—OR—
For Daisie's Sake

CHAPTER XXXVI.
THE STRENGTH OF LOVE.

"I cannot tell you what joy I felt, what triumph it is beyond words," he cried. "My first thought was for Daisie—to go to her, to hear her rejoice over my restoration. But they sent for me to Raymond, who had been taken to the hospital. I had to go. He wished to tell me something before he died—a secret—so I cannot tell you any more," he added, with a meaning look at Annette.

She sobbed aloud:

"And he is dead, brave soul?"

"No—not when I came away. He might linger some time. It was impossible for the doctors to say."

"And you deserted his dying bed, Royall Sherwood, when he had given his life for yours? Cruel!" she cried, with passionate indignation.

He looked abashed for a moment, then answered:

"Poor fellow! I could do him no good staying till the last, and I was eager to see Daisie, of course. Who could blame me?"

"Let me go home!" the girl cried chokingly, rushing from among them to seek her mother's sympathetic arms.

Passionate sobs, a meek confession, eager entreaties, and mother and daughter set out on the first train for New York.

In the gray dawn, they reached the hospital.

"Is he alive yet?"

"Oh, yes; and there is the barest chance he may pull through, in spite of his awful injuries. So glad that some of his friends are come at last. Poor fellow! He seemed so lonely," said the kind nurse.

Soon she was kneeling by his cot, her lips against his cheek, sobbing:

"Ray, do you know me—your little Annette? My hero, will you forgive me?"

"Oh, my darling, how noble of you to come to me before—I died! I have done all I could to atone. It is for you to forgive," the weak voice murmured.

"Oh, Ray, you will not die. I will pray, pray, pray, as you did when you brought Royall through the fire to

Pains About the Heart

ANY derangement of the heart's action is alarming. Frequently pains about the heart are caused by the formation of gas arising from indigestion.

Relief from this condition is obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Chronic indigestion results from sluggish liver action, constipation of the bowels and inactive kidneys.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills arouse these organs to activity they thoroughly cure indigestion and overcome the many annoying symptoms.

sun peeped in through the shutters. He rose in a tumult of fear, and began to dress, but almost immediately Doctor Burns came in, exclaiming: "Good news! She passed the crisis safely at midnight, and will live."

CHAPTER XXXVII.
FOR ROYALL'S SAKE.

She was better, sweet Daisie—with care and good nursing her life would be preserved to her friends.

But that obstinate nurse, so clever and opinionated, would not permit Royall Sherwood to see his wife for a week. She said:

"I don't profess to understand it, doctor, not at all, but facts are stubborn things, and I know that the presence of her husband has a distinctly injurious effect on Mrs. Sherwood's health. Perhaps they had quarreled before she left home; I don't know; but if he wants her to get well tell him to stay out of the sick room for a week at least."

Royall was secretly furious, but he had to obey.

"A week is not long," encouraged the sympathetic old doctor. "And we have to humor the whims of nurses as well as invalids, you know. After all, it will do you more good to exercise your newly gained strength in the open air than pottering about a sick room."

Royall grumbled, but he obeyed, taking rooms at the hotel, and calling each day at the cottage.

And he managed to kill time and enjoy himself in many ways, despite his solicitude over Daisie. He boated, drove, and walked with some congenial friends he made at the hotel, and his strength and his good looks returned fast. The days flew fast and pleasantly.

When the week was up, the grim nurse herself came to meet him when he called to inquire for Daisie.

"She is improving every day, but very slowly, and I have let her sit up in an easy-chair to-day for the first time," she said.

"Does she know I am here?" he asked hopefully, eagerly.

"I broke it to her gently this morning, but still the shock was great. Perhaps it was from joy at hearing you were well again," said the nurse, who could not understand a fact that she easily perceived—that the invalid seemed to have a secret shrinking from him.

As she knew none of the circumstances of the strange marriage, she felt convinced that the young wife must have had a quarrel with her husband before she came to visit her aunt.

How could she gauge the strange despair of Daisie when she learned that her duty would be harder than ever now? That instead of playing the role of friend and sister, as heretofore, she must assume the real status of a wife?

No wonder that she fainted, and that the nurse was sadly frightened ere she restored her to consciousness.

She felt sorry for the anxious young husband, and said gently:

"My dear young lady, if you could bear to see him a little while it would make him very happy."

Daisie was silent a moment, then she said gently and hopelessly, it seemed to the attentive nurse:

"Of course I will see my husband. It is his right and my duty—I mean, my pleasure."

So the woman let her sit up after a while, and made her as pretty as she could—poor, pallid, wasted Daisie, with her shorn head, where the golden locks were just peeping out again, covered with a soft lace scarf; and so she awaited his coming.

She had been so sorry for his affliction that she was unselfishly glad of his restoration to health, and the tears came to her eyes when he entered, stepping with his free grace of old.

"Daisie!"

"Royall!"

"She is improving every day, but very slowly, and I have let her sit up in an easy-chair to-day for the first time," she said.

"Does she know I am here?" he asked hopefully, eagerly.

"I broke it to her gently this morning, but still the shock was great. Perhaps it was from joy at hearing you were well again," said the nurse, who could not understand a fact that she easily perceived—that the invalid seemed to have a secret shrinking from him.

As she knew none of the circumstances of the strange marriage, she felt convinced that the young wife must have had a quarrel with her husband before she came to visit her aunt.

How could she gauge the strange despair of Daisie when she learned that her duty would be harder than ever now? That instead of playing the role of friend and sister, as heretofore, she must assume the real status of a wife?

No wonder that she fainted, and that the nurse was sadly frightened ere she restored her to consciousness.

She felt sorry for the anxious young husband, and said gently:

"My dear young lady, if you could bear to see him a little while it would make him very happy."

Daisie was silent a moment, then she said gently and hopelessly, it seemed to the attentive nurse:

"Of course I will see my husband. It is his right and my duty—I mean, my pleasure."

So the woman let her sit up after a while, and made her as pretty as she could—poor, pallid, wasted Daisie, with her shorn head, where the golden locks were just peeping out again, covered with a soft lace scarf; and so she awaited his coming.

She had been so sorry for his affliction that she was unselfishly glad of his restoration to health, and the tears came to her eyes when he entered, stepping with his free grace of old.

"Daisie!"

"Royall!"

CHAPTER XL.
FOR ROYALL'S SAKE.

She was better, sweet Daisie—with care and good nursing her life would be preserved to her friends.

But that obstinate nurse, so clever and opinionated, would not permit Royall Sherwood to see his wife for a week. She said:

"I don't profess to understand it, doctor, not at all, but facts are stubborn things, and I know that the presence of her husband has a distinctly injurious effect on Mrs. Sherwood's health. Perhaps they had quarreled before she left home; I don't know; but if he wants her to get well tell him to stay out of the sick room for a week at least."

Royall was secretly furious, but he had to obey.

"A week is not long," encouraged the sympathetic old doctor. "And we have to humor the whims of nurses as well as invalids, you know. After all, it will do you more good to exercise your newly gained strength in the open air than pottering about a sick room."

Royall grumbled, but he obeyed, taking rooms at the hotel, and calling each day at the cottage.

And he managed to kill time and enjoy himself in many ways, despite his solicitude over Daisie. He boated, drove, and walked with some congenial friends he made at the hotel, and his strength and his good looks returned fast. The days flew fast and pleasantly.

When the week was up, the grim nurse herself came to meet him when he called to inquire for Daisie.

"She is improving every day, but very slowly, and I have let her sit up in an easy-chair to-day for the first time," she said.

"Does she know I am here?" he asked hopefully, eagerly.

"I broke it to her gently this morning, but still the shock was great. Perhaps it was from joy at hearing you were well again," said the nurse, who could not understand a fact that she easily perceived—that the invalid seemed to have a secret shrinking from him.

Russo-Polish Peace Being Negotiated.

Chicago Reports Break in Wheat ---Miners Not Unanimous For Strike--Galician Jews Slaughtered by Ukrainians---Wool Prices Take Tumble.

PROSPECT OF RUSSO-POLISH PEACE BRIGHTER.
RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 24. Adelpa Joffe, head of the Soviet Peace Delegation, at today's session of the Russo-Polish Peace Conference proposed an armistice, which he said might be accepted by the Poles within ten days or the Russian winter campaign would be inaugurated, which Joffe declared the Soviet government desired to avoid. M. Joffe presented his proposal by offering to withdraw virtually all the fifteen points submitted at Minsk, to which the Poles objected. The Soviet representative terms, which M. Joffe said the Soviet Central Executive Committee in Moscow decided upon yesterday, eliminated virtually all conditions designed to force Poland to abandon the Russian claims regarding Galicia. M. Joffe's proposal made the prospect of peace much better than hitherto.

RUSSO-POLISH PROPOSALS.
RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 24. Following the presentation of the Soviet peace proposals at today's session of the Russo-Polish Peace Conference, M. Dumbski, Polish Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs, presented the preliminary Polish terms, which had been prepared before M. Joffe's offer. They were in essence a reply to the new Soviet proposals.

WHEAT PRICE COLLAPSE.
CHICAGO, Sept. 24. Big breaks in the price of wheat took place today, largely as a result of the agitation for general cut in food costs. The smash of values in wheat amounted to as much as 123.4 cents a bushel, and the market closed in a semi-demoralized condition, with December delivery at 2.25 to 2.25 1-2 and March 2.15 to 2.16. In sympathy with the weakness of wheat other grain markets also gave way, and both corn and oats fell to the lowest price levels yet for the 1920 crop.

