A CORRESPONDENT writes:—At a recent reunion of wounded officers of the lst Ontario Batt., C.E.F., at Stratford and Windsor the greatest of tribute was paid to Capt. T. L. Swift, who has been missing since the battle of Givenchy on June 15th. Out of the eight wounded officers of this battle six are now on leave in Canada. These officers were the guests of Capt. T. Delamare and Crown-Atty. McPherson, of Stratford, and Capt. G. Wilkinson, of Windsor. Capt. Wilkinson was the last officer to see Capt. Swift and at the time he saw Capt. Swift, he was putting up a gallant fight against the Germans in the second German line. At this time the officers of No. 3 Co. were all either wounded or killed and when Capt. Wilkinson fell wounded with three bullet wounds, Capt. Swift was left in charge of the remaining men. Capt. Wilkinson claims that Tom was putting up a gallant fight against great odds and succeeded in driving the Germans out of their second line. All the officers present deeply regret that Tom was not in a position to get back to his own lines. The following are the officers that met together: Capt. Wilkinson, Windsor; Capt. Delamare, Stratford; Lieut. Chesham, Stratford; Lieut. Stapleford, Watford. These six officers are six out of eight officers alive out of the thirty-three who left Canada with the 1st. Batt. last year.

The British Fist

I read in the papers the other day that "fists and the butts of rifles" were principal weapons employed by the British troops when they piled pell-mell into the German trenches in the progress of the great drive.

It is now easier to understand why the Germans were driven back, mile upon mile, in such disorder. For the good solid fist is far from being a favorite in Germany, where boxing is an almost unheard-of sport. Even when the matter of including boxing in the Olympic games was taken up, the delegates from Germany made many objections. Even amateur boxing is frowned upon in the Kaiser's country, and the Emperor is alleged to have a prejudice against the game. There is a story to the effect that the British sport has been under the ban of the Hohenzollerns ever since 1748, when Jack Boughton, then champion of England, visited Prussia as the protege of the Duke of Cumberland.

fore made between Broughton and a picked man from a grenadier regiment, a giant who stood nearly six feet and a half, and who looked able to whip Broughton with one The English boxer, however, found it only child's play to punch the big soldier, and the pride of the regiment was soon stretched out on the ground, very much hors de com-Since then, it is alleged, the Prussian royal family has inherited a prejudice against boxing. So it is quite easy to understand that the German soldiers had no relish for the hearty wallops of the good twohanded punchers in the ranks of Tommy Atkins.—B. W.

A Good Wife

"She was a good wife to me. A good wife, Good bless her." These words were spoken in trembling accents over a coffin lid. The woman asleep there had borne the heat and burden of life's long day, and no one had ever heard her murmur; her hand was quick to reach out in a helping grasp to those who fell by the wayside; and her feet were swift on errands of mercy; the heart of the husband had trusted her; he had left her to long hours of solitude, while he amused himself in scenes in which she had no pleasure nor part. Children had been born to them. She had reared them almost alone—they were gone! Her hand had ministered to their wants. Then she had comforted him, and sent him out strong and whole-heartful while she stayed home and cried. What can a woman do but cryand trust? Well, she is at rest now. But she could not die until she had promised to "bear up" and not to fret, but to remember how happy they have been. They? Yes, it is even so. For she was blessed in giving, and he in receiving. It was an equal partnership after all. "She was a good wife to me." Oh man man! why not have told her so, when her ears were not dulled by death

A PAIR OF SHOESTRINGS.

The Matter of Length and How to Tie

A shoestring is "six-fourths" long when one does not specify the length "Six-fourths of what?" is likely to be the question put by the layman.

When a man buys a new pair of shoes the strings in them are just long enough. When he buys the next pair of shoestrings they are too long. The strings that come with the shoes are four-fourths long, the next pair will be six-fourths unless the purchaser asks for and can get four-fourths.

These lengths have to do with men's high shoes. There is not the same trouble in the case of low shoes.

Some shoestrings will wear a long time, but they will become brown. Others will not wear so long, but will retain their original blackness. The strong strings that turn brown are of linen or very strong cotton. The others are of mixed fibers that hold their

Many people prefer the less durable shoestring, not only because it holds its color, but because being of a less hard fiber it stays tied better than the other. A few of the millions of shoestring wearers know how to tie s bowknot that won't come untied. The method can be explained without a diagram.

