CHAPTER XIII

"Sir Herrick wants to see the armory," she says in the most innocent manner, but with rather downcast lids. "May I show him, dear May?"

May looks up—Bob is standing beside her, his hands in his pockets, holding forth, about cows and horses, of course—and turns her gentle eyes dreamily on the downcast face.

"Yes, dear, of course. The idea of asking me! Shall I send for papa—or perhaps your brother; he knows all about the various suits?"

But Bob doesn't budge an inch.

"Oh, no—that is, I don't think Sir Herrick cares."

"Go yourself, Paula," says Bob, with a nod; "you know all about it as well as any of them. Sir Herrick will have quite as much medieval history from you as he cares for."

And Paula, with a graceful glance at the unconscious Bob, glides towards Sir Herrick.

"It is in the next room, behind those curtains," she says.

They pass out—cleverly manoeuvring so that "When I am dead and gone, love" is not interrupted—and enter the armory, which even Mr. Palmer has not dared to interfere with.

Just as it was when Sir Herrick ran about it a child at play, so it stands now: tall, huge figures clad in steel ranged round the edge of the polished floor; coats-of-mail and Old-World weapons hang upon the oaken walls.

Paula looks round the room with a rapid glance, and then raises her eyes to his to see how the sight of this, the apartment of all others in the Court, likely to arouse his emotions, will affect him.

But there is nothing except a quiet, calm curiosity in the expression of his handsome face; and Paula, with a laugh, assumes the attitude of a showman, and taking up a sword, points to the first man in armour.

"Figure one is the mail suit worn by Rupert Powis at Agincourt. Observe the battle-axe, weighing fifty-six pounds, and the tunic of silver chain. This Rupert fell at Agincourt. You may see where the arrow pierced the interstices of armour-plate—"

Then she breaks off, laughing, as she looks up at his dark eyes bent upon her and not upon the historic armour. "How absurd it is!" she says. "You don't care a pin's point about your famous ancestors. You might be the very next stranger come to visit the Court and inclined to look upon the whole thing as a bore. You don't care for it, do you? How strange it is!"

"There is only one thing on earth I care for," he says, drawing near to her and putting his arm round her while his eyes seem to sink into her soul. "Only one thing. All the ancestors and the glory in the world pale to insignificance for me beside—just one little, dark-eyed girl with red lips and red-gold hair."

"Hush!" she murmurs, her head drooping with passionate languor. "They will hear you—somebody will come."

"Only one thing," he repeats. "Think of that. That is strange, if you like, that all the things are as nothing to me compared with my own darling, my Paula. Paula, says it once more; say 'Rick, I love you!'"

She looks up at him, a quiet smile of ecstatic happiness curving the red lips.

"Rick I love you!" she says. "But, ah, you know it!"

"I like to hear it, though," he says, with suppressed passion. "I think you shall say it every time we meet! And nothing shall part us, Paula. Nothing. Say this, too."

"Nothing shall part us," she murmurs.

Scarcely had the murmur died away than the curtains open, and the elegant figure of the major steps on to the polished floor.

"The armoury was always a great attraction for me," he says, evidently addressing someone close behind him—"always. You, my dear Mr. Palmer, with your strong love for all that is historic and refined, must gather the greatest pleasure from this interesting—ahem!" He breaks off as he sees the two live—very much alive—figures among the dummy steel-clad ones.

Then, as Paula slips from Sir Herrick's embrace and stands with her back to the new-comers, her face and her neck crimson, the major's pink-and-white face dimples into a charming smile.

"Ah, my dear Rick," he says in the sweetest of voices, "recalling old memories, and imparting heraldic information to Miss—Paula. Charming occupation; but I am afraid Miss Paula will not derive much benefit from your scanty knowledge, Rick. I"—and he taps his padded vest with a white forefinger—"I am the person to refer to for the former history of the Powis family. In fact—turning to Paula with a smile that wrinkles his face for all its powder and paint, "you may regard me as its guardian angel."

Simple words enough, spoken in the pleasantest tone of harmless railway, and yet they fall upon Paula's heart as if the painted old bean were Fate itself personified.

CHAPTER XIV

If ever the major was charming, he is to-night. He puts forth all his power of fascination, ransacks his marvelous memory for little anecdotes suitable to the drawing-room and ladies' ears, smiles the sweet, angelic smile for which he is justly famous, and manages to keep Paula by his side the whole evening.

He pays her such attention, indeed, that, if he were a younger man, one might be excused in suspecting him of matrimonial motives; and Mr. Palmer, standing against the mantel-shelf and talking to Bob about the crops, wonders what it means.

"Anybody 'ud think," he mutters to himself, "that he had fallen in love with her, and that nothing would please him better than for Sir Herrick to marry her straight off," and he stares with his great eyes in stupid bewilderment.

It puzzles Paula, too, as she listens, scarcely heeding, to the major's anecdotes, and looks wistfully from under her long lashes at Sir Herrick lounging beside May, who glances up at him with a look of awe on her gentle, timid face.

Alice seems the only one quite satisfied with the state of affairs, and plays accompaniment after accompaniment to Stancy de Palmer's sentimental ditties, casting glances up at him now and again from under her white lids.

"Will he never go!" thinks Paula, as the major rattles smoothly on in his charming voice and most fascinating smile, "or is he wound up like a clock?"

But at last the major "rums down," and, glancing at the real clock on the mantel-shelf, raises with a little sigh. "If one could but stop time in its progress, my dear girl!" he says to Mr. Palmer; "but, alas! the pleasant evening will come to an end. I fear I must quit this charming scene."

And he sighs again and shakes his head with mournful regret at Paula.

With many protestations and pleadings for delay, Mr. Palmer rings the bell and orders the carriage, and Paula, with a sigh of relief, is convinced that at last the major will depart, and that—well, perhaps she may get one word with Sir Herrick. But the major is keen to the last.

"Rick," he says, gently, "I am going your way. Will you bear me company so far as your inn?"

Sir Herrick rises, none too readily, and nods.

"Very well," he says, and though he doesn't glance at Paula, she feels as if he had looked at her regretfully.

With much fuss and stir the major makes his adieu.

"A most charming evening," he declares, bending over May's hand—poor May overcame by his splendid manner. "A lucky accident for me, my dear young lady. I trust you will permit me to retain the friendship which this evening has inaugurated."

But if his manner is impressive towards May, it is tenfold so to Paula.

"Good-bye, my dear young lady," he murmurs, pressing her hand. "I hope I shall have the extreme pleasure of meeting you again, and your charming sister, and—if he will permit me to call him so—my friend Robert. Good-bye."

