A PASTOR'S EXPERIENCE.

The Troubles of a Canadian Clergyman.

Attached with a Disease Unknown to Physicians—He Had Almost Given up Hope When the Hand of Relief was Stretched Out to Him.

Rev. S. J. Cummings, the pastor of the First Baptist church of Delevan, New York, has had an experience that makes him one of the most talked of men in Cattaraugus county. To a reporter of the Buffalo News who called upon him, Mr. Cummings made the following statement which he put in the form of an affidavit. "I am now feeling as well that I am entering on a series of special teaching; and am returning to work with all my old time vigor. I was prostrated in June last and was treated by three physicians, one near this place and two in the city of Buffalo, but received no benefit or encouragement from them. They all were of the opinion that I would have to resign my pastorate and quit preaching. Nevertheless I now feel entirely recovered.

I cannot give you the name of my doctor. It baffled the physicians, and they could not agree as to the nature of the trouble. After the slightest exposure as in the damp of the morning, or after the dew-fell in the evening, my limbs would swell and become discolored and my body would be racked with pain. These attacks would last three or four hours, but they would usually leave me helpless for at least a day after the acute pain had passed. At night I was unable to sleep. The strain upon my nervous system was tremendous. I became so prostrated as to be unable to take exercise. I could do scarcely any work in my study, and frequently could not preach to my people. Sometimes for a week the muscles of my arms would be so affected that I could not write a letter or pen a discourse.

On the recommendation of the physicians who examined me, my church granted me a vacation for a month, and I went to my old home at Oakwood, Ont., north of Toronto for a rest. On reaching home my father urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I protested on the plea of having taken so many medicines that I had lost all faith in them. But he had heard of their efficacy and insisted on my giving them a trial. He brought me two boxes and I commenced to take them. I soon found my health improving so rapidly that I returned to my home and family at this place. Some of my friends insisted that the benefit was only temporary, that I would soon have a relapse and be worse than before, but I have continued to take them and now feel like a new man. The sudden attacks of pain which formerly prostrated me on my bed do not recur, and I have exposed myself many times in a way that would have formerly brought them on.

In my family I have found them very beneficial. My wife finds them more helpful to her than anything she has ever taken. I have spent hundreds of dollars in doctors' remedies and patent medicines but all to no avail until I tried Pink Pills.

S. J. CUMMINGS.
Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of September, 1893.

JOHN HORN, Notary Public.

Druggists everywhere bear witness to the firm hold this wonderful Canadian medicine has taken upon the public, and to the vast good it has accomplished in relieving suffering, and thousands of grateful people like Rev. Mr. Cummings cheerfully testify to the benefits derived from its use, often after skilled physicians had absolutely failed to help them. If you are ailing cast prejudice aside and give this marvel of modern medical science a fair trial. An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills show that they contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, that tired feeling, resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppression, irregularities and all forms of weakness.

They build up the blood and restore it a glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excessive of whatever nature. There are no ill effects following the use of this wonderful medicine, and it can be given to children with perfect safety.

These pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., and are sold only in boxes bearing the Dr. Williams' trade mark and wrapper, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and are never sold in bulk. There are numerous imitations and other so-called blood builders against which the public are cautioned. If your dealer does not keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills they will be sent post-paid on receipt of above price.

JINGLES OF HUMOR.

A Little Housewife Gathered For Leisure Reading.

Tramp—All my troubles come from card playing, mum. I lost me self respect when I didn't care what became of me. Housekeeper (sympathetically)—Poor man! I should think you would have lost your self respect.

Tramp—Yes mum. A man can have no self respect when he always loses.

His Man's Excuse.

Young Bride (pouting)—Here we have only been married two days, Clarence and you're scolding me already.

Husband—I know, my dear, but just think how long I have been waiting for the chance.

The Hardest Part.

Ha, hum! I sighed the defeated candidate. It's bad enough to be beaten in an election, but this having to find satisfactory reasons for the defeat is the most unpleasant thing of all.

Giving Up.

Say old man, you sip that wine as if it were your life blood.

Well it cost enough—$50 a bottle.

Hi! I don't wonder you feel as if you were bleeding at every pore.

Both Wrong.

Now George which is correct—mamma gave me a piece of pie, or mamma give me a piece of pie?

George—Neither one. I took it when she wasn't looking.

Three Dollars Saved.

Din you order a cab for me? queried Joblots at the club.

Yes sir, said the clerk, but the cabs are all out.

Thank heaven! said Joblots.

Hisat.

Patient (to family doctor)—In your absence, doctor, I was compelled to call in young Dr. Sawbones. He said that the clinical symptoms indicated chronic intestinal inflammation. What is that in plain English?

Family Doctor—In plain English it means that Sawbones didn't know what was the matter with you.

Settling an Old Grievance.

I have come, sir, exclaimed the wild eyed caller, throwing his head back defiantly, to have it out with you!

The dentist grasped his forceps, there was a short struggle, and he stood over his victim in triumph.

That's all right, sir, he replied, looking at the weapon to see if he had brought away anything besides the aching molar itself. That's all right. But I don't want any of your jaw, you know.

Wanted a Variety of Them.

Mrs. Newrich (trials)—I've a good mind to sue you for your work on that last order to engrave my silverware.

The Designer and Engraver—What is the trouble, madam?

Mrs. Newrich—Trouble! Why, I told you not to spare any pains to make it the swellest job you know how, and you've put just the same coat-of-arms on every piece.

Strictly Business.

I—I hardly know what to say, Mr. Brown cliff, said the agitated young woman who acted as assistant postmaster and grocer's clerk at the little village of Peaville. I—I wasn't expecting anything of this kind.

That's all right, Miss Frankie, responded Mr. Browncliff, travelling salesman for Pulem & Gummitt's candy factory. That's all right. You can just consider it a square offer. I have a good house and lot $2,000 in the bank, I'm getting a handsome salary, I am a good judge of girls, and you're the one I want to marry. I've got just five minutes to make my train. Miss Frankie, he added hurriedly, looking at his watch, and I'll be around again in exactly 30 days for your answer with a full line of samples, save your orders for me and think over what I've said, and I haven't another second to spare good by, dear.

Injured Nerves, A Sad Accident, Thrown From Carriage, and Suffered Eight Years.

A Nurse in the Hospital 4 yrs.

Eight years ago I was thrown from a carriage, striking on the back of my neck, completely shattering my nervous system. I could not sleep; was very constipated, and the best thing worried me; my friends feared I would become insane. I tried physicians and patent medicines, but I received no benefit until I took

Caution.

All persons are cautioned not to neglect a cough or cold. Neglect of first symptoms is the fruitful cause of fatal results. Hawker's Tolu and Wild Cherry Balsam is a sure Cough cure, and a never-failing remedy for all throat and lung troubles. If you cough, try it. It cures. Sold every where, 25 and 50 cents a bottle!

German Character of the 7th Century.

Beside a manger lowly,
A mother, pale and mild,
With eyes serene and holy,
Is watching o'er her child.
I, too, would gaze and ponder,
Bowed down in homage low,
For sight more full of wonder,
This earth did never show.

Across the mists of ages

That Infant's form divine,
Unobscured still, engages
The heart before his shrine
For though in God's appointed
The world no charm copies,
Faith reads the signs appointed—
"The Christ, my Lord, he cries.

Behold the 'Branch' of David,

The 'Shiloh' famed of old,
The Son of Virgin Mother,
By prophet's lips foretold,
Behold the seed of woman
Repairer of the Fall,
The Child Divine, yet human,
Emmanuel, Lord of all!

Oh, tender plant upspringing

Amid the desert dry!
Oh, dawn of promise, flinging
The rays o'er earth and sky!
Oh, glad and gushing river,
From Lord's own fountain poured,
Spring up—flow on forever,
Till all men know the Lord!

The Occasion.

Select well printed books
Do not read while lying down.
Avoid reading and study by poor light.
Take sufficient exercise in the open air.
Correct errors of refraction with proper glasses.

Reading and study should be done

methodically.
Avoid bad hygienic conditions and the use of alcohol and tobacco.

Light should come from the side and from the back or from the front.
Do not use the eyes too long at a time if near work, but give them occasional periods of rest.

Do not read or study, while suffering

great bodily fatigue or during recovery from illness.
During study avoid the stooping position or whatever tends to produce congestion of the head and face.

Let the physical keep pace with the mental culture, for asthenopia is most usually obtained in those who are lacking in physical development.

Probably a Life Saved

To the editor: Having been restored to Perfect Health and Sound Manhood, would like to inform those of your readers who suffer as I did from the effects of youthful folly and ignorance, of the means by which I was saved. I answered lots of advertisements of cures for Weakness, Losses, Early Decay, etc., at considerable expense, but all were unsatisfactory. Found my cure right here at home and any person may know it free of Charge by addressing with stamp,

The rice crop of Japan is 5,000,000 tons. A good-sized whale yields about one ton of whalebone.

San Marino, the smallest republic in the world, has a population of only 3,500.

The carpets annually manufactured in Philadelphia are worth over $10,000,000.

The United States has a lower percentage of blind people than any other country in the world.

Eight thousand tons of gold have been mined throughout the world during the present century.

In London alone 3,000,000 letters are posted every day, and on an average 2,500,000 are delivered.

A Hungarian inventor claims to be able to make from wood pulp a fabric suitable for durable clothing.

Twelve million pounds worth of leather is required every year to provide boots and shoes for the inhabitants of Great Britain.

Single eye-glasses are prohibited in the German Army. Even if a soldier has one good eye, yet needs glasses he must perform cover both eyes with them.

During in Russia has become so common that the government has been compelled to decree a severe code of punishment. Killing an antagonist will involve six years in prison.

Such a thing as a British soldier signing his accounts with a cross, so much it, twelve years ago, is unknown. Every man is compelled to go to school until he passes an examination and obtains a certificate.

