British Labor Party To Introduce Many Radical Bills

LABOR WILL SEE WOMEN GET VOTE AT EARLIER AGE

Ramsay MacDonald's Supporters Will Introduce Variety of Measures.

CHURCHILL'S MANIFESTO

Letter of Former Minister Believed To Have Appeared at Inopportune Time.

Associated Press Despatch.
London, Jan. 19.—Although the leaders of the parliamentary Labor party are keeping in the background the more radical measures which their party from time to time has advocated, some of these will come before the House of Commons soon in the form of private bills.

Some of the Laborite members have had exceptional luck in the building for the privilege of introducing legislation, and according to the Daily Telegraph, bills for the nationalization of the mines and railways will be presented before long. Also, labor contemplates initiating a law for the enfranchisement of women at the same age as men, instead of at 30 years as is now the case. Another bill for which labor will stand sponsor, says the newspaper, is one proposing home rule for Scotland.

Inasmuch as private measures are not supported by the government, they depend for success upon the support their promoters are able to win for them from the other members. It is obvious that in the present composition of the House of Commons, the private members bills have little chance of success.

CHURCHILL AWAITS EFFECT.
Associated Press Despatch.
London, Jan. 19.—Winston Spencer Churchill has put himself in the limelight by the publication of his open letter deploring the advent of what he terms a "socialist" government, but so far nothing has developed from it to suggest that the manifesto is likely to produce the desired effect, namely, the prevention of Liberal support in putting the parliamentary Labor party into power.

D. GEORGE CLARK, who urges closer business relations with Australia in order to develop Canadian trade.

CITY WILL LIKELY APPEAL DECISION

Judge Macbeth Rules C. N. Express Company Free From Business Levy.

The city of London will in all probability appeal the decision handed out yesterday by His Honor Judge Talbot Macbeth in connection with the business tax levy upon the Canadian National Railroad Express Company.

This is the opinion of Assessment Commissioner Harry Bennett, who explains, however, that the question must go before the members of the finance committee for final disposition.

The C. N. R. is appealing through-out the country against business assessments upon its express department. Judge Macbeth's decision is evidently influenced by the judgment handed down in a similar case in Toronto.

"London will lose about $1,000 in this manner," the commissioner stated.

MRS. C. H. GOULD DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Was Prominent Worker in the Adelaide Street Baptist Church.

Mrs. Emma Gould, wife of Charles H. Gould, 470 English street, died this morning at her home following a year's illness. Mrs. Gould was in her 61st year. Previous to her illness she had always taken an active part in the Ladies Aid work of Adelaide Street Baptist Church, of which she was a prominent member.

Besides her husband she is survived by one son, Harold, and one daughter, Edna.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon from her late residence to Mount Pleasant Cemetery. Rev. J. H. Versey, of the Church of Christ (Disciples), will conduct the services.

BELIEVES SOLUTION WILL SOON BE REACHED

Dr. Grant Expects Conference Will Be Held With Mayor on Question.

Referring to the statement of Mayor Weniger that as there was to be no city hall this year there would be no high schools, Dr. A. J. Grant, chairman of the Collegiate committee, stated that he did not intend to be drawn into a controversy on the matter.

He declared, however, that he and the mayor understood each other, and that there was no doubt but that they would be able to get together on the matter.

CANADIANS ARE URGED TO DEVELOP NEW TRADE

D. George Clark States Time Is Opportune For Dominion To Act.

ADVISE CANADA

Believes Dominion Has Great Possibilities in Plan Properly Handled.

That the present is an opportune time for Canadian manufacturers to make a united and determined effort to capture markets in Australia and New Zealand is the opinion of D. George Clark, advertising manager of the McClary Manufacturing Company of London.

Mr. Clark, who made a tour of these two countries in the summer of 1923 on behalf of his firm, is particularly well qualified to speak on the subject of Canadian export to Australia and New Zealand, and on the immediate and future prospects in this practically virgin field.

His inspection of the possibilities of selling the products of the Dominion "down under" brought him in touch with many of the large agents and importers in Australia and New Zealand.

He collected a mass of data and business information, and after looking it over in the comparative quiet of the home office has come to certain conclusions, given here, as to the prospects of building and enlarging trade in the Southern Pacific countries.

Firstly, he believes that Canada and her products must be "sold" to our colonial cousins. He says: "The people down there are accustomed to buying either British or American manufactured products, and they seldom think of Canada as being either a manufacturing or an exporting country."

"It's not the distance that has been the determining cause, for they are in receipt of a great quantity of American goods and American salesmen are frequent visitors in their cities. It's simply that few have bothered to tell them."

Lack Power.
"Another unfortunate thing from our point of view is that in many cases the men have been sent out to represent Canadian houses they were not given sufficient power to act independently of the home office, and by their inability to come to definite arrangements with agents and representatives the field for American goods was further expanded."

In his personal contact with the Australian people, Mr. Clark found them very willing to listen to his selling argument, not only as a representative of his firm, but also as a Canadian, and thinks that a closer relationship is being established.

Immigrants Are Warned To Steer Clear of London

Mayor Informs Former Farm Settler He Should Stay in Country.

WORK NOT PLENTIFUL

States Influx Would Only Tend To Increase Present Difficulty.

"Immigrants who come out to go on farms must stay there and keep away from the cities, particularly London."

This was the warning today from Mayor Weniger to a man with a family, who acknowledged that he was not a citizen of London, within the meaning of the municipal bylaws, having resided here but six months. This applicant for work stated that he had been retired from the city pay-roll after two weeks' tree trimming work.

Upon investigation at the employment office, the mayor stated that the applicant had come in from the country.

"You should stay there, and not come in here to add to the conditions which are none too good now," the mayor warned him.

Veterans Pass Strong Resolution Which Is Forwarded to Ottawa.

BRITISH STOCK 'BEST

Affirming its often expressed sentiments on the question of immigration to Canada by British men and women, the London Branch of the G. W. National Union of Railwaymen, who have accepted the award of the national wages board, it is asserted that Robb's plan of settlement is extremely doubtful that they ever imagined that their vote for non-acceptance of the award would lead to their being asked to advertise for his union. If this is the case, it would seem as if he has obtained an advertisement of a different kind than that for which he bargained.

WARN AGAINST DANGER AT VICTORIA PARK RINK

City officials warn against accidents on the Victoria Park skating rink. Skaters are directed to skate in the one direction. Complaints have been received from those who protest that some of them have been in the habit of skating one direction and some another, which leads to confusion and mishaps, some of which may prove serious if unchecked.

RAIL STRIKE IS OPPOSED BY PEOPLE OF BRITAIN

Contemplated Walkout Fails To Meet With Any Degree of Sympathy.

BROMLEY BLAMED

Suggestion That Move Engineered by Parliamentary Labor Leaders Denied.

Associated Press Despatch.
London, Jan. 19.—One indisputable fact in connection with the present threatened railway strike is that if the locomotive engineers and firemen actually strike they will have less public sympathy than any body of strikers in this country has had in a generation. James Bromley, secretary of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, who has been the most vocal leader in the recent negotiations with the railway companies, has invariably shown a truculent spirit for years past.

In Bromley's most recent manifesto to be seen slight traces of disappointment that the trouble over the engineers' and firemen's refusal to accept the wages award of the national wages board is finally heading to warfare with the companies.

It may be that real grievances are weighing on a section of the National Union of Railwaymen, who have been extremely doubtful that they ever imagined that their vote for non-acceptance of the award would lead to their being asked to advertise for his union. If this is the case, it would seem as if he has obtained an advertisement of a different kind than that for which he bargained.

Hundreds Besiege Office Anxious To Join Contest Where Big Prizes Await Streets, Wires and Mails Bring Countless Inquiries To The Advertiser.

CAMPAIGN IN EARNEST

Motor Cars in Each District and Cash Commission Are Given.

Yesterday was a busy day in The Advertiser Contest Department. Countless local and long-distance telephone calls, hundreds of receipt books mailed, and many questions answered, all give evidence of the great interest already aroused over the $20,000 The Advertiser is giving away.

The fact that three automobiles or their equivalent in cash will be given as first, second and third prizes in each of the three districts gives all an equal opportunity of winning fortune.

What else is there you can do that will bring you as much or even nearly as much money as you can make in The Advertiser contest just by giving a few hours of your time during the next few weeks?

Renew Subscriptions.
There are enough renewal subscriptions to The Advertiser to be collected alone to assure you winning at least one of the eleven automobiles.

The time is now. Send in your name today. Don't wait. If you do, someone else with far less ability might win the prize that should have been yours. Prove to your friends that you have the courage and have the satisfaction of winning an automobile through your own efforts. Candidates should pay special attention to soliciting and collecting the daily coupons, good for 200 votes. They all count.

A few friends saving them would mean several thousands of votes for you every day.

Readers who are now taking The Advertiser, and who are now paying a carrier boy 15 cents a week, may give their subscription for a year or more to a contestant. The carrier boy will be protected on his delivery commission by The Advertiser.

Good Anywhere.
Subscriptions to The Advertiser may be taken anywhere. Candidates are not confined to their particular districts. But all subscriptions received will be credited in the district in which the candidate resides.

The receipt book is made in triplicate. The second portion is sent to The Advertiser with the money for the subscription and the third portion is given to the subscriber.

The subscription price of The Advertiser (by mail) is $5.00 a year. The subscription price of The Advertiser delivered by carrier in the city of London is $5.50 per year.

A firm of chartered accountants will be appointed by The Advertiser to audit all votes and records, thus insuring fair treatment to all.

A contestant may win only one of the regular district prizes.

Fifteen per cent commission will be paid to candidates who are not prize-winners on all money sent in on subscriptions.

MEDALS OFFERED BY 'SOUTH' PARENTS

New Collegiate Society To Give Twelve Prizes to Pupils of South High.

The South London Collegiate Parents' Association, although organized but a few weeks ago, is already functioning as an important body in that school district. And its first move is to offer twelve medals to be competed for by the pupils of the school. Announcement of the offer was made at a recent meeting of the executive of the association by Wendall Holmes, J. Jeffery and Mrs. Hallatt, a committee of three appointed to deal with the matter.

The medals are the gift of citizens of South London and will be awarded as the executive meets again on Monday next to decide what steps will be taken to bring the needs of the southern section of the city before the London school board. The association will probably bring an appeal for a new school before the board.

The other medals will be given for academic standings in the school. The executive meets again on Monday next to decide what steps will be taken to bring the needs of the southern section of the city before the London school board. The association will probably bring an appeal for a new school before the board.

"TEC" ADDITION WILL SOON BE COMPLETED

Special Bricks For Corridor Work Have Arrived at School.

The bricks required for the completion of the corridors of the Technical School addition have arrived, according to a report received this morning, and the work of completing the six rooms will now be finished in a few days it is hoped.

The bricks, a special glazed kind manufactured in the States, have held up the contractors, according to the architect, who some time ago rejected two carloads of brick as not being the kind ordered and specified. Samples had been sent to the manufacturers, but owing to some mistake of the shippers the bricks that were sent here were of the wrong color. They were sent back and the necessary ones received yesterday. It is estimated that the mistake of the shipping clerk in the American company delayed the work about three weeks.

LONDONERS ORDERED TO SUBMIT SUM OF HOLDINGS

Loss Through Home Bank Double Liability Is $47,000 in City.

IMMEDIATE ACTION

Documents Furnished If Decision of Court To Be Disputed.

The first division of the appellate court, Toronto, today ordered all London shareholders of the Home Bank to submit the amount of their stock holdings in the defunct institution that the double liability for shareholders may be imposed almost immediately.

Word to this effect was received by U. A. Buchner this morning. The total Londoners stand to lose through operation of the double liability clause in the bank act is exactly $47,000.

C. Norman Spencer is the largest stockholder, having $10,000 worth of stock in his possession. His loss will therefore be $20,000. Mr. Spencer purchased the shares only six months before the Home Bank crash.

Sixteen citizens will be affected by the ruling announced this morning. Documents have been furnished each one, so he can dispute the liability. This procedure is merely a matter of form and it is not expected any of the disputes will be held valid. However, those who do not file with the court a dispute of liability before Feb. 13 will have judgment issued against them on that date.

So far as depositors are concerned Mr. Buchner entertains high hopes that the government will yet step in and force the Canadian Bankers' Association to shoulder the depositors' loss. Mr. Buchner leaves for Ottawa on Tuesday next to lay the claim of savings holders in this district before the government.

In the meantime more than 2,000 names have been secured on petitions asking that the Canadian Bankers' Association take on the liabilities of the Home Bank. These are in possession of Mr. Buchner and may be signed by persons not affected by the bank's failure. Anyone believing in full protection for depositors is entitled to register his opinion by attaching his photograph to the documents.

About $8,000 of shares held in London are owned by persons in more or less straitened circumstances. Three of the stockholders are widows without any other definite means of support, and the enforcement of the shareholders' double obligation will go hard with them.

GOLF CLUB DIRECTORS TO PLAN PROGRAM TONIGHT

This evening, directors of the Highland Golf Club will meet for the first time since their election for the new year. Organization work will demand the attention of the directors, and a program of club activities framed for 1924.

According to the secretary, it is not likely any attempt will be made to secure new capital for improvements, cash in hand being sufficient to take care of all necessary expenditures during the current season.

COL. GARTSHORE TO SPEAK

Commencing their meeting at 9:45 o'clock—Sunday morning, Askin Street Brotherhood will be addressed by Col. W. M. Gartshore, who will give a talk on his recent European trip. King Street Presbyterian Brotherhood will also attend the service.

Will Last All Day, and Here Are Rules to Follow.

THIRTEEN PRIZES

Any Kind of Doll May Enter—Dresses Must Be Made by Girls.

Next Saturday—the Doll Show! You have just one week left to get your doll ready for the first Doll Show London has ever had.

The Show will last all next Saturday, Jan. 26, in the Masonic Temple on Queen's avenue. The Advertiser is throwing it open to every kind of doll—Dolly dolls, little dolls, old dolls, new dolls, boy-dolls, girl-dolls, any doll at all.

Altogether thirteen prizes are offered for the best dressed dolls in the Show. The list of prizes is given in the next column on this page.

Two Big Divisions.

The Doll Show is divided into two big classes.

The first division is for the dolls which have come from the Doll Lady, and eight prizes are offered.

The Doll Lady is staying in London until the Show is over and is still giving her dolls away.

The second division is for all other dolls, and five prizes are offered.

All the prizes are given for the best dressed dolls in both divisions. There is no age limit for the little girls who compete.

The clothing on which the judges will make their decisions must be made by the little girls themselves. Other clothing may be worn by the doll, but such clothing will not be considered in the judging.

Three Expert Judges.

Three expert judges have consented to choose the thirteen winning dolls. They are:

Miss Isabelle Craig, supervisor of Household Science in Public Schools.

Miss H. Gerrard, instructor in Domestic Arts in the Technical High School.

Miss H. Stevens, instructor in Dressmaking in the Technical High School.

Opens at Ten O'clock.

The Show will open in the Masonic Temple at ten o'clock next Saturday morning. Dolls may be brought in until two o'clock in the afternoon.

Entries will close at that hour and the judging will commence.

Each doll should bear a tag, securely fastened, giving the doll's name, and the name, address and age of the little girl who owns the doll.

Will Be On Exhibition.

When the dolls are brought in, they will be placed on stands provided for that purpose, and will remain on exhibition throughout the day. Little girls competing should be present in the afternoon when the judges take place in order to answer questions by the judges. All the dolls must remain on exhibition until the judging is completed. The winners will be announced about four o'clock.

Open to the Public.

The Doll Show is open to the public and everyone is invited to see the most beautiful dolls. And every little girl in London and Western Ontario is invited to bring her doll to the Show and meet all the other little girls and their dolls.

Read the prize list and have your doll all ready when the Masonic Temple opens at ten o'clock next Saturday morning.

