London, July 26.-The Times, commenting editorially upon the debate in the Canadian Parliament on the Alaskan boundary matter, says: "Sir Charles Tupper expressed himself with unnecessary energy, but looking to the present position of the Alaskan negotiations, we hope we may disregard his oratorical fireworks. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's tone was studiously conciliatory and moderate, and as no concessions will be made in Alaska without Canada's knowledge and consent, there is no room at present for the pessimistic views of impatient politicians in Ottawa or Washington. This is made absolutely clear by the declaration signed by the American delegation, read in full in the conference today, and enter-ed on the records. The relations between the Americans and other delegates, notably the English, German and Russian, have been extremely friendly. The Englishmen and Americans acted throughout almost like a joint delegation. This was due to no arrangement or direction, but solely because both nations found common ground of defense, common interests, civilization and humanity. The only point on which the English delegates failed to support the Americans was the resolution forbidding the capture of private property at sea. To this the all the evidence submitted the property at sea. To the nothing to establish the guilt of Dreyfus. M. After the arbitration convention is signed it will probably open to the adhesion of all other powers not represented at the conference on the condition that no original signatory of the convention object. This right to blackball any power wishing to join the convention was insisted upon by Italy, in order to prevent the adhesion of the pope, and by England, on account of the Trans-vaal. It is hoped that all the South American states will come in. the unanimous opinion of all the delegates that the conference begins a new epoch, and that the good seed now sown will bear a rich harvest hereafter."

WERE IN PERIL

The Reformatory Ship Clarence Burned at Liverpool.

Bravery and Good Discipline of the Foys-A Narrow Escape.

Liverpool, July 26.—The Roman Catholic reformatory ship Clarence was destroyed by fire early this morning. It was but a few moments after the fire was discovered until the great three-decker was wrapped in flames. Intense excitement prevailed until it ecame known that the hundreds of lads and officers on board the Clarence had been saved by the ferryboats Mersey and Firefly, which quickly made fast to the burning vessel and began pumping water upon the flames.

The boys on board the Clarence worked with the utmost discipline until they were forced to leave the ship with Bishop Whiteside, who spent the night on board the Clarence, lost their personal effects. The crew of the Mersey had a narrow escape, having barely time to re-gain their own craft, which had the utmost difficulty in getting clear of the burning vessel, when the bulwarks of the Mersey were beginning to take fire. Three hours after the fire was discovered the Clarence's back broke and she settled slowly. This was the second Catholic reformatory ship of the same name that burned on the Mersey River. Her predecessor was fired by boys on board of her.

THE CRIPPLED BANK

Defalcation of the Banque Ville Marie's Officers May Reach $100,000-Note-Holders Lose Nothing.

Montreal, July 26 .- In regard to the suspension of Bank Ville Marie, Mr. W. Weir, president of the bank, made the following statement yesterday: "We charge James Herbert, teller, with being a defaulter to the extent of $58,000. We charge F. X. Lemieux, chief accountant, with being an accomplice to this defalcath Warrants for the ar-rest of both of these employes are in the hands of Chief Detective Carpenter. Mr. Ubalde Garand, in whose charge the affairs of the bank have been placed, is a member of the firm of Garand & Terroux, private bankers, and is a gentleman who has the entire confidence of the community. The suspension of the bank created no sensation in financial circles, for it never was regarded as very strong. It will be very different throughout the country districts, where the bank had the following branches: Hochelaga (city), Point St. Charles (city), Bertheirville, Lachute, Lachine, Nicolet, Ste. Therese, St. Laurant, l'Epiphanie, Laprairie, Chambly Basin, Marieville, bank and branches held deposits bearing interest amounting to $1,256,357 which, of course, were largely the savings of poor people in the country. There were deposits not bearing interest of $232,331. Of course holders of the bank's notes are in no danger of

The local stock market was not seriously affected by the news. In local banking circles the troubles of the Ville Marie Bank have been known since the first of the week, and the banks have been proceeding with the view of protecting themselves. Yesterday there was a balance against the Banque Ville Marie at the clearing house of about $30,000. The withdrawal of the bank from the clearing house yesterday, although it could have met the balance, was with a view to making no preferences and taking advantage of the 90 days given by act of parliament to readjust its affairs. THE DEFALCATION MAY REACH

One of Nature's kindest gifts to woman is a beautiful hand. "As soft as dove's down and as white as it." The assertion that a patrician descent of five generations is necessary for the possession of hands perfect beyond criticism, does not hold good with the nineteenth century woman, who realizes that with intelligent attention these members may be cultivated to an astonishing degree of grace and elegance. Continuous and unremitting care and the faithful use of "Hazeline," a delicate, creamy, stimulating lotion, will restore the hands, damaged by long neglect, to that softness of texture and delicacy of touch, always so delightful an attribute of woman.

Cleveland, July 26.-The obstructions placed on the tracks of the Big Consolidated street car lines during the night were found to be fewer than at any time since the present strike was inaugurated. The car crews are allowed in Cleveland to array themselves like walking arsenals, but across the border the mayor of Brooklyn has taken steps which prevents that town from armed invasion. The officers search the crews of every car which comes across the bridge. Ralph P. Hawley, the non-union mo-

FATAL KITE-FLYING.

New York, July 26.—Two boys were killed yesterday afternoon by falling from roofs while flying kites. Thos. Dempster, 13 years old, of 361 West Thirty-sixth street, was the first vic-tim. He had run from the house in to 351, dodging around chimneys and skylights, and was looking over his shoulder to watch the effect of suddenly tightening the line of his kite when he went head first down the air shaft. He dropped five stories and was instantly killed. When he was picked up he still had the end of the string wound around his wrist. The kite was caught on the roof.

Joseph Foster, 12 years old, was killed in the same way, falling from the roof of 769 Columbus avenue, where head. Sutton is seriously hurt. he lived with his parents.

SHOOTING AFFAIR. Torento, July 26.-J. C. King, a retired gentleman, over 70 years of age, living at No. 3 Vermont avenue, has at orchard that the boys have been stealing from. King met Wm. Grauer, of No. 122 Vermont avenue, and a companion named French on the way home from work. After they passed, King, believing they were among the plun-derers, opened fire from a revolver, loaded with cartridges, charged with buckshot. The second shot took effect on Grauer's forehead. Grauer squeezed a buckshot out of his forehead, and is not badly hurt, but King is under ar-rest, charged with "shooting with in-tent."

Woodstock, Ont., July 26 .- Miss Jane Grier, 21 years old, daughter of Mr. Grier, of the 7th concession, East Oxford, died at her home yesterday afternoon. A few weeks ago Miss Grier went to stay with a friend of here in Dwethbales. She was enjoying hers in Dumphries. She was enjoying the best of health. One evening on retiring at the usual hour, as it was not very dark, Miss Grier did not take a light to her room. The apartment only being lit by the expiring twi-light, the objects therein were not piainly discernible. The young lady get into bed, but as she reached out her hand to turn down the bedclothes it came in contact with a face.

With a piercing shriek Miss Grier fell back insensible. Her cry startled the inmates of the house, who rushed to her room to find her in a swoon, from which she only partially recovered. It appears that she had previously occupied the spare room by her-self, and on the night referred to a neighbor's child, who was stopping at the house, was put into the bed un-known to her. Miss Grier never recovered from the shock.

The Pacific Cable Resolution Passes the House.

Expected To Be a Paying Concern From the Start.

Sir Charles Tupper Congratulates Mr. Mulock - The Cost and Expenses -Customs Undervaluation.