The stomach of an ostrich that died lately at the Clifton Zoological Gardens contained several miscellaneous trifles such as pencil-cases and pocket-handkerchiefs. It also attempted to digest a prayer-book.

A German physiologist has found that a small amount of alcohol is contained in the milk of drunken mothers, so that the children of such women may be imbibers of spirits from earliest infancy. Possibly this may have something to do with hereditary tastes for stimulants.

When a Chinese girl is married her attendants are always the oldest and ugliest women to be found in the neighborhood who are paid to act as dolls to her beauty. Some exceptionally ugly old women make their living by acting as professional attendants at weddings.

The War Office has been compelled to resort to a strange method in order to obtain recruits. It has directed all sergeants and football matches and sporting assemblies generally, and by the circulation of leaflets and conversation, to inspire a desire for a military life.

American women are yearly growing more independent. The statistics show that over 3,000,000 women are earning independent incomes in that country. There are some 2,500 practising medicine, 6,000 managing post-offices, 275 preaching the Gospel, and in New York City alone 27,000 of them are supporting their husbands.

Bessie Bonehill, the music-hall singer, has a two-year-old son, and the two-year-old son has a bank account of £125. In one of her most popular songs she makes up as a ragged newsboy, and enthusiasts in the audience often toss coins on to the stage for her. These she has carefully banked for the boy, and hence the £125.

A gentleman of Denver and a young lady of West Virginia met on a railroad train one day lately, and by the time they reached Chicago they had been made man and wife. But even that speed record has been broken. A lady was granted a divorce in Tacoma (Wash.) last month within three minutes after she filed her petition.

In Achantee partridges are tied hand and foot to stakes driven in the ground near a large ant-hill. The ants are then irritated by sticks thrust into the entrance of their dwellings, and a guard is set at a respectful distance to prevent rescue, and the prisoner is left to be eaten alive. In forty-eight hours nothing is left but a nastily-cleaned skeleton.

The city of Cork still observes the ancient custom of throwing the dart. It is performed once in three years by the mayor, to show the mayor's jurisdiction over the harbor as admiral of the port. The mayor in his robes after making a short speech, advances to the prow of the vessel and casts into the sea the dart, which is made of mahogany tipped and feathered with bronze.

On the African shore, near the Gulf of Aden and connecting the Lake of Assa with the main ocean, may be found one of the most wonderful rivers in the world. This natural curiosity in the shape of a river does not flow to but from the ocean toward the inland. The surface of Lake Assa is nearly seven hundred feet below the sea level, and it is fed altogether by this paradoxical river, the latter being about twenty-two miles in length.

Fausted and Chemist
I want some concentrated lye, he slowly announced as he entered the chemist's shop.

You mean concentrated lye? suggested the proprietor, as he repressed a smile. Well, maybe I do. It does not meg any difference. It's what I camphor, any way. What does it sulphur?

A shilling a can. Then you can give me a can.

I never cinnamon who thought himself so witty as you do, said the chemist in a gingerly manner, feeling called upon to do a little punning himself.

Well, that's not bad, either, laughed the customer, with a sly, sly glance. I am a novice at the business though I've sold good many puns that other punsters got the credit of. However, I don't care a copper far as I am concerned, though they ought to be birded without gloves till they wouldn't know what was the matter with them. Perhaps I shouldn't myrrh-myrrh. I have had a pleasant time, and I shall hurry away. It was too much for the chemist, and he collapsed.

Plain English.
The love of a good joke is not unknown even among those childlike and bland Celts who are crowding together in several parts of the Australian colonies. A storekeeper wishing to secure extra trade by advertising his goods to the Chinese language, wrote a bargain with a celestial to paint a sign, expecting, of course, that it would be a very enticing one.

It did not answer his expectations, however, for the only prescriptive effect it had on the emigrants from the Flowery Land was to excite a grin at the broadest dimensions. At length the puzzled storekeeper, by means of a considerable monetary investment, obtained a correct rendering in English of the announcement, and found, to his intense chagrin, that it read: Don't buy anything here; storekeeper a rogue.

How it Worked.
A Maine woman who had an irreligious husband kept driving at him until she finally got him to go to church. Now mark how she was rewarded. Instead of following the service he looked at the congregation, and noticed how much more handsomely dressed the other women were than his wife. The fact pricked him to the heart as no words of the minister could, and the next day he gave his wife a hundred dollars, and told her to go and buy some clothes.

A Talented Man.
Prince Bismarck was once pressed by a certain American official to recommend his son for a diplomatic place. He is a very remarkable fellow said the proud father. He speaks seven languages. Indeed! said Bismarck, who does not hold a very high opinion of linguistic acquirements. What a wonderful headwaiter he would make.

WORKED BY A RESE.
A Sailor's Plan to Recover His Former Position.
The Russian Admiral Avelane, according to report, is of French extraction. When a midshipman he was serving in a ship which cruised during the summer in the Baltic and among the crew was a man who had once been a captain, but had been degraded after grossly insulting a superior.

Avelane felt the utmost pity for the sailor and did everything in his power to render less intolerable. One day he told the ex-officer of his intention to throw himself into the sea when the next storm arose. You will jump in and save me, and then the Car will reward you by restoring your epaulettes, he added. Much affected, the man replied that unthinkingly he could not swim.

That does not matter, Avelane said. Plunge in all the same. I shall look after you, and every one will think you rescued me. The programme was carried out. Avelane threw himself overboard in a terrific storm; the sailor followed, and was kept afloat by the officer whom he was supposed to be saving. A report of the affair was drawn up, and soon the man was reinstated to the rank of which he had been deprived.

This officer now one of the senior admirals in service, lately celebrated the jubilee of his entry into the Russian navy. Among his guests was Admiral Avelane, of whose valour and kindness he spoke in grateful terms, and a touching scene ensued.

ART THAT WILL WASH.

A Chinese artist's Works on Exhibition in the Sandwich Islands.

A Chinese artist came here on the last Oriental steamer, and has been selling some queer things in red, green and yellow tints admiring countrymen. He will turn off genre pieces on white paper. His taste, however, runs to a panoramic way, which permits him to sketch a scene along several linear feet of space. Accustomed as he has been at home to paint by the acre, and with large canvases, but with calmness and industry will proceed to illuminate a whole set of bed sheets with blue elms and green roses and diabolical Chinese gods and women and lovers.

One picture that he showed a reporter last night was said to represent a garden party, though it needed some assurance at first to dispel the idea that it was a catastrophe at sea. What looked like a wreck, but a tree. An awful print of a lost Celestial maid in the grasp of a devil fish proved to be one of an almond-eyed damsel twined in the leaves and tendrils of a flowering shrub. Instead of slippery squids, as one might have supposed, were tumbourines, and a rock in the boiling surge was only a pe-gola set in heather and bushes.

A series of small paintings told a romantic story very dear to the Chinese heart. The hero of the pictorial tale was the strongest man in the empire, having become an athlete under the teaching of his wife, who was a female Samson. Together they challenged the world with-out gloves, and "bar none." In course of time, however, war came and the wife was overpowered and taken away, leaving the husband very miserable. As the artist paints him standing mournfully at the door of his deserted lavender house, great vermilion tears roll down his naive complexion, stain his green vest, and trickle along his chromatic trousers and sink into the scarlet and yellow earth.

Then twenty years go by, and another war ensues. Two armies meet, and the strongest champions go forth for a preliminary combat. Behold! The man and wife are sent against each other, and the artist rises to the occasion. He shows the husband holding his Dalcinea out at arms' length by her belt, and as he bears her away toward a bank, he which runs between sky-blue banks, he has a heroic, bewildered joy on his face that invites the painter to draw a crimson hurricane to blow through it. Meanwhile, the captured giant, demurely sweet, has surrendered without a murmur.

The visiting knight of the brush uses pigments that will wash, and he says that one of his pictures can go through a Chinese laundry without the loss of the natural blue tint on a man's cheek or of the delicate bronze flush of an opening flower or leaf.—Hawaii Star.

DR. SMITH AND THE SNOWBALL.

A Story of a Frank Once Played Upon a Distinguished Colleague.

Apropos of the late Sir William Smith, The London Christian World tells a story of a famous prank once played upon him during his professorship at New College. He was not to be joked with, as a rule, but on this occasion he was fairly "holed" by an audacious student. On a winter day, during an interval between classes, some of the men had been amusing themselves by snow-balling in the rear court. Just before the bell rang for the doctor's next class, one of them, "greatly daring," caught up a snowball, ran with it to the class room, and standing on the professor's rostrum, threw it with beautiful accuracy to the ceiling, where it stuck exactly above where the learned doctor's head would come. In another minute the bell rang, the class assembled, and the student in the classical tutor appeared. Seeing himself at his desk, he called on the first man to construct. Scarcely had a sentence been got through when a drop of water came "pat" from above on the professor's cranium. No notice was taken of this, but when another quickly followed the doctor looked up, his gaze being followed by that of the class. Those fortunate enough to have been present will not forget the dying expression on the face of the professor who was furious, the men were in convulsions. Terrible threats were issued, but though every student in the place knew who the offender was who had dared thus to offend the majesty of learning in his own rostrum, his name never reached the ears of authority.

Can't Hypnotize the Camera.

Two young men of Boston, while on a journey through the last winter, witnessed an exhibition by a fakir in a small village outside Calcutta. The fakir was performing the usual experiment of making a rope descend from the clouds and a man come down the rope, who ascended by the same route, after having his head cut off. They of inhibition was in an open square before 1000 spectators. Every one saw plainly what was happening.

LITTLE SERMONS TO BE READ IN THE EASY CHAIR.

Health Requires Cleanliness—The Practical Application of the Term in Living and Sleeping Rooms—The Proper Way for Girls to Sit.