CANADIANS ARE URGED TO DEVELOP NEW TRADE

contact with the merchants over there would work wonders in establishing the new trade outlets.

"What I think most necessary," he said, "is to have our manufacturers personally and intimately in touch with the men who are to sell their products there."

They could all go down there, but they should have some member of their firm go down often, as the Americans do.

With the smaller factories which could not afford to send a man down, I would advise a representative to go down.

It would carry out missionary and educational work for perhaps four or five firms. As long as he had sufficient technical knowledge of the various products to talk sensibly of their value and price, was a broad-minded chap who could see the other fellow's point of view, and a real salesman, he would get along well and produce results.

"As to the publicity the Dominion should get in these two countries, I think it is in a way up to Ottawa to undertake a more extensive campaign to this end. There are many ways in which it could be done, and it would have to be of such a nature that it would cover the whole field thoroughly. For instance, all the British Columbia Douglas fir 'Aussies' use they know only as Oregon pine. The Canadian firms are trying to change this now, but the process is a mighty slow one.

"The two trade commissioners in Australia and New Zealand are valuable men. They do a tremendous amount of work, but could not be expected to carry on any extensive campaign of advertising, even if it were their place to do so."

Of the markets in New Zealand, he is very optimistic, though the production fluctuates. There are periods of very low production. If there was an established outlet it would take care of these slack periods, and in this way the export trade might be able to solve some of our winter unemployment troubles."

Habit in Control.

Because there is a psychology in selling, the type of people in New Zealand and Australia has a distinct bearing on the export question.

Coming of an essentially British stock, they tend to be conservative. They do not change readily in their views on anything, and habit has a strong hold on their customs.

On the other hand, when once they have been induced to become customers they are reliable and steady in their business relations. Mr. Clark sees them as a logical outlet for Ontario manufacturers, more especially now that the Panama Canal is in operation and that there is a regular monthly sailing from Atlantic ports to the Antipodes.

"In most businesses," he said, "production fluctuates. There are periods of very low production. If there was an established outlet it would take care of these slack periods, and in this way the export trade might be able to solve some of our winter unemployment troubles."

Bobbed Hair Is the Newest Fad For the Well-Dressed Male population is but a million and a half.

"It is one of the few countries in the world where exports exceed imports. They are an up-to-date people, anxious to see and use, if possible, all the ideas and improvements we have made in certain lines, and are eager to do business with us."

Here Canada has the benefit of a tariff preference between Canada and Australia in the near future, he still holds that today there is a real market waiting to be filled by Canadian manufacturers there.

Of the actual shipping side of the question, he has these remarks to make. "All goods shipped to either of these countries should be packed in small cases and shipped as far as possible in a 'knocked down' state. The Australian people have always been in the habit of assembling articles they brought in from an outside country, and are used to it. It has the advantage of a saving in the price charged at this end, which in turn means a saving in tariff duties when it reaches Australia."

He advises doing business with the large distributor in the main centers, who have already an established distribution system.

Man Falls 300 Feet To Death

Canadian Press Despatch.

Niagara Falls, Jan. 19.—Anthony Stefano, this city, was instantly killed at the Queenston power house this morning when he fell a distance of 300 feet. He was being lowered with a rope down the face of the cliff, which he was to have scaled preparatory to beginning work on a new penstock, when the rope broke. He was badly mangled and died instantly.

Effect Is Startling, Though It May Not Be Beautiful, He Declares.

Bobbed hair is the latest innovation for the well-dressed man. George McGuffin, local barber, who returned from a trip to Detroit yesterday, says it's all the rage in the Flivver city, and he predicts many a masculine bobbed head in London before the spring.

The he-man bob is, in reality, a Chinese hair cut, so-called because of its resemblance, when partly obscured by a hat, to the coiled queue of the orthodox Confucian. (Scoffers call it the "moon-moon hair cut," but this is mere jealousy.)

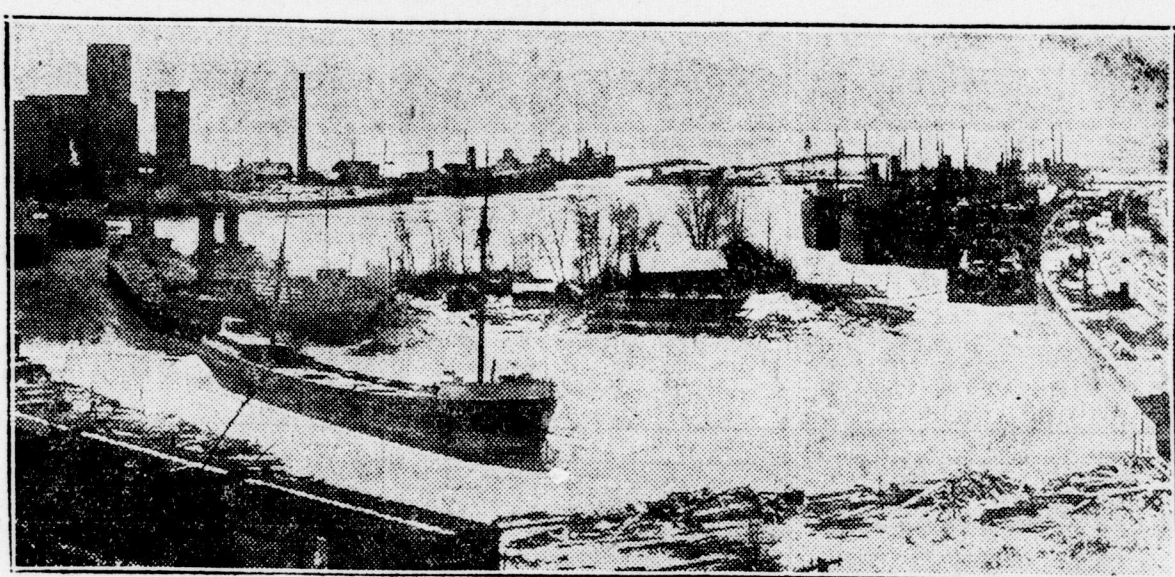

The new style is achieved by clipping or shaving the back of the head half way up to hat line, and also for an inch or so behind each ear, thus leaving the entire rear elevation of the cranium bare, except for a semi-circular growth in the center. The effect is at least startling, says Mr. McGuffin, even though it may not be beautiful.

"A month ago it was new," he said, "but now it has become quite commonplace. Several are to be seen in Detroit."

The impression the new style gives is one of total baldness until the gentleman of the bob removes his hat. Then, lo and behold, one observes a sleek abundance of hair just above the forehead and in the center of the crown.

Catarrh Corrected Chiropractically

What is commonly called catarrh is a condition of inflamed mucous membrane. This disease can affect any organ or part of the body lined with membranous tissue, such, for example, as the bladder and bowels as well as the head, nose and throat. There is a catarrh of the generic anatomy which distressingly afflicts hundreds of thousands of women the world over.

Acute Nasal Catarrh.

affects the mucous membrane lining of the nose and communicating cavities. It usually is characterized by disorder of the sense of smell and an abnormal mucus discharge. It is commonly called a cold in the head and begins with chilliness along the back, headache and a general feeling of weariness. There may be a slight fever, sneezing and feeling of dryness in the nostrils, so the patient feels more comfortable when breathing through the mouth. There is a watery secretion from the nose and eyes and an impairment of the senses of smell and taste. The inflammation may extend downward, making the pharynx red and swollen, and there usually are sores in the nose and on the lips. Often there is partial deafness, owing to swelling of the membrane of the eustachian tube leading from the throat to the middle ear.

Chronic Nasal Catarrh.

Indicates structural changes in the nasal membrane. It progresses from the acute form and the nasal passages become thickened, dark red in color, and there is a congestion of the blood vessels. One or both of the passages may become closed. Another form of chronic nasal catarrh atrophies the mucous membrane and the passages become enlarged from the tissues withering. Frequently there are alcers on the membrane, from which there comes an offensive discharge.

Effects of Catarrh.

Sufferers with catarrh are highly susceptible to head colds. Mouth breathing is also a common result of interference with the air passages. There is more or less constant sniffling. The voice becomes nasal and there may be varying degrees of deafness and adenoid growths in the nose and pharynx. Unless catarrh is caused by constitutional disease, it involves no danger of fatality, though it is one of the most disagreeable and annoying afflictions we know, one that is apt to make life miserable in many ways. In the course of time it will gradually undermine the patient's general health.

Local Treatment Ineffective.

"Trying to cure catarrh by local treatment is a waste of time. In the first place the victims of catarrh can never expect to be rid of it until the causes within the body are corrected. Douches, liquids, sprays, powders, etc., cannot touch or remove these causes.

A New Natural Discovery.

The Science of Chiropractic has discovered the only rational method of removing the causes of catarrh known to the healing arts. The primary cause of catarrh in any form is to be found in the disturbances of the natural processes of the body. Nerve energy is the agent that carries on these processes and controls every function in every organ and part. These forces are normally active when they are provided with nerve energy from the brain in normal quantity. In a large percentage of all diseases it will be found that there are obstructions on the nerve lines to interfere with the passage of nerve energy. Chiropractic is the new drugless science of locating and removing these obstructions by hand adjustment. The Chiropractor will gladly refer you to scores of cases of his own observation in which Chiropractic has succeeded, where other efforts failed. These are cases of substantial people whose position puts their credibility beyond question, many of whom have scoured the world in search of health and found it in Chiropractic.

LABOR DECIDES TO FILL CITY MAYORALTY CHAIR

Speakers At Annual Meeting Urge Immediate Reorganization of Party.

ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Arthur Mould Is Chosen President—William Sharman Secretary.

Labor wants Aid, Frank McKay as a Labor mayor in 1925. This unexpected proposal at last night's session of the London branch of the Canadian Labor Party met with the open approval of the delegates.

In his address urging greater effort during the current year, Ex-Ald. John Colbert, a past president of the party, declared bluntly that it should be the duty of those in the Labor movement and the ratepayers generally to promote Aid, Frank McKay at the next municipal election to the post as chief magistrate of this city. "The time has come for a Labor mayor," Ex-Ald. Colbert asserted. "Get the party organized again this year to a majority degree of solidarity than ever before in the history of this city. Let us have Frank McKay, the Labor alderman from Ward Three as the first real Labor mayor of London."

Advise Reorganization.

"It is time for a general reorganization. This is going to be a big year for Labor generally. I am satisfied that there are people of all walks in life merely waiting for the move in the right direction by the leaders of Labor, not only in London but throughout the country."

Ex-Ald. Colbert's remarks were warmly received, particularly his reference to the need of a reorganized party and a Labor mayor. Throughout the evening other members drew along the same lines, urging renewed effort and lending further encouragement for the fight. While advising his associates not to regard Delegate Colbert's remarks as his personal candidature too seriously, Aid, Frank McKay concurred with the views expressed, that the moment had arrived for Labor's greatest achievement. He felt that Labor was treading on safe ground, and he was confident from recent experiences that they were going to meet with support in the most unexpected sources.

Arthur Mould Speaks.

Arthur Mould, the newly-elected president, also stated that the time had come in London for "Labor to stop playing and build up a real party to solve the storms and vicissitudes of other campaigns." He touched upon the "broadening-out" policies already enunciated by local Labor as well as Progressive Party leaders throughout the country, and urged his colleagues to concentrate their efforts in an educational campaign to bring sympathizers of all occupations into the movement.

"We have to eliminate the idea that Labor is just another political party," he warned. "It is more than a party. It is a movement of the masses of the people." During the address the president compared the recent address in London by the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen with one by Ramsay MacDonald, the leader of the British Labor Party, branding the former as merely a plea for the people to vote for the Tories and not those terrible Grits.

Mr. Meighen's address was supposed to be magnificent," he stated, "but Ramsay MacDonald conducted an appeal for all that is best in humanity against political subterfuge, trickery and manipulation."

Elect Officers.

Donald Wright, member of the Port Stanley Railway Commission, was nominated for the presidency, but declined to allow his name to stand. He was elected to the organization committee, and predicting a big year for Labor, urged greater co-operation and energy.

The following officers were elected for the current year: President, Arthur Mould; vice, ex-Ald. John Ashton; treasurer, R. H. Hessel; secretary, William Sharman. Organization committee: Ex-Ald. John Colbert and Donald Wright. Auditors: Aid, Frank McKay, D. Tallant and Mrs. William Burnard. Mrs. Burnard was also selected as the representative from the Women's Labor Party.

ARREST CHATHAM MAN ON A FRAUD CHARGE

Frank Crow Alias Anderson Is Taken Into Custody by Local Police.

Clever detective work on the part of P. C. Snell last night resulted in the arrest of Frank Crow, alias Anderson, believed wanted by High Constable Peters of Kent County on a charge of fraud.

On information received early in the evening, Constable Snell was assigned to the case. Furnished with meagre details only, he proceeded to a Wharncliffe road south, and in a few moments observed a car bearing a Chatham number driving towards the city. He followed the auto to the downtown district, and Crow was lodged in the cells, waiting further word from Constable Peters.

TALLANT IS CHAIRMAN

The famous Pine Lawn tangle was recalled to the memory of the housing commissioners at their inaugural session last night, when by formal communication, the firm of Ivey, Elliott, Wells and Gillanders notified them that their client, H. C. McBride had authorized them to take legal action to collect an account of $1,348.93 if they did not pay within a reasonable time.

As the architect for the city houses constructed at Pine Lawn, Mr. McBride files this claim for his services. The controversy dates back to October, 1922, when he first submitted his bill to the city council. Again in January, 1923, he renewed his claim with the housing commission. The bill was never paid.

"I move we file the letter from the solicitors," Commissioner Tallant stated, and his colleagues voted accordingly. "We have had those threats before," he added. Another bill was submitted from A. E. N. Weekes, the commission's solicitor, for $600. This was laid over for a further consideration, Commissioner Tallant questioning the item. City Clerk Sam Baker submitted City Solicitor Meredith's opinion in connection with the Swift appeal, that the city council held no power in the matter of refunds. This was also left over until the next session.

Commissioner Tallant was re-elected chairman for the ensuing year. R. H. Hessel was elected vice-chairman.

ENGINEERS' BANK IS PLANNED HERE

Local Member of Organization Says Canadian Charter Being Sought.

That the Canadian branch of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is about to ask for a charter to establish a bank in the Co-operative International Bank in Canada is the opinion of a local member of the organization.

The Canadian organization has some 2,000 members, and there are 300 members in London. At the present time they are doing their banking through a local institution and this money is in turn transferred to the head office of the Engineers' Bank in Cleveland, Ohio. The inconvenience of this method has led to the suggestion of a Canadian branch of the bank being founded. "The engineer's bank in the States has proven most satisfactory," he said. "Its bylaws state that not more than 10 per cent in dividends may be paid to stockholders, and all the surplus must be turned into the bank's reserve or divided among the depositors. Further, no stockholder can hold more than $500 worth of stock, and no cornering of shares is allowed. If a branch of the bank was to be founded in Canada the same bylaws would be in force."

COAL OPERATORS URGED TO DELAY PAY REDUCTIONS

Premier of Nova Scotia Urges Corporation Head To Negotiate.

EXPECT DEVELOPMENT

Canadian Press Despatch.

Halifax, Jan. 18.—In an exchange of telegrams today between Premier Armstrong and President R. M. Wolvin of the British Empire Steel Corporation, the former urged Mr. Wolvin to reopen wage negotiations with the miners in Cape Breton, now idle because of the twenty per cent wage cut announced last Tuesday, and to suspend the wage reduction until further meetings had proved fruitless.

Mr. Wolvin replied that he expected developments along on Saturday, but did not indicate what form they would take.

MEN STILL IDLE.

Sydney, N.S., Jan. 18.—The situation created through the tie-up of the Cape Breton coal mines as a result of the British Empire Steel Corporation's twenty per cent cut in wages on Tuesday last at midnight, pursued the same quiet course to-night that has marked the whole period of idleness.