Ottawa, July 26.-The house yesterday unanimously passed the resolution offered by Hon. William Mulock, authorizing the construction of the Pacific caple, through committee, and a bill founded upon it was introduced. In doing so, Mr. Mulock said that the subject had for many years been before the Australasian colonies, the mother country, Canada, and the British Empire at large. The various negotiations and discussions between the representatives of the colonies and Great Britain in conference were carefully traced by Mr. Mulock, who also pointed out the great importance to Canada of building up trade on the Pacific front as well as on the Atlantic front—"a double front on the two great oceans, the Atlantic and the Pacific, and Canada in touch with the trade of the whole world," said Mr. Mulock, amid

Mr. Mulock said the cost of the cable had been put down at £1,700,000, which would leave a margin on the estimated cost of £108,000. Lord Kelvin had estimated the annual expenditure at £144,886, and thought the cable would tion between Australasia and Great of the cable across the sea, so that you would have to allow 1s 6d per word for that. Lord Strathcona and Mr. Jones, the Canadian representatives, took this somewhat more favorable view of the outlook than 2 shillings per word. Their findings as to the earnings of this cable from the beginning are as follows: They estimate a surplus from the be-ginning, and taking the annual expenditure, which is for maintenance, repairs, sinking fund and interest, at £144,886, they came to the conclusion that the cable would earn in the first year of its operation, over and above these charges, a surplus of £1,114; in the second year, £19,389; third year, £39,923; fourth year, £68,014; fifth year, £94,626, and the sixth year, £124,-565, so that these gentlemen see nothing but profit in the scheme from the be-ginning. However, whether profit or loss, the proposal in the resolution involves Canada being interested to the extent of five-eighteenths. For some time the scheme was delayed owing to the various governments interested not having been able to arrive at the proportion they would be willing to undertake, but it has now been arranged that Great Britain will assume five-eighteenths, Canada five-eighteenths, and the colonies of New Zealand and Queensland, New South Wales and Victoria, two-eighteenths each, making in all eighteen-eighteenth CANADA'S SPECIAL INTEREST. Mr. Mulock said Canada would have special interest in the Pacific cable. It was no mean thing to feel that great public work of such imperial importance as the Pacific cable is to have a terminus on Canadian soil. It is not unsatisfactory to know that it may be of some service to Canada in connection with our own inland telegraphic system. It will promote cable com-munications for Australasia across the Atlantic to Canada. It will supply traffic for Canadian telegraphic lines, and it will no doubt attract commerce to our Dominion and put us in a powill become a carrying highway for trade from other countries, as well as being directly benefited ourselves. It will develop trade with Australia. Cable communication between Canada and Australia is now practically prohibited by the high rates. Owing to the roundabout route it would probably cost $50 for the simplest message there and back, and that makes it practically prohibitory to Canadians establishing trade relations with Australasia. Our separation from our sister colonies by this great ocean and the absence of direct communication by cable have prevented that develop ment of our trade with Australasia that would have taken place had we a direct cable system, and which will take place when the facilities are established as are proposed by this resolution.

Sir Charles Tupper spoke in support of the resolution, and added his hearty congratulations to Mr. Mulock for the very lucid and able and clear manually which he had put this very imner in which he had put this very important question before the house.

Mr. John Charlton suggested that while he did not oppose the cable the money might be better invested in Canada in the development of her internal resources by carrying out such enter-prises as the Yukon Railway and the Ottawa Valley Canal. Our Australian ottawa valley canal. Our Australian trade was small and not likely to increase greatly, and the Canadian enterprise undoubtedly would have to compete with an American cable within a short time. He did not agree with the rosy estimates of the profit of the simply to return the appliance and remainder of medicine to us, and that ends the transac-

Mr. Craig admitted that there were many possible schemes for developing Canadian trade, but that was no reason against building this cable.

Mr. Osler unreservedly congratulated the postmaster-general upon the success of his negotiations. The resolutions were in every way creditable to Mr.Mu-

Mr. Bostock spoke of the importance to British Columbia of developing the trade with Australia and the advisability of constructing this cable before the American cable.

Col. Prior cited as an evidence of the desire of the people of British Columbia for this cable their offer to pay part of the cost.

The resolution carried, only Mr. Charlton voting nay.

CUSTOMS, UNDERVALUATION. The house then went into committee on the customs estimates. Mr. N. Clarke Wallace called attention to cases of alleged undervaluation of goods by a New York firm in Toronto, and an-other case of the same kind in Montreal.

Mr. Paterson said that the Montreal case is being looked after by the de-partment of justice. He added that cases had been discovered where New York merchants had sent goods to Liverpool to be shipped to Canada as English goods so as to profit by the prefer-

THE WEST HURON BALLOTS. The senate yesterday went into committee on a bill to further amend the Dominion elections act with respect to Prince Edward Island, introduced by Senator Ferguson. During the discussion on the bill Hon. David Mills brought up the West Huron inquiry, and said that nothing had been proved before the commons committee to show that there had been any fraud in that election. The ballots used in that also that there had been any fraud in that election. The ballots used in that election, had, he said, been printed in the office of the Goderich Signal. The printers had begun to print the ballots on thin paper, but the proprietor had ordered them to use heavier paper. This accounted for the difference in thickness in the paper on which the ballots were printed.

THE DECLINE OF INTEREST

A Dollar Will Buy More and Earn Less Than It Used To.

[Hartford Courant.]

A dollar never saw the day when it could buy more food, clothing, transportation and other necessaries of life than now. On the other hand, a dollar never saw the day when it could earn less than now. These are points for the consideration of those who discuss the relations of capital and labor. The change in the rate of interest on money has come gradually, but it is one of the most remarkable events in financial history. It is easily enough explained, now it is here, but nobody could have predicted it. It amounts to cutting the rate in two within a quarter of a century. For example, a good many people will remember that in 1873 the railroad stations between here and New York were placarded with the advertisements of the Harlem River and Port Chester Railroad 7 per cent bonds, guaranteed by the main road. These had to be very extensively advertised to secure their sale at par. become a paying concern in its fourth year. Continuing, Mr. Muiock said: "1 3½ per cents, it could get a slight premium for them. That indicates a understand that the present cable rate between Great Britain and Australasia shrinkage of one-half. It means that is 4s 9d. Of course, cable communicatif in 1873 a man had had $20,000 in cash if in 1873 a man had had $20,000 in cash to invest he could have bought these Great Britain via the Pacific, would have to hear the cost of telegraph across the Dominion of Canada, and invest could get but $700 for the same security. There are funds in the hands of trustees that have not been changed in twenty years, and are worth now double what they were worth at the beginning, and that do not yield any more income. That is another way of showing that in productiveness it takes two dollars now to equal one 25 years

The dollar cannot earn what it used to. Time was when 10 per cent was not considered high interest, when our savings banks paid depositors 7 cent, and when the average discount rate at the banks was 7 per cent. Today the savings banks are squeezing out 4 per cent to depositors, and discussing the advisability of making the rate 3½.

But while the dollar cannot earn what it once could, it can buy vastly more of what is needed. At the time allluded to for the interest comparison, coal was $9 a ton, now $6 50; flour was $9 75 to $12 50 a barrel, now $5 25; sugar was 15 cents a pound, now 41/2 cents; hay was $28 a ton, now $18.

A day's work put into getting bread, clothes and similar necessities will produce more than 25 years ago, but a day's work saved up and put into capital, will not earn more than half the money that it used to.

Evidence Duplicated Again in Regard to Cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

W. C. Bennett, Foreman of the R. M. Horsey Tin Shop, Kingston, Replies to a Letter Asking About His Cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Kingston, July 25 .- Barriefield is just outside Kingston, and may be an important part of that city some day. In Barriefield lives Mr. W. C. Bennett, who was cured of Kidney Complaint by Dodd's Kidney Pills. His cure was published not so long ago, and Mr. Bennett has lately received inquiries from a Toronto gentleman who is anxious to know if the case was as stated.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured Kidney Diseases in Kingston in all its forms. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Heart Disease, Lumba-go, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Urinary and Bladder Complaints, have all been cured in the Limestone City by that wonderful medicine, Dodd's Kidney

Mr. Bennett desires to tell the pub-lic through this paper that he has found in Dodd's Kidney Pills a permanent cure for Kidney Troubles and Backache-the most common symptom of Ridney Disease-and further, he is willing to answer any letters addressed to him asking for particulars.

Here is a copy of the letter Mr. Bennett wrote to the Toronto inquirer:

Kingston, May 28, 1899. Dear Sir-Yours referring to Dodd's Kidney Pills received. I have used them to great advantage, and I am sure that they are all that you claim for them. I got a box first from Henry Skinner, druggist, to give them a chance to cure me of Kidney Complaint, which had become so bad I could scarcely endure it. After using several other medicines and so-called Kidney Pills without receiving any benefit, I am all the greater pleased to testify to the great benefit received from Dodd's Kidney Pills. The change in my condition is so great that I cannot refrain from recommending them to any person troubled with Kidney Dis-

If any one is in doubt, a card to my address, General Postoffice, Kingston, shall receive a prompt reply, stating what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for me. W. C. BENNETT.

"The baseball people of Guelph are not hammer-throwers. The vast majority of them take defeat with good They know the game. They know that a team can sometimes play better ball than their opponents and lose. They don't consider it is a discredit to get the small end of the score of a hard-fought, well-played contest. They don't mind the team taking a slump or playing a yellow game. The best of them do that sometimes. But—and here is where the shoe pinches—yellow ball all the time, defeats in series of threes and fours, and only a victory now and then, make the hearts of the most loyal supportrs sick within them.