Instead of tucking the bow once over before drawing the knot tight, tuck it twice over. A fiddle string used for a shoestring would not come un way. This knot can be untied in the same way as the other, by pulling at the ends.-Philadelphia Record.

TRAPPED A SEAGULL

Queer Contest of Strength Between a Bird and a Bivalve.

At first thought it is hard to imagine how a clam could endanger the life of a bird. That such a strange circumstance is not impossible is shown by the following incident:

A settler on one of the small islands near Vancouver was returning to his home by way of a beach of hard sand when he beheld an unusually large flock of seagulls gathered in a compact mass and beating with beaks and wings upon the sand. Evidently they were attacking some enemy. Over-head dozens of gulls wheeled and screamed in evident excitement.

The settler was almost upon the fighting birds before they burst apart and flew, chattering, toward the clouds. One, however, lay flapping upon the ground, and the man saw that a monster clam held the gull's beak in a vise like grip. It was too heavy for the bird to fly away with, and for all the gull's frantic struggles it could not loosen the clam's tenacious grip.

With his hunting knife the man pried open the shells and freed the captive. The gull was exhausted from its desperate efforts and at first could only the water. Finally, however, it flew away and soon returned in the van of a cloud of gulls come to inspect the enemy that had trapped one of their tribe.-St. Andrews Beacon.

Lip Reading Detectives. In a Vienna school for the deaf and dumb, where lip reading is taught, a course has been established for the special purpose of teaching the art to detectives. The possibilities of lip reading, says the author of the account in the Volta Review, have been exaggerated. But they are sufficient to cause authorities to think the instruction of detectives worth while. When a de-tective becomes proficient, he is able to learn something of the conversation between people who are visible, but out of earshot. The article says that at from 50 to 100 feet it is possible for an expert to get the general run of a conversation. Some reading has been done with glasses at a distance of 125 feet. Instruction and practice in the art must be very thorough if the detective is to use it to real advantage in his

Transforming Clothesline Posts. A suburban resident grew tired of the wooden clothesline posts in his back yard. He incased them in chicken wire netting and planted sprouts of honeysuckle around the posts. He then nailed a little bird house to the top of each. In a short time the honeysuckle had completely covered the unsightly posts and a pair of bluebirds built a nest in one of the houses. Many of this man's neighbors took up the idea, and honeysuckle vines and bird houses now make the clothesline posts of his locality a pride to their owners.-House

Detroit Saturday Night. - After this war, Canadians will always smile when an American orator describes the stars and stripes as the battle-flag of freedom

Since the United States notifies Germany that it does not consider the safety of non-combatants on torpedoed shirs has been sufficiently provided for when they are turned loose in lifeboats, there is nothing left for German submarines to do but to refrain from sinking any American ships or passenger liners.

The German report that 23 vessels have been sunk by submarines in Mediterranean waters in the last few weeks corresponds sufficiently closely with the statements that have been recorded from day to day to be accepted as probably true. Submarine activity appears to have been transferred largely from the North sea and Atlantic ocean to the Mediterranean where probably there are not so many submarine hunters.

Essex Free Press:-Newspaper men throughout Canada have given freely and liberally, not only of their hard-earned dollars, but also of their most valuable asset, publicity space for the honor and the upholding of the Empire. And right here we would like to point out how little, outside of their money contributions men in other lines of business have given from their stock in trade towards the upholding of the honor of Old England. Yet we find those who will stand on the street corners and endeavor to belittle the publishers of this country for not doing more. We could not be considered boastful but at the same time we say without fear of contradiction, that if those who under rate the effects of the Canadian press, had given as freely and as liberally of their resources as has been done by the Canadian publishers, the enemies of the British Empire would, at the present time, be in a much tighter corner than they now find them-careful attention.

Mr. Steer, principleof Watford High School, thanked the Association for an invitation to be present and gave some good advice along hygienic lines.

A collection in aid of Red Cross work amounting to $50 was taken up.

Miss Bell discussed "How to secure neatness in work." The pupils are great imitators so the teacher should be neat not only in appearance but in the way the work is done. Pupils should be trained to be orderly. Many pupils come from homes of untidiness therefore a great amount of time is necessary to correct bad habits.

correct bad habits. Miss Tanner dealt with order in a school. A place for everything and everything in its place. Make neatness a daily task not a special one. Teachers should not fail to give praise whenever possible. Teaching should be the living example to the pupil of a neat orderly life.

