THE MARCH OF REFORM.

LONDON, April 5.-In the House of Commons today the Irish Land Bill was read a second time without a division. The House passed this evening James Henry Dalziel's motion in favor of second ballots in Parliamentary elections where no candidate receives an absolute majority. The vote was 132 to 72. THE CHINESE FIGHT.

CALCUTTA, April 5.- The first brigade of the British force sent to Chitral is reported to have had an engagement with natives beyond Malakand Pass. The British were advancing to occupy the banks of the Swat River when a considerable body of Doori tribesmen attacked them. The natives fought stubbornly, and eventually tried to rush the British lines, but they were checked by the guides, guards and cavalry, and were forced back with heavy loss. The second brigade has not yet crossed the pass. Its progress has been very slow, as the enemy had torn up and barricaded the road.

WILDE IN JAIL.

LONDON, April 5.-Late in the day application was made at the Bow street police court before Sir John Bridge, the presiding magistrate, for a warrant for Prospects of a Warm Contest in the arrest of Oscar Wilde, and the magistrate granted the application.
Oscar Wilde was arrested at the Cadogan Hotel and taken to Scotland Yard. In an interview this afternoon the Marquis of Queensberry said: "I have sent this message to Wilde. If the country allows you to leave, all the better for the country. But if you take my son with you I will follow wherever you go and shoot you." Before Wilde was taken to his cell the charge indicated by nis testimony in court was read to him. He stood with his hands in his pockets, silent and apparently unconcerned. It is reported that the Criterion Theater, to which "An Ideal Husband" was to be transferred from the Haymarket, declined to put the play on the

FRANCE VS. ENGLAND. PARIS, April 5 .- M. Hanotaux, Minister of Foreign Affairs, spoke in the Senate this evening concerning Sir Edward Grey's statement in the House of Commons last week. The debate in the Commons as to the British and Egyptian sphere of influence in Africa, he said, had astonished him. France opposed decidedly the pretensions of the Royal Niger Company, which aimed to monopolize trade in a vast region. The negotiations as to the territory affected by the company's claims were now in progress.

As to the Upper Nile region, France demanded that England state her claims explicitly. France would reserve her decision and liberty of action pend-ing England's reply. It was advisable to abstain from imprudent statements. France would maintain her plain rights. He preferred, however, not to make any affirmations likely to hinder the present negotiations. He was convinced that when the time of decision should come the two great nations would find means of reconciling their interests with those of civilization and progress. LONDON, April 5 .- The Standard says M. Hanotaux's speech was moderate and courteous, but did not relieve the strain. In some respects it rather accentuates the points of difference. His silence as to the French expedition to the Nile Valley could not have been accidental, though the subject cannot be treated as immaterial. We hope that communications will be resumed speedily, and that the Nile and Niger expeditions, which can only be regarded as barriers to a friendly settlement, will be recalled."

The Times will may tomorrow: acknowledge with pleasure M. Hanotaux's moderation and evident desire to avoid placing obstacles in the way of friendly discussion. We must regret, however, that no corrective was applied to the inflammatory statements

Resulting in the Loss of Nine Lives.

A Large Number of Persons Sustained Serious Injuries.

CALDWELL, O., April 5 .- An accident with fatal results occurred on the Bellaire, Zanesville and Cincinnati Railway early this morning ten miles from this place. Four persons were killed instantly and one seriously injured. The rest of the passengers were able to extricate themselves without severe injury.

Jesse Johns, the fireman, was fatally injured. Nathan Young was rescued from the coach, but he cannot live. The road had been condemned. At a point where the descent is about 45 feet the track makes a small curve. There the rails spread, and the engine fumped the track. The engine and coach went down the embankment, and the rear end of the coach was smashed by the locomotive.

ALTON, Ill., April 5.—This morning, as a long, heavy freight was coming down grade on the Chicago and Alton road, half a mile east of East Alton, the middle of the train bulged out and fifteen cars were piled on top of each other. ### M'CARTHY VS. MONTAGUE.

Haldimand.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy May be Offered the Nomination in Sir H. Tupper's Constituency-Political Notes.

MR. MONTAGUE OPPOSED. CAYUGA, Ont., April 5.—At a mass meeting of McCarthyites held here today to nominate a candidate in op-position to Hon. Dr. Montague, Mr. Jeff McCarthy, a member of Mr. D'Alton McCarthy's firm at Barrie, was the unanimous choice.

PICTOU ORANGEMEN AROUSED. HALIFAX April 5.-A well-authenticated report comes from Pictou that the Orangemen of that county are displeased with Sir Hibbert Tupper, and that they propose offering a nomina-tion to Mr. D'Alton McCarthy. The fact has been established that during the campaign of 1891 Sir Hibbert Tupper explicitly pledged himself to oppose any interference with the Manitoba school system. That pledge secured him the support of nearly 800 Orangemen in Pictou county, and, of course, gave him his election. If they desert him in any considerable numbers now his defeat is very probable. Mr. D. C. Fraser is to meet Sir Hibbert Tupper In Antigonish on Saturday.

A man and a woman were found dead in a room of the Palace Hotel, San Franon Friday. A bullet in the heart had killed the woman, and one in the brain had ended the life of the man. A note left by the woman stated that she and her husband were about to end their lives, and they wished to be buried together. She and Mr. Reta had been married, and as her family had al-ways opposed their marriage they de-cided to die together.

THE WILD FLOWERS OF CANADA. Everybody knew there were beautiful wild flowers in Canada, but only in a general indefinite way. It was when great judges in Europe and America told us the Wild Flowers of Canada were among the finest in the world that people pricked their ears and stood aghast. Now we see there is a wild flower craze in Europe and America, and the Wild Flowers of Canada have come right to the front. We see there are big prizes offered for the boys and girls and men and women who know or who are willing to learn even a percentage of the Wild Flowers of Canada by color, form and blooming time, and just at the right time there is being issued by the publishers of the Montreal Star an elaborate work, in portfolio form, entitled the Wild Flowers of Canada in natural colors and natural size, with full descriptions, history, and the places and times to find the wild flowers in bloom. In the portfolios "Wild Flowers of Canada" there are nearly three hundred plates and the whole will form valuable volumes that cannot be procured in any other way. It is said the first portfolio is to be ready on Satur-April 13, and afterwards weekly till finished. The London dealers in papers, stationery, etc., will be able to procure supplies for a limited time at the special commuted rate of 15 cents each portfolio, containing sixteen flowers. And the Business Well Advanced-Tolls on Toll Roads to be Reduced.

(Special to the "Advertiser.") PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, TO-RONTO, April 5.-Another day of quiet hard work has resulted in a good deal of the Government business being advanced, and in some quarter! of a hundred private bills being advanced stage. The most interesting feature of the proceedings was the evidence at the public accounts committee, where one or two witnesses endeavored to show that the Central Prison industries have a depressing effect upon free labor. Mr. G. C. Taylor, of the firm of Taylor, Scott & Co., stated that through the competition of prison goods they had been obliged to sell below cost, and that they had in consequence reduced their wages 40 per cent. Mr. Taylor further thought that the prices which Messrs. Nelson & Sons pay for Central Prison goods were too low, as they otherwise out the fact that Mr. Taylor's firm had been a financial failure, whereas Messrs. Nelson & Sons are a firm of high stand-

The manager of the Toronto branch of T. B. Eddy's business also testified that his firm had been undersold by the Central Prison goods.

Inspector Noxon gave evidence contradicting the assertions of the two previous witnesses as to the price of materials, and asserted that on broom handles and washboards the prison made a profit, while in small goods they had last year made a loss, owing to the incompetence of the man employed for a while as foreman.

The municipal committee this morning decided to redue tolls on toll roads from 2 cents per mile for a one-horse vehicle to 1 cent, thus reducing tolls on one-horse vehicles by one-half, and on two-horse vehicles by one-half, and on two-horse vehicles by one-third. The road companies fought hard against Mr. Flatt's bill making this change, but the committee was on the side of reduction.

In the House in the course of the evening Sir Oliver Mowat's Law Reform Bill was passed through committee with a few changes of no very great import-

PERRY, O. T., April 6.-Charles Wilson, Charles Moore and Jack Sims, alias "Polka Dot Bill," and two unknown members of the Doolan outlaw gang, rode into Cushing Thursday night and looted the town. Two saloons were demolished and a man was shot by the outlaws, who rode through the place yelling and shooting. Officers gave chase and a fight ensued, in which Sims and Moore were killed, and Town Marshal Reynolds was wounded. The other three bandits were finally captured and landed in jail in this city.

CARPETS.

If our understanding is correct you want to buy from the biggest stocks and at the lowest prices. We began the carpet business by keeping out of the rut into which the trade had got, and maintaining the stock in a most wholesome condition. We mean to lift it higher yet; for there's a trade in carpets possible to the store that'll supply it well, immensely larger than any now existing. We think the way would pay more for them.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt, however, brought to do it lies in the very direction we have taken-

The success of the millinery opening encourages us to continue the display of patterns, hats and bonnets all this week. Last week we wrote strong things and true concerning our

We have the facilities to make and trim, the capital, command and skill to collect smart hats and bonnets, and each day will see some new oddities added to our imported collection of French patterns. A Young Man Convicted of Perjury-Court Closed

WALKERTON, April 5 .- Yesterday's business at the assizes closed with the trial of William Mallough for perjury. At a former trial before the county court judge, Mallough is alleged to have nisled the court by swearing that a certain barndoor could not be seen by a witness. The evidence of this wit-13ess was material to the case at issue, and on the testimony of Mallough the judge dismissed it. It was subsequently alleged that his evidence was untrue, and he was prosecuted for perjury. Some very interesting legal points were iscussed between the Crown counsel. Mr. Lount, and the prisoner's counsel, Mr. O'Connor. Judge Meredith gave in exhaustive review of the law and the evidence in submitting it to the fury, who returned a vergict of guilty. Mrs. Beatschy, charged with ill-using her step-children, and against whom two true bills to that effect were found by the grand jury, was allowed to go on suspended sentence, an arrangement to

A Successful Year's Business for the Canada Life.

Over $2,000,000 of Profits To Be Distributed to Policy-Holders.

The President's Address.

The annual meeting of the Canada Life Assurance Company was held yesterday, when the following report was submitted:

The past year, 1894, being the 48th of the company's history, and the termination of a quinquennial period, when the surplus of five years falls to be ascertained and distributed to the policyholders, the occasion is one of more than usual interest, and the directors are highly gratified in being able to present another record of that continued success which has attended the operations of the company.

The applications for assurance during 1894 were 3,678 for $8,259,501, of which 3,438 for $7,708,801 we re accepted. The sum of $550,700 upon 240 lives which the Board did not consider it advisable to accept, were declined, and 246 for $495,744, not having been carried out, the new business of the year was $7,-2 3,057 of assurances, under 3.192 policles, with a new premium income of $246,3'0 59. The year's addition to the business made the total amount of assurances and bonus additions $66,807,-397 25, upon 22,696 lives, under 30,868 pol-

The total income of the year was $2,661,985 74.

The year's claims by deaths of assured and by payments to assurers under endowment policies which matured during the year, amounted to $651,618 58, under 330 policies, upon 247 lives and after payment of these and of all other outgoings the assets of the company were increased to $15,607,723 49.

As was pointed out five years ago, the gradual fall in the rate of interest obtainable upon satisfactory invest-ments made it prudent and desirable that a lower rate of interest should be assumed for the future than the 4 1-2 per cent upon which legal reserves of ife companies had been based, and to add to the safety and security of the policyholders the 4 1-2 per cent basis has been changed by our company to a future assumption of 4 per cent. that change the company has volun-tarily increased the reserve for its policy obligations at the present time from Whiskard's Price 28c Yard $12,233,399 45 to $13,075,777; thereby setting aside for the further security of its policyholders no less than an additional sum of $842,377 55, and the fact that it has been able to do so without materially affecting the surplus cash bonuses to be paid to the policyholders, is a striking evidence of the sound and satisfactory position occupied by the ompany.

The accompanying statements show that the total assets amount to $15,607,-23 49, and after deduction of all liabilities therefrom there remained a surplus of -2,282,827 43 available for dlistribution, and out of wnich 95 per cent, $2,168,686 06 has been allotted to polic Only 25c Each holders, giving bonus additions at the rate of $20 per annum for each $1,000 assured under ordinary policies, and to endowment policies the equivalent valendowment policies the of $22,50 ue of life bonuses at the rate of $22 50 per annum for each $1,000 assured.

To meet the cases of policies becoming claims by death before next division of surplus in 1900, prospective or intermediate allowances will be made at the rate of a bonus addition of 1 1-4 per cent per annum upon orginary life and endowment systems. Where the surplus is taken otherwise than as bonus addition, the equivalent value of that rate will be allowed. For ordinary endowments maturing by survivance before the next division of surplus in 1900, an allowance therefor will be paid at the rate of the equivalent value of a life bonus addition of 2 per cent per annum.

To the stockholders an allotment of one-twentieth (5 per cent) of the surplus has been made, and the amount is $114,141 37, which enables a bonus of $25 per share to be declined.

As required by the company's charter, the following directors retire by rotation at the present time: John Stuart, Adam Brown and William Hendrie, Esquires, of Hamilton, His Honor Lieut.-Gov. Kirkpatrick of Toronto, and A. P. Ramsay, Esq., of Hamilton, all of whom are eligible for re-election, as is also the Hon. Senator McInnes, of Burlington, who filled the seat of the late Sir Alexander Campbell, K.C.M.G. (Signed) A. G. Ramsay, President.

Gentlemen,-The directors' report and full statements of the financial position of the company being now before you, I beg leave to move its adoption and to say, that while we may esteem ourselves fortunate in that our annual meetings have hitherto afforded us the agreeable duty of continuously reporting the successful progress of the company, the occasion of the present quinquennial division and distribution of the surplus of the past five years is of nor Kirkpatrick, of Toronto; Hon. Sen-

for so much of the company's progress and success.

We again meet you under very favorable and encouraging circumstances, for we are able to report the past year to have been one of advancement and prosperity.

Although the general trade and com merce of this country and of the whole civilized world, in fact, have suffered from an unparalleled shrinkage and de-pression, the business of the Canada Life has during the year been marked by a liberal and solid increase. The new assurances were larger than ever before, and the total business in force at Dec. 31 amounted to $66,807,397, or just about double what it was in 1885. The annual income and assets of the company have also each likewise rather more than doubled since then, the past year's income having been $2,661,985, or over $8,000 per day for every business day in the year. In 1885 the assets were $7,044,944. They now amount to $15,607,- 723, and throwing the figures of these respective heads into tabular form, for better comparison during the past 45 years, they stand as follows: Annual Income. $ 27,838 83,908 133,446 Assurance Date. in Force.

1850. $ 814,193
1855. 2,349,609

1885 4 01,988 Assets. 1865.... ... 6 404 437 1,690,698 2,412,362 1875...... 13,430,037 1880....... 21,547,750 1835...... 34,890,890 835,856 1,336,681

889..... 46,848,870 894..... 66,807,397 2,661,985 15,607,723 As you will have observed by the report of the directors, the death claims of the year were $651,618, a very moderate amount, largely under what was calculated and provided for, and less, I may say, although our risks were larger, than they had been during the previous two years. The result was no doubt, to some extent due to the absence of the severe forms of la grippe and its results, which were so general and so fatal in 1892 and 1893, but it is also an indication of the care exercised in the selection of the lives offered for assurance.

As I mentioned to you at our annual meeting last year, an investigation into the mortality experience, since the commencement of the company's operations in 1847, was in progress, and we are now able to present to you a most interesting detailed publication of its results, and in doing so I would invite your attention to the evidence which is afforded of the very favorable mortality experience which our company has enjoyed during the length-ened period of its 48 years of existence. The various tables which are included in the publication give proof of the salubrity of the climate of Canada and of the northern portion of the United States, to which we have confined our operations. They also show that the expectation of life there is found to be more favorable than has been experienced by the life companies of Great Britain, the United States and Germany, whose mortality tables have been made public. We can hardly be wrong, I think, in attributing some portion of our favorable experience to the careful attention to which I have already alluded as having been constantly given by the board and the management to the selection of the lives offered for assurance.

The gradual fall in the rate of interest obtainable on satisfactory securities, which has been going on for many years back has had the board's anxious consideration. When the company was established in 1847 the rate of interest was then not unreasonably assumed at 6 per cent, and the calculations were then based upon that rate. In 1870, however, the reduction in the rates obtainable upon investments made it prudent to then alter our standard to 5 per cent. Subsequently in 1880, circumstances having again changed, care for the safety and stability of the company and the security of its policy-holders, which are at all times the board's first consideration, led to the rate for our future calculations being reduced to 4 1-2 per cent. which has also, I may say, been the rate adopted by the Government as a reliable basis for the calculations of the reserves which must be held for all ascontinued as the standard required by 1890, anticipating a continuance of difficulty in finding safe investments difficulty in finding safe investments at as good rates as we had been obtaining it was deemed prudent to still "As a follower of the Lord Jesus to further add to the company's strength by making a provision towards another reduction to the rate of 4 per cent, upon which the calculations of the company's reserves have been based for the past five years, as will be seen by change gives to our policy-holders will be seen by the fact that in place of a 4 1-2 per cent reserve of $12,233,399, we actually hold on a 4 per cent basis $13, 757,777, an additional amount of $842,-

Having, as you are aware, on Dec. 31 last completed five years since the last distribution of surplus, the amount has now to be divided, and it is very gratifying to be able to state that notwithstanding that we have as already explained set aside the large additional reserve of $842,378, there remains the handsome surplus of $2,282,827, enabling us to give our policy-holders a cash re-turn equal to about 25 per cent of all the premiums they have paid during the past five years. It will here be interesting that I mention what has been the surplus allowed to policy-holders during the last 24 years. It was at:

1870.....$ 157,794 1875...... 388,311 880. 670,406 (for 4 2-3 years). This year, $2,168,686, which latter sum would have been $3,-

011,063, had we not changed from the 41-2 per cent basis to that of 4 per cent. Allusion being sometimes made by persons who are not well informed on the subject to the proportions of the surplus allotted to the policy-holders, It may be well that I mention the facts as to these. In 1870 it was 75 per cent

In 1875 it was 75 per cent. In 1880 it was 90 per cent. In 1885 it was 93 1-3 per cent. In 1889 it was 93 1-3 per cent. And this year 95 per cent. In conclusion I would say that it will afford me much pleasure to supply any information or explanations which will be desired, feeling well assured that critical inquiries and explanations will but add to the confidence you may have in the company. The president then moved the adoption of the report, which was seconded by Vice-President F. W. Gates in a short speech.