'Gentlemen, it is up to you to play better ball. The supporters of the club believe you are capable of doing it. You have done it in the past, and you ought to be able to do it again. You are paid good salaries, not for going through the form of playing ball, but for putting your heart and soul into your work, and playing as if your life depended on the result.

KEEP THE HEAD COOL

And the bowels open, and you will be well during the warm weather.

"Keep the head cool and the bowels open" is old but eminently sensible advice for people to follow during the summer season. But the head won't keep cool, no matter what you do, if the bowels are constipated.

First thing, then, is to consider the bowels. If they don't move regularly every day take Laxa-Liver Pills. They're the nicest acting little pill you ever tried.

If you take one or two before going to bed, they'll work while you sleep without a grip or gripe. In the morning your head will feel cool and clear, and your brain bright and active.

They're just the thing to keep you well this summer if you are subject to sick headache, bilious spells, dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, constipation or

No Ground for Pessimism.

There is a certain type of citizen, ushally smug and comfortable, who prolesses to take an alarmist view of recent local occurrences, and to be "surseled that such things could happen in this peaceful and beautiful city of Lon-Mon," to use his stock phrase. There is no occasion for either alarm or surprise in anything that has transpired The ridiculous fears to which some give expression are either rooted in class prejudice or may be innocently conceived by crediting false witnesses who have been slandering the city by representing that the spirit of anarchy is abroad. The conditions here are no different from those in any other Canadian city except in this respect, that nowhere do such a large proportion of the people own their own houses as In London. In these days, when the diffusion of intelligence is so rapid, there is a growing cosmopolitanism of Ideas in every wide-awake, progressive community. The printing press keeps everybody's finger on the world's pulse. The smallest communities are no longer isolated, but continually feel and are influenced by the impulses which radiate from centers of thought and activity. In a city of London's relstive importance, there must be naturally various social elements, some of which do not readily harmonize, but it is defamatory to say that there are forces among the working classes here which are menacing to society, or which seopardize the city's interests. The recent disturbances were given an exaggerated and malicious importance at the time, but fortunately for London's good name the outside press and public saw the affair in its true light. Now It is everywhere recognized that the calling in of outside militia was a sorry blunder. Instead of injury, we believe that good will eventually come out of altuation It has its educattonal value; it will broaden the ideas of many who had not previously reflected on the conditions which underlie the present difficulty. It is not merely an accident. What is happening here is happening elsewhere, and an impartial examination of the causes will result in a verdict for the principle of conciliain troubles of the same class.

That portion of Ontario lying between the C. P. R. track and the international boundary from Fort William to the Province of Manitoba, a territory of 20,000 to 25,000 square miles in area, has never been regarded as of very much value by the majority of the people of older Canada. A portion of this territory may be comparatively worthless, being largely composed of rock and muskeg, but along the Cana-Bian bank of the Rainy River and its connections and tributaries, which extend along the greater part of the southern boundary, there is a stretch of capital agricultural country, fully 100 miles long and varying in width from balf a mile to fifteen or twenty miles-In fact, there are places where the fertile belt may be found to run back the full distance to the C. P. R. track. There are afready scores of thriving farms fringing the river bank, but the country is by no means fully taken up yet; there are many first-class homesteads still waiting settlement.

Agriculture, however, will never be the staple industry of this section; the miner has the first call. There has not even yet been sufficient development tione to approximately estimate the extent of New Ontario's mineral wealth but the territory has been pretty thorbughly prospected and there are hundreds of most promising "propositions," a large percentage of which will without doubt return a handsome dividend for the money invested in their development. These propositions lie scattered on every hand among the hundreds of islands in the Lake of the Woods and Rainy River, and throughut a large section of the adjacent district. There is abundance of iron, extensive veins of copper, considérable silver and other minerals in less quantities, as well as enormous deposits of granite and other commercial products. The timber in sections is extensive enough to last for many years, though there are not as vast tracts just here as in the more northern and eastern districts, while to all this must be added one scarcely less important, namely, the inexhaustible fisheries of the countless lakes and rivers. But lack of transportation facilities is keeping back the development of the country. The waterways are alone available for this purpose, but while there are hundreds of miles of more or less navigable waters, there are shoals and rapids that require to be improved before the best service can be obtained from nature's own highway. A railway skirting the southern boundary from Fort William to the western limits of the Province is the prime necessity, and this is what It is proposed to supply in the Ontario and Rainy River Rallway now about to be constructed. The Provincial Government has granted a subsidy of $4,000 a mile for 279 miles to the mouth of the Rainy River, while the Federal Government has given a land subsidy of 6.400 acres over 80 miles of the same line, and is now asked to make a similar grant for the balance.

When constructed the Ontario and Rainy River Railway will connect the eastern terminus of the Winnipeg and Southeastern Railway with the western terminus of the Port Arthur, Duluth and Western Railway, thus giving unbroken communication from Winnipeg to Lake Superior, through the richest portions of the district described above. If, in addition to this, the Provincial Government undertakes the construction of main colonization roads here and there, where most needed, a marvelous impetus will immediately be given to the opening up of the country, and New Ontario will quickly take rank among the best sections of the

The Passing of Robert Ingersoll.

The funeral service over the remains of Robert G. Ingersoll, the noted infidel, was yesterday conducted at his late residence, near New York. No clergyman was present to conduct the services, there were no pall-bearers, and no music. Some extracts from Mr. Ingersoll's writings, however, were read. Mr. Ingersoll is said by his intimates to have been a man of excellent habits, and of a very affectionate disposition. But those who hold that the greatest disservice any man can render his fellows, is to go up and down the world, using shining gifts of speech to destroy other men's faith in God, will not consider it a sufficient answer on the part of his eulogists that he was a kindly husband and indulgent father. Such a defense is as little to the purpose as was that of the panegyrists of Charles I., to whom Macaulay makes the famous retort: "We charge him with having broken his coronation oath; and we are told that he kept his marriage

We observe that one or two newspapers think the success of Mr. Ingersoll as a speaker against Christianity indicative of a falling away of belief in God. We do not think so. A man of unusual oratorical gifts can always attract a hearing. Against such audiences, we might set off the sale of a simple Christian work, like Charles A. Sheldon's "In His Steps," by millions of copies within a short time in Great Britain and the United States. Ingersollism there has been in some shape or other in the world for centuries and tens of centuries. But the Ingersolls come and go, leaving but little permanent impression; while the verities upon which the religion of Christ is founded, like the brook of which the poet sings, go on forever.

Steps have been taken to form Canadian Association in Buffalo. The chairman of committee, Mr. John A. Kennedy, estimates that there are about 20,000 native-born Canadians in that city-a very large field to draw from. As a preliminary a smoker will be held on the night of August 3, at the Ellioott Club, at which several distinguished Canadians will deliver addresses. Canadian clubs are springing up in many of the large cities of the States. The idea behind them is a good one. These organizations are not only valuable to the members in a social sense, but they make for friendly relations between the two countries.

Women do not, as a rule, realize how the steady drains which sometimes afflict them must at last re-act on the mind. Sometimes, it is only fretfulness, irritability or peevishness. At other times the condition passes beyond un-

When the drains and pains are stopped the mind soars up like a balloon from which dead weight has been cast out. How the Horse Has Served the Human Family for Ages.

Some of the Uses to Which He Was Put by the Ancients-Sacred to the Gods.

