STRONG RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

Board of Trade Takes Up Matter of Treadgold Concession—Insists Upon Necessity of Complete Cancellation—Wants All Concessions Dealt With by the Government.

The powers that be at Ottawa are not to be permitted to forget that the people of the Yukon are firmly convinced that concessions are a bad thing and should be cancelled. At a meeting of the Board of Trade last night it was decided to send a telegram to Ottawa insisting that a commission be appointed to inquire not only fully into the Treadgold concession but into all concessions now being held in this country. The telegram was forwarded today.

The meeting last night was not largely attended but what it lacked in numbers it made up in earnestness, especially after the subjects of concessions came up. President H. C. Macaulay presided. The usual routine business was presented by Secretary Cornack and disposed of. The latter's resignation which was presented at the former meeting being by unanimous vote relegated to obscurity. Mr. Cornack thanked the board for its manifestation of confidence in him. Mr. Rosenthal and Abe Ritzwiler were elected members of the board. The subject of concessions was brought up by the following resolution introduced by Mr. J. L. Timmins.

Whereas by the placer discoveries of the year 1896 and succeeding years gold deposits of great extent and richness have been shown to exist in the Klondike region of the Yukon territory. And whereas it is necessary for the prosperity of the inhabitants of said Klondike region that the same be open to the occupation of the individual placer miner and be not granted to concessionaires who do little or nothing towards the working of the same.

And whereas large parts of said Klondike region have been obtained by concessionaires through misrepresentation and fraud and have been granted to them in error and improvidence. And whereas by petition of the 14th day of August, 1900, the evils of the closing of the said region to the placer miner and the granting of the same to concessionaires was pointed out to his excellency the governor general of Canada by the citizens of the Yukon territory.

And whereas notwithstanding all protests, the government of the Dominion of Canada have persisted in a policy of closing said region to the placer miner and granting the same in large tracts in concessions most detrimental to the prosperity of the Klondike.

And whereas as a consummation of said policy on the 13th and 20th days of June and the 7th day of December, 1901, and the 21st day of April, 1902, the whole remaining parts of the Klondike basin was granted as a concession to Messrs. Treadgold, Barwick and Orr Ewing, and said grant to the present has not been rescinded although vigorous protests have been made against the said concession by the entire population of the Yukon territory.

And whereas the people of this territory at parliamentary election have voted for a cancellation of said "Treadgold concession" and other concessions obtained by fraud. And whereas in the month of March, 1903, this Board of Trade petitioned for the complete cancellation of said Treadgold concession, and in the month of April, 1903, published a small pamphlet setting out in a brief manner the history and effect of granting said Treadgold and other iniquitous concessions.

And whereas in the said month of March, 1903, the petitions of this Board were strongly seconded and endorsed by the elective members of the Yukon council and the Liberal Association of the city of Dawson. And whereas in the Yukon council on the 15th day of May, 1903, all the elective members voted for a resolution demanding cancellation of said Treadgold concession.

And whereas previous commissions into the Yukon territory have been of little benefit to the territory owing to the limitations placed upon the scope and powers of same and the fact that the commissioners have been officials of the government of Canada without the independent standing necessary to inspire public confidence. Therefore be it resolved: That this Board of Trade do continue to vigorously protest against and demand a complete and immediate cancellation of the Treadgold concession and also all other concessions in the Yukon territory containing rich placer mining ground.

And that if a commission be appointed that it have power to require not only into the Treadgold concession but into all so-called hydraulic concessions and all government abuses in the Yukon territory. And that the member for the Yukon territory in the house of commons at Ottawa be appointed a member of that commission.

And that all questions before said commission be deemed relevant if pertaining to the subject then before said commission, and the answers to which would tend to show something beneficial or detrimental to the interests of the Yukon territory, even though it did not tend to incriminate any official of the government.

And that reasonable provisions be made under proper restrictions for the hearing by said commission of opinion and hearsay evidence. President Macaulay opened the discussion of the resolution by stating that the Board of Trade should continue its opposition to the Treadgold concession, that he was opposed to sending any wire to Ottawa, as that would be somewhat presumptuous in view of the fact that a commission had already been appointed to come here and investigate the concession situation, that in his opinion the proper thing to do is to appoint a strong committee here of members of the board and others to prepare data, and thus be able to supply the commission with information, facts and figures regarding the octopus when its members reach here from Ottawa.

Mr. J. E. Lilly asked what could be presented in the way of a scheme to secure a water supply in lieu of Treadgold's proposition. Mr. Lilly thought that the Treadgold plan would not be such a disastrous one if carried out. He believed, however, that he should be made to represent his claims the same as the individual miner.

Mr. Joseph Macgillivray said in reply to Mr. Lilly that water can not be put on the hills with steam at a price the miners can afford to pay; that Treadgold never calculated on furnishing more than 1100 inches of water; that 50 inches would be required for a sluice head and at the rate Treadgold was authorized to charge, $6 per inch per day, it would cost $900 per day for a sluiceway. Mr. Macgillivray stated that a company in Detroit, Mich., represented in Dawson by O. B. Brenner, is ready to put in a water system here that will carry 5000 inches of water and furnish it at $1.50 per inch which would make a sluiceway cost but $75 per day instead of $300 as Treadgold's grant gives him permission to charge.

The Detroit Company asks for no concessions, claims of grants further than the right to construct and operate a water plant. President Macaulay said he regarded the Boyle concession as more infamous than that of Treadgold on account of the great wealth of timber embraced therein, and Mr. Macgillivray said "the Treadgold and Boyle concessions were virtually the same thing."