A BIT OF A MUDDLE.
LONDON, Sept. 24. The miners' decision today to suspend the threatened strike, afforded a ray of hope for peace in an otherwise gloomy situation. A meeting of the Triple Alliance, comprising representatives of the Miners, Railwaymen, and Transport Workers also was held today, but the results of its proceedings are not announced. There apparently is a serious split in the labor ranks over the proposed strike, a large body opposing such action. The miners themselves are far from unanimous for it, but the majority have thus far insisted upon keeping to their proposed course of action.

STRIKE POSTPONED.
LONDON, Sept. 24. The coal miners of Great Britain will not strike Monday as threatened. As a result of a meeting between Lloyd George and Miners' Executive, strike notices have been suspended for a week.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 24. Price reduction of 13 to 20 per cent. in wools was announced today by officials of the Cleveland Worsted Company. Lower costs of raw materials were given as a cause. The reduction is to reach the public next spring, when goods now being manufactured are on the market.

ATTENDING CONFERENCE.
BRUSSELS, Sept. 24. One hundred delegates and twice as many advisers and secretaries have arrived here from forty states for the International Financial Congress organized by the League of Nations. All Allied and Associated states and all former enemy states except Turkey are represented.

RIOTING AT TURIN.
ROME, Sept. 24. Disorders continue at Turin and rifle firing sometimes assumes the character of a battle. Three more persons have been killed. A bomb thrown in St. Carlo's Square injured no one. The police and military have made two hundred arrests.

STILL A MYSTERY.
NEW YORK, Sept. 24. The cause of the Wall Street explosion to-night was unknown to the police and Federal authorities as it was when it occurred nine days ago. The theory that an accident, probably a collision, caused the explosion as reported today, to have been cast aside by the September Grand Jury here.

A MACSWEENEY STATEMENT.
LONDON, Sept. 24. A statement issued today over the signature of members of the family of Terence MacSweeney, charges the British press with distorting reports concerning the death of Lord Mayor's condition. It asserts that the government asked the newspapers' proprietors "if certain information should come to their knowledge to withhold it from publication." The statement announces also that the MacSweeney family will cease to give to the British press any statements concerning the Lord Mayor. Frequent bulletins, however, will still be issued to foreign press representatives in London.

Pleasing Presentation.

At Kibbride Hall, on Thursday night, a pleasing presentation took place, when Rev. Father Coady was presented by his parishioners with a purse of gold and silver. Father Coady has recently been transferred to Tor's Cove, and this being the first opportunity the people of Kibbride had of meeting him since a large crowd assembled. Many kind references were made to his excellent work in the parish. In thanking the donors for gift and sentiments expressed, Father Coady hoped that the same loyalty and co-operation would be given Rev. Father Rawlins, the new pastor.

The Children's Hospital.

SCATHING LETTER FROM MRS. JULIA SALTER EARLE.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir,—The report of the meeting that was held in Grenfell Hall on Thursday afternoon last, to consider the question—"Whether Waterford Hall, was suitable for a children's hospital," as published in Friday morning's News, I am not at all satisfied with, and for the benefit of the "working classes" of this city whom I know so well, and have come to respect through knowing, I wish you to publish these few lines of mine, if you will. I attended that meeting, and after being present a little while, I can give you the opinion of those present in a nutshell.

It was reported that "all the doctors of the city, also the nurse in charge of the work (Miss Haslam), also several nurses present, who had been nursing the soldiers at Waterford Hall were unanimous in their opinion, that the Hall was not suitable for a children's hospital."

Miss Haslam even went so far as to send in her resignation to the W.P.A., preferring to resign rather than take the responsibility of bringing children, ill, into the Hall.

As she was sitting next to me, I heard her say, "it simply means death to the children to bring them in there." Asking her myself why she had such a strong objection, she replied, "Mrs. Earle, it is not from an architectural point of view fit for a children's hospital, water being scarce there at times, not enough light, bad heating, doctors of city will not visit, and it would cost too much for a resident doctor."

She also said to me, "let these ladies give me a smaller place than Waterford Hall, but suitable for a hospital, as it is the life of the child we have to think of, not the grandeur of the outside surroundings."

Mrs. A. Macpherson thought that the worth of the place should be considered, and took her stand on this point. Replying to her I asked, "was it worth, or life, that we should think of when considering a site for a children's hospital?" At last these ladies decided that they would remove the children from the smaller hospital they have now in town, into Waterford Hall, and try it for one year. That means they were ignoring the doctors' and the nurses in charge. The doctors had even told Miss Haslam that if a place in town was taken they would attend daily and free of charge.

Mrs. A. Macpherson made the motion, which was seconded, that "Waterford Hall" be taken for a year. Although many were against this at the meeting when the vote was taken, the majority carried it through.

Now, Mr. Editor, it was up to me to ask this question of the chair: "Madame Chairman, may I ask what children are to occupy these cots?" The reply from the chair to me was—"The Workingman's Child." "Indeed," I said, "well, if it means what Miss Haslam has said, perhaps death to the Workingman's Child to bring it into Waterford Hall. I say it is up to the Committee to have the opinion of the 'Working Classes,' whether the Hall is fit or not, when the doctors' object to it and also the nurse in charge." A Mrs. MacKeen present jumped to her feet and replied to me, by insulting the working man whom I represent. She said before the full meeting of "Society People" "The Workingman—what will he give towards anything anyhow. He will place his child in there but will not give anything."

Workmen of this city, will you stand for this insult? It is up to me as your representative to defend you. But listen to Miss Haslam—the lady in charge of the sick children—reply to Mrs. MacKeen—Miss Haslam replied—"In every case the workingman has paid for his child, the amount I have asked, and would have given more if necessary." Did you wonder that I stamped my foot, and clapped, while others present joined with me in the applause.

There was also a lady present who is in charge of the Girls' Salvation Army Department," and she very kindly rose, and said that she had found that the Workingman would give in every case when he was asked, but sometimes it was hard for him to give.

Now then "Workmen" of this city, this woman, Mrs. MacKeen, is one of the ladies on the Committee formed to investigate whether this place is suitable or not. Now after hearing from me what labour would think of it, these ladies have condescended and have formed an Investigation Committee, and one of this Committee is the Mrs. MacKeen who insulted all the Workingmen of this city and ridiculed them at this meeting.

Keep your eyes open Workingmen. It is your hour now. The time has come when "Society" can ignore you no longer. Your child expects the same as the "Society" ladies' child. See to it that it gets it. Get your doctors' opinion before you send one of your little ones out there to Waterford Hall, if it is taken for a hospital. The "Working Classes," whose children are to go in the cots, are not represented on the Committee to investigate whether it is suitable or not.

I remain, Mr. Editor, "One of the Working Classes," and the friend of the Working people." JULIA SALTER EARLE, President, "Ladies' Branch" N.I.W.A. Sept. 25, 1920.

Notes From Brigus.

Miss Clara Jerrett, daughter of C. A. Jerrett, left on Monday's train for St. John's where she will spend a brief holiday.

Mr. F. G. Jerrett left for St. John's on Tuesday evening and returned on Thursday's noon train.

Mr. Henry Leamon who met with an accident a few days ago is again on the road.

Some of our game lovers and sportsmen visited the shooting grounds on Monday and Tuesday and met with good success in getting anywhere between 2 and 15 birds.

Mr. F. W. Angel arrived here on Wednesday night and after taking a little refreshment proceeded to the shooting grounds inside the Gouls for a few days. His friend, Mr. S. J. Foote, who accompanied him the past few days on the grounds returned to St. John's, having to attend to some legal matter.

Brigus was recently the scene of two funerals in the Methodist Church. The oldest deceased being Mr. John Percy, who resided with his nephews, Mr. Harold Clarke and his brother both of whom accompanied the remains to their last resting place. The late Mr. Percy had reached the ripe age of 98. The other was a daughter of Mr. James Way, of about 10 years. Her remains were accompanied to the graveside by all her school companions and teacher.

Mr. Thos. McCue, formerly of the 1st Newfoundland Regiment, returned home on Saturday from Hudson Bay, where he spent the summer.

Mr. A. Stapleton and family arrived here during the past week and have rented the house owned by Mrs. John Spracklin.

Mr. J. P. Hearn left for St. John's on Thursday evening. We learn he will proceed shortly to the St. George's Coal Fields to do some survey work. ALIQUIS.

Brigus, Sept. 25th, 1920.

EXPRESS DUE.—The express with Kyle's passengers is due at 5 o'clock this evening.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR BURNS, ETC.

To-Day's Messages.

FRENCH MINISTERS RETAIN OFFICE.

PARIS, Sept. 24. After M. Leygues had accepted the request of President Millerand to-day to form a ministry, he asked the present ministers to retain their portfolios and received acceptances from them all. The first ministerial council will take place to-morrow morning. It will be presided over by President Millerand, who will communicate to it the text of the presidential message, which will be read to the parliament to-morrow afternoon.

ROBBER POST OFFICE.

DUBLIN, Sept. 24. The General Postoffice was raided and robbed by armed men last night. The miscreants blew open the safe and decamped with several thousand pounds in money, comprising the wages and bonuses of the pay office staff.

WILSON STANDS FOR NATIONAL SOVEREIGNTY.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. President Wilson has declined to take steps toward terminating certain commercial treaties, as directed by Congress in the Merchant Marine Act, holding that such a course would be wholly irreconcilable with the history of the respect which the United States has shown for its international engagements.

CORONER TURNED DOWN.

DUBLIN, Sept. 24. The Government and the Corporation are at issue over the inquiry into the death of Councillor Lynch, a prominent Limerick Sinn Feiner, who was shot Wednesday morning in his apartment at the Royal Exchange Hotel, Dublin. The city coroner, who was ordered by the Corporation to hold an inquest, was forbidden to do so by Gen. Sir Nevil Macready, commander of military forces in Ireland, who in the capacity of Lord Justice, in the absence of the Lord Lieutenant, directed a military inquiry instead.