[St. James' Gazette, London, Eng.] While the cult of the cow criginated in the valleys of the "five rivers" of northwest India, the cult of the horse took its rise in Scythia and on the plains of Tartary, probably the true home of the horse, for the wild steeds of the steppes of central Asia—especially the equus Prejevalskii of Thibet-bear striking resemblance to the two Palaeolithic horses rudely though vigorously drawn upon a piece of reindeer horn by some artist of the stone age. This famous, primitive etching was found at La Madeleine, in the department of Dordogne, and no doubt gives a correct idea of the wild horse, from whom early man in Europe drew his chief food supply. The herds of horses must have been great, indeed, for at one village alone, at Solutre, near Macon, was found a deposit of horse bones ten feet in depth and more than three hundred feet in length, comprising, it has been esti-mated, the remains of from twenty to forty thousand animals. There is no doubt that for a very long period man saw in the horse nothing more than a plentiful supply of wild food-stuff. His next step was to tame him, so that large herds, valued first for their flesh, and afterward for their milk, might be driven like sheep before the

Later on he was used for draught pur-poses, especially for the drawing of war chariots, and to this was long confined the Veda. In ancient Egypt the ass alone was ridden, and even among the Homeric Greeks the horse seems to have been used almost entirely as a car drawer. Prior to his domestication, the horse would seem to have gone out of fashion as a food, for in the neolithic age his remains are absent or very rare, while he reappears in the late bronze age as a tamed animal. This is proved by the discovery of primitive bits made of stag's horn or bronze. These bits are only three and a half inches wide, and, as Mr. Isaac Taylor tells us in his 'Origin of the Aryans," could only be used nowa-days for a child's pony. As a matter of fact, bits of the size wide enough for the primitive horse are only suitable now for donkeys. The most ancient horseshoes which have been discovered, and which belong to the late iron age, perhaps about the eleventh century before Christ, are also very small. From these facts, says The Road, from examination of the bones, and from pictures left for us by prehistoric artthe primitive horse has been reconstructed. He stood about thirteen hands high-not much taller than a donkey. The head was larger than that of the horse of today, and the teeth large and powerful. It is, perhaps, small matter for wonder that the nations who first tamed the horse for riding attached high honor to the creature, seated on whose back they scoured with such swiftness. The horsemen of Thessaly appeared to the other Greeks through a mist of fable as Centaurs, half man, half brute, but wholly divine. And in the frank fashion of all primitive people the borseman gave back to the horse the glory that he reflected from it, and made of is comrade in war and chase a kind of leity. The ancient Germans took oracles from white horses, just as the Egyptians did from their sacred oxen. The animals were kept in groves and gave augury by neighing. Among the Slavs the sword com-bined with the horse to foretell future events. The weapons were planted in the ground and the horses led among them. By the movements of the beasts the attending priests judged the will of the gods. Among the Norsemen the sacrifice of a horse and the eating of its flesh was a token of sacramental allegiance to Odin. Among the ancient Irish, when a king was crowned in Ulster, it was customary to slay a white mare and boil it in a vat. Into this vat the newly made king descended, and there sat drinking the broth and tasting small por-tions of the meat. The eating of horseflesh was so well recognized as a heathen rite that the early Christian saints forbade it to their converts.

Among the Scythians the horse was deemed sacred to the sun, and its worship crossed the Himalayas and was early established

There is no mention of the art of riding in among the Raiput kings. Next to a human being, who probably was, as a matter of fact, never sacrificed in ancient India, the horse was the most acceptable offering to the gods. It is laid down in the Puranas that the sacrificer of a hundred horses ousts Indra, the king of the gods, from his throne and reigns in paradise (Swarga) in his stead. There is no record, however, of anyone having earned this surpassing felicity. Kings on attaining the throne usually sacrificed a horse, their tributary princes performing the more menial duties connected with the Aswamedha (horse sacrifice). Indeed, even the office of porter in this solemn rite could only be assumed by one of royal blood. One of the books of the great Hindu spic, the Mahabharata, contains an account of the Aswamedha held by Yudhisthira, King of the Pandus, when he had, by the defeat of Kauravas, firmly established his rule over northern India. The sacred horse was turned loose to wander wherever it listed for a year, while the royal army followed it everywhere at a respectful distance. Other tribes, whose pastures it crossed, were given the option of either turning out in force to join the triumph of the horse or of accepting wager of battle. At the end of the year the horse was led back to the palace and then sacrificed.

When physicians gave him up to

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Richard Jennings, a farmer, living in Goderich township, states: About three years ago I was taken down with Bright's Disease of the kidneys, had to give up all work, and placed myself in the care of the family physician. After some months a consultation was deemed necessary, and I was told I could not live.

"In sheer desperation I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The first pill gave relief, the first box produced a decided change for the better, and continuing the use of them, I improved in health, until now I am taking the heavy share of work on the farm. No tongue can tell what I suffered previous to using these pills, and I owe my recovery to them."

American Markets.

CHICAGO, July 25. — Unexpectedly light receipts and further reports of damage in the Northwest caused a rally in wheat today. September closed at an advance of %c. Corn and oats rose %c each. Provisions suffered from liquidation. Pork lost 12½c; lard, 5c to 7½c, and ribs, 2½c. An estimate of 225,000,000 bushels as the probable yield of the spring crop in Minnesota and the two Dakotas started wheat rather easy. September opened %c lower at 70%c to 70½c; advanced slowly to 70%c then.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Hogs-Estimated receipts today, 36,000; tomorrow, 30,000; left over, 5,567; market slow; 5c to 10c lower; mixed and butchers, $4 20 to $4 50; good heavy, $4 35 to $4 50; rough heavy, $4 05 to $4 25; light, $4 35 to $4 60; one lot, $4 65. ROBERT F. BOOTH

The Most Popular Forester in Toledo, Ohio.

The following extract from the Toledo News relates to a former Londoner, whom many readers of the Advertiser remember with kindly regard, and who, like a number of other Canadian boys who have done well in the world, was a graduate of this estab-

The different contests at the Foresters' carnival in East Toledo were concluded last night. In the gold watch contest for the most popular Forester, the subject of this sketch, Mr. R. F. Booth, was an easy winner. He had been put up as a candidate by his own lodge, Court Lucas, without his solicitation, and left the matter solely to his friends. Bob attended his lodge meeting last night for a short time and then went to the Central Labor Union, of which he is a member, tle, shippers, averaging 1,300 pounds and at which important business was to be transacted. The session was a late one, and it was midnight when the tired delegate found his pillow. It was about an hour later when the vicinity of West Washington street was arous ed by the furious barking of dogs and the tramping of horses. Leaping hastfor common grades, while choice grades ily out of bed, Mr. Booth hastened to quiet his dogs and found upon his doorstep Messrs. O. Wittmann, Joseph H. Lohner, John J. Kiel and John Mosher, brother members of Court Lucas, who had just alighted from a hack, Grabbing their astounded brother, they swung him around and told him he was an easy winner. He could hardly believe it, but his lodge's slogan is "Court Lucas against the field," and the result is known. Though found in robe du chambre and with all lights out, "Bob" and his friends had a "hot time" for awhile, and some of the neighbors lost sleep.

The victory was an emphatic one, and reflects great credit upon the hustling members of Court Lucas, No. 20, F. O. A. This is not a large body, but it is full of ginger, and usually gets what it goes after. Mr. Booth has been a member of the lodge for about ten years, and has held all the positions of honor and trust, being at present past chief ranger and deputy grand chief. He is as tickled as the boy with the boots today, and feels deeply grateful to his friends for their loyalty; but says that he is prouder than ever of his lodge. A notice has been sent by him to the entertainment committee, and at its next meeting Court Lucas will enjoy a "stag" on "Bob" Booth.

BETTER PAY

Increase Granted by the Grand Trunk to Sectionmen-Engineers' Negotiations Proceeding Satisfactorily.

Toronto, July 26 .- Word was received from Montreal last night that the Grand Trunk management had increased the wages from $1 to $1 10 a day of the section men on the main lines and heavy freight lines. The increase goes into effect on the middle division, where about 800 section men are employed. Two-thirds of these will get the augmented pay. The lines on the middle division to which the in-crease applies are those between the following points: Toronto and the Sarnia tunnel, Suspension Bridge and the Sarnia tunnel, Toronto and Hamilton, Fort Erie and King's Court, Fort Erie and Stratford. No increase has been granted section men on the branch lines.

GRAND TRUNK ENGINEERS. Mr. Morse, superintendent of motive power on the Grand Trunk, announced yesterday that the negotiations which have been going on for some time now between the engineers and the G. T. R. management were proceeding to a sat-isfactory conclusion. Mr. Morse ad-mitted that it was quite possible that the terms of the new agreement might be made public in the course of a few days.

PREFERENCE IN BRITISH MARKETS

Resolution in Reference to Canada's Desire Prepared by the Premier.

[Special to The Advertiser per C.P.R.] Ottawa, July 26 .- Sir Wilfrid Laurier informed Mr. McNeill, when the house met today that the resolution which the latter had prepared in reference to Canada's desire to obtain a preference in the British markets was not satisfactory to him. The premier said he had prepared one of his own would show it to Mr. McNeil. Probably they would agree upon it.

Mr. Fielding moved the house into committee on a resolution regarding public assistance to dry docks. In 1882 a statute was passed granting 2 per cent of a subsidy on the outlay for building dry docks, but not to exceed $10,000 per year. Owing to the increased size of steamships larger docks are now required, and the resolution proposed to increase the amount of subsidy to 2 per cent on the cost of the work for twenty years, but not to exceed $20,000 per year. Locks which were built under the statute can get the advantage of the new act if the size is increased. The resolution was adopted, Sir Charles Tupper agreeing

NUTS AS FOOD

Peter Rodd has resigned the leadership of the Methodist Church choir.