Exquisite cleanliness in sleeping apartments and living rooms is certainly conducive if not essential to health. A place of residence may be filthy where there is no visible pile of dirt, but where the air is saturated with dust and greasy, neglected draperies that harbor miscellaneous germs of disease and dirt inside; old wall papers, smoky and unpolished furniture, greasy outside and dirty inside; old wall papers, smoky and unpolished furniture, greasy outside and dirty inside; old wall papers, smoky and unpolished furniture, greasy outside and dirty inside.

The room occupied by a family as a sick or ailing person, says the New York World, should really be without a carpet, and if there is one it should be so laid that it could be taken up every week and cleaned and aired. People with a tendency to throat troubles and other ailments are better for living in rooms with large windows, unobscured windows and doors and uncovered furniture.

Sweeping a carpeted room with a broom certainly removes much dirt from the floor, but what is not swept up is scattered through the air, making every breath inhaled unwholesome. After the dust settles the room is usually "dusted," which means practically whipping the deposit from one piece of furniture to another with a feather duster. It would be better to leave the dust alone once it settles, unless it can be removed. The only way to do this is to wipe everything with a wet cloth and wash out the rag afterward, just as a clean woman cleans a hard wood floor or oiled cloth.

Few people have any idea of the exquisite cleanliness that children and delicate women require. What robust, active people in health put up with for a night or a day at a time is very deleterious to the weaker persons who occupy the house with the dusty furniture, the smoky lamp or chimney, the steaming kettle and pots, or the toilet utensils, in the best of houses. It is the exception where the water jug, soapdish and wash-bowls about the washstand are cleaned every day, and yet the bad odors from them poison pure air and poison the organs of respiration and poison the blood. It is to give the lungs a chance to throw off these loads of poisonous material that everybody who can move or be moved should go out into the open air daily, or properly wrapped up, get an airing in an open door or window.

THE WAY TO SIT.

Our Mother's Straight Backed Chair is the Best One.

When our grandmothers were girls and straight-backed chairs instead of cushions were the usual resting places, the young women held themselves with a straightness that was almost stiff. Then when they grew old they still held themselves like duchesses. For it is the way one sits rather than the exercises one takes that determines the correctness of the figure. A prominent physician says that the proper sitting position requires that the spine should be kept straight and that the support needed for the upper part shall be felt in the right place. Therefore, it is necessary to sit as far back in the chair as possible, so that the lower end of the spine shall be braced against the back of the seat. If this back is straight the shoulders will also rest against it; but even if they do not rest upon the point of support, it will be straight if the shoulders are supported properly. This position makes no strain upon the ligaments of the spine. Every organ of the body is properly fixed by this attitude. The feet should rest squarely upon the floor; the hands should rest lightly in the lap, and thus perfect equilibrium and rest is secured. The arms should never be crossed, for that position causes a strain upon the spine, places a weight upon the stomach and diaphragm and thus increases the labor of digestion and respiration.

Once in a while it is a good thing to place the arms behind the back, giving as it does, the fullest expansion to the upper part of the body.—New York World.

A Theorist Who Fattened.

There recently died in New Jersey at the age of 73 a theorist who had spent all his fortune, which at one time was considerable, and all his life in a vain attempt to solve the problem of extracting the silver which lies in solution in the sea from the salt water which holds it. He lived down on the coast in a cottage which he built years ago, and on every side were constructed sluices, runways, washes and the various appliances with which he was experimenting. The interior of the cottage resembled the apartments of a medieval alchemist rather than that of a nineteenth century house by the sea. It was fitted with retorts, phials, crucibles and in the same corner was a diminutive furnace. Some ten years ago he was joined in his labors by a young woman about 18. She attended him up to the day of his burial, but since that time no trace of her can be found. The cottage is dilapidated, and no heirs have claimed it, nor has any paper been found to indicate the name or origin of its strange occupants.

A Tribute to Gladstone's Eloquence.

For one good speech Mr. Chamberlain or Mr. Balfour may make, Mr. Gladstone makes 20. He is versed in every article of oratory; he is practised in every mood and method of debate. He has the temperament and the equipment of a great orator, though Mr. Hayward made a good point when he wrote the words, "a shade more imagination." Yet, before admitting Mr. Hayward's qualification, I would prefix the adjective "poetic" to the noun "imagination," for Mr. Gladstone's imagination is most active. As a man of business he is inspired. Let his theme be a great trade or industry; let the subject of his voluminous discourse be railway rates, bimetalism, the opium traffic; let him unfold his mind and unroll his memory before his audience—do but hear him to his illustrations and follow his discus-

HON PETER MITCHELL.

The Montreal Star has the following to say regarding Hon Peter Mitchell's qualifications for the position of Lieut Governor of New Brunswick.

Prior to the appointment of Mr. Boyd Hon Peter Mitchell's name was prominently before the public in connection with the office, and now another opportunity is offered to Sir John Thompson's Government to do an act of justice to one of the most active and influential of the fathers of Confederation. While there may be other aspirants to the office, there can be no one whose claims based on valuable service rendered to his native province and to the Dominion can compare with Mr. Mitchell's. Those who would follow Mr. Mitchell's record must go back to the days when he, with Tilley, Ritchie, Johnson, Fisher and other leading spirits of his province agitated for and secured for their people the blessings of responsible government and the final overthrow of the family compact. These goals accomplished, the next great step in provincial progress was the construction of provincial railways at the Government's expense, and in this progressive movement Mr. Mitchell was again a leader. In all the subsequent liberalizing legislation of New Brunswick, down to the era of Confederation, Mr. Mitchell's hand was seen. When the time arrived for discussing the union of the Maritime Provinces, Mr. Mitchell was selected as one of the delegates to the Charlottetown Conference, where Mr. John Macdonald, George Brown and their Canadian associates appeared to urge the larger union of all of British North America. Mr. Mitchell was named to the Quebec Conference from which issued the Quebec Resolutions—the basis of the Canadian Confederation; and he was also one of the New Brunswick delegates to London to confer with the Imperial authorities and draft the Imperial Act, known as the British North American Act of 1867, our present Canadian Constitution. In all these conferences and consultations Mr. Mitchell took an active part, his practical, well-balanced mind being fertile in suggestion, and of great service in the very important negotiations with which which the delegates were charged by their respective governments. In the general elections in New Brunswick, which followed the passing of this act, Mr. Mitchell, then a member of the Legislative Council, took an active part; and although the anti Confederates won the day, Mr. Mitchell persisted, during the darkest hours, in urging the Legislature and the people to accept the Union. His speeches during the interval between the first and second consideration elections were masterpieces of political oratory, and, with the influence which his abilities enabled him to exercise over the Lieutenant-Governor of the day (the uncle of the present Governor-General of Canada), and over an Anti-Union Legislature and the more moderate members of the anti-Union party, they were beyond all question the most important factor in securing the success of Confederation at the polls in the second great campaign, and thus, by bringing New Brunswick into line with the other provinces of the mainland, made the Confederation an accomplished fact. When the first government of All Canada was formed, Mr. Mitchell, with Mr. Tilley, was summoned to Ottawa to take his place in the first dominion cabinet with the department of marine and fisheries—a department which he personally organized for the first time and administered with the greatest ability and success—as all who are interested in shipping, light houses, and lake and coast navigation cheerfully testify. Under his direction the first fleet of cruisers for the protection of our Atlantic Fisheries was organized, and rendered great service in its special duty; and as Minister of Marine and Fisheries he was equally successful in defending his administration of the fishery side of the department against both the reflections of President Grant in his message to Congress and the strictness of the British Colonial Secretary of that day, who deprecated the vigorous stand that was taken by Canada, under Mr. Mitchell's inspiration, in defence of our Maritime rights. In fact, Mr. Mitchell's in his despatches in this connection gave the key note to that bold and national attitude, in dealing with the encroachments of the United States, which enabled more recent Canadian Governments to secure the influence and backing of the Imperial Government in the Behring Sea difficulty. Mr. Mitchell was also largely instrumental in bringing about the Halifax Arbitration between Great Britain and the United States, at which, for the first time in disputes with the United States, Canada interests were represented by Canadians, and which eventuated in an indemnity of $4,500,000 being paid to Canada by the United States for the use of the Canada fisheries by United States fishermen. Although Sir Albert Smith was Minister of Marine and Fisheries when the arbitration was held, and was knighted because of the success of the arbitration, the actual work which ensured this success was done by Mr. Mitchell. It was he who blocked out the plan of the Canadian case secured the necessary evidence, and arranged the details in most particulars. Since the overthrow of the Macdonald government in '73, he has acted independently of party, and, when holding a seat in the Commons, has rendered good service to both parties and to the cause of good government by his practical advice and action. If there is any New Brunswicker in nomination for the governorship whose record will compare with Mr. Mitchell's in devotion to the public service, in patriotic labor for the up-building of Canada, in personal sacrifice in promoting the advancement of the country,—in placing on the statute books of his native province and of the Canadian Dominion the most advanced legislation,—in power of organization or in knowledge of administration of a public department,—in independence of thought and practical sagacity in the work of government,—he is yet to be named.

ROBERT SCOTT IS SORRY.

Lynn's 60-Year-Old Eldest Son Heard From by Friends.
Robert Scott, the ex-superintendent of the Massachusetts Temperance Home, has been heard from. A friend reports him as not being far away, and that he expresses sorrow for the step taken.

Scott is really pitted by many of his Lynn acquaintances for the ruinous move he made, and they fear that he will go on the downward path at a toboggan pace, as he many times stated that he had gaged a fearful battle in order to save himself from the drinking habit.
The Boston furniture man who was seen red of Miss Wiggin is said to have parted with $3000 or more, paid to Scott and the woman, on their promise to separate. When they secured the funds they decided to emigrate.

Lynn people who met Miss Wiggin, whom Scott at all times seemed to fairly adore, are completely nonplussed at her actions. They had looked upon her as the "salt of the earth" as one of them expresses it, and had thought her being with Scott was only indicative of interest in reform work.
Scott was steadily growing in the estimation of the Lynn people. He had a good position and appeared to be fitted for the studies.