LATEST BULLETIN.

LONDON, Sept. 24. To-night's bulletin issued by the Irish Self Determination League said Lord Mayor MacSwiney was extremely exhausted and suffering from severe pains in the head, but he still was conscious.

WORKERS APPROVE.

MILAN, Sept. 25. The agreement reached between employers and employees relative to the industrial situation, appears to meet with the approval of a large majority of workers, according to incomplete returns from a referendum held yesterday. It is said that Syndicalists and Anarchists urged their followers not to vote, believing it was impossible to defeat agreement.

TEN THOUSAND PRISONERS.

SEBASTOPOL, Sept. 25. (By the A.P.)—General Wrangel, opposing Bolsheviks on the Southern front has taken ten thousand prisoners in six days, his cavalry surrounding them along a front of one hundred miles, and is reported to be outflanking the Bolsheviks. General Makno, leader of Peasant Minutemen is co-operating with Wrangel, having taken Constantinograd, and is said to be on the way to the points of Kharkov shutting off rear of Bolsheviks.

HAD A BETTER NIGHT.

LONDON, Sept. 25. MacSwiney passed a better night, and was refreshed this morning, said a bulletin of the Irish Self Determination League, but was in a state of extreme weakness.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

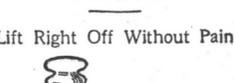

CORK, Sept. 25. An attempt was made on the life of Major General Strickland, Commander in Southern Ireland, as he was motor-ing back from barracks to the docks, en route to England last night. As his automobile turned a corner on the way to the dock an attacking party on both sides of the street began firing. Occupants of the car returned the fire. The chauffeur was slightly wounded but Strickland was uninjured.

Rats.

The United States Public Service, on the basis of numerous surveys, estimates that there is at least one rat per person living in the United States an estimate which coincides with similar estimates made for Great Britain, Ireland and authoritative figures from Denmark, France and Germany. In Great Britain the authorities estimate that it costs $1.50 a year to maintain said rat. In Denmark it costs $1.20, in France $1.00 and in the

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

IS IT REALLY A SPORT?

On the day when the law went off on certain birds, I happened to be staying in a little settlement on a river which is in the heart of the bird-shooting country.

At daylight on the great day we were awakened by shots up the river where there are a large number of blinds. In a few minutes we began to hear the whir of wings and the cry of frightened birds as they flew past, down the river. And down the river were many more blinds with many more men lying in wait to send their showers of lead into the helpless, desperate little creatures, and gloat when the tiny lifeless bodies that had a moment ago been full of life and song and movement, came fluttering to earth.

Where the Risk is All On One Side. They call it sport, of course, but if there is anything "sporting" in the finest sense of that word in a combat in which one party runs no risks and the other party has no chances, I have yet to see it.

Of course it takes skill to shoot birds, but doesn't it take almost as much skill to shoot clay pigeons? Not so much fun and excitement as getting up at the witching hour of dawn and wandering about the woods and marshes, and making now a miss and now a successful shot, and eating a bite out under the open sky? No, of course not. Even I can see that. But here's a suggestion—you could do all that and use quite as much of more skill, and shoot at your birds with a camera instead of a gun.

A Virtue I Can't Achieve. I can well imagine how the sportsman laughs that suggestion to scorn as a mollycoddle's notion. Perhaps in the final balance of things it deserves the scorn, and perhaps not. Perhaps there is virtue in the state of mind that can gloat over those little bunches of feathers with the life and song quenched out of them, or the wounded bird struggling to get away, but I cannot achieve that virtue nor grieve very deeply at my lack of it.

Where the Real Wealth is Stored. Many of the birds that are shot are valuable helps to agriculture. Man would be, not poorer, but richer in food if they were allowed to live. Many of them are beautiful creatures and have lovely bird notes. I am not, I regret to say, one of those folks who know all about the birds. It is a defect I promise myself every year to remedy, for I think that the person who learns to recognize the various birds and their notes, to watch for their coming, to study their habits, has laid up for himself treasure in that storehouse of the mind which is, after all, the place where the truest and most lasting wealth is stored.

And I believe that any mother who tries to give her child this interest is making both a future friend for the birds and future happiness for her child.

Another Drop in Sugar Prices. The latest drop of one cent in the wholesale price of sugar elicits from a representative of the Atlantic Refining Company the opinion that this CAREFUL DRIVER.

I drive my car with jealous care, all laws and statutes minding, and only pause anon to swear when balky valves need grinding. I drive upon old fashioned lines, as though a speed cop fear'ng: "I honk my horn when danger signs before me are appearing. I put my hand out when I'd turn, so those behind may know it, and doubtless they remark, "Gol-dern! But he's the cautious poet." Twelve miles an hour is what I hit, when I go forth to travel; my wheels don't fill the air with grit, or throw up chunks of gravel. A man so careful, you would say, must dodge all kinds of danger; but one is crippled every day, and I'm that pilgrim stranger. Day after day they bring me home, to my weep'ng niece, with compound fractures in my dome—and organs shot to pieces. The needfends go their crazy ways about and still go faster; the reckless drivers spend their days unscratched nor know caster. But who follow all the rules, am braked for 'v slaughter; and when my present politice cools they put on one that's better.

French Ships Without Cargoes.

FOUR COULD NOT SECURE PERMITS TO LOAD.

North Sydney, Sept. 20.—The failure of the fleet of French steamers, owned by the government of France, to secure a permit from the Dominion government to take cargoes of coal to France, will cost the home government a pretty penny. There are four of the fleet at present in port, the Marmoutiers, Neuf Briaback, Hunague and the Oberai. The latter arrived in port yesterday morning and will pull alongside the schooner Inspiration to take ballast. The others are here for quite a while, particularly the first named, which was obliged to unload her cargo of American coal, intended for Marseilles, but which was subsequently sold to local parties. This craft has been in port for upwards of a month. Another, the Hunague, took on board 500 tons of bunker at the Scotia pier and proceeded on her voyage across, but when a couple of hundred miles on the journey her rudder was lost and an accident to her machinery caused her to return to port, and she has been here ever since. She will likely be towed to-morrow or next day to Halifax by the Halifax tug Musquash to go on dry dock. All the fleet have secured permits to take bunkers, and as soon as this is secured they will proceed to France light. Every day the steamers lay here it costs the French government something like $1,500 a day for each ship.

"King's Guard."

A military pageant of ancient origin is every day, week in, week out, enacted in the streets of London. It is the ceremony of mounting "King's Guard" and is performed by troops of the brigade of guards from Wellington and Chelsea barracks. The route from Chelsea is, of course, longer, and the men march with fixed bayonets, headed by the colors and the full regimental band and drums. So soon as the form ceases, the latter takes up the marching strain and it is therefore to a continuous accompaniment of martial music that the men step out with the famous "Guard Step."

Although of daily occurrence, the march to Buckingham Palace never fails to rouse the interest of the Londoner who stops in his day's avocation to behold the stalwart body of perfectly disciplined men headed by the colors and listen to the strains of military music.

J. J. ST. JOHN, Duckworth St.

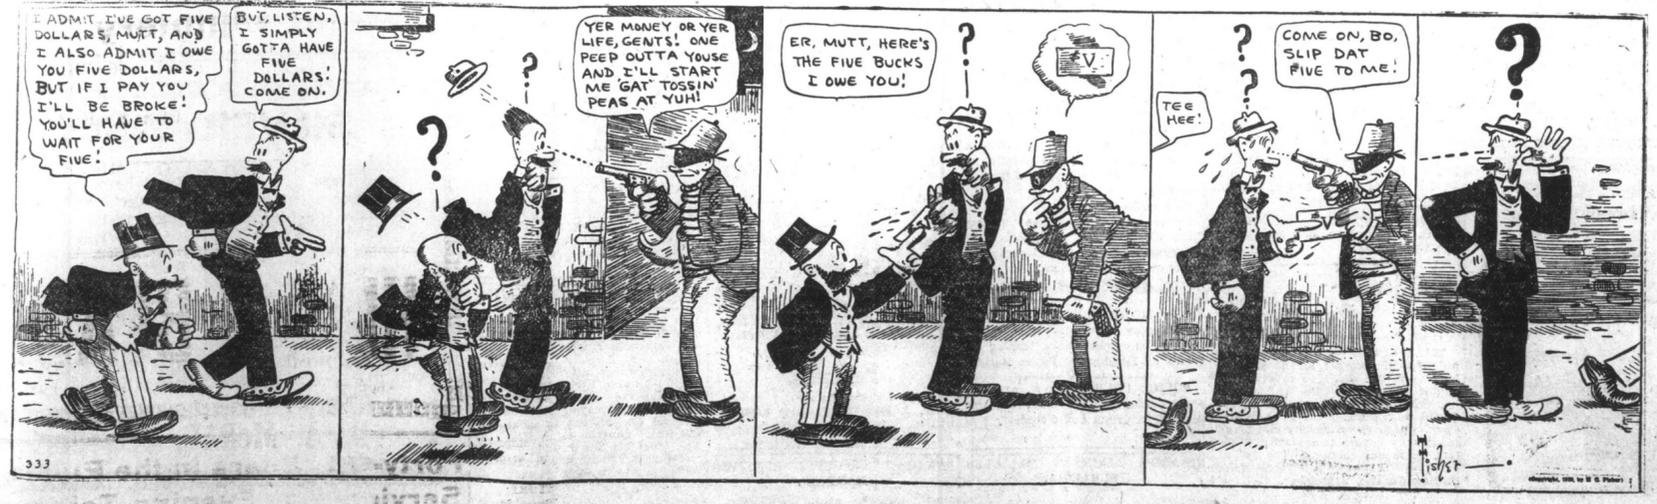

All through the war this ceremonial guard was duly performed by the officers and men of the brigade of guards, and an instance may be quoted as to the jealous manner in which the privileges of guarding the King is regarded by the brigade. During the war, when nearly all the officers and men of the brigade were engaged on a sterner duty in France, the men at home, consisting mostly of those who had already been out, were so few that it became a serious question as to whether enough could be found to do the duty, and it had been whispered that it might be necessary to intrust the privilege to a "line" regiment. One of the commanding officers called his officers together and laid the position before them and stated that sooner than allow the duty to be performed even temporarily by a "line" regiment, he would arm his officers

The Tragedy of the West Coast.