The Use of Them for Culinary Purposes in Some Foreign Countries.

We have little idea in this country to what a considerable extent the nuc is used for food in foreign ands. Our consuls have been sending information on this subject from far and wide, and the facts here given are condensed from a number of these reports. We are trying to teach foreign nations that antry still believe that maize is only fit to fatten hogs and beef cattle. Many Misses M. Cutler and E. McKay, of Lobo, wheeled here one day last week steamed chestnuts with much relish, and are content if they have nothing else, which shows that tastes differ. Throughout the center of France, from the Bay of Biscay to Switzerland, there are large plantations and almost forests of chestnut trees. The nuts are very large, resemble the American horsechestnut and are extensively eaten by the peasantry and animals. In the fall and winter the poor often make two meals a day on chestnuts. They are steamed and eaten with salt or milk, and physicians say they are wholesome, hearty, nutritious and fattening. In some parts of France walnuts are also a regular article of diet. but they are losing ground as an article of food because of their comparative scarcity. Walnuts are also used to make oil, and the convicts in some prisons are employed cracking the nuts and picking out the kernels, from which the oil is expressed. Almonds grow well in the middle and The meat is white and creamy, Hazela luxury. The peanut is rarely eaten in France, though the taste for it is growing. It is imported in enormous quantity for its oil. A few years ago there was a great deal of talk about the merits of bread made of peanut flour, and it was thoroughly tested in the German army, where for a little while it was part of the ration issued to a number of regiments. It was declared to be too highly concentrated and an irritating sort of food, and the soldiers didn't like it. The use of peanut flour was accordingly discontinued.

In Italy almonds are eaten while green or soft as dessert by the wellto-do, but the poor cannot afford them. Chestnuts are the only nuts that enter into the regular diet of the people. Almonds, filberts and walnuts are more of a luxury and are served as dessert or with wine at social gatherings.

The chestnut almost takes the place in Corea that the potato occupies in the western world. It is used raw. boiled, roasted, cooked with meat and in other ways. In Syria nuts are not a part of the regular diet, but enter into the composition of some popular native dishes. "Nuts in this country," writes our consul at Alexandretta, may be classed as a luxury, for use as a dessert and for consumption by the natives at night just before going to bed."-New York Sun.

Mrs. Snell took the stand and said her husband came home drunk Saturday night, and beat her with his fists and kicked her. She raised her veil. Her eye was swollen and inflamed and the whole cheek badly discolored. She pulled up the sleeve of her shirt waist and showed great black and blue bruises on her arm. Her limbs and body were also discolored from bruises, she said. Her husband was a good provider and was good to her when sober, but when he got drunk he beat her. She scarcely knew whether she wanted to prosecute him or not. She didn't know what to do. She and her husband had been to St. Thomas on Thursday to visit her mother. Her husband had taken a bottle of whisky along and had given her several drinks.

Mrs. Phoebe Cook, of St. Thomas, mother of the complainant, testified that the couple had been at her place Thursday night. They had a few drinks, but were not drunk. Her daughter had no marks of bruises at the time.

Devon Snell, the defendant, said he had never struck his wife. She had got her injuries by falling out of the buggy on the way back from St. Thom-Snell got a little mixed in his testimony.

Washington Snell, the defendant's father, testified that the complainant, his daughter-in-law, had shown him her arm and called his attention to the bruise on her face Friday evening after her return from St. Thomas, and had explained that she must have received the injuries by falling out of the rig. GREAT WALL OF CHINA go into effect at once.

Proposal to Tear It Down for the Building Stone It Contains.

Four or five companies, European and American, are said to be interested in the proposed tearing down of the Great Wall of China. The wall happens to be in the best state of repair in districts that are most accessible and populous, and it is believed that building stone from the wall will be worth fortunes to those who may secure the concession to tear it down. There are supposed to be 4,000,000,000 cubic feet of masonry in the great structure, which has a total length of 2,000 m. s, including its many windings and the double and triple lines of wall that are constructed at some places. In the end the wall was a failure, for it could not keep out of China the hosts of Genghiz Knan, who swept over it and conquered the country in the thirteenth century. After that time the wall ceased to have any strategic importance, but for fourteen centuries before the great conqueror lived the wall had well served its purpose. It stretched all along the northern frontier of China, and none of the hordes of the north had been able to pass it. Day and night for centuries Chinese guards were mounted on the towers that overtopped the wall, and they always gave timely notice of the approach of an enemy. Garrisons were stationed at each gate and natural passage through the walls, and towns sprang up at these encampments, many of which became important market places. Thus the wall really helped China to develop into a strong nation, for during the process the great barrier was of much assistance in keeping outbarbarians from molesting the country.

Time has left its marks upon this my monument of China's early civilion. The climate is severe, and the ce winter blasts from the Mongolian plains alternating with hot winds from he south in the change of the monsoon are enough to crumble the best of Woodstock, F. Millman, skip, 17, vs. masonry. A good deal of the earlier wall has undoubtedly disappeared, and from century to century much of the structure was repaired or entirely rebuilt. SWINBURNE'S POEM

He Writes Discriptive Verse for the North American Ravicw.

Very many years have passed since the pages of the North American Review were lightened by verse, and perhaps the most significant and the most convincing proof which the new editor has given of his determination to extend the range of our oldest periodical is his publication in the July number of one of the mose remarkable poems that have been written in the English language since the death of Tennyson. The poem is from the pen of Algernon C. Swinburne, is entitled "A Channel Passage 1855," and describes a storm in the course of a voyage between Calais and Dover. It is full of Mr. Swinburne's characteristic fire, and is marked by the boldness of imagery and by the musical versification which distinguish the best works of that singer of surpassing power. It contains thir-teen stanzas of six lines each. We give below the first two stanzas, and the last:

"Forth from Calais, at dawn of night, when sunset summer on autumn

Fared the steamer, alert and loud, through seas whence only the sun was gone;

Soft and sweet as the sky they smiled, and bade man welcome; a dim, sweet hour Gleamed and whispered in wind and sea, and heaven was fair as a field in flower, Stars fulfilled the desire of the darkling world, as with music: the star-bright air Made the face of the sea, if aught may make the face of the sea more fair. 'Whence came change? Was the sweet night weary of rest? What anguish awoke in the dark?

Sudden, sublime, the strong storm spoke; we heard the thunders as hounds that bark; Lovelier, if aught may be lovelier, than stars, we saw the lightnings exalt the sky. Living and lustrous and rapturous as love that is born but to quicken and lighten and die.

Heaven's own heart, at its highest of delight, found utterance in music and semblance in fire; Thunder on thunder exulted, rejoicing to live and to satiate the ni desire. "The might of the night subsidea, the tyranny kindled in darkness fell; And the sea and the sky put off them the rapture and radiance of heaven and of hell; The waters, heaving and hungering at heart made way, and were wellnigh fain For the ship that had fought them, and wrestled, and reveled in labor, to cease from her pain: And an end was made of it; only remembrance endures of the glad loud strife. And the sense that a picture so royal

JESSAMINE.

Roy liked to hear her talk. Her girlish prattle was more charming to him than the profoundest disquisitions of schotars, or the brilliant repartee of literary coteries. Aware of this, and that part of her nursely duty was to amuse the patient; ignorant that his heart was leaping with a new-born hope, so sweet and sudden that his head whirled dizzily under its influence, and the world took on rarest robes of beauty, she rambled on, her eyes bent upon the driving fleeces with-She had never been handsomer than now. Every trace of the shock that had prostrated nervous forces and reason, three months before, was gone from figure and countenance, while she though, only of gratifying her companion and her own fancy for a wild winter day. Not dreaming of the impassioned gaze that dwelt upon her, she stood in an attitude of careless grace, a half smile playing about her mouth.
"As she used to stand in the oriel at sunset," thought Roy, with an unbeard sigh. "Is all that, then,

"The tender grace of a day that is

Can it 'never come back to me'?" "I can think how Old Windbeam would wrap this mantle about his head and shoulders," resumed Jessie, more softly. "How blackly the pines show against his sides! The meadows are an immense meringue; Willow Creek is frozen and invisible under the snow -so tightly locked within its banks that its greans can be heard, in the pauses of the storm, all the way to the personage. I used to lie awake on sharp frosty nights, and hear the rum-ble of the imprisoned air running all the way from the upper bridge down to the falls. The holly berries on the tree by the front porch peep out saucily from the little woolly piles that collect upon the spikes and leaves; the churchyard is level from fence to fence

With the cry she sank down upon a low seat, weeping as from the depths riven heart.