"Good-bye," says Paula, staring at him, and glancing up at the calm face of Sir Herrick.

He has made his adieu to the rest, and stands now waiting beside her. He takes her hand within his own, and presses it until the blood flies to her face, and under pretence of picking up his glove, he bends and whispers:

"Good-bye, my darling. I shall see you to-morrow."

Paula lifts her eyes to his for the instant, and sends a swift, eloquent glance of love from her dark orbs, and then the brilliant room seems to have grown suddenly dark—for has he not gone?

Then Bob makes a move; and Mr. Stancy, remarking that it is a beautiful night, suggests that he will accompany them to the cottage—that is, with a little, self-satisfied smile at Paula—"if the ladies will permit me."

Paula starts and answers, absently. It is a matter of pure indifference to her who accompanies them in their homeward walk, now that Sir Herrick has gone.

"May I not go too, papa?" says May, timidly, and with a little blush, and, Mr. Palmer graciously according his permission, May scuddles upstairs for her hat and jacket.

Mr. Palmer waves them a pompous good-night from the porch, and stalks off to the smoking-room to ponder over the little bargain struck between him and the major, and the young people set off.

Now, usually, on such occasions the magnificent Stancy devotes all his attentions to Alice, and Paula walks by their side in silence, or lags behind, conversing with her own maiden fancies free, as she would prefer to do to-night. For ah! she has so much to think of; no less than every word, every smile, of the king she has shrined in her innermost heart; but Mr. Stancy de Palmer's feeble fancy is apparently still set Paulaward, and it is to her and not to Alice that he addresses a choice selection of remarks upon the moon and the glories of the heavens.

In fact he is very sentimental indeed; at any other time Paula would meet his question, as to whether the moon did not always make her feel sad, with a laugh of good-natured mockery; but to-night she scarcely hears him and answers at random, and even when, with a sigh and a droop of the head, he offers to, and actually does, repeat a "little poem" of his own composition, Paula does not smile. At last he sees that his sentiment and his poetry are being wasted like drops on a sandy desert, and he says, rather stiffly:

"Your thoughts are wandering, Miss Paula, to-night. Your soul is afar, I am afraid."

"Not very far," says Paula, with aggravating cheerfulness. "But I beg your pardon; perhaps you won't mind repeating the words again; or, perhaps," as a happy thought, "Alice would like to hear them. Alice, Mr. Stancy de Palmer has been composing some verses to the moon;" and Mr. Stancy, with a modest blush, is thus compelled to transfer his attentions to Alice, who receives them with a sympathetic smile, and Paula is left in peace.

It is Bob and May who lag behind to-night. Bob, with his hands thrust in his pockets sauntering along, and May tripping besides him, now and then glancing up at his face.

Treaty of Versailles Ratified.

Ceremony Concluded Saturday -- Mexican Villages Wiped Out -- U.S. A. Not on Peace Basis With Germany -- Russian Problem Under Consideration -- 35 Men Drowned in Wreck.

THE DEADLY EARTHQUAKE.

MEXICO, CITY, Jan. 11. Six hundred persons were killed at Barranca Grande when that place was destroyed last Saturday by earthquake according to despatches from Vera Cruz last night. Ialapa the former capital of the State of Vera Cruz and Ecocelo was virtually ruined, it is said while the village of Ayabalco was crushed by great rocks discharged from an adjacent mountain and sent into the valley. A similar accident is said to have befallen the village of Exbucan.

WILL CONSULT HIS COLLEAGUES.

LONDON, Jan. 11. Sir Eric Geddes, Minister of Transport, replying to a communication of railway men rejecting the Government's wage proposals, said the full answer must wait until he could bring the whole question before the cabinet inasmuch as issues involved were of national importance and affected every section of the community. He said this course was necessary because the proposals of the Government had been laid down by the cabinet members.

TRYING TO SOLVE RUSSIAN PROBLEM.

MONTREAL, Jan. 10. A Paris cable to the Montreal Gazette says there is a persistent report in the French capital that Lloyd George of Great Britain will make startling proposals in regard to Russia to the Allied conference. The report is said to have come from London. Rumor has it that Lloyd George will suggest that one way to approach the Russian problem would be to negotiate with the Soviets and that he will ask that some one else suggest a better path to take. The French have a Russian plan of their own which consists in establishing a barrier from Dantzic to Odessa by means of the Polish and Roumanian armies. This would be a passive force. A new French plan is founded on the principle that the Russians must settle the Russian problem, but they must be fenced in while doing it.

NO TRUTH IN STORY.

LONDON, Jan. 10. In connection with the unconfirmed report from Brussels of the German Government overthrow, messages from Berlin by way of Copenhagen, received this morning, did not indicate that anything of an extraordinary nature had been foreseen in Germany up to a late hour last evening. The Brussels reports of the German Government overthrow are not confirmed from any other source and it may be noted that despatches themselves carry their own qualifications, emphasizing a lack of positive information. If it should prove true that there has been a new uprising in Germany, it would appear to have been deliberately timed to coincide with the date set for putting the Treaty of Versailles into effect and creating a state of peace between Germany and the Allied Powers.

THE U. S. A. OUT.

PARIS, Jan. 11. Ratifications of the Treaty of Versailles were exchanged and peace between Germany, France, Great Britain, and the other Allied and Associated Powers, with the exception of the United States, became effective at 4.16 o'clock Saturday afternoon. There were eleventh hour rumours of further postponement, but these proved to be groundless. Outstanding comment on the ceremony is that it leaves the United States the only Power which was actively at war with Germany not now on a peace basis. That was the note sounded by Baron Kurt Von Lersner, head of the German peace delegation, in a statement to the Associated Press immediately after the ceremony.

THE SIGNING OF PEACE.

PARIS, Jan. 10. The Treaty of Versailles, making peace between Germany and ratified by the Allied Powers, was put into effect at four fifteen o'clock this afternoon by exchange of ratifications. The entire ceremony which took place in the Cloth Hall at the French Foreign Ministry was completed by four sixteen o'clock. Previously, Baron Kurt Von Lersner, head of the German mission, signed the protocol of November 1, providing for repatriation for the sinking of the German warships at Scapa Flow and to ensure the carrying out of the armistice terms. The signing of this document occurred in the office of the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

ANOTHER MARINE DISASTER.