Maintenance men are being allowed to work as usual, but the executive of the United Mine Workers stand on their first order to the men to remain away from work until definite instructions are received from the international president John L. Lewis, advising just what attitude the parent body will assume in the event of a real strike in Cape Breton.

Hon. Dr. A. Cameron, provincial secretary in the Nova Scotia government, is in Cape Breton as Premier Armstrong's personal representative, and while no government action in the controversy has been announced this afternoon there is a current rumor that steps will be taken if the situation is not cleared up otherwise over the week-end.

The situation bears none of the earmarks of the usual coal miners' strike. Rumors of an early peace between the miners and operators are being circulated.

Defends Course.

At the British Empire Steel Corporation headquarters today, Vice-President M. Wang issued the following statement bearing upon the wage rates in dispute.

"Certain statements have been made in reference to the wage rates of the lower paid employees of the Dominion Coal Company which give an erroneous impression in regard to the number of employees of this class and the proportion they bear to the total number of men employed by the company.

"Actually there are very few men receiving this low rate, and generally speaking, it is paid to boys, to old men or to certain employees who for one reason or another are physically incapable of giving return in labor that justifies a rate higher than the minimum. In many cases these older employees, while drawing the minimum rate themselves, have sons working who are drawing a high rate.

"There must be a minimum rate. This rate is always attacked and is unfairly cited as typical, when as a matter of fact it is the exception.

"The wages a day paid men vary from the minimum of $2.25 per day to $5.50 and $6.00 per day, there being 39 different rates."

WANT FAIR WAGE CLAUSE WINDSOR SCHOOL CONTRACT

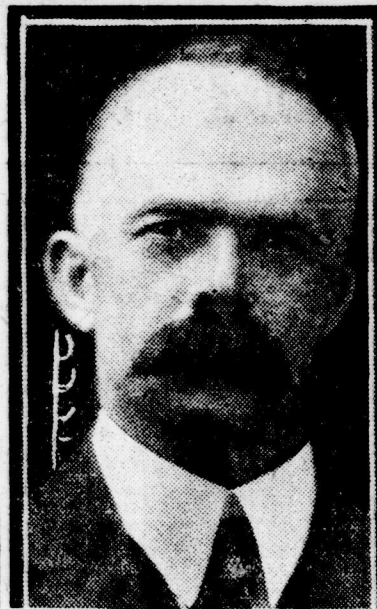

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Jan. 18.—Alleging that non-union workmen are employed by the Windsor Construction Company, which was awarded contracts to build an addition to Assumption street school, members of the local bricklayers' union tonight asked members of the board of education to insist on a fair wage clause being included in the contract.

Italians, it is said, who recently came from Europe, are paid 50 cents an hour for laying bricks, the union bricklayers told school trustees, when the scale paid by all other contractors is $1.25 an hour.

INSPECTOR SAYS TECHNICAL STAFF IS UNEQUALLED

F. S. Rutherford Speaks Highly of London School and Officers.

BEST IN ONTARIO

The staff of the London Technical School is unequalled in Ontario, according to F. S. Rutherford, technical school inspector of the department of education, Toronto, at the meeting of the Board of Education yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Rutherford, who is in town, investigating conditions and seeking opinions from manufacturers and tradesmen regarding a return to the apprentice system or a closer cooperation between the trades and the school, spoke at the conclusion of the luncheon.

He stated that he was always glad to come to London because of the cooperation and harmony existing between local educationalists and the department. He said that from his observations he had decided that London was well equipped with a staff that was unequalled in either academic or trade qualifications, and that all seemed eager to work with the principal and the board in doing their best to make the Technical School a real unit in community life.

"Something should be done in regards to a return, in some manner to the old apprenticeship system. I am making inquiries here regarding this and also as to whether the school is meeting the needs for which it was designed. Part time apprenticeship and part time school would fill the bill, I think, and this will probably be done, although I cannot say definitely."

Referring to the adolescent classes of the city, Mr. Rutherford said that they were held up as an example of what could be done, in every other part of the province.

PARIS AND LONDON AGAIN IN DEADLOCK

Situation in New Palatinate Republic Causes Disagreement Between Countries.

Associated Press Despatch.

Paris, Jan. 18.—Paul Tirard, French high commissioner in the Rhineland, and Lord Kilmarnock, charge d'affaires, of the British embassy in Berlin, have failed to come to an agreement respecting the ordinances recently enacted by the separatists in the Bavarian Palatinate, have referred back to their respective governments.

The questions at issue, therefore, again are in deadlock between Paris and London. There is hope that an agreement may yet be reached, it was said in official circles tonight, but it was before it was referred to the Rhineland commission. The British persist in their refusal to approve the decisions taken by the municipal authorities acting under the new Palatinate republic, while the French are said to be quite as decided in their refusal to accept the theory that the occupation authorities are bound to impose the orders of the Reich government on the Palatinate if the inhabitants decide otherwise. It is thought here to be very likely that the Palatinate situation will be one of the questions the MacDonald government will inherit from the present British government, as the chances for an early settlement of the controversy are considered greatly diminished.

Dear Marie,
Horrors! I'm most too scared to tell — but I guess I'll have to fear up sooner or later. And I was getting on so beautifully too. That last jump was really professional, but — crinkle, crackle — and your perfectly good skis were broken! I nearly broke my ankle too. Oh Marie, it was agony. How ever, Jack had my little bottle of Campanas Italian Balm in his pocket, so I rubbed some of it on, and it relieved matters considerably. I always carry it in cold weather to rub on my face and hands at intervals, and so keep them looking smooth and soft all the time

Health and Comfort

AS age advances our wants are not many and with reasonably good health we can enjoy the peaceful period of life in comfort and happiness.

But unfortunately there are certain ills which conspire to destroy the pleasure of this time in life and they are usually of a decidedly painful nature.

The kidneys are often the first of the bodily organs to fail. Then the poisonous acids which should be eliminated by the kidneys circulate in the blood and cause backache, rheumatism, lumbago and the many ailments which make life so miserable.

There has, perhaps, never been a medicine so well suited for people of advancing years as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This statement is founded on the many thousands of cases reported to us from time to time.

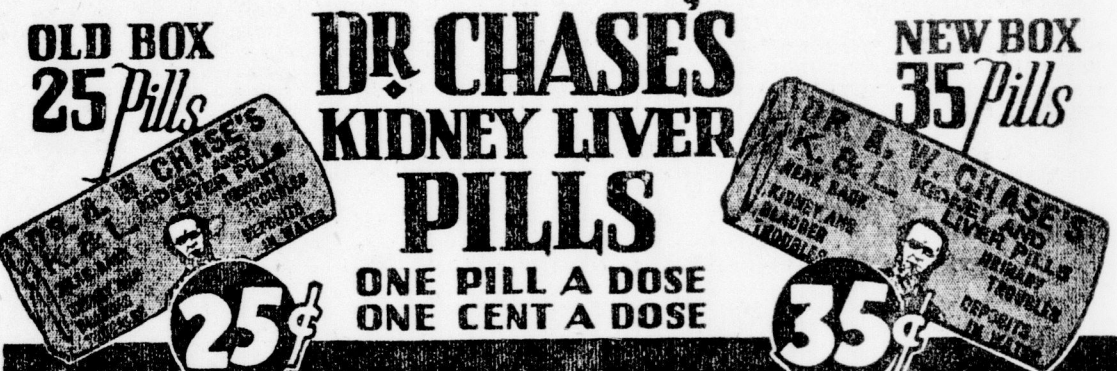

The success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-

Liver pills is due to their direct and specific action on the liver, kidneys and bowels whereby the accumulating poisons are quickly swept from the system and the cause of pains and aches promptly removed.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills do not lose their effect on the system as do so many medicines but can be depended on absolutely to bring about the desired results. Used one pill a dose at bedtime as often as is necessary to keep the bowels regular, they relieve indigestion, biliousness and constipation and keep the system in healthful condition.

You will notice that while the price of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills has been increased to 35 cents, the box now contains 35 pills instead of 25 as formerly.

Likewise the price of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is now 60 cents a box of 60 pills instead of 50 cents for 50 pills. Edman Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

The Kidneys are the filters of your body

THE kidneys are two bean-shaped organs situated in the lumbar region of the upper part of the abdomen. Through them flows all the blood in your body every three minutes. After being cleansed by the kidneys of all impurities and waste matter, the purified blood is then returned to the circulation.

If these most important organs of your body, the kidneys, become inflamed or congested, they are unable to function correctly. Then your blood circulates through your body heavy with poisons and waste matter, setting up conditions that will cause a serious, and perhaps fatal illness.

How are you to know the condition of your Kidneys?

If you have constant headaches, pains in the back, a frequent desire to urinate, accompanied by a burning sensation, swelling of the joints or black specks floating before your eyes—any one of these symptoms is Nature's warning that you have kidney trouble. You must heed such warnings immediately.

There is no better remedy in the world for kidney troubles than Gin Pills. These pills remove the obstructions and heal the inflamed condition of the kidneys, restoring them to full activity. Gin Pills are the recognized specific for all kidney troubles. They positively restore the kidneys to a normal condition.

Yowler the Bob Cat Finds Danny Meadow Mouse Hiding in the Can

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Yowler the Bob Cat grinned as Gray Fox took to his heels. He snarled once, just to make Gray Fox run a little faster, if that were possible. Then Yowler turned his attention to that rusty old tomato can which had landed just in front of him. It had landed right end up.

Now, Yowler may have as much curiosity as any other, but he seldom allows his curiosity to overcome his suspicion. Yowler is a very suspicious person. That rusty old can looked harmless enough. Yes, sir, it looked harmless enough. Just the same, Yowler was suspicious of it. If it was as harmless as it looked why had Gray Fox lost his temper over it?

Yowler sat for a long time, staring at that old can, his show tail twitching. Then he slowly walked around the can at a safe distance, never once taking his eyes from it.

"It is nothing but what it looks to be, an old can," thought Yowler. "It is nothing but what it looks to be, an old can," thought Yowler. "It is nothing but what it looks to be, an old can," thought Yowler.

Having made up his mind to this, Yowler walked over to the old can and sniffed at the opening in the top. Such a chance as came over Yowler then. His eyes fairly glowed with eagerness and delight. His stub of a tail twitched faster than ever. There was a Meadow Mouse in that can! There wasn't the least bit of doubt about it. He understood now why Gray Fox had been knocking that old can about. He had been trying to get that mouse out.

Yowler took another good, long sniff. His mouth began to water and he began to purr with satisfaction. He would have that mouse himself. Yes, sir, he would have that mouse himself. You see, at first it didn't enter his head that he might have any trouble in getting that mouse. Here it was right under his very nose. Of course he could get it.

He reached out and gently tipped the can over on its side. Then he crouched flat to the ground, just a good jump back of that old can, and waited. He waited and waited and waited. He didn't make a sound. Only that stub of a tail moved. It twitched every now and then. Yowler was waiting for Danny Meadow Mouse to make up his mind that the way was clear, and to come out. So he waited and waited and waited.

"It is nothing but what it looks to be, an old can," thought Yowler.

But Danny Meadow Mouse had gained much wisdom since meeting Gray Fox. He wanted to get out of that old can. He wanted to get back to the safety of his home under a certain stump on the edge of that garden. He never had wanted anything more. He was bruised and sore and lame from having been thrown about so in that old can. But he was wise enough to know that he didn't know if the way was clear outside, and he did know that he was safe inside. So Danny remained right where he was. He stonily suspected that Gray Fox was lying in wait for him somewhere. You see, as yet he knew nothing about Yowler the Bob Cat.

COULDN'T SLEEP HEART WAS BAD NERVES A WRECK

Mr. H. A. Reid, Upper Musquodoboit, N.S., writes:—"I am very thankful for the benefit I have received by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills."

When I came home from overseas, in 1920, my heart was very badly affected by concussion and my nerves were a dreadful wreck. I was very short winded, and could not possibly sleep at night, in fact, I was in such a condition I felt as if I did not wish anyone to speak to me. I thought I would try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and before I had taken two boxes I could enjoy a good night's rest as well as anyone.

There are lots of returned men who are suffering the same as I did, and I feel sure that if they would only try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they would receive the same relief that I have.

Shall He Marry Her Because She Loves Him, Though He Cannot Reciprocate Her Love?—The Lonely Wife Who Wants to Adopt a Baby—How Can a Boy Regain His Ring From a Girl Who Refuses to Return It?

Dear Miss Dix—I am a bachelor thirty-five years old. I have a woman friend of twenty-six with whom I have gone around for several years and whom I have regarded as a good pal and chum, and nothing else. Three weeks ago this girl's parents moved to a distant state. The evening before they left I took the girl to dinner, and I got the surprise of my life when she told me that she did not want to go away and leave me and that if I told her to stay she would be glad to do so, because she loved me above everything else.

I told her I didn't care for her in that way and that she had better go on with her parents. But ever since she went away she has written me daily letters telling me how heart-broken she is without me and begging me to let her come to me. Here is my problem: Shall I marry her, make her happy and make myself miserable, or shall I tell her that I cannot marry her because I do not love her, and thus break her heart?

GEORGE S.

Summary

When women take the initiative in love-making and just as a man does when he goes a-courting. And men have to learn how to spunk up and say "No" to the women they don't love and don't want, just as women turn down a proposition from a man for whom they do not care.

You are in great danger, George, of wrecking your whole life, because you are so flattered at having a woman make love to you and propose to you that you are about to lose your head and do the most criminally foolish thing that a man can possibly do. And that is to marry a woman whom he doesn't love because she loves him.

Lots of men do it. Lots of men have married women that they knew at the time were not suitable wives for them—women who didn't belong to their strata of society, women who bored them, women they knew to be brainless little fools. But the women clung to them and cried at the thought of being parted from them, and the poor, befuddled men didn't have the backbone to break away from the clutching hands and flee from the tears and save themselves.

Don't be this sort of a weak, sentimental fool, George. Just realize this: that if you don't love a woman before you marry her, you will come to hate her after you are tied to her, because every woman puts her best foot foremost before the wedding. If she doesn't charm you when she has got on her company clothes and her company manners, she will be actually repulsive to you when you see her in scrappers and curl papers, and when you have to put up with her nerves and her temper.

It takes a lot of love to enable anybody, and especially a man, to stand matrimony.

And don't think that you will make the woman happy by marrying her when you don't love her. A shaghailed husband is a poor substitute for a volunteer one. You will always resent her having got the better of you. You will always feel her a burden, and you will let her know it. Besides, the chances are that some day you will meet the One Woman and fall in love with her.

Say "No" to the girl and stick to it, and don't worry about her dying of a broken heart. They never do. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a woman of thirty-eight and live in the country, but I find it very lonely, as my husband is out at work all day. I have no children, and will never have any. I am very anxious to adopt one, but my husband will not consent to it.

It would be a great comfort for me to have a little one to love and to take care of. Will you give me your ideas about adopting a baby?

MRS C. L.

Answer:

I think, Mrs. C. L., that the best thing that anybody can do is to take a little homeless, orphaned child and to bring it up so that it will never know that it is motherless and fatherless. Also, I think that it is the best-paying investment that anybody can make.

When we get middle-aged we begin to lose interest in ourselves. We know pretty much what we are going to be and have. Fate has dealt our cards for us and we know our future. Nor is there very much more that we want for ourselves.

Then is when the blessing of children comes in. They bring new life and gaiety in the house. They bring fresh interests. They bring hope and ambition, so that people literally live their lives over again in their children, and they can look forward to their children doing all of the things they would have liked to do and couldn't do.

If you haven't any child of your own, the best thing to do is to get a substitute one, and adopting a child has some advantages over having one of your own. You can pick out a girl or a boy, and the kind of a looking child you want, instead of having to take what the stork brought you. And it may very well be that this child will have fine talents inherited from its ancestors that are not in your blood.