"Under the snow! under the snow!" she reiterated, in a transport of dis-tress. "I cannot bear to think of it!" "Come to me, dear Jessie!" said Fordham, in gentle command. He hardly expected that she would obey, but she did, groping her way by reason of the blinding tears, and sobbing inrestrainedly. He had not seen her

She had stifled her sobs, but her head was still bowed, and her frame heaved in the ground-swell of the passing

"For a little while! Out of our sight!" he repeated, thoughtfully, longingly. "We shall be together—all of us—very soon. Did you ever ask yourself if you would be able to await the call of the Master at your appointed time? Ever imagine what a crushing load mortaltty and its ills would be to you, if 'while in the body pent,' you could be a witmess of the blessedness of those who are 'for ever with the Lord'? Dear child! The Father indeed leads us as wisely as lovingly!"

The expression of his religious faith and experience never sounded like cant, even in the ears of the scoffer. It was a part of his life. His utterances were fearless, simple, fervent, enforcing respect for their author, although the listener might not be in sympathy with their spirit. Jessie ceased to weep or sigh while he talked; presently showed her tear-stained face, tremulous with sad smiles, and laid her hand timidly upon his.

Thank you! Every word is a drop of comfort. But so much talking is bad for your throat, and the fever will return if you are agitated. It was childish and selfish in me to give way as I did. in dread of my displeasure or criticism. Won't you be candid and tell me why this is so? Am I a very cruel task-master? Do you not believe me when I say that I desire no other earthly good as I do to make you contented nappy, if that can be?"

"I do believe it! I should be slow to see and to be convinced if I did not," began Jessie, the truth trembling upon her tongue. The temptation to unbosom her tongue. The temptation to unbosom herself without fear and reserve was very strong. "But I feel myself to be unworthy of your regard, and the goodness you show me. A perverse fit, one of her spoiled-

"She wanted to make brown gravy soup, and roast a fat duck for your dinner, with mince pie—'to leave a nice taste in his mouth, ma'am.' And she persists in the belief that a gargle of red-pepper tea, with mustard draughts upon your feet, and a cayenne poultice about your throat 'would pull you through' when doctors' stuff fails. As to society, your cousin, or maybe Dr. Baxter, would have come in to cheer you up. "I have not needed to be cheered up since I saw the first glimpse of your face this morning," answered Roy, unguardedly. "He seems perfectly satisfied with wife and house," returned Jessie, dr.ly. 'And the marriage was centainly one of preference on Miss Sanford's part. Not that I admire or like her, and I know her better than you do. But I am persuaded we waste our pity when we expend it on either of them." They chatted, then, on various matters in the familiar style in which their conversation was generally carried on, until the day closing in about them, the fire spread a mellow radiance over the area immediately around it; the white bed and the noble head laid high on the pillows; upon Jessie's earnest face and crown of raven hair. It was the hour and the scene for the confidential talk of husband and wife, the outpouring of true soul to true; the only unrestrained heart-communion this side the land where subterfuge and disguise are unknown; speech as far more excellent and satisfying than the language of unwedded lovers as the perfume from the unfolded lily surpasses that which steals from the bud.

Between these two love was neither named nor hinted at. The wife's hands lay crossed upon her knees, and the husband did not offer to hold or touch them or stroke the beautiful hair with which the betrothed had toyed unrebuked. It was an anomalous intimacy, the restraints and courtesies of which would have been laughed at as affectations, if the story of them were not totally discredited by the world outside "the great white veil" that shut them into their home-theirs in name and in fact.

Jessie got up, at length, stepping over the carpet without rustle or jar, "the poetry of motion," thought the lookeron, and laid more coals upon the flory mass in the grate. Many-colored flames shot up through and darted, like living serpents, along the pile; the low crackling and hissing of the igniting lumps awoke the cricket in the chimney-corner. Jessie, kneeling on the rug, glanced over her shoulder,

"You don't treat the crickets on your comico envy of my surroundings. I hearth as Gruffand Tackleton boasted wish he had a home, one like this, if that he did, 'crunch 'em, sir!' The History of a Sin

Lot's Choice Discussed in a Discourse by Hugh Black, M.A., of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Abraham from the time when he emigrated from Ur of the Chaldees. There seems to have been a mixture of mo-tives in his mind, partly religious, partly selfish. He believed, for one thing, in his uncle's fortune, and no doubt was impressed with his nobility of character; and with some stirring of heart two heads of the two companies seemingly united as before. Now for the first time nor for the last time in human experience was it found harder to bear prosperity than adversity. When they were poor, uncle and nephew had no difficulty in keeping together and sharing one fortune; but wealth divided them, introduced friction, and ulti-mately forced them to separate. The dividing of the inheritance is responsible for much dividing of hearts.

The difficulty here began, not with the principals, but with their retainers. Before it struck the masters the servants were at war. Jealousy about the best wells for their sheep and herds till Abraham, with his mature wisdom, saw it would be better to avoid all unseemly quarrels by voluntarily separ ating. He took his nephew out to talk about it, and the two went to the top of a hill where an extensive view of the whole surroundings could be had. There is something dramatic about this source, because it meant the drama, ever old, but ever new, when certain human souls make definite choice and fix their destiny. Abraham, with generous disinterestedness, offers Lot his choice. "Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me; if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left." not? to see such high-mindedness met But in this great critical test of Lot's character, he, as no doubt he often had done before, met Abraham's generosity with selfishness. The presence of moral greatness either raises us or dwarfs us; either prompts us to rise to the occasion, or tempts us to take advantage of it. The only way to avoid envy and detraction and malice about any kind of greatness whatever, whatever is to love it, to admire it, to we need have been, ay, smaller and meaner men than we would have been if we had not been brought into contact with the particular form of greatness.

Lot lost his chance of meeting Abraham's generosity with equal generos-All that Lot possessed had come to him from Abraham. He might have said. "No. it is not for me to choose. All I have is thine. Take thy choice and give me what is right." He would have kept his life from being compassed about with many sorrows and have saved his old age from shame. But the world had taken possession of temptation. His imagination there was the desire to be rich. "And Lot lifted up his eyes and beheld the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered everywhere, before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as the garden of the Lord, like the land of Worldly advantage was the first element of his choice. He judged according to the world's judgment, he judged by the eye. From a worldly standpoint he was right. There could be no hesitation between the two al-

Lot had followed the fortunes of weigh with Abraham. It is true that Abraham from the time when he emi- there was to be considered the religious aspect of the question, for on the one side was the notorious godlessness of the people of Sodom, and all the risks involved in that. But that is the kind of risk which a man like Lot takes with an easy mind, or if he does feel twinges of conscience about it he and sincere feeling, he had thrown in his venture with Abraham. They had shared in each other's poverty, and in own convictions and his own habits, each other's hardships, and now they shared in each other's wealth. Driven to Egypt by hunger and want of rain, the best of both worlds. He will go weep before the night of her arrival at the cottage.

"Six here!" he said, designating a "Shared in each of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. He will go they had returned men of substance, in the best of both worlds. to the defilements of the place. And so we read that Lot at first only pitched his tent toward Sodom, facing that way; but when we next hear of him he is in the town, mixed up with its affairs, his daughters married to men of the place, and at the last he is involved morally in its ruin.