LOCAL NEWS.

Jottings on Events as they Happen about Town.

The Ebb and Flow of Civic and Suburban Life.

Presentation to Mr. Sharpe.

Thursday evening last the dining room of the Queen hotel was the scene of a very pleasant event, when the Frederick friends of O. H. Sharpe, late teller in the bank of British North America here, tendered him with a banquet and presented him with a substantial token of their esteem. Mr. Sharpe received telegraphic orders on Tuesday last to proceed to Montreal, where he will be connected with the head office of the bank. The news was received through the city with deep regret, especially among the younger men of Fredericton, with whom Mr. Sharpe has been a general favorite. At the banquet there were in attendance about twenty-five of Mr. Sharpe's warmest friends, among whom were included, R. Inglis, manager of the bank of B. N. A., T. B. Blair, manager of the bank of N. S., Professors Davidson and Dixon of the University of New Brunswick, Drs. Bridges and Vanwart, Geo. A. Hughes and Geo. L. Wilson barristers at law, Mr. C. S. Ingraham, Mr. P. Phelan of the Dominion Express Co., Mr. R. S. Barker of the Crown Land Department, Peter Clinch of St. John, Messrs. Roney, F. J. Sherman, J. F. Winslow, C. E. Neill, L. W. Bailey and A. R. Tibbits from the various banks of the city, Mr. D. E. Crowe and Mr. J. Stewart Campbell.

The table was spread in a way which reflected very great credit upon the taste of host Edwards, and the excellent cuisine of the Queen hotel. There were all the delicacies of the season, including fruit in abundance, while handsome floral decorations added to the beauty of the scene.

Mr. T. B. Blair occupied the chair, having on his right the guest of the evening, and on his left Mr. R. Inglis. The vice chair was ably filled by Mr. Geo. A. Hughes, who had upon his right Mr. Roney, Mr. Sharpe's successor, and on his left Dr. Bridges. The dinner served was excellent, and was discussed with much zest.

After the drinking of the toasts to The Queen and the Governor General the vice chairman rose to read the address and make the presentation to the guest, prefacing the address with appropriate remarks of his own regarding Mr. Sharpe's high character and abilities, his genial and honorable nature, and the esteem in which he is deservedly held by his friends in the Celestial city. His remarks were an eloquent tribute to Mr. Sharpe, and were received with enthusiastic applause. The address which was read disapproved very strongly of the action of the Board of Governor's of the British Bank in removing Mr. Sharpe from Fredericton, dwelt upon the success of his career in the city and laid particular stress upon his geniality as a companion and his sterling worth as a friend, wished him every happiness success and prosperity in the future, and begged him to accept of a pair of pipes as a mark of the esteem in which he is held by the subscribers. The pipes presented were very handsome, one of meerschaum and the other of briar.

Immediately after the reading of the address, the toast of Mr. Sharpe's health was very heartily given and enthusiastically honored, the whole company singing "For He is a Jolly Good Fellow," in a way that betokened sincerity. Replying to the address and the toast of his health Mr. Sharpe expressed his heartfelt pleasure at being honored in such a grateful manner, and his great regret at the circumstances which forced him to part from so many warm friends. He thanked the gentlemen present for the very handsome presents given him; and assured them that he would always prize the pipes as tokens of an esteem which he appreciated. Numerous toasts followed the presentation, all of which were duly honored, and responded to in eloquent speeches. Among them were the Manager of the British Bank, responded to by R. Inglis, Esq.; The Chair responded to by the chairman; the Banking Institution of Fredericton, responded to by Messrs. Sherman, Tibbits, Bailey, Neill, Winslow, Roney, Blair, Inglis and Sharpe; the medical profession, responded to by Drs. Bridges and Vanwart; the bench and bar responded to by Messrs. Geo. A. Hughes and Geo. L. Wilson; the University of New Brunswick, by Prof. Davidson and Dixon; the ladies, responded to by Messrs. Barker, Crowe and Phelan; the Queen Hotel, and the C. P. R. The singing of the National Anthem closed the evening's proceedings; after which the gentlemen present said personal farewells to Mr. Sharpe to the tune of Auld Lang Syne. The evening was an unusually pleasant one, and will long be remembered both by Mr. Sharpe and his friends. Mr. Sharpe has been in Fredericton nearly three years, during which time he has formed a large acquaintance among the people of the city, who hold him in very high regard. He left by the eleven o'clock train on Friday morning for St. John, where he took the C. P. R. that evening for Montreal.

Mr. Baxter's Death.

The sad news reached here on Tuesday morning by telegram to Mr. Geo. Wilson, then Bernard G. Baxter, B. H. of the University of N. B. and attorney at law, had died on Monday evening at nine o'clock at his home in Perth Centre, Victoria Co. The news was received here with general surprise and profound sorrow. Mr. Baxter has resided about five years in the city during four of which he was an undergraduate of the U. N. B., from which place he graduated in 1892, after a brilliant course and with high honours. After leaving the university he entered the office of Geo. F. Gregory, Q. C. to complete the study of the law which he had entered upon five years ago. He subsequently studied with Mr. Wm. Wilson, remaining in that office up to the time of passing his law examination in October last. He went through this ordeal with great credit to himself, and shortly afterwards started for Bathurst where he opened an office for the practice of his profession. Although he remained there only a short time, he met with considerable encouragement; and being of good presence, excellent habits, and great abilities was on the high road to success, when he was forced to leave for his home suffering from the illness which afterwards proved fatal. He was ill less than a month, and died in the twenty-sixth year of his age, in the prime of manhood, and just after completing the long preparation for his life's work. During his residence in this city, Mr. Baxter made many friends, and wherever he was known, was recognized as a young man of high character, and more than ordinary ability. Among the younger men of the city he was an especial favorite, and in no circle has his loss caused more real and profound regret. He was buried on Thursday from his father's residence at Perth. Friends from this city sent many beautiful floral offerings as tokens of their sympathy for his heart broken mother and sisters.

ROBBED THE BANK

Not Yet Known How Much Money was Taken, but it is Estimated at from $20,000 to $60,000.

Powder Fuse Arranged so the Noise of the Explosion Would be Deadened by a Freight Train.

DALLAS, Texas, Dec. 9.—The Plano National Bank, of Plano, Collin county, eight miles north of Dallas, was robbed last night.

The first news of the robbery came through the Chief of Police, who received a telegram from Plano reading as follows:—Look out for four or six men on horseback followed by light wagon. Robbed bank here last night. Rode into Plano from a southeasterly direction about two o'clock this morning and later on passed out of town in the same direction. A curious feature connected with the robbery was that the bank had due notice that the robbery would be committed. A communication was printed in a daily paper three weeks ago, signed "The Dalton Gang" announcing that they would rob the Plano bank about the 21st or 25th of November. The communication was generally regarded as a fake and was the subject of derision, but its genuineness now appears to be out of question and stamps the robbers as the most audacious daredevils on record.

It is true they were two weeks late in keeping their engagement but they proved to be men of their word.

Five men rode into Plano, four on horseback and one in a wagon at half-past one o'clock yesterday morning.

The first known of the robbery by the bank officials was when W. Houston, the bookkeeper and T. C. Jasper, the cashier went to the bank at twenty-five minutes before eight o'clock this morning and found a complete safe crackman's outfit scattered over the floor the safe blown to pieces and money scattered everywhere. The amount taken has not been footed up but it is estimated at between $20,000 and $60,000.

No silver was taken and there is no clew to the identity of the robbers. The burglars were evidently experts in bank robbing as they covered the plate glass windows to prevent an alarm being given by the sound which would follow the breaking of glass. They also set the fuse so that it could burn to and explode the powder while a heavy freight train was passing, which proves them to be timers to the minute.

They procured the tools used in the robbery at Richardson's blacksmith shop in Plano, with the exception of a jack-screw, which is cut off short, so that it may be placed under a safe in such a manner as to cause it to fall on its side. This jack-screw cannot be traced to Plano ownership, and is the only clew the officers have that can be used in making investigations in the other places as to the identity of the robbers or where they came from.

As this is the only bank in Plano, every body who deposited money or transacted business is a loser.

Deposits ranged from the small amounts of workmen to the thousand to the credit of merchants, cattle dealers and cotton buyers.

The money safe, an old fashioned time locker, was inside the vault and contained the funds. This safe was rolled out of the vault, placed on the sawed off jack-screw, the explosives applied and the safe blown into fragments. The flying pieces marred the bank furniture, but apparently did no harm to the robbers, as there was no blood to be found about the building.

Mr. Bluford, a grain dealer, says that he had been out unusually late last night, that at about one o'clock this morning as he was coming up from near the Cotton Belt Depot five mounted men rode by him, going in the direction of that part of town in which the bank is located. Close behind them was a light spring wagon drawn by two horses and driven by a man. These were undoubtedly the men who robbed the bank.

W. H. Thomas, of Dallas, is vice president of the bank, and J. S. Armstrong a director. Each of them had $10,000 stock in the institution.

A Suitable Present.

The question quite properly arises in one's mind, what shall I buy for the boys at this Christmas season? There are many nice things at Edgecombe's suitable for that purpose. What could be more useful than a nice suit of clothes, a reefer jacket or an overcoat? Mr. Edgecombe has an show you a large variety of these goods, a larger stock than anyone else, and also give you the goods at lower prices than you can buy them elsewhere.

If you cannot come yourself you can order a suit of clothes from the following measurements. If the boy is large for his age, send for a size larger than list calls for.

ARDLAMONT MYSTERY.

Monson on Trial for Murder.

Story of the Supposed Crime.

