Fishermen Fear Hostile Cruisers. St. John's Nfld., May 11.—A fleet of 15 American fishing vessels that have been seeking bait in the harbors on the southern coast of Newfoundland, has decided to abandon fishing on the Grand Banks through fear of Spanish cruisers.

REPORT THAT MONTJOJO HAS BEEN KILLED BY MANILANS. LONDON, May 10.—A special despatch from Shanghai says it is reported there that Admiral Montjojo, the commander of the Spanish fleet who escaped from Cavite by running along the shore to Manila with his two sons, was killed by the people of the latter place.

Key West, May 13.—Caracas near Matanzas, has been bombarded by the American warships. They began shelling the place at daylight on the eleventh, the Spanish shore batteries were soon silenced and the town set on fire.

MADRID, May 20, 4 a. m.—The report is confirmed that the Spanish fleet has arrived at Santiago de Cuba. Two United States warships which were there retired with all speed. The Queen Regent has called congratulations to Admiral Cervera.

LONDON, May 20.—The Madrid correspondent of the Standard says: "The success of Admiral Cervera in avoiding the American fleets and keeping them on the alert excites much enthusiasm and causes the press to clamor for a prompt despatch of the reserve fleet to the front."

DOMINION PARLIAMENT. OTTAWA, May 12.—On orders of the day Mr. Charlton called attention of the government to the presence in Canada of Senator Polo, late Spanish ambassador at Washington, and members of the Spanish embassy.

Premier Laurier said the attention of the government had been called to the presence of Polo. British soil had always been a haven for refugees under any circumstances and so long as the Spanish ambassador does not abuse hospitality the Canadian government did not conceive it was any way bound to take notice of his presence.

Mr. McCreary, Conservative member for Welland, Ont., called the attention of the House to the laxity of enforcement of the Canadian alien law along the border. While admitting that the general sentiment of this country was kindly at this time to the United States, he believed that there were many who would like to see the United States spanked a little in the beginning of this war.

The prime minister said that while he was bound to be neutral he should like to believe that if there is a feeling at all it was a feeling of sympathy for those who are our neighbors and share the continent with us. It was an inopportune moment to choose an amendment which trade within the British empire shall be placed on more favorable footing than that carried on with foreign countries.

Mr. Bain, Liberal, took straight ground against the resolution and moved an amendment "that this House will at all times favor every practicable means of developing imperial trade and expresses its satisfaction with the action already taken by the government in that direction."

After the discussion the debate and House adjourned until Friday. The case of A. E. Killam's cows was in the public accountants' hands. Mr. Killam to call on the bridge. OTTAWA, May 12.—The Postmaster General has had rather a hard time with his bill to reduce the postage on letters and to put a tax upon newspapers, although in the latter he had the hearty support of Mr. J. Ross Robertson; the enterprising and independent editor of the Toronto Telegram. The matter was discussed at some length on Friday and was again the subject of a warfare which commenced at half-past eight o'clock on Monday evening and was suspended at half-past three o'clock this morning.

In regard to reducing the rate on letters there is an objection to it on the ground that it will take away $500,000 of revenue and that the country cannot very well afford this; the deficit must be made up out of general revenue. Of course, everybody would be glad of a reduction of rate, but it is a saving, but the loss would have to be made up in another way. Incidentally many other matters were discussed, such as the reduction of the rate on drop letters and the fast delivery of letters which pay a special rate.

The Postmaster General announced that he contemplated trying something of the kind in Toronto by a bicycle service. Then there was a great deal of opposition to the renewal of a postage tax on newspapers. Mr. Robertson supported this tax; but Mr. Ellis and Mr. Richardson, on the government side, while admitting that newspapers ought to contribute something for their carriage to the revenue maintained that as a matter of policy the Liberal administration should not impose a tax which would be levied on the people.