It is the old story of the history of sin, step by step from its genesis in its desire to its fruition in the act, and to its end in corruption. A man is tempted when he is drawn away by his own lust and enticed. Then the lust, when it hath conceived, bringeth forth sin, and the sin, when it is fullservants were at war. Jealousy about grown bringeth forth death. It was respective ranks, emulations to secure not for this that Lot had left Ur of the better bargain, crept in. The shep-herds strove to get the best grass and one of his motives had been to be asone of his motives had been to be associated with his uncle in his religious espirations, and in any case he had been long enough with him to be sure that no prospect of worldly advantage could possibly seduce him to have any connection whatever with such a place as Sodom, even to take from it a thread to a shoe-latch. Not for all the wealth of Sodom would he deny the vision of the Highest he had received. And Lot—Bot meant to have no part morally in the place. He only meant to reap the earthly advantage, and possibly, it is true-possibly, let us admit it-possibly not much evident harm could come to himself. His habits were formed, his life was more or less fixed already in its tendency; the risk was very little, indeed, that he would be infected much by the loathsome It is quite like Abraham to do this, sins of the city of the plain. And so, quite in keeping with his noble nature, and so—he shut his eyes to the risks of and we would have expected, would we his children, and likely enough he argued that it was for their good that on Lot's part with equal magnanimity. he made this choice, to make money for them and to advance them in life just as men today will take moral risks for their children, form associates for business purposes, introduce to their families. with an eye to gain, men whom they would otherwise kick out of their houses. Or they will scheme for the worldly advantage of thir children, closing their minds to the risks of contagion deadlier than disease, enin literature, or art, or business, or professional life—the only way to avoid ships that may be socially useful, marrying their daughters to rakes if they will are only rich enough. Or they will be proud of it. Otherwise, we make toil, and labor, and strive, and almost ourselves smaller and meaner men than sin, to amass wealth for their children's sake, giving them no moral and spiritual safeguards such as the very gaining of the wealth has meant them, leaving them wealth which often is but a curse. Is Lot's choice such an unheard-of thing, his reasoning so unknown, and Lot's fate a story of olden time? But then, as now, first and last, in olden and in modern days, this is the reading of the history of men and of nations. They that will be rich, that judge of things from the material standard, that make getting their one aim in life, that allow the world to eat out their hearts, they that will be his heart. Egypt, which had been to rich fall into temptation and a snare, Abraham a dicipline, was to Lot a and many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and inflamed by the sight of wealth beyond perdition. It is the judgment of the apostle and the judgment of history, for it is the judgment of God.

THE CHOICE OF ABRAHAM. And Abraham, the lonely man on the hillside—lonelier now than ever that he had made still another sacrifice—seemed to have made a poor bargain when Lot left him for the fertile plain below. He, too, had made a choice, choked back the craving of his natural self, and elected to make renunciation. But he was blessed with a new revelation of God, and came out with a better nature and a strong-ered with the worldling's withered heart, and enfeebled will, and in the end, shame and ruin, and self-con-tempt, bitterer to drink than blood. This scene on the hilltop is no mere idle drama. It represents the tragic choice which, in one of its numberless forms, comes to every human soul. Amid all the disguises, and amid all the false issues of life, the one line of cleavage runs through all life as it runs through all history. The alterna-tives are but two, the choice of the world or the choice of God, the ma-terial or the spiritual, the self-life or the Christ-life. Now the power of the temptation to Lot is just the power of it to us all; the power of the temptation to Lot was that the good of the one alternative was present, while the good of the other seemed distant. The one could be had at sight, the other only through faith. The one was fact, a good to be grasped at and got here and now; the other was promise, a good that was elusive, something to be believed about, not to be seen and tasted. When Esau is pained and famished with hunger, why should he not give up a far away thing like his birthright for the present good? When the wild passion is in Cain's heart, why should he not give way to the resistless force of it? When the lust kindles in David's eye, why should he not satisfy it when he has the power? When the sound of the silver is in Judas' ear, why should he not get at least that much-thirty pieces of silver—at least, that much gain out of a sinking cause? When Paul was in prison and the company of the missionaries were scattered, and might of Rome barred the way, why should Demas waste his life for an intangible dream? "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world." sighed the apostle.

"THIS PRESENT WORLD." That is the power of the world to Demas, to Lot, to all of us, that it is present. The seduction of the world is that it is here, palpable, to be had now. It presses on the mind, it presses on the senses. To exercise self-control for the sake of a future blessing. to put off a present good for a prospective good, needs strength of character and strength of will, and above all needs faith. In one of its aspects is just self-control; to suffer hardship or pain, or sacrifice now, for some far-off good, to endure the cross now, for the joy set before us,

To stretch a hand through time To catch the far-off interest of tears, tears now, that is the act of faith. But what can a man do that walks by sight? What can he do but just take hold of the things that belong to sight and sense? The world that lures him puts its emphasis on the fact that it is present, it is here, offering a life now, not to be waited for or imagined or dreamed about, but that really admits of sight and sound and touch. By its very nature it appeals to the senses, and by its clamor, its imperious plucking us by the elbow the streets, by dangling its baits before our eyes and having an able advocate of its claims within our own hearts, it forces itself upon us, and will give us no peace until we come to terms with it, submit to it, or subdue it. Ay, faith is the refusal of the small for the sake of the large. Faith will make no decision, take no step merely for worldly motives, for it sees past the immediate good. Why worldly wisdom, it is folly. It is blind grasping, of what is within reach merely.

Why, a man's reach must exceed his or what is heaven for?

It is folly, for any present good, to cut ourselves off from our true life-a good conscience, peace of heart, faith, the vision of God, the hope of glory. It is a fool's bargain, let pothouse moralists prate as they may—it is a fool's bargain to barter these for any mess of pottage, to rake in the dustheap for scraps of treasure, heedless of the golden crown to be had for the looking and the asking.

That was Lot's choice, and that is the choice of every soul who seeks first the world. Demas thought that he was doing a wise thing in leaving Paul. All earthly success seemed lost, but present world-be ye the judges tonig t!—this present world, seductive though it was to him, however much it brought him, whatever he may have got for forsaking Paul, this present world was a poor, a contemptible exchange for the days and the nights with Paul, and a life lived by the Son of God, and his name in anathema! Here is a statement from Mrs. W. J. Barr, 306 Cooper St., Ottawa, Ont., and it's worth the reading:

"For years my life has been made miserable by heart and nerve trouble. My heart used to distress me terribly, I would have short, sharp pains through my heart, and then it would start and beat so hard that I would have to stop whatever I was at and sit down. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills helped me from the first, and I gradually gained health. When I had used four boxes I was completely cured. The heart pains, palpitation, nervousness, etc., have disappeared, and restful sleep and healthy appetite have been restored to me. My whole system is so toned up and invigorated that I can now do a heavy day's work, whereas before I took the pills I could scarcely do anything."

The rescue party consisted of the captain, two residents of Erie Rest, and a score of boys. After an hour's hard work the boat was righted, and bailed out, the fire was relighted and the boat steamed away into the harbor. All the passengers were landed without even a duck-

DREW HIS REVOLVER

James Barrett, formerly a soldier at Wolseley Barracks, was arrested tast evening at Central avenue and Richmond street. A man named Francis, who is a detective in the employ of the street railway company, accused Barrett, of throwing a stone at a street car. Francis struck Barrett a heavy blow on the head with his billy. A small crowd gathered, and Francis, drawing his revolver, backed onto the car, and came down town for assistance. He reported to Chief of Police Williams that there was a mob protecting Barrett. P. C. Egelton returned with Francis and arrested Barrett without any difficulty. Barrett, who was still suffering from the blow on the head, denied having thrown the stone.

Theodore A. Heintzman, the great piano manufacturer, who died yesterday at Toronto Junotion (as announced in last evening's Advertiser), left a family of six children, one of whom is Mrs. Archibald Loughrey, of 312 Hyman street, city. Mr. Loughrey is employed as a checker on the C. P. R. here. The other surviving children are: Mr. Herman Heintzman, Mr. William Heintzman and Mr. George Heintzman, all three members of the firm; Mrs. A. P. Bender, of Tyndall avenue, Park-dale, and Mrs. Charles Schwenker, of Law street, Toronto Junction. Mr. Heintzman was born at Berlin, Prussia, on May 19, 1817. At an early age he was apprenticed to a pianomaker and underwent a most thor-ough training in the art. At the age of 24 Mr. Heintzman completed his first piano, which was then pronounced by musical authorities of note an instrument of unusual merit.

In 1850 he came to America, and shortly afterwards went to Toronto and located a small factory in York street. In 1866 the factory was removed to 117-119 King street west, where the show-rooms of the firm are now located. Nine years ago the firm built a large factory in Toronto Junction, and removed there, where the factory became the principal industry of the terfield, of London, Ont., who judged suburban town. For the past five the poultry exhibit at the recent fair, years the management of the business has been entirely in the hands of Mr. Heintzman's sons.

Mr. Heintzman was one of the most popular business men in the neighborhood of Toronto. He held the respect of every employe in his big factory by his uniformly kind treatment of them, and among his business and social acquaintances he was held in the highest regard. Mr. Heintzman was a leading member of the German Club, and was one of the leaders of the German section of the city. His beautiful residence at Toronto Junction was the scene of many social gatherings of the Germans of Toronto.

Obituary.

MARY ANN EDY.