WEYMOUTH, England, Jan. 11. Thirty-five members of the crew of forty-two of the British steamer Treveal were drowned when the big vessel was wrecked on Kimmer Ledge rock near St. Alban's Head during a violent storm in the Channel on Saturday. The Treveal, bound from Calcutta to Dudes, struck a rock Friday night. The vessel immediately wrecked for assistance, but owing to the severity of the storm and dense darkness, the tug which put out from Weymouth was unable to find her. The Treveal was tight on the rocks, and was unable to get clear because both wind and sea were against her. A lifeboat tried several times to reach her but was beaten back by the storm. Finally, the Captain signalled to the tug that he was going to abandon the ship. The crew put off in two boats, which were immediately swamped in the raging sea, while the coast guard watched, powerless to lend aid for their lives, but only seven reached the shore. The Captain was among the drowned.

WON'T BE TOO HARD.

PARIS, Jan. 10. After the exchange ratification of the Treaty, Premier Clemenceau will hand to Baron Von Lersner the following letter: Jan. 1, now that the protocol provided for by note of November 2 has been signed by qualified representatives of the German Government and in consequence ratification of the Treaty of Versailles have been deposited the Allied and Associated Powers wish to renew to the German Government their assurance that while necessary reparations for staking of the German fleet in Scapa Flow will be exacted they do not intend to injure the vital economic interest of Germany. On this point they confirm the declarations which the general secretary of the Peace Conference was charged with making orally to the President of the German delegation on December 23rd.

POLISH TROOPS ADVANCING.

PARIS, Jan. 11. Polish troops are continuing to advance in Ukraine, according to advices from Warsaw. The Polish battalion has reached the important railway junction of Zerninka.

EFFECTIVE JANUARY 13TH.

PARIS, Jan. 10. The putting of the League of Nations into being which will be one of immediate consequences of the exchange ratifications of the Treaty of Versailles will occur in Paris at ten thirty o'clock in the morning of Friday, January 16th, at the Supreme Council decided to-day at twenty fifty-five.

THE KING'S REPLY.

LONDON, Jan. 11. Replying to a loyal message from the citizens of London on the occasion of the ratification of Peace, the King has telegraphed the Lord Mayor of London as follows: "With all my heart, I reciprocate their hopes and fervently pray that, please God this day may be the dawn of a new era in which the people of the British Empire may forever live at Peace with itself and with all men."

Kennedy Gets Rid of His Six Years' Trouble

Eats Anything And Never Misses Day From Work Since Taking Tanlac, He Says.

"Tanlac seemed to be made exactly for my trouble," said R. J. Kennedy, who works for the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, Sydney, Nova Scotia, recently. Continuing, he said:

"For the past six years I have suffered more than I will ever be able to tell. My appetite had gone back on me entirely and little I did manage to eat by forcing it down would sour and I would blot until I was in misery. Gas pressed against my heart causing it to palpitate dreadfully and it was all I could do to get my breath. I could not eat any meat or vegetables of any kind and had to live on the lightest of diets, for if I ate the least thing heavy I had such intense pains in my stomach that they would nearly draw me double and I thought at times they would kill me. I had a headache and neuralgia nearly all the time and many times I had to stay away from work, as I would be in such pain I was almost wild. I had tried every kind of medicine I could hear of, but none of them did me a particle of good. Toward the last part of the year my condition became so bad I thought I would have to give up entirely for I was so weak and run down I could hardly drag myself around and my work was simply torture."

"Well, when Tanlac came my way, I did not hesitate a minute in making up my mind to try it. For after hearing so much of the good it was doing others I thought it might help me, also, and after I had taken it for a while I began to get better. I continued taking it until now I have taken six bottles, and my improvement is remarkable. I never have the least sign of my stomach trouble although my appetite has returned to such an extent I am hungry all the time and I eat just anything I want. I am never bothered with gas or palpitation of the heart and am entirely rid of the headaches and neuralgia, and never miss a day from work, as I have regained my strength and, in fact, am enjoying as good health in every way as I ever did in my life. I believe all any one has to do if they are suffering as I was to get rid of their troubles is to take Tanlac, and I am glad to recommend it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative; in Harbor Street, by Thomas Wakely & Sons; in Placentia, by James Murphy & Son, and in Topsail by J. K. Bursell—adv.

Don't Blame the Stenographer

If you hesitate to sign and send out a letter because it's not well typed—do not blame the stenographer.

The type may be ragged. It may be out of alignment. The machine may skip or overprint. Or the margins may be uneven.

All these faults must be blamed on the typewriting machine—not the stenographer. She is undoubtedly as appreciative of good work as you are. She may be even more anxious than you to have a clean printing, smooth running, speedy Oliver 9.

Clean pages of readable type, accurate and dignified, give distinction and prestige. Then why not be certain of first rank by using the Oliver 9?

Only the Oliver has the arch-shaped type-bar, with broad bearings. This insures perfect alignment. Oliver type cannot "run down at the heel," because it always strikes squarely.

Only the Oliver prints downward, just as one writes. No lifting is necessary to raise the type-bar. This means a lighter touch, greater speed, and a bigger day's output with a third less exertion.

Evening Telegram

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor
C. T. JAMES, Editor

Monday, January 12, 1920.

THINK IT OVER.

In Saturday's Telegram the infamous Hawes-Ring agreement was published for the benefit of every city and outport reader. A perusal of that iniquitous document at once reveals the perfidiousness of the men who drafted and signed it. Its text covers the greatest scandal ever placed on record, being as it is a clear give-away of the rights and privileges of free men to conduct their business affairs in their own way and by their own methods, and compelling them to, in future, transact their commercial affairs abroad through the medium of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the chosen few into whose hands he has given the Fish Exporting Trade of the whole Dominion. By the creation of this combine the clock of Newfoundland has been set back centuries, and monopoly once more resumes its sway. The rights of democracy have been shamefully and shamelessly bartered away, and Prussianism against which our boys fought and died lifts its horrid and hideous head over their sacrificed bodies.

The more the "Ring Agreement" is studied the more apparent it becomes that there was and is a deliberate conspiracy entered into to bind Newfoundland hard and fast to the rebuilt chariot of Toryism, and pull her here and there according as the charioteers desired, and ultimately when too bruised, bleeding and weak to protest, to wreak her final destruction by other means. Andromeda chained to the rock by the decree of Zeus, was not more helpless than is Terra Nova today in the clutch of the Tory Combine, and only the timely arrival of a Perseus will avert the fate to which, like the daughter of Cepheus, Newfoundland has been destined. The dragon of ring rule is approaching: the monster of monopoly rears itself up and rushes toward its victim. But help and relief is near. The District of St. John's West will be the Perseus to rescue chained Terra Nova from her impending fate, and give her the liberty she craves. Already the champions are arming for the rescue, the day for which has been set on January 22nd, when tyranny and grinding monopoly will be defeated and the first shackles of the chain which fetters the country, broken and smashed to atoms. The hour of deliverance is bright with promise of the future, and reclaimed from the Tory dragon, Newfoundland will set herself to the task of restoring order out of the chaos into which she has been plunged by the present short term administration.