Mr. Powell strongly urged the inadvisability of imposing postage upon newspapers. He pointed out the benefits of a great institution without increasing materially the revenue. Incidentally, in the discussion, there was criticism kind in the attitude of the Postmaster General towards the opposition, and, no doubt, feeling against Mr. Mallock entered into the matter. Mr. Foster, of the House, said that he and Sir Adolphe Caron entered into an arrangement with Sir Louis H. Davies, who was leading the House, that the bill would go through unopposed, except the last clause, at that progress might be made with still opportunity for discussion. When Mr. Clarke Walker found out such an arrangement had been made he condemned it and would not be bound by it.

Then Mr. Fraser, of Charlottetown, called attention to the fact that a Sussex Globe despatch of the 10th says: "Davin Anketelle, of Rothesay was arrested at Rothesay this afternoon by Constable William McLeod, on a charge of having married one Emilie Vincent in Scotland last, his first wife who is the informant, being still in the land of the living. He was taken before the stipendiary here this evening and remanded until the 26th inst. He was taken to Hampton this evening's train. It is said the parties figured in the police court in St. John some time ago. J. M. McIntyre appeared for Mrs. Anketelle."

Both David J. Anketelle and his wife Annie Anketelle are well known in police circles here. Three or four years ago they lived together on Bridge street in Indiantown, and several times the woman had her husband arrested for assault. These assaults, he claimed, were committed on account of the way Mrs. Anketelle was spending her time with other men, and he was especially jealous of a man named Vanwart. The couple finally separated. Her present address is North street, where the police say she is living with a man who keeps a beer shop. Previous to this she lived with Lulu Hudson, who has a house on Water street.

Lingi as an Arctic Explorer. Prince Lingi of Italy, is bent on making a trip to the North Pole, according to the New York Herald. King Humbert, though he hesitated at first, has at last given his sanction to his nephew's plans, and has even shown his practical interest in it by promising to contribute 500,000 lire towards the expenses of the expedition.

The Prince does not propose to follow in Nansen's footsteps. His plan is to go by sea as far as Franz Joseph's Land and to complete his journey by means of sledges and Eskimo canoes, known as Esquaks. Apparently he is the first to conceive the idea of arriving at the North Pole in this manner, but the arguments which he brings forward in favor of his plan shows that he is not acting rashly or without due forethought.

His plan then is to take with him about 20 of the most skilled Italian mountaineers, as well as several Eskimos and teams of dogs. When the party approaches dangerous ground, scouts will be sent ahead to reconnoiter; and thenceforth his journey will be made by means of relays. In other words the party will form into a sort of human ladder. Prince Lingi maintains that in this way not only is the risk of physical danger reduced to a minimum but the chance of reaching the Pole becomes greater. The immediate members of Prince Lingi's family, with the exception of his uncle King Humbert, are rather frightened at the thought of what the young man is about to undertake and they would not be sorry if some unexpected obstacle were to prevent him from carrying out his intentions. If his own income of 150,000 is not enough he will take from capital.

HAPPY RELEASE From a Trio of Afflictions. Paine's Celery Compound Saves the Life of a Lady in Seamo, Man. The Terrors of Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Headaches Are Banished Forever. Health and Happiness Restored on All Who Make Use of Paine's Celery Compound.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO., SEAMON, N. B. I am very pleased to be able to tell you of the great good that I have derived from the use of your Paine's Celery Compound. Before using your valuable compound I was so crippled with rheumatism that I had to crawl on hands and knees from one place to another, I also suffered from neuralgia and dreadful headaches, and could not get more than one or two hours of sleep each night. I often thought it would be better to die than live and endure my terrible agony. I was happily advised to use Paine's Celery Compound, and after the use of six bottles the rheumatism and neuralgia are banished, and I now eat, rest and sleep well. My present improved state of health is due entirely to the health-giving virtues of Paine's Celery Compound, which has done wonders for me. My husband is now using it for dyspepsia, and it is doing wonders for him. My neighbors to whom I have recommended Paine's Celery Compound have been greatly benefited. Yours truly, MRS. ANNIE R. COBB, Seamo, Man. A Bigamy Case.