It is the unexpected that usually happens, and no person could have imagined that the once prosperous West Coast of Newfoundland would be in the condition it is to-day. The Telegram and its editor have been repeatedly accused of being engaged in an attempt, which would be dastardly if correct, to ruin trade, bring about disaster and arrange things so that the price of fish would fall locally to six dollars per quintal all over the island, and particularly in the western districts. Those who read the Telegram know and realize that this is absolutely untrue, but it is part and parcel of the vindictive policy being pursued by opponents of this paper to use every means in their power to discredit it. They have failed signally, and in their failure the madness of rage has so overcome them that there is no lengths to which they do not go to carry still further their threats of vengeance. Spite is being vented daily and every twenty-four hours witnesses the pouring out of new vials of wrath upon our ignorant head. Funny, isn't it, how much space and language they use up in their endeavours to bring about the journalistic destruction of one, whom they claim to be so entirely unfitted for the position which he has the honor to hold? And isn't it still more funny to have them solemnly declaring that the Telegram is fast going to ruin? And all because of the inexperience and utter lack of knowledge of our humble self. However we are content to carry on, and if it is any source of pleasure to them to devote so much attention to us, we accept it as a fine compliment and say with all heartiness, Thank you brethren!

We do not know whether or not Northern fishermen will listen to our "tragedies." They will have a tragedy for themselves later on, as every indication points. In fact, according to many good authorities from the North, the opening scenes are being enacted already: the final acts will come later. So far as the Western fishermen are concerned they have their tragedy upon them, and it is heavy enough in all conscience. The times are of a surety out of joint in that section of the dominion comprising the districts of Fortune Bay and Burgeo and LaPoile. To repeat it at every possible opportunity that the editor of this paper was defeated in the latter district in the general election last fall is not alleviating in any way the hardships now being endured by many of the people, nor is it studying the amelioration of the sufferings which the future will undoubtedly bring. The inhabitants of the numerous small settlements upon which the times press heavily are not greatly interested at the moment as to who was elected or who defeated. They are more concerned with what is going to happen now that winter is near with regard to their supplies and outfits, usually taken from the merchants at this period. The cheap sneers and pointless jokes of those who profess to love them and to hold them in high regard, because they helped them to power, will not carry any great measure of confidence in the future to these people. Nor will frothy professions of how much good is being done for the country bring comfort to the heart of the father of a family who does not know whether to go for a barrel of flour. When there is no one giving credit and no one catching fish, because it is unsaleable in some places, then there is indeed tragedy—a tragedy not to be treated either lightly or flippantly because of its menace.

Breakfast isn't breakfast for me unless we have POST TOASTIES

Hickman & Co. Given Permit.

Messrs. Hickman & Co., Ltd., having won out in the appeal case of the Food Control Board against the ruling of Chief Justice Horwood, applied for their permit to get the shipment of 200 barrels which were held up by the regulations. No other course being open, the Customs issued the permit and Messrs. Hickman & Co. can now take delivery. It is not unlikely that other business men will follow Mr. Hickman's lead and test the legality of the regulations. If the restrictions were removed, and free trade allowed, sugar according to present quotations, would be sold for 17 cents per pound.

Portia's Passengers.

The S.S. Portia, Capt. Connors, sailed at 10 o'clock this morning taking a small freight and the following passengers:—R. A. Cluett, J. Marshall, S. G. Pike, W. Robinson, Mrs. Thornhill, Mrs. Inkpen, Sister M. Patrick, Misses Carew, Prowse, Waton, Forsay, Dewey, King, C. A. Williams, S. Bradbury, Mr. Hunt, Mrs. Nolan, E. R. Elliott and 25 in stowage.

Landed at Harvey's.

Owing to S.S. Canadian Miner discharging cargo at the Furness Wharf, the Sachem hauled to Harvey's coastal pier to land her passengers. She will, however, haul to the Furness pier on Monday to discharge her cargo. She sails for Halifax on Tuesday, from whence she will proceed to Sydney to load steel, going back to Halifax and thence to this port.

Sachem From Liverpool.

S.S. Sachem, Capt. Hayse, arrived off the Narrows at midnight, after a good run of 7 days from Liverpool, but did not enter port till daylight. She brought the following passengers for this port:—Mr. W. Barbour, Mrs. J. Browning, Mr. R. Clare, Mr. T. E. Cusens, Mrs. T. E. Earle, Miss V. Edwards, Mrs. E. W. Forbes, Mrs. Forbes, Mr. E. Green, Mr. J. P. Hand, Mr. L. A. Hoob, Mr. T. E. Job, Mrs. Job, Mr. N. H. Jones, Miss A. King, Mr. W. Kirk, Mr. S. L. B. Kirkpatrick, Mr. G. Lewis, Mrs. Lewis, Master K. Lewis, Miss C. McFarlane, Miss E. Moylan, Miss M. Moylan, Mrs. M. A. Murphy, Mrs. M. E. Neil and infant, Master J. Neil, Mr. J. Penney, Mrs. J. Price and infant, Mr. E. V. Richards, Rev. J. B. Ryan, Miss M. Seymour, Mr. N. Snow, Mrs. Snow, Mrs. H. Stewart, Miss M. Stewart, Mrs. M. Taylor, Mr. G. Taylor, Miss A. Taylor, Miss W. Taylor, Master R. Taylor, Miss M. Taylor, Miss G. M. Thistle, Mr. R. Rayner Thornley, Hon. R. Watson, Mr. G. B. Whitefield, Miss Mackinson, and 15 stowage.

Nfld. Scotch Cure Herring.

This pack thus far has proved to be a drug in the market, and it does not look as if the available supply, here and at production points, will be used up. The fish are not fat, and buyers do not want them. Four or five years ago the pack was a novelty and found favor with buyers temporarily. Since then there has been a change of heart on the part of buyers.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, September.

Judgment in Traffic Regulations Case.

IN THE CENTRAL DISTRICT COURT
Constable Case vs. Brian Dunfield.
This is a prosecution for a breach of "The Street Traffic Regulations Act 1918."
The testimony of the complainant is unsupported by other evidence, and the main facts are denied by defendant. I must therefore dismiss the prosecution.
The question of the right of the Inspector General to make regulations governing Street Traffic, except in all times of public processions, rejoicings, or other special occasions, was raised by Mr. Dunfield. The Act under which the Regulations are made is an Amendment of Chapter 36 of the Consolidated Statutes, entitled "Of Nuisances and Municipal Regulations," and in my opinion gives the Inspector General the right to make Street Traffic Regulations not only to go into operation on the occasions mentioned, but in any case where the streets or roads are thronged or liable to be obstructed.

Dated at St. John's, this 25th day of September, A.D., 1920.
(Sgd.) F. J. MORRIS,
Judge Central District Court.

Fish Did Not Realize $10.00.

NORTHERN SKIPPER DEMANDS HIS CARGO.
There is very little fish landing at any of the wharves, although several schooners have arrived here recently. On every mercantile premises there is a government fish inspector installed, but so far they have little or nothing to do. At one of the largest buying plants to the Northward, it is said that a lively scene was enacted during the week. A fisherman, in all good faith, landed his summer's voyage, expecting the promised ten dollars per quintal, but when the accounts were made up he, to his grief and disappointment, found that the cargo averaged between $5 and $6. A policeman had to be called and eventually the services of the magistrate were requisitioned before the outraged skipper was given possession of his fish again, which he re-loaded on board his vessel. A recurrence of this trouble will have the anticipated result, and the North already is seething with rage.

Will Be Cleared Up.

Our Daily Contemporaries have taken a very pessimistic view of a telegram recently received by the Fisheries Department that Hayse was "Not Interested" in our Newfoundland Fish. We have seen a telegram since then received by a private firm from Mr. Ragnoli, the President of the Consorzio, stating that the reason he refuses to make any purchases is because he has received two very contradictory telegrams from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and it is impossible to get to work with an Advisory Board, which changes its plans every second day.

It is our opinion that these matters will be cleared up satisfactorily very soon, and there should be no need to get frightened. (We hope so—Ed. Telegram.)
In Italy and other countries they are accustomed to have their Governments state what their arrangements will be for at least months in advance, and hence, their difficulty to follow our movements.—Trade Review.

Some Facts About the Fur Business.

From the frozen North, where cold makes pelts grow thick and glossy, come great bundles of raw fur to the marts of trade.
Here, men who are experts, select the prime furs, judging values by thickness, color and sheen, and in some cases by size. They know that the primest furs (with the exception of beaver) are trapped in mid-winter and they reject the lighter, thinner furs of Fall and Spring.
Beaver is best when taken in Spring after the animals have had all winter exercise in ice-cold water. The experts know, too, which furs will cut to bring artistic blending of shades and insure graceful drapings.
After the expert buyers come the master designers, highly trained regarding furs adapted for certain pieces, who have studied various kinds which combine pleasingly, and who know how to produce the new style lines—a much more difficult thing to do with fur than with fabric.
Furs are influenced as much by capricious Dame Fashion as any other article of attire. Owing to the expense involved Fur selections must of necessity be based largely on confidence—confidence in the store from which the furs are purchased—confidence in the knowledge of the Fur business on the part of the Representatives of that store who selects the fur stocks from the manufacturers.
The Royal Stores have always prided themselves on the high quality of their fur stocks. Every fur piece in the store has been selected with the greatest of care by an expert in the fur trade.
Every confidence can be placed in the prime qualities of our furs—in the unequalled values—and in the wide assortments that now await your selection.