Other resolutions were spoken to by Messrs. B. E. Walker, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; Major McLaren; His Honor Lieut.-Gov. Kirkpatrick; Wm. Gibson, M.P.; Adam Brown, Esq., and others, while responses were made by Mr. J. W. Marling on behalf of the agents; Dr. J. D. Macdonald, for the medical examiners, and Mr. Warren F. ## A SOCIAL WELCOME

Extended to the New Pastor of Knox Church.

Addresses and Presentation to Rev. W. F. Clark, Interim Moderator, and Elder Andrew Thompson.

A social welcome was given Rev. J. B. Stuart, B.A., the newly-inducted pastor of Knox Church, in the church and school room last night. Tea was served from 6 to 8 o'clock, and although there was a large crowd present, enough good things remained to form the basis of a substantial 5 o'clock tea for the children this afternoon. Rev. W. J. Clark, interim moderator, occupied the chair, and seated on the platform were Rev. M. P. Talling, Rev. Mr. Walker (Baptist), Rev. Thomas Cullen (Methodist), Elder Andrew Thomson and the pastor. Addresses were delivered during the evening by all the visiting clergymen. A pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation of easy chairs to Rev. W. J. Clark and Mr. Thomson. They were accompanied by explanatory addresses, which are appended. It was, in fact, an evening of addresses. The first was one of welcome to the pastor, and was read by Mr. Thomson, as follows:

"The congregation of Knox Church here assembled extends to you a hearty welcome as its newly-inducted pastor. We believe that we have been divinely directed in choosing you as our leader and teacher. We rejoice that the flock, so long without a shepherd, will again be guided and led by one sent to minister to us in holy things. Our pro-longed vacancy, following years of ted us for a better appreciation of the work of the ministry, and has taught us something of the value and worth of a pastor to his people. We assure you that in entering upon your charge in Knox Church you have the hearty sympathy and good-will of the whole congregation, and while there are doubtdifficulties and discouragements to be encountered in every good work, we trust that your labors among us may be full of hope, and cheer, and fruitfulness. Tonight we open our hearts and affections in welcome to you and to your household, and may the tie which has now been formed ever grow dearer and stronger, and with one heart and with one aim may pastor and people go unitedly forward in the promotion of the cause of truth and righteousness in this portion of the Master's vineyard:

'Within these walls may peace abound May all our hearts in one agree, When brethren meet, and Christ is found,

May peace and concord ever be.' "Signed on behalf of the congregation. A. THOMSON, ruling elder;

JOHN MARSHALL, Chairman Board It was with mingled feelings that Mr. Stuart stood before them—feelings of sadness and yet of gladness. He had lately passed through scenes that had caused a great deal of sorrow-separations between pastor and people, which left always deep feelings of regret. He expressed himself as pleased with the hearty welcome, and said that from the tone of the address the vacancy had evidently not been an unmixed evil. They had referred to it as having caused a better understanding of passurance liabilities, and that rate is still toral duties and the labors devolving thereon, and could come more in symthe Insurance Department. 'Rev. W. J. Clark: Dear Sir—The congregation of Knox Church deem it a duty as well as a pleasure to make some recognition of the services which you as interim moderator have rendered the congregation during its prolonged vacancy. You presided over our deliberations with tact and judgment, and invariably gave wise counsel and valuable assistance. You cheerfully responded to every service imposed upon you, and always manifested a hearty willingness to promote to the utmost of your power the best interests of the congregation. We beg to request your acceptance of this gift as a mark of our esteem and as a slight token of our appreciation of your services as interim moderator. Signed on behalf of the congregation, JOHN MARSHALL, chairman board of managers; H.

In the course of this lengthened period you have as convener and secretary of the supply committee been charged with an extensive correspondence; as representative elder you have in our behalf attended all meetings of Presbytery and of the Presbyterial Union in this city. You have conducted or made provision for all congregational and week meetings. You extended courteous and brotherly attention to the many clergymen who occupied our pulpit during the vacancy, and every need of the congregation became the subject of your thoughtful foresight. Your moderate counsel and mature judgment, as well as your knowledge of procedure in church ment, have proved valuable to the congregation in all its deliberations. We are aware that no reward of ours can compare with the satisfaction which you have had in doing the work for its own sake and the sake of Him whom you delight to serve and honor. Yet we have thought it appropriate to request the acceptance of this easy chair as a tributs of our esteem and regard, and as an assurance that the service which you rendered so unobtrusively, and yet so faithfully, was marked and appreciated the surplus of the past live years is of more than usual interest, and I am very glad indeed to see with us so many of our district managers and local representatives to whom we are indebted of directors Mr. A. # Purposely Deceived. The Wolf in Sheep's Clothing.

There are many individuals in Canada who live by their wits, and who take special pride in being able to deceive and mislead the too confiding and unwary. The character of work pursued by these deceivers depends in a large measure upon financial profits, and the laws which hold in check imposters and counterfeiters. Their great aim in life is to make money easily.
In order to deceive and mislead, they copy and use the name of some popular and reputable article in which the utmost confidence is placed. Counterfeiters do not counterfeit bills of some bank that has just closed its doors; neither do imitators copy the names of medicines that have no merit or curing powers.

In various sections of Canada, the copying and imitating fraternity knowing the world-wide popularity of Paine's Celery Compound, have arready put on the market worthless preparations in pill and liquid form, using the word "Celery" and "Compound," thus approaching as nearly as they dare the name of the great life-giver and health-restorer, Panie's Celery Compound.

The proprietors of Paine's Celery Compound do not put up any Celery pills. The virtue of celery in connectios with other health-giving agents, is found only in Paine's Celery Com-pound. Paine's Celery Compound has an ally and great helping agent in the form of Wills' English Pilis, samples of which are always furnished free with the Compound. These hints and warnings are given for the benefit of thousands of sick people in Canada. NO SUNDAY STREET CARS.

A good deal of interest has been taken in the electric railway boom that has set in within the past few months, as evidenced by the charters promoted in the Legislature. Those wishing to pre serve Sunday as a day of rest have been exercised over the question of whether or not Sunday street cars will be al-

There will be no Sunday cars in London. In the original bylaw granting a street railway franchise for this city, passed by the City Council on March 8, 1875, it is enacted that: "The said council may require that the cars or other vehicles used shall commence running as early as 6:30 a.m. of each day of the year (Sundays ex-

That bylaw has not been repealed, and its provision is supplemented by a clause in the new agreement with the street railway company, in which it is stipulated that the company shall not run cars on Sunday.

Then as to the General Electric Railway Bill, which will govern all lines running into the country, a clause has been introduced forbidding the operation of these railways on Sunday.

This bill will be considered in committee of the Legislature on Tuesday next, and we hear that an attempt will be made by interested parties to change the clause so as to leave the matter to local option.

Whatever excuse there is for the application of the local option principle in large centers of population, there certainly can be none with regard to electric railways in rural regions, and it is to be hoped that the members of the House will see to it that no change is adopted that will impair the principle now set forth in the Government bill.

CANADA LIFE ASSURANCE

COMPANY. The Canada Life Assurance Company bas entered upon the 49th year of its existence amid the congratulations of many thousands of well-wishers at home as well as abroad. Its annual reports in the past have shown how steady has been the progress of the company and how phenomenally advantageous, especially to insurers, has been its management.

This year's report, submitted at the recent annual meeting of the company at the head offices in Hamilton, is exceptionally important, and once again emphasizes what able management wise economy, and liberal treatment of policyholders can effect. Let us call attention to a few of the salient features set forth in the annual report, to be found is another column, which should be carefully scanned by every reader: The adoption of a 4 per cent rate of interest in place of 4 1-2 per cent, as heretofore, in valuing the policy liabilities, necessitating the transfer of over $840,000 from surplus to reserve fund, and greatly increasing the security and earning power of the company.

The close of a quinquennial period, and the declaration of most satisfactory profits to policyholders, on a 4 per cent basis, the amount of profits to policy holders being over $2,000,000.

perience of the Canada Life, which is the most interesting and important contribution to the annals of life insurance ever issued in this country. The showing made by the Canada Life in this work is a tribute to the carefulness for the interests of the company and its patrons exercised by the president and the medical examiners.

During 1894 the Canada Life did the largest business in its history, proving that depression in business, which seriously affected others, could not retard its constantly increasing prestige. The company starts on another quinquennial stronger than ever. It is an institution of which to be proud.

OUR IMMEDIATE NEED.

The business men of the United States have been rejoicing over a prolonged rainfall which has brought much relief to the wheat growing States in the West. February and March were dry months. The lack of moisture was especially remarked in the wheat and corn belt. A timely snowfall gave some relief in Kansas, but not till the copious rainfall of the last few days were the apprehensions of farmers and business men relieved. Now the crops ook decidedly better.

Canada needs rain more than anything else at the present time. We have had winter weather since the New Year almost without intermission till the last few days. The snowfall has been heavy and the frost penetrating. In the Western Peninsula, the snow is now nearly all gone, but advices from the north state that many of the roads are yet almost impassable. The soft snow, still several feet deep on many parts of the highways, render either sleighing or wheeling most difficult. With a good, warm rain, it would soon be washed away, and the frost would be taken out of the ground. Until it comes trade will be slower than it ought to be at this season and spring building will be delayed. When it does come, we look for a decided improvement in business and in out-door industrial development.

PARTIES IN MANITOBA.

What is to be gained by the newspaper supporters of the men now in power at Ottawa pretending that the Manitoba School law has been endorsed by Premier Greenway and his followers, and opposed by the Conservative Opposition?

The official platform of the Conservatives of Manitoba at the elections of 1892 contained the following plank:"The Opposition declare that they are in favor of a uniform system of public schools for the Province and ready and willing to loyally carry out the present school act."

The measure, with its virtues and its faults, thus has had the endorsation and support of both political parties in Manitoba. To assert differently is to still further carry out the policy of duplicity which is being practiced by the high tax leaders in Ontario and Quebec at the present time.

In Quebec, the remedial order passed at Ottawa is represented to be a command to Manitoba to re-establish separate schools and a pledge that if she does not, the present Government will compel her.

In Ontario the story is told that the remedial order is only a recommendation that in no way binds either the Ministers who made it or their follow-

Graduates of the Western University Receive Their Degrees.

Before a Large Audience at the Collegiate Institute.

Mr. T. J. Flaherty Was the Gold Medalist -Those Who Received Honors-W. D. Sharp's Valedictory.

The annual convocation for the conferring of degrees in medicine to the successful students in the fourth year class at the medical department of the Western University was held in the Collegiate Institute last night. The audience of about 700 included many of London's leading citizens. The ladies, decked in their spring millinery, turned out en masse to see the newly fledged medicos receive their degrees prior to nailing up their shingles. But the flowers which ornamented their hats and bonnets in profusion were not as beautiful as those which decorated the platform and window sills of the room. The platform was surrounded by towering lilies in full bloom, and the windows were laden with sweet-scented geraniums. The proceedings were conducted in a very orderly manner. A large number of the freshmen and second and third year students were bunched in the rear of the room. They did not attempt even to give any of their college songs or shouts, but once or twice they presed the button and rang the electric bell over the door. This happened several times during the address of Rev. E. B. Lanceley. At first no notice of it was taken, but as the interruptions continued, Mr. Lanceley paused, and turning to the corner where the stu-dents were seated, said, "I wish some person would ring that man off." The bell was heard no more. Rev. Canon Smith, registrar of the senate of the university, acted as chairman in the absence of the vice-chancellor, Chief Justice W. R. Meredith. On the platform with him were Dr. Moorehouse, dean of the faculty; Prof. Sherwood, assistant master at the Huron College school; Rev. E. B. Lanceley, Wm. T. McClement, of the Collegiate The announcement in President Ramsay's speech of the completion and publication and publicatio ceedings with a very fervent prayer. Rev. Canon Smith was very mild in his address as chairman. The programme had not stated what he was to talk about, and he announced that it would be about two minutes, way of explanation he said that the convocation was held to confer degrees of medicine and present diplomas to the young men who had done credit to themselves in the examinations. Canon

Smith then called for THE VALEDICTORY.
The valedictory was read by Mr. W.
D. Sharpe. "Four years ago," he said,
"things were much different as regards us than now. Then the doors of the Western Medical School opened to what has since proven to be not numerically but mentally one of the strongest classes that has ever graced her classic halls. But, in fact, at that period no one would have suspected this to be true, even had he, aspiring to prophetic honors, gazed upon us and felt our several and respective bumps, ventured to give his most optimistic opinions to the same long-suffering and offended public upon which we are now foisted as a finished product of one of the most approved and latest appliances not patented, by the way, for transforming the rawest freshman into fullfledged doctors. The dramatis personae of the class has changed considerably. Some have wearled of the way and forsaken the college halls; others have taken hold of the work with a might and main and crowded four years' work into three, and are now legally licensed to dispense both poisonous and harmless drugs, in either murderous or friendly doses, which ever to them seems best." Reference was then made to the changes in the professoriat and the departure of Dr. Weld for the west. The days of quackery and an easy, gullible public were, fortunately for all, rapidy drawing to a premature but senile old age. "We live in an age," senile old age. "We live in an age," said the valedictorian, "not of omnibusses or horse cars—(laughter—but of steam and electricity. The world has changed rapidly in a forward direction. We must march steadily with the tide or sink rapidly into insignificance. Where is the educated man who will meekly submit himself to the medicine man of the aborigines, the jugglery of the Hindoo fakir, or the blatant quackery of the earlier centuries Such an one is not to be found. He knows there is something better in store for him than blisters, bleeding and quart drafts of nauseating mixtures. Unless we can fulfill his expectations, ease his pains and aches scientifically; unless we know more than he himself, our services are not required. We are in his estimation as powerless to intelligently cope with both new and older forms of disease as the physicians of 1,000 years ago. May we ever put our shoulder to the wheel and strive with all our might to use the best of our Goa-given abilities to add one more link to the chain that will forever firmly shackle some disease and render it harmless to all human kind." (Applause.) Dr. McCallum, for the faculty, thanked the valedictorian for his kind words. The faculty regarded the class of 1895 as well qualified to practice as any other in Canada. He hoped that the members of it had resolved to put in the days and nights of the years to come some of the studious bits which they had pursued during their college days. Dr. McCallum spoke of the great charity displayed by the medical profession as the rule, and how it was their duty to serve rich and poor and criminal alike "And," said Dr. McCallum, in directly addressing the graduates, "as far as it is in your power deal righteously and charitably with your confreres. Allow me to express the good wishes of the faculty, and we pray that when the dust of years has marked you out as a veteran in the ranks, the record of your years shall be 'Well done.' " CONFERRING THE DEGREES. The candidates were next sworn in by Dr. Hodge, the oath being administered in Latin while the class was in a standing position with right hands raised and head bowed. Then singly the newly fledged "docs." advanced and were introduced to the chairman in Latin by Dr. Moorhouse. Canon Smith, in presenting the diplomas, addressed the recipients in "the unknown" while they kneeled. The ceremony was pretty and was loudly applauded.

The graduates were T. J. Flaherty, E. Seaborne, J. J. James, W. D. Wiley, S. D. Francis, W. D Sharpe, H. A. Kingsmill, R. Woods, J. Williams, F. J. Deveney, A. L. Peel. Mr. Flaherty was the gold medalist.

First year-Wm. Tillman Campbell, Ardill, Woodburn, Chapelle. Rev. E. B. Lanceley and Prof. Sherwood delivered brilliant addresses to the students, and they were followed by Dr. Moorhouse, who in concluding the proceedings explained the work which had been modestly and unostentatiously carried on by the faculty. There were fourteen professors and eleven lecturers on the staff, and during the term they had given 1,600 lectures and demonstrations. The class which had just graduated was the groundwork of the whole collegiate year. Dr. Moorhouse referred to the oath taken by the graduating class, which, he said, was formulated by Hypocrates, a great physician who lived about 400 years before the Savior. London could never expect to become a great manufacturing or commercial center, but there was one thing it could be, and that was a great educational (Applause.) PLENTY OF MUSIC. The London Musical Society's Splendid

London will not lack open air music this year. There will be plenty of it, and the quality promises to reach a higher standard than for some years. Perhaps the leading organization is the London Musical Society's Band, which already comprises 32 members. The nucleus of this is the Grand Opera House orchestra, but several ex-mem bers of the Seventh Battalion Band and other unattached but well known and capable players have enrolled, so that the L. M. S. B. has gathered a very large share of the local musical talent. The members are practicing hard on a batch of the newest music, and will tickle the public ear on the first auspicious occasion. The fact that Mr. Fred L. Evans is the conductor is a guarantee in itself of excellence. If he attains the same sucess with this large organization as he has with the Grand Opera House orchestra the result will be satisfactory indeed. The band includes a diversity of talent and can furnish either brass or string music, so that it is open for orchestral engagements as well. The members will wear on parade a very neat uniform of dark blue, with military caps. The first appearance was at St. Pat-trick's concert, and the praises of all who were there are well expressed in this letter: "London, Ont., April 2, 1895.—Fred L. Evans, President London Musical Society, city: Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you that at the last meeting of the Board of Separate School Trustees the thanks of the said board was unanimously tendered the band of the London Musical Society for their very valuable services in aiding to make the late con-Boyle, Secretary-Treasurer."