Mr. McDougall spoke along general lines. 120 teachers were present out of 123. 40 changes occurred during the past term. The ideal of the teacher is everything. Our character, our work is the ideal set before the child. Set right ideal before pupils first of all. Train pupils for good citizens. He spoke about what he expected to see when he visited the school—neat premises, busy interested pupils.

Friday afternoon was used by the teachers to visit the North Euniskillen rural school fair.

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS

Ailments such as constipation, colic, colds, vomiting, etc., setze children of all ages and the mother should be on her guard against these troubles by keeping a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. If any of these troubles come on suddenly the tablets will cure them, or if the little one is given an occasional dose he will escape these troubles. The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Toronto, Oct. 26.--Receipts at the Union stockyards to-day were 846 cattle, Union stockyards to-day were 846 cattle, 304 calves, 1,426 hogs and 1,530 sheep and lambs.

There was a good steady market to-day with a 'shade firmer tone for anything in the line of good butcher or good feeders. Extra choice heavy cattle were scarce, several small bunches fetching good prices, one choice lot selling at $7.95. For the general run of medium and common cattle prices were steady but firm. There is a good demand for choice quality feeders. Butchers' cows a little weaker. Good veal calves steady. Choice light lambs are selling very firm at $8.50 to $8.90, with a few choice decks black-faced at $9.

Hogs steady at this week's decline of 25c.

Lieut. Stapleford at Dutton

The Dutton Advance of last week its report of a Red Cross meeting held in that town has the tollowing:

As Lieut. Stapleford, supported by a cane, stepped on the platform the audience went into raptures in the warmth of its reception. The gallant soldier modestly claimed that he was not an orator, and went on in his simple but most interesting way to tall of his experience. most interesting way to tell of his experiences at the front. By means of a blackboard he illustrated the positions of the different forces, the trenches and the communications at Festi June 15th, when he received seven wounds as he led in a bayonet charge on the German trenches after being blown up by a mine, including a bayonet wound in the arm and a badly fractured aukle by a sniper's bullet. Where he fell was but a few yards from the British trench but it took him four hours to crawl to it. He paid a tribute to the Red Cross Society for the noble work they are doing. He described the Germans as well equipped with machine guns, in fact they seem to be carrying them in their pockets.

In that engagement, which was so graphically described, were 700 men and 22 officers, of whom only 42 men and one officer escaped. It was in that battle that Lieut. Col. Beecher, of London, was killed and also Lieut. Metcalfe, of St.

A touching appeal was made that the boys at the front might not be forgotten. A little token from home or friends had wonderful influence in arousing the depressed spirits of the soldiers. He had often seen when the mail was distributed the fortunate ones receive the reminders from home with a smile of gladness while the disappointed ones would wipe their tear-dimmed eyes.

In concluding, Lieut. Stapleford asked that patience be exercised as to when the war would end. It will end in the triumph for freedom, and that may not be very long.

A FOSTER CHILD

How a Conspiracy Was Organized to Rob Her

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Ethan Trowbridge, a miner in Colo rado, who had been prospecting on his own account, came to his cabin one evening sick and discouraged. He had some time before entered a claim on which he had found evidence of gold and had been endeavoring to show that it was of sufficient value to enable him to secure capital to develop it. While working in the rain he had caught a severe cold and had on this memorable evening come to his home never to leave it again. In a few days he died.

Trowbridge left a wife and a little daughter three years of age. The widow was absolutely penniless. She nade every effort to support herself and her little girl, but she, too, soon broke down in health and followed her husband to the grave.

The only person who ministered to ber in her last illness was a negro woman commonly called Aunt Sue. At Mrs. Trowbridge's death Aunt Sue carried the little girl to her own home and took care of her the same as one of her own children.

Twelve years passed. Edith Trowbridge, now fifteen years of age and old enough to understand that she was living with a different race from her own, left her foster mother with deep gratitude for her kindness to go forth into the world to earn her own living. The old woman parted with her re luctantly. But her own children were at work, and she realized that it was time Edith should be. Besides, it was proper that the white girl should associate with those of her own color. Edith Trowbridge found a position as nurse with a Mrs. Kimball, a lady who shortly afterward removed to St Louis, taking the girl with her. Edith's story interested her employer so far that she sent her to school, where, being very bright, she learned rapidly. 'At nineteen she had become a member of the Kimball family, though she continued to relieve Mrs. Kimball of many household duties.