Mr. R. H. S. Creswell thought Macgillivray's information regarding the Detroit company should be laid before the commission when it arrives from Ottawa. Mr. Timmins stated that a Dawson firm will start a fund to pay Treadgold $50,000 to drop his concession and gave it as his opinion that he would be glad to take it and quit. Mr. T. G. Wilson said the people of British Columbia once rose up in arms and forced the government to cancel a concession and recommended that the same thing be done here. Mr. Macgillivray stated that Treadgold had stated on the streets of Dawson with a broad way of his hand: "Every merchant here, must eventually come to me." This statement was made to show that it is the intention of Treadgold to manipulate the entire business of the country when he once starts operations. After further discussion of concessions in general the resolution of Mr. Timmins was passed as it appears above.

Mail Superintendent Pulham today wired J. H. Rogers of the W. P. & Y. R. yesterday received a telegram from his son informing him that his wife is ill, though not serious, at their home in Victoria. Mr. Rogers today wired for further information but up to 3:30 o'clock had received no answer. The agent expects his seventeen-year-old son to arrive in Dawson as soon as his mother is somewhat improved so he can leave her.

The Wicked Flee. The merry war on men having no visible means of support but who live from the avails of prostitution is still going on and consternation reigns in the ranks of the low and dissolute. Two members of this class left town yesterday by the steamer Tyrrell, they having decided that Dawson is no longer a congenial place for them. They will stop at Fortymile and catch the first steamer for down river.

MINISTER'S ANSWER

Reply Received to Commissioner's Query. Commissioner Congdon a day or two ago received a reply from the attorney general in answer to the message sent upon the motion of Councillor Thompson after his motion to memorialize the governor general re the Treadgold matter had been voted down. The query sent the attorney general was as to how far it would be considered advisable or good judgment for the Yukon council to criticize an act of the government especially as pertaining to the Treadgold matter. The answer received is as follows and it is hardly likely that a memorial such as it was wished should be sent with ever receive the sanction of the council as a body: F. T. Congdon, Commissioner Yukon territory, Dawson, Y. T.

Question submitted is not one of law, but one of propriety, and according to constitutional usage of officer appointed by governor in council could not publicly criticize act of governor in council.

WIRE RECEIVED.

Confirming Report That Commission Will Come

That the report received by wire to the effect that the government had determined to send inside a commission to investigate and look into the Treadgold matter thoroughly is true is shown by a private telegram under date of May 18 by a gentleman who occupies one of the highest positions in the territory. For his own satisfaction he wired the secretary to the prime minister as to the intention of the government and the following is the reply received: "Government decided last Saturday to send at once commission to investigate whole matter."

"You've been sent here by the owners?"

"Better than that, foreman."

"Better than that?"

"I am the owner himself."

"You!"

"Bought the factory from my uncle, Mr. Joel Rexford, last month."

"That's what brought me down here. There was no necessity for advertising the fact. You and Superintendent Hastings are the only men in the village who know about it. I haven't even told Anna."

"The old man twisted his fingers together. His lips trembled."

"I have made a mistake, sir," he muttered, "and I'm sorry for it."

"The young man arose, and paused a little. 'Perhaps we have reached the point where Anna can be called in?'"

"The old man nodded and went to the door."

"Anna," he called.

"She was there in a moment, looking from one to the other with anxious eyes."

"The old man took her hand. 'Anna,' he slowly said, 'the young man wants to marry you.'"

"Yes, father."

"It was natural that I should be anxious about the matter, that I should want to be sure that he was a man worthy of you, my dear."

"Of course, father."

"I have talked with him, and found out who he is, and I am quite willing you should marry him, and I hope you will be very happy."

"Thank you, father, dear," murmured the girl.

"And the younger man stepped forward and took the old man's hand in his firm grasp."

"That was well spoken, foreman," he said.

"W. R. Rose is Cleveland Place Dealer."

Teacher—Now, Johnny, can you tell me how peanuts grow?

The Hague, April 11.—Notifications have been received from the governments of Salvador, Uruguay, Guatemala and Korea of their absence from the Hague convention of 1899.

A Change of Front

The gate clicked as the girl let it swing behind her and turned towards the young man who was advancing through the dusky shadows of the early evening.

"George," she quickly said, "you—you mustn't come here any more. Father is very angry, and there will be trouble unless you stay away."

The young man laughed. "That's nonsense," he said, "arrant nonsense. Did your stepfather think he could frighten me? How am I to see you unless I come here? Pooh, pooh, for your fiery relative. I'll say it to his face if he attempts his high handed ways with me. But there, dear, don't you worry. Come, we'll take a little stroll and let step-papa nurse his wrath until we come back."

"You don't talk seriously, George," said the girl. "Father has a very heavy temper, and when he is angry he is quite beside himself. He wouldn't hesitate at such times to do you any injury that lay in his power."

"I will be right there at the time, my dear girl," laughed the young man, "and fully awake to all the interesting details. But, come, let's talk of something more pleasant. What further delays are you planning?"

"I—I am afraid to speak to father, George," she answered. "I'm such a miserable coward."

The young man softly whistled as they slowly moved down the deeply shaded walk.

"Is that the cause of the delay?" he asked. "Well, well. This makes it all the more imperative for me to speak to your father at an early date—an extremely early date."

"You must be so careful, George," she said. "Conciliate him first before you ask any favors. Don't take any chances, dear."

He laughed again and slyly caught her hand and pressed it.

"My dear girl," he said, "you distress yourself needlessly. I am quite familiar with bad men and men who are out looking for trouble, so that there is nothing terrifying in the outlook. Of course I understand your stepfather's position in the matter. He can't bear the idea of losing you. It would be an expensive matter to replace you. Your esteemed stepfather is a decidedly selfish person, and it would be quite wrong for us to humiliate him."

"Oh, George," said the girl, "you will talk so wildly. But, there, you must go back now. If I stay out any longer he will miss me."

"Wouldn't that be dreadful!" laughed the young man. "Wonder what he will do when he misses you for good and all? Now, mark my words. There'll be no room in our little home for that stepfather of yours. That's one thing I must insist upon."

The girl paused a little way from the gate.

"Now go, George, dear," she murmured, but he shook his head.