In the High Court of Justice at Edinburgh, Alfred John Monson was called upon to plead to the indictment charging him with causing the death, at Ardlamont, on Aug. 10 last, of Lieut. Hambrough. The case is known as the Ardlamont mystery and has excited keen interest in all parts of the United Kingdom owing to the prominence of the prisoner and his alleged victim. Monson pleaded not guilty. His alleged accomplices, Edward Sweeney, alias Davis, alias Scott, has not yet been found by the police and, in accordance with the rule that obtains in the Scotch courts, he was pronounced to be an outlaw.

Away up in the Kyles of Bute, in Scotland, on a promontory which juts out into Loch Fyne, is situated the Ardlamont estate. It comprises 11,000 acres. For centuries it belonged to the family of the Lamonts of Cowal. The death not long ago of Col. Lamont brought the property into the market and the upset price was fixed at £30,000. An arrangement was entered into with Alfred John Monson, a Yorkshire gentleman, who took the shootings and the mansion house until the necessary preliminaries had been effected with a view to the total transfer of the property. Mr. Monson has a moderate 'entourage' of keepers, servants and other dependents, and about a month after his arrival was joined by Lieut. Windsor Dudley Cecil Hambrough, a young gentleman excellently connected, who would have attained his majority next year had he lived. Lieut. Hambrough's father (a man of substance and a justice of the peace for Hants) had confided his son to Monson's care in the hope that certain youthful irregularities might be subordinated to a system of hard study that should qualify the young man for the military career for which he had been designed.

Young Hambrough, on arrival at Ardlamont, immediately arranged to become a part proprietor of the estate which Monson was then about to purchase. The solicitors were urged to hurry on the preparation of the title deeds, and they were doing so when an interruption arrived in the form of Lieut. Hambrough's death.

The Ardlamont estate slopes for a considerable distance gently down to the waters of Loch Fyne and the fishing here is excellent. On the morning of Thursday, Aug. 10, Monson and Hambrough were out fishing at the hour of one o'clock.

Occupied in this way they continued for some time, when suddenly the boat capsized or sprung a leak, and the two men were thrown into the water. Only the elder knew how to swim, but Hambrough was able to clutch a rock and hold on to it while Monson swam to the shore, procured another boat and returned to it to the rescue. It was about six o'clock when the two men arrived at the mansion house, and notwithstanding the early hour, Monson and his friends concluded to have a rabbit shooting in a neighboring covert. Each man carried a gun. For companion they had an engineer named Scott, who arrived at Ardlamont the previous day to take charge of a steam launch which Lieut. Hambrough had just purchased.

Scott was evidently on familiar terms with his employer, not merely from the fact that he accompanied him on his shooting expeditions, but judging also from his presence at meals with Mr. Monson and the Lieutenant. In one part of the covert is a ditch, flanked by a stone turf-covered wall, about three feet high. The shooting took place in the neighborhood of this wall. After one rabbit had been shot, Hambrough got separated from his companions. These two were moving in the direction of the house when a shot was heard. Monson halted and called out, "What have you got?"

No reply coming, he hurried in the direction whence the report had proceeded and found Hambrough lying in his head, two or three inches behind the left ear, two or three inches behind the left ear, two or three inches behind the left ear. They sent for a doctor, whose services were of no avail, and returned to the mansion house silently and sorrowfully. That is the story of Monson and Scott.

An inquest was held and after it had been explained that the probabilities were in favour of the assumption that Hambrough had fallen, and that the gun which was at full cock had been accidentally discharged behind him, thus accounting for the location of the wound, it was decided that the case was one of accidental death. The body was buried but fresh facts came to light which led to its speedy exhumation.

Monson has a young and pretty wife whose name had not before had any connection with the story. But at this point she is introduced. When Hambrough had conceived the idea of sharing in the purchase of Ardlamont he had done so with out having sufficient funds in hand to complete his part in the transaction. In these circumstances he came to Mr. Monson, who, being possessed of a considerable means of his own, agreed to advance twenty thousand pounds each, to be effected with the Mutual Life Insurance of New York.

The insurance, it would seem, were actually effected—from a statement from a representative of the company—and the policies assigned to Mrs. Monson. Whether or not at the date of his death Hambrough had received the promised consideration from Mrs. Monson, is one of those hazy points which the trial will probably clear up. It was the fact that these policies were in existence and had been dealt with in the manner indicated that led to re-opening of the case and the arrest of Monson on a charge of murder.

To Escape Debt.

During medieval times a woman who had nothing when she married accepted responsibility for her debts. Women were then often married in a single garment to relieve themselves of indebtedness. A young and noble German lord of the sixteenth century, to make assurance doubly sure, had the marriage ceremony performed while she was standing in a close entirely divested of clothing. She put out her hand through the crack of the door, and was thus married. As soon as the ceremony was performed, the groom, clergyman and witnesses left the room, she came out, arrayed herself in the clothes provided by her husband, and took her place at the marriage feast.—Philadelphia Record.

Transparent Leather.

This method of making leather transparent is given by a French journal: The hide, after the hair has been removed is stretched upon a frame, and treated with a mixture of 1000 parts of glycerine, 2 parts of salicylic acid, 25 parts of boracic acid, and two parts of picric acid. Before quite dry, the hide is taken to a dark room and saturated with a solution of bichromate of potash; and when it is very dry, an alcoholic solution of formalin is applied. The transparent leather is very flexible. It is useful for toilet articles, and might even be made into shoes, which would doubtless prove an attractive novelty.

Another Arctic Expedition.

A Pittsburg mariner, Captain Kingston, has just finished three small sail boats of thirty-four, twenty-six and twenty-three feet length, respectively, on a new principle to prevent their capsizing, and with these he started on an expedition to the Arctic Sea. He will sail down the Mississippi to the Gulf, and thence around Cape Horn, and proceed to reach Herrel Island, 200 miles north of where the Jeannette was lost. The captain has ten people in his expedition, including his wife and his brother-in-law's wife. At New Orleans the two smaller boats will be abandoned and the trip made in the largest one.

Many Species of Insects.

An English scientist is quoted as authority for the statement that there are five times as many species of insects as there are species of all other living things put together. The oak tree alone supports 450 species of insects, and 200 kinds make their home in the pine. Forty years ago Humboldt estimated that the number of species preserved in collections was between 150,000 and 170,000, but scientific men now say that there must be more than 750,000, without taking into consideration the parasite creatures. Of the 35,000 species in Europe, however, not more than 3,500 are obnoxious or destructive. There are more than 100,000 kinds of birds.

The Size of Rain Drops.

A member of the Royal Meteorological Society has experimented on the size of rain drops, which vary from a speck so small as to be almost invisible up to a diameter of two inches. Drops of the same size do not always contain the same amount of water. Some of the largest drops are hollow.

NAKED IN AN OPEN BOAT.

The Terrible Experiences of Three Sailors of a Wrecked Spanish Bark.

Naked, famishing for food and water, and almost roasted by the tropical sun, three Spaniards, Pedro, Antonio and Luis, were rescued from a small boat in mid-ocean and landed recently at this port from the schooner sailing Lippit.

The story reads in horror the most thrilling detail of the dime novel writer, and that they were saved in all its consequences, by luck as little short of a miracle.

The men are Pedro, Antonio, Antonio and Luis, who were rescued from the wreck of the Spanish bark, Juan J. Murga, which, on Sept. 1, sailed from Manila with a cargo of sugar for Seattle, S. P. The men were rescued up in latitude 20.25, longitude 75.95, the small boat in which they were struggling helplessly having been set adrift by the merest accident. The schooner Lippit was bound for this port from the island, and was in the bay, and was at first supposed to be a bark of wreckage. The lookout, however, thought he saw signs of life, and the vessel was put about and sent on an oblique side of the open boat. Then it was seen to contain three occupants. All were evidently Spaniards, and were rescued. They were entirely naked, and great sun blisters covered their backs.

Finally they were able to tell that they had sailed from Manila under the command of the captain, and that they were in the hands of the Spaniards. Their vessel was soon thrown on her beam ends and became a hopeless wreck. All hands took to the sea, leaving time to collect a scanty supply of food and water. The sea was running high, the sun hot, and the men were in a desperate condition. They could hardly live through the night. All remained in the water in order to swim for the wreckage of the bark, which was out of sight. The three men rescued were once camped on a small island while they waited the bark, and they lived until the latter was sighted.

The Juan J. Murga had a crew of nineteen men. Four were picked up by the steamer Campana and carried to Galveston. They were also naked and famishing. Nothing has been heard of the other twelve, and they are pronounced lost. The three rescued here were cared for by the Spanish Consul and sent home as soon as they were able to join in a card of thanks to Capt. Benjamin Howes, of the schooner that rescued them. Both captain and crew are warmly praised for their kind and humane treatment of the men who passed through such a awful experience.—Philadelphia Record.

PEANUTS AND THEIR USES.

The Annual Crop Worth Millions of Dollars and the Demand Increasing.

The "goober" industry of Norfolk is unique. Here a little city in Virginia has become the greatest distributing center of peanuts in the world. A peanut is a pretty small item, but an annual crop of something like 5,000,000 bushels, worth millions of dollars, makes a pretty big item. The demand for goobers has doubled within the last five years, and the supply does not fill the growing demand.

Few people know the curious uses to which the goober has been put in trade of this year. No other single plant raised in this country is used so many different ways. The Chinese say that the cocoon palm has as many useful purposes as the goober. The goober is not so universal as that; but it has many valuable qualities as there are days in the week. The seed part of the nut is particularly nutritive and supplies fruit and food for many a family. The vines make fine fodder, some say as good as clover hay, while hogs fatten on what is left in the fields after the crop has been gathered.

If you get a sweet quality of flour, with which the housewife makes delicious biscuit. If you squeeze it you will obtain a valuable oil, resembling olive oil, and used for similar purposes. The oil enters largely into the manufacture of the better grades of soap. The kernels are used for oil or for flour. The roasted kernels are also used in the manufacture of some kinds of chocolate. The coffee roaster helps to ruin the digestion in hot climates with peanut candy; and the Georgia cook alone knows how to make rich pastry of pounded nuts. The artist uses nut paint brush, silks and satins, creates novel and beautiful peanut ornaments, so that peanut dolls and other curious novelties are made. The nut is useful to us.—New York Independent.