At a regular meeting of Council No. 6, P. P. A., held in their rooms in the city of London. on the 4th inst., the following resolutions were read and passed unanimously:

"Resolved, that whereas in the case of the Jesuits' Estates Bill, passed by the Legislature of Quebec, whereby the Roman Catholic Church got $400,000 from the public treasury, the Dominion Government and Parliament declined to allow an appeal to the Privy Council, although the Protestant minority in Quebec had placed a certified check for a large amount in the hands of the proper official to cover the expenses of the appeal, on the ground that it would be an interference with the rights of the Province of Quebec;

"And whereas the Province of Manitoba, through its Legislature, passed a school act, and the Roman Catholic minority appealed against said act, and the Government of Canada and the Parliament thereof allowed said appeal to proceed, and paid the costs of the said Roman Caholic appellants, and the Privy Council decided in favor of Province of Manitoba; and, further, another appeal was made on behalf of the Roman Catholic minority of Manitoba, and the Privy Council decided that the Government and Parliament of Canada could pass a remedial act for the benefit of the Roman Catholic minority of Manitoba, and the Dominion Government, under cover of said decision, have virtually told the Government and Legislature of the Provernment and Legislature of the Provernment and locked him up like an ordon Asylum Cricket Club for the past ince of Manitoba that unless they pass a remedial act acceptable to the Roman Catholic minority, they, the Dominion Government, will do so.

"And whereas the said Government of the Dominion of Canada as aforesaid declined to allow an appeal, at their own expense, of the Protestant minority of Quebec in the matter of the Jesuits' Estates Bill; and the Province of New Brunswick, although successful by the Brunswick of the Bru ful, had to pay the costs of the appeal in the case of its School Act; and that numerous amendments to the Ontario school laws have been enacted since Confederation in the interests of the Roman Catholic Church; and that, in all cases of appeal, when said appellants were the Roman Catholic Church, or parties acting therefor, the costs of said appellants were paid by the whole of the people of Canada; and whereas the Protestant minority in Bathurst, New Brunswick, are laboring under disabilities, and no remedial order has been made on their behalf: "Be it therefore resolved that we, the members of Council No. 6, P. P. A., call upon all parties, irrespective of old party ties or associations, to voe for none who do not pledge themselves to oppose such favorable legislation in the future, and to do all in their power to remove from the law of the land all acts and amendments thereto tending to make the Roman Catholic Church or any other church a state or favored church, and to make the education of the children of Canada a matter wholly under the control of the people, free from the sectarian teaching of any and all denominations;

"And further, that we ask all Protestants and other liberal-minded citizens to give all the moral and material aid in their power to the people of Mani-toba to prevent their just rights being infringed upon and the public schools preserved intact, as they desire them.
"That copies of the above resolutions be sent to the London "Advertiser" and Free Press, the Toronto Globe, Mail and Empire and Sentinel, and Forest Standard with the request for their publication."

Mara's Large Drygoods House. One of the wonders of the Forest City is the mammoch establishment of the Thomas E. Mara Company (Limited), and no visitor has seen the city until he has been shown through this immense retail concern. But to the citizens the greater wonderment in connection with it is its phenomenal growth.

The business was first founded by the present owner's late father a little over three years ago, and from that time until the present it has grown with a rush and bound peculiar to it as far as the history of London is concerned. It has nearly trebled itself in the three years of its existence, and over a year ago it had outgrown the premises in which it had its beginning and another large store adjoining was secured. The two stores were merged into one, and any day in the week it presents a busy hive of industry such as the residents of this of industry such as the residents of this city a decade or two since never dreamed of. But an even more remarkable feature than the rapid growth of the business is the prices at which all staple lines of goods are sold—prices that have made the name of Mara a synonym for cheapness throughout the city and the whole country-side, Mr. Mara is able thus to undersell his competitors because he watches the great market centers-New York, Montreal and Toronto-and visits them every couple of weeks, selecting the latest novelties and newest styles, and paying therefor prompt cash. Wholesalers appreciate a customer who does not ask time, and the discount which he thus receives off net prices enables him to retail his goods at the low figures

WOMAN SUFFRAGE GOES! SALT LAKE, Utah, April 5.-The question of female suffrage was finally disposed of in the constitutional convention today. By a vote of 52 to 42 the convention refused to refer the matter to a committee to submit the question in a separate article to the voters. The clause adopting suffrage as part of the constitution was then adopted 75 to 15.

DIED BY THE WAYSIDE.

Sad Death of an Immigrant Woman from Cumberland.

Took Sick on the Train-Bid Good-Bye to Her Children and Afterwards Died at the Hospital.

When the special immigrant train arrived at the Grand Trunk station yesterday afternoon a number of Bernardo Home boys destined to farmers in this district got off. On the train was a family named Cook, consisting of the father, mother, son, daughter and grandchild. They were from Egremont, a market town in West Cumberland, England, about six miles from Whitehaven, and were on their way to Nebraska. The mother stood the voyage fairly well, but on the way up from Halifax the change of climate and irregular meals did not agree with her, and when the train arrived here she was deathly sick. She was taken to the hospital by her husband after taking a fond farewell of her children, who went on without her. The husband remained with his wife all night, and was with her when she died early this morning. Her given name was Margaret, and she is inscribed on the certificate of death as 48 years old and a Methodist, and the cause of death as peritonitis. The grief of the husband in losing his wife by the wayside in a strange country was piti-ful. As Mr. Lawson Cook is a poor man the remains were interred by the city in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The widower continued his journey to Nebraska City, Nebraska, after the funeral. Besides the members of the family who have just come out he has four sons there, who will be waiting for a mother who will not come.

LONDON SHOCKED

By the Wilde Revelations—Oscar Gets No Favors in Jail-An Accomplice Arrested.

NEW YORK, April 6 .- A London special to the Sun says: The career of Oscar Wilde has ended in the blackest infamy. All London is saying it is a pity the miserable creature had not sufficient pluck to blow out his brains before the police seized him and put him behind the bolts to await the punishment for the crimes of which he is already proven guilty. The charge against Wilde is misdemeanor, which is punishable by two years at hard labor, but the grand jury may change the indictment to a more serious offense. He must remain in jail until the trial takes place in May, for the magistrate is certain to refuse to accept bail. The supercilious manner which he maintained while in the witness stand changed at his arrest. He listened quietly to the reading of the warrant. He had been aware for an hour or two that escape was impossible, for detectives had been closely following him. He refused to say a word to the officers or to others. He asked at the police station for a separate cell, and that his valet be allowed to bring him his portdinary prisoner. It is impossible to describe the sensation the case has created in London. The effect of the exposure and of the exemplary punishment which is sure to follow in Wilde's case will be far-reaching. The police and others are prepared to make fearful revelations.

The Herald's special says: The Marquis of Queensberry is receiving hundreds of congratulatory telegrams and letters. In an interview he said: "I think I have done my duty, not only to my family and myself, but also to the community. It has cost me f1,200, and now if the law of England don't step in I must make my own law. I have acted absolutely and entirely from a sense of duty."

LONDON, April 6.—Oscar Wilde's friend, Taylor, was arrested and taken to the Bow street police station this morning. Oscar Wilde was arraigned before a magistrate this morning. before a magistrate this morning. Charles Parker, 19 years of age, if true, proves the case of the treasury against Wilde. REV. M. E. SIPLE, Whitevale, Ont.—"I had suffered indescribable torture for two years or more, that is at times, from dyspepsia. Fearful pain and load in stomach, pain between shoulders, and sensation as of being pulled right in two, in small of back. I dieted, used patent medicines, and different doctors' medicines, all to no use. Your K. D. C., third dose, completely relieved me, and four bottles, I believe, have cured me. A thousand thanks; I can study, preach, and do my work now with energy and satisfaction, as of

HE WEATHER TO-DAY:

We are nearing summer. As we approach warm weather you will be reminded that you will require seasonable apparel, which, of course, includes Millinery, just as much as Dress Goods and Shoes. Our spring opening was a pleasing success. Never were we better prepared to show our lady patrons the many beautiful articles we have gathered and imported than we were this year. Our spacious departments were crowded each afternoon with ladies whose refined tastes are usually difficult to please, but they were all of one mind, that our display far exceeded their expectations—and they expected much, our former successes being remembered.

MAIN POINTS.

It should always be borne in mind that the leading store carries the leading goods, bought in the leading markets. These are some of our main points. We aim at pleasing our patrons always. We want them to come again. Our Dress Goods Department is stocked to the fullest extent with European novelties, in color, shade and design, and our prices are ruled and regulated by our determination to place at the disposal of our customers the very best article of its kind in Drygoods at the very lowest possible prices. This is the principle that has aided us in building up such a large trade, and after having built it up, of retaining it. We would like every woman in London, married or single, to confident we have the piece of goods that will suit you and quality.

A FALSE ACCUSATION.

Substitution of Inferior Remedies in St. John Strongly Denied.

ST. JOHN, N. B., April 6 .- A report has been circulated in this city to the effect that there has been a systematic attempt on the part of a certain drug-gist to palm off upon his customers an inferior imitation of Dodd's Kidney Pills with the statement that they were equally effective. An investigation has shown, however, that there is no truth in the report, druggists invariably de-claring that the remedy is the best they can sell and that as one purchase of the medicine invariably leads to another, it would be contrary to their own interests to attempt the substitution of anything inferior.

MURDERED THE MINISTER.

A Gang of Robbers-Farmers in Hot Pursuit.

HENNESSEY, Ok., April 6.—Last evening three of the Dover train robbers rode to the house of Rev. Godfrey, a Baptist preacher, and demanded their supper, and after securing it and robbing him of all his money and valuables, took two of the best horses he had. He remonstrated and followed against the will of his family. His body was found by neighbors five miles from his home, riddled with bullets. The farmers have organized a posse of 100 men and are giving close chase. The farmers have sworn to capture the desperadoes if it takes every man in that section to do it. If captured alive they will be strung up to the first tree.

THE SPRINGBANK ELECTRIC RAILWAY AND SUNDAY TRAFFIC.

The clause prohibiting Sunday traffic to the waterworks was expunged from the Springbank bill in committee and a clause inserted making the traffic subject to the general act. Clause 87 of this act deals with the matter in this way:

"1. It shall not be lawful for any company to which this act applies to operate its railway on the Lord's Day. ated, running from any city, town or incorporated village to a distance of more than one mile from the limits

But as this act has not yet been passed, the danger arises in the fact that the clause might finally be thrown out of this bill also.

The worst that could happen in that case would be to give the municipality the right to say whether or not the line shall be operated on Sunday, as there is an understanding between the city and the promoters of the undertaking that in case the clause was amended to allow of Sunday traffic generally (which is not likely) the municipality should have the deciding voice in this

Londoners would never permit Sunday pleasure excursions on this or any other railway, if they have the controlling voice, but it is best that the matter should be settled against Sun-

A SUFFERING ARMY.

Borne Down by a Relentless Foe. The great army of sufferers from various rheumatic conditions joyfully welcome Chase's K. and L. Pills, because the foster parents of their aches and pains are the Kidneys, which, on account of a diseased condition, are unable to relieve the blood of uric acid poison, which is deposited in the joints, producing on the first provocation irritating aches and pains in the bones, joints and muscles. The reason that Chase's Pills relieve and cure is their George's Church, London West, in the wonderful power in restoring degenermorning, and St. James', London ate Kidneys to a perfect and natural South, in the evening.

Meanwhile Stella, with flushed cheeks and rapidly beating heart, was making her way at a very quick pace up the hilly road towards the point which she wished to reach. But she had forgotten all about her destination. She was conscious of nothing but the insult which, as she conceived it, John Hannington had put upon her, and of the desperate upheavel of pride and bitter anger that had taken place within her heart. How dared he bow to her? Did he think that she had taken his repulse so lightly that it was easy and possible for them now to meet as old acquaintances? He must think little of her indeed!

Stella was too young to take such matters calmly! It would have been far better for her to treat Hannington as a casual acquaint ance than to proclaim to all the world that she looked upon him as her enemy. Such an action on her part told her story to a clever woman like Lady Val much more clearly than she or John Hannington ever meant to tell it. But she was unconscious of her mistake. She was in a flaming heat of anger, mortification, and wounded feeling, and felt vindictively glad that she had had the chance of showing him that she no longer wished for his acquaintance. But anger and vindictiveness were not natural to her. Before long her steps slackened, her color fell, her eyes began to mil with tears. She turned aside from the road, and scrambled a little way down the hill-side. The murmer of the Braan below was full and strong in her ears, but she did not notice it. She had forgotten all about her desire to see the Hermitage Falls. She only wanted to get down amongst the trees, to seat herself in the heather and fern, lean her face on her hands, and cry her heart out. And that was what she did. "Oh, John, John! and I loved you so!" [she whispered to herself. "If I only could forget you—for you are not worthy even of my love—but I never, never shall."

"Never," the proverb says, "is a long day." But Stella was thoroughly in earnest. She did not believe that John Hannington could ever be indifferent to her, or that she should ever love any man again.

Absorbed in her reflections, she had not heard the sound of footsteps on the road above the bank on which she sat. There had first been merry voices and steps not far from her; then these had died away. Next came a tall man of handsome face and stately bearing. He looked round him with a frown upon his brow; he paused in his walk several times, and when he saw Stella halfway down the hillside, he made a step sideways, as if to turn in her direction and address her. But a second glance caused him to change his mind. Her slender figure in its closely-fitting black dress, had nothing remarkable about it; even the knot of golden hair, in which the sunbeams seemed to be imprisoned, beneath her black hat, did not attract his attention very much, but as he looked, it became clear to him from the movement of her shoulders that the girl, wheover she was, was sobbing uncontrollably; that the crouching attitude was that of grief, and that the collie who stood beside her was wagging his tail and trying ito lick her face in that sympathy with sorrow which intelligent animals often show towards their masters and their friends. The gentleman turned hastily away, thankful that he had not intruded on her solitude. When he had gone some little way, some feeling of remorse took possession of him. Ought he to have asked her if she wanted assistance of any kind-if she were ill or in pain?

"Pooh," he thought to himself, as he strode on again, "my wits must be wandering, to make me think of such a thing. A woman's tears! They come easily enough, and mean little enough heaven knows! She has had a quarrel with her lover, perhaps; or her vanity has been wounded, or she is hysterical over the death of her canary bird; or"-a softer mood coming over him-"she is grieving over a friend's death, poor soul; and nobody can help her but God. She wears a black dress; mother or father dead, perhaps. A sad lot for the young!" and he heaved a sigh, as if there were some personal reference in the words. "She may not be young, by the bye. I forgot that!" he continued, with a half smile. "She has hair like that girl on board the Britannia last summer - curiously brilliant, without a touch of red in it. As Rossetti says-

Her hair that lay along her back, A commouplace young person, probably, hair the only point of resemblance to 'the blessed Damozel' of the poem. But, of course, this girl is not the same. I wonder where those children have got to by this time? It is natural, I suppose, that as I am an old fogey, they should give me the slip. Hark! what was that?"

It was a shriek-clear, piercing and intense. On the still autumn air sounds were carried to considerable distances. This ery came from the vicinity of the water-of that the gentleman was sure. It was followed by an answering shout, meant to be reassuring, but dying away in a quiver of alarm. And then came another scream, unmistakably in a girl's voice.

"Molly!" cried the gentleman in the road. "Not in the water, I trust! God help us, if

He rushed down the hillside, tearing his way with considerable rapidity through clumps of gorse and bracken and between the young stems of the undergrowths, towards the place from which he had heard the cry. The roaring of the water sounded louder and louder in his ear as he drew closer to the bank. It was a difficult thing to get quickly to the water's edge, for the hillside was steep and slippery. He was below the fall, which poured over the rocks with the vehemence of a stream in spate, its yellow foam scattering drops far and wide, its volume increased threefold by the recent storms. A story crossed the man's mind as he made his way down the hill-so encumbered by the wild undergrowth that he could scarcely see what was happening until he was close upon the water—of a child's slip into the whirling, swirling pool at the foot of the Hermitage Falls. No rescue had been of the Hermitage Falls. No rescue had been possible, and the child's body had been picked up, bruised and battered, in smooth water further down. He shuddered at the thought, as he brushed aside the branches and stood by the water's edge. What did

CHAPTER VIII. A girl of fifteen years old-his own daughter Molly, as he was very well aware-had rashly made her way from boulder to boulder until she stood close to the deep pool which was well known to be the most dangerous spot in the swiftly rushing river. Evidently her nerve had given way at this point; the broken branch of a rowan tree just above showed that she had clutched at it, and that it had snapped in her hand; the fragements of a stick which she had used as a sort of alpenstock were already whirling down the stream. She could not go forward; she was afraid to go back. Her body was half poised over the stream; it swayed a little, as if she were dizzy, and another frightened scream came from her white lips. Meanwhile a youth, somewhat older than herself, was hurrying across the bridge from the other side, and calling to her to be careful-not to move until he came to her help -not to lose her head. It was very plain that she had lost it already. Another moment without help and she would have fallen and been dashed against the stones. But help which Molly's father had not looked for was at hand. A slender figure in black, which he had seen already, was standing on the stones and holding out a parasol to the frightened girl. Stella had advanced as far as she could, and had not time to feel alarmed until Molly clutched the parasol handle so violently that she almost lost her own balance. Then for a moment, she did feel a qualm of fear, but she recovered herself instantly.