"I'm not ready yet," he said. "It grates on me a little to be served as if I were a criminal. I fancy I am quite good enough to be treated with ordinary decency in any man's home—more especially the home that shelters the girl of my choice."

"Yes, I know, dear," the girl said. "They were leaning on the gate, the girl on the inside, and the man facing her."

"Say another word, Anna," he laughed, "and I will march right into the lion's den."

There was a heavy step behind the girl and a harsh voice startled them. "Ab, are you there," it said menacingly.

"If you mean me," said the girl in pleading tones.

He waved her aside.

"Go, Anna," said the young man. "I have something to say to your father that he might not want you to hear. Go, dear."

The girl slowly drew back and went up the porch steps.

"You have a high and mighty way about you," said the older man, "that needs combing down a bit."

"We all need a little disciplining at times," said the other, "but still I hardly think you are the man for the job this time, Mr. Jim Maitland."

"I could break you in two and fling you into the street," growled the old man.

He was a burly man with a heavy jaw, a red face and thick gray hair. The young man looked him over with a critical eye in the fast waning light.

"You would find me a somewhat difficult proposition to handle," he said, "even if you do have the advantage of weight. But here," he quickly added as the older man contemptuously snuffed, "there is nothing to be gained by wrangling out here in the street like two fishermen. Let us go in the house and talk this thing over like men."

The burly man stared at the young fellow.

"Very well," he said, "come in. Make the most of it. It will be the last time."

"Do you know," said the young man lightly as he followed the other,

Editor Nugget: Dear Sir,—An impression appears to have become circulated that the production of the opera 'Erminie' by the Dawson Amateur Operatic Society is to be postponed on account of the non-arrival of the orchestra.

Allow me to contradict this impression. The performance will take place as advertised, for four nights commencing on Monday, May 25th, the orchestra having been long ago arranged for.

ADJUDGED INSANE

John J. McDougall to be Sent to Ou sid: Asylum.

John J. McDougall, accounts of whose dementia have previously been published, was this morning adjudged insane by Magistrate Wroughton and remanded awaiting the pleasure of the commissioner who will probably order him removed to the asylum at New Westminster in the near future.

McDougall has steadily grown worse for the past two weeks, his delusions becoming more and more exaggerated every day. The pitiful, pleading manner in which he offered the magistrate one million dollars in cash to release him this morning was very pathetic. He imagines he owns half the mining property of the country and that he has millions of dollars in the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Keene's Setback

Cincinnati, April 16.—At 1 o'clock this afternoon Judge Lorton concluded the reading of his opinion in the suit making application to restrain the Union Pacific from voting its 900,000 shares in the Southern Pacific election and for other relief.

The decision was a refusal to grant the injunction and to afford the relief asked. The opinion, which was quite lengthy, was against the contention of the complainants that the Union Pacific was a necessary or actual party to the suit, even though Chairman Harriman of the Union Pacific Board of Directors had made an affidavit in the case. Being a mere witness in the case did not amount to an appearance by the Union Pacific as a party in the suit.

As to the averment that the Union Pacific was expending the receipts of the Southern Pacific in betterments on the Central Pacific with a view to the ultimate purchase of that road, the court held that all this was specifically denied by the defendants and that even if true it could not be sustained except on a showing that the action was ultra vires. On the whole case the court held that the bill be dismissed.

Senator Foraker, who represented the complainant minority stockholders of the Southern Pacific, gave States court of appeals and asked that, pending the hearing of this appeal, the election of directors of the Southern Pacific be stayed. Lawrence Maxwell and Judge Humphrey, representing the defendants, agreed to that order, inasmuch as to do otherwise would render the appeal ineffective.

It was agreed that the stock holders may meet as agreed and elect a chair man and then adjourn until called by the chairman after the appeal has been disposed of by the court of appeals.

in the grant to Treadgold is incompatible with reasonable progress in the development of the district.)

The exact amount of ground now controlled by Treadgold, the privileges he exercises with respect to representation, renewal, etc., the probable value of the ground as judged by that of surrounding claims—are important points which should be investigated and determined as nearly as possible.

In short, preparations must be made to lay the matter before the commission exactly as is done with a case in court. If as seems probable, the commission is to leave Ottawa in the immediate future, there is no time to be lost in the preparation of material to be used in presenting the case from the point of view of the public.

Unless the commission returns to Ottawa absolutely in favor of the popular view of the question, Treadgold will secure confirmation of his concession.

The board of trade is making an endeavor to have the whole subject of concessions opened before the commission which will shortly be sent to Dawson from Ottawa. It is to be hoped most sincerely that this effort will prove successful. If the fight against the speculators who have succeeded in tying up vast stretches of Yukon's best mining territory can be conducted right here on the ground a showing will be made which should have the effect of cancelling every concession in the district. The matter of compensation would undoubtedly present itself prominently, but so far as most of the concessions are concerned the amount of money thus far expended on them would amount to a mere bagatelle.

The schedule of licenses charged by the city seems rather high in some instances. Fifty dollars for a boot-black stand which can be conducted only for four months of the year is decidedly steep.

Scavenger Objects

Editor Klondike Nugget: Dear Sir,—In reading the News of last evening I observed an article headed "Dangers to Health." It is stated in this article that the condition of the garbage pier is due to the negligence of the scavengers. This statement is not true. The condition of the pier is due to a complete blockade of garbage before the ice went out, put there by men who have hauled garbage without a scavenger license. Complaint has been made to the police, to the mayor and to three of the councilmen by myself, and yet the work goes on and the blame is laid on the scavengers.

Last evening one of these men was dumping his load of garbage fully three hundred feet from the pier over the bank. The attention of Mr. E. W. Smith was called to these men and he saw them. I wish to say that my men have, under my instructions, shoveled the garbage off the pier a number of times since the ice went out and have done all they could to keep the pier clean. KLONDIKE NUGGET. WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1903.

SATISFACTORY OUTLOOK.