Apart from the serious inconvenience done the outport fish exporters, no less than those in the city, outside the ring, by the Export regulations, if nothing is said of loss of time and money by reason of the almost impossibility of observing the conditions, there is another aspect of which cognizance must be taken. The Spanish merchants—our oldest customers—are being treated invidiously. No longer, under the regulations, have the exporters any right—may they will not be allowed—to send their fish to Spain as in other days. The tentacles of Hawes & Co. have reached out and grasped everything of a fish transaction in sight, and by orders of the powers that be, each and every cargo of fish exported from Newfoundland can only be sold through this firm. No wonder the Spaniards are threatening reprisals; no wonder the fish buyers of the biggest consumers in Europe are taking retaliatory measures. Notice was served on the country on Saturday that unless the obnoxious regulations were withdrawn, the Spanish Government would be requested to PROHIBIT THE SALE AND EXPORT OF SALT TO Newfoundland, and to further increase the duty on all the products of the Newfoundland fisheries entering Spanish ports. There is food for reflection in this statement, and Newfoundlanders, particularly the men of St. John's West are asked to THINK IT OVER.

A QUERY.

The Advocate, on Saturday, stated that the Opposition Party is in league with the Italian Consorzio to keep down the price of fish. If this be so, how comes it that Spain is putting up such a fight against the regulations, and threatening to prohibit the export of salt to Newfoundland? The Advocate also charges the Telegram with hitting below the belt over the price of flour, and admonishes us to keep our hands off the Union Trading Company. So far as we are concerned the Union Trading Company becomes a fair target for attack when it joins forces with the profiteers. Has the U.T.C. advanced its prices on flour stocks purchased before the Canadian advance? The answer is awaited.

Snap Shots From the West End.

Alex. Campbell, M.D., the political bouncer, to whom the electors of the West End gave the "grand bounce," is puffing a lot these days. He is running short of wind and will totally collapse on the twenty-second instant.

This genius from Pugwash was a meek individual when first he struck this town, but has now become so self-important that he looks upon the voters of St. John's West as easy marks.

Holding up public officials he demands that they work overtime to ensure the election of Squires and the "solid little man." But the gall of Campbell is nauseating in the extreme, for we are not the kind of people to put up with bouncers of the Campbell type.

Sir M. F. Cashin was good enough for Campbell for eight years. He hung on to Sir Michael for eight years and made a big haul, but like all ingrates he now bites the hand that helped him in his days of adversity.

But we will place Alexander and his associates in their proper places on the twenty-second. We will give him and them something stiffer to chew than Wrigley's Gum.

Brownrigg left the Council, because, as he states, he was ignored when the Prince came here. He left the city in a disgraceful condition, too. Let me ask the "solid little man" what had the people to do with that incident? What guarantee have the people now that he will not desert his post on some important occasion on a similar silly excuse.

The voters of the West End turned out Campbell, but Squires in defiance of the voice of the people placed him in the Executive. Honorable Doctor Campbell—who made him Honorable?

Jim MacDonnell is keeping things hot in the West End. Squires is afraid to meet him on a public platform. The voters like courageous fighters, and on the twenty-second will show their appreciation of them. The West End was always a good old battle ground. All of us learned how to fight bouncers like Campbell from Lord Morris, and we will show that we have not forgotten the lesson. Watch the campaign and see the old Morris tide sweep on to victory.

Coopers, Laborers and Truckmen all are waiting to wipe out Coakerism in St. John's. Making the grass grow on Water Street is Coaker's motto, taking the means of living from the men of St. John's is his aim. Bringing them into subservency is his hope. But fortunately the voters of St. John's West have a say in the matter and are going to say it with a vengeance.

Lord Morris always warned us that "Tory times were hard times," and sure enough they are. Going on our hands and knees to procure a hoghead of coal is a true indication that the Tories are back to power.

The workman's butter is gone up six cents a pound. Flour is gone up a dollar and a half a barrel, but Squires and the "solid little man" are afraid to vex their supporters—the merchants—by demanding that a square deal should be given the people.

Arise then, voters of the West End, and like your fathers in days gone by crush for ever Toryism in St. John's. Don't make any mistake. Things are going from bad to worse. Now is your opportunity, so rally to Liberalism and Labor, and by electing James T. Martin and William Linegar make the first step on the road to secure again the prosperity we enjoyed for the past eight years.

HANG 'ER DOWN.

Mr. T. J. Duley Very Ill.

Mr. T. J. Duley, the Water Street Jeweller, was taken to the General Hospital last evening and operated on for intestinal obstruction. On Thursday he was taken suddenly ill and his medical advisors decided yesterday, on consultation, that an operation would be necessary. Following the operation at the Hospital he rested easily and was doing as well as could be expected.

Well Deserved Promotion.

Mr. D. Bentley who has been Supt. of the line between the Sub-Station and Petty Harbor for some years has been promoted to the position of foreman at the former place, made vacant by the resignation of Mr. T. Armstrong. For the past 20 years Mr. Bentley has been connected with the Reid Electrical Department and his appointment will be hailed with pleasure by his numerous friends.

Men Injured in Paper Town.

According to a message received in the city yesterday by Mr. W. Scott, manager of the Anglo-Nfld. Dev. Co., of Grand Falls, an accident occurred in the generator room at 11 o'clock on Saturday night, due to a short circuit; it is not known what caused the latter nor the amount of damage done. Three men—Hannaford, Morrow and Christian—were in the room at the time, the first being severely injured and the second slightly. Christian escaped unhurt. The supplies necessary for repairing were rushed out by special train yesterday, and it is thought that the plant will be running again by to-morrow or Very Stormy Trip.

Seal has hard experience—Brought Belle Isle Light Keepers and families.