Edith Trowbridge was known during the time she lived with Aunt Sue by the name of Springer, that being Aunt Sue's name, so far as she had a name. While with Mrs. Kimball she became known as Edith Kimball. At twenty years of age she was enjoying many social advantages and was a favorite. Among her young men friends was Arthur Ingersoll, who had recently promise of a successful career. Ingersoll fell in love with Edith. She reciprocated, and they became engaged.

One day a man appeared at Aunt Sue's cabin and told her that Edward Springer, her master when she had been a slave, had died and left her and her children $1,000 each. All she had to do to secure her inheritance was to give him a list of her children. Aunt Sue could not write, but she gave the man the names required and, in order to serve her foster child, included The man took down these names, and Aunt Sue made her mark at the bottom of the list, a neighbor being called in to witness the signa-

It was about this time that a letter came to the St. Louis postoffice addressed to Edith Trowbridge at the Kimball address. Edith opened the letter, wondering who it was who knew her by her real name. The writer asked her if she would sell a four acre lot, of which she was the owner, on Clear creek, near Georgetown, Colo., and if so what price she put upon it. This was Greek to Edith, who had no knowledge of such lot and believed the writer had made a mistake. So she wrote him to this effect. He wrote back that the land had been pre-empted by one Ethan Trowbridge seventeen years before and it was supposed that she was her father's only heir.

Edith now referred the letters to her lover, who took the matter up and through a correspondent in Colorado discovered that a valuable vein of ore had been discovered on property adjoining the claim entered by Ethan Trowbridge shortly before his death The vein was supposed to extend through the Trowbridge claim, and many persons were trying to find the owner of the Trowbridge property in order to buy it.

On learning these facts Ingersoll took the information to his sweetheart, and there was a joyful meeting, Edith having become an heiress. It was arranged between them that he should go to Colorado as her agent and look into the matter. So after Edith had signed a power of attorney to that effect they parted, and the next day In-

That was the last meeting between the lovers for some time. The next word Edith received from her lover was a letter from Colorado in which he informed her that he had received a severe blow, which must also fall on her with equal force. He informed her that he had seen convincing proofs that she was the daughter not of Ethan Trowbridge, but of a negress named Susan Springer, who had certified that Edith was her child.

Of course all was over between them since he could not bring himself to marry a girl with negro blood in her veins. He was hearthroken.

The shock to Edith was far greater than to Ingersoll. She had lost her lover, she had been disappointed in her inheritance, and Aunt Sue had certified that she was of the negro race. For a time the girl was so far crushed that she was incapable of taking any action; then, when the first anguish had passed, she made her confession to Mrs. Kimball. That lady gave her heartfelt sympathy, and when Edith assured her that she had a faint remembrance of her white mother the lady offered to assist her in securing proof as to her real parentage.

A few days later, having been fur nished with what money she needed Edith started for Colorado. On arriv ing there she went at once to the cab in of her foster mother, Aunt Sue. "Bless yo' heart, honey," exclaimed the old woman, "yo' mighty good to come back to see me! Hab yo' got de "What money?"

Aunt Sue then told of the visit she had received and the legacy, adding, "I didn' want yo' to lose yo' share, honey, so I tole de man yo' was one o' my own chillen.' "Oh, Aunt Sue!" exclaimed Edith bitterly.

"Wasn't dat right?" "Have you and the children received your legacies?" asked Edith, ignoring the question "No, and I haben't see de gentleman

"I'm afraid you never will. All he wanted of you was to get your state ment that I was your daughter." "Oh, my goody gracious!"

Arthur Ingersoll returned to St. Louis deeply disappointed man. He refrained from attempting to see Edith, but wrote a note to Mrs. Kimball to say that he thought it best he and his former fiancee should not meet again Mrs. Kimball replied that Edith had gone to Colorado to collect proof that she was of pure white blood and the daughter of Ethan Trowbridge.

Ingersoll was in a quandary. If he endeavored to assist the girl he loved prove that she was exclusively of the white race and it turned out that she was not, he would be more deeply involved with her. If, on the contrary he denied her such assistance and she proved that she was all white it would be tantamount to deserting her in time of trouble. He pondered on the matter, but for a long while came to no decision.