The reports now coming from the mining districts are of a character to warrant the belief that the season's work will terminate very satisfactorily.

The Nugget is given to understand upon the best of authority that the number of claims which will pay a profit will be higher this year than ever before in the history of the territory.

This conclusion is based largely upon the fact that the average claim operator is giving stricter attention to the business side of his operations than has been the custom heretofore.

As is well known to all who are familiar with existing conditions in the territory, there has been a decided curtailment of credits during the past year. Financial institutions and commercial houses alike have found it necessary to operate upon lines more conservative than formerly, and this policy has exerted a resultant influence among claim operators. In the main during the past winter, claims have been worked well within the means of the operators. Money has been borrowed, supplies secured and labor employed, all with the expectation of making settlement at cleanup and for the most part with full knowledge that such settlement could be made.

It is a noticeable fact that few cases for wages against mine owners are pending in the courts and cases of seizure under mortgage or other security are equally infrequent. This satisfactory condition of affairs should very shortly find a reflection in Dawson commercial circles where conditions on the creeks are a most important factor. It should have the effect of restoring confidence to a large extent where a feeling of uncertainty has more or less prevailed.

The outlook is by no means unsatisfactory and it is quite within reason to anticipate a decided and permanent improvement in conditions.

CASE MUST BE PREPARED.

The government has determined to send a commission to Dawson to investigate the whole matter of the Treadgold concession. Pending the results of the commission's work, it is reasonable to suppose that the whole subject will remain in abeyance so far as parliament is concerned.

Under these circumstances, it would appear that immediate steps should be taken to prepare a digest of all the facts bearing upon the concession so that the commission may not lack a full and complete understanding of the case as regarded from the public point of view. This will be one opportunity offered to the people of the territory to make their contention against Treadgold so plain, forcible and convincing, that there will be no possibility of a misunderstanding as to the menacing nature of the grant.

Mere resolutions of a denunciatory character will not answer the purpose in laying the case before the commission.

The subject must be gone into exhaustively and all available information secured.

It must be shown to the commission, who not unlikely may be predisposed in favor of the concession, that real danger to the district is involved. Facts and figures must be adduced to prove that a private water monopoly such as is contemplated his wife. I scarcely think my act will be criticised—not even by Anna."

"But she won't marry you without my consent."

"I don't care to discuss that with you. Have it your own way. However, I mean to get your consent, and it will be voluntary, before I leave this room."

The older man laughed harshly. "You are not going about it in a very promising way," he cried.

"It will become more promising as it nears the finish," said the visitor. "And the result isn't in doubt."

"Proceed."

"You have a few good qualities, as well as several bad ones."

"Thank you. Go on."

"You are domineering and bullying."

"Thank you again. Go on."

"I don't suppose you can entirely help these traits. They come from your Lancashire origin. You have the reputation of being a quick tempered and pugacious fellow, and I think you enjoy it."

"Any more?"

"In the street vernacular you would be classed as a bad man, and I fancy there never was a bad man who didn't take pride in the terror his reputation inspired. But, really, my own opinion is that you are not half as bad as you would have us believe."

"That's your opinion, is it?"

"Yes, and it's an honest opinion. I know you are a good workman in spite of your sixty-three years."

"What are you butting me for?" The young man laughed.

"You are not accustomed to flattery, eh? Well, it's the truth. You are a form of the tempering department of the Acme tool factory. You have been there thirteen years. You are paid $1,200 a year."

The older man started.

"Are you after my job?" he growled.

The young man laughed merrily. "No," he said.

"Then what are you sneaking round the factory for?"

Again the young man laughed. "So suspicious," he said, "and yet my excuse seems a good one. You can't blame a man for interesting himself in matters that are of vital interest to him, can you?"

"What do you mean by that?"

"You are a little slow, foreman."

The old man stared hard at his visitor. The latter leaned back and looked at him with his boyish smile.

"I—I don't understand."

"Take your time, foreman."

The old man's jaw dropped a little.

ANOTHER TRACY

Arizona Cowboy and Miner Turns Outlaw.

Kingman, Ariz., April 15.—Desperado "Jim" McKenney has returned to United States territory and resumed his murderous work.

This man, whose deeds have qualified him to claim equality in questionable fame with any American outlaw, dead or alive, not excluding the deceased Tracy, has just added two more corpses to his list.

McKenney confessed his identity to a ranchman whose house he visited after the shooting.

Since he ran amuck at Portersville, Cal., last July and murdered William J. Lynn and wounded several others, McKenney has had an exciting time of it.

After he had succeeded in eluding the Tulare county officers he struck south and worked his way through this territory and to Hermosillo, Mex., where he was captured about three months ago and held awaiting extradition.

The Tulare county sheriff secured the necessary papers from Washington and went to Mexico, but when he arrived there the authorities refused to deliver McKenney into his custody unless he guaranteed that they should get the rewards which were out for the fellow's capture.

As the sheriff was unable to do so, he was obliged to return home without the man he had traveled so many miles to secure.

It is evident that shortly after the sheriff's departure McKenney either escaped or was liberated from the Mexican prison, and that he hastened to get out of the country. He did not explain to his unwilling host, the ranchman, why he had killed Blakey and Winchester, but it is surmised that the men overtook him on the trail and that, suspecting they were peace officers searching for him, he first shot Winchester in the back and then emptied the other barrel of his shotgun into Blakey's breast.

It is probable the bodies will be buried where they were found, as they must be considerably decomposed by this time.

If the murderer is overtaken a fight is certain, as he undoubtedly realizes that no mercy would be shown him by the courts of this territory.

The description of him given by the ranchman tallies exactly with that sent out by the sheriff of Tulare county last summer. McKenney is of light complexion, has long hair and a heavy mustache, a short and thick nose, square chin and large ears.

country, and his escape was made a political issue against the officers at Portersville. A few weeks ago he was located at Hermosillo, Mex., and an application for his extradition was made, but the Mexican authorities released him and he disappeared again for parts unknown.