"Steady!" she said. "Don't jump. Step over; it is not far. There, you are on firmer ground now. Pass me, and get to the

She held Molly's hand until the girl had passed her, but the unlooked-for apparition of her father gave Molly another fright. She started violently, and dragged Stella forward in rather a dangerous way.

"Take care! take care! What are you doing?" said the father. He handed her hastily to the stones near the bank, holding out his other hand at the same time to Stella. It was fortunate that he did so. For Yolly's hasty movement had caused Stella to slip, and although she did not quite fall, one of her feet and part of her dress went into the water. If no one had been holding her, it would have been doubtful whether she could have recovered herself; but as it was, she clung desperately to the strong hand that clasped her own, and was carried rather than led to the safe pathway, where Molly new stood crying. Her brother had arrived panting and white as a sheet with terror. "Are you better? You have not hurt yourself?" said the gentleman, still supporting Stella with his arm.

'Thank you, I am all right; I was not seeing how she was letting that scamp hurt," she answered. Then she looked at Hannington make love to her; her yellow him and he looked at her, and both gave the

"ESELJAYS"

The Advice of One of the Best Authorities as to Their Use.

When the discoverer of Eseljay's Liver Lozenges put this pleasant article of medicine on the market he was under the impression that they would soon become known as "Liver Lozenges," but they have been known to the trade almost from their introduction as "Esel-

Their discoverer could not have anticipated that they would in so short a time become the most successful medicine sold in the drug stores, and yet the testimony of the drug trade, who are in the best position to judge, goes to show that this is the case. Mr. B. A. OLD KENTUCKY" NEXT WED-NESDAY.

The success achieved by the new play, "In Old Kentucky," proves that there is just as good material at hand in our own country for the dramatist as there is abroad, and it also proves that American play-goers will support liber-ally any domestic play that possesses originality enough to merit their support. Any American play which aims to portray the odd characters, customs and incidents peculiar to different parts of this country is worthy of considera-tion and support, and it is gratify-ing to note that "In Old Kentucky" has met with such substantial success. This excellent production will be seen here in its entirely on Wednesday evening. April 10.

ROSE COGHLAN NEXT FRIDAY. A fine presentation of Oscar Wilde's play, "A Woman of No Importance," is promised at the Grand Opera House next Friday evening, by Rose and Chas. Coghlan and their excellent supporting company. The interest aroused by this work of Wilde's is somewhat surprising. In London it attracted remarkable audiences, and the same may be said of New York and Boston, where the papers commented upon the intellectual gatherings. The play is said to be constructed on entirely original lines, being quite free from any furious exhibits. bitions of rage, love scenes and dra-matic climaxes, and yet it is said the interest is sustained throughout, and is often intense. There is, of course, an abundance of epigram. It seems this mode of expression has become natural to Oscar, but in this case many of them act as a boomerang to the man that utters them. Its central character, the woman of no imporance, which is play-ed here by Miss Coghlan, is one of the most unique in the drama. The part has been compared to the "Woman in Scarlet" of Nathaniel Hawthorne, and yet she is of an entirely different mould. Miss Coghlan's interpretation of the part is highly commended, and, judged from a critical standpoint, may be said to be a triumph.

To Fit Hellmuth Ladies' College for a Hospital.

A Long List of Necessary Alterations and Improvements.

The City Hospital Trust met in the City Hall yesterday afternoon to consider the advisability of taking over the Hellmuth Ladies' College for public hospital purposes and to receive a report from Architects Moore & Henry on the condition of the building. The trust has an opportunity of securing the property, which is situated on lots 14, 15 and 16, con. 3, London township, comprising 140 acres of land, for .. 25,000 The locality is high, healthy and well adapted for drainage, and is favorably considered by many. The present city hospital "down by the river" is much too small, and will either have to be vacated or greatly enlarged and improved. At yesterday's meeting Messrs. James Gilmour, Col. Lewis, T. H. Purdom, C. F. Complin, Dr. Balfour and Mr. Fred Henry were present. Mayor Little was absent on city business, and on this account no definite advance was made in the matter. The report and plans were submitted and briefly discussed, and an adjournment was made for a few days. The report read:
"The main building is about 116 feet long and 56 feet wide, with five stories, the basement floor being about level with the ground. There are also connecting buildings for the lavatories and laundry, boilers, fuel, etc. The college was erected in 1869, and is there-fore about 26 years old. It appears to have been well built, and shows only some minor defects, not sufficient to impair it seriously. The roofing is out

"The floors of corridors and certain rooms are of oak of fair quality, but uneven. The pine floors throughout are quire renewal, while the others would need repairing. "The plaster ceilings are very dilapidated, but have in most of the rooms been replaced or covered by wood ceilings. Some of the latter would require renewal for hospital use, while all the remaining plaster cellings must be renewed. The whole building, inside and out, should be repainted.

"The lavatories are well located in an addition adjoining the main building, but the plumbing is of ancient design, and is without adequate ventilation. It will be necessary to remove the plumbing in its entirety and furnish new appliances, besides fitting anew the basement, and raising this wing one story in height to obtain a lavatory for the top floor. The drainage is apparently good,

"The system of heating is steam, but there is evidently a considerable waste of heat. We would suggest placing the apparatus in the main building. The saving in fuel and increased efficiency for heating would warrant this improve-ment. The present method of lighting is by kerosene lamps. We would re-commend placing a small electric light plant in the basement and thus lighting the building by the incandescent system.
"No provision has ever been made for ventilation, which is absolutely necessary in a hospital. This could be done, however, in connection with relaying the floors.

"The building as at present is not large enough to properly accommodate all the patients, nurses, help, etc., in your present hospital, and it will doubtless be necessary to have some better accommodation for private patients in the future, as well as increased room for the public. As an addition is necessary, we propose putting up a separate building large enough to have a public ward for twenty male patients on each floor. This would cost $8,000 if two stories in height.

The postponed inquest on the body of John Flynn, who was found dying in a shed near Shallow Lake, Bruce county, was held the other day before Coroner Allan Cameron and County Crown Attorney McKay. The evidence supported the murder theory, as Flynn was seen near the scene of the fatality with a stranger shortly before his death. He was then in good health. The wounds on the body were caused by wounds on the body were caused by blows from a blunt instrument. In the doctor's opinion the wounds were not sufficient to cause death but they ren-immediate cause of death. The inquest

Booth to be used for the purpose of reforming the pauper and criminal element of England was keenly debated, and it was the sense of the meeting that such a movement should be opposed as detrimental to the best interests of the Do-minion. It was carried by a unanimous vote that "whereas Dr. J. B. Campbell, of the Board of Education, has made an uncalled for and malicious attack upon organized labor, we, the members of L. D., No. 7, Industrial Brotherhood, resent such action, and think Dr. Campbell has over-estimated the importance of his position, and that now he is located in a city he should rise superior to statements unworthy of a cross roads concession and realize that even the unfortunate poor have a right to be heard in their own behalf, and we trust that should the opportunity ever present itself the workingmen of London will show Dr. Campbell their apprecia-tion of his remarks by an intelligent use of the ballot." It was also resolved that this directory is opposed to any attempt to publish the assessment rolls in connection with the voters' list, and believe when the city is so prosperous as to be able to make a guarantee of $500 to bring a regiment from Toronto on May 24, it will be equally able to carry out the mandate of the electors as expressed at the polls. Mr. Samuel Grigg was commended for his good work in connection with the newsboys of the city. It was arranged at the next meeting to have a debate on the question of "Socialism vs. Single Tax."

A special to the "Advertiser" from Toronto says "At a meeting of the officers of the Forty-Eighth Highlanders this (Friday) evening, Windsor was decided upon as the scene of the regiment's outing on the 24th of May."

REAL ESTATE. There was practically nothing doing in the local real estate market during the week, although a number of deals are pending. A prominent dealer ascribes the tardiness to the unsettled condition of the electric railway ques tion, and says that people are waiting to see the franchise finally settled and motion may be brought on again upon the routes agreed upon before buying land. A couple of building permits were issued during the week for work aggregating $6,500—an inside estimate.

'We will have a fair building season.' said a local architect yesterday, "but no boom. A boom is always followed by a collapse. The building trade will be similar to last year, with the addition, of course, of the two Methodist churches. The Free Library building is really last year's work." A. A. Campbell sold lot 3, east side of Waterloo, near Hill, to Hugh Clare. He also disposed of 3 3-4 acres near the Military School to Charles Jackson for $800. MISSION CIRCLES MEET.

The quarterly meeting of the Woman's Mission Circles of the four Baptist churches of the city was held on Thursday afternoon in the South London Church. Mrs. David Mills was in the chair. After devotional exercises, papers were read from the several circles, and encouraging reports from workers in the Telugu field were listened to with interest. Tea was served at 6:39, and at 8 p.m. the pastors oc-cupied the platform, Rev. W. M. Walker in the chair. Short addresses ers in the two new rooms to be opened in heathendom. Music by the choir of the South London Church, with Mrs. Mills at the organ, a quartet by the pastors and a solo by Miss Rendell, of the Adelaide Street Chuch, formed a very pleasing feature of the evening's programme.

CHANGING TEACHERS. At a meeting last night of No. 1 committee of the Board of Education, at which all the members were present, Miss Grieve was appointed to fill the vacancy at Princess avenue school, which was caused by Miss Vining's resignation. The salary will be $325 a year. Two rooms of the Waterloo street south school, now partly occupied as a Presbyterian Sunday school, will be fitted up after the holidays and Misses McNaughton and Sutton placed in charge. Miss O'Brien was transferred from Aberdeen school to Col-borne street as transition teacher. Miss Cullen was placed on the transition staff, and will take Miss Pocock's class at Simcoe street school when Miss Grieve leaves for her new charge. As Mr. May has been called away from Princess avenue on account of sickness, it was decided to send Mr. Bryant, of King street, to take the class and appoint Mr. Beveridge temporarily to King street. A special meeting of the board will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 4:15 to consider the new rules and regulations laid down by the audit

Mrs. Cowan is the mother of Mr. Martin H. F. Cowan, of Caradoc, who on Wednesday evening was married to Miss Mabel Reycraft, daughter of Mr. Thomas Reycraft, of Rectory street. In consequence of her illness Mr. and Mrs. Cowan have been summoned to return at once from Jackson, Mich., where they are spending their honeymoon with relatives. REV. A. E. VERT'S CASE.

The inquiry by the London Presbytery into the case of Rev. A. E. Vert, formerly pastor of the Delaware Church, was concluded Friday. Mr. Vert recently re-cently resigned his charge, and at his own request was granted a certificate to the Montreal Presbytery by the London Presbytery. Subsequently two members of the Presbytery were conversing about Mr. Vert's case, when one said that he (Vert) had got off very lightly. Other reflections on Mr. Vert were made, which led to an investigation. After considerable time spent in hearing evidence, the Presbytery decided that it could take no action further than it had already done. Mr. Vert was therefore admonished and granted his certificate.

A TARANTULA IN HIS COAT SLEEVE.

Charles Reymer, one of the main office force of postal telegraphers, came as near death early yesterday morning, for the second time in the same manner, as he ever will again before he dies. A messenger boy and a Smithfield street fruit dealer were unconsciously in the same danger as Reymer, but did not have such a narrow escape as he. Shortly after midnight Reymer sent tempt he held the poor hogs that were one of the office messengers to a fruit still gazing upward, and would have store on Smithfield, near Diamond street, for a bunch of bananas. When he did he felt something not altogether unfamiliar crawl quickly up the back of his hand and under his coat sleeve, and which sent a cold chill through his frame. Reymer withdrew his hand quickly and shook his arm. A long, dark brown tarantula slid out from beneath his coat sleeve and dropped to the floor. Reymer turned white and fell into a chair. He had just such a narrow call several years ago, and realized the danger he had escaped. The venomous spider did not show much sign of life, and was apparently be-know there is a society having mem-

ROYAL ETIQUETTE IN A BEEHIVE. An article in one of the London weeklies on "American Etiquette" has moved a correspondent of the paper to call attention to the habit prevailing in the bee world that would seem to prove the observance among those little creatures of certain very strict rules of courtesy. "Bees in a hive," declares the writer, "never turn their backs on the queen. The members of her retinue (the ladies in waiting) are ranged dutifully around her, and the same order is maintained. as the queen passes on her way. One of the surest ways of finding the queen the easy task) is to look for a cluster of bees, the various members of which are standing in a circle, their bodies radiating outward, like the spokes of a wheel. A MOTHER PIG'S STRATEGY A Nashville dispatch says: B. J. Loyd, of Franklin county, possesses a sow. Toward the end of last fall this sow, with her litter of young pigs, was turned out in the orchard to pick up a precarious livelihood as best she could from the stray fruit that might drop from the trees. She managed to make a pretty creditable scuffle of it between her gleaning of the fallen fruit and her rather persistent rooting, but there came a time when the fruit ceased to fall with any degree of prodigality, for the simple reason that there was

Now, one day when the season was pretty well spent and the old sow with her steady rooting and her unsatisfied longing for the fruit that had passed was in much the same condition, she chanced to observe on the topmost bough of a tree a big, ripe, red apple. First she made a dash at the trunk of the tree, hoping to shake the apple from the limb, as she had done many a time during the season. But the tree was an old one, and her strength was inadequate to move it. This, no doubt, nonplussed her to a certain extent, but she showed no outward signs of failure. With a persistence worthy a nobler cause, she rushed frantically against the nearest adjoining tree, thinking, no doubt, that she might give it a shake which could be transmitted from limb to limb to its neighbor till the apple was finally dislodged. But it was no go; the apple held on, though its twig did waver a little under the poor sow's repeated actions.

About this time a sprightly game rooster, sporting his first plumes, chanced to find his way into the orchard, and, of course, took possession of it with as lordly an air as if it had been arranged under his immediate jurisdiction and for his especial benefit. Meanwhile the sow began to eye him a little biously. She was familiar enough the feathered tribe to know that had the advantage of her above the markive heath and she had no n native heath, and she had no Minard's Liniment is used by Physici

It was warm weather and the windows were kept with the stood his ground tremblingly, as if he expected "every minute would be the next," as the old woman said. Meanwhile the racket among the hogs was unabating, and the roster's curiosity of the provided by the provided getting the better of his trepidation, he venured a little nearer to ascertain the cause of his commotion. This was the cue for renewed energy on the part of the sow and her dutiful family. Throwing a deal more vigor into her voice, she turned her eyes skyward, whereupon the pigs threw a deal more vigor into their twelve voices and turned their eyes also skyward. This proved too much for the rooster, so he chipped in a lively staccato and turned his eyes skyward. As he did so the gleam of the red apple loomed up beneath the blue and the mystery was solved.

With a preparatory flapping of his glossy wings and a crow that almost failed to quaver, the proud cock mounted the bough and made his way confidently through the leaves to the coveted apple. He clucked and gurgle complacently to himself as he went, showwith all its lusciousness, was down in the midst of the squealing pigs.

The old sow looked up softly as her teeth sunk deep down into the apple, "and winked her other eye."

DOGS IN WAR.

Speaking of animals, you will be interested to learn of another intelligent service to which those splendid animals -dogs-have been trained. A man in Germany has found that they can be taught to help in the work of aiding the wounded in time of battle. ing. These dogs have been put under the same protection and are called Red Cross dogs. Collies are the best for the purpose, that race being especially hardy, faithful and intelligent. One set of them is trained to follow the wounded, carrying across their backs in leather sadle bags made for the purpose and marked with the powerful red cross, the things, bandages, lint, plasters and brandy flask that are first needed when a wounded soling. These dogs have been put under are first needed when a wounded soldier is found. And if a surgeon uses up the supply of a doge before his work is done he sends the clever animal in to hospital headquarters for more, the dog perfectly understanding when the dog perfectly understanding what is expected of him. Another set of these smart dogs is trained for ambulance service, a long, light dog wagon being built for them to draw the wounded man off from the field to the hospital, where he may be cared for.

Surely he must be cool and daring, for he must not miss a wounded and enraged seal, nor must the slightest hitch occur in the line when the prey rushes away with the harpoon. The greatest achievement in the hunter's art was to be able to dispense with bladders, and to let the seal tow the "kaiak" man by his waist. -London Spectator.

"THE DOG FANCIER."

Battle Creek, Mich., asks: 'What is the dog's tail for?' and answers, "To talk with." This reminds us of the answer of a poor German to a rich man who proposed to buy (for his little son) a small dog belonging to the German. "I doesn't want to sell dot dog. I doesn't vant to sell de vag of his tail ven I comes home at night."

A Model Cottage that Can Be Built for $550.

(See this column next Saturday for a model $1,000 suburban home. It is the intention of the "Advertiser" to publish a series of ten articles, illustrating and describing cottages and residences of approved modern styles and arrangement, which may be built for a low or moderate cost.)

(Copyright, 1895.) It is one of the primary principles of political economy that the happiness and prosperity of a country is guaged by the general thrift of the inhabitants and not by the abundance of the few. That would be the model community in which each head of the family owned, in the decisive words of the British statesman, "an acre and a cow," even if not a single individual had much greater possessions than that. "Land-lordism" is responsible for much of the misery which exists in cities, and recent developments in New York show that even a great church corporation can forget the leading precepts of Christianity when dealing with its tenants.