S. S. Seal Capt. Rendell, had a trying experience in rescuing the light keepers and marconi operators at Belle Isle. The ship encountered a succession of storms and heavy ice and the trip was in the words of 2nd mate Pomeroy, the worst he had ever experienced in his forty years at sea. In fact the difficulties encountered were beyond description. Leaving St. Anthony the ship went to Jackson's Arm, and from there went to the Straits finding the ice heavy the ship had to put back. A second attempt was made, after coal and provisions, which were short, had been procured. In this attempt the vessel met very heavy ice, with blinding snow, and got jammed 9 miles from Belle Isle where she drove back of the White Islands. The ice loosened up, but the ship drove a-ground, it was very stormy at the time and after an hours effort she was got off, and headed south. Here heavy slob was met. The ship was now headed for Belle Isle but was leaking about 10 inches of water per hour, and the pumps had to be kept going. On making the south of Belle Isle the coast was clear and little difficulty was experienced in getting the people off. This was Jan. 1st, two hours after making port the ship left for the north end of the island but could not get close on account of heavy slob, so all boat was sent ashore and the light keepers, and children were safely got on board. There were sixteen people on the island, and had only one weeks provisions left, all of it cattle having been killed to help the supply along. Two of the marconi operators belong to here, the rest of the people were Canadians, and left yesterday by the Kyle for their homes. On the return trip south the Seal left the island at 6 o'clock in the evening, and arrived at Cape Bauld at 8 p.m. The light house keepers here did not wish to leave as they thought they had provisions enough to last them till spring. There are 13 or 14 people at this station. Leaving there a call was made at Nipper's Hr. At Little Bay Islands a shipment of herring was taken on board. The Bay was frozen over, and great difficulty was experienced in making port. The schr. Union Jack fish laden was taken in tow from here, and after getting half way to Twillingate, the ship had to put back, but managed to make Fortune Hr. Very heavy ice was encountered and while off Twillingate the ship and vessel were jammed for 3 hours, however, the ice slackened and at 8 o'clock Twillingate was made. Two nights and one day were spent at Twillingate. In the morning with the Jack still in tow, a start was made, but off Herring Neck heavy slob was met and the vessels had to heave to for the night. In the morning an attempt was made to get around Baccalao where the ice was found, packed on the land, and to add to the trouble the Jack sprang a leak; and again both vessels had to put back to Twillingate. The Union Jack was left at Twillingate and the trip was resumed. Slob ice was met as far as Cape Fogo: A vessel from the Bar-racks and the Seal went to her assistance. The vessel was jammed and assistance could not be rendered, though no distress signals were shown by the schooner. The ship lay to all night as a storm was raging and at daylight a start was made again and Greenspond was reached on Friday the 18th where a number of passengers were landed. Catalina and Trinity were made without difficulty. The Seal leaving Trinity at 5.25 Saturday morning arrived in port at midnight.

Coaker's "Regulations" (?) are as great a menace to our Trade as a fleet of icebergs is to shipping on the great Atlantic seaways.

MONDAY, Jan. 12. One of the outstanding products of which we have sole control is Red Cross Oil. Red Cross Oil ranks high among that rather large class of pain remedies and diffusible stimulating mixtures which are so necessary in cases of cramps, diarrhoea, internal pains, rheumatism, neuralgia, toothache and other troubles of like nature. Taken according to directions, it is certainly one of the best things of the kind available. Red Cross Oil has a growing reputation, and we believe that it will to a large extent supersede other remedies of the kind, owing to its great strength and its moderate price. Price 25c.

Comparative Values in Footwear!

With the majority of people, price is the chief consideration in purchasing footwear. That's why there are so many uncomfortable feet in Newfoundland to-day and so many dissatisfied shoe purchasers.

For low-priced shoes cannot be good shoes—the high cost of good materials and skilled labour won't permit. Then why experiment—at the expense of your comfort—with low-priced shoes? Why not wear

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

DO YOU STUTTER?

"There, that's the sixth time since we've been sitting here that I've heard the word 'stutter'."

We were sitting in the office of a little summer hotel last summer when the lady beside me made that exclamation. Outside the window a group of young people were chattering, and the lady beside me, as she knitted, had been listening to their chatter.

"Listen," she added, "and see for yourself if you ever heard anything like it."

Four Times in Five Minutes. I listened. In an instant I was rewarded with, "That sweater is the most wonderful color I ever saw."

A minute later I heard, "Oh let's not sit here gooping. Let's do something, it's such a wonderful day." And then, "Let's go over to the cove, that's a wonderful walk." As they drifted down the path there floated back to me, "My dear, where did you get those chocolates? They're simply wonderful."

"Give the average young person one word for everything she likes, another for everything she dislikes and half a dozen slang expressions."

Of course, that's a rather harsh and sweeping dictum, but it does certainly suggest the conversational limitations of a good many young people. Nor is it only young people who cruelly overwork words. Don't we all, young and old, get runs on this or that word or expression and work them to death?

The effect of a very interesting book that I was reading the other day was painfully marred by the author's trick of saying, "quite suddenly" every two paragraphs. I fell to watching for it, which, of course, interfered with my interest in the story.

You Should See How Many I Take Out. Do not think I am unconscious of my own sins in this line. Such expressions as "perhaps," "of course," "rather," are my stumbling blocks, and if you think I use them too often you should see how many I take out. I read somewhere a criticism of stuttering in writing. The critic said that a great many writers instead of saying simply and directly what they had to say stuttered, that is, constantly used expressions like "of course," and "to be sure," "I want to thank you," "May I be allowed?" etc. I thought the characterization of these indirections and redundancies as stuttering most excellent.

BUSY ANIMALS.

The hens are laying luscious fruit, and cackle in their pride; they seem to know that from the Teut they'll help to take the hide. My Dorking hens, in other days, were rather stern and dour; but now when'er a chicken lays, she cackles by the hour. My old red cow's as fine as silk, she knows our needs, I think; the way she's turning out the milk would drive a man to drink. She stands around and chews her cud, until the milking's done, and seems to say, "This foaming food will help to can the Hun." It may be I imagine it, but Dobbin seems to know; he pulls up harder on the bit, he's always keen to go. I hitch him to my one-hoss plow, and as he does his trick, methinks he says, "I'm striving now to queer the Prussian hick." This Dobbin horse was wont to balk before we drew the sword, and I would pelt him with a rock and tam him with a board. It may be

I imagine things, but let us hope I'm right; we'll surely spoil the kraut-fed kings, if all the dumb brutes fight.

The Queen's Champion.

Of all the tragic incidents connected with the French Revolution, none could be more pathetic than those which ended the lives of Marie Antoinette, the beautiful Queen of France, and Count Fersen, her lover. When Marie Antoinette found herself transported to the dull decorum of the French Court, and to the reluctant and irresponsible arms of her husband, the Dauphin, she was but a child of 14, but exquisitely beautiful. Her husband was too much absorbed in eating, drinking and hunting, to spare a smile for his girl-wife, and it was little wonder that she resented this neglect. It was on January 12, 1774, that she first met Count Fersen, and in him her fate. Fersen was a young Swedish officer who was visiting the French Court, and very soon the spiteful tongue of scandal was wagging. But the storm of the Revolution was about to burst and Fersen was ready to shield the woman he loved from the dangers which were gathering round her. The people hated her for her beauty and alien birth, and when bloodshed and rapine became rampant Fersen was by the Queen's side, rockless of the death that ever menaced him. But even such love and fidelity could not save her, for she was torn from him and led to death. For seventeen years the Count survived the day of tragedy, and became moody and melancholy, his one wish being to die and end it all. One day he went in full ceremonial dress, and his gilded coach drawn by six white horses, to join the funeral procession of Gustavus IV., of Sweden. A cry was raised that the latter had been poisoned by Fersen, and his carriage was surrounded by a fierce mob, clamouring for his blood. They struck him with their fists, tore out his ear-rings, with pieces of flesh, and finally dragged him out of his carriage and trampled him to death. Not content with this, they stripped and mutilated the corpse, and carried the fragments about the town. Thus the devoted lover, who had served the object of his devotion faithfully for herself alone, ended his days in a tragedy even more terrible than that which closed the life of the luckless Queen seventeen years previously.