Don't be afraid of the child's not loving you or of your not caring for it as much as you would one of your own. Why, you can't raise a puppy without getting crazy over it; and there is something in the cling of little helpless hands that goes right to your heart and stays there forever. So, if your husband opposes your adopting a baby, just persuade him to let you take one for a little while on trial. And when he sees how much happier you are and what an interest it brings into your life, and when he feels the little soft, warm thing nestled in his arms, he will never let it go.

Some people hesitate to adopt children, fearing that they may turn out badly. Well, that is the risk people take with their own children. We have to take a chance on everything in life, and no more adopted children turn out badly than do the children given us by nature.

Bring a child up in the way it should go, and it will not depart from it, no matter whether it is your own flesh and blood or a stranger's. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—A girl asked me to let her try on my class ring and she kept it. I have written her several letters and asked her for it, but she refuses to return it. I prize my ring very highly and am anxious to get it back. Can you tell me how to do so?

TAD.

Answer:

There is nobody more despicable, Tad, than the girl who makes her sex a cloak for her dishonesty. Many girls, I am sure, because they know that men have not the nerve to treat them as they deserve to be treated. This girl has stolen your ring and means to keep it, and the only way you can get it is to write her word that unless she returns it to you by a certain date you will swear out a warrant against her, charging her with having gotten goods under false pretences. DOROTHY DIX.

WEDDINGS

RIDER—THOMPSON.

A pretty house wedding took place this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents on Elias street, when Ethel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Parkinson Thompson, was married to George Ernest Rider, also of this city. Rev. Dean Tucker performed the ceremony. Quantities of roses and spring flowers were used throughout the rooms, making a pretty setting for the bride, who wore a French gown of sand shade georgette heavily beaded with bandings of black fur. She also wore a corsage of Ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Lucy Thompson, sister of the bride, wore a pretty frock of French blue georgette, and Miss Gladys Thompson, another sister, was gown in blue canton crepe. Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served at a table effectively decorated with pink roses and tall pink candles in silver sticks. Covers were laid for forty. Mr. and Mrs. Rider left later on a honeymoon to points west, and upon their return they will reside on Lorne avenue.

WOMEN and THE HOME

DENNY BROOKS

A STORY OF COURAGE.
By ELENORE MEHERIN.CHAPTER LXXIV.
Joan's Job.

Joan was wearing an orchid. Or-chids had a memory for Denny—memory of vanity, extravagance, Lou Benda.

And of all things to see this naive Joan with the delicate, flaunting thing pinned boastfully on the dark suit! He stared with cool challenge. "Say, Joan—haven't I eloped and done it, have you?"

She laughed merrily. "It's done me, I've lost my job. On these happy occasions I mourn with orchids."

"By way of economy, I suppose?" "By way of telling the world it may go bang!"

They were at the cafeteria. Without any definite understanding quite regularly and at the same hour for lunch. Joan had an elaborate array of salad, baked ham, cornbread, strawberry shortcake, heaped with cream—an extra portion—and a pot of coffee.

She shoved the dishes toward her, making room for Denny and his tray. With a delighted chuckle he counted up the cost of her meal.

"Eighty cents, girl! You can't expect to eat again for some weeks?" "Is that so? I expect to banquet."

You see I work on the theory that until him that hath shall be given. I buy an orchid—and more strawberry shortcake than I can possibly eat. So I'm one of them that 'he gets, and then at another. Does it make you bitter?"

"Not any more. But when I was 19 and really thought myself a genius I used to just seethe with fury against every man on earth. Now I don't care. And as for you, I hope you go a thousand times further ahead."

She took off the orchid. "I don't need you any more, you flower! Would you like to go and see Katy, orchid? We're the whole afternoon free. Should I do that, Dennyman?"

"Will you go up to Seattle then?" She glanced up frightened. "Oh, you think I should? You think I can't get a job?"

"How do I know? I was only asking the question."

"I thought I'd stay here. You see, I did want to be here for the Exhibition. I can get a job—I'm pretty sure of it. I assure you! The only difference is I have to take the first thing that comes."

"Why?"

The white face was suddenly crimson. But she shrugged and laughed at the orchid. "That's my way when I'm out of a job. I always take the first that comes."

Denny's eyes she added wistfully: "You might have to buy a meal for me if I didn't."

"I guess I could do that, too, Joan. I thought you had a good place there."

"Yes, it was. There came a smile that made the sensitive mouth a little grim. "Down-and-outers are some things, aren't they, like those ponderous black clouds that go shoving themselves in the very face of the sun? Ham's good, isn't it?"

Denny answered through his teeth: "You've got a sweet way, Joan, of making a fellow feel that he's busted through a door that was locked and a sign up saying, 'Keep out!'"

Fallor dropped like a veil slowly from her cheeks to her lips. She didn't shut her eyes quick enough to hide tears.

"But I don't do that to you. I talk so much that I grow afraid afterwards." She leaned toward him impulsively. "Why, I'd tell you anything you wanted to know. You're ever so much more comforting than the North Wind, my last friend. Well, I've sent my money home—all I could spare. So I have to earn more. I haven't sent anything. Oh, it would be terrible. So that's why I'll have to take the first thing that offers." Denny felt, as he often did with Joan, that they were walking in a dark alley and she came up suddenly like a terrified child and put her hand on his arm and clung to him. Her eyes affected him like that. When she spoke in hurried sentences the clear voice lowered. Now he wanted to say:

"Don't sit there kidding me, Joan. I see through that orchid. I see through this banter. Say, haven't I pulled it? You're a peach, Gee, you look pretty spiffy today."

The young, tender eyes were suddenly lighted with inspiration. "Say, Joan, why couldn't you come down to the office?" He grinned. "My office, if it please you? You could try it out while you're looking for something better. There's going to be somebody there. Why shouldn't it be you?"

"You mean it? You're offering me a job?"

"Do you take it? Not much of a salary for you—$115 a month."

"I take it! Oh, the gods are kind to you."

"Joan, I should think it would make you sure to know that you've as good as a brain as I have, and then you had to quit, and now look at the chance I don't get, and then at another. Does it make you bitter?"

"Not any more. But when I was 19 and really thought myself a genius I used to just seethe with fury against every man on earth. Now I don't care. And as for you, I hope you go a thousand times further ahead."

"I guess I could do that, too, Joan. I thought you had a good place there."

"Yes, it was. There came a smile that made the sensitive mouth a little grim. "Down-and-outers are some things, aren't they, like those ponderous black clouds that go shoving themselves in the very face of the sun? Ham's good, isn't it?"

Denny answered through his teeth: "You've got a sweet way, Joan, of making a fellow feel that he's busted through a door that was locked and a sign up saying, 'Keep out!'"

Fallor dropped like a veil slowly from her cheeks to her lips. She didn't shut her eyes quick enough to hide tears.

"But I don't do that to you. I talk so much that I grow afraid afterwards." She leaned toward him impulsively. "Why, I'd tell you anything you wanted to know. You're ever so much more comforting than the North Wind, my last friend. Well, I've sent my money home—all I could spare. So I have to earn more. I haven't sent anything. Oh, it would be terrible. So that's why I'll have to take the first thing that offers." Denny felt, as he often did with Joan, that they were walking in a dark alley and she came up suddenly like a terrified child and put her hand on his arm and clung to him. Her eyes affected him like that. When she spoke in hurried sentences the clear voice lowered. Now he wanted to say:

"Don't sit there kidding me, Joan. I see through that orchid. I see through this banter. Say, haven't I pulled it? You're a peach, Gee, you look pretty spiffy today."

The young, tender eyes were suddenly lighted with inspiration. "Say, Joan, why couldn't you come down to the office?" He grinned. "My office, if it please you? You could try it out while you're looking for something better. There's going to be somebody there. Why shouldn't it be you?"

"You mean it? You're offering me a job?"

"Do you take it? Not much of a salary for you—$115 a month."

"I take it! Oh, the gods are kind to you."

"Joan, I should think it would make you sure to know that you've as good as a brain as I have, and then you had to quit, and now look at the chance I don't get, and then at another. Does it make you bitter?"

"Not any more. But when I was 19 and really thought myself a genius I used to just seethe with fury against every man on earth. Now I don't care. And as for you, I hope you go a thousand times further ahead."

She took off the orchid. "I don't need you any more, you flower! Would you like to go and see Katy, orchid? We're the whole afternoon free. Should I do that, Dennyman?"

"Will you go up to Seattle then?" She glanced up frightened. "Oh, you think I should? You think I can't get a job?"

"How do I know? I was only asking the question."

was for Katy, he paused. It was bathed in a soft blue and white light. Drapes hung from two windows. At the third, standing on a small ladder, was Joan. She was vehemently pressing the curtain into place. "Stay there! Don't think! Stay there!" A whang from the hammer. Then a startled "Ouch! Curses!" The hammer dropped; Joan frantically sucking her finger.

Denny, loaded with the little cartons and bags, rustled the packages. Joan turned, a flood of color racing to her temples. She hunched her shoulders, singling like a youngster caught in a pink.

"How did you get in? You just came. You didn't hear?"

"I was just singing."

"You were, were you, sweet? Sweet, how's the finger?"

"You think I'm naturally bad-tempered, then? But look at the grapes. Are they very stunning? Will Katy like them?"

"Wonders! Say—it's great! Gee—mighty nice in you, Joan."

"Say, Dennyman Brooks," Joan looked down, laughing at him. "I'll just say 'Gee' the way you do. Then you'll know how I feel about doing this. Gee! Understand? What's in the packages?"

"Meals."

"Who's to eat them?"

"None? Here?" She climbed down, "Just you and I? A picnic?"

She was taking the boxes, opening them, eating an olive, a Dutch pickle. Suddenly she laughed outright. "To celebrate my job or your luck in getting me?"

"Both."

"Do you think I'll do? No, honestly, do you?"

"I heard today you were competent."

In the little kitchen they put the cold meat, the potato salad on plates, spread a napkin on the sinkboard, using it for a table. "Like this lunch, Joan?"

Denny asked.

"Gee! Are you going to let me help with the rest of the fixing?"

"I was hoping you'd offer. Get to hang the pictures—put the books on the shelves."

"I wish Katy could be here now, don't you? Will she think we're stealing fun on her?"

"No, she won't. She'll be so delighted, Joan, she'll say a prayer to her angel for you."

"I love Katy. Do you know that, Dennyman? I think she's more beautiful than anyone I ever met. I wish she would pray to her angel—"

"Do you need prayers, Joan? I'll say a few for you."

Joan laughed. "We get along fine, don't we? Are you going to let me have my office?"

"Yes, Katy likes blue, maybe some amber tones in it—well—you know. Something gay for her. The place'll be ready then. We can go in it tomorrow. You're a brick, Joan! Well, you bring them up there so I can hang them? I'm going to finish the work tonight."

A little after five o'clock Denny stepped into a delivery van on Taylor. He came forth with many bags and paper cartons. Quite softly he entered the apartment.

At the door of the little room that was for Katy, he paused. It was bathed in a soft blue and white light. Drapes hung from two windows. At the third, standing on a small ladder, was Joan. YOUTHFUL FOLLIES COMING TO GRAND Features Many Novelties, Including Display of Latest Fashion Creations.

There are said to be so many attractive features in "Youthful Follies" coming to the Grand Monday for three days, that space is not available to describe them all. But one of the big features that is always found at this popular theatre is the daily matinee designed for the convenience of its lady patrons. The complete performance is given then the same as in the evening.

But to revert to "Youthful Follies." It is a bit larger than the ordinary show, being on the revue type. In ten magnificent scenes, it offers rare novelty in its stage settings. There is also several sea-shore vistas that afford an opportunity for a varied and pleasing display of the latest fashion creations in both feminine bathing suits and beach gowns.

A really splendid cast is promised. It is headed by Eddie Cole, a comedian of unusual and amusing qualifications. Dolly Davis, the soubrette, is said to be most pleasing both in looks and personal attainments. She was recently seen in Keith vaudeville at the head of a "girl act" called "Dollie Davis Revue" Nit and Tuck, Tuck, colored comedians, will be an extra attraction.

Harry Morris, a Hebrew comedian, offers a brand new delineation of this popular type of comic; Julia Gifford, besides contributing artistically as prima donna, does a high-class singing specialty; Myrtle Andrews, a beautiful Titian-haired girl, is a popular favorite; Harold Kennedy and Harvey Brooks present a very entertaining skit called "Talking Back" and "Shorty De Wit" and Mabel Gunther will offer "A Pint and a Half of Fun."

chorus that is second to none. It has every attribute that goes to make a pleasing ensemble—youth, beauty, ability and vivacity. And its members have been wonderfully costumed in gowns that are exquisite and attractive to a degree. As an extra vaudeville attraction, Nit and Tuck, colored entertainers, will present a specialty of song and dance in which Johnnie Nit's fancy stepping will be featured. This act, last season with Al Reeves in Columbia burlesque, was lately featured in "Slow Come," one of the many colored organizations that have been entertaining New Yorkers this year.

WALTER SCANLON COMING TO LONDON

Noted Irish Singer To Appear at Grand in "Blarney Stone."

In witnessing the performance of Walter Scanlon in "The Blarney Stone," one can almost smell the turf smoke as it rises from the chimney of his mother's cottage. Those who love a fine play dealing with delightful Irish characters will find in "The Blarney Stone" at the Grand on Friday and Saturday next, matinee and evening, a most satisfying performance. The play has all that charming romance that still lives in the Green Isle, the gentle wit and rollicking humor that is so characteristic of the Celtic race, and with a love story of absorbing interest. Edward E. Rose, the author, is a skilled dramatist who knows how to blend all the elements that make a successful play in a masterly manner. In this last creation of his there are unique characters who bring to the story a picturesque atmosphere, and yet are thoroughly racial in type and true to the soil. He has given Mr. Scanlan a character that fits him well. The hero is a young musician

BRITISH TO ACT, FRANCE WARNED

Thomas Declares New Labor Government Will Not Stand Aloof.

CHAMBERLAIN SPEAKS

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Jan. 18.—True to his political faith, Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, featured Britain's trade association with the dominions, in what will probably be his last speech in the House as a member of the present administration.

After criticizing the Liberals today for facilitating the defeat of the government which is expected in the vote on Monday next, he appealed to the Labor party to consider carefully the benefits that would likely follow from the adoption of the preference which the Baldwin Government recently undertook to grant to the dominions.

The speech of J. H. Thomas, in which he forecasted in a measure the foreign policy of the prospective Labor government, was the other feature of the day's proceedings in the House. Like other Labor leaders, including Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. Thomas conveyed a message to the House that a Labor government would have something to say concerning political events on the continent, particularly with regard to allied negotiations.

T. McNamara, former Coalition minister of labor, heartily congratulated J. R. Clynes on his reference to empire settlement as plucky beyond praise. Before the war, he said, more than sixteen million in the United Kingdom were classified as wage earners. Today there were seventeen million. The development of home resources would not settle the labor problem, they might develop along the lines recommended generally by Mr. Clynes and try to get the empire settlement plans moving.

Three hundred thousand young fellows, he concluded, were walking the streets wanting work. They should be given an opportunity to make good.

CANADA'S TAX SYSTEM WILL BE DISCUSSED

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Jan. 18.—A conference of provincial and federal taxation authorities will be held to discuss the consolidation of taxation systems in Canada in the interests of economy. If the majority of the provinces ask for such a conference.

Hon. J. A. Robb, acting minister of finance, today stated that the provinces had been invited by the federal government to express their wishes in the matter, but that negotiations for such a conference had reached no definite stage as yet.

COOLIDGE GIVES APPROVAL OF PLAN TO ASSIST BANKS

Washington, Jan. 18.—President Coolidge and his cabinet gave their approval today to a plan for extending the assistance of federal reserve banks and the war finance corporation to northwestern banks in the wheat-growing district which have closed or were in danger of closing.