Prince and Station Master.

The death of Mr. Henry Farnham, who was for many years station master at Tately, one of the village stations on the Great Eastern Railway Company's Suffolk branch line, recalls an amusing incident in which the Prince of Wales played a leading part. A few years ago the Prince and a party of distinguished guests alighted at Tately, for the purpose of visiting Lord and Lady Brooke, at Easton Lodge, Essex. By some means the Prince of Wales became detached from the rest of the party, and did not reach the barrier until a few minutes after the others had passed. Mr. Farnham was doing duty as ticket collector and was not then knowing the Prince was promptly accosted by him with "Ticket, please." The Prince mentioned that he was one of Lord Brooke's party. The station-master was not, however, satisfied with the statement, and he firmly refused to allow his Royal Highness to pass unless he produced a ticket or furnished his name and address. Satisfactory explanations were eventually forthcoming, and the Prince was permitted to rejoin the party. There is something extraordinary in the philosophical question, "why didn't he tell me that he was the Prince of Wales?" His Royal Highness's hearty enjoyment of the incident, and the fact that he visited Easton Lodge without being reminded of his identity, are to be remembered to his credit.—Westminster Gazette.

THE CHEAPEST FENCE IN THE WORLD!

Hereafter Woven Wire Fencing has been a luxury, the price being so high that only the wealthy could afford to buy it. This machine brings it within reach of all—so low indeed that it will not pay to waste money on any other kind of a fence. This machine is taken into the field and weaves the fence on the spot where wanted. A man to work the machine and a boy to spool the mesh wire, can weave and put on the posts from 60 to 60 rods per day. Over twenty different styles of fencing can be made on this machine. It is very simple and does not require a skilled person to run it. The fence can be made light for yards or heavy for farms and a wind proof. It is the coming fence.

For Prices or any other Information, Address: A. J. MACHUM & Co., FREDERICTON, N. B. Sole Agents for New Brunswick.

A Few of the Advantages of Woven Wire Fencing Made with the Kitzelman Machine

It is strong, really beautiful, durable and ornamental. It will be high and by a set, a row, heat, cold or floods. It will run horses, sheep, hogs, dogs and poultry. It will fence a field perfectly as the best board fence. It will not get out from below. It will not injure stock in any way. It will not get out from below. It will not injure stock in any way. It will not get out from below. It will not injure stock in any way.

It will make safe enclosures for the worst animals, and reliable line fences. It is much stronger and more durable than any barbed wire fence. It will not shelter enemies to crops and will last a life-time with very little repair. It is fire-proof and cannot burn down, and will not injure persons or clothing. The twist in the wires will not slip or permit breakage by expansion or contraction through heat or cold. It is the strongest, cheapest and best wire fence ever made, considering the many different styles and variety of its uses. It is the only combination wire fence in the world, and can be made high enough for comeries and narrow enough for lawns. It will not cut a shade on growing crops, and will permit cultivation up to the fence; by this means you can keep your fence rows clean. It will not rust and break in the twists, as it is made from the best 5-gauge steel wire, galvanized, thus making it proof against age and weather.

The Bishop of Marlborough, while traveling from the City of Finchley, was robbed of his watch and purse, as well as the notes of the sermon he was taking the journey to deliver.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says the annual conscription added 252,592 men to the army. Of this number 70,948 are married. Only one-fourth of the whole number of conscripts can read or write.

Iron moulders at Cleveland have been notified by their employers that the union will not be recognized. Wages were cut 10 per cent in July, and there has been but little work since.

Colorado is sending her unemployed men to Texas, and Texas feeds them and sends them on from town to town.

At Muncie, Ind., the big glass works was ready to start, but when the 250 men insisted that their scale be signed, they were told to go.

The Duchess of Saxe Cobourg Gotha (Duchess of Edinburgh) has ordered that her share of the income from the Ducal domains to be devoted to charity mainly in the form of Christmas gifts to the poor.

The London Globe publishes a rumor to the effect that Evelyn Mortyn, a sister of the Earl of Ducie has reverted to Protestantism, after having been converted some time ago to Catholicism.

In the German Reichstag Count Bompischef, member of the Centre or Catholic party, moved the revocation of the decree ordering the expulsion of Jesuits from Germany. The motion was put to a vote and carried by a majority of 37.

A cordon of French and German police has been formed on the Belgian frontiers to watch for Anarchists, 500 of whom are known to be in Belgium. International measures for the suppression of Anarchism are approved by the Belgian Government.

Lowell Justice Assembly of the K. of L. claims that their organization is responsible for the change to Republicanism in Massachusetts, as the order boasts 75,000 members in the state.

The grand officers of the Order of Railway Telegraphers will ignore the decision of Judge Smith at Council Bluffs, Iowa, in removing Grand Chief Ramsey and the members of the executive board.

Twenty-four puddlers at Allegheny the other day were compelled to leave the company houses. They borrowed a wagon, but no horse could be secured. Thereupon a dozen men got into the shafts and pulled the wagon to rooms here and there that had been secured by the strikers.

Union cigar makers average $7 a thousand at New Orleans, Colorado, $15; Nebraska, $12; Utah, $5; California, $8. Chinese are responsible for the low rate in California. In Florida the rate runs from $2 to $22 per thousand. The average for all the states west of the Mississippi, barring California, is $13.

Louisville Trades Assembly has decided to boycott merchants handling convict-made goods. The assembly will publish a monthly bulletin giving the names of fair and unfair firms. An amendment to the constitution taxes all unions with less than fifty members fifty cents per month. Above this, one cent per capita will be levied.

The Cathedral at Versailles was consecrated with the most imposing ceremonies of the Catholic Church. Ten thousand persons were present. The corner stone of the Cathedral was laid by Napoleon III in 1852. The building stands on a terrace adjoining the Quai de la Joliette.

Mr. J. R. Sovereign, the newly-elected General Master Workman of the Knights of Labor, was formally inducted into office at Philadelphia, the oath being administered by Gen Worthy Foreman Bishop. No ceremony was attached to the rite other than the taking of the solemn obligation and the turning over to Mr. Sovereign of the Order's effects.

A terrible death overtook the little 2-year-old daughter of Mr. S. McAdoo, at the family residence Maitland street, London, Ont., last week. The unfortunate child was, it appears, playing about the house, when she fell into a pot of boiling water. As quickly as possible she was rescued, but although everything possible was done to relieve the child's sufferings, she shortly afterwards expired.

John Kinnard, an unmarried carpenter met death at Englishman's River, B. C. He and a companion were out after bear.

They tracted it to a hole in some rocks, and started to cut down a tree in front of the hole. Kinnard, when shifting his position, pushed his rifle toward him, with the muzzle pointed in his direction. It went off and the bullet went through his head, killing him instantly.

Peter McLaren, J. P., aged 55, was found drowned in the cistern at his house near Guelph Ont. While breakfast was being prepared, Mr. McLaren put on his slippers and went outside. When the meal was ready his wife wondered that he had not returned. She went out to look for him and was horrified to find him head downwards in the cistern. When the body was raised life was extinct. No doubt death was the result of an accident.

The strangest bit of labor news that has turned up lately hails from New Haven. All the employes of the thirty-seven Chinese laundries have formed a labor union, and they will only do washing on Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays, while ironing will occupy their time on Wednesday and Thursday. The day's work has been fixed to begin at 7 a. m. and finish at 8 p. m. with no work on Saturdays. They receive $2.10 per week and board. The proprietors will send to New York and Boston for Chinese to take their places.

A street was literally set on fire at Budapest, Hungary, a short time ago. A glass carboy filled with benzine accidentally fell from the cart in which it was being hauled and broke, the benzine running over the street, and through the slot into the conduit of the electric railroad. An electric car just passed at the time, and it appears that there was some sparking between the trolley and the conductor in the conduit. This lighted the benzine, which burned with an almost explosive violence. The car was stopped and the frightened passengers dismounted through a sea of flame.

CARNIVAL ATTRACTIONS.

Quebec Able to Accommodate All Her Visitors.

Mr. Fairchild Points Out the Most Salient Features of Our Week of Revelry.

The absence of sufficient hotel accommodation has hitherto debarred Quebec from holding a Winter Carnival and thereby proving her title as the winter city of the north.

With the opening of the Hotel Frontenac, one of those magnificent creations of the C. P. R. officials, with its site of unsurpassed beauty—with its other two new hotels, the Florence and Royal Albion, with first-class accommodation for a thousand guests—with the old stand-by, the St. Louis, remodelled and under new management, it was decided that the time had come for Quebec to assert herself and show to the world that she, too, could evolve from her winter's ice and snow series of fairy-like creations that would out rival all previous efforts, and that her people, so far from hibernating in winter, were very keenly alive and eager participants in all outdoor life.

Money was freely subscribed and enthusiastic committees were appointed to take charge of the various features that are peculiar to a Winter Carnival, and right worthily have they shown themselves deserving of the trust reposed in them. On the morning of January 29th will be ushered in a week of attractions and amusements such as has never before been given at any previous carnival.

A Winter Carnival is a wild revelry of fun in the cold crisp air of a Canadian winter, so charged with invigorating ozone that one is inspired to lift one's feet out of doors, and to indulge in all sorts of exercise from the sheer necessity of letting off steam.

Tobogganing that most exciting and exhilarating of sports is indulged in by young and old of both sexes, and day and night the slides will be in constant use by gay parties of brightly dressed tobogganers. Snowshoeing has legions of devotees and the snowshoe clubs of Quebec are one of its great social features. Compared in the lively colors of toques and uniform the clubs present a gorgeous spectacle in their march out. Rolling in the low snug little sleighs peculiar to the city, wrapped in warm fur robes, behind a lively little Canadian pony, with a good natured cicerone of a driver, is a dream of comfort and pleasure as you are whisked along the well kept roads with a panorama of unparalleled beauty before you in whichever direction you turn.

