The London Electric Company. The Power Equipment Company.

The Helena Costume Company. The Sifton franchise.

The decision means that even with the London Electric out of the way, these other companies could obtain power from the Cataract Power Company - any other company developing cheap power, and compete with the city plant.

The opinion was received this morning, and is now in the hands of Ald. Stewart, chairman of the special power committee.

It will be produced at the council meeting on Monday evening next. Mr. Meredith quotes the bylaws gov-, cuss it.

Building.

As a precaution against high water the lower part of the building is constructed of neatly-finished concrete, while the upper part is built of firstclass pressed brick, inside and out laid with rich Portland cement. The windows will have iron frames while the roof is supported by steel trusses and quality black slates. A five (5) ton travelling hand crane is furnished with the building.

Advantages of Proposed Scheme.

One advantage of the scheme offered lies in its furnishing a water supply entirely independent of the Springbank plant and thus available in case of accidental stoppage of the Springbank supply, such as would occur, for instance, through a breakage of the long supply main. Cost of Pumping.

He took up the criticism offered against the proposition that the cost of pumping would be excessive, cited the case of Winnipeg. In that city it cost by centrifugal pumps 9.76 cents per 1,000 gallons to get the water to the reservoir, 1.99 cents to soften the water, and 9.20 cents to get it to the consumer, almost 22 cents per thousand gallons. In his scheme, experts by the air lift had guaranteed to get the water to the consumer for 3.9 cents per 1,000 gallons in one case, and 2.7 cents of the larger quantity of water were used. In regard to the design of machinery and equipment and its adaptability for the work in question, there can be no criticism made. The method pumping water with compressed from deep wells and from wells that are widely scattered and flowing by gravity to a receiving basin, from this by duty pumps and delivered to the city mains, is a system that has received the approval of the best engineers. After examination I would say machinery specified are more ample to do the work for which they are intended, efficiently and economically. The system of pumping with compressed air can be economically and efficiently used on wells that are situated two or more miles from the source of power, from the fact that the loss in power in conveying air through properly proportioned pipes is very small. I have studied the figures of your engineer in regard to the cost pumping one thousand gallons under the conditions of your proposed plan, and consider that they are adequate per day each against a pressure of one submitted his figures claimed that they and well within the cost, as has been demonstrated through the writer's knowledge with various plants in the Report on Proposed Artesian Well Scheme for the City of London.

Dear Sir,—After carefully examining the tenders submitted to you by The Hon, Adam Beck, London, Ont .: ing the tenders submitted to you by a number of representative firms for reservoir required for a four million and a half (4,500,000) gallon air lift He also stated that if he desired to and pressure pumping plant, I estimater to the city to make money mate the first cost of such a plant thousand seven hundred Ninety > ($90,700) dollars, with a five hundred thousand (500,000) gallon reservoir, and Ninety-eight thousand seven hundred ($98,700) dollars with reservoir of million (1,000,000) gallon capacity. This price includes the cost of fifteen (15) wells, with all piping connecting them with the larger collecting reservoir; it does not include, however, any profit. I have carefully estimated the operating expenses to pump one million and a half (1,500,000) gallons daily with the plant you propose to furnish to the city of London, and find the same to be three and nine-tenths (3.9) cents per thousand gallons.

If, as can be done with the same plant, and with the installation of say nine (9) additional wells, three million (3,000,000) gallons are pumped daily I find the cost per thousand gallons to be two and seven-tenths (2.7) cents The operating cost includes:

Maintenance and repairs of wells, oiping, reservoir, building, machinery, nd all equipment. Insurance.

Interest on capital cost. Sinking fund. Operating and office expenses.

Standby charges on the gas engine, The sinking fund is so proportioned that the cost of the whole installation ance will enable a complete new station equipment to be purchased every ency is thus maintained and even in-creased through the installation of up-to-date machinery from time time. The power for continuous operation will be Niagara hydro-electric power; this has been taken at thirty-five (35) dollars per horse power per annum. Niagara power appears to be the cheapest and most convenient motive ower available, being cheaper even that natural gas for sixteen (16) to twenty-four (24) hours' operation per day, gas being supplied at usual manufacturers' rates.

At your request I have, furthermore, examined into the Kilworth scheme for the sake of comparing it with the cheme proposed by you.

I note that the first cost of one hundred and twenty-five thousand ($125,-000) dollars of the Kilworth scheme, as estimated by the water commissioners does not include any increase in the capacity of the already overcrowded supply main from Springbank. Assuming however, this first cost to be correct I find the operating charges to aggregate six and six-tenths (6.6) ents per thousand gallons.

This includes maintenance, repairs interest and capital cost, sinking fund, coal and insurance but no allowance for additional attendance and office expenses.

The two schemes would thus compare as follows: First Cost:

. Artesian well scheme, with fifteen (15) wells, and a million (1,000,000) gallon reservoir, $98,700. 2. The same with well system ex-

IF BRITAIN LOST COMMAND OF

THE SEAS.

It has been argued for generations that Great Britain must keep the command of the seas if at war with a maritime power, or suffer starvation by reason of the fact that she mainly relies for food and raw material upon other countries. This argument, however, is losing its force with the growth of more civilized rules and laws of warfare. It is Great Britain's own choice if today she runs the risk of privation in the event of war. At the recent Hague convention she threw her influence against the proposal to prohibit belligerents from preying upon each other's maritime commerce. This course she took on the ground that her that the commission would "capitalize naval power would not be enabled to inflict the maximum injury unless her in order to sell at a price at all withships of war were at liberty to destroy in bounds, in the hope that in future or capture the enemy's ships of com- years the scheme might pay. Chairman of School Board Says There Will Be No Picnic This Year.

AGITATION IS UNWISE

Declared Secretary McElheran, of the Board of Education-Another Collegiate Petition.

The passing days only add to the de termination on the part of the pupils in the city schools that the board of education shall not deny them their accustomed holiday. At the Collegiate Institute the feeling has reached very virulent stage, and after more than a week of discussion the students have decided to take drastic action. A petition has been circulated through the school, asking all those who are willing to take the picnic, with the approval of the authorities, if it can be obtained, but in any case to stand by the old institution at any cost, to sign a document to that effect. This manifesto is being met with strong favor by the students, and already a good part of the school have attached their signatures. It is the intention of the scholars to present the petition at the next meeting of the board of trustees, and request that they be permitted to hold their picnic as usual on the 8th of June.

This petition is merely to be nice to the teachers and trustees, however, and if they do not see fit to grant the petition the students claim that they will take the holiday in any case. There was no idea of setting a precedent, and the picnic can be reverted to next year if after this year's experience it is thought wise set to do Agitation Unwise.

Mr. McElheran thought that the agitation, especially in the matter of its presentation, had been very unwise.