Writers and Writings

Rolland Young Tells What He Thinks About the New Books.

SIR GEORGE W. ROSS, LL.D.

The Ryerson Press have sent me an advanced copy of "Sir George W. Ross: A Biographical Study," by Margaret Ross. The author of this book of one hundred and ninety-five pages is a kinswoman of Sir George's to whom, rightly, he is the apple of her eye, the flower of the manhood of Clan Ross in Canada until now. She has the Ross temperament par excellence in an attempt to present a volume at the fine age of 77. The chapters deal in easy and natural stages with the youth, professional and public life of one who was in a very special sense a man of Ontario. We cannot have too much biographical and other information about our national leaders. Miss Ross views things from the standpoint of an admirer and friend, and gives the personal touch which she is so well qualified to do.

Nine years before George W. Ross was born, James Ross, with his wife and four small children, immigrated from Ross-shire to East Williams Township, in Middlesex County. The clan spirit had been broken through repressive measures following the defeat of Charles Stewart and his failure to restore the throne of his father. It became literally true that the clans were "a' awa', awa'." In a log house built in the forest, George was born in 1841. The country was just recovering from the effects of the war of 1812-14, the Mackenzie rebellion had been put down, the battle for responsible government had been won, the act of union passed, and Dr. Ryerson's school system put into active operation. The railway system from Sarnia to Portland had been built by 1858.

Three Sections.

I should be tempted to group the events and services of Sir George W. Ross's life into three sections. First his earlier manhood, in which he came to understand the needs and problems of Ontario schools as he served them as teacher and inspector. Coupled with his school work were two additional spheres of preparation. He took part in debates, etc., and became a staunch and life-long advocate of temperance.

His public life began in real earnest with his election to the federal house in 1872. He made a gallant fight against very determined opposition, and amid the greatest anxiety for his wife, who died at the time of the election. The Macdonald government was soon defeated in the house on account of the "Pacific Scandal." In the appeal to the country which followed, he was returned by acclamation, and from that time he held his Middlesex riding with bonds of steel. He had to consider such matters in the house as the building of the C. P. R., the Riel rebellion, and the "National Policy" launched by Sir John Macdonald in 1876, and which for a very considerable period held the imagination of the country.

During the reciprocity debate he took an active part. After his speech he asked Sir Edward Blake how he liked the speech. "My dear boy," he said, "I should be tempted to group the events and services of Sir George W. Ross's life into three sections. First his earlier manhood, in which he came to understand the needs and problems of Ontario schools as he served them as teacher and inspector. Coupled with his school work were two additional spheres of preparation. He took part in debates, etc., and became a staunch and life-long advocate of temperance.

"I slept the whole time you were speaking," Mr. Ross's reflections may well be imagined.

Third Phase.

The third phase of his life, the phase to which the other two are more or less tributary, is the long and magnificent service which he rendered to his own province as minister of education and premier. It is no secret that when the post of minister of education was offered him by Sir Oliver Mowat, that Sir John Gibson and Hon. Richard Harcourt were in the running. Neither had had the public school training he had had, and he received the appointment. In 1885 he proposed a new act for the consolidation of the public school system.

When he became premier, the "Liberal star" was in the descendant. But for all that notable things were undertaken, such as the real discovery of New Ontario, and the building of part of the T. and N. Railway. The steel enterprise along the St. Mary's River received warm support. The first hydro commission, the good roads commission, the housing of the best sugar industry, and other progressive measures found him a ready sponsor and an enthusiastic advocate.

The biography Miss Ross has written is worthy of him, and deserves to be read widely by all of us who build on the foundations of other men.

DETECTIVES NAB ARMED BANDITS

Hamilton Police Arrest Two Heading For Toronto in Taxi.

Hamilton, Jan. 18.—Intercepted late this afternoon near Burlington, when heading for Toronto in a taxi, Edward Blasidil, aged 19, and Tony Rispoli, aged 18, alleged to have held up a dozen storekeepers and pedestrians during the past month, are tonight in the cells.

They have been identified from photographs shown to persons who were robbed. The suspects were armed with automatic pistols of heavy calibre. They showed no resistance, nor were they given any opportunity to do so. Detectives covered them with revolvers when the taxi was halted and surrounded. They will be arraigned tomorrow.

Detectives who have been investigating various robberies and holdups, became convinced three days ago that they knew the guilty parties. They showed photographs of the suspects who have been known to police circles for some time, to some of the victims of the robberies and these identified the pictures.

And the first test of a piano to be made by an experienced pianist is the action.

A piano may have the finest tone imaginable, but if the action is unresponsive, the labor necessary to produce it takes all the joy out of playing, for correct interpretations are next to impossible.

The Heintzman & Co. action is made from high-grade woods, sectioned to a fraction, balanced in a manner which assures the player of perfect graduation of tone, from the almost inaudible sound to the loud crescendo, and the hammers surmounted with specially selected felts.

HART COMES BACK IN GREAT THRILLER

Appears at Loew's in Two-Gun
Drama Crammed With Action.

"Five's thousand dollars reward for Bill's heart!" But it was not Bill Hart's heart, it was "Wild Bill" Hickok's heart.

In the old days when "Wild Bill" was the most feared of all peace officers, an enemy selected eight desperate characters and offered them $5,000 to kill "Wild Bill" and bring in his heart. The reward was tempting and the badmen set out in earnest fashion, intent on collecting.

They met "Wild Bill" on the Topeka train and started shooting. Four of them remained there and the other four returned to Abilene and announced their abandonment of the untoward mission.

William S. Hart returns to the screen in "Wild Bill Hickok," a Paramount picture coming to Loew's next Monday. The romantic story of the noted two-gunman is one of the most thrilling pictures he has ever made. Mr. Hart wrote the story. The supporting cast includes Ethel Gray Terry, Kathleen O'Connor, James Farley, Jack Gardner, Carl Gerard, Naida Cark and others.

Trade Union Congress Calls
British Railroads To Conference.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, Jan. 18.—The Ottawa Trades and Labor Council tonight unanimously decided to write to Sir Henry Thornton to protest against the Canadian National Railways reducing the wages of laborers in their employ to 25 cents per hour. Tom Moore, president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, and also a director of the C. N. R., was present, and explained that it was hardly fair to say that the wages of regular maintenance-of-way employees of the C. N. R. had been cut. He informed the meeting that the regular unskilled C. N. R. employees were paid 38 cents per hour. It was the casually employed laborer who was paid 25 cents per hour.

FAMOUS PICTURE COMES TO LOEW'S

"The Common Law" Has Cast of Noted Film Stars.

"The Common Law," the famous Robert W. Chambers novel, has been done into pictures by the Selznick company and will be shown at Loew's Theatre for three days, commencing next Thursday. Next to the story value perhaps the most outstanding feature of this production is its cast which co-stars Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle and Elliott Dexter, and carries in their support such celebrated players as Doris May, Hobart Bosworth, Miss du Pont, Bryant Washburn, Phyllis Haver, Harry Myers and Wally Van. The story of "The Common Law" is so well known that it is hardly necessary to more than briefly sketch it. It has to do with the life of an innocent young girl, thrown quite by chance into the society of artists, sculptors, and the Bohemian atmosphere which surrounds this class of people. She consents to pose in the nude and achieves a great success as a model. Great love comes to her and is returned by the artist who first saw her possibilities, but any union between them is bitterly opposed by the artist, Neville's, family. She finally offers to live with her lover as his common law wife and such a union is almost effected. A dramatic conclusion is grippingly and realistically handled.

CO-OPERATIVE SELLING OF FARM GOODS PLANNED

Alberta Farmers Will Sell All
Products by Organized Effort.

APART FROM WHEAT

Canadian Press Despatch.
Edmonton, Jan. 18.—Steps are to be taken by the United Farmers of Alberta for co-operative marketing of general farm products under one board, which would be distinct from the board in charge of the wheat pool.

The annual convention this afternoon adopted unanimously a resolution asking the executive to appoint a committee of seven to survey the field, with power to organize the different commodities under the co-operative marketing system.

It was the belief that eggs, poultry and other products were not available in Alberta in quantities which would justify the overhead of individual pools, but that one pool might profitably control the several commodities. By a small majority a resolution was passed advocating a readjustment of farmers' debts in certain cases. It was stated that farmers burdened with debts were abandoning their farms and leaving the country in ever-increasing numbers.

Reduce Indebtedness.
It was urged that where a property owner's indebtedness exceeded the value of his holdings, the indebtedness should be reduced to the "actual present value of the property so indebted." There was no suggestion of the manner in which such an adjustment might be accomplished.

Another resolution declared that present residents of Canada should be given the privilege of amortization of their indebtedness over 32 years at six per cent, "in the same way as incoming settlers."

A resolution dealing with provincial mortgage legislation declared unalterable opposition "to further concessions to the money power as represented by the mortgage loans associations in this province."

Seek Relief.
Relief was sought of the right given mortgage companies to demand leases when arrears of interest and principal were unpaid. Opposition was expressed to reinstatement of the "personal liability" clause in mortgages.

Establishment of a co-operation long term credit scheme involving the organization of local societies in a unit of one or more municipalities was approved. The purpose of the

The Farmer's Wife:

Home Again From the City With Work To Do.

Hark, hark, the dogs do bark.
The farmers are back from town.
The pipes have burst.
And that's not the worst.
But still it is home, sweet home.

They say that the best thing about going away is coming home again, and it was very evident from the welcome the dogs gave us the other night that they took that view of the situation. The long train trip with six tired children was made still longer by the train running off the track and taking two hours to get back again, and we were only three miles from our destination when it happened. The train was so hot and the night was so cold that we expected at least six cases of pneumonia as a result, but we must be a tough lot, as we were none the worse for our experience.

The temperature had taken advantage of our absence and had dropped alarmingly one night, accompanied by a high wind which had penetrated the house most thoroughly. The plans had all been put down the cellar for safety, but the frost got in and killed every one of them. The kitchen is supposed to be fairly frost-proof, too, but we found the boiler frozen solid and had to thaw it out with the coal oil heater before lighting the range, and it has been leaking ever since.

Early Rising Again.

We are beginning to get settled in our old ruts again after our holiday in the land of electric signs, evening dinner and theatre parties. It is quite a business getting the children off to school these dull mornings; it means early rising to get their lunches packed and see that they have a comfortable breakfast and clean ears before leaving. And I have early rising in the winter—I think it is very presumptuous on our part to get up before the sun does. And if we have daylight saving in the summer, why not darkness saving in the winter? In the summer nobody minding gets up anyway, the sun is in the pink dawn, and it is a very lazy person who will stay in bed when all nature is busy and there is so much to be done. But when the alarm clock trills its merry note through scheme, it was stated, would be "to obtain loans at a moderate rate of interest and on favorable terms to develop agricultural resources of the province and increase production."

INSISTED ON PERMIT.

Windsor, Jan. 18.—Work on the filtration plant at Ford, which was stopped this morning by Building Inspector Mannie, was continued this afternoon. The inspector ruled that the contractors had no right to break ground until a permit was issued. When workmen of the contractors insisted on starting excavating, the inspector threatened to call the police.

the darkness of a cold winter morning I always wish that I had been born a bear instead of a Farmer's Wife and, in the autumn, could crawl into a nice warm hole and sleep till spring.

This is the end of a very imperfect day whose imperfections began this morning at seven, when the farmer left on a business trip. First of all the sheep invaded the garden and after light refreshments in the form of my young lilacs and spruces they gorged themselves on frozen apples. One of them will never do it again, for after the avenging angel had driven them out of the garden with a broom this poor old Nanny retired to the sheep pen, and when we discovered her she was very cold mutton. Eating forbidden fruit always was a dangerous business.

When school time came the ten-year-old developed a sure enough bilious attack, not just the ordinary school sickness, and the eight-year-old trudged off alone, envying her this accomplishment which gives her so many extra holidays.

The Cows Looked Surprised.

Then the chickens and little pigs had to be fed, as the farmer had to leave some of the small chores in order to catch his train. At noon the cows and horses had to be let out to get a drink, and from their surprised expressions when I was unfastening the door I judge that my method was something quite new to them. Instead of going into the stalls beside them I climbed into the mangers from the front (I hope they won't tell the farmer about it), and from this strategic position I could unfasten the stanchions and halters without any trouble. No, indeed I'm not as afraid of them, but they don't smell nearly as nice in the winter as they do in the summer and the memory lingers on my clothes if I associate too closely with them. When I broke the ice on the water trough it fairly made my teeth ache to see them drinking such cold water, but they didn't seem to mind.

The furnace has been a greedy monster all day. I don't believe it has to be fed nearly as often when the farmer is at home; perhaps I don't give it as big meals as he does. When bringing in an armful of wood I always have a lively skirmish at the woodshed door with the fox terrier, who is fully convinced that he is a house dog and I am equally sure that he is not. When I at last rudely shut the door in his face he tells me exactly what he thinks of me and then goes and curls up beside the collier in their warm box.

The Day is Over.

And now the day is over, though the poor kiddie's bilious attack isn't, and she will have a miserable night. The chores are done as far as the Farmer's Wife and the eight-year-old could manage them, but when the farmer comes home he will have to take off his city clothes and do the milking, as I have never been fully through the bare apple branches of the business. The children are all tucked in for the night and I am alone in my glory. I have tried to sew, but it makes me sleepy; I have tried to read, but every story seems to have a murder in it and it makes the roots of my hair quite uncomfortable. The wind whistles mournfully through the bare apple branch and a vine taps at the window in a startling way. There are snarls from the woodshed as the pedigreed pug tells the mongrel to move over to his own side of the bed, there is a sudden noise in the cellar and I know perfectly well that a rat has upset a bottle, but I can't help wishing that there was a stronger bolt on the cellar door. But there, at last, is a boisterous duet of welcome from the dogs as they hear old Frank come trotting up the lane, the good man is home and the day's troubles are over.

Weak Anaemic Woman

What They Need to Restore
Good Health and Vitality.

The woman who feels tired out, who aches all over when she rises in the morning, who feels depressed most of the time, needs the help that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can give her—new, rich blood and stronger nerves. The number of disorders caused by poor blood is amazing, and most women are careless about the condition of their blood. Their nerves are quickly affected; they worry over trifles and do not obtain refreshing sleep. There may be stomach troubles and headaches; shortness of breath and a fluttering of the heart. This is a condition that calls for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the blood-improving, nerve-restoring tonic. Mrs. William Henry, Lovett street, London, Ont., has proved the value of these pills, and says: "I had a very severe attack of anaemia. I was always tired and the least thing would make me sick at the stomach. I could hardly go about and suffered terrible pains in my legs from cramps. I had no color in my face and was as white as a sheet. The doctor gave me several kinds of medicine, but could not understand why I did not get results from it. Then I went to a hospital and was there for three months, but came home no better than when I went. My friends were worried and feared consumption. While I was still in this condition a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I tried them and after a time felt they were helping me, and I gladly continued their use, and am thankful to say that I am again a well woman, and I firmly believe that had it not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I would not have got better."

The new sales tax will not increase the price of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as the company pays the tax. You can still obtain the pills through any medicine dealer at 50 cents a box, or by mail, post paid, at this price, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.—Adv.

Ontario Should Act.

Russell T. Scott, with $40 and a few clothes to his credit, is in trouble in Chicago. He is not yet 30 years of age, but has handled and lost a lot of easy money.

He figured in several nasty cases in Toronto and Hamilton, one of seduction and another breach of promise.

He is one of those individuals who prefer that hard work shall be done by other people. His time for action comes after other people have worked hard and secured the rewards for their labor. It was his policy to step in then and take the money away from them.

His business was selling bonds. He preferred the word "bonds" to anything else. He was able to drag an official of the State of Michigan over to a dinner in Toronto, where he told the guests "If all investment companies were like R. T. Scott & Co. there would be no need for blue sky laws."