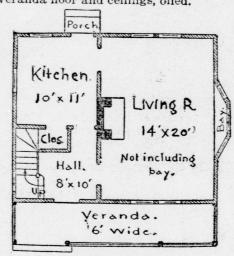

Happily there is a growing disposition in this country for wage-earners to become householders. Every day it is proven possible for a man with shrewd management, prudence and a little selfdenial to build and own a house for himself, with scarcely more of a weekly outlay than he was called upon to expend in rent. A dollar or two more a month for a few years is not difficult to manage, when it means in the end such a neat and attractive home as is

ARCHITECTS NY. This little cottage, which is capable of various modifications to suit individual tastes, can be built, according to the most careful and reliable estimates, for $550. Its width, including bay, 27 feet; depth, including veranda, 27 feet. Height of first story, 8 feet 6 inches; second story, 8 feet. Exterior materials: Foundation, posts or piers; first story, clapboards; bay gables dormers and roofs, Colors: Body, all clapboards and shingles of bay window, terra cotta; trim. Pompeiian red; shingles in gables and sides of dormers treated with burnt sienna and oil; roof shingles, dark red; sashes, bronze green; blinds, terra cotta; veranda floor and ceilings, oiled.

The principal rooms and their sizes, closets, etc., are shown by the floor plans. Open fireplace in the living room and cheerful bay window. Front door glazed handsomely. heats upstairs, economizing the expen diture of coal. A few extra dollars would build a one-story extension at the rear, used as a store-room or woodshed, and in the summer as a laundry, when the heat of the kitchen range would be oppressive.

The finished neatness of this design, its economical arrangement of rooms, and the low cost for which it can be built, appeals directly to the mechanic and laboring man, and now that the objections to the suburbs are fast being removed by the activity of the inventor and the improvements inaugurated by capital, hundreds are filling the long-felt want for a home they can call their own; an ambition always deserving of third of December. The following extracts from a letter just received from his step-daughter, published in Kate Field's Washington, give details of such profound interest that it seems cruel to withhold them from the legions of his admirers. The writer of the letter, Isabella Strong, has for some years been the constant companion of her mother and Mr. Stevenson; she had charge of the househord affairs, and has acted as Stevenson's amanuensis; an artist and writer, she has ever been an invaluable member of that exceptional household, a household whose history as it has come to me from time to time from the hand of this dear and faithful friend, has caused me to associate it forever with the fascinating pages of that delight of my youth, "The Swis Family Robinson."

A book should some day be written giving the inner life of that domestic circle. What that life must have been the reader will perhaps conjecture from the excerpts which follow. Here endeth the lesson in grief past words: "VAILIMA, Dec. 5, 1894.

You will have read in the papers before this reaches you that Louis is dead -but you will not know how beautiful that death was. He had been very weil for a long time, and every morning I hurried through my household work to write for him in "Hermiston." The last day, Dec. 3—and we little thought it was to be his last—he worked steadily till nearly 12, and then walked up and down the room talking to me of his work, of future chapters, of bits of his past life that bore on what he had been writing-as only he could talk.

In the afternoon, as I was writing my letters, I heard him and little Austin on the veranda by his study making a great noise over Austin's French lesson. He was laughing and in the best of spirits, so that later-after 5, yes, nearer 6-when I heard my mother calling for hot water, I was not at all alarmed, and went down stairs quite calmiy to see what was wrong.

"Louis sat in the big red chair in the great hall, lying back unconscious and breathing heavily. Talolo-a Samoan servant—was bringing hot water for his feet; his mother and my mother were chafing his hands, and I ran at once for Lloyd. He was coming over from his cottage, quite cheerfully surveying a wreath he had made for a present to the Consul-General. He at once ran off on our fastest horse for the doctor. and when I went back to the house

Louis was still the same.
"It seems he had been looking on watching my mother make a salad, and was dropping the oil for her with a perfectly steady hand. He suddenly said: "What's that?" or "What a said: "What's that?" or "What a pain!" and put both hands to his head and reeled. Mamma and his favorite boy, Sosimo, caught him and helped him into the big room, and he was never conscious after. We saw that he was dying, though each said to the never mixed them up; and now, as other, 'He is surely better—his pulse is stronger." Talolo and Sosimo knelt before him, chafing his feet and putting them into hot water, and as the room darkened, one by one, all the Samoans on the place crept in silently and sat in a wide semi-circle about him; some fanned him; others waited, kneeling upon one knee, in readiness to receive a message; others, still, ran down the road with lanterns to light the doctor on his approach.

"When the big lamps were lit the first doctor arrived; he was the surgeon of H. M. S. Walleroo. Lloyd met him at the Tivoli Hotel in Apia, jumped off his horse, and the doctor mounted and rode, as he said, as if the horse knew what it was for-and it was Louis' own

When we saw the doctor's face we knew there was no hope. He said we had done right to keep his feet hot and his head cool. All the windows were thrown open, and the soft night air Then, when we were still anxiously trying different remedies, I looked out and saw a twinkling of lanterns at the gate and knew that Lloyd and the other doctor had come-our old friend, Dr. Funk. He ordered in the little brass bedstead from the guest chamber, and it was placed in the middle of the great room. Four of our boys carefully carried him, and he was laid upon the bed; and then the minister, Mr. Clark, came, and we knelt about the bed while he prayed. Louis was still unconscious, and only breathed fainter and at longer intervals, until at last he died at 10 minutes past 8 o'clock.

We sent everybody away. Lloyd and his own Sosimo and I dressed him and laid him out. He didn't look ill. He really looked so quiet and peaceful that one could not cry to see him. We threw the English flag on his bed-the old flag he flew on the Casco-and then the natives were allowed to return.

"It was so strangely silent and peaceful. He lay as though quietly sleeping, with his hands clasped on his breast; the only ring on his fingers was a little old silver one my mother gave him years ago. Do you remember his beautiful hands? so slender and pointed. We sat there, dazed, stunned: it was as if we had been turned to stone. Above the carved, antique wardrobe the bust of Hermes looked down upon us: and over the great iron safe the light fell on the marble bust of his grandfather and brought out in full relief the strong, plain, Scotch features. "And then the swinging doors opened and the Chief of Tangamarono came in with his wife, the first of Louis' Samoan friends. They were barefooted and wore only the lava-lava-a waistcloth. He came forward to where Louis lay, powed low to him, and said slowly, 'Alofa, Tusitala!"-Love to you, Teller of Tales and he laid a fine mat on the foot of the bed; it is a funeral custom of these people and implies the deepest affection and respect. Then Tono came with his family and laid another mat upon the bed, and each said, 'Alofa, Tusitala,' and stepped back and crouched upon the floor; they sat there silently in a great semi-circle, his friends whom he had loved so much; they made no demonstrations of grief; they didn't wall like the Hawaiians, but sat bowed and reverent.

'Sesimo came and knelt by Lloyd and asked if his people might make 'Popey Church'—as he called it—you know five of our men and one of our girls are Catholics; then Sosimo in a beautiful deep voice that trembled with emotion read the prayers for the dead, and the other five chanted the responses. It is just what Louis would have loved!

"December 6. "It has been raining a heavy, tropical black rain almost ever since Louis died. The morning after his death more people came and many flowers were sent; only the flowers sent by Samoans were placed upon his bed. The flag that covered him hardly showed, for the five mats that were arranged one upon the other, showing an edge of each; the flowers were of many colors; melee's Pills are taking the lead against ten other makes which I have in stock."

Robert Louis Stevenson died on the of the scarlet hibiscus and yellow trumpet flowers; at his head was a wreath of white gardenias. That was a cool, clear day; all the windows were open, and we laid the flowers upon the big dining table; there were wreaths that our girls had made; a cross of roses from the Catholic sisters; bouquets from friends, brown and white; and among them a tawdry glazed tin cross, trimmed with white artificial flowers and tied with big bows of cheap white satin ribbon—it was sent by the Samoan wife of a white trader on the

> "I will send you a little book Lloyd and I have been writing, with the help of some of Louis' friends here. We found that it was impossible to write to all who would expect a letter, so we wrote a plain account of the death and burial; asked one friend to describe the Thanksgiving dinner, the last entertainment we gave in Vailima, just a week before he died; another describes the feast he gave the chiefs who, for love of him, built him a road to Apia; to these we have added the Samoan songs that are sung about him, and at the end is the 'Requiem' he wrote himself-and such a comforting one it is to us. Do you remember it? It is in Un-

"Under the clear and starry sky Dig my grave and let me lie. The sky is clear and starry that now shines above him.

The feast above mentioned was given by Stevenson to the chiefs and people who had just completed a road reaching from Vailima to Apia; the road was a testimonial to Stevenson, who had befriended them in time of trouble. A board by the roadside bears this inscription, a legend which they themselves worded:

THE ROAD OF THE LOVING HEART.

"Remembering the great love of his highness, Tusitala, And his loving care when we were in prison and sore distressed, We have prepared him an enduring present,

This road which we have dug to last forever.'

Then follow the names of all those who had a share in that labor of love. "December 26. "Sosimo puts Louis' room in order every morning, dusting and sweeping it, and arranging his papers and blotting pad ready for him, as if he were going to use them as usual—arranging or rearranging where no one disarranges; and every day he places a fresh bunch of white gardenias by the side of his master's bed. Sosimo was always devoted to Louis and jealous of any interference with his rights. He groomed Louis' horse 'Jack,' and it is the sleekest one we have; he polished his spurs and kept his bridle shining; he was so used to Louis' papers that he turn the corner of the veranda, I often see him standing, shading his eyes with his hand, looking up to the sumit of Vaea; what a subject for a picture—the boy's figure standing there would tell its own story of grief and love. "Louis went so suddenlythat the laundress coming out to Vailima the other day brought home his linen; I saw Sosimo with the bundle in his arms, holding it as if it were a baby and crying as if his heart would break.

"We have had visits from many different groups of people; they came to sing a lament for Tusitala. They sit in a semi-circle on the veranda, the poet a little in front of them with a roll of manuscript in his hand; when the song is finished the roll is handed to me for my mother. Some of these songs are very beautiful.

"The Tongans have come again, and we have all been up Vaea to decorate the grave; they adorned it in Tongan fashion; we drank ava, a solemn ceremonial, and they sang their songs. Sosimo, who was with us, planted Maile on the grave, and with his cane-knife cut big crosses in the bark of the trees that line the path to the top of the mountain.

"Oh! I am so thankful to know that I loved him every minute he lived, and told him so. I do not have to regret now that I didn't show him in every way I could that I loved him dearly. I wrote for him day after day; I walked with him and listened always earnestly to his talk-but that was no virtue, as his talk was always animated and interesting, even when it soared beyond my intelligence."

These pages speak for themselves; comment would be impertinence. One of the two clergymen present at the interment on the summit of Vaea, repeated the following prayer which was written by Robert Louis Stevenson and read aloud to his family only the evening before his death:

"We beseech Thee, Lord, to behold us with favor, folk of many families and nations, gathered together in the peace of this roof; weak men and women, subsisting under the covert of thy patience. Be patient still; suffer us yet a while longer-with our broken purposes of good, with our idle endeavors against evil-suffer us a while longer to endure, and-if it may be-help us to do better. Bless to us our extraordinary mercies: if the day come when these must be taken, have us play the man under affliction. Be with our friends; be with ourselves. Go with each of us to rest; if any awake, temper to them the dark hours of watching, and when the day returns to us, our sun and comforter, call us up with morning faces and with morning hearts-eager to labor-eager to be happy, if happiness shall be our portion-and if the day be marked with sorrow-strong to endure it. "We thank Thee and praise Thee, and in the words of Him to whom this day is sacred, close our oblation."

Mr. Lloyd Osbourne says: "No stranger's hand touched him. It was his body servant that interlocked his fingers and arranged his hands in the attitude of prayer. Those who loved him carried him to his last home; even the coffin was the work of an old friend. The grave was dug by his own men."

Text of the Lesson, I Cor. xv, 3-14 (An Easter Lesson)-Memory Verses, 12-14. Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 20-Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

3. "For I delivered unto you, first of all, that which I also received - how that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures." Various sections of this epistle are easily recognized by the words "now concerning" or "now as touching" (chapters vii, 1; viii, 1; xii, 1; xvi, 1). The section in which we find our lesson begins with xii, 1, and concerns the diversities of gifts. which exist in the one body of Christ, the church, showing the supremacy of love and exhorting to be "always abounding in the work of the Lord (xv, 58).

4. "And that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures." The death and burial and resurrection of Christ, which constitute the consummation of His finished work and may be summarized by the phrase "His blood," were plainly foretold and may be readily seen by anointed eyes in Ps. xvi and xxiii, Isa. lviii and else-

5. "And that He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve." On resurrection day He was seen on five different occasionsfirst by Mary Magdalene, then by the other women, after that by the two who walked to Emmaus, also by Peter, and in the evening by the twelve, as they were called, but that evening Thomas was not present, and Judas Iscariot had gone to his own place. See Luke xxiv, 33, 34; John xx, 24. That He should honor Peter with a special appearance, and also with a special message (Mark xvi, 7), should be a matter of special interest to any one who may have, through temptation, wandered away.

6. "After that He was seen of above 500 brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep." This must have been the largest number to which He appeared at one time and may have been in Galilee or on the mount of the ascension, probably the former. If two or three witnesses could establish a matter, such a company ought to make it very sure. We have no record of His ever appearing after the resurrection and before the ascension to any but brethren—that is, believers—and when He comes again, as believers only saw Him ascend, so only believers will meet Him on His way (I Thess. iv, 16, 17).

7. "After that He was seen of James, then of all the apostles." We would not have known of this special appearance to James if Paul had not told us, and it may be that both Peter and James talked with Paul of these special appearings when he saw them during his visit to Jerusalem (Gal. i, 18, 19). There were at least 10 or 11 appearances, including the one at the ascension; then after the ascension He was seen by Stephen and Paul and John. That He rose from the dead and is now at the right hand of the Father is a fact well

8. "And, last of all, He was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time.' This was the last appearance up to Paul's time, for the appearance to John in Patmos was full 30 years later. I wonder why Paul did not mention the appearance to Stephen. Perhaps it was too sore a recollection. Paul speaks of his conversion when the Lord appeared to him as a birth before the time, and also a pattern of those who should hereafter believe (I Tim. i, 16), for the conversion of the nation of Israel will be when they look upon Him at His coming in glory. We are now saved by looking to Him, not upon Him. Compare Isa. xlv, 22, and Zech. xii, 10.

9. "For I am the least of the apostles that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God." Paul's growth in his own estimation was true growth in grace. It was very lowly to call himself "least of the apostles." It was more lowly, at a later period, to speak of himself as "less than the least of all saints" (Eph. iii, 8), but it was lowest of all, at a still later period, to call himself "the chief of sinners" (I Tim. i, 15). This is the work of the Spirit to magnify the Lord in all His loveliness and to increasingly expose the hideousness of the natural man. May we all grow thus. 10. "But by the grace of God I am what I am, and His grace, which was bestowed upon me, was not in vain, but I labored more abundantly than they all, yet not I, but the grace of God, which was with me.' Paul was forever magnifying the grace of God, by which we are saved, in which we stand, which is yet to be more fully re-Rom. v, 2; I Pet. i, 13; I Tim. i, 14). This abundant grace constrained him to abundant labors, but he wholly renounces all thought of his doing anything, and, as in Gal. ii, 20, emphasizes his "not I, but Christ," "not I, but the grace of God." 11. "Therefore, whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed." Whether it was Paul or Apollos or Ce phas, they were only ministers by whom the Lord wrought (I Cor. iii, 5-7), so that the members cannot and must not glory, only in the Lord, for no flesh shall glory in His presence. Let us glory only in the

12. "Now, if Christ be preached that He rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?" The Sadducees did not believe in any resurrection (Luke xx, 27). Some gentiles mocked at the idea (Acts xvii, 32); but, worse still, some professing Christians of our time say that at death we get our resurrection body, and they have no further use for the body that is laid in the grave. Yet it is plainly written that all that are in their graves shall come forth. They that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, and when Jesus rose from the dead many bodies of the saints which slept arose and came out of the graves and went into the holy city and appeared unto many (John v, 28, 29; Dan. xii, 2; Math. xxvii, 52, 53).

13. "But if there be no resurrection of the dead then is Christ not risen." This verse, I think, gives the key to verse 29, which perplexes many. The question which Paul is arguing is, Has Christ risen? Now, all believers were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, but if He is a dead Christ, and not risen, why baptize for the dead? Why baptize any one in the name of a dead Christ?

14. "And if Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." He goes on to add that if Christ be not risen all preachers are false witnesses, and all living believers are still in their sins, and all dead believers have perished. The great fact of the resurrection of Christ is not a truth merely for Easter, but for every Lord's day. His life and death would be of no avail to us had He not risen again, but He is risen (verse 20), and thus with power declared to be the Son of God (Rom. i, 4).

Besides her novels, she contributes to the prominent magazines and to a great variety of other publications. Paine's Celery Compound is found to best supply the great need of studious, sedentary people. Its extensive use by brain workers, both men and women, suffering from sleeplessness, indiges-tion or other effects of a deficient nerve force, shows its ability to feed tired, emaciated, nervous tissues. Nothing else has ever possessed anything like the power of Paine's Celery Compound to restore a healthy nervous tone to the entire body and to thoroughly cleanse the blood. School teachers, professional men, newspaper men, ministers, public officials, men whose daily outlay of vitality because of hard, trying, anxious work, is excessive, find renewed strength, not only of the nerves, but, through their healthy action, of the entire body, in Paine's Celery Compound. Its use shortly dispels headaches, rheumatic pain, dyspepsia, heart trouble, general debility and languor, and all other outward signs of the grave debilitated, suffering from insomnia, mischief that comes from disordered season or fallow time for rest and re- and was irritable and nervous. ## Floral Kints and Helps.

Notes of a Few Novelties for 1895.

Special for the "Citizen and Home Guard."