GOOD SUGGESTION

Regarding Life Bouys on Klondike Foot Bridge

Corporal J. S. Piper has suggested to a representative of the Nugget the advisability of the authorities placing on the Klondike toll bridge about three life bouys which in case of accident could be thrown hurriedly into the water within reach of unfortunate who might thereby be saved.

As the cost of acting on the very sensible suggestion would be little or nothing, as almost any of the steamboat companies could provide the life bouys, steps should be taken to carry it out at once as such precaution might be the means of saving lives which would otherwise be lost.

The Suspicious Wife

Once upon a time there was a sensible young Pullet who was wooed and won by a Worthy Rooster, who made her his Bride. During the Days of Courtship the Rooster was all that Heart could Wish. He clinched Fins by the Hour, and although he was scarcely up to her Heft, and the Society for the Prevention of Ergelty to Animals should have prevented it, he never Kicked when she cuddled down on his "Knee" in the Gloaming and asked, "Oo's Ducky Daddle is oo?"

No sooner were they married, however, than Mr. Rooster, perceiving that it was up to him to Scratch for Two, cut out the Soft Talk and began to hustle for the Dough-Pile. He no longer spent the long evenings holding Mrs. Rooster's lily white Claw, and instead of bringing her Parma Violets presented her with Beefsteak and Onions.

Now, Mrs. Rooster was one of those romantic Females who frame Married Life up as a continuous Hot Air performance in which both Parties of the Sketch spend their time chinning each other about Undying Devotion and exchanging Sizzling Kisses, and when she observed that their Domestic Atmosphere had dropped from Fever Heat to Normal she knew she was up against that "Condition that Female Orators describe as Losing Your Husband's Love."

"Dost thou love me?" she would ask, applying the thermometer to his Affections, every time Mr. Rooster got settled in a comfortable position to read the Afternoon Papers.

"Sure, Mike," replied Mr. Rooster, with one eye on the Stock Market, whereupon Mrs. Rooster went off and wept bitterly.

"Ha," she said, dopping out the sympathy to herself, "there was a Time when he would have taken Four Hours to convince me that he loved me, but now any old Vow is good enough for his Poor, Persecuted Wife. I shall not let his Neglect, though, keep me from doing my Duty, and I shall try to regain his Affections before it is too late."

With that, Mrs. Rooster began to go through all the film-flam games recommended by the Wise Ones for Cinching a Husband's affection. She joined a Physical Culture Class and teetered around on one Foot to keep Young and Graceful, because it is popularly believed among Wives that a tall Female, with a Straight Front and no Hips has every Masculine Creature she meets Hoodooed and can handle him like a Child. She also Read up on Topics of the Day, so she might converse intelligently with him and Wore his Favorite Color.

Unfortunately, instead of these Theories winning out all right, as they were touted by the Talent, Mrs. Rooster found that she were mere Ringers. Although she had reduced her weight Eight Pounds, Mr. Rooster never observed it, the sight of his Favorite Color failed to start off the Pyrotechnics on the Altar, and she never had a chance to Fascinate him with a few light remarks on the Venetian Question, because he always got busy with his paper as soon as Dinner was over.

All of this greatly grouched Mrs. Rooster, and, putting on her bonnet, she hiked back Home to Mother.

"Why dost thou return like Damaged Goods?" inquired Mrs. Hen, who had not batted around in Society for Forty Seasons without picking up a few chunks of Wisdom.

"Alas," replied Mrs. Rooster, turning on the weeps afresh, "my Husband no longer Loves me, and my Heart is Broken."

"Thank Heaven," replied Mrs. Hen; "that it is nothing serious, for it might have been your Stomach instead of your Heart that was out of Order, in which case you would have had Trouble to Burn. As it is you will soon be O. K. for Hearts as like Footballs. They are made to be Kicked, and a little Rough Treatment does them no Harm. But what causes you to think your Husband's Love is on the glim?"

"He no longer pays me the little Attentions that he used to before we were Married," replied Mrs. Rooster.

"The reason a Masculine Creature does not hold Heads after he is married," responded Mrs. Hen, "is because he needs both Paws to work with to Pay his Wife's Bills."

"He has also ceased telling me that he loves me," wailed Mrs. Rooster.

"Tally is cheap," replied Mrs. Hen, "and any Chappie will cough up lots of caloric Language as long as you will listen to him spout, but Money Talks, and the Wife who has got a Husband who is willing to toll to stand between her and the Slog Pile has got a Proof of Affection strong enough to draw Money on at the Bank."

"But he does not Notice what I wear," moaned the disconsolate Wife.

"As long as he doesn't Notice what other Females wear, push your Luck, for things are coming your way," responded her mother. "Go home and Forget it," continued Mrs. Hen, addressing her daughter, "for you make me Tired if Masculine Creatures devoted as much time to making Love after Marriage as they do before, their Wives would have to take in Washing to support the Family. Furthermore, I apprehend that a Sentimental Husband who made love to you at the Breakfast Table would cloy on your Palate, and make you long for a Brute who Beat you for a Change. Before marriage it is well to investigate the Temperature of a Masculine Creature's Affections, but after Marriage the Wise Wife breaks her Thermometer and Quits Guessing."

Assistant to Throne. Those who read the simple announcement that Prince Orsini has retired from the office of prince assistant to the papal throne, in favor of his son, little know the store of history and interest behind the notice, says a Rome dispatch.

In Rome there are now but three of the old baronial houses—the Caetani and the Orsini and Colonna. The two latter were the great disturbers of the peace of Rome for centuries, and so great was their struggle for predominance that they even quarrelled on the steps of the papal throne itself as to which should have the precedence. Pope Julius II in the beginning of the sixteenth century, to bring peace and settle the dispute for all time, created the head of each house assistant to the throne, the ofference to pass from father to son, but, unfortunately, he forgot that there is a right and left hand, and that the latter is not equal to the former. So the wrangling went on, until it was decided that they should take the coveted right alternately, which is the custom to this day. This peace between the Colonna and Orsini was commemorated with medals and money, on which a bear (Orso) was depicted embracing a column (Colonna), the respective coat-of-arms of the two families. Many other noble Roman houses have tried very hard to have the coveted office, but it is hereditary, and if given to another would lose all character.