Wedding Bells at Bell Island.

CUMMINGS-POWER.
A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Bell Island on the 22nd, when Mr. Lawrence Power, of Dominion No. 1, and Miss Ethel Cummings of Lance Cove Road, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, by the Rev. E. J. Ralins. The ceremony was performed at St. Michael's Church, and the groom, who is one of the Island's most popular young men, and who is the Quartermaster-Sergeant of the C.C.C., was attended by Sergeant-Major J. F. McEvoy, while the bride was supported by Miss Florrie Power, of the Bell Island Co-operative Co. After the ceremony the wedding party drove by motor to the residence of the groom's parents, at Dominion No. 1, here a sumptuous repast was served and a most enjoyable evening spent. The health of the bride and groom was eloquently proposed by Major Leo C. Murphy, C.C.C., and responded to by Sergeant-Major McEvoy on behalf of the young couple. During the evening music and song was in order, while dancing was kept up till the wee sma hours. Capt. J. M. Greene, Lieut. John Murphy, and Sergts. J. Stone and Ed. Farrell, who was absent in the city, hastened by motor and special steamer to the Island to attend the ceremony; and congratulatory speeches appropriate to the occasion were made by Capt. Greene and Lieut. Murphy, both testifying to the esteem in which the young couple are held. The presents received were both numerous and costly, testifying to the popularity of the bride and groom. Amongst the presents was a very valuable mantel-clock, suitably inscribed with a silver plate from the Officers, Warrant and N.C.O.'s of "C. Wabana Company C.C.C." We join with the numerous friends of Mr. and Mrs. Power in wishing them a happy wedded life and success and happiness and prosperity along their rugged pathway.

Com. This amendment on being put to the House was lost. Mr. Brian Dunfield then proposed the following amendment to the original Resolution, which was duly seconded, viz—
RESOLVED, That in the event of its being conclusively ascertained, by a properly authorized referendum to the Church of England people of St. John's, that a majority of them desire to unite their educational system with those of any other denominations which desire such a union, this Synod will acquiesce in the decision of the people.
The amendment was lost. The original Resolution was then put to Diocesan Synod Proceedings.

FRIDAY, Sept. 24.
The session of the Synod to-day was called to order at 7.30 by His Lordship the Bishop, who read the opening prayers.
Rolls were called by the Secretaries. The minutes of yesterday's session were read, agreed to and signed.
Canon Bolt read the report of the Council of Queen's College, and moved its adoption. Agreed.
Canon Smart read the report of the Special Committee on Finance and moved its adoption. This was agreed.
Rev. A. E. Tulk moved the second reading of the Bill to amend chap. III. of the Constitution and rules. This was agreed.
Canon Bolt gave notice that he would on to-morrow move that the Bill be read a third time and passed.
Rev. T. E. Loder (Grand Falls) moved third reading of Bill to amend Chaps. I, VII., and IX. Agreed.
Rev. A. E. Butler (St. George's) moved an amendment to the resolutions on Education, as follows:
WHEREAS the spirit of the present day favors the breaking down of artificial barriers between Christians of different forms of worship;
AND WHEREAS the Lambeth Conference has this year expressed on behalf of the whole Anglican Communion a desire to draw into closer fellowship with all other communions of the Christian Church;
BE IT RESOLVED—That this Synod hereby approves the principle of a union of the educational systems in St. John's, which shall include all classes of students above, and include the Honors Division of the Intermediate Grade, and that all denominations be invited to join such a union;
BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That the Executive Committee may in behalf of this Synod assent to any scheme which may commend itself to the committee for giving effect to such a union;
BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That the maintenance of undenominational boarding houses, or hotels, and the provision of the fullest rights of entry for religious instruction for all denominations who made up the union shall form part of such a scheme; that a clergyman shall be appointed to preside over the hostel of its own particular denomination and that all such clergymen be on the regular staff, and give religious instruction to the students of the institution, who shall belong to their own branch of the faith.
This amendment on being put to the House was lost. Mr. Brian Dunfield then proposed the following amendment to the original Resolution, which was duly seconded, viz—
RESOLVED, That in the event of its being conclusively ascertained, by a properly authorized referendum to the Church of England people of St. John's, that a majority of them desire to unite their educational system with those of any other denominations which desire such a union, this Synod will acquiesce in the decision of the people.
The amendment was lost. The original Resolution was then put to the House and in division was lost on the clerical side and carried by a majority of 1 on the lay side, and declared by the chairman to be lost. Certain members asked that their names be recorded on the minutes. Leave was granted. On motion the House rose and reported the Resolution lost.

His Lordship gave notice of the meeting of the Diocesan Guild of Intercession at Queen's College at 11 a.m. Saturday; and also a meeting of the Rural Deans at Bishop's Court at the same hour. His Lordship also intimated that the House would meet to-morrow evening at 7.30 and endeavour to conclude its business.
On motion the House adjourned at 1 a.m. Saturday with the Benediction.

"The Game Of Kings."

CHESS IN LITERATURE AND HISTORY.

No game has gained a more prominent place in literature and in history than chess—"the game of kings." In drama, in fiction, and in biography references to the game abound; and there are numerous stories of the performances of distinguished persons at the chess-board from the earliest times.

One of the first instances in drama that comes to mind is the scene in "The Tempest," where Ferdinand and Miranda are found playing at chess, and Ferdinand denies the gentle impeachment, "Sweet lord, you play me false."

"The Sublime Combinations," Tennyson pictures Henry II. and Becket engaged in a friendly chess contest in his play of "Becket," and he goes so with history accuracy. The king, preoccupied with weightier matters, falls a victim to the churchman's wiles. He is a bad loser, and kicking over the board, exclaims: "Why, there then—down go bishop and king together; I loathe being beaten."

The Duc de Beaufort, imprisoned at Vincennes, in "Twenty Years After," was "immersed in the sublime combinations of chess." Like King Henry, he makes blunder upon blunder through inattention, and is easy game. In the same book, Dumas appears to give credence to the tradition that Henry IV., the evening before he was assassinated, was playing at chess and saw clots of blood upon the board.

Chess-board of Matrimony.

Oliver Wendell Holmes had a keen insight into the game, and his allusions to it are many. In "The Professor at the Breakfast Table" there is a striking metaphor where the mother of Iris, "seated with her companion at the chess-board of matrimony, had but just pushed forward her one little white pawn upon an empty square, when the black knight, that cares nothing for castles or kings or queens, swooped down upon her and swept her from the larger board of life."

Holmes invokes the aid of another chess comparison in the same book when he remarks upon "the nice shades that separate the skillful players."

The Life of Catherine Gladstone, by her daughter, Mary Drew, records that Mrs. Gladstone showed no little skill at chess: "The tradition survives that Mrs. Gladstone beat Mr. Gladstone, that Mrs. Gladstone beat Lord Lyttelton, and that Lord Lyttelton beat Mr. Gladstone."

Probably the earliest reference in literature to chess was that by the Persian poet Firdusi, who, in his historical poem, "Shahnama," mentions the introduction of the game into Persia.

In "The young Tamlane" we read that Four-and-twenty ladies fair

Were playing at the chess.
It is worth recalling that the first book Caxton printed in England was a translation of a treatise on the game written about 1390 by Jacobus de Cessolis, a preaching friar.

Scott is said to have objected to learning chess because the time it would occupy would be sufficient to learn two languages. On the other hand, Henry Thomas Buckle was one of the finest players of his day; John Huss, when in prison, deplored having played at chess "whereby he had lost time and run the risk of being subject to violent passions."

Napoleon's Curious Set.

It is a curious circumstance that most great generals were poor chess-players. Marshal Saxe was an exception; and Napoleon relieved the tedium of life on St. Helena by playing with a quaintly-carved set. One king was fashioned in his own image and the other represented Frederick the Great, the other pieces showing the respective uniforms of the two leaders.

In regard to the part chess has played in history, one must dismiss as a myth the romance that Charlemagne lost his kingdom over a game of chess to Guerin de Montielove; and equally doubtful is the story that a certain Prince Otkar of Bavaria was killed by a blow on the temple by Pippin, who, so the story runs, had been ignominiously checkmated.

William and Canute.

It is easy to believe, however, that the fiery William the Conqueror, when beaten by the Prince of France, "knocked the chess-board about his (the prince's) head," and that the incident "was the cause afterwards of much enmity between them."

There are many evidences that Canute was an enthusiast. Carlyle, in his "Early Kings of Norway," relates that a dispute arose between Canute and Earl Ulf when at chess, that the earl upset the board, and was murdered shortly afterwards by Canute's orders. The "Ramsay Chronicle" records that Canute, visited on State matters by Bishop Utheric, was found at chess and dice with his courtiers. Henry I. John, and Edward I. are likewise stated to have been fond of pastime.

In mediaeval days chess came under the ban of puritanical prelates. In France fines were imposed for indulgence in the game; and in Spain the edict went forth that "Clerks playing at dice or chess shall be excommunicated." A bishop ordered to do penance for being a chess-lover in 1061 was reproved by Cardinal St. Peter Damian in these words: "Was it right, I say, and consistent with thy duty to sport away thy evenings amidst the vanity of chess, and defile the hand which offers up the body of the Lord and the tongue that mediates between God and man with the pollution of a sacrilegious game?" Brian Chapman—in John O'London's Weekly.

Single-Handed Ships That Have Sailed The Seven Seas.