CRIMSON RAMBLER ROSE. This figures prominently in several catalogues and is described as a new, hardy Japanese climber. It came to this country highly recommended, but has surpassed the highest expectations respecting it by the splendid results it has achieved. It has received the highest honors at the shows in Great Britain. It is a rapid and vigorous grower, and in some cases has attained a height of fifteen feet in one season. The flowers are produced in trusses, some measuring from seven to nine inches in length and five to seven across. As many as 300 blooms have | ried?" been counted on one shoot. The color is a vivid crimson, which remains bright to the end. It is just the thing for a pillar, arch, or trellis, and will satisfy all who try it.

DOUBLE SWEET PEA. This is put forward by Peter Henderson & Co. as a sterling novelty with the reservation that only part of the bloom will come double. Certainly a good double sweet pea would be a great acquisition, but a good strain of the single variety requires a lot of beating. Those who like partiality whether I am 20 or 70?" novelties and are not afraid of disappointment may try it.

NEW COMET ASTORS.

These are certainly an improved variety of this most valuable fall bloomer. In size and beauty of bloom some of them rival many of the Japan- ingly. ese Chrysanthemums, and with care in cultivation they make a most gorgeous autumn display. They are free from ing composed of long, wavy, twisted them most desirable for cutting. Some of the flowers measure as much as four sent out in various colors.

FUCHSIA "TRAILING QUEEN." This is a "tried" novelty and a great success. It is entirely different from all other flowering varieties as it takes the form of a trailing vine. It is thus described, "Very robust and easy to grow, the branches reaching a length of four and five feet, blooming and growing nearly the whole year. The leaves are dark green, ribbed and rayed with red or crimson, which makes them luminous and handsome. Flowers and buds long and graceful, borne in large clusters at the ends of the vines. A good plant will show hundreds of flowers at once, and the effect when suspended in a window is truly glorious." RICINUS ZANZIBARENSIS.

This is a new and much improved variety of the old "Castor Oil plant" and is characterized by extra large and handsome leaves, compact branching growth, forming a perfect pyramid of elegant foliage. The seeds are very large and of a different color beautifully marked and mottled. They have a very pretty effect on the plant. This class of plant makes a splendid center tor a circular bed of sub-tropical plants and is also very handsome on a lawn. PETUNIA "GIANTS OF CALIFORNIA."

This old favorite flower has been much improved of late years and it is a pity to grow the old insignificant varieties when new ones of so much better size, form, and color may be had. This latest variety is truly magnificent. Most of the flowers are exquisitely ruffled or fringed on the edges, and are of enormous dimensions (four to five inches across in some cases), but their great merit lies in the great varieties of colors, markings, blotchings and stripings, in the most grotesque and beautiful combinations; some with deep throats of yellow, white, black, green or maroon running off into intricate veins. There are both single and double varieties of this superb

It consists of a mixture of Jakun and Malay words, but these are curiously altered or reversed; and the natives possibly believe that the divinity of the camphor tree is completely confused. The wisest natural philosophers will tell you that they seem to stand on the threshold alone of knowledge. We have only approached the questions of education, of the healing of crime, of bringing classes together, of capital and labor; we have scarcely touched the vaster questions of international union, of confederated nations. We are, still, like barbarians, unable to settle questions which involve nations and the whole welfare of the human race, except by the ruinous way of war. In the case of our own religion, Christianity itself, after eighteen centuries, and centuries of activity of thought, is still wholly undeveloped. Men talk of its being effete. It has scarcely got out of its stormy and blundering youth; all kinds of old tags of superstition, derived from heathenism and philosophy still cling to it; it cannot as yet get rid of intolerance, and bluster, and narrowness and bigotry, and rigid standards of opinion—the natural sins of youth. It has not got out of its shell yet and moved into the great world, so as to take part in all questions. Its principles have not yet been formulated towards universal action, and applied to social, municipal, stafe, national and international life, as they will be by-and-bye, when it is freed from the curse of churches that claim to be its sole depositories .- Stopford Brooke.

Dominion President W. C. T. U.

When the Dominion W. C. T. U convention was held in London last June, the central figure was the president, Mrs. Ella F. M. Williams, of Montreal. The convention was grand success numerically, spiritually and financially, and while we all unite in giving God the glory, much of the success on the human side was due to the executive ability and tact of the president. During the few days she was among us Mrs. Williams found a very warm place in our hearts and we can scarcely realize that we shall no more on this earth behold her cheerful face or listen to her bright loving words. In her last letter to her "Dear Comrades" she says: "If the pen drops from my fingers some one else will take it up." We know that the Lord's work will go on, though the workers are changed, but the women of London and Ontario will join their Montreal sisters in dropping a tear to the memory of our dear Mrs. Williams.

Mrs. Williams was taken ill last summer, but always endeavored to keep he condition unknown to the workers. She was to have attended the Provincial convention at Cornwall in November, but wrote Mrs. Thornley, of this city, in August, stating that her physician would not allow her to be present. She transacted all the work of the Dominion during her illness, answered all her correspondence either herself or through an assistant and kept up her editorial work.

Finally her condition became such as to cause alarm, and inquiries were made to learn the true state of affairs. But Mrs. Williams always replied that she was thoroughly capable to conduct her business, and spoke words of kindness to all who exhibited an interest in her. The editor of the Woman's Journal wrote, thinking that Mrs. Williams was unfit to conduct her arduous labors, but a reply in verse was sent in which the president pictured in beauti-She never, however men-Three condition. ago she was taken to her bed, and the attendant physician stated that there was no hope of recovery. The following from the Montreal Star will faintly outline a portion of the work to which her life was given from the early age of 12 years:

"The Women's Temperance Union, the friends of temperance, and religious circles in general suffered an irreparable loss yesterday by the death of Mrs. C. T. Williams, of 55 Drummond street, after an illness of many months' duration, the result of an accident sustained about a year ago. The name of Mrs. Williams has always been associated with philanthropic work, and her efforts in this regard have created for her many warm and attached friends, who sympathize deeply with her husband in his affliction. Mrs. Williams, whose maiden name was Dickinson, came of old Puritan stock, and was in direct succession as a temperance worker, her father, the Rev. N. S. Dickinson, of Leminster, Mass., having always taken an intense interest in temperance work. Mrs. Williams, with her husband, came to Montreal in 1874, and a few years afterwards became closely identified with Emmanuel Church, where she became the primary teacher in the Sunday school, gational board of foreign missions. A Big Drink Bill.

According to statistics recently published in the London Times there were consumed in Great Britain during 1894 37,535,615 gallons of spirituous liquors; 28,845,620 gallons of wine and cider, and 1,142,836,632 gallons of beer. The total British drink bill was $693,689,140. Compared with 1893 this return shows that there has been a decrease in the value of wine and spirits consumed amounting to $2,625,-000, while on the other hand the beer bill has been increased by $2,040,000; or a net decrease in the consumption of intoxicants of $585,000. In the previous year the decrease in expenditure for liquors had been about $10,-000,000. In connection with this return some interesting facts are presented. The cost per head for drink is greater in England than in any part of the United Kingdom, amounting as it does to the high annual average of $18 56 per person, or $92 80 for each family of five. Scotland comes next with an average of $14 64, while the people of Ireland are still more abstemious, the average expense to each person there being only $10 24. But although the Englishmen are credited with being the heaviest drinkers the amount of ardent spirits consumed per either of satisfaction or satiety. Although the returns for the past few years indicate that in the mother country temperance reformers have not worked in vain, still when we come to compare the statistics of the liquor traffic for the ten years last past, there does not seem to be any substantial reform in the ever, steadily sank, until death relieved drinking habit of the nation. In 1885 the total drink bill was $616,316,530, Deceased was a graduate of as against $603,689,140 in 1894; or per head $16 28 in 1885, against $17 17 in 1874. a very respectable total of over $6,-

Bishop Fallows, of the Reformed Episcopal Church, has recently opened a "beer saloon" at Chicago for the purpose of promoting the cause of temperance reform. His plan is to provide all the outward marks of an ordinary saloon, minus alcoholic beverages. A non-alcoholic imitation of beer is dispensed, which, according to Bishop Fallows, is a pure brewed extract of hops and malt, which every beerdrinker will declare to be a good, bitter drink. The saloon has the free-lunch counter, the bar, fixtures, cigar-case, and tables for games. Portraits of prominent reformers adorn the walls.

Bishop Fallows hopes to become a formidable competitor of the ordinary saloon-keeper. Large quantities of the non-intoxicating beer are sold daily, according to newspaper reports, and the experiment has thus far been very successful. The Chicago brewers are said to have resolved to make war upon the Home Salon by boycotting and an active member on the congre- the coopers who supply barrels to the

"What has the church or temperance movement to offer in a material way in competition with the saloon? Nothing. I have been investigating the saloon business. I have had men at work finding out all about their methods, and the business principles on which they conduct their business. We propose to apply those principles in the conduct and management of places where we can offer everything that the saloon does in the way of warmth and Mrs. Williams was advanced to the light and a place to sit down, and a place to get something to eat and something to drink, except intoxicants. It is yet to be proved whether the large volume of custom enjoyed by his bogus bar is obtained at the expense of the saloons which are what they pretend to be. We know of no reason why the bishop or other clergy should enter into violent competition with drug stores and candy shops in purveying temperance drinks of undoubted morality but dubious healthfulness. And there is much reason to fear that that is exactly what the Home Salon is doing. If it be really luring mankind from beer to beerette, from rye to red pop, it may be serving a useful purpose, but this is yet to be proved. Until it be more successfully demonstrated, the barkeeping bishop would do well to content himself with his present excellent imitation of a saloon. When some of the regular groggeries in the neighborhood have closed their doors for lack of custom, the church snuggery may begin to boast of victory." The New York World asks, "Is it moral?": "It is said that the non-alcoholic imitation of beer which Bishop Fallows is selling in his Chicago church saloon looks like beer, tastes like beer, foams like beer, and has so many of the other qualities of beer that it is calculated to deceive Hans Breitmann himself.

"This being the case, is it moral?" "Is this reform? If it is, there is reason for believing that Hades will be the most thoroughly reformed place in the universe, for there, according to the version of a sacred poet whose scriptures have the authority of venerable antiquity, men as shadows will indulge the shadows of their unmastered habits, drinking church reform beer and smoking patent reform pipes forbe a tramp or a Chicago broker on earth than the most respected and honored potentate in all sheol.

The Advance (Congreg.) questions in friendly spirit: "The place is christened the 'Home Salon,' suggesting saloon, and it is this spirit of imitation of the saloon in several points whose advisability we question. It is fitted up with a regulation 'bar,' nonintoxicating 'beer' and unfermented 'wine' are among the drinks, cigars are sold, and billiards are among the amusements. All these are evident attempts to attract by imitating as closely as can be done consistently the ordinary saloon; but is this not an attraction that will work both ways? Will not some who have visited the imitation be tempted to see what the genuine is like? Is the use of tobacco something that the church can indulge, not to say encourage? It is said that if this experiment is successful, Bishop of coffee houses we shall rejoice to see them increase. Among thinking people in France the evils of alcoholism are attracting a great deal of attention, and only recently the Academy of Medicine, the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences and the Superior Council of the Public Assistance held a meeting at which the whole subject was gone over very carefully. In the summingup it was found that absinthe is doing just about as much harm as are distilled liquors. Thus, one physician reported that in his practice he had found that out of twenty patients ten were suffering from alcoholism, and that wine and ordinary distilled liquors were responsible for five of these, while absinthe was the cause of the other five. From 1885 to 1892 the amount of absinthe and similar drinks coming under the observation of the excise and other officers of Paris had more than doubled, and each year showed a greater year y increase.

At a conference held in Lyons, France, recently, much time was devoted to the subject of alcoholism. Dr. Rey, head physician of Marseilles madhouse, referred to the extension of the plague in Marseilles, which was long known for its sobriety. The madhouse to which he was attached was sufficient twenty years ago for the four departments of Bouches du Rhone, Var, Gard and Corse, and now it was actually filled by the single arrondissement of Marseilles.

Lord Wriothesley Russell, canon of Windsor, became late in life an abstainer, and in telling a meeting of his change of habit, said, that his reason was that for 40 years as a parish clergyman he had been trying to cure drunkards by getting them to indulge in moderation, but had never once succeeded. An Incident in the Temperance Work of a Great Railroad.

Although railroad corporations have no souls themselves they take a great deal of pains and spend considerable money in looking after the souls of their employes. The motive is purely, coldly practical, but the result is not the less moral. They require that the people in their employ shall walk soberly, although as to whether the righteousness implied shall extend any further they are probably indifferent

All the roads have a detective system for keeping watch of the men in their service who frequent saloons, and the man whose name appears often on this secret record is very liable to lose his position some day, just when-as the poor relation remarks about the missing button on the little boy's trousers—he needs it most. Of all the roads the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, under the management of Mr. St. John, was the most vigilant in this respect.

"We don't say you shall not drink," said one of the officials, who is prominently connected with the temperance department of the Rock Island, to a man who had been summoned before him for the first time, "but we do say that no man who drinks habitually shall work for this company."

The machinery for the surveillance of the men on this road is so thorough that its operation is sometimes almost dramatic. It is easy to understand that the person of convivial tastes could be successfully watched in the smaller cities where divisions terminate, but it seems a rather difficult task to keep track of the goings and comings of a man in the wilderness and the legion The bill providing for an investiga- of alley entrances in Chicago. That every time he took a drink, but like other fatuous mortals he refused to profit by the experience of others. One day the superintendent or the division sent for him.

"Jim," said he, "have you been drinking lately?" "No, sir; not a drop."

"No whisky?"

"No, sir." "Nor beer?"

"No, sir."

"What were you doing in Dunn's saloon at Ninety First and State streets the other day?"

Jim was confused for a moment, and then he said: "I went in there to collect a little bill a man owed me."

"Didn't drink anything?" "No, sir !" with some show of rising indignation at this inquisition.

"Do you recognize that?" inquired the superintendent, drawing a small photograph from his desk.

Jim turned very red, stammered and admitted it was a fairly good likeness of himself. It was a snap shot and represented a man in the act of raising a foaming schooner to his lips.

Jim was told to go and sin-once more-if he wished to lose his job. Six months later he slipped again and on the next run out another man was in charge of his train.

Rule of Conduct for Young Men. Some years ago Prof. Blackie sent me some "Rules of Conduct" for young men. He told me they had guided his own life and had contributed largely to any good work he had been able to achieve. I print them exactly as they come from his pen:

1. Never indulge the notion that which you are to put forth your powers wisdom of life be making a good use of the opportunities given you.

2. We live in a real, and a solid and a truthful world. In such a world only truth, in the long run, can hope to prosper. Therefore avoid lies, mere show and sham and hollow superficiality of all kinds, which is at the best a painted lie. Let whatever you are and whatever you do grow out of a firm root of truth and a strong soil of

3. The nobility of life is work. We live in a working world. The lazy and idle man does not count in the plan of campaign. "My father worketh hitherto and I work." Let that text be enough.

4. Never forget St. Paul's sentence, "Love is the fulfilling of the law." This is the steam of the social machine.

5. But the steam requires regulation. It is regulated by intelligence and moderation. Healthy action is always a balance of forces, and all extremes are dangerous; the excess of a good thing being often more dangerous in its social conse-

one thing at one time." Make clean work, and leave no tags. Allow no delays when you are at a thing; do it and be done with it.

7. Avoid miscellaneous reading. Read nothing that you do not care to remember; and remember nothing that you do not mean to use.

8. Never desire to appear clever and make a show of your talents before men. Be honest, loving, kindly and sympathetic in all you say and do. Cleverness will flow from you naturally, if you have it; and applause will come to you unsought from those who know what to applaud; but the applause of fools is to be shunned.

9. Above all things avoid fault-finding, and a habit of criticism. To see your own faults distinctly will do you good; to scan those of your brother curiously can serve only to foster conceit and to pamper insolence. Learn to look on the good side of all things, and let the evil drop. When you smell the rose learn to forget the thorn Never condemn the conduct of your fellow-mortal till you have put yourself dramatically into his place and taken a full measure of his capacities, his opportunities, and his temptations. Let your rule in reference to your social sentiments be simply this: Pray for the bad, pity the weak, enjoy the good, and reverence both the great and the small, as playing each his part aptly in the divine symphony of the universe. ### Montague and Capulet.

(By May McHenry.) At Christmas-time a woodchopper brought me a present which he took from his pocket wrapped in a red handkerchief. His last present having been a little snake of a beautiful opalescent green color with a forked scarlet tongue that was always very much in evidence, I watched the unfolding of the handkerchief with curiosity mingled with some distrust.

"A mouse!" I exclaimed, as I saw a pointed little nose and a pair of bright beady eyes.

"A squirrel," said my father. "A flying squirrel," announced the chopper. "Not much of a flying squirrel. Why, he hasn't any wings at all !" said young Richard, with his wise air.

The squirrel had no wings, but an expansive skin stretching from fore leg amusing antics as they chased each to hind leg answered the purpose, and served to buoy him up in his long leaps from the tree-tops.

The great difficulty was to find a cage for the frisky little fellow. First we tried a birdcage. him, and fastened him up in a stoutlybuilt wooden box with wire mosquitonetting tacked over the top. The box was placed in a small conservatory opening from the dining-room, and I congratulated myself that my latest Christmas present was safely housed.

The next morning that box was empty. The flying squirrel had at home in a house! gnawed a way through the wire netting. Later in the day he was found curled up among some dead leaves in ing their nightly romping, and would an empty flower-pot.

We left him alone there, placing some nuts near, and for nearly a week the little creature remained in strict seclusion, curled up under his busy tail in the flower-pot. Then he began to venture out at night, running about scrambling up the windows and sometimes taking a flying leap out into the dining-room.

Thinking the dead geranium leaves a poor substitute for the presumably luxurious furnishings of a hole in the with the flying squirrels during the tree, I placed some cotton and some summer? rival families among the flying squirrel.