Now the two families are the best of friends, and often, over a glass of wine, fight the battles of other days, in which neither can claim to have really beaten his adversary.

CONTEST VERY BUM

Carroll Lasts One Minute Forty Seconds

Blonde Boy Had No License to More Than Resin His Feet and Shake Hands.

There was nothing to it. Charley Carroll is a son of his father but no one would suspect it to see him in the prize ring. He can rub his feet in resin and walk to the center of the stage to shake hands but that is as far as he should attempt to go for Charley was out feeding the calves when the ability to box was passed around. It required a minute for Nick Burley last night to find out that Carroll was in the ring with him and just forty seconds later the blonde boy could have rolled off a track to avoid being run over by a freight train. He never knew he was being counted out and when he regained consciousness the big amphitheatre was nearly empty. A jab on the wind followed by a left punch on the chin did the work and Charley Carroll today no doubt regrets that when he again essays to enter the prize ring he must take with him more than his father's reputation of standing before Jack McAvill forty-four rounds.

Although the go, despite the statements in the papers that it would not begin until the A. B. show was over, was billed by street placards to commence promptly at 10 o'clock with the result that hundreds were there at that time who sat through two long and weary hours to see one minute and forty seconds of entertainment.

It was just 12 o'clock as the principals, their spongers and bottleholders, entered the ring. Joe Boyle as referee stated that the contestants had agreed on clean break-away, no hitting during clinches and upon Marquis of Queensbury rules. W. H. B. Lyons was official timekeeper.

At 12.06 time was called. Both men rushed to the center of the ring and the contest opened with light sparring, considerable foot work and a clinch. Carroll's right found Burley's chin for a straight jab but whether accidentally or intentionally was not known. Another clinch. Burley then started for his man and crowded him across the ring. He boxed Carroll's ears first with his left then with his right, landed on his wind with his right and seeing a good opening drove a heavy left swing in on the chin. Carroll went down in a heap and failed to revive when his seconds paraded a smelling bottle under his nose. Turning over he lay flat upon his back and was slowly counted out amidst groans of disappointment from the crowd.

A four-round preliminary between Al Smith and Mert Robins was much more interesting than the main event. Smith is well known in Dawson as a handy lad in the ring. He weighs 122 pounds and is very slim, being able to sit on a geranium leaf without overlapping. Robins never appeared in a ring until last night. He is from Tacoma, weighs 135 pounds and is dead game, putting up a remarkably good exhibition for a novice. No one was killed in the preliminary although a Sun reporter narrowly escaped drowning in the press box when the slender pugilist emptied his mouth in that direction, the management having neglected to provide members of the press with umbrellas.

From 600 to 700 people attended the affair, one of the best crowds seen at such a gathering in the history of Dawson. The big amphitheatre is splendidly fitted up and arranged, a most excellent view of the stage being afforded from all parts of the building. The only improvements that might be suggested would be regarding that of light and that the boxes are low and too close to the stage. As a whole, the arrangement is one of which any city of 200,000 inhabitants might well be proud. In fact, it is a thing of beauty, convenience and neatness as compared with many pavilions of structures in which many of the most celebrated events in pugilistic history have been pulled off.

CONTINUED SUCCESS

A. B.'s Play to Another Good Crowd

Another excellent house greeted the A. B.'s last night and the performance which has made such a hit, went a great deal smoother than it did on the opening evening. Several unimportant changes were made, among them being the addition of a coster turn by Fred Atwood who sang "Wot Cheer." Alderman Johnson who on Monday evening was unavoidably detained elsewhere made his appearance as a logger from Trois Rivières. His dialect stories are irresistibly funny for the reason they are so true to life and so easily recognizable by everyone who has traveled through the upper portion of Quebec. His stories last night were most original with a dash of local color added.

The dueling scene from Faust made equally as great a hit as on the previous evening, the encore being even more vociferously received than the act itself. When the curtain had been raised to admit of the trio receiving the plaudits of the house the trap leading to Mephisto's pit was still open, the evil one standing near the yawning chasm. The curtain was about half way up when the Irish phiz, and half his body, of Jack Sale loomed up from the infernal regions, he being unaware an encore was being taken. Mephisto placed his foot on Pat's head and under his breath muttered "Get down there" and the audience roared and howled.

A. M. Brown, who is impersonating the Arctic Queen, has had everyone guessing as to his identity, the difficulty being made all the more pronounced by the announcement made by both the Sun and the News that the enactor of the role was Miss Smith. Under the skillful hands of the makeup artist Mr. Brown is made into a very attractive looking young lady. Tonight is the last night of the presentation and as an extra attraction the A. B.'s have announced there will be a half following the entertainment there is but little doubt the hall will be crowded.

"Frenchy" pleaded guilty but said he had not yet been able to raise the required $50, that he had offered the clerk $15 on account and had been told to go where the hon roseth and the whangdoodle mourneth. He had $25 this morning and after paying $1 and costs the remaining $19 were paid to Clerk Smith on account. "Frenchy" was given one week to raise and pay over the balance, $31.

Killed by Explosion

Pittsburg, Pa., April 14.—Two men were killed and two injured today in an explosion of dynamite at the new Mount Washington tunnel of the West Liberty traction railway. A fire had been prepared, but failed to explode and the men returned to ascertain the cause. Suddenly it went off with a terrific report, hurling rocks in every direction. Two men were killed outright, their bodies being terribly mangled. Two others were seriously but not fatally hurt. A number had narrow escapes. The victims, who were Hungarians, were not known by name.