A week's indecision was enough for him. He decided that he would not desert Edith. Having come to this conclusion, he took a train for Colo

He found Edith at a hotel in George town. He advanced to meet her with open arms, but she drew back. "There can be nothing more between us," she said, "till this matter is clean-

"You will let me help you clear it

Edith hesitated, but he pleaded so hard that she yielded. She told him of her interview with Aunt Sue and of her suspicion that some one had laid a trap to beat her out of her inheritance. Then they both went to work to unearth the scheme. They were not long in discovering that a man of the name of William Trowbridge had laid claim to the property in question, claiming to be Ethan Trowbridge's only brother; that he and Ethan had never had a sister; consequently William was sole heir-at-law. Ingersoll saw at once that the proper ground on which to dispute this man's claim was that Edith was Ethan Trowbridge's daughter and consequently heir-at-law. But the enemy had Aunt Sue's statement that Edith was her daughter. The only hope was to prove that in Edith's blood there was no ne-

Having filed the necessary papers the case, the lovers returned to St. Louis, where they consulted physicians and men of science, with a view to discovering whether there was any known test for pure white blood. They were informed that there was, but it would be necessary for Edith to go to the east, where the most advanced specialists were located.

So far as Edith's immediate circle was concerned, there was no necessity for making the journey to submit to such a test, for it was plain to them that there had been a conspiracy with a view to securing her inheritance. But the proving of her case in law seemed to render the matter obligatory to her. Just as she was, about to start word came from Colorado that a woman had been found who had known the Trowbridge family, had been at the house when Edith was born and had been cognizant of the death of her parents and her removal to the cabin of Aunt

On receipt of this news the lovers de cided to return to Colorado, take the deposition of this woman and file it with the other papers in the case. But Ingersoll insisted before starting that they be married, since he was now satisfied as to Edith's birth. She consented, and they went westward as man and wife.

By this time William Trowbridge, who had secured Aunt Sue's statement that Edith was her daughter and who was not a brother of Ethan Trow bridge, fearing he would be prosecuted for conspiracy and perjury, disappear ed. On the affidavit of the person who had known the Trowbridges and other proofs of her identity Edith was put in possession of her inheritance.

It was found that the vein on the adjoining property had been worked clear up to the line of the Trowbridge claim opening and growing richer as it adanced. Edith before leaving Colorado sold the property for a fortune and reurned to her home a very rich woman. She insisted on taking Aunt Sue with her, since the latter was getting old, and installed her in her St. Louis home to work or not as she chose.

A LIVING TORPEDO.

That Odd Fish, the Electric Ray, Is a Terror In His Own Way.

There is a queer fish, bearing the name torpedo, that in its own peculiar way is a good deal of a terror. This is the torpedo, or electric ray, a dweller in the southern seas, which grows to a large size, sometimes weighing seventy or eighty pounds. This peculiar fish has a nearly circular body, a short tail and a very small mouth.

The back is brownish in color, and the underneath parts are white.

The torpedo obtains its name from its power of giving a violent shock, similar to an electric shock, to any thing with which it comes in contact. Whenever an enemy approaches the fish emits from its body a kind of electricity, which incapacitates the attackliately. In capturing its food the torpedo finds this power of use. Being very inactive, it cannot pursue the small fish which form its diet, so it lies in wait until they swim close by and then throws out its powerful shock, which instantly renders them helpless. If a person touches this strange fish he is attacked by cramp, which affects the stomach, producing a kind of convulsion. For this reason the torpedo is sometimes known as the "cramp fish."-London Answers.

THE YELLOW FLAG.

Ruse That Once Saved a British Ship From Capture.

An effective ruse de guerre in the way of flag flying was that practiced in the Mediterranean at the beginning of the last century by Lord Dundonald while cruising in the British ship Speedy. This little brig had captured so many of the enemy's merchantmen that a Spanish frigate was specially fitted out. disguised as a merchantman, to bring her to book Dundonald, in order to deceive the nerchant craft of the enemy, adopted similar tactics and disguised the Spee dy as a Danish merchant brig. The two disguised boats soon sighted each other. Dundonald at once gave chase and discovered his mistake when the Spaniard suddenly revealed her true nature and started lowering a boat to examine the Speedy's papers.

But Dundonald was equal to the oc casion. He hoisted the yellow flagsignal of sickness. And when the Spanish boat was within hail an English officer in Danish uniform shouted that they were only two days out of Algiers. As the plague was raging in Algiers, the ruse was completely sucessful.—London Chronicle

TWO MINDS THAT DID AS ONE.

When Dr. Anna Shaw and Miss Anthony Lectured Together.