He was allowed to operate in Ontario, but when he tried to worm his way into the Province of Quebec, officials there put the lid down tight, and he had to get out.

When is Ontario going to come to the stage where it has as much sense in putting the boots to unworthy financial adventurers as Quebec, Saskatchewan and other of our provinces?

Improving the Hours.

Principal Beal of the Technical School in London is authority for the statement that now, while business is slack in some of the metal working trades, he has had a number of young mechanics attending classes where they could fit themselves for advanced work in their own line.

The young man who looks on a period of unemployment as an opportunity to put himself in line for a bigger field of service is apt to find the door to the bigger field opening to him.

Once he has fired in him the desire to learn, the authorities or the state need not worry about what is going to become of him.

Toronto Has Done Well.

The harvesters are still in Toronto, some thousands of them, and they have refused to accept work at $15 per month on the farms. The chances are that if many of them were to go on the land at that price they would stay only until some chance occurred to get to the city again.

Toronto is in a peculiar position, and the problem is not one of its own making, yet that city has for weeks now had to face the position of providing for all these men who came into her borders after they had finished up the work in the west. Whether provision has been made by the city or by the citizens as individuals, the burden rests on Toronto just the same.

It is stated that there are about 5,000 unemployed in Toronto, and the harvesters constitute the most of these. That city did not ask them to come to Canada, nor, after coming here, did she invite them to come to her confines. The situation has been thrust upon her.

The capital of the province has done well to carry the load as far as it has, and in fairness to Toronto it is to be hoped some plan is worked out that will ease the load.

The Right Time.

The city solicitor has given his opinion that the council should seek legislation to enable it to make a deal with the street railway whereby the cost of paving could be spread over a period of ten years.

The work referred to especially is the Richmond street line, which was financed this year by the city, the company agreeing to pay it with interest in ten annual installments. In reality all that was used was the city's credit to find the money for the work.

It is well that argument over the advisability of the plan followed should, in this particular case, take place after the completion of the work.

Had it been indulged in before the start was made the whole project would have been tied up in knots, and Richmond street would today be the nuisance it was six months ago.

The present is a fine time to start an argument, so by all means let it proceed. The work has been done—well done—the street is a credit to the city, a pleasure to ride or drive on. So go ahead and argue.

Smoking in Council.

Ottawa has decided that there shall be no smoking while its city council is in session. London civic fathers have in recent years smoked as much as they pleased during the session.

During the regime of several mayors there was no smoking in the council chamber until a certain amount of the proceedings had been concluded.

The constant smoke screen during a session of council is open to question. It would look better, and add to the dignity of the gathering, were the members to refrain from smoking until the committee reports had been concluded and the major business of the evening transacted.

A Good Education.

Young London, as represented in its collegiate debating talent, is not allowing time to go by unimproved.

For instance, the League of Nations debate on Friday evening between South and Central colleges showed a very wide search for knowledge and a well developed grasp of the matters in which the good offices of the league have been invoked.

The facts were well presented. The young men participating made their points stand out nicely, so that two never toppled over and hit three. In some cases there was a refreshing originality in the turning of phrases, pungent and witty.

It is real, worth-while development. Many a grown-up today looks back at his school days and regrets that he never made use of such opportunities as did present to fit himself so that he might now stand up and easily and freely give expression to his ideas.

Too Big a Jump.

The presentation of the grand jury to Mr. Justice Riddell, at the winter assizes in Toronto, stated that the manner in which the records of criminals are presented in the public press leaves the impression in the young mind "that in order to become a hero one must become a criminal."

That is too far-fetched and too far removed from sense or good reason to have any effect.

Any person who has attended court cases many times has heard lawyers, especially for the defence, going over evidence, going over everything that might bring a tear to the eye of a juror, and the result has been a reputation as a great criminal lawyer.

There is no glory in crime, and it is a huge stretch of the imagination that seeks to make a story, perhaps told by a prisoner himself, an incentive to others.

All the publicity given to the Ryan case, for that is probably the one under fire—ending as it did with a life sentence and lashes—is not going to have the effect of turning one single boy to a life of crime. On the other hand it ought to have the effect of keeping them away from it.

Filling Up the States.

In the six months, July 1 to December 31, 1923, there were 337,636 immigrants passed into United States. The quota allowed in was exhausted by the following countries: Belgium, Bulgaria, Danzig, Finland, Great Britain, Greece, Italy, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Russia, Spain.

Britain, in those six months, sent 77,342 people to the States, her full quota. Germany, though suffering infinitely more than anything experienced industrially in Britain, sent 61,411, which was 6,000 short of her full quota. Italy came next with 42,057, her full share; Poland had 30,739; Russia, 24,405; all of them up to the limit allowed.

United States has the sure method of getting people to turn her way, viz., by creating the impression that there is chance of being shut out.

Its critics call the quota idea dull and stupid, but it is very potent that it has turned out to be the greatest immigration magnet United States has ever tried.

Note and Comment.

Two young men, alleged bandits, were arrested near Hamilton. They had automatic revolvers of high calibre on them. That should be about all the evidence required.

Tom Moore, the Trades and Labor nominee on the directorate of the National Railways, says a deficit is preferable to a rate of 25 cents an hour for men shoveling snow or cutting weeds. And he's on pretty safe and sane ground in making that remark.

Several drownings have been reported in Ontario centers by children skating on thin ice. That makes all the more commendable the work of the utilities commission of London in flooding a large space in Victoria Park. It is worth a good deal to parents to know their children are skating at a perfectly safe place.

WHEN SALLY CALLS.

When Sally calls what can one do
But haste to join her retinue?
For Sally is delightful, fair,
With saucy mouth and wind kissed hair,
Slim figure trim, large eyes of blue,
Small dainty feet in tiny shoe,
A heart as big as it is true;
And one would follow anywhere—
When Sally Calls.

But her calls sometimes me subdue;
Her poker ways are strange and new;
Her playing beats my skill and care;
For never can I hold a pair,
My highest card's a trey or two—
When Sally Calls.

EXPLANATION.

But for you I would be seated
In the balcony or gods;
But for you I'd never be cheated
By those flower-selling frauds;
If I didn't buy you candy
I could spend the cash on brandy,
And my life would be a bandy
But for you.

But for you I'd likely send my
Weekly pay check to the banks;
But for you I wouldn't spend my
Cash on taxis, without thanks;
Still, your whims I always follow,
'Cause my cellar is quite hollow,
And I'd never get a swallow
But for you.

"Witness" Takes Exception to the Number of Big Banquets Being Staged at Present Time.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir:—Judging from the high feasts which certain party leaders are staging at the present time, they appear to be very far from the spirit of the one upon who shoulders the government rests, (and who commands when they gave a feast to the poor and needy), and very near to the penalty of the rich glutton. If the money spent upon these feasts was distributed among the poor and unemployed of the cities in which they are held, it could be some credit to the party leaders. With newly-elected members coolly asking for several millions for some questionable project, and such a display as is being made of extravagance at the present time it would appear that the interests of the taxpayers are in very poor hands, the only prospect being to add to the tremendous national debt.

The writer is very forcibly reminded of a picture appearing in the public press some time ago, entitled "Oh Canada," depicting on the one hand a feast of luxury and gluttony, and on the other a scene of privation and want, a poor mother reaching out imploring hands for her hungry children.

Glaring contrasts exist today in many public institutions but those whose duty it is to correct conditions may as well be deaf.

The Guide Post By Henry van Dyke

THE HIGHER LAW.

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul.—Psalms xix, 7. The true uplifting and emancipation of our life comes through the recognition of the higher ties and relationships which bind us.

The progress and elevation of the soul is a process of discovering, not that it is independent and masterless, but that the lower laws and conditions under which it lives are subordinate to the higher laws, and that bondage in a certain sphere becomes transformed into liberty when it is lifted up into a higher sphere, where both he that serveth and he that is served are subject unto a supreme sovereignty which is above all.

That is what I understand by the reign of law—not the domination of one rule alone upon all that is, but the reign of law over law, the higher above the lower, and the highest of all supreme; so that those who rise to that last and topmost height, where God forever dwells and it is what he commands, are sharers in his liberty and dominion.

They became the sons of God, not because they have cast off and renounced their obligations, but because they have recognized them step by step, sphere by sphere, until at last they come with glad submission into unity and harmony with that which is sovereign and ultimate.

And that, if the Bible is true, is nothing else than Perfect Love.

CAN EUROPE HOLD TOGETHER?

Chapter XI.: Italy—the Land of Mussolini.

This series of articles is a simple but accurate explanation of world conditions, from the point of view of a distinguished specialist. These articles are the result of his most recent tour of Europe, made especially for securing the data—a trip on which he visited sixteen countries, talked with the premiers of half of them and the finance ministers of twelve, and in field observations secured a mass of facts. Mr. Sinclair says finance and economics can be told so simply a child can grasp them. His articles prove his claim.

By JOHN F. SINCLAIR.

The problem of Italy can be summed up in a sentence—she has too large a family, too much expense and too small an income.

She has 68 times as many people occupying a land not half so large as fertile as the prairie province of Manitoba. A very prolific race, living in a densely populated, semi-arid country with a very low standard of living. In 1913 the per capita annual income was $12.50 as against $18.50 in France and $35 in the United States. Before the war she had too many mouths to feed. So many were forced to leave Italy.

In 30 years, from 1876 to 1906, the number of Italians leaving her shores rose from 100,000 to 500,000 each year. The United States took a large share of these, still her population increased from 27,000,000 to 33,500,000 during this same period.

During the war, emigration stopped. She lost one million in war and disease, but she gained 2,000,000 in population from 1911 to 1921. No other nation approaches that record. After the war came the world-wide depression. Emigration barriers went up in United States and elsewhere. Her population is increasing at the present time at the alarming rate of 1,500 a day. She cannot relieve herself. Emigration barriers prevent. Result—as I write, Italy has 700,000 unemployed. The number is constantly growing. That's the first big problem for Mussolini. How to take care or get rid of the surplus population of Italy.

Too Much Expense.

The second big problem in Italy today is that of having too much expense and too little income. This problem is in the poor and needy, and very near to the penalty of the rich glutton. If the money spent upon these feasts was distributed among the poor and unemployed of the cities in which they are held, it could be some credit to the party leaders. With newly-elected members coolly asking for several millions for some questionable project, and such a display as is being made of extravagance at the present time it would appear that the interests of the taxpayers are in very poor hands, the only prospect being to add to the tremendous national debt.

WINS FIRST PRIZE FOR BIRD ESSAY

Miss Viola Bullock Captures the Award Offered by Campbell Becher Chapter.

Miss Viola Bullock, 141 Emery street, who is a pupil of Grade 8 at the Wortley Road School, is the winner of the prize offered by the Campbell Becher Chapter, I. O. D. E., for the best essay on the bird film recently shown in a local theatre. The judges in the contest were W. E. Saunders and M. W. Althouse, who chose Miss Bullock's essay on egrets, out of a large number which were entered into the competition.

The bird film, authorized by the provincial government, and recognized by the provincial chapter of the I. O. D. E., were shown with a view to giving children and grownups as well as a keener insight into bird life.

The essay follows: "Egrets are one of the most beautiful kinds of birds in America. They are very graceful and slender and have lovely white plumage. This bird has a strong resemblance to the heron. They build their nests in very high trees, called cypresses, above the water.

Their nests are built at the tops of the trees, and are very large. Their young are, like all other young birds, always hungry. The old birds go away and find them food, sometimes fish from the water near by. They take the fish home to the young. When the fish is too large to eat they drop it out of the nest to the ground.

"When the birds are killed for their plumage the young are left without anyone to feed or take care of them at night, and thus they starve to death.

"The water below the trees, where the egret lives, is very placid and still, and has a thin layer of white skin on the top. Most of the trees lie in swamps, and the scenery around is very beautiful.

"The plumage is used for trimmings on hats, and is called an egret. It is very cruel to kill these birds for their plumage, to trim hats when there are other attractive and beautiful things to trim them with. If many women took this to heart they would not buy them, and men would not shoot them. If men did their shooting with a camera instead of a gun or pistol they would be happier."

CANAL'S EFFECTIVENESS IS TESTED BY FLEETS

Associated Press Despatch.

Colon, Canal Zone, Jan. 12.—The conclusion of the joint manoeuvres between the "blue" and "black" fleets of the United States navy off the eastern gateway to the Panama Canal finds the official umpires checking the various theoretical actions in detail to determine the effectiveness of the canal and its defences in standing off the operations of the Atlantic squadron which acted the part of the enemy.

One of the major purposes of the war game was to ascertain whether the Pacific fleet in time of war could transit the canal in the face of any enemy squadron hovering in Atlantic waters, and then join the Atlantic division for combined action against the ships of the hostile powers.

Just what the manoeuvres showed the military and naval experts who observed them will not be known until the official report is issued, but when "hostilities" were concluded yesterday the "enemy" fleet had won the "blue" and "black" fleets, though many units of the Pacific fleet had succeeded in passing from Balboa to the northern gateway.

There are more elaborate ways of enjoying winter sports, but the youth in this picture are quite content to frolic in the snow with an occasional leap into a soft velvety bank of "the beautiful."

Stratford Indians allop Kitchener Green Shirts, 7-2, On Own Ice

GREEN SHIRTS LOSE, 7-2 TO STRATFORD INDIANS

Visitors' Speed and Combination Too Much For Kitchener.

ZUBER INJURED

Special to The Advertiser. Kitchener, Jan. 18.—Stratford's dream of defeating Kitchener Green Shirts on their own ice was realized tonight when they romped away with a 7 to 2 victory over the locals at the head of the Big Four parade, with an unblemished record. The loss for the Green Shirts coupled with Preston's win over Galt, puts Kitchener and Preston tie for second place, and the right to meet Stratford in the playoffs.

The visitors played brilliant hockey and well deserved their victory. They had speed to burn and beautiful combination. The Green Shirts have not yet reached their best form, and they lacked punch, especially when in around the nets.

The Kitchener team did not get much of a chance to play, as the visitors, they went so fast, and the Red and White were wise to keep away from the locals.

Kitchener Unlucky. The locals were rather unlucky. Not only did they pass up nice chances when close in, but they seemed flustered. In the first period, the Master in trying to clear away a shot, scored on his own team, and in the third Zuber, the clever Green Shirt goalie, got one of Ashley's shots in the face and opened up a nasty gash.

Delay was necessary, while Klem, the new junior goalie, was rushed into uniform. He finished the last three minutes of the second, and the third period for the locals. One long shot beat him in that time, but apart from that he was good.

The visitors jumped into the lead early, persistent combination play in less than two minutes, and by the time the period was over they were leading 5 to 1, due to their back-checking.

Evenly Contested. The second period was more evenly contested, but the visitors got the only counter when Berger was allowed to run loose, and in the third the Indians played pretty much a defensive game. The Green Shirts were outscored 2 to 1.

For the winners, Ashley was the best with Carson and Kelterbourne also playing effective hockey. Each of this trio got two goals. For the Kitchener team, the Master was probably the best, with Jack Krug also doing some nice work.

The line-ups: Stratford—Goal, Delson; defence, Berger and Ashley; forwards, Brickman, Carson, and Kelterbourne; subs, Griffin and Battersby. Kitchener—Goal, Zuber; defence, Master and Kargers; centre, Sherk; wings, Erb and Molson; subs, Krug and Miller.

HIGH STANDARD SEEN IN EXHIBIT

Large Entry List Is Feature of Local Dog Show.

An unusually high standard of dogs was exhibited last night at the 1924 show of the London Canine Association, held at the Dodge Garage, York street. A large entry greeted Bert Swan, Long Branch, Ont., who judged all classes. Quality was particularly good in English bulldogs, Boston terriers, Collies and Alabards.