BASEBALL SEASON

Opens With Game Yesterday Evening

Civil Service Hand the Gando/los a Terrible Walloping, Score Being 23 to 9.

The fans and rooters to the number of several hundred were out in force at the barracks ground last night to assist in ushering in the season of '03 from a baseball standpoint. The occasion was auspicious, weather delightful, grounds in good condition, umpiring in many instances rotten and the playing so full of errors that no score book was ever made large enough to record them all. The Service chaps walloped up the diamond with the Gando/los to the tune of 23 to 9 which seemed rather surprising as most of those in the C. S. aggregation are colts at the game while their opponents are many of them old timers. But the latter were not in for a moment. They were dead ones from the start with pillows on their hands and kidneys in their feet and the way the errors were piled up, and costly ones, too, would have made angels weep. Of course, it was the first game in the season, but one would have thought they would have limbered up a trifle before beginning the play for the championship, one might have imagined they had just dropped down from the farm.

And there were others, too. Though they stacked up a big pile of runs the Civil Service was not entitled to over a third of them. They had double the amount of ginger in them of their opponents; still they were much to the had in spots. Sammie Cropper needs a new pair of eyes, too, for some of his decisions were putrid.

The Service chaps were first to the bat. Captain Bennett being late, Burns took his place, popping a fly to second and gracefully retiring. MacLean went out on a fly to the pitcher while Dundas scored on a narrow margin, Mangum at third going into a trance with the ball in his hands. Harrison who had followed Dundas at the bat came home on a safe hit made by Winters to short. Again the pitcher made a costly fumble and Shannon scored, Winters stealing third and scoring on Fitzgerald's light strike to the infield. The latter died trying to purloin third on a throw of "Shim" to Mangum, the side retiring with four tallies to their credit.

Chadwick was first up for the Gando/los, dropping a baby grounder close to the pitcher and having a close call in reaching first, scoring a moment later on a peachinero of a two bagger made by Albert Forrest. Albert stole third and had the nerve to endeavor to do likewise with the home plate, but Cap Bennett landed him a second too soon. Stevens drove a beaut to center field where it was nailed to the cross. Mangum sent a liner into third, but expired reaching first.

In the first half of the second the Service took their first goose egg, only one man passing first, McKay, who dropped one in center field for two bags. Brazier was first up, going out on a high fly to Mangum. McKay then rapped off his two bags, Bennett pounded air and Dundas followed suit, leaving McKay on second. The Gans made two on their half of the second. Opsahl fanned, Joyal made first on a very punk second on an overthrow of Bennett to cision, stole second, made third and second. Appley slammed the atmosphere, Jaques took his base on balls and scored, again on an overthrow of Bennett who had a surplus of steam in his arm. Traube died making first.

At the opening of the third MacLean drove a high foul into the grand stand and later fanned, though on a nubb by the catcher and some mighty sprinting he managed to make first. Harrison failed to find the leather and Shannon followed with a safe hit to left field bringing MacLean in and scoring himself a moment later on a wild throw to second. Winters had a hole in the end of his bat and retired after three tries at locating the sphere. Fitzgerald took his base on balls, but died at third on a pretty throw of Forrest to Mangum. The Gans in their turn took a goose egg with the compliments of the Service, evening up things. Chadwick fanned, Forrest reached first on a light grounder to second fumbled by Harrison but died trying to steal the second bag by a throw of Bennett, and Stevens expired on a high fly to Brazier.

Another cipher came to the Service in the beginning of the fourth, they toppling over in one, two, three order. Brazier hit to second and died on first, McKay went out on a foul caught by the catcher over twenty feet from the plate and Bennett dropped his gun on a fly to short. In the latter half the Gans scored twice. Mangum hit to second and on a fumble of Harrison made first. Opsahl took his base on balls and after he had reached second and Mangum third both moved up a peg on a balk of Brazier. Joyal popped a light grounder into Brazier's hands and then happened the prettiest play of the game. There was a man on third who had the ball been thrown at once to first would have scored. But Brazier put his wits about him and not only put out his man at first but also prevented the runner on third coming in. The moment the ball reached his hands Opsahl on third started home, Brazier made a feint to throw to third and the runner went back sprawling. Then Brazier whirled quickly and the ball reached first in time to cut off the wind of Joyal. Appley pounded air, Jaques made a safe hit which brought Opsahl home, himself dying in a vain effort to reach second.

In the first half of the fifth the Gans went all to pieces, allowing the red and black sweaters to pile up five runs. Dundas drove a liner through third that sailed as it passed Mangum and after circling the bags scored on a wild throw of Stevens. MacLean was good for two bagger and scored on Harrison's hit to third, he himself scoring on Mangum's fumble of Fitzgerald's hit. Shannon went out on a foul to the catcher, Winters was good for two bags to center and made home on Brazier's hit, Fitzgerald expired on a fly to center and Brazier made first by a scratch, scoring on a hit made by Bennett. McKay hit safe but died on third the result of Bennett, who followed him, trying to steal second.

What followed was a sort of a slaughter of the innocents. Only eight innings were played as it, at that time had become too dark to see the ball, being nearly 10 o'clock. Despite the errors and rank decisions of the umpire the game was thoroughly enjoyed.

PROSPEROUS DOMINION

Everybody is Busy at Work Sluicing

Claim No. 21 Below Upper Will Yield $75,000—All Gold is Coming to the Front.

Mr. Jeff Hannay of Caribou, Dominion, is in the city and from him it is learned that never before has there been such activity on that creek as at present. Everybody is busy with the work of sluicing.

On 20 below upper the dumps are nearly all washed up and the returns have been most satisfactory. On 21 which is owned by a couple of Finlanders, the work of sluicing is just started. The claim will yield fully $75,000 from the dirt now out.

On 32 Catwell has made a big cleanup and will go outside at once, leaving the country for good. He has been here six years.

Smith & Sims are ground sluicing on the hillside opposite 28 below upper and are taking out all kinds of money. No. 6 below upper is also yielding very rich pay, some 75 cent pans having been taken out.