(Concluded.)
(By Arthur S. Hildebrand, in the New York Post.)

In 1911, two men left Victoria, B.C., bound around the world in the Tilikum. The Tilikum was an Indian war canoe, hollowed from a single log, thirty feet long, drawing eight inches of water, with a displacement of four tons. She is the smallest boat that ever circumnavigated the globe. Capt. Voss gave her a deck and a small cabin and rigged her as a three-masted schooner. In the Indian Ocean the mate was lost overboard while adjusting the binocular light and in his fall he took the compass with him. Yet the Tilikum made port and finished her voyage. Again it was navigation by guess and by God that did it.

In 1899 Capt. Howard Blackburn of Gloucester made a voyage to England in the sloop Great Western. She was thirty feet long. In 1901 he sailed from Gloucester again in the twenty-five-foot sloop Great Republic and made the passage to Lisbon in thirty-nine days. The Great Republic satisfied him for years and he made several long voyages in her.

But the instinct of the sailor was at work in him, the instinct for the perfect boat. He built the dory America, sixteen feet nine inches long, five feet broad and drawing one foot of water. A sea-going boat needs legs under her; that a boat of only one foot draught should be weather worthy is remarkable. Yet the America has done well, making long voyages, sailing herself like a big one and coming through gales, though she has not as yet crossed the ocean. Now Capt. Blackburn when a young man was adrift in a dory on the Banks in the winter and his feet and hands were frozen. A great man to carry sail—Capt. Blackburn—by necessity, for reef points are hard things to manage for a man who has no fingers!

The yawl Pandora, a close copy of the grand old sloop that was her inspiration, was fitted out in Australia for a voyage around the world. Capt. G. D. Blythe sailed her, with one companion. She arrived safely at New York and sailed thence in July, 1911, for Europe. But she reached the port of missing ships. An able boat, well found and well handled, but...

There have been others. The sloop Theresa sailed from New York with three fishermen, and fell to pieces at sea, off the Cape Verdes; the men were saved. The wonder is that she held together so long. An emulor of Capt. Blackburn, with a dory, set out for sea.

He was also making nothing of soundings, and then came limping back into Provincetown. This dory was only sixteen feet long, below the limit. It would seem. Some men once started to go around the world in a cat-boat—a type utterly unsuited for deep water. They left New York.

Capt. Voss appears again, sailing with two companions in the yawl Sea Queen, a shipjack. Out of Yokohama she met a hurricane in the Indian Ocean. In a gale at sea the process of safety is this: When you can no longer reach, run before it; when running is unsafe, heave to; when it blows too hard for that, lie to a sea-anchor and play dominoes in the cabin till the storm is passed. But in the hurricane the Sea Queen lost her sea-anchor. The force of the wind took the masts out of her; the mizzen, bare of sail, blew into three pieces. She was rolled over, and lay bottom up. Capt. Voss clinging to her keel, trying to right her. The other two men were in the cabin at the time, filling oil bags. She righted. They brought her into port under a jury rig. There is a lesson in this, a lesson as old as the sea. "Don't give up the ship." At sea, a man is nothing, but the ship has a chance, always.

The yawl Sea Bird, twenty-five feet long, went from New York to Rome in 1911. She Sea Bird, model and prototype of the Sea Queen, is a skip-jack, that is, she has a V-shaped bottom and is planked with an angle at the turn of the bilge. She is a very small boat for ocean voyaging and her quarters are cramped for three men for so long a time. But she is able and dry and a good sailer, and she does her work like a big one. Capt. T. F. Day, with two others, took her from New York to the Azores in 17 days. For a boat so small this is wonderful going; many a great square-rigger spreading three acres of canvas would be pleased to make such a run.

And so it goes. There is no lack of men who love to sail the sea, and the sea is always there. Yachtsmen, gentlemen adventurers, old salts who can never get enough of it, heave anchor and make sail, and go to sea. The boats drop down the harbor, the headlands sink from sight, the offshore lights go down over the edge of the sea and the dawn finds them out there, nosing the whitecaps, riding the long seas, feeling the steady push of the good wind, hull down on blue water, on the trail that is always new.

What of the old Spray? The inspiration, the pioneer, the maker of tracks in the trackless—what of her? Who has spoken the Spray? In 1908 Capt. Slocum took her to sea again. And she never came back.

The Association has been formed to build houses to rent. These houses will be let to tenants at reasonable rentals or will be sold to tenants on easy terms of payment.

Additional objects of the Association are: To remove tenants from houses which are unfit for human habitation to homes of health and comfort; to destroy all hovels within the city; to adopt a proper town planning scheme; to lay out modern streets with a perfect system of sanitation; and to rebuild certain sections of the city gradually so that workmen can live with their families amid cheerful surroundings.

The proceeds of the sales of houses bought by tenants will be reinvested in Government securities to provide a redemption fund to pay off the Capital.

The programme outlined by the Company is to build one hundred houses during the year 1921. In order to carry out this work the Directors make an appeal to the people of Newfoundland to take up the necessary Shares without delay, so that arrangements can be made with Lumber Mills and Contractors for work to be done. The one hundred houses will be built on Merry Meeting Road, in accordance with a Town Planning Scheme, prepared by the City Engineer and adopted by the Municipal Council in 1919. The thirty houses to be built by the Company this year and now nearing completion, will give the public an idea of the class of house to be erected. A more suitable site for a garden suburb would be difficult to find, it being situated in the country and yet within ten minutes' walk of Water Street.

To live in a suburb of this sort with pure air, plenty of space around the house, and modern interior sanitation and improvements is to ensure health for the residents who will realize to the full the advantages of good living. In a Garden Suburb children thrive, they grow up vigorous in mind and body; their daily association with trees and flowers, birds and all the manifold delights of nature develop in them a love of all things beautiful and a better understanding of life.

We appeal to the public to subscribe the Capital without delay for the erection of one hundred houses to be built and ready for occupation before the end of the year 1921.

Address Of The Right Rev. The Lord Bishop of Newfoundland.

Delivered At The Opening of The Twenty-Fourth Biennial Session of The Diocesan Synod, Wednesday, Sept. 15th, 1920.

My brethren of the Clergy and Laity:—

When the 23rd Session of Our Diocesan Synod met in the month of July, 1918, the closing scenes of the Great War were being witnessed. Amidst hope and fear, but with unshakable determination to achieve an honourable peace, our Empire was throwing into the conflict all its available resources. No one claimed that mistakes had not been made. Experience had been purchased at tremendous cost. The task had been found out of all proportion to the capacities of pre-war Boards of Army and Navy Administration. The impact of a colossal onslaught had shaken the very foundations of traditional methods, and the national readjustments necessary had been accompanied by dangers and risks which to many seemed to be inviting disaster. Meanwhile other forces than those of the allied arms had been working for the overthrow of the Central Empires of Europe. With startling suddenness the German military machine collapsed. Just at the time when preparations were being made for a decisive blow, which Germany was obviously incapable of successfully resisting, the allies agreed to an armistice as a preliminary to the arrangement of terms of peace. If we on our part could claim no conspicuous military victory our foes at any rate had failed in their wicked designs against mankind. Freedom had once more triumphed, and free men were glad to lay down their arms, and if it were to be, betake themselves to the more congenial tasks of peace.

The most casual survey of the record of the past two years would serve however to bring home to every one of us the conviction that the end of the war has not meant either national or international concord; and at this juncture the wisest of men would hesitate before making a dogmatic pronouncement upon the question as to what measures are best calculated to ensure a real settlement of the many and complex causes of the present unrest. It has been truly said that "Humanity has suffered long years, and for all its expenditure of blood and treasure, has been 'nothing bettered, but is rather grown worse, and is now feeling dimly for the hem of His garment by Whose power alone it may be made whole.' One by one our human expedients have failed. Defensive armaments on the principle of vis pacem, para bellum, alliances to secure the balance of power, the efforts of noble minded diplomatists through the concert of Europe, and the far-reaching pronouncements of experts in International Law, all have contributed their quota, but the world's wound is not healed and now the League of Nations—the latest and greatest of all human expedients—is painfully struggling into life—what is the moral of all this? The moral is that the social order for which humanity hungers is beyond the reach of merely human expedients. Nothing will establish peace on the earth but a new Creation from God in response to repentance and prayer.

THE LAMBETH CONFERENCE.

Perhaps some of you will recognize that I have been quoting from the Report of the "Committee of the Lambeth Conference appointed to consider and report upon the subject of Christianity and International Relations," especially the League of Nations," and hence it might be considered advisable that I should, without further delay, pass on to review briefly (and I would add that it must of necessity be very inadequately) some few of the many great questions upon which the Conference was asked to deliberate. But first of all I would lay especial stress upon one statement found in the Encyclical Letter which prefaces the Reports and Resolutions emanating from that Body. "For half a century," the Encyclical reads, "the Lambeth Conference has more and more served to focus the experience and counsels of our Communion. But it does not claim to exercise any powers of control or command." "It stands for the far more spiritual and more Christian principle of loyalty to the fellowship. The Churches represented in it are indeed independent, but independent with the Christian freedom which recognizes the restraints of truth and love. They are not free to deny the truth. They are not free to ignore the fellowship. And the objects of our conferences are to attain an ever deeper apprehension of the truth, and to guard the fellowship with ever increasing appreciation of its value."

These words should be borne in mind by all who read or speak of what the Lambeth Conference has said.

The recent gathering at Lambeth though larger than any of the five that preceded it, claimed no greater power than former Conferences: it passed no Canon, and made no laws, it assumed no coercive jurisdiction over any province or national or regional Church. As Archbishop Longley said when defining the position of the first Conference "It has never been contemplated that we should assume the functions of a general Synod of all the Churches in full Communion with the Church of England, and take upon ourselves to enact Canons that should be binding upon those here represented. We merely propose to discuss matters of practical interest and pronounce what we deem expedient in resolutions which may serve as safe guides in future actions." It is necessary to bear in mind the real status of the Conference—what it is not, as well as what it is—and then study the documents resulting from its deliberations.