The first show of the year of the London Canine Association has an important bearing on future exhibits of London and Western Ontario. Many puppies exhibited last night for the first time bear promise of becoming prize winners in later shows. The success of last night's show heralds an unprecedented year of high quality in canine exhibits.

RICKARD SAW HIS BOSS SHOT DEAD WHEN HE WAS BUT A LAD OF TEN

Famous Fight Promoter Tells of Early Day Struggles in Texas.

"SHOOTIN'" COWBOYS

"Tex" Relates of Memorable Trip Into "Strange" Country of Kansas.

Tex Rickard—king of fight promoters, wizard of words and juggler of fortunes—here begins his life story, told for the first time. It is a story filled with ring secrets every fighter would like to know. It is a story like a movie scenario—but every real life cowboy, the Klondike, lynchings, gun fights in Texas and Nevada, gambling for high stakes with money in a turn of the wheel—this is the background of the man who has staged the most amazing series of big bouts in the history of pugilism. Here is the kind Jack London used to write about.

CHAPTER I.

My Secret of Success.
By TEX RICKARD.

When a man wants until he is fifty-four years old to assemble his thoughts on paper the chances are his effort will be jumpy. I am starting this on my birthday. I was born in Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 2, 1870.

My life has been jumpy. They even say that my manner of speech is jumpy. It is hard to realize, as I sit here in the tower of Madison Square Garden, New York, surrounded by pictures of fighters and legends, how jumpy I was when I was a boy. I was a promoter, matchmaker and newspaperman, that forty years ago I was following the second herd of longhorns driven across the plains of Texas into Kansas—north of 36. Mind you, I worked on a cattle ranch at the age of ten. Emerson Hough's great novel story, "North of 36," reads to me like a diary of my early days.

Following the lead of that historic herd across the Red River into Kansas I went to the Klondike. I have been a town marshal in Texas, as well as a cowboy. Later I was in the Klondike for the gold strike. I have been inside details of the gold dust of the miners. I have conducted gaming houses for the amusement and mine have cut wood for the Klondike miners. I have staked claims for myself and have purchased mineral properties for big corporations. I have promoted prize fights and boxing matches. I have been a promoter of the Klondike gold strike. I have been a promoter of the Klondike gold strike. I have been a promoter of the Klondike gold strike.

What People Want to Know. Almost as many suggest a narration of my days in the Klondike. A third group would like the inside details of the big fights that I have been fortunate in promoting. The letters they run off into odd queries like this: "How do you make these roughneck fighters keep their contracts?" or "Who was the cruelest man you ever saw in the ring?" In the course of my narrative I hope to answer them all.

There is no secret method of ascertaining what current subject the public is interested in. To me it always seems apparent. I simply read the newspapers carefully and find out. Anybody can do that. The thing people want to see is the thing they talk about most.

To my mind writing is the most interesting art in the world. Advertising is considered the greatest power in the world. My assistant has suggested that I use the word "Publicity." That may be more proper, but always I have considered myself a promoter. I read in the newspapers about people as advertising them—making them known. I do not mean paid advertising, because still, big businessmen would not put paid advertisements in the newspapers if they did not know it would attract a share of attention. The thing I look for in newspapers is that on which the public attention seems to be centered.

Now that you've got to do is read these newspapers daily and find out what the greatest number of people are talking about. Also I listen to what people say about what they have read in the newspapers. If you are a promoter that is the thing you want to capitalize. That has been my method. Now, if that can be considered a secret well, there it is.

Taught to Think Straight. A lot of people do not think in a straight line. They get confused by sidelines. They ramble off on tangent.

Virgilinus, 101 (Borowski), $4.40, third. Time 1:24 2-5. Prince K., 106 (Collins), $6. $8.20, second. Flagg, 109 (Sharpe), $3. $2.40, second.

My boss tumbled over behind a stove in the center of the room. He pulled himself up on one elbow, took deliberate aim and fired a bullet squarely through his assailant's heart.

Those men dropped dead. Those are not pleasant recollections, but it was the atmosphere in which I started life.

Young Tex Joins Cattle Drive. I stayed with the widow, Mrs. Curtis, until the fall, when I joined a group of cattlemen and started on one of the most momentous journeys in history. We drove an immense herd of longhorns all the way to Honeywell, Kansas, then considered strange and foreign country. Though we did not grasp its meaning, we were really helping to knit together the north and south of the west. Just a few of the herds had been driven north of the thirty-sixth meridian. In fact, we were duplicating the feat of the Red River pioneers who went to Abilene and started the cattle drive.

The letters they run off into odd queries like this: "How do you make these roughneck fighters keep their contracts?" or "Who was the cruelest man you ever saw in the ring?" In the course of my narrative I hope to answer them all.

There is no secret method of ascertaining what current subject the public is interested in. To me it always seems apparent. I simply read the newspapers carefully and find out. Anybody can do that. The thing people want to see is the thing they talk about most.

To my mind writing is the most interesting art in the world. Advertising is considered the greatest power in the world. My assistant has suggested that I use the word "Publicity." That may be more proper, but always I have considered myself a promoter. I read in the newspapers about people as advertising them—making them known. I do not mean paid advertising, because still, big businessmen would not put paid advertisements in the newspapers if they did not know it would attract a share of attention. The thing I look for in newspapers is that on which the public attention seems to be centered.

Now that you've got to do is read these newspapers daily and find out what the greatest number of people are talking about. Also I listen to what people say about what they have read in the newspapers. If you are a promoter that is the thing you want to capitalize. That has been my method. Now, if that can be considered a secret well, there it is.

Taught to Think Straight. A lot of people do not think in a straight line. They get confused by sidelines. They ramble off on tangent.

Those men dropped dead. Those are not pleasant recollections, but it was the atmosphere in which I started life.

Young Tex Joins Cattle Drive. I stayed with the widow, Mrs. Curtis, until the fall, when I joined a group of cattlemen and started on one of the most momentous journeys in history. We drove an immense herd of longhorns all the way to Honeywell, Kansas, then considered strange and foreign country. Though we did not grasp its meaning, we were really helping to knit together the north and south of the west. Just a few of the herds had been driven north of the thirty-sixth meridian. In fact, we were duplicating the feat of the Red River pioneers who went to Abilene and started the cattle drive.

picked up the family and moved to Sherman, Texas. That was a wild section of the country then. It was not easy to earn a living for a wife and five children. The loss for the Green Shirts coupled with Preston's win over Galt, puts Kitchener and Preston tie for second place, and the right to meet Stratford in the playoffs.

In 1880 when I was 10 years old my father took sick. It was necessary for me to go to work. I went to live Curtis, a big settler named Jim Curtis at Cambridge, Clay County, Texas. That was not far from Henrietta. In fact Cambridge soon thereafter practically ceased to exist. The two towns were bitter rivals.

Cowboys Steal Postoffice. One night a band of cowboys rode down on Cambridge and stole the postoffice, which they brought back and established at Henrietta. My mind is hazy on the details of this, but for years I remember the fact of Henrietta having stolen the postoffice from Cambridge, being a matter of bitter controversy.

Jim Curtis was a big-hearted, very kind man and so was his family. I did the chores and ran errands for the ranch. It was there that I faced my first tragedy.

One of my duties was to go down to the town and tell Mr. Curtis when dinner was ready—dinner was served at 12 o'clock. At that hour the cowboys were usually in town and always in or around the saloons. They were rough, shooting fellows.

In the spring one day Mrs. Curtis told me to go down and tell her husband that dinner was on the table. I went to the regular saloon gathering place but he had just left. I just missed him in two or three places, leaving word at each.

"He was around here a while ago with Van Rice," a cowboy told me. "You better get on home, son."

Even at that age I recognized something ominous in the warning. As I was turning toward the ranch I heard some shots in a saloon across the road.

Jim Curtis and Van Rice, both cattlemen, had been standing at the bar. A disagreement arose over the branding of some cattle. But few words were spoken. Van Rice, a dead shot, as was Curtis, drew his gun in a flash and opened. Before Curtis could get off six shots from the holster three bullets had gone through him.

"Don't! For God's sake, don't shoot! Don't kill anybody!" the neighboring cowboy called to them, but too late. He actually leaped toward the two men, holding his hand between them. So quickly and deadly was the aim that two bullets went through his hand and wrist and into the body of Curtis!

My boss tumbled over behind a stove in the center of the room. He pulled himself up on one elbow, took deliberate aim and fired a bullet squarely through his assailant's heart.

Those are not pleasant recollections, but it was the atmosphere in which I started life.

STRUGGLE OF TELEPHONE PIONEERS RECALLED

First Ten Subscribers In London Were Secured After Hard Struggle Involving Months of Continuous Labor By "Veterans"

By REK.

It was the year 1881. Little groups of the curious stood in front of what is now Kingsmill's department store and watched workmen going through strange manoeuvres on the roof of the Ontario Loan and Debenture Company building.

Somebody asked somebody else what it was all about.

"They're putting in a telephone exchange," one interested individual, a "veteran" of the business, explained.

He was Elmer Johnson, chief telephone mechanic for the city of London, a tall pale person whose name is still known because he was one of the first "experts" of that day.

"Telephone," a native said contemptuously. "There ain't no such animal."

Johnson smiled tolerantly. Perhaps he had a vision of the future of that "animal"—a future which is now regarded as the greatest industrial romance in history. But he said nothing.

That day in early July the first exchange London had ever known was installed. It was a crude affair compared with the marvelous telephone mechanics of the present. But it did its work. What is more important, it was the forerunner of a system which today is universally recognized as the biggest time and labor saving convenience in the world.

Back in the early 80's the telephone had not made much headway. Radio, which was born but five years ago, has developed 1,000 per cent faster than the telephone in a like period of time. When a courageous pioneer in 1880 tried to sell this epochal device to the city of London, his spirit was broken by the skepticism of the age, and he departed holding his hands up. "No such animal" was the verdict of an incredulous public.

Planted Seed.

But that first frail blazer, whose name has been forgotten, planted a seed which was destined to burst forth the following year into a tiny bud. Another "organizer" impressed with the wonder of Alexander Graham Bell's invention, came here de-

Ultimately the Grand Trunk depot and freight office decided to install two phones so they could communicate with one another more readily. Then the express company, Bank of Commerce, Bank of British North America, McClary Manufacturing Company, McCormick Manufacturing Company, and others, took it up in rapid succession.

Find Subscribers.

Ten subscribers were found after a long period of solicitation, and finally a telephone exchange was installed on the fourth floor of the Ontario Loan and Debenture building. Mr. Throop was appointed manager and Thomas Whiting superintendent.

Equipped with Professor Graham Bell's original receiver, the telephone of the 80's was quite an efficient machine. The wooden transmitter, however, was affected by changes in temperature just as radio is now. The mouthpiece was in the form of a hole in the box.

W. J. Costello, superintendent of the Bell Telephone Company in London and one of the pioneers of the business, outlined some of the obstacles which confronted telephone engineering at that time. Almost every difficulty of service could only be corrected after long hours of experimentation, and frequently it would take years to determine the root of various mechanical troubles.

If you wish to telephone from the Tecumseh House you would ask, central for the hotel by name. Numbers were unknown until as many as 24 stations had been constructed. In 1882 the first directory card was printed.

The last copy of the first London telephone directory has disappeared. Old timers will tell you, however, that it was a miserable-looking little pamphlet, containing the names of fourteen subscribers. The only residence having a telephone in 1881 was that belonging to the late C. B. Hunt. It is an interesting fact that Mr. Hunt also owned the first electric light in the city, having founded the London Electric Company. A man of extraordinary vision, with a keen appreciation of the essential truth in the ancient adage, "Nothing is impossible," Mr. Hunt is now remembered as the original pioneer of all things making for the industrial and social evolution of the city.

Seven-Day Wonder.

His telephone was a seven-day wonder, and people far and near came to see it. In bad weather, like radio, it usually refused to work, and the unfortunate ones who happened to come during a rain or a storm always departed in a cynical mood.

The police station, postoffice and a few private residents took up the telephone and gradually a substantial number of stations were in the city. When the objective of 500 was reached it was believed the telephone in London had just about attained its supreme height of popularity. That was in 1889, when the first real directory was printed to celebrate the occasion.

At that time everything was "open wiring." No telephone poles existed, but wires were fastened to the roofs of houses and came from an "office" of the main distributor. The exchange was operated by what was known as the Gilliland switchboard, consisting of brass strips with small

VIEWS OF TELEPHONE EXCHANGE.

These exchanges are working night and day in London, that 12,000 telephone subscribers may enjoy continuous service the year around. Photographs show sections of the department in which more than 100 brass plugs to connect one drop to another. The subscribers amputator at the exchange consisted of two large coils with a soft iron arrow which released the shutter.

In 1889, the telephone company moved to 71 Dundas street. That year underground cables were tried, but without success. Later it was necessary to carry 281 wires on Dundas street to take care of the gradually increasing number of stations.

"All telephone improvements have been developed through necessity," Mr. Costello said in discussing old times with The Advertiser. "Underground wiring became essential early in the game."

"It's a peculiar thing that grocers, butchers and retailers generally were the last to install telephones. They reasoned that an order 'over the phone' meant a charge account, and charge accounts were the bane of every retailer's life. Certainly the credit has done much to bring the credit system of selling to its present proportions."

Telephone Was Toy.

"Originally the telephone was a toy, just like radio. People purchased it for the novelty. To call long-distance was considered a whim. The telephone had gained popular approval that long-distance telephoning took years to develop."

"The ultimate function of telephony has yet to be conceived," Mr. Costello went on. "Right now a man in London can talk to any place in the world through the repeater bulb, similar to that used in radio, and the Pupin coil. In time these phenomenal appliances, with the further exploitation of the cable, will enable any man to speak with friends in New Zealand or Africa in five minutes."

Alexander Graham Bell invented the first telephone in 1876, and in 1874, since that date the triumphs of telephone engineering have been reflected in the growth of London, which was recently made divisional headquarters for one of the five telephone territories in Canada. Notable achievements, resulting from scientific research, inventive genius and engineering skill, have brought the telephone from a rather pathetically futile instrument to the greatest mechanical factor in establishing

PIONEER SALESMAN.

E. L. Baugh, manager of the Northern Electric Company here, Mr. Baugh was the first salesman of electrical appliances of Western Ontario. He foresees general use of the wireless telephone within a few years.

North America's supremacy in the art of speech transmission.

But while it required eight years to bring the number of city subscribers up to 500, an increase of three times that total was recorded in the city during 1923. Today the Bell Telephone Company here is headquarters for more than 12,000 separate company stations. About 375 men and women are employed to operate these machines.

A glimpse into the future will give some idea of the development confidently anticipated by telephone experts. E. L. Baugh, manager of the Bell Telephone Company here, looks forward to the time when there will actually be a wireless telephone—that is, the linking up of wireless with the modern telephone so efficiently that you will be able to speak with a friend in China in a few minutes. A famous personage will die in Australia, and local newspapers will appoint some reporter to "get the story." The reporter will call Melbourne, Australia, and speak with relatives of the deceased.

Faith in Future.

"I have faith that we shall some day build up a great world telephone system, making necessary to all nations the use of a common language, which will join all the peoples of the earth into one brotherhood," Mr. Baugh declared. "Already wireless has been linked up with the telephone. Within a few years this system will be perfected through the adoption of establishing permanent radio stations for the transmission and reception of messages which will be heard alike by the transmitters and recipients."

E. L. Baugh, manager of the Northern Electric Company here, is a man of information regarding telephones and electrical apparatus. Mr. Baugh holds the distinction of having been the first electrical salesman of London, and has some interesting experiences to relate regarding the progress of electrical devices and the difficulties which confronted all pioneers in those earlier days.

Back in the first years of this century his efforts were directed to the task of convincing an incredulous rural population that the telephone had become a necessity in village and town. The farming centers were at least 20 years behind the cities in adopting the idea. In those days the telephone was still viewed as a "thing of the devil" in many parts, and it required infinite patience to sell them to rustles.