Claims 27 and 31, the former owned by Bill Long, are also yielding well. Mr. Hannay reports All Gold creek, formerly thought to be but little good, is surprising many people. On 100 below Fisher Bros. have out 16000 buckets from which they expect to wash out about $8,500. No. 24 is also very good and on 38 the pay streak is 50 feet wide and averages 35 cents to the bucket. In fact, Mr. Hannay says the entire creek is showing up well.

Activity at Crofton. Crofton, April 14.—Crofton is very busy with boats coming and going. Twice a week the Transfer comes with 12 cars of coke and coal. The barge Mackenzie has been in with 600 tons of Marble Bay ore, also the Selkirk with 200 tons, mostly high grade from the same mine. The Trader brought a load of very inferior coal from Seattle for the Lenora-Mt. Sicker railway, and the unfortunate engineers on the line are uttering deep anathemas on the "black nuck."

The Trader has gone out to Marble Bay for a load of ore. The Venture is down from Quatsino with a small shipment of some 300 tons from the Comstock, but some of her cargo is picked ore, so what she lacks in quantity she may make up in quality. The Transfer has been in with nine C.P.R. cars of Lone Pine ore from Republic, Wash., and six cars also from Republic are due over the Great Northern via Liverpool.

Four of the empty ore cars are being loaded with copper which is being turned out at the rate of from 50 to 75 bars a day, and these run from 300 to 400 lbs. each in weight. Owing to repairs to No. 3 locomotive the Lenora-Mt. Sicker mine has ceased shipment from the dump for a few days, but will commence again at the rate of 150 tons a day before the end of the week.

PAULSON IN THE TOILS

Charged of Living From Avails of Vice

May be Released on Good Security—Will Have Hearing One Week From Today.

S. R. Paulson's attorney, A. I. Macfarlane, is today looking for two good and sufficient sureties in the sum of $500 each to take his client out of jail where he was committed by Mr. Justice Macaulay to answer to the charge of living from the avails of prostitution.

Sigwald Rosfield Paulson was arrested Monday night in Klondike city where he was drunk and fighting in a bagnio. He was too drunk to appear in court yesterday morning and in the meantime his mode of life was investigated with the result that disclosures warranted the laying of the more serious charge.

Paulson has played engagements several times before in police court on trivial charges, principally for drunkenness, and on that charge he was again fined $5 and costs this morning. He is a Scandinavian though he speaks English very well. He is a pale, thin man of perhaps 30 years old, like all others who live as he is alleged to live, wears good clothes and has the air of a man not familiar with toil. The woman who is believed to support him is also a Scandinavian.

In fixing the amount of bail his lordship solemnly warned Paulson that in the event of being released pending his trial one week from today he must not, under penalty of immediate arrest, see or confer with the woman or any of her associates.

AND STILL THEY HOLD

Ice Jams at Selkirk and Five Fingers

River is Falling at Latter Point. Hootalinqua Went Out Yesterday.

Only an occasional piece of ice has been seen in the Yukon here today and a man who arrived in a small boat from Thistle yesterday says there is no ice up to that place. However, no steamers may be expected yet for several days owing to the fact that the jams at Selkirk and Five Fingers still hold and as the water is falling there is a possibility of their not breaking for some time. The conditions of the river both above and below are as follows:

Eagle—River all clear. Yukon Crossing—Jam at Five Fingers still holds. Water falling very slowly. No ice running. Fortymile—River all clear. Selkirk—Jam still holds. Hootalinqua—Hootalinqua river went out yesterday afternoon.

Off for Home. Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Best left for their home at Fortymile in a canoe yesterday, the former rowing and the latter steering. Mrs. Best has been in Dawson for the past month during which time she made few acquaintances owing to the fact that she was in jail for drunkenness. She is a daughter of the forest. Her husband is a white man. As they embarked yesterday for home they appeared as happy as a pair of Alabama coopers sunning themselves on a sycamore log.

Wabash Trouble. St. Louis, Mo., April 4.—After four months of controversy between the employees of the Wabash road and the officials of that system, during which at one time a strike was imminent, and was prevented only by an injunction restraining the employees from vacating their positions, and which injunction was dissolved last Wednesday, the differences were finally adjusted, and the controversy effectually and satisfactorily settled tonight.

The main points are: Twelve per cent. increase for conductors, brakemen and baggage men, in the passenger service, and 15 per cent. for conductors and brakemen in the freight service over the rates which existed January 1, 1902, west of the Mississippi river.

For the freemen, increases were granted on the Canadian lines in accordance with the Canada Southern division of the Michigan Central. On the other lines in the United States material increases and improvements in the working conditions were granted the freemen.

East of the Mississippi river the rates will be brought up to this standard, when competing lines in the same territory shall grant similar increases. The various yardmen receive a substantial increase, varying in different localities.

There is an entire revision of rules applying to all classes of train service.

BI-ANNUAL DRUNK

John Roberts Renews Acquaintance of Lonesome Bar

John Roberts, not he of Barclay house notoriety but another John, was fined $2 and costs by Mr. Justice Macaulay this morning on the charge of a drink.

John explained that it was not his first appearance in police court on the same charge, but that it was his first appearance in two years.

Chamber of Commerce

Toronto, April 18.—The council of the board of trade will submit three resolutions at the fifth congress of the Chamber of Commerce, which meets in Montreal from August 17th to 21st next, favoring a commercial policy based upon the principle of mutual benefit to each part of the empire, that Britain's food supply can be safely relied upon by developing the output of her territories, and make her independent of foreign sources by diverting all of her surplus population to the shores of her dominions beyond seas, and also to unify the naturalization laws of the empire.

Quarantine Question

Lincoln, Neb., April 1.—Gov. Mealey this afternoon said that probably no quarantine would be established in Nebraska against cattle, unless some positive proof is furnished of the existence of the hoof and mouth disease in that state.