Why Not Tax Names?

Why not suggest to the Minister of Finance, asks a correspondent, that he might increase the revenue of the Dominion by taxing freak names? If people will burden their babies with names by the dozen, or with those of a more or less topical nature—well, make them pay.

What chance of longevity had a girl named Irene Jacoby Fanny Jessop Cavendish de Rienz Selina Anna Susannah Shelton Peter? None. She died young, and, of course, the coroner's officer decided that an inquest was necessary.

Yet, undeterred by this fearful warning, a man named Pepper—plain Arthur Pepper—gave one of his daughters a whole alphabet of names: Ann Bertha Cecilia Diana Emily Fanny Gertrude Hypatia Inez Jane Kate Louisa Maud Nora Ophelia Phyllis Quince Rebecca Starkey Teresa Ulysses Venus Winifred Xenophon Yent Zeus.

Just as great an infliction on its owner may be the typical name. During the Crimean War there was a tremendous run on Alma, and long afterwards registrars became equally familiar with Rhodessa and Ismailia as name for girls.

Kitchener's victory set a lot of people off again, with the result that Omdurman became plentiful, and one poor little beggar was handicapped with Gordon Kitchener Omdurman. Then came the Boer War, during which this sort of thing was hit off in doggerel:—

For the baby's name is Kitchener Carlington Methuen Kekewick White Cronje Plumer Powell Majuba Gatacre Warren Colenso Kruger Capetown Mafeking French Kimberley Ladysmith Bobs Union Jacks and Fighting Mac—Lyddite— Pretoria—BLOBS!

But the craze reached its height in the early days of the late war, when such combinations as Jellicoe French, Albert Nicholas, Louvain Mons, etc., were freely bestowed on hapless infants.

Ticketing children with strings of names, however, still continues, and a check is needed for that, if only because of the high cost of paper! So what about a name tax?

Well Done, "Kyle"!

HATS OFF TO CAPT. STEVENSON.
(Western Star.)

Not only is the Kyle the queen of the Reid fleet, but to her belongs the laurels of being the queen as an ice-breaker of all the steamers plying in our waters. And the captains who come to our coast must take off their caps to Capt. Stevenson for the able manner in which he navigated the Kyle through 10 or 12 miles of ice up the Humber. For the past three weeks the Kyle has made as many trips from North Sydney, to Bay of Islands, landing cargoes of coal at Humbermouth, cutting up ice and liberating three schooners and a steamer that were frozen in, and calling at various wharves at Curling and Benoit's Cove for shipments of herring. Other steamers came to the office, even at an early part of the season, at the first appearance of ice, but made little or no attempt to get into Curling, though they had much freight for here. Not so with Capt. Stevenson, however. Humbermouth, over three miles further up the Arm than Curling, was his destination, and he got there on each occasion. Newfoundland and American vessels were frozen in at Curling and Summerside. He cut them out and towed them down the Humber. He made it possible for our herring dealers to market this past season's voyage, and only on her last trip to Sydney she had a call to go up the Gulf and cut out a big Canadian freight steamer that had got caught in the ice. The amount of service rendered by Capt. Stevenson in his good ship Kyle the past three weeks cannot be estimated on a monetary basis.

Herring Fishery.

The Bonne Bay herring catch is estimated at 4,100 brls. made up as follows: 1100 "Scotch" and 3000 local. There were 1600 barrels of local and 60 brls. Scotch to ship from there last week. Full figures for the Bay of Islands herring fishery are not yet in, as the voyage has not yet closed. The total catch up to last week was estimated at about twenty thousand barrels, including about 11 thousand of the Scotch pack.—Western Star.

The Need for Extra Transportation.

(Western Star.)

The Government is calling for tenders for four steamers for the coastal mail and passenger service of this country. It is hoped that it will be seen to that we will not be further burdened with ships of the tin can class.

We further think it would not be to the good of the country generally for the operation of the four steamers to go to any one person or company. In fact we believe that if our various branches of transportation were owned and operated by separate companies, the country would have better service than it is receiving to-day.

The public should also be protected in the matter of passenger and freight rates. As it now stands the captain of a ship may trump up an excuse and put passengers ashore on the rocks and dump freight out anywhere, though full fares and rates have been paid,—as witness an instance right here last fall.

Transportation is becoming a serious problem in this country. As it is to-day, people are deterred in their industries through the uncertainty of transportation, and the country, as a consequence, suffers. This uncertainty is, perhaps, the weakest point in our transportation system. Sometimes, no doubt, it is due to the system having to carry too great a burden, but there are exceptions even to that. The transportation problem will have to be tackled, and greater means provided to meet the requirements of the growing and new industries of the country if Newfoundland is ever to rise above the ratings of a fifth-class town.

Burnt Islands.

FINDS THAT TORY TIMES ARE HARD TIMES.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather, the fishery has been somewhat hampered, and also the scarcity of bait, but now, when the boats do get out on the fishing grounds, they get from 3 to 4 qts. on salt squid.

The schr. Vanda recently arrived with a load of produce from P.E.I., consigned to R. Moulton, Ltd. This firm has had a fairly good year, but not as good as it might have been owing to the high price of fish being paid in the early spring.

We are now shut off from freight and mails. Certainly if the people don't wake up, their mails and freight will soon be back to the old-fashioned way. There is one way of getting the mails here, rough or fine weather, and that is: The Government should put a road from here to Port aux Basques. It can be done easily, and it's just as well to do this with the money, so it will be of some good, as it is to waste the revenue in other ways. There is another way of getting our mail, viz. by water, if a good motor boat, capable of carrying passengers, is put on. Sometimes we are ten and twelve days getting the mails. So by the time our papers and letters get here they are pretty old. Apparently the coastal steamers are out of the question. Certainly the harbor is pretty safe, but then, if it's not real fine—or put it in a vulgar way—"an old woman's day" they pass by and that leaves us to go for freight to Port aux Basques or Rose Blanche. At the present time freight has left St. John's since November 1st, and not here yet.