Skating is a magnificent covered rink to the accompaniment of a good band is not to be among the least attractive features of the Carnival, and the fancy-dress ball to be given on skates will be a sight long to be remembered. Canadians are most expert dancers on skates, and a waltz in which hundreds of oddly costumed people take part is a most singular display of terpsichorean skill. We would advise all visitors to bring their skates with them, as the rinks will all be open to visitors during Carnival week upon the payment of a small entrance fee.

Hockey matches between all the important clubs will be played and to those who have never seen the game a real treat is in store. It is as fully exciting as football. And by the way, what do you think of football on skates. This, too, is a Canadian invention and is quite as lively as when otherwise played.

Curling, to which our worthy Scotch friends are so much addicted, will be given due prominence and some good bonspiels may be expected.

Snowshoe races steeplechases and other winter games will take place under the direction of the Q. A. A. and much fine sport will be looked for as the prizes offered will be an attraction to all the champions of clubs from sister cities.

The heartiness with which Montreal is co-operating with Quebec, and the promise of her various clubs to take part with Quebec will add greatly to the success of the Carnival.

It is not unlikely that visitors to the Carnival will be favored with a turnout of the troops on snowshoes. A most novel sight certainly to see a large body of men in all the panoply of war deploying in battle array on snowshoes.

And now we approach the architectural creations of snow and ice somewhat hesitatingly. How to describe the beauty of the ice babylonian tower on the Place d'Armes when illuminated by hundreds of colored lights at night, or sparkling under a clear noon-day sun. It cannot be done, one must see it to form any conception of the glorious beauty. This tower will be in full view from the Hotel Frontenac.

On the old walls of the city, between St. Louis and Kent Gates, an immense fortification in ice of most picturesque design will be built. On one evening of Carnival week this fortification and the two gates will be assaulted by the snowshoe clubs, and the defence will be by chosen troops. A grand pyrotechnic display, bursting bombs, Roman candles and Greek fire will add a reality to this sham fight that will be startlingly effective.

The Carnival drive will be through the main street of the city, which will be decorated for the occasion. Cars representing the striking historic events in the old city's history, and others humorously hitting off winter life in the North, will form a procession, affording much pleasure and amusement.

A grand ball, to which visitors will also be welcomed, will take place, probably at one of the leading hotels.

On the old Parliament grounds will be an Indian encampment and the following tribes will there represent their winter mode of life and occupations—Crees, Hurons, Montagnais and Chippeways.

A sugar camp, a lumberman's shanty, in which peas soap, pea bread, bush tea and other shanty delicacies will be served in bush fashion, a hunter's winter camp, and several other features of bush life will be shown. These buildings will be erected on the Esplanade.

Other features there will be plenty, but our space does not permit of an extended description, and we must refer the reader to the official programme in this little work.

We must, however, say a word for some of the beautiful arches to be erected in St. Roch's. The one in St. Joseph street will be a masterpiece of architectural skill in ice and evergreens.

A statue to Montgomery on the site of his burial place in Quebec will be erected fac simile of the one in the facade of St. Paul's Church in New York.

RIPANS

TABULES.

RIPANS TABULES are compounded from a prescription used for years by well-known physicians and endorsed by leading medical authorities everywhere. In the Tabules the standard ingredients are presented in the form that is becoming the fashion with modern physicians and modern patients everywhere.

RIPANS TABULES act gently but promptly upon the liver, stomach and intestines; cure habitual constipation, dispepsia, colds, headaches and fevers. One Tabule taken at the first symptoms of a return of indigestion, or depression of spirits, will remove the whole difficulty within an hour.

Persons in need of the Ripans Tabules will find the gross package most economical to buy. It is also in convenient form to divide up among friends. The above picture represents a quarter gross box, sold for 75 cents. A single bottle can be had for 15 cents.

POOR DOCUMENT

AN OPEN LETTER.

Grand Lake Range, Queen's County, N. B.

March 10th, 1893.

THE GROSSER DYSPEPSIA CURE CO., Ltd.

GENTLEMEN:

I am 73 years of age and have had Dyspepsia for several years. I have employed numerous physicians and taken many patent medicines, but all were of no use in my case. I began to grow worse. There was severe distress in my stomach; everything I ate, even the lightest food caused me intense agony. My appetite was poor and I could not sleep. I was almost without hope when I saw a testimonial in the newspaper stating what Groder's Syrup had done for others. As a last effort to regain health, I thought that I would buy it. Just before Christmas last my son Fred went to St. John and brought me home a bottle of your remedy. I used with the following results:

I eat as I wish and have no distress from my food; my appetite is first-class, my food is well digested, I sleep as soundly as a child. I do all my own work without the aid of a servant, and can do a day's washing without feeling much tired, whereas I could not do it all before taking Groder's. I do feel grateful to you, gentlemen, for placing so valuable a remedy upon the market. I give all the credit for present state of good health to your medicine.

I am willing to answer any questions concerning the above, for I firmly believe you really will cure other sufferers as it has cured me. I conscientiously make this statement without any inducement or reward knowing it to be one of the best medicines in the market for Dyspepsia.

Respectfully yours,

ELEANOR BURKE

Don't you remember, uncle, those lines about, How any woman's sides can hold the beating of so strong a throbb? I wonder how any man's glance can meet this approbation and not quail.

Ay, ay! But hush, my dear. There's Lord John speaking.

The meeting, unparalleled in the annals of public meetings—even of Anti-Corn Laws and O'Connell meetings, lasted two hours. Those on the platform described afterward how they were haunted by the sea of faces, tipped up to them by the wave-like surges of the great multitude. This was the smallest section of the crowd which had assembled. In other halls, and in the grounds outside, receiving scraps of oratory from distinguished speakers, were as many as made up the whole gathering to more than one hundred thousand. The speeches were strictly limited as to time, and punctually at five o'clock the meeting dispersed.

Agilony, slowly making his way out passed near the great door, watching the carriages of the celebrities and non-celebrities as they drove away, observing the throng and hearing the comments.

The carriages and cabs went by numbers, and as he stood there a hired landau drove up, and the number, 137, was called out, but as no response was made, it quickly hurried on, to come around again in its turn, which would not be for a long time yet. Just when it had disappeared, there was some pushing from behind, and turning, Agilony beheld the elderly gentleman and stately young lady beside whom he had stood during the meeting.

Come along, Judith! said the old man frantically. We can slip between the horses' heads, and overtake the carriage. Oh, but, my dear uncle— But the rapid and impetuous old gentleman, who looked as if he could not brook having to wait for anything or any one dragging his niece by the hand, went down the steps, and under the heels of a couple of prancing steeds belonging to an approaching carriage. With a repressed exclamation she wrenched her hand out of his, and while he darted forward, she started back again, and up the steps, alone. The disconsolate visage of the ruddy-faced gentleman was visible, peering at her between horses' heads, jostled by the crowd, and looking very helpless, despite his great stature and herculean dimensions.

Agilony was conscious of a vague interest in these proceedings. He watched her as she came to the top of the steps and stood there frowning a little and biting her lip.

Provoked if I wait— But perhaps if I wait— She looked at the old man's anxious, and glanced unconsciously around her. Agilony's theories upon the subject—woman-included one which proclaimed her helplessness in a crowd. He thought the better of her for looking uneasy. Lizzie would have been frightened to death poor little thing!

As this thought crossed his mind his lips moved, and he suddenly and impulsively stepped forward raising his hat and remarking:

If you will take my arm a moment, I will help you across to your carriage.

She looked a little surprised, glanced for a moment into the face of the man who addressed her, and said:

Thank you. If you would not mind.

She placed her hand lightly within the arm which he extended, and he led her quickly and skillfully between the carriages and despite the expostulating policemen and disapproving coachmen, handed her in safety to the other side. A few moments' search sufficed to discover the old gentleman, who exclaimed:

I wish I had never left the steps, Judith! The crowd here is most rough and unpleasant, and how we are ever to find the carriage, I don't know.

Your carriage is just over there, if you like to come to it and sit in it till your turn comes round again, said Agilony, politely and with a very faint smile at the mixture of reckless impetuosity and nervous helplessness characteristic of the country constituency in great crowds.

Where? How? Thank you sir! said the elderly gentleman, crimsoning in his agitation, and looking excited.

There said Agilony, his eyes gleaming with subdued mockery, as he stretched a long arm and pointed a long forefinger toward the spot where he saw the carriage clearly enough.

Suppose you follow me—I know the place all through, he suggested, and the old gentleman, looking the young lady's arm through his own, and glaring (in other words will describe the look) with sudden interest at Agilony's back and up to his close-cropped dark hair, followed him whether he led him through the masses of the crowd, until, by what seemed to the bewildered strangers nothing short of miracle, they stood beside the carriage which he had hired for the occasion.

The old boy must think me a plausible member of the swell mob he thought. He's thinking that he would not like to meet me alone on a country road late at night, and armed with a stick, she looked at her watch and saw that it was half past six. Thank you, thank you, sir! said the old man, handling his niece in and still staring at Agilony with a fixedness, and with a suspicious expression, at which the latter led with difficulty refrain from laughing aloud.

Aloud he said: If you will sit here, your man will drive you on as soon as he can, and you will be all right. Good-afternoon!

Sir, pardon me, but will you not—can you— Thank you, I'm walking, replied Agilony, slightly lifting his hat, and striking away.

CHAPTER II.