About the year 1900 the little war between stablesmen of this district and telephone organizers was at its height. Mr. Baugh, while on telephone organizing expeditions during which he was expected to "sell" exchanges to certain backward sections of Western Ontario, it was only by the exercise of much tolerance and ingenuity that he and stable owners did not come to blows. At one village, Mr. Baugh drove him a certain place. The man looked dangerous and refused with more emphasis than delicacy.

"You folks are ruining my business," he exclaimed. "The telephone is going to put the stable trade on the rocks. I wouldn't drive you if you were dyin'."

"To put in an exchange or not to was the question that worried all these small rural communities," Mr. Baugh said. "We held numerous organization meetings for the purpose of convincing the public that the installation of an exchange was to their interest."

"At one of these meetings a rather extraordinary prediction was made. I was explaining the telephone system to a group of men, and the question came up about the cost of telephone wires and poles. Just then an old man stood up and advised his colleagues not to put in an exchange, but rather to wait a while. He said by doing this the expense of wires and poles would be avoided, for it would not be long before the wireless telephone came into existence. Everybody tittered at the time, but there is no doubt the old man's prophecy will some day come true."

Cheated by Electricity.

As manager of the Northern Electric Company, Mr. Baugh is, of course, vitally interested in the development of electrical appliances. The day is coming, he predicts, when entire homes will be heated by electricity.

The possibilities of radio have only been touched upon, indifferently, by Mr. Baugh. Experiments lately conducted indicate that within a few years electric power will be transmitted by radio without losing any of its original force. Already this has been attempted and with some measure of success.

"Radio," Mr. Baugh declared, "will shortly be as universal as the telephone. The Northern Electric Company is today devoting a great proportion of its resources to improvement of radio communication. In time the voice of a friend thousands of miles distant will be heard as distinctly as if he were conversing with you in the same room."

The promise which London holds for future expansion has influenced the Bell Telephone Company here to keep abreast and in preparation for extended service. According to Mr. Baugh, the company will be able to meet the needs as they arise.

"Our engineering department has made development studies, and already provision has been made for much of this growth," Mr. Baugh said. "Although we have more than 28,000 miles of wire in use to serve our London subscribers, 85 per cent of that is underground. In this way our company has done much to assist in making London a beautiful city."

"We have a force of some 375 employees with an annual payroll approximating $400,000, so that the Bell Telephone Company figures in no small way with the progress of the city. The best of it all is that every employee is imbued with that civic pride so characteristic of all Londoners.

"Recently our London exchange graduated into the 12,000 subscriber class, having more than doubled in stations since the year 1915. During the spring a series of underground wires to augment those already placed will be laid."

"I don't think it is realized that one of the biggest features in connection with telephone service is that day by day with the increase of the number of stations, the service which a telephone gives is increased. In fact, telephone service is the only public utility that, as the exchange wires larger the value of each telephone is added to."

No Difference Made.

"As a user of electric light or power it makes no difference to me how many residents in the city make use of the same service. But as a telephone user it is a matter of great importance to me how many subscribers I can speak to. Thus the monthly and yearly increase in the number of stations adds materially to the value of my service."

The Bell Telephone Company in London, Mr. Baugh said, handles 30,000 local calls a day as a general average. There are about 74 long distance lines radiating from the London exchange and long distance operators handle 6,000 calls from London subscribers per week. In addition, they handle nearly 5,000 through or switch calls. The London to St. Thomas calls average 800 a week.

Within ten years, Mr. Baugh, and virtually all executives in the telephone and electrical business believe the radio and telephone will be linked up for the benefit of every subscriber. Epoch-making steps in telephone progress mark the development of the art and indicate the promise of the future. Yet they are but chapters in the great story of the conquest of distance by telephone engineers to which "this" may not be written for another century.

BANDIT ESCAPES

Police Flier on Scene Immediately, But Assailant Disappears.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Windsor, Jan. 18.—Routing a gunman from his store single-handed at 11:30 o'clock Thursday night, Arthur J. Wilkinson, druggist, Bruce avenue, London street, prevented the robbery of a large sum of money which was in a drawer in an open safe at the rear.

Mr. Wilkinson was in the act of putting away the day's receipts when the bandit entered the store. He made a casual inquiry about the time of a train and when the proprietor went to the rear of the store the bandit followed. Whipping out a gun from his overcoat pocket, the intruder jabbed it in Mr. Wilkinson's face and demanded money.

"Throw up your hands!" he commanded.

Mr. Wilkinson did not even reply but made a lunge at the gunman and grasped the arm that held the weapon. Wriggling himself free from the hold of the druggist, the bandit fled from the store. Mr. Wilkinson then picked up the telephone which was but a few feet away from the spot where he had been standing and sent in an alarm to the police. The fier squad was on the scene within a few minutes but found no trace of the bandit after making a thorough search of the neighborhood.

Archie Mac Company of Port Stanley Sustains Heavy Loss Early Today.

Special to The Advertiser.

Port Stanley, Jan. 18.—Fire of unknown origin totally destroyed the buildings and contents of the Archie Mac Fish Co., Main street, at an early hour this morning.

The fire was discovered about two a.m., but had made such headway that the fire department upon arrival could only confine their efforts to the burning of the buildings. The whole equipment, twine, nets, corks, etc., will be a total loss. The amount of the loss sustained by the company has not as yet been determined but will run into several thousand dollars there being large quantities of twine, nets, etc., stored in the building for the winter.

The company's tug, Archie Mac was docked farther down the harbor and consequently was undamaged. The ice house adjoining on the south side of this company's building and formerly owned by H. F. Woolley was rather badly scorched and a portion of the roof burned. The ice house and other buildings of the Co-operative Fishery Co. adjoining on the north side were only slightly damaged.

SICKENING HEADACHES ENDED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Effect was splendid when she tried this Fruit Medicine

East Ship Harbour, N.S.

"For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me and I was almost discouraged. Then I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effect was splendid; and after taking one box, I can safely say I am well. I feel like a new person in every way and I am deeply thankful to have relief from those sickening headaches."

Mrs. MARTHA DE WOLFE.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always relieve Headaches due to Constipation because they act directly on the liver and cause the bowels to move regularly and naturally. This rids the system of impurities and keeps the blood pure and rich. "Fruit-a-tives" are made of fruit juices combined with tonics, are pleasant to take and mild and gentle in action.

CITY LOSES $30,000 IN C. N. EXPRESS CASE.

Judge Macbeth Gives Decision in Appeal Against Levy.

By a ruling from His Honor Judge Talbot Macbeth, the city loses the right to levy a business tax on the Canadian National Express Company. The judge stated that his opinion had been influenced by a similar opinion handed down last week in Toronto by Judge Denton. The local case was practically identical with that in Toronto as the Canadian National Railway is appealing in every community in the province against this business assessment. A $30,000 assessment is involved in London.

POINCARÉ IS GIVEN CONFIDENCE VOTE IN FOREIGN POLICY

French Chamber of Deputies Again Backs Premier's Plans.

WOULD HOLD RUHR

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, Jan. 18.—The Chamber of Deputies this evening gave Premier Poincaré another strong vote of confidence in his government's foreign policy. The vote was 415 to 151.

M. Poincaré previously had made an extensive review of his foreign policy during the past two years, in reply to the recent speech of Edouard Herriot, radical leader, who adversely criticized the government's conduct of affairs.

M. Poincaré took the chamber by surprise when he made the announcement that he purposed to discuss France's relations as conducted by his government and make them a question of confidence.

He announced that the French government did not oppose an international loan to Germany, provided the bulk of the proceeds from it was applied to the payment of reparations. He added that he would welcome international control in all the occupied territories in Germany.

Once again M. Poincaré declared that France would accept any reduction in the German debt as fixed by the League conference. He surprised the deputies by saying that passive resistance had not yet terminated in the Ruhr. He reiterated France's determination that if the committee of experts failed to find a solution of the reparations question France would remain in the occupied territory until a final and satisfactory arrangement of the controversy was obtained.

Upholds De Metz.
The premier upheld the attitude of General De Metz in the Bavarian Palatinate controversy. He assured the chamber that French occupation of the Palatinate was merely insuring the citizens the right to dispose of themselves, the separatist movement being a spontaneous desire to escape the yoke of the Bavarian Nationalists.

Today's resolution, approving the policy of the government which said "Parliament indorses the government's attitude and its foreign policy, particularly concerning the Ruhr occupation."

BAD BLOOD PIMPLES and BOILS Banished by Burdock Blood Bitters

Miss Irene A. Matthews, Stayner, Ont., writes: "I thought I would write and tell you of the experience and benefit I have derived from Burdock Blood Bitters."

"Some few months ago I was troubled with bad blood, which broke out on my face in the nature of pimples, boils and ringworm, and I got so bad I really did not know what to do."

"I was ashamed to go anywhere, and the itching and burning caused such a terrible sensation I could get no relief day or night."

"One day a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters. I used one bottle, and felt quite a relief, and by the time I had taken three bottles I was completely relieved."

"I cannot praise B. B. B. enough, and I hope anyone afflicted like I was will get the same benefit I received."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Company Limited, Toronto, Ont.—Adv.

That Hang-on Cough Must Go Home-Made Cough Mixture Best of All for the Cough That Sticks. Make It Yourself In Two Minutes

The coughing reason is on and every home should have a supply of the best cough remedy to be had, and as you can make this supremely excellent cough mixture yourself why pay high prices for the common kind.

Get from any druggist one ounce of Parment (double strength)—to this add a little granulated sugar and enough water to make one-half pint—that's all there is to it.

Then when any member of the family starts coughing or catches cold in chest or head, or has acute catarrh, you are prepared as you should be.

And the children love to take it. With speed almost beyond belief this home-made cough mixture stops the toughest hang-on cough, and all because in it there is a substance (too costly for ordinary cough syrup) that immediately covers the membrane like a soothing, healing poultice, and blessed relief comes at once.

And you should also bear in mind that any remedy that overcomes catarrh, partially or wholly, is bound to be of benefit to those who are troubled with head noises and ear-nasal deafness.

Get Parment and get better.—Adv.

cupation," obtained a larger majority than any of those during the present week on international questions. A portion of the cabinet, which steadily voted against the cabinet on internal questions, sided with it today on its foreign policy.

France, said the premier, was always ready to act with the allies, but would not trail after anyone, no matter who it might be. Not only France, but also Belgium and Italy had decided in the Paris 1923 conference that the British plan was not acceptable.

Is Still Friendly.
"I urgently besought Mr. Bonar Law to go with us into the Ruhr. Therefore, it is not France who broke away from the entente," M. Poincaré declared. "With the co-operation of America," he said, "we hope the committee of experts will reach a settlement of the reparations question and then deliver us from the nightmare of the inter-allied debt."

"President Coolidge, Mr. Hughes and the American government have not yet decided payment of our debt, but the question remains open and weighs heavily on the credit of France."

"Nothing separates us from our friends, the English and the Americans," declared M. Poincaré, "except the application of the treaty we signed together. The only claim from which we hope to obtain recognition from a British government, whether Conservative, Liberal or Labor, is the application of the treaty."

BOY WAS WHIPPED, EMPLOYER ADMITS

J. B. Cox Declares He Treated Bulpitt Lad Fairly and Kindly.

INQUEST IS ADJOURNED

Special to The Advertiser.

Goderich, Jan. 18.—Five sittings and eight and one-half hours of inquiry, before Coroner D. A. C. Hunter and jury, conducted by Crown-Attorney Charles Seager, K.C., into the death of Charles Bulpitt, 16-year old Marchmont Home boy, Belleville, who according to evidence during previous sittings, hanged himself on December 23 last on the farm of J. B. Cox, Colborne Township, failed to bring a verdict.

At the request of R. C. Hays, counsel for Cox, the inquest stands adjourned until Tuesday at 8 p.m. Hays said he would bring in some important evidence, and would consult further with R. C. Hays, Jun., his partner at law, who was the original counsel, but who has been away for the past ten days.

Rather sharp passages between Cox and the crown-attorney featured tonight's sitting, which as before, was listened to by a packed hall. It was Cox's second time in the box.

Continuing his examination, Mr. Seager took up the question of the contract with the Marchmont Home. Cox admitted having the sum, which he was to pay the Bulpitt boy, reduced from $100 to $75 per year. "So you were paying him that magnificent sum of $75 wages a year?" asked Mr. Seager. "Some of these boys," replied Cox, "are not worth $25 a year."

Mr. Seager—"Why do you bring that in? You can't take any herring over the track tonight. I want you to understand you have to answer the questions I ask you."

Cox answered—"I am answering like a man, I treated the boy kindly."

"There is no difference in your mind between kindness and whipping? Will you say that you did not whip him more than four or five times?"

"Yes," replied Cox. "By what authority did you thrash him?" said Mr. Seager.

"I punished him because he was persistently breaking the rules of the home. He was punished only when he told lies and persisted in them."

"He was different from a hired man."

"How?"

"I was responsible for his moral conduct."

"You were going to make a Christian out of him. Do you think you treated the boy in a Christian spirit?"

"I do."

"Why did the boy try to escape from you twice and then go and hang himself to escape the life he was living with you? What reason have you to offer?"

"I have no reason," said Cox, "except the one he gave me when he ran away. He didn't like farming."

Mr. Hays interjected at this point: "Mr. Coroner, can't you regulate this in any way. I think my learned friend has gone far enough."

Mr. Seager then stated that his reason for considering the whole case so seriously was that, when the affair had been given so much publicity, Bulpitt being an immigrant boy, he considered it would have a damaging effect on immigration to this country."

Mr. Seager then read letters to Bulpitt from relatives, friends and former teachers in England, Bulpitt having attended high school there for three years.

"You can see from the letters, Mr.

A most profitable day may be spent Monday shopping in the basement. List your needs from the lines below—come early and when you have completed the purchasing from same, examine every sale ticket on the floor. You'll be delighted with your day's shopping on Monday.

ONE-THIRD, HALF, AND LESS THAN HALF PRICE

To-day I saw

Of course I have known for a long time that there was a Victoria Department on the Third Floor. I've caught glimpses of it, and heard faint snatches of melody. But today I "walked into the parlor" and had a delightful little concert.

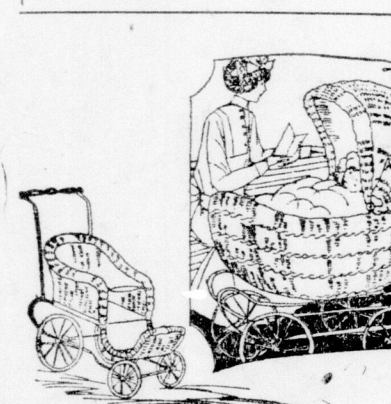

When you are tired shopping, why don't you find this same cheerful corner? It is attractively furnished in gray wicker with harmonious draperies of dull blue and mulberry. Then you can rest a bit—and choose a record or two to take home with you.

His Master's Voice Records offer you such a variety of famous artists that your own favorites are sure to be there. And the prices, as well as the records, are popular. The ten-inch records are priced at seventy-five cents, and the Red Seal double records are as low as a dollar and seventy-five.

The releases for January include waltzes and fox trots which will set your feet a-dancing. Such plaintive melodies as "Honolulu Nights," and fox trots with a swinging lilt. I liked Chappin's "Song of the Viking Guest," which is reminiscent of the old Norse sea-songs (No. 6416). And I particularly enjoyed one of Cortot's brilliant piano solos, Chopin's Etude in A Minor.

Oh! there are so many beautiful ones that I want you to hear. "Land of Hope and Glory," by Dame Clara Butt; "Duna," by Reinold Werrenrath, and "Ace Maria," by Heifetz. Have you visited the Victoria Department? Then let me join with "Life" in urging you to "Obey that impulse!"