Our member of the Shakespeare Club named them Montague and Capulet, and for want of anything else so we continued to call them.

There was great suspense and excitement during the time the sharptoothed little creatures under the roof of the conservatory sat and watched each other as two lions on the verge of mortal combat might watch. We feared they might fight it out while we slept. And so it was; the crisis came and passed unnoticed.

One morning the tops of the windows were empty. Mantague and Capulet had disappeared! I looked for scattered fur, bloody footprints, marks of a hard-fought battle, and quite expected to find the mangled corpses of both my lately conquered

What I did find when at last I gently peeped under the cotton in the old flower-pot was this: Two little flying squirrels cozily curled up in the same nest. Montague's forelegs were lovingly laid across Capulet's neck, and the pink tip of Capulet's little nose poked out contentedly from under Montague's shoulder. I replaced the cotton, feeling that I was only an eavesdropper after all. After that the squirrels lived together, apparently well content with each other and with their surroundings. They slept all day in their nest of cotton, and scampered about among the plants and through the house all night. It is the habit of flying squirrels to feed and travel about principally at

They were very shy. Remembering former success in the taming of a gray squirrel, we were disappointed at the difficulty of gaining the confidence of our little pets. They learned to take a nut from my fingers, but would not submit to any familiarity in the way of handling or fondling.

At the approach of strangers they would whisk out of sight and hide among the flower-pots. They were as unsatisfactory as small children in that we were never able to show them off

"before folks." With all their friskiness they did but little damage to the plants among which they lived. It was one of our pleasures to watch their graceful and other over the shelves and flower-stands. After a time they would venture into the dining-room in the evening, neath, with a big brush of a tail, and a around the cornices and over the pictures and tops of the cupboards.

But it was when the house was dark that they had their fun. They would scamper through all the rooms, and chase each other madly up and down the banisters. Then, if you had not shut your bedroom door and fastened a scratching and scampering, and a tip-tip tipping across the carpet. Then desk told that your midnight visitor was eating the latest letter from your dearest friend, or a crash on the bureau left you sure of the destruction of your The woodchopper finally caught favorite perfume bottle. Or there might follow a scrambling up the headboard of the bed, a rush through the air over your head, a thud on the counterpane, and the pat of four little feet galloping away over your recumbent body.

Ignorance of the Bible.

Take this matter of ignorance of the Bible. Recent statistics show that it exists, to an extent inconceivable to any person a generation ago, in college students. And this ignorance is disclosed not in attempted religious instruction, but in the study of the ordinary branches of a literary education in our universities and colleges. The pupils are entirely unable to understand a great mass of allusions in the masterpieces of English poetry and prose. Some of these pupils are victims of the idea that the Bible should not be read by the young, for fear that they will be prejudiced in a religious way before their minds are mature enough to select a religion for themselves. Now, wholly apart from its religious or from its ethical value, the Bible is the one book that no intelligent person who wishes to come into contact with the world of thought and to share the ideas of the great minds of the Christian era can afford to be ignorant of. All modern literature and all art are permeated with it. There is scarcely a great work in the language that can be fully understood and enjoyed without this knowledge, so full is it of allusions and illustrations from the Bible. This is true of fiction, of poetry, of economic and philosophic works, and also of the scientific and even agnostic treatises. It is not at all a question of religion, or theology or dogma, it is a question | some perplexity, saying: of general intelligence. A boy or a girl at college, in the presence of the works sit for either to master, without a fair knowledge of the Bible, is an ignoramus, and is disadvantaged accordingly. It is in itself almost a liberal education, as many great masters in literature have testified. It has so entered into law, literature, thought, the whole modern life of the Christian world, that ignorance of it is a most serious disadvantage to the student. How this is to be overcome in our machine system is a grave question. It results partly from the discontinuance of the use of the Bible in the public schools, but more especially from it is held in the family. In comparison with its position in the family a generation ago, it is now a neglected book. It is neglected as literature. There are several suggestions for reviving interest in it. One of them is already in operation in Sunday-school childhood. A man who is made a representative of a religious organization ought to have a good name as a religious man, in addition to whatever prominence he has before the world from his social or political relations. The outside world is sure as to this thing, even though Christians are sometimes in doubt about it. A good illustration of this is given in a recently-published biography of the late Lord Oxford. He was not prominent as a religious man, but he had a place among the upper classes; and the Norwich Bible Society invited him to be its president. He saw the impropriety of this invitation, and he expressed his opinion of it plainly. The Decadence of the Human Brain.

Brain-development as related to evolution, a paper in popular science, by Hon. G. Hilton Scribner, has for its purpose the removal of a stumbling block in the way of the evolution of man, namely the large cranial capacity of the oldest known human skulls. The most interesting parts of the paper are the materials which he employs to build up his argument, the conclusion of which we do not here purpose to examine. He shows that the savage in the midst of unsubdued nature, is compelled to employ to the utmost the powers of his mind. He must know with accuracy the disposition, traits, habits, methods of defense, elusion, attack, and everything that is knowable about all the lower animals that are co-inhabitants with him. He must have all the knowledge that is of use to him in acquiring a subsistence. about trees, shrubs and generally of the vegetable kingdom. He must know the relations which exist between one species and another. He must be quick in observation, instant in decision and skillful in execution. He cannnot depend wholly upon his experience in one emergency to guide him in another which will be unlike it. Differing from the armed animals, which repeat the same tactics continually and depend upon celerity and force, he must depend upon the resources of his mind. Thus, according to this writer, the demand for this brain work was answered by the increased size, and especially the increased complexity, of the brain.

But civilization, especially within the past 50 years, has discontinued the demand upon brain-activity. The division of labor and automatic machinery have made automatons of men. The artisan feeds a machine, and knows how to feed but one machine. He is not required to think, much less to do emergency thinking, His house, clothing, food and water are handed over to him by machinery. He is not required, nor even permitted, to guard himself against enemies—he must call upon the social machinery for protection. He is not allowed to decide for himself the hours he shall work, the wages for which he shall work, nor even the kind of work that he will do. He therefore has no use for his brain. Less is required of him in the way of thinking than was necessary even for the plantation slave. It follows that the brain of the artisan, and generally iron systems of present employment. that the brains of all these must deteriorate, first in complexity, and second in capacity. Another effect of the disappearance of the necessity for employing the brain, arises from the fact that it has acquired large and varied capacities for work, and it seeks exercise. Hav-Mr. System—Can't help it. I have ing nothing to do, during the period of its decadence, it does mischief. Hence the general unrest, the foolish, and impractical, and really destructive, socialistic and economic theories which find such ready prevalence. The reasoning powers, unused, can not operate logically, or as one would say, with ordinary common sense. Men in masses clamor for policies and so-called principles, which only a little logical thinking would convince them are most injurious to themselves. Incapacitated to think and act for themselves they bea come the victims of unprincipled schemers and of dangerous demagogues. Should the Anarchistic theories prevail, they would speedily become self-exterminative. Should the socialistic theories prevail, they would become herds of human cattle.

The reader as he passes observingly along these conclusions, will be thinking of the other side, the counter propositions, opposed to a view so pessimistic. He will find them in plenty, and we will not now disturb his meditations by suggesting them-but he will find much food for serious thought in the whole subject .- [Chicago Interior.

Life in the Colorado Desert.

Salton had one of the largest salt works on the Pacific coast. All the proprietors had to do was to scrape the salt from the surface of the soil and clean it. Few white men could do the work, as the temperature was sometimes as high as 125° in the shade and 145° in the sun. Says a man who has been there:

"If a man makes the least exertion, perspiration pours from him like water. You cross the room, and your clothes will be wringing wet, yet in ten min. utes all this water has evaporated. To keep yourself alive you are forced to drink water by the gallon. If you have no water your tongue swells, you suffer the torments of the damned, and if water does not reach you in twelve or fourteen hours you will perish miserably. The Indians can stand the heat much longer without water. The custom is to keep a small pebble in the mouth and only take an occasional swallow of water. In this way they will travel 30 or 50 miles in a day, going on a dog-trot. The Indians are very extravagant, and those who work at the salt-mill, though they earn good wages, never have anything. They spend all on canned fruit and other costly articles, as well as on gaudy clothing for themselves and their

Every morning he goes regularly to his task. While visiting a friend at his fine residence in India, a correspondent of a paper saw a large elephant engaged in pumping such a trough full of water. He continues: "In passing I noticed that one of the two tree trunks which supported the trough at either end had rolled from its place, so that the trough, still elevated at one extremity, would begin to empty itself as soon as the water reached the level of the top at the other end, which lay on the ground. Rapid thinking and instantaneous leaping into a pool, 40 feet below the ledge on which he stood, saved the life of a fisherman threatened by a rattlesnake. James H. Budd, the Democratic candidate for governor of California, was the man who leaped, and he told the story to a reporter of the San Francisco Chronicle:

I was up in Calaveras county fishing along the Stanislaus. I had been told of an almost inaccessible pool up the river at the base of the perpendicular cliffs, and fairly alive with trout. I found the place and also found that there was only one way to get a hook

To hear Col. Robert G. Ingersoll's nostics, the 'haters of God,' are always public addresses on the subject of re- in full force when he speaks. The ligion characterized as "blasphemous" is nothing new. In fact it would be ing along the edge of the ditch, and the rather difficult to say anything quite poor blinded crowd come tumbling new by way of denunciation of Col. Ingersoll, for he has from time to time received the critical attentious of every style of writer, from the scholarly and polite controversialist down to the coarse lampoonist. Nevertheless, the Rev. William Ashmore contributes to the Christian Inquirer (Baptist) a few remarks concerning the colonel which are spirited enough to freshly arouse interest. Referring to Col. Ingersoll's latest public lecture in New York, Mr. Ashmore replies:

"Such an audience, gathered to hear such a man, in such a place, on such a subject, was a pitiable sight even for New York city. That it was blaspnemy gone to seed was about all expected, but was something else besides that—it was coarseness and vulgarity and low buffoonery gone mad. As a buffoon on that night Col. Ingersoll outdid himself. For when a man starts out to deal with some sober, ponderous and momentous question, people expect him to have something serious to offer, and to try at least, to shed a little light or a dark place. When he tails utterly in that, and has nothing to exhibit but the jokes and antics of a clown exhibiting for 50 cents a head, then as a clown people will rate him."

Mr. Ashmore adjures as to think of this matter, reminding us that "these problems of human destiny are serious questions," that they have appealed to the sober thought of truly wise men in all ages, and that "none but a fool seeks to make sport of them." He points to the ancient philosophers-Plato, Socrates, Aristotle, Demosthenes, Cicero, Marcus Aurelius and others-who have dealt with these subjects in the most dignified thoughtfulness. He cites great heathen leaders like Zoroaster, Sakyamuni, Confucius and Mencius, who faced these awful problems, but always soberly seriously, and anxiosly, even when most mistakenly. He continues:

"They never turned mountebank, they never giggled on the edge of the quiring pupils with a joke and a grimace in order to draw from them a guffaw of senseless laughter. As for the men of intellect and weight of character in our own lands they have not agreed on explanations to be given, but they have agreed in the reality of these stupendous issues, and in the conviction that they are too intensely momentous to be treated in any other than a candid and cautious spirit, Such men as Shakespeare, and Bacon, and Burke, and Brougham, and Scott, and Hale, and Washington, and Webster, and thousands like them have all stood together here. Men like Jefferson and Franklin may have been inclined to skepticism in some things, never indulged in idiotic mirth. To painful consequences now in our own selves is what none deny; that there is, or ought to be, some door of deiverance is what all fondly hope for. Whence came we? Whither are we bound? # Pyramid Riches

Royal Jewels Buried for Five Thousand Years Discovered—The Funeral Chamber of Queen Khnoumit - Her Beautiful Golden Crown Found - A Wonderful Find by a Well-Known Savant.

A New York gentleman intimately two hawks' heads, of gold, incrusted with M. J. de Morgan acacquainted with M. J. de Morgan accompanied the distinguished discovtrer of Egyptian monuments last fall, and in his company went over that plateau, some 35 miles from Cairo, where the syramids and necropolis of Dachour are situated.

The ground,' said this gentleman, "is fairly broken one, and lies near the Nile. The plateau is, say, some four miles long. To the north is the Dachour pyramid, built of brick, and on a line to the extreme south there is another pyramid. To the west, but beyond the line, and away from the Nile a mile or more, is a third pyramid.

"To ride from the north pyramid to the southern one took us some eight or ten minutes. I rode the fleetest Arab I have yet mounted, and covered the ground at full gallop. I judged the distance, too, on foot. I am a fairly rapid walker; so is M. de Morgan, and we could go from one pyramid to the other within an hour.

"It was near the Dachour pyramid, the northern one, where M. de Morgan found the Queen's treasure chamber last year. Inside the pyramid itself there had been a clean sweep. Somebody had helped himself to what porttble property existed there, say 4,000 years ago. But even then, when the place was looted, the pyramid was fairy ancient, say 1,000 years old. Now, notwithstanding what Egyptologists of oday may think, how do we know that the absence of any remains of a king ar his trinkets was due to bona fide robbers?

"It might have been that subsequent culers, those of a dynasty nearer to us, wanted to borrow for state purposes such portable property as might have been stored in the pyramid and never returned it. There might have been some great emergency, as an army or a fleet to equip, or there was a new temple to be built, or maybe a king was in want of ready cash or its equivalent, or there was a recent queen with a craze for trinkets.

"M. de Morgan did not advance any theory. I know that these pyramids, inclosing the remains of kings, were held to be sacred, at least to the populace. We read that the record of punishments for sacrilege, for to rob a tomb was held to be the most wicked of all acts. But that might not have prevented those who were in the priestly business from helping themselves. Then, bear in mind that the king himself was at the head of the priesthood, and above the law.

'Human nature has always been about the same, and so a King of Egypt thought he had special and divine rights. If he wanted the spoils of a great-great and many times a greatgrandfather, why, he did not exactly want to rifle the tomb of an ancestor, but he may have very quietly laid hold of its valuable contents. Certainly, it is puzzling. Remember, there were no safe deposits then, and that priests did take charge of treasures. Then, too, there might have been cautious kings and queens who believed that they would want their gew-gaws in the future abode of bliss, so they put aside their superfluous jewelry, and they may have done that when they were alive. It was a precautionary measure, maybe, for a rainy day. Theories as to the amassing of treasures are many, so mine may be neither better nor worse than most of them. Say a queen died. She was embalmed, decked with some of her trinkets and boxed up. You find her and take her as she is-and then, searching further, you come across her cache of treasures. That was her private accumulationher own particular savings bank.

"M. de Morgan did not suggest anything at all about this. I am not aware that Dr. Flinders Petrie, Erman, Mahaffy or Sayce has ventilated any theory of this kind. Certainly I absolve M. de Morgan of having entertained an idea of this sort. That gentleman had too much to do. His function was to work at his explorations, and to drive trenches, and to study his ground, and his duties and responibilities were enormous. It is a task requiring untiring vigilance.

To give you a further idea of M. de Morgan's enterprise, he has been at work this year in the southern pyranid, but so far has found nothing; but he may light at any time on that for which he is searching so diligently. Foday Egyptologists are excited by a wonderful find just made by M. de Morgan, and in a new place. I think the exact locality has not been clearly defined, at least by the accounts to be found in the French journals of this month.

"This is what I remember. We were walking from one pyramid to the other, when M. de Morgan called my attention to a barely distinguishable swell of the ground. I confess it was barely appreciable to me. If I am not in error, it was just about half way between the two pyramids, and in the same line. The talented explorer bade me look at certain differences noticeable in the surface soil. It differed from its surroundings, he said. I think M. de Morgan added: 'The probabilities are that there is a pyramid there, and I shall have a good look for it. Oh, it is not new to me. I spotted it long ago.' It is something to be gifted with a talent or an instinct of that kind, which might be designated in a sporting way as the flushing of pyramids. I am pretty positive that it is just on this spot, at mid-distance between the two pyramids, where the very latest treasures have been unearthed by M. de Morgan.'

For more particular details M. de Morgan's friend gave an abstract of what had appeared in the Journal des Debats and in Le Temps in the first week of this month.

For the last two months M. de Morgan has been working in a new locality. On Feb. 15 he struck a stone floor, and an opening was made, and there was an entrance to a sepulchre. After a lapse of 5,000 years he was the first to see not mortuary relics alone but the fewels of the Princess Ita, in exactly the same place and under the same conditions as they had been left by the relatives of the deceased.

The treasure was simply superb. Among the most remarkable pieces seen at the first glimpse by M. de Morgan was a magnificent pomard, with a handle incrusted with carnelians, lapis lazuli, and emeralds. on Feb. 16, when further researches were made by M. de Morgan in person, an entrance was made into the funeral chamber of Queen Khnoumit, Here were found in the dust of ages a perfume casket two crowns and of gold fume casket, two crowns, one of gold, in which emeralds had been set. The other was of exceedingly delicate handwork, composed of golden flowers and myosotis. There were innumerable objects, amounting in all to over 550

To particularize some of the ornaments, there was a staff of office, of gold, made up of leaves and grapes, health.

in gold; bracelets, strings of pearls, and necklaces, the latter unique of their kind, representing the acme of the jeweler's art.

To give some idea of the value of this discovery, which does not yield in importance to M. de Morgan's former finds, the weight of these objects in gold, with their precious stones, is one kilogram 800 grains. The Ghizeh Museum, having already secured the ornaments worn by soverigns of the twelfth dynasty, will now have added to it the jewels sported by the princesses of the same period. The cartouche found in the tomb indicates that here reposed the remains of the Princess Ita and Queen Kimoumit, and this queen was of the time of Amenemhat II.