Writing of her lectures for suffrage with Susan B. Anthony, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw says in the Metropoli. tan Magazine:

We traveled and lectured together so constantly that each of us developed an almost uncanny knowledge of the other's mental processes. At any point of either's lecture the other could pick it up and carry it on-a fortunate condition, as it sometimes became neces-sary to do this. Miss Anthony was subject to contractions of the throat which for the moment caused a slight strangulation. On such occasions of which there were several—she would turn to me and indicate her helplessness. Then I would repeat her last sentence, complete her speech and after erward make my own.

The first time this happened we were in Washington, and Aunt Susan stopped in the middle of a word. She could not speak; she merely motioned to me to continue for her and left the stage. At the end of the evening a prominent Washington man who had been in our audience remarked to me confiden tially:
"That was a nice little play you and Miss Anthony made tonight-very effective indeed." For an instant I did not catch his meaning or the implication in his knowing smile.

"Very clever, that strangling hit and your going on with the speech," he repeated. "It hit the audience hard."
"Surely," I protested, "you don't think it was a deliberate thing-that we planned or rehearsed it?"

He stared at me incredulously.

"Are you going to pretend." he de manded, "that it wasn't a put up job?" I told him he had paid us a high ompliment and that we must really have done very well if we had con veyed that impression, and I finally convinced him that we not only had not rehearsed the episode, but that neither of us had known what the other meant to say. We never wrote out our speeches, but our subject was always suffrage or some ramification of suffrage, and naturally we had thoroughly digested each other's views.

LIFE ON A SUBMARINE. There Are No Comforts, and Sleep Is

on one of these under sen terrors says: "Every minute the non are in the submarine means the risk of pneumoand tuberco side of the boat sweats like a pitcher of ice water on a hot day. Before we are on it three hours our clothes are soaked, and they stay that way. We have absolutely no heat, which means that the boat is the temperature of the outside air. Sometimes we nearly freeze. The doctors say that the men on a submarine never sleep; they merely become unconscious for brief intervals. The air, the odors from the machinery, the constant vibration and the intense strain under which von labor make sleep an impossibility.

"In a storm, when we have to seal up, the air gets worse than anything you can imagine. There are eighteen men and two officers in one of our boats, and at any moment any one of the twenty may cause the death of all the rest. There is no room for mistakes. The space in which the men live is fifty feet long and about ten feet wide. I can stand upright if I pick my place, but most of the time my shoulders are bent. There are no bunks; we all spread our mattresses on an iron deck. The dining room consists of four electric hot plates. Nothing in the nature of a spark is allowed below decks, but we can heat up coffee on the hot plates and occasionally fry things. We can't smoke, and the vibration of the engines makes it impossible to read or even play cards, so when we are not working there's nothing for us to do but sit on the floor and look at each other."-Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The Human Brain. Our brains are seventy year clocks. The angel of life winds them up once for all, then closes the case and gives the key into the hand of the angel of the resurrection. Tick-tack, tick-tack, go the wheels of thought. Our will cannot stop them. They cannot stop themselves. Sleep cannot still them. Madness only makes them go faster. Death alone can break into the case, and, seizing the ever swinging pendulum which we call the heart, silence at last the clicking of the terrible escapement we have carried so long neath our wrinkled foreheads. -

The congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church at Windsor will hold a meeting shortly to decide on some hold a meeting shortly to decide on some plan whereby they can get back $4,000 paid as part payment on an organ to a firm in Germany before the beginning of the war. The congregation contracted for a $10,000 organ, and were required to pay part down to show good faith. On the declaration of war between England and Germany, the firm could not ship goods to any of the English colonies and the order was held up. Even though they might get the organ eventually, its teared many members of the congreis teared many members of the congregation would stay away from the church on account of the organ being made in Germany, so the congregation has decided that they will not take the organ, but will cancel the order and, try to get their money back. All German firms of small capital who did business with the colonies before the war were English required to keep a deposit of $10,000 or $20,000 with some banking house in England to show their good faith and to England to show their good faith and to protect the English proyincials in case of the liquidation of the German firm. It is understood by the St. Andrew's congregation that the German firm selling the organ had, at the beginning of the war, such a deposit with a banking firm in England and that therein lies their chance of recovering their money.

Scientific Farming

WHEN TO SOW ALFALFA.