Taking everything into consideration, we should get a better mail and freight service. The present one is certainly not right for the 20th century, and it's even worse than when the old "Volunteer" and others were on the coast. Somebody must be to blame for the mismanagement of both the mail and freight.

Burnt Islands, Burgeo and LaPelle, Dec. 27, 1919.

NOT FOR OURSELVES.
Not for ourselves in golden gain;
Not for a bigger stretch of land;
Not for a port to rule the main,
Not for a nation to command!
We brave the fight on land and sea,
That suffering people shall go free.

Heads high, we march unto the field
Singing the songs of free-born men,
Hiding no stains upon our shield,
Having no cause we dare not pen.
To-day our banners are unfurled
As champions of a better world.

It ever holy war was made,
If ever men have died for truth
And drawn in honor's cause the blade
It is this strife which claims our youth.

No selfish cunning mars our thought—
We fought and died as free men ought.

Address and Presentation.

St. John's, Nfld., Jan. 10, 1920. Dear Mr. Maxon.—On this, the eve of your departure from Newfoundland, to take up your new duties in Canada, your co-workers take this opportunity of expressing their regret in losing from this office one whose presence and guidance has brought the Newfoundland branch of the Singer business to such a high standard, earning the respect and confidence of every member of the staff working with you. Indeed, Sir, the records you have achieved for this office has made it exceedingly difficult for your successor.

Your presence has been an inspiration, and it has always been a pleasure to work with you, guiding in a just manner and showing special favor to none.

We congratulate you upon the well-earned promotion, and hope your success will be still greater in your new field of labor.

We cherish one little consolation, the fact that in the course of your duties as supervising agent you will occasionally favor us with your visits.

As a memento of your connection with this office we would ask you to accept this little souvenir, hoping that "time" will always treat you kindly and well.

With the hope that health and happiness will always be yours, we bid you farewell.

Yours very truly,
Signed by the employees.

REPLY:

Dear Mr. Pike and co-workers,—Within the past few weeks I have been notified by Head Office, that I have been made Supervising Agent for the Dominion of Newfoundland and the Province of Nova Scotia, and I address these few words to you and my co-workers at St. John's to say au revoir.

I thank you sincerely for your valuable gift, the watch, which you have presented me with, not so much for its value, but because of the kindly sentiment which I know animates you all on this occasion.

While my new duties will cause a temporary absence from Newfoundland I shall see you all as business and time permits.

"In the golden chain of Friendship," dear friends and co-workers, regard me as a link, and if ever any of you happen to meet me at the Singer Headquarters in the Land of the Maple Leaf, regard me as a link that binds.

My three years in Newfoundland have been happy, and from a business standpoint successful, and I hope in the years to come we shall achieve the same success. With your co-operation and earnest effort, big results must come.

Yours fraternally,
T. H. MAXON.

What Makes a Soap Bubble?

A bubble is merely a hollow ball of water with air inside. The air coming up through the water in trying to rise out of the water is caught in the water in such a way as to form the bubble, and since the ability of the air inside of the bubble to rise is greater than that of the water which forms the bubble, and which has a tendency to pull it down, the bubble rises into the air. The water ball is thin and keeps running down to the bottom of the ball, where you see it form into drops, and soon this makes the walls of the water bubble so thin that the air bursts through the ball of water, and that is all.—From the book of Wonders, Published and Copyrighted by the Bureau of Industrial Education, Inc., Washington, D.C.

The Weapon That Did It.

It has recently come out that before and during the war the Germans built no less than 810 submarines, and a great English Admiral has stated that Germany came within an ace of winning out in 1917 so great were the ravages of her undersea boats. The weapon which in the end really beat the Teuton on the sea was the depth bomb. The formidable weapon was invented by the merest accident, so says the "Scientific American." Early in the war a fast English cruiser on sighting a submarine on the surface dashed for the enemy at full speed in an attempt to ram. The submarine submerged just in time to escape the blow and the officers and crew of the cruiser were chagrined to realize that though they could plainly see the submarine swiftly speeding away below them as they swept over her, they were helpless to damage or destroy her. One of the officers exclaimed: "If I had only possessed some form of bomb to have dropped upon the enemy, we could have easily destroyed her." This led to many experiments, one of them being the submarine dart, consisting of a high explosive shell with a shaft for throwing it. It exploded by direct contact, but the trouble with this was that it was exceedingly seldom a surface ship ever got right above a submarine to drop the bomb directly upon her. The next problem was to destroy the submarine by violent concussion transmitted through the incompressible water from a bomb exploded in the vicinity of the submarine. This led to the construction of a cylinder shaped bomb made to explode at a definite depth by hydrostatic pressure. From a capacity of sixty pounds of high explosive, it rapidly rose to two hundred, three hundred, and by the close of the war to six hundred pounds, this latter weapon being powerful enough to destroy a submarine within a hundred and seventy feet, and was almost certain to disable one at three hundred yards. After the depth bomb was perfected, it became noticeable to the German authorities that submarine after submarine failed to return from her trip, and this rapid disappearance of so many began to get upon the sailors' nerves, and it became harder and harder to get crews for the desperate and dangerous work. By such means were the dreams of German victory destroyed.—Acadian Recorder.

The Greatest Ships.

The question is often asked "Which is the largest ship in the world to-day?" The answer to this is the "Ovishatan" which is 907 feet long. The next in size is the "Imperator," of 885 feet, a ship 14 1/2 feet longer than the "Aquitania." The "Olympic" is 16 feet shorter than the Aquitania, but is 72 greater tonnage. Among war ships the "Renown" and her sister ship the "Repulse" are 750 feet long. These are the largest war ships now in service, but the largest war vessel now in the water is the British battle-cruiser "Hood," which is 900 feet long and of 42,000 tons full load displacement. The American Naval Department has designed six battle-cruisers of 875 feet in length. There is also a rumour that the British Admiralty are at work on a ship larger and more powerful than the "Hood." For two generations the "Great Eastern" was the giant of the giants of the sea, and men held their breath with wonder at the mighty hull, whose keel measured 679 1/2 feet and whose displacement was 18,915 tons. To-day there are many ships with vaster measurements than this, and in honour to her great architect, it must be said that he was far ahead of his time.—Ex.

Mr. Foley Answered.

His Sincerity of Action and Purpose Questioned.