The death of Mrs. Mary Ann Edy, widow of the late Daniel Edy, and mother of Mr. W. D. Edy, of this city, occurred on Sunday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. S. S. Haight, in Hamilton. Mrs. Edy was in her 89th year. She was born at St. Catharines, Ont., and had spent most of her life at Brantford and at Guelph. In the latter city her father built the first dwelling. The building is still predwelling. The building is still preserved, and is used as the C. P. R. depot. Mrs. Edy was well known throughout Brantford and surrounding country, and was noted for her activity, both physically and mentally, up to the time of her death. She was a patient, earnest Christian woman, and a devoted mother. Her death was peaceful, and was due to pressure of gas on the heart. Mrs. Edy was a widow for some years. Two sons, W. D., of this city, and J. N., of Toronto, formerly of Edy Bros., here, and three daughters, Mrs. Edmunds, of Wallace-burg; Mrs. Wallace Haviland, of Oakland, and Mrs. S. S. Haight, of Hamilton, survive. One brother, Thomas Matthews, of Jackson, Mich., and one sister, Mrs. Townsend, living near Brantford, and a large number of grandchildren are left. Among the latter are the following Lorenzo D., E. Leslie and Frank W., Mrs. F. H. Bogart, Thomas Partridge, Mrs. Boughner and Miss Maud Harpin.
The funeral was held yesterday to Oakland Cemetery, near Brantford.

JAMES J. FOLEY. Numerous friends in Kingston and Montreal, as well as in this city, will be pained to hear of the sudden death of James J. Foley, eldest son of Mr. Michael Foley, No. 231 Grey street. The young man had apparently been in good health until about a week ago, good health until about a week ago, when he showed signs of illness, developing into what appeared to be paralysis, which terminated in his death yesterday. Young Foley was at one time a messenger in the C. P. R. telegraph office, but latterly had been with the John Marchall Company. with the John Marshall Company. He was a bright, promising youth, not yet 18 years of age, and deservedly popular with all who knew him. The funeral takes place at 9 a.m. tomorrow from his father's residence to St. Peter's Cathedral.

Thomas M. Marshall died Monday morning at the residence of his mother, Mrs. W. Leitch, Cunningham avenue, Tilsonburg, in his 25th year. Up till recently he had been engaged in the Globe casket works in London. The funeral will take place from his mother's residence to Greenwood cemetery.

Four Barrels of Sugar Spilled Over the Pavement-Lorry Driver Blames the Non-Union Men in Charge.

Trolley car 98, running at a high rate of speed, crashed into a C. P. R. lorry this morning at about 8:30 o'clock on Richmond street, opposite St. Peter's Cathedral. The lorry was loaded with sugar consigned to A. M. Smith & Co. Four of the barrels were broken, and their contents spilled over the pavement. One of the heavy steel springs at the back of the lorry was broken. The front of the car was crushed in and the motor broken. It was towed into the barn. Non-Union Conductor G. T. Smith was in charge of the car.
Albert Archer, the driver of the lorry, says he was coming south on Richmond street, and there was a union 'bus just ahead of him. The 'bus and the lorry both turned to the right to get out of the way of car 98, which was coming behind them. The 'bus got crowded against a telegraph pole, and there was not room for the lorry to get clear of the track. The car came right on without stopping, resulting in the smash. Archer says the motorman did not even sound his gong, and should have stopped the car. The latter says he reversed the motor and tried to stop

LONDONERS AT INDIANAPOLIS

Praise for the Popular Baritone, Mr. H. R. McDonald-Close of the Epworth League Convention.

Rev. Joseph Edge and Mr. H. Ruthven McDonald returned yesterday from Indianapolis, where they have been attending the International Epworth League convention. Their visit to the "City of Homes" was most delightful. Thirty thousand delegates were present. Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Edge preached in the Hall Street Presbyterian Church, and Mr. McDonald sang. An effort was made to induce Mr. Mc-Donald to remain. Saturday evening he sang in Tomlinson Hall before an audience of ten thousand people, and, referring to this occasion, the Indianapolis Journal of Sunday, July 23, says: "Dr. Livingstone's address was supplemented by a temperance song by Mr. H. R. McDonald, of London, Ont. His method of singing made his song a vertable revival sermon. He was cheered until he sang the last verse again. The audience was wild with delight, and would have heard him again, but he would not continue."

AN ALIBI NOT PROVEN

Frank Cahill Will Be Tried for Assaulting and Robbing Thomas Dart

The preliminary examination of Frank Cahill on the charge of assaulting and robbing Thomas Dart on Adelaide street north on the night of July 15, was concluded before Squires Smyth and Gorwell, of London township, yesterday afternoon. The prisoner was committed for trial. In an effort to establish an alibi, Cahill called a number of witnesses, among them being John McDonald, Angus McDonald, Alfred Hills and "Tip" Warwick. They claimed that, with the exception of a few minutes, Cahill was with them continuously until 11 p.m. on the night of July 15, when he left to go to work at Wade's tile kiln, and that during his brief absence it would be impossible for him to go to the place where the robbery occurred and return to the hotel. Some of the witnesses also said they heard Dart complain at the hotel that he had lost his money. Dart denied this. He alleges that Cahill assaulted and robbed him at 10:30, shortly after he left the hotel to go home.

LOST IDENTITY

Every Fit-Reform Suit has the maker's brand and price sewn in the left breast pocket.

If that brand and price should happen to get CUT, LOST, STRAYED or STOLEN, then the garment ceases to be Fit-Reform, and may be sold at any old price.

We have about two dozen suits which lost their identity last night, and some of them appear in our window today looking for an owner. Most of these unhappy suits are made of Scotch tweed from Scotland and a few are of the best Canadian stock.

Some of this nameless lot are in slender and stout shapes in medium sizes, and some are in normal shapes, large and small sizes.

A few are in pronounced Scotch effects, which win favor every time with Londoners.

There is not a suit in the lot worth less than $22 made to order, nor less than $15 judged by Fit-Reform standards.

Every one of these garments bears our full and unequivocal guarantee and comes under our "money-back-if-dissatisfied" clause.

Our tailors make such alterations in the fit as you request, free of charge, and as cheerfully as if you were paying us the value of the garments instead of the vanishing price.

We have a few pairs of trousers which are equally unfortunate in having lost their labels.

Now who will own these daring exceptions to Fit-Reform?

Take a look in our window.

SIRWILLIAMCROOKES

The English Scientist and the Deeds That Made Him Famous.

Sir William Crooks, the English Scientist, whose success in producing something akin to an absolute vacuum in the course of his experiments in radiometry years ago that rendered the incandescent electric light possibility, is almost as alert and active at sixty-seven as he was at forty. He began serious scientific study when only a boy, the then renowned chemist, Dr. Hofman, being his instructor.

The young man's earliest investigations were along photographic lines, but his first noteworthy achievement was the discovery of a new metal, thallium, which he found in 1861 when only twenty-nine. This led, in 1862, to membership in the celebrated Royal Society, and placed his name on the roll of successful scientists. A little later he devoted much attention to the spectroscope, and still later to rare earths. His eclipse observations, his experiments with disinfectants and his study of the radiometer followed. The radiometer is a glass tube containing a delicately balanced spindle, to which are attached four arms terminating in disks. The tube being virtually exhausted of air, the arms and spindle are made to revolve under the action of light. An ordinary incandescent electric light bulb might be used in radiometric experiments by disconnecting it from the wires and substituting the spindle and arms for the carbon filament. The vacuum used in the Geissler tubes, used in producing the Roentgen ray, is possible only through Crookes method of exhausting the tube of air.

Soon after his work with the radiometer Crooke became interested in electrical il-lumination, and his house in Kensington park gardens was the first to be lighted with incandescant lamps in all London. Prof. Grookes laid the wires for these lamps himself in 1881, and they gave forth practically the same quality of light as Edison's lamps The vacuum in the bulbs was produced exactly as he had produced it in his radiometer, and the carbon filaments used were made by dissolving cellulose in a strong solution of ammonium copper sulphate, drying the solution into sheets and then dissolving out the copper. The hornlike residue serv ed the desired purpose admirably. At last accounts the Crookes filaments, produced in an entirely different way from Edison's, were still doing good service, but the Crookes electric lamps have never come in-to general use. There were two reasons for their failure-first, the financial weakness of the company formed to exploit them, and, second, the action of the courts in pass ing adversely upon the patents.

Sir William Crookes has spent much of his life in the class room as an instructor, has written voluminously on widely diverse scientific subjects and has long been an edi-tor of technical periodicals. Some years ago he made prolonged investigations into certain so-called spiritualistic phenomena. produced in the presence of Anna Eva Fay and other mediums. He seems to have accepted spiritualistic theories with some degree of seriousness, and only last year he published a paper declaring his belief in thought transference. It was he who gave the name "edic force," to the power sup-posed to be developed at "table tipping"