MEETING THE SECOND. Agilony carried himself homeward as fast as might be, through a tortuous maze of side streets and short cuts. He lived in lodgings in a southern suburb of Irford in a quiet modest, dingy-looking street called Crane Street, and in apartments suited to his very moderate means. As he bent his steps towards Crane Street his mind was running eagerly and delightedly on the spectacle, the excitement of that afternoon. He was not given to airing any criticisms or enthusiasms; his fault was extreme reserve and taciturnity; but at the same time he silently cherished ardent longings, wishes, ambitions.

I call that life, that sort of thing, for those who take part in it, he said, within himself. One afternoon of that would be worth a hundred years of selling gray shirtings and towings, and being badgered if your sales don't come up to the mark you are expected to reach. It's life for a galley slave, by gad! and nothing better. I wish I saw my way out of it. Agilony thought Agilony that this face darkened. And then old Jenkinson, who's rolling in money, can go centing to people about his being a misfortune for any young man to have anything to depend upon but his own exertions! Hum! Ha! I wish he'd a just let one of his own sons exchange with me, and see where his own exertions landed him. I should like to cut the whole concern, and go off to Canada or New Zealand; only I like Irford, and I like the life there is here. I like the politics, and the stir and the throbb of a big city like this. And then Lizzie—poor little Lizzie—she would scream at the very notion of such a thing.

A smile dawned in Agilony's face and eyes, which for a few moments had been perpetually grave, and even severe. This smile was unquestionably a tender one; it transfigured his face, and made it look that of another being, gave a softness and graciousness to the hard, sharp outlines, and melted away the cynical little lines about the mouth. He looked up, rousing himself from his abstraction, with a vague consciousness that he must be near home, and found himself within a few paces of the house. He strode up the little walk, and opened the door with a latch-key.

Apparently its rattle in the lock had been heard, for as he was pulling it out, and standing just within the narrow little passage, about to close the door, some one came tripping out of a back parlor and said: How late you are!

I'm sorry, my child! Couldn't afford to get many 'us faces in one day, so I had to walk, he replied, putting the latch-key into his pocket with one hand, and with the other possessing himself of her slim fingers; then his arm by some means slipped around her waist, and thus picked her up into—dark, little be r whence she had emerged.

Come, let me go, sir! You and I are going to have our tea, and that's more look than you deserve. And then off we go. Oh, I'm dying to be off, and we shall get no places, if we're not in lots of time.

Well, stop—you can spare time for me to have one look at you. Let's see how your new frock suits you. He held her off at arm's length, and gazed at her, with his keen eyes softening visibly. Handsome though his own features were, his hard and cynical expression made his face almost a plain and decidedly a handsome one. Sure! she compensated for his want of attractiveness by her own exquisite, pretty creature. Tall, lithe, and sleek, her long throat supported a lovely little head. She was fair, with a delicate complexion, unclouded by the smoke and coarseness of the town. She had one of those faces, child's and woman's at once, which appeal irresistibly to all male hearts, and to most feminine ones. Soit blue eyes; a lovely mouth, pensive, yet pointing, and a dreamy smile; abundance of pale hair, which, however, just failed to have the difference between flat and gold—all these charms she possessed, together with that other charm usually wielded by women at nineteen years of age. So much for the first view; the real undeniable advantages—and they were all that Agilony had ever seen. From the hour in which he had been betrothed to her, he had been firmly convinced that she embodied his ideal of womanhood. Perhaps a feminine eye would have been required to perceive, a feminine finger to point out certain other characteristics which, however, she might read who ran.

Miss Lizzie Vane wore a dress which faithfully followed every worst point of the prevailing fashion; and exaggerated all of them a little, by way of originality. Her gown was the gown of the present day. It fitted her almost half the length from her throat to her knees, and on the ground behind an abundance of perfectly meaningless little frills, arranged upon a spoon or wedge-shaped piece of stuff, waggled and whisked about with her every moment. This was the train of Miss Vane's dress; for a young lady moving in her exalted sphere, and living too in one of the palatial family mansions of Crane Street, could hardly be expected to possess with so useful, so necessary an appendage. Her waist—let us say, very slim indeed; her bust and hips forced into a proportion displeasing in itself, and out of all proportion with the rest of her figure. Her plentiful hair was gathered behind into as small and abashy a round knot as it could by any means be screwed into; in front a great wisp of it was pulled forward, relentlessly cut short, and then curled, frizzed, piled and towered both on the front of her head and over her pretty white forehead. Certainly a pair of liquid-blue eyes look at you with a very bewitching glance from out a forest of such little ringlets; and so Agilony thought. So much for Miss Vane's appearance while in repose. The exigencies of her sub-skirt arrangements, the position of what she called her kicking-traps necessitated a side-long, crab-like movement, which, if gracefully managed, is amusing for a short time as a novelty, but as a matter of fact is nothing or agreeable as a permanent form of locomotion in one who is to be a companion for life, must be a man who is very much in love indeed.

It was upon this sinuous-looking form that Agilony gazed with admiring eyes. Then his glance left her form and fell upon her face. That at least was lovely, since it had no waist to be compressed into an attenuation suggestive of the most painful results in case of any unlooked-for accident. No frizzing and no torturing of hair could make it otherwise. Ill-temper now, old age in her future, could alone have the power to make Lizzie Vane's face an ugly one, and—to tell the whole truth—no power, in the heavens above, or in the earth beneath, would ever make the said face a noble one, or put a spark of intellectual fire into the sweet blue eyes.

Do come and get your tea she implored him, wriggling impatiently. His hand was on the door handle, and he was waiting for her for some time, I should have died of dullness if Mr. Golding hadn't looked in and cheered my solitude.

She laughed a little affectedly. Percy came, did he? Ah! your society would suit him better than the home-truths we've been hearing this afternoon. There was too much of the sledge-hammer about our proceedings to suit friend Percy, he said, smiling sardonically, as he seated himself, and Miss Vane, bending in an elegantly serpentine attitude, stood before the tray, and poured out the tea.

Why don't you sit down, too? he asked. I thought you were going to get tea with me? So I am, but I shall stand. I can't sit down, I'm so impatient, and I must be off to get ready, replied Lizzie, conscious of a treacherous tension about the knees, which she knew by experience meant a crack, and a sudden unseemly expansion of garment. In the event of sitting down, or of assuming any other than an upright posture.

How do you like my dress? You don't even seem to see it, she said, bending into a graceful curve, and looking affectionately over her shoulder at the spoon-shaped train before alluded to.

It's—well, I don't understand such things. I suppose it's very pretty, but I don't think it suits you quite so well as some you've had. It looks a little too tight, as if there hadn't been quite enough stuff, doesn't it? There's a compliment! cried she, with more heat than the occasion seemed to demand. But you're no judge, Mr.

Golding said he had never seen anything in more perfect taste.

Well, Percy's more of a judge, than I am, and then he has sisters, said Bernard, with ready acquiescence; so, I suppose it must be right. And he added in the most perfect innocence and good faith, I suppose they know what's what in a big shop like Land & Robinson's eh? Yes, said Lizzie eagerly, and all smiles, why? Did you see anything like it in their window?

No. At least I didn't observe any thing; but when I went to buy ribbon for you last week, the girl who served me had on a dress exactly like this of yours—only black, you know. She reminded me of you somehow.

He smiled, thinking he had paid an unexceptionable compliment. Indeed, a year ago, the idea of his going into a unexceptionable compliment. Indeed a year ago, the idea of his going into a draper's shop to buy ribbons for a girl would have been scouted by him as being out of the range of possibility. But flimsy creatures have, ere this, wielded considerable power over other creatures which were anything but flimsy. Lizzie Vane's influence had tamed him, not only to the buying of ribbons, but to a feeling of anxiety to understand her and sympathize with her in her own particular province—that of dress and millinery. To his surprise and discomfort, his last well meant effort produced only an angry pout.

Really, your ideas are so odd, Bernard. To think of comparing me with a shop-girl! she expostulated. It was Bernard's turn to look surprised. I didn't compare you with a shop-girl, he said, and if I had—I don't know much about such things—but that girl I speak of was infinitely superior to some of her customers. Why not a shop-girl, Lizzie? he added, reflectively. Suppose you had been obliged to go out, as they call it, to earn your living, I'd rather be a saleswoman in one of those big shops full of wretches, than a nursery governess, with a lot of impudent squalling brats to tyrannize over me.

I've never considered the subject, but I having felt the necessity for it, retorted Miss Vane loftily. Bernard smiled slightly. If anybody but Lizzie had been talking, Bernard would have been the comments upon puffed ignorance and upstart vanity. As it was, he let the observation pass, and, spreading a slice of bread with butter, attacked another topic—one which he had tried before, with scant success. He spoke out of the fullness of his heart, not because he hoped that Lizzie would feel interested in the subject.

We had a meeting this afternoon, Lizzie. I don't believe there ever was such a meeting! Oh, I know nothing about meeting, she replied, with temper. No, I'm glad of it, my child. To be continued.

WANTED--A WIFE

Beautiful and with a Clear, Healthy Complexion

Of course very man wants his wife to be beautiful; but how can she be beautiful if the face and hands are disfigured by rough skin, freckles, tan, or eruptions! Nothing will throw such a damper on love as a blotched face.

By the use of GEM CURATIVE SOAP, an article which combines the best known remedies for the cure of all cutaneous diseases, a refined healthy complexion is assured.

When GEM CURATIVE SOAP is used according to directions the effects are marvellous and gratifying. Time has proven this to be true, as thousands of the most flattering testimonials are on file from customers in England, Scotland, France and Germany, in which countries the Soap is a staple toilet article.

For Thirty Days Only

Write this sentence on a piece of paper: GEM CURATIVE SOAP, and send to with twenty cents for a sample cake of Gem Curative Soap.

To the first lady from whom a slip is received will be given a handsome Seal Skin Mantle, valued at $300.00, or its equivalent in cash. Less 20 per cent. To the first Gentleman from whom a similar slip will be given an 18 Karat Gold Watch set with one karat diamonds. Appleton & Tracy's movement, valued at $250.00.