Some Farmers Prefer Spring and Others the Fall. The soil for alfalfa should have plenty of humus. A deep, rich, sandy loam will grow alfalfa to perfection. The land should be well drained, for alfalfa will not be a success on swamp land, says a contributor to Farm

There is a difference of opinion as to when alfalfa should be sown. Some prefer the spring and others the fall. I think one should be governed by conditions of climate and soil. In those sections where there is little moisture in the fall and the winters are exceedingly cold spring seeding is preferable. Soil that tends to bake on account of drought will give better results when seeded in the spring. When seeded in the fall the roots go into winter quarters very tender and are apt to be winter killed. When there is plenty of moisture and soil is alluvial and sandy and winters light, fall seeding is recommended because the alfalfa can be sown after the season's crop is harvested. When planting in the early spring one should be certain to wait until all danger from frost has passed. The soil should be harrowed and disked until it is like an ash bank, then packed until it is firm below. Lack of thorough preparation of soil is the cause of more failures to get a stand of alfalfa than anything

When alfalfa is planted in the spring it should have a nurse crop. Oats are considered the best nurse crop in certain sections. They shade the ground and protect the young plants from the hot summer sun and at the same time give a profitable crop. The ground should be full of moisture when planting the seed so that it will come right up and start to growing.

COLUMN TO THE PARTY OF THE PART Washing Dairy Utensils.

To thoroughly clean milk utensils they should first be rinsed with cold water to remove all particles of milk. Then they should be thoroughly scrubbed with a brush in warm water to which a small quantity of good washing powder has been added. A washing powder free from grease is much to be preferred. After this they should be steamed or at least rinsed in boiling water. No wiping cloth of any kind should be allowed to come in contact with them after the scalding process. Sunlight is one of the best disinfectants, and when possible all utensils should be placed in good sunlight and pure air.

 BEES IN SEPTEMBER.

September is a month that often brings hope to discouraged beekeepers who for one reason or another have failed to secure a crop of honey from the earlier sources, such as the clovers. Experience has proved that often the fall flow exceeds the earlier one. This may be the result of two causes. It may be that the colonies were so weak from winter losses or spring dwindling that they were not strong enough in numbers to take advantage of even an abundant flow, or the lack of an early crop may have been the result of real lack of nectar secreted by the flowers. There is an ever increasing number of progressive beekeepers who during September take from the hives every drop of honey, not only from the supers, but from the brood nest as well, and in its place they feed sugar sirup and make the bees depend exclusively upon it, and there is much to be said in favor of this plan.

The honey from the fall flowers is full of pollen grains, and too much of this eaten by the bees during the win-ter is liable to cause dysentery, especially if the bees are kept in winter repositories, and by giving the hives clear sugar sirup in place of the honey taken there is a decided gain, not only in the health of the colony so treated. but a gain in dollars, as the honey we take from them will sell for more than the sugar sirup will cost.

CLEANING HINT.

to Remove Grease Spots Effectively With an Absorbent.

In removing a grease spot it is best to try an absorbent, for the absorbents are all harmless to materials and easily applied. Flour or cornstarch sprinkled on linen immediately will remove all spots. It should be left on for several hours, but a warm iron placed on a cloth over the powder and left until cold will hasten the process.

Turpentine or any of the other solvents may be used with an absorbent powder to make a paste for spreading over the spot. When sponging a spot if one commences at the outside and works toward the center spreading of the grease is avoided. It is always safer to test the cleanser on a scrap of the material to see that the color is not affected. The use of a piece of the material for a sponge also lessens the liability of changing the color. The sponging should be completed by rubbing with a piece of dry cloth.

Chloroform and ether are best for removing grease from delicate fabrics. Alcohol also dissolves grease, but often affects colors. A mixture of equal parts of the three is often most effective. Kerosene does not evaporate completely, so must be followed by an absorbent or soap and water. Gasoline is best for most purposes, since it is inexpensive, quickly effective and evaporates rapidly. All of these solvents are highly inflammable and must be handled with great care.

Then add a beaten egg mixed with half a cupful of milk and four tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Spread in a sheet in a big layer cake tin and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Bake in a quick oven and serve warm.

Matter of Precedence.

A discussion once arose in the University of Cambridge whether doctors at law or doctors in medicine should hold precedence. The chancellor asked whether the thief or the hangman preceded at an execution. Being told that the thief usually took the lead, "Well, then," said the chancellor, "let the doctors in law have the precedence and let doctors in medicine be next in rank."-London Standard.
