The 'no-creed men' have as wellfas the 'creed men;' and usually the Their shibboleth is law. Any want of conformone of these 'no-creed men' expressed his surcreed. Star Life Assurance Society.

Extract from the " Methodist Times" of London " This journal has invariably been the faithful advecate of those institutions of commerce and philanthrophy, which have been founded in honor, and conducted with care and integrity, and never perhaps, was there greater need than now for the exercise of watchfulness and judge ment in distinguishing the genuine from the unreal-the sound from the unscund-end the human perception can penetrate, aided by the conducting our readers through the remarkable career of the Star Life Assurance Society, which held its 25th Annual gathering on the first of est clustered around this meeting, for it was the fifth quirquennial period; stock had been taken; the liabilities and assets had been carefully as certained, and the meeting had to learn whether the rate of progress of former years had been £122.000 sterling, distributed 5 years ago, was to be rivalled by the surplus now at the disposal of the Society.

The Secretary who had investigated the affairs. aided by Mr. Brown, the President of the instithis question, by announcing a surplus of £191. the bonus declared in 1864—this result being scarcely have anticipated; for the magnificent sum of £431,310 sterling has been given to policy holders, as the available surplus, after the payment of all claims and expenses, and setting aside a reserved fund of more than three quarters of a million pounds sterling, as the present value of all possible contingencies. Such figures must be highly gratifying to the Directors and ali concerned, and at the same time they are valuable as evidence of the large margin which can be realized by a Society composed almost exclusively of recognized members of the christian church.

We would not overlook that department which of all others perhaps has inspired the greatest confidence in this Society, viz, the prompt and honorable payment of claims by death, The sum of £612,081 sterling has been paid to representatives of departed members. Although healthy when received the icy touch has chilled the current flow of life ! and in 25 years this monument of kindly torethought has been erected to the memory of the dead, composed, as it is, of more than £600,000 pounds of solid gold, usalloyed by legal quibbles and undimmed by long delays."

Having been acquainted with the "Star" Life Assurance Society for many years, we cheer. fully add our testimony, and endorse the senti. ments expressed by our contemporary, more especially as this institution is so closely allied to Methodism, and it is with much pleasure we commend it to the careful and earnest considepeople particularly we beg to call attention to the advertisement in another column.

For the Provincial Wesleyan.

MR. EDITOR,-The Christian Messenger of the 28th ult. has just made its appearance. In one of its columns I notice " Quotations on Baptism from Eminent Pedobaptist writers, by D. O. Parker." From the Rev. John Wesley's Notes upon the New Testament, there is cited the passage, so unfailingly referred to by the advocates of dipping, viz., Rom., vi. 4, " We are buried with him, alluding to the ancient manner of baptizing by immersion." Hon. D. O. Parker ought to know, that his adducing this passage to prove dipping, lays him open to the charge of tampering with witnesses. He ought to remember, that Dr. Cramp's pamphlet gave occasion, a few years ago, for a scrutiny of the passage, by which it appeared, that reference was made in the "note" not to Christian but to Jewish baptism; the word "ascient" dating back, not from Mr. Wesley, but from Paul. This proposition Dr. Cramp could not disprove, neither could be defend himself from the charge of misrepresentation when he placed the "note" on the title-page of his pamphlet.

D. O. Parker will please make a " note" of Rev. John Davis, and other erratic teachers, to doubt "the body of divinity" we accept and experienced. Sometimes it is worse than the whose zeal has unfortunately led them so far

BY BARBARA AUFRECHT. Grandmother sits in her easy chair, Sofily humming some old-time air : And as she sings her needles keep pace With the smiles that flit over her wrinkled face While the firelight flickers and fades away, And comes again, like the breaking day.

From morning till evening she knits and sings, While ever the pendulum tireless swings The moments around, with its tick and stroke, Nor hastes for the festal, nor lags for the yoke And Grandmother never repines at her fate Of being the last at the "Crystal Gate."

Husband, and daughters, and sons all there, Wearing the "crown" and the "garments fair; Singing the songs that will never tire. And swelling the chorus of Heaven's choir,-But patiently, hopefully, bides the time That shall bring her at last to a fairer clime.

'Tis good upon childhood's face to see The trustful look, from all doubting free; But better, by far, when the sands of life Are nearly run out, and the world's vain strift Is hushed to an echo, again to see The trustful expression of infancy.

Grandmother's chair will be vacant soon, For the rays of life slant far past noon; But yonder in Heaven she'll sing again, Joining the evermore glad refrain, Wearing the "crown" and the "garments fair," While we mournfully stand by her vacant chair. -Moore's Rural New-Yorker.

The Oiled Feather.

'Come, bring me the oil flask, there's a pet. said Samuel Parson to his wife, as he finished screwing on a new lock to his front door. Sam, he liked, but he used to think that it was a great own farm yard. There was Jenny, his wife, reashame that women are called all sorts of pretty dy to meet him with a kies; and there was Tomnames before they were married, but none afterwarus. The Chinese Yam.

William R. Prince, Nurseries, Flushing, New when I said to her one morning, as the day was York, has just published in pamphlet form, complete history of this great Chinese esculent which furnishes the most nutritious food for over 350 millions of people who never eat meat There are more than fifty varieties, comprising every form-round ovate, oval, oblong and very long; and they are of different colors-snow white, pale straw, yellow and pink tinge. It yields continual annual crops, without replanting. It is destined to supersede the potatoe i our Northern, Eastern and Western States, and in all Northern countries of the earth. The following are among the claims sets forth :

1st. Its great hardinood, and the capacity of withstanding the cold of the severest winters in the open ground.

2nd. Its facility and simplicity of culture, its adaptation to all soits, and especially to such as have hitherto been deemed barren and value-

3rd. Its productiveness and cheapness, which far exceed the Potato, the crop being 600 to 800 pushels to the acre.

4th. Its nutritious and farinacious qualities, comprising all the essential constituents of an seculent of the highest alimentary character Its combination of nitrogen, which gives to it a most distinctive character, equivalent to meat and wheat combined, and thus rendering the use of mest, as food, entirely unnecessary. 5th. Its unexceptional excellence of fisvor and freedom from all insipid taste. 6th. Its long keeping and freedom from rot or decay, in the ground or out of it, and its retention of its excellence for more than a year. 7th. It is a purifying and highly nutritions constitutional food, capable of developing the muscular power of man to its fullest capacity. 8th. The root being perfectly hardy, the crop when so desired, may be allowed to remain dur ing the entire winter in the open ground.