What is marvelous about this jewelry is this, that it shows a perfection in filigree work which we cannot equal today. In this filigree work there are mosaics of exquisite delicacy. Another ornamentation is a form resembling a Maltese cross made by a combination of lotus flowers.

The question arises: If we are still in doubt as to what was the character of the tool used by the Egyptian in sculpture, what did he world constructing this most delicate jewelry? We see an object in all its art beauty, but do not yet divine the nature of the implement that made it. The mummy cases bore the titles of the dead. Elated by these finds, M. de Morgan has made further explorations in the neighborhood of the resting places of Princess Ita and Queen Khnoumit; but, as at Dachour, sime one, 4,000 years before, had anticipated his researches. The finding of treasure chambers in Egypt is not an every day occurrence, as may be seen. To break into one requires, in the first place, a great deal of judgment, and then there is an element of luck. In a comparatively narrow strip on both sides of the Nile have lived and been buried millions on millions of human beings, beginning, say, 10,000 years before the birth of Christ. From some distance oclow the Delta to the first cataract is one extended neeropolis. But the kings and their queens were not so numerous, so the prize treasures supposedly buried with these great people are not common. Then think of the many thousand years of temptation and treasure trove. Egypt has been honeycombed today by the enterprising, and M. de Morgan's recent discoveries will stimulate many others o the digging frenzy.

Might the old story be repeated of the painter who, being asked what colors he used, replied that he painted with brains. In explorations made to find the relics of the past the talent shown by the spade is barely appreciable. M. de Morgan's success is due en-tirely to his intellectual mining. A man may be at the head of a museum who never has gone of the shovel stage or archaeology. yond the pick

A TRACEDY RECALLED.

The Story of a Woman Who Has Suffered Deep Affliction.

Intense Mental Strain and Sleepless Nights Brought Her Almost to the Verge of the Grave-Help Came When Hope Had Almost Fled.

Mrs. Sarah Wood, widow of the late Alex. Wood, of North Elmsley, Lanack county, has had more sorrow than usually falls to the lot of human beings, and it is no wonder that, under the intense mental strain, she was completely prostrated, and her friends are rejoicing with her that she has again been restored to health. To a reporter she told the following story: "Until about three the following story: "Until about three health, except for occasional spasmodic headaches which had bothered me for some years." some years. I am now 63 years of age, and my troubles came as much by mental anguish and sieepless nights as by overtaxing my physical system. Two years ago last August, my son, W. J. Wood, was killed on the C. P. R. in a collision, and his lifeless, mangled body was brought home. Six weeks later my sister, Mrs. Lucky, of Kitley, was foully murdered. During those days I was taking care of my youngest daughter, Mrs. O. Bissell, near Merrickville, who was ill with consumption and who died four months later. Few people have been called upon to undergo so much affliction, and with sleepless nights and days of labor I became reduced almost to a living skeleton. In the fall of 1894 I was obliged to take to my bed, where

I lay for several weeks hovering be-tween life and death. During this time I was under the care of a doctor, but his treatment did not help me much. My head now continually troubled me, and a severe pain in my back, just above my left hip, caused me great agony. I had heard a great deal about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and determined to give them a trial. Before the second box was entirely gone my headache disappeared, and I found myself growing stronger, and after taking the pills a time longer, the pain in my back disappeared also. I then felt so well that I decided to visit another daughter who lives near Merrickville, determining to continue taking the Pink Pills until thoroughly restored. In passing through Smith's Falls, I procured more pills, but found afterwards that they were counterfiet, as I did not know then that they were not sold in bulk. The result was that my old infirmities began to return and I began to mistrust that the pills were not genuine, and sent into Merrickville for more. A comparison soon showed that, while both pills were colored Pink, the ones I had got in Smith's Falls were spurious, for they were not exactly the same shape and did not look the same when the two were compared. As soon as I began the use of the genuine Pink Pilis I began to grow better, and often the week of the same shape and often the way of a few the way o better, and after the use of a few more boxes I found myself entirely cured, boxes I found myself entirely cured, and I am now enjoying as good health as ever I did in my life. I believe that if it had not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I would have been in my grave, and I am glad to give my testimony, hoping some poor sufferer may be made well, as I was."

Mrs. Wood's unfortunate experience with imitation Pink Pills makes it ne-

Leads a Storming Party and Captures Toulon.

RAISED TO GENERAL OF BRIGADE.

Chief of Artillery In the Army of Italy. Sent to Negotiate With the Genoese. Falls Under Suspicion and Is Arrested. Again Deposed From Rank.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.] VIII. - EMERGENCE.

For Napoleon, Toulon was the open gate to greatness. His "destiny," for which he sought so diligently, came to him unawares among the guns of his lattery there. These guns were trained first on Fort L'Equillette, and then on the British ships of Admiral Hood. Our ships, including the good ship Orient, in which, after four years and seven months, we shall embark for Egypt, are pent up in a nook of the harbor. Over the town, through October and November, floats the banner of St. George. The Lily flag of the Bourbons has given place, not to the new Tricolor of the Revolution, but to the foreign ensign of a hated foe; under that are rallied the Royalists of Toulon. It is to be noted that the first and the last of Napoleon's guns are directed against the flag of England. From Toulon to Waterloo! There lies the space of twenty-one years and six months-filled with the wreck and transformation of the world!

Here, on the beautiful Mediterranean shore, the great act begins. A division of the French National army has been sent to retake the traitorous town. The commanders are General Doppet, who from being a doctor has taken to this fighting form of patriotism, and General Dugommier, an officer who, fourteen years ago, was with Lafayette in our American army of Independence. Others of military experience hold subordinate commands; and here also are several representatives from the National Convention. The latter, under orders of that body, are darting hither and you like arrows, to sting whoever shall be unfaithful to the Revolution. Some fly to the field of Valmy, where, in the wood of Argonne, they dart about with eyes sharper than swords. Others are on the track of Dumouriez, toward Belgium and the Netherlands, where he struggles to drive back the Germans; and does it. Others are with Custine's army, and still others here at Toulon, watching everything, and making fatal report of any blunder. Hither have come Barras himself, and

Among these moves the taciturn Captain Bonaparte. On the 19th of October he is promoted to be major and chef-de-Bataillon. He is placed at the head of the artillery-his own place, as events will show. Tradition has it that he eats little; sleeps among his gun-carriages; laughs not at all (except once, when a young man by his side dodging from a shell is cut in two by it!); is sun-tanned to a bronze. He with the unlike the rest he studies the map, and going from place to place, uses his spyglass. He looks many times at Fort L'Equillette, where the British flag is flying. Toulon is indeed strong. I will pound the fort with shells, till the point is reached. Then there shall be a pause. Out of the hollow shall spring my column. One bound, like the leap of a cat-o'-mountain, and the fort is ours. We will turn the guns on the town, and on Hood's ships. Everything shall be inside out in an hour!"

was heard in Paris. The younger Robespierre informed the Convention that he was "of transcendent merit." The report of Dugommier said, "Among those who distinguished themselves most and who most aided me to rally the troops and push them forward are citizens Buona Parte [do you not know how to spell him yet, General?] commanding the artillery; also Arena and Cervoni, adjutants-general." The success of the chef-de-Bataillon in the siege and capture, and the favorable report of it produced a sensation in the National Convention; but the impression on that body and on the public was as yet only transient. At this epoch, when all quarters of France were shaken with commotions and local revolutions, the brilliant capture of a single fort and town on the Mediterranean was not enough to create a permanent military fame. The Convention contented itself with making General Bonaparte "Inspector" of the coast-country, between the Rhone and the Var. His duty was to maintain order in that region, and to complete the Revolution.

By the close of the year, however, the old spirit was virtually extinguished in Southeastern France; and Napoleon found little to satisfy his restless spirit. His tours of inspection and duties connected therewith occupied his time until February of 1794, when he was recalled to Paris. That city was now a seething cauldron. The Reign of Terror was at its acme. That period, unparalleled in human annals, extended from March of 1793, when the Revolutionary tribunal was organized, to July 28th of the following year, when Robespierre and his colleagues were sent to the guil-

The Army of Italy was commanded by Dumerbion parte was assigned as chief of the artillery and assistant in the preparation of plans for the campaign. He was thus occupied in Paris at the time when it became the saying, La guillotine va toujours-the guillotine goes always!

It was the duty of the Army of Italy to occupy that country as a vantage ground against the coalitions that were forming beyond the Rhine. The Italian towns and States were wavering according to race and prejudice and interest between affiliation with the French Republic and the "protection" of Germany. By the sickness of Dumerbion, General Massena came to the chief command of this division of the French National forces. A campaign was undertaken in July of 1794, but the general of artillery did not, for the present, leave Paris. He was soon despatched, however, as an agent under orders of the Convention to Genoa. He was to protest to the Genoese authorities against the permission which seemed to be extended to the coalition to occupy neutral territory. It was a delicate business; for the other officers did not understand the true nature of the instructions; and the delegates Salicetti and Albitte were themselves ignorant of what was really intended.

The result was that Bonaparte was first misunderstood and then distrusted in his negotiations with the Genoese government. He was openly directed to protest against the occupation of the territory of Genoa by the enemies of France; but sceretly he was authorized to examine the fortresses of the city and make notes on the general topography of that region. While engaged in this work, he was suddenly suspended from office, put under arrest, and declared suspected! For the nonce, the sword of Damocles was hung above him by a single thread.

Just at this juncture, however, ere Napoleon could be hauled before the rest sees that Toulon is not taken; but | Revolutionary tribunal, that body itself was blown into death-blackness by a counter revolution. The destruction of the tribunal had a paradoxical effect on the interest of Napoleon. It was from that body that his fore his friends were dead; also, his witnesses. But their plunge into obscorched him. It was now said that Augustin Robespierre had been too much Cæsar in the matter of his intrigue with Catiline, the hero of Toulon was seriously compromised with the members of the Terror. Left to his own resources, however, he wrote a powerful and audacious protest to the Representatives Albitte and Salicetti; convinced them of his innocence; won them over to his cause; obtained from them a report of exculpation; and after thirteen days of mortal peril was set at liberty! On his return to Paris, in August of 1794, his defense was accepted by the ministry of war, and he was offered the command of a brigade of infantry in the Army of the West, with orders to operate against BILLIARD balls of cast steel have After Toulon, the name of Bonaparte been made and used successfully at Stockholm. They are hollow and weigh about as much as ordinary ivory balls. A lathe is used to turn them to perfect smoothness.

AT VALCIK, in South Russia, seven Greek statues have been lately discovered, with walls and pillars evidently belonging to a temple. The two best preserved statues probably represent Pan and Zeus.

"GUELPH EYES" are a protrusion of the eyes peculiar to all her Majesty's descendants. The Prince of Wales has it in a marked degree, and it is to be noticed in the German Emperor and the Grand Duke of Hesse.

THE rate of 84 miles an hour was fully reached lately by at least two expresses-one on the Midland Railway from St. Pancras to Leicester, and the other a Great Northern express from Grantham to King's Cross. THE most elaborate pipes are those of the Turks and Persians. The bowls are large and heavy, not intended to be carried about, and the stems are several feet long and flexible. Some of these pipes cost $1,000 each. SOUTH AMERICA has the greatest unbroken extent of level surface of any country in the world. The llanos of the Orinoco are so flat that the motion of the rivers can scarcely be detected over an area of 200,000 square miles. THE Chinese Empire is divided into eighteen grand provinces, representing an average area each of 248,000 square The German Empire contains 211,000 spuare miles, the French Republic 240,000, and the Britsih Isles

THE Prince of Wales has presented to the club house at Cowes 21 cannon, to be used in firing salutes. The cannon are of the time of George IV., and were taken from the Royal Adelaide, a toy war ship that the sailor king built for his amusement.

CALIFORNIA is being literally squeezed for gold just now. Not only are the old diggings in Calaveras and a score of other counties worked over for the precious dust, but the very shore of the ocean in sight of San Francisco is being searched for it.

THE Russian War Office has decided to use henceforth exclusively gray horses for artillery purposes, the reason given for the innovation being that animals of this color have been found by experience to be stronger and more enduring than the brown ones now

A NEW outer sole is being tried on the boots of the German soldiers by direct order of the Emperor. It consists of a paste of linseed oil varnish and iron filings, which is said to render the sole flexible and make it more durable than the new aluminium boot nails.

THE snipe has a nerve reaching down to the tip of his bill. It is the only bird thus provided, and this contrivance illustrates the beneficence of nature in enabling the snipe to detect the presence of its food in mud and water, where the creature's eye is of no use.

THE moon's light has been found to be about 300,000 times less than that of the sun, and, according to Prof. Young, a sky completely covered with full moons would give only one-eighth of the light we get from the sun. It thus seems improbable that the moon has any appreciable meteorological influence.

VICE ADMIRAL ITO, of the Japanese navy, and Admiral Ting, of the Chinese naval forces, were intimate friends, and it is said that a few days before the surrender of the latter at Wei Hai Wei letter to take refuge in Japan until the troubles were over.

THE Duchess of Devonshire is pretty well fixed. She is mistress of eight magnificent country seats and town houses, a chateau in France, a villa on the Riviera, and has a daughter married to a man who bears three dukeloms-Hamilton, Brandon and Chatelerault. She herself has been twice led to the altar by a duke.

BARTRAM HILES, the armless artist of Bristol, whose pictures, sketches and designs have won for him several prizes, is only 28 years old, and though he grasps his brush between his teeth, and paints with much dexterity, he was not born armless. His arms were amputated above the elbow in consequence of a tram car accident when he was 8 years

ROCKING chairs of the styles prevailing nowadays are believed to have been invented in the present century. They are mentioned by Venerable Bede. The women now are so luxurious that they do have chairs with wooden circles on the legs, and which sway back and forth in such sort that it maketh one sick to hehold them."

IN "An Artist's Reminiscences" Rudolph Lehmann writes: "I only met Thackeray once, in this historical old Roman tavern, the Osteria del Falcone, which boasts of having had Michael Angelo among its customers. When a mutual friend introduced me to the great novelist (great in more than one sense, for he measured 6 feet 4 inches), I said I had learned to read English from his 'Vanity Fair.' 'And that is where I learned to write it,' he replied.

GROUND oyster shells were given by the medieval doctors to children suffering from rickets and scrofula. Now Drs. Muntz and Chatin tell the Paris Academy of Medicine that the old fellows were right. The shells contain lime, nitrogen, iron, sulphur, manganese, magnesia, fluor, bromine, phosphoric acid and iodine, all excellent for feeble children. They say that if nurses and growing children were to take powdered oyster shells in their food, teeth would be improved.

A MIRACULOUS cure of paralysis at St. Winifrede's Well at Holywell is fully described in the Lancet by the Protestant hospital doctor who had charge of the case. The patient was a girl of 17, with neurotic paralysis and curvature of the spine, whom one of the surgeons held to be suffering from hysterical spine. There is no reason to doubt her paralysis any more than her present ability to walk, but hope and the sudden application of cold water to the whole body have been known to cure such cases before without miraculous interposition.

IT IS shocking that 105 persons have been killed by the trolley cars in Brooklyn since July, 1892. The 105th victim, Mrs. Mary A. Medinger, aged 63, who was run down on ruesday, had her head cut off. A reign of terror exists in that city among parents of small children, and Mayor Schieren says he is appealed to every day to do some-thing to have life better protected in the streets. An ordinance has just been adopted prohibiting the running of cars faster than eight miles an hour, and the hope is that the companies will abide by it. Such a record of slaughter cannot be paralleled in any city of the United States.

FEW people realize the enormous waste of fuel involved in record-breaking steamship passages. The Bismarck, for example, consumes 90 tons of coal a day by going 12 knots an hour. With just twice as much coal, 180 tons, she gains one-third in speed, making 16 knots an hour. But, by burning 300 tons, she gains but 4 knots more, her speed then being 20 knots. To double the present horse-power of the steamer would shorten her time across the Atlantic only half a day. So it will be seen that record-breaking is chiefly a matter of outlay. The practical limits for ordinary travel have already apparently been reached.

CAPT. EDWARD VON SCHMIDT, who is in charge of the Government dredging of the Oakland, Cal., ship canal, has gone practically naked in all climates for the last twenty years. "The doctors told me," he explained, "that I nad weak lungs, and when I went to sea, my friends said that I would never come back. Well, down in the tropics I naturally wore but very little, and the less I wore the better I felt, and when I put on more clothing again I didn't feel so well. A year later, in bringing a vessel through the Straits of Magellan, I noticed the Terra del Fuegans going naked in the snow. I saw old men, stalwart and rugged, and mothers nursing their babes, all naked and all quick in action and sturdy of limb, and I said I have found the secret of health. Ever since I have dressed about as those rugged nauves of that bleak country dress."

> M. COQUELIN. The Great French Comedian.

These are the features of the Prince of French Comedians, whose "Tartuffe," which he may be said to have made his own, convulses every audience which has the delight of seeing the master portray the arch hypocrite. Respecting "Vin Mariani," he says: "Strange to say that 'Vin Mariani,' so exquisite a wine, should also be a remedy, and a delicious one at that, so pleasant to the taste and so beneficial to the entire system." And Coquelin merely states a truth which is attested by the most famous men and women of the age, by the foremost medical men, and the managers of all the great hospitals. "Vin Mariani" is indeed beneficial to the system. The weakest can digest it; the most debilitated are benefited by it; the most hopeless are revivified by it; and as has been often said regarding it, "It gives new life and hope." "Vin Mariani" is the great tonic-stimulant of the age, used by the great brain-workers of the world, who find that, exhausted by overwork, it refreshes, strengthens, and builds up the whole system. An album of portraits of many celebrities who have spoken highly of "Vin Mariani" will be sent to those who send their address to Lawrence A. Wilson & Co., Montreal, the Canadian Agents.