Not one of the 252 Bishops who were in attendance was there by other than moral compulsion. All were there because they had accepted an invitation, not because they had received a command which they were not free to set aside.

And what shall I say in regard to those five momentous weeks? To have had the privilege of sharing in ever so small a degree in the deliberations, to have lived in the electric spiritual atmosphere which pervaded every session, is a never-to-day-forgotten experience. We felt that we were meeting "at an hour which must forever stand by itself in human history: an hour of strain and unrest; an hour of proud bereavement and of deliberate hope: gathered not, not only at the opening service but daily for thanksgiving, for intercession, for dedication, for resolve; gathered in full assurance of faith."

A glance at the Agenda paper will be sufficient to prove that the deliberations ranged far outside any mere ecclesiastical grooves. It can be claimed with truth that the subjects dealt with "touched human needs on every side"—international and inter-racial relations in East and West; industrial perplexities; psychical experiences and developments; marital and moral problems, domestic and civic; woman's place in council and in work.

The Conference was upheld by countless prayers. Doubtless there were some, as the Archbishop of Canterbury reminded us in his opening address, "who would tell us in courteous, not scornful challenge, that it was all an anachronism. Doubtless there were some saying 'Your credal phrases, your holy rites, are out of date. They have had their day. They have their picturesque beauty still, but they are outworn. The forthrightness they bore for men of old, is theirs no longer. Knowledge waxes: the old Faith wanes. Its coast line crumbles and is eroded by every incoming wave of scientific discovery and conquest. If your Creed is to survive at all, it must be recast with no timorous or cautious hand, but to its very foundations.'"

There is abundant reason to conclude that this contention is not true. Let me quote again, "Rather are men learning to look with fresh reverence upon every beam of light, be it old or new, which has irradiated, even dimly, the mysteries whereof thoughtful folk are becoming daily more aware. Half to their surprise, the philosopher and the reformer are beyond doubt awakening or reverting to the discovery that the old Christian Faith gives the clue to life's deepest mysteries, that the old-world Christian basis gives the soundest and most rational stand for ethical or social betterment. And so, if any ask what we bishops were met for, after so much travel and with so much circumstance, we assert our firm belief that the message God has entrusted to us is needed more perhaps than ever before, in a world which is waiting half consciously for its fuller and more thoughtful utterance."

It was in the spirit of these words and with a full sense of its great responsibilities that the Conference turned to consider the various questions submitted to it.

During the first week each subject in turn was dealt with by previously selected speakers, known experts in the matter in hand. At the close of the discussion of each subject a Committee was appointed to consider it and report.

Then for two weeks the Committees met, and having fully considered the subjects entrusted to them, drew up reports accompanied in each case by resolutions.

Then for two weeks more the whole Conference considered the reports in turn, and received them; and after the most careful deliberation agreed to the resolutions in the form in which they now stand.

It was felt that by far the most important of the reports was that dealing with the question of reunion amongst Christians; and that the Synod may the better understand the entirely new method of approach by which the Conference entered upon the consideration of this question, I now propose to read the "Appeal to All Christian People" which the Conference has adopted and sent forth.

AN APPEAL TO ALL CHRISTIAN PEOPLE.

From the Bishops Assembled in the Lambeth Conference of 1920.

We, Archbishops, Bishops Metropolitan, and other Bishops of the Holy Catholic Church in full communion with the Church of England, in conference assembled, realizing the responsibility which rests upon us at this time, and sensible of the sympathy and the prayers of many, both within and without our own communion, make this appeal to all Christian people.

We acknowledge all those who believe in our Lord Jesus Christ, and have been baptised into the name of the Holy Trinity, as sharing with us membership in the universal Church of Christ which is His Body. We believe that the Holy Spirit has called us in a very solemn and special manner to associate ourselves in penitence and prayer with all those who deplore the division of Christian people, and are inspired by the vision and hope of a visible unity of the whole Church.

I. We believe that God wills fellowship. By God's own act this fellowship was made in and through Jesus Christ, and His life is in His Spirit. We believe that it is God's purpose to manifest this fellowship so far as this world is concerned, in an outward, visible, and united society, holding one faith, having its own recognized officers, using God-given means of grace, and inspiring all its members to the world-wide service of the Kingdom of God. This is what we mean by the Catholic Church.

II. This united fellowship is not visible in the world to-day. On the one hand there are other ancient episcopal communions in East and West, to whom ours is bound by many ties of common faith and tradition. On the other hand there are the great non-episcopal communions, standing for rich elements of truth, liberty and life which might otherwise have been obscured or neglected. With them we are closely linked by many affinities, racial, historical and spiritual. We cherish the earnest hope that all these communions, and our own, may be led by the Spirit into the unity of the Faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God. But in act we are all organized in different groups, each one keeping to itself gifts that rightly belong to the whole fellowship, and tending to live its own life apart from the rest.

III. The causes of division lie deep in the past and are by no means simple or wholly blameless. Yet none can doubt that self-will, ambition and lack of charity among Christians have been principal factors in the mingled process, and that these, together with blindness to the sin of division, are still mainly responsible for the breaches of Christendom. We acknowledge this condition of broken fellowship to be contrary to God's will and we desire frankly to confess our share in the guilt of thus crippling the Body of Christ and hindering the activity of His Spirit.

IV. The times call us to a new outlook and new measures. The Faith cannot be adequately apprehended and the battle of the Kingdom cannot be worthily fought while the body is divided, and is thus unable to grow up into the fulness of the life of Christ. The time has come, we believe, for all the separated groups of Christians to agree in forgetting the things which are behind and reaching out towards the goal of a reunited Catholic Church. The removal of the barriers which have arisen between them will only be brought about by a new comradeship of those whose faces are definitely set this way.

The vision that arises before us is that of a Church, genuinely Catholic, loyal to all Truth, and gathering into its fellowship all "who profess and call themselves Christians," within whose visible unity all the treasures of faith and order, bequeathed as a heritage by the past to the present, shall be possessed in common, and made serviceable to the whole Body of Christ. Within this unity Christian communions now separated from one another would retain much that has long been neglected in their methods of worship and service. It is through a rich diversity of life and devotion that the unity of the whole fellowship will be fulfilled.

V. This means an adventure of goodwill and still more of faith, for nothing less is required than a new discovery of the creative resources of God. To this adventure we are convinced that God is now calling all the members of His Church.

VI. We believe that the visible unity of the Church will be found to involve the whole-hearted acceptance of—

The Holy Scriptures, as the record of God's revelation of Himself to man, and as being the rule and ultimate standard of faith; and the Creed commonly called Nicene, as the sufficient statement of the Christian faith, and either it or the Apostles' Creed as the Baptismal confession of belief;

The divinely instituted Sacraments of Baptism and the Holy Communion, as expressing for all the corporate life of the whole fellowship in and with Christ;

A ministry acknowledged by every part of the Church as possessing not only the inward call of the Spirit, but also the commission of Christ and the authority of the whole body.

VII. May we not reasonably claim that the Episcopate is the one means of providing such a ministry? It is not that we call in question for a moment the spiritual reality of the ministries of those communions which do not possess the Episcopate. On the contrary, we thankfully acknowledge that these ministries have been manifestly blessed and owned by the Holy Spirit as effective means of grace. But we submit that considerations of history and of present experience justify the claim which we make on behalf of the Episcopate. Moreover, we would urge that it is now and will prove to be in future the best instrument for maintaining the unity and continuity of the Church. But we greatly desire that the office of a Bishop should be everywhere exercised in a representative and constitutional manner, and more truly express all that ought to be involved for the life of the Christian Family in the title of Father-in-God. Nay, more, we eagerly look forward to the day when through its acceptance in a united Church we may all share in that grace which is pledged to the members of the whole body in the apostolic rite of the laying on of hands, and in the joy and fellowship of a Eucharist in which as one family we may together, without any doubtfulness of mind, offer to the one Lord our worship and service.

VIII. We believe that for all the truly equitable approach to union is by the way of mutual deference to one another's consciences. To this end, and we who send forth this appeal would say that, if the authorities of other communions should so desire, we are persuaded that, terms of union having been otherwise satisfactorily adjusted, bishops and clergy of our communion would willingly accept from these authorities a form of commission or recognition which would commend our ministry to their congregations, as having its place in the one family life. It is not in our power to know how far this suggestion may be acceptable to those to whom we offer it. We can only say that we offer it in all sincerity as a token of our longing that all ministries of grace, theirs and ours, shall be available for the service of our Lord in a united Church.

It is our hope that the same motive would lead ministers who have not received it to accept a commission through episcopal ordination, as obtaining for them a ministry throughout the whole fellowship.

In so acting, no one of us could possibly be taken to repudiate his past ministry. God forbid that any man should repudiate a past experience rich in spiritual blessings for himself and others. Nor would any of us be dishonouring the Holy Spirit of God, whose call led us all to our several ministries, and whose power enabled us to perform them. We shall be publicly and formally seeking additional recognition of a new call to wider service in a reunited Church, and imploring for ourselves God's grace and strength to fulfil the same.

IX. The spiritual leadership of the Catholic Church in days to come, for which the world is manifestly waiting, depends upon the readiness with which each group is prepared to make sacrifices for the sake of a common fellowship, a common ministry, and a common service to the world.

We place this ideal first and foremost before ourselves and our own people. We call upon them to make the effort to meet the demands of a new age with a new outlook. To all other Christian people whom our words may reach we make the same appeal. We do not ask that any one communion should consent to be absorbed in another. We do ask that all should unite in a new and great endeavour to recover and to manifest to the world the unity of the Body of Christ for which He prayed.