By J. R. SMALLWOOD.
Several days I had been looking to the letter which, under the name of Michael Foley, appeared in the Star of Saturday's date. I told me some time previous, was his intention to publish a letter in a short while. I was serious as to what it would contain and Saturday told me the first paragraph of the letter. Mr. Foley's name is signed and the words appear: "My object in writing you is to make it clear to the public where labor stands to-day in regard to the party issue now before the electorate of St. John's West." In the first place may I enquire just what is meant by "public"? If I make no mistake the workingmen (whose sentiments the letter is attempting to express) are the public. At least ninety-five per cent. of the public is comprised of workingmen, generally known as "Labor." Then why, and to what purpose, tell the public the sentiment of the public? Secondly, may I ask the writer of the letter upon what grounds does Mr. Foley attempt to express the sentiments of the workingmen of St. John's West? How does he know them? Would he be able to find his way around in St. John's West without a guide? Upon what authority does Mr. Foley take upon himself, the duty of expressing the sentiments of the public of St. John's West?

Further down this statement appears: "We fought in the general election and were defeated, and not being prepared financially to go into the bye-election our only course was to remain neutral and let it be fought out by the present government and the opposition on their respective merits." Is that so? Who, besides Mr. Foley, says so? And upon what authority does the writer of the letter say so? It is the opinion of Mr. Foley that the Workingmen's Party should have kept out of the fight. But who made Mr. Foley the one whose opinion should be final? And by what right does he question the decision of the Workingmen's Party Committee? The committee says "yes," and Mr. Foley says "no," and that settles it. Yes?

The letter goes on to say that Mr. Squires, in an interview which Messrs. Linegar, Cadwell and Foley had with him, placed before them his programme for labor legislation. The legislation, Mr. Foley says, is very acceptable to the workingmen of St. John's West, and should be sufficient. But that proposed legislation was in the manifesto of Hon. R. A. Squires before the election. Why, then, did Mr. Foley, as a candidate for the Workingmen's Party, oppose Mr. Squires and fight for a distinct labor program? The answer is that Mr. Foley had then been chosen to be a candidate and that this time he had not.
Upon the invitation of Sir Michael Cashin, it goes on further to say, Messrs. Linegar, Cadwell, Foley and James McGrath met the Opposition leader, who invited them to put a man on the ticket for the bye-election. "We decided," says Mr. Foley's mouthpiece, "not to do anything without meeting the committee." Why not? Why not have decided, among themselves, to do so or not, as they wished? Did the four gentlemen believe that it was the right of the committee to decide whether or no the Workingmen's Party, which the committee represented, would place a man on the ticket? That is what Mr. Foley says they believed, and he is right. They did believe exactly that and rightly so. It was right and proper that the committee which fought the November election should have the privilege of deciding such matter. Well, the committee did decide. Did Mr. Foley accept the decision of the committee? No, he did not. Why didn't he? He believed that it was the right of the committee to decide, and when it does decide he refuses to accept its decision. Why? Was it because the committee did not elect HIM as the candidate? Come now, Mr. Foley, and answer that.

the people of the district (except, in some cases, by name) and received the smallest vote of the party. Those votes were the party votes and would have been given a Labor candidate in any case. Right through the campaign, in every speech which he made, Mr. Foley made a direct and open appeal to the electors "to vote for Foley."—not, mind you, the Workingmen's Party candidates, but Foley. The thing was noticeable and much remarked.
The impression of Mr. Foley that I formed, during the weeks I met him in the campaign, was that he was very anxious to get into the Assembly. How he got in he didn't much care, as long as he did get there. I say this without the least particle of hatred for Mr. Foley. I supported him to the best of my ability, in the November election, exactly as I did the other two. In fact it was I who stood at his elbow, on the Saturday night preceding the Monday of the election, as the open air meeting was being held on the corner, and prompted him with subjects with which to keep up his speech. I supported him then and I would do the same to-morrow if he were a candidate by the request of the Workingmen's Party Committee. The thousand men who voted for Linegar are the same. They are true blue laborites and they can neither be bluffed, coddled nor bought.
I am extremely sorry to have had to say this about Mr. Foley. We have been friends and I hope we will continue to be. However, and in spite of this, I cannot allow anything spoken or written against the Workingmen's Party candidate to go unanswered. I believe that Mr. Foley will understand this.

"You Are Under Weight, My Boy"

"YES, sir."
"Do you know what that means?"
"No, sir."
"It means that your body is not properly nourished. You are not getting the right food; or else not obtaining full benefit of the food you eat! Are you easily tired?"
"Yes, sir."
"How are you getting along at school?"
"Not very well."
"Now, I am going to send a report to your parents, so that they may know your condition, and I want you to do what I tell you, so as to regain your normal weight."
"All right, sir."
"You can never expect to get far in athletics, or school either, so long as your blood is thin for lack of proper nourishment and your nerves starved and exhausted."
"We shall go a little easy on exercise, and I have asked your parents to see that you eat plenty of plain, nourishing food. I have also suggested the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so as to enrich the blood and tone up your nervous system."

"Is that a medicine?"
"Yes. I suppose you might call it that, but it is entirely different to most medicines, because it builds up tissue instead of tearing it down. It is what is called a restorative. It sharpens the appetite, improves digestion and helps you to obtain full benefit of the food you eat. We are not much on medicines around here, but Chase's Nerve Food has helped so many under-weight boys whom I know that I never lose an opportunity to recommend it."
"I hope it helps me, for I would like to be able to do 'stunts' like the other fellows, and I don't seem to have the strength now."
"You are ready to do your part then? That is what I want to know."
"Yes, sir, I am."
"We will weigh you every week, and I am sure we shall soon have you all right."

Forty-One Years in the Public Service—The Evening Telegram.

Motor Car and Motor Truck Owners.

I have a splendid equipment for general automobile work and can guarantee first class overhauling. Every engine tested under its own power before being put back in the car, thereby getting over the greatest enemy an engine can have, that is oil leaks. All oil leaks are detected and made right, consequently you can be sure of a good and lasting job. I also have a Hempy Cooper rebarbbiting and reboring machine for crank shaft and connecting rods, which insures quiet running, as all bearings are in perfect line. With this equipment we can do work quickly and much more practical than heretofore.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

My Garage will be closed from March 10th until April 15th, as I am taking my entire Mechanical Staff on a visit to the Motor Factories with a view to giving first class service. Parties wishing to have their cars overhauled for the coming season would be wise to have them done immediately. For instance, parts may be found broken or worn and it may not be possible to replace them here, in which case I can get them while away, thereby saving a lot of inconvenience and disappointment when the car is wanted. One thing is sure, cars that are overhauled in the winter months are given better inspection than those done in the rush season; so just call us up and we will get your car in and have it done right away.

I have a supply of repair parts in stock. Room for about 50 more cars. Ford Trucks taken care of with despatch.