Big Ben—just tell him when

MAYBE you wear at him some mornings when you'd give anything in the world for forty winks more!

But, after all, you swear by him because he's only carrying out your own orders and calling you exactly when you say.

And isn't that what you want? A clock that takes time seriously: that lets you sleep right up to the last tick; and then keeps good time all day.

Right there's the reason why Westclox alarms have so many friends: they run and ring on time. Why shouldn't they? Every Westclox has that same good construction that got Big Ben up in the world.

Would any man or woman in this city refuse to give some small help to a little orphan child who has neither father or mother to provide for him? NOT ONE.

On Sunday next the unselfish Sisters of Belvidere Orphanage are asking the Catholic people of St. John's to help a little in the upkeep of who must have food to eat and clothes to wear --- the bare necessities of life. But a few close friends of the Institution who know of the reticence of those good ladies and their dislike of publicity, have jointly arranged to extend this appeal to no matter what class or creed, who would deem it a pleasure to do something for those helpless little orphans!

Could any father or mother, remembering the sheltering care given to their own dear ones, refuse to give an extra dollar to the upkeep of these little ones?

If he who "gives to the poor, lends to the Lord," won't you fathers and mothers who love your own dear little tots, please remember kindly the BELVIDERE ORPHANS on Sunday next.

Please Give Them All That You Can Spare!

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Sept. 4.

PRINCE OF WALES AND RACING.
The Prince of Wales's tour through the provinces deferred the completion of the racing season for the season's participation which His Royal Highness intended to take in racing; but on his return from Australia it is understood that he will undertake some racing of the Sandringham and the royal stables. While in Australia he carefully studied racing methods there and took in several races for gentlemen riders, winning some of these events. On leaving Sydney he was presented with Kinglark, the winner of the Australian Steeplechase, and the hope has been expressed that this horse may be entered for the Grand National next year. The Prince of Wales took great interest in the regimental races organized by the troops in France, and he is an accomplished horseman. Sometime ago His Royal Highness was elected a member of the Jockey Club, and this was heralded as the first step in his career.

A CHALLENGE TO STUDENTS.

London University students are keenly interested in the discussions by the intellectual highbrows of the British Association on the subject of "large yells, and the implication being that Cardiff students have achieved a premier distinction in the matter, the suggestion is made that they must "see what they can do about it." Although college cries are already competitive in their character, the attention which they have received from the British Association is sure to inspire students throughout the country to even keener rivalry. There is the prospect of competitions among the London colleges, and the wider prospect of students throughout the country, with a Glasgow team to back "Ygorra," challenged to contest again a co-ordinated howl evoked for London University. At present Ygorra has a kind of imitation of an engine whistle disappearing into a tunnel, Bart's, when they are in form, might be a pack of transmigrated wolves; but it is recognized that something there is nothing in London to compete with the cries of the North American Hurons or the matrimonial yell of the primitive anthropoids.

PEN AND PENCIL FIGHTERS.

War stories are somewhat of a discount but the book on which Sir Campbell Stuart has been working for some time is likely to make entertaining reading. It is an account of the methods and experiences of those who were responsible for the British propaganda work during the war. Sir Campbell can write on the subject with some authority, as during the latter part of the war, after his return from the position of British Embassy in London, he became Deputy Director of Propaganda at Crewe House. There are some dramatic and exciting tales of the manner in which the literature prepared by the staff at Crewe House was introduced into Germany. The various books of memoirs published in Berlin during the last eighteen months, and in many cases reprinted in this country, have proved that the propaganda was very disconcerting to the German Higher Command. Sir Campbell Stuart is by birth a Canadian, having been born in Montreal, and was responsible for the organization of the battalion of the Irish Canadian Rangers, which he recruited in the Province of Quebec.

PAPER CLOTHES.

At the Imperial War Museum at the Crystal Palace I happened upon the new exhibits of paper clothes which have just been added as specimens of a German war-time production. They recalled to memory experiences during the Armistice advance in Belgium. In some of the villages which the Germans had evacuated after a prolonged occupation they left elaborately equipped billets, and in nearly all the beds there were strong, clean paper pillowcases filled with wood shavings. Quantities of rope, also made of paper, were discovered in different places, the finds at the time being of the greatest interest to the troops, who had not previously known of their existence. The Crystal Palace exhibits are of higher quality, and include such articles of clothing as men's striped trousers and ladies' blouses and nightdresses. In appearance many of them are almost identical with creations of more lasting material, colored insertions helping considerably to add to the deception.

COSTUMES ON CHANGE.

London Stock Exchange men have always had the reputation of being among the best dressed in business. Of late years a much greater freedom of style and choice has been noticeable. The "topper" is becoming scarce, while the "bowler" is also much less frequently worn. The favorite, almost universal, headgear nowadays seems to be the Homburg or soft felt squash hat, the smartest shade of which is grey with a black band. The frock coat has long been abandoned, and now even the swallow-tail is seldom seen in the city. The city man who wants to be in the fashion to-day wears a black jacket and vest, with grey—preferably check—trousers. The Homburg, also in grey, the inevitable pair of white spats, and a silk colored handkerchief, which just peeps from his breast pocket, but which, in many cases has been artfully arranged there for show purposes, serves to complete the picture. The final touch is afforded by a straight silver-headed maulance cane and a pair of rather bright yellow chamot leather gloves.

For less "drowsy" occasions, the stiff colored turn-down collar is increasingly in favor.

TRADE SLUMP—A RAY OF HOPE.

A city friend tells me that business has not been at so low an ebb since the armistice as it is now. The pressure of the banks has eliminated most of the speculators from the markets, but in various commodities, for instance, in tea, woollens, and some non-ferrous metals, there are accumulations of produce which holders would be only too pleased to market if they could find buyers. But with money tight, the labor outlook threatening, and the impression widely held that unemployment will be serious this winter, the buyer has become a very elusive bird. Manufactured articles are being delivered to the wholesalers in fulfillment of old contracts at a far more rapid rate than the retailers can take them up, with the result that stocks are now beginning to accumulate in warehouses. On the other hand, I hear that the outlook in the textile trade is brightening. Good foreign orders are beginning to come in again, and manufacturers who, a fortnight ago, would have been glad to close their works in the event of a coal strike, now desire to keep their mills running.

DANCING REVIVAL.

Dancing mistresses are again mobilizing their forces for the autumn season. As usual, a number of new and intricate dances are being announced by those who make their living by instruction, in the hope of swelling the ranks of their pupils. It is more than probable that these adaptations of the old tango and the new steps said to come from Spain will go the way of so many other novelties and get no further than the floors of those small rooms where "select classes" are put through their paces. One well-known London instructor has made a determined effort to reintroduce the tango for two years, and tells us once more this season that in a rejuvenated form it will be danced everywhere this winter. The truth of the matter seems to be that London is quite satisfied with the simplified fox trot and oyster step, and is far too lazy to learn anything elaborate.

HOT-AIR CORNER.

The enduring popularity of the open air meetings at Hyde Park is one of the greatest mysteries of London's life. Last evening the open spaces and avenues of Hyde Park, seen in the twilight under a misty moon, might have tempted all the young and active to wander, but many hundreds of them preferred to stand in tightly-packed groups listening to the orators who never seem to take a holiday. Anyone can draw an audience. He need not even stand on a platform or a candle box. He need not have anything to say—indeed, the art of Hyde Park oratory seems to be to take an interminable time getting to a point that is not there. Nearly all the speakers have a leisurely manner and a love of involved sentences that would make the organizers of an indoor meeting want to lock the doors lest the wearied audience should run away. The outdoor people do not mind. You may ask a man who has been listening intently to some speaker for a quarter of an hour what it is all about. "I don't know," he will say, and listen as intently as before.

GENUINE ASPIRIN

HAS "BAYER CROSS"

Tablets without "Bayer Cross" are not Aspirin at all

Get genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in a "Bayer" package, plainly marked with the safety "Bayer Cross."
Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" are now made in America by an American Company. No German interest whatever, all rights being purchased from the United States Government.
During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. The "Bayer Cross" is your only way of knowing that you are getting genuine Aspirin, proved safe by millions for Headache, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for Pain generally.
Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger sized "Bayer" packages can be had at drug stores.
Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

GREEN APPLE TIME.
Green apple time! Oh the joy
Once more to be a healthy boy
Casting a longin' greedy eye
At every tree he passes by Riskin' the direct consequence
To sneak inside a neighbor's fence
An' shake from many a laced limb
The fruit that seems so near to him.
Gosh! but once more I'd like to be
The boy I was in eighty-three.

Here I am sittin' with my pipe
Waitin' for apples to get ripe;
Waitin' until the friendly sun
Has hurried 'em all an' says they're done.
Not darin' any more to climb
An' pick a few afore their time.
No legs to run, no teeth to chew
The way that healthy youngsters do,
Just 'ol' 'nough to sit an' wait
An' pick my apple from a plate.

Plate apples ain't to be compared With those you've ventured for an' dared.
It's wakin' 'em from branches high,
Or nippin' 'em when no one's by,
Or findin' 'em the times you feel
You really need another meal,
Or comin' unexpectedly
Upon a farmer's loaded tree
An' grabbin' all that you can eat
That goes to make an apple sweet.

Green apple time! Go to it boy
An' cram yourself right full o' joy.
Watch for the farmer's dog an' run
There'll come a time it can't be done.
There'll come a day you can't digest
The fruit you've stuffed into your vest
Nor climb, but you'll sit down like me
An' watch 'em ripenin' on the tree
An' jus' like me you'll have to wait
To pick your apples from a plate.