Rise up ye Women that are at Ease

WHO IS ON THE LORD'S SIDE?

By Canon Basil Wilberforce.

In the true light of the Divine altruism of the Gospel of Christ, I solemnly repeat the challenge in this Abbey to-night, and ask of the vast assembly gathered here, Who is on the Lord's side? Whatever may be the blamelessness of your personal character, whatever may be the height of your social reputation, whatever may be the punctiliousness of your external religious life, if you are not definitely on the side of the human race in its weary struggle against all that blights and curses man, you are not on the side of the Lord.

Humanity in its entirety is a flesh garment of the Divine Word, and men, too, faithful in your labor for the race, shall one day hear with glad surprise the verdict, "Though ye knew not Me, inasmuch as ye did it unto these, ye did it unto Me." Let one man mistake his place in the one body. All selfish, isolated egotism, all indolent acquiescence in the degradation of the race, denies and insults the Christ of God, the Word of the Father incarnate in human beings. The solidarity and oneness of the human race revealed in the Incarnation established the responsibility of the individual for the community. Individualism is no more. "If one member suffers, all the members suffer with it. If one member sins, all the members are made unclean through his sin, as sharing in the general condition of things that has made his sin possible and easy. A man, in the Christian sense of the word, must work out his salvation not only by the exorcism of evil from his own breast, but also from the body of society, and they who from indolence and selfishness hold aloof from remedial efforts to diminish the temptations of the masses, who strive to hamper the efforts of reformers with shallow sophisms, plausible epigrams, and self-interested hostility, will one day feel the breath of God sweep away the mists from before their eyes, revealing to them that no separate soul can be saved, except as he seeks to save his brethren. Heaven is not above, and to one alone, and while the sin-brutalized and drink-degraded are plunged into their hell on earth, the selfish and the isolated, and the indolent and the guilt acquiescent, like Dives in the parable, will find their Hades beyond in the fire of the venereal chastening of the Father's tireless love. The application of this truth to the appointed subject of to-day is obvious and inevitable. If there be one manifest besetting public sin in this nineteenth century civilization concerning which it is appropriate to sound the solemn challenge, "Who is on the Lord's side?" and as to which suspended judgment and selfish inaction constitute a crime against man and God, it is the treacherous fascinating degrading evil of intemperance. This open career of our national life is terrible in its virulence, vast in its ramifications. To the ruin it engenders, all alike bear witness. From the army, from the navy, from great cities, from country villages, from the police, from guardians of the poor, from manufacturers, merchants, employers of labor, from physicians, judges, from clergy of every denomination, and most often and most bitterly, from the workmen themselves, come pouring in the accumulated testimonies to the prevalence, the deadliness of this degrading sin. A Manchester clergyman, referring recently to the awful waste of infant life through the growing intemperance of women, told us that he was summoned to baptize a dying baby in one of the slums of Manchester, and found the little waif of humanity lying in a chair surrounded by four drunken women all too helpless to hold it. In maudlin sentiment they asked him to pray, and in the anguish of his soul he prayed, "Father, take this little one home; leave it not in this human hell." That Manchester incident is being repeated a hundredfold in every great city that is spotted over with the leprosy of the State-licensed "recruit" grounds of the felon, the harlot, and the pauper, and all the misery and profligacy, and cruelty and wickedness, and disgrace and social demoralization which are the direct fruits of the English public-house system, we Christians are directly implicated, and to us is sounded the challenge out of God's eternity, "Who is on the Lord's side?" Physiologically, total abstinence is advantageous. Theologically, it is Christ-like; philanthropically, it is influential. The one destructive argument that can be urged against it is that it is unconventional, and conventionalism is the god of society. But the realistic logic of the Man of Nazareth has proved conventionalism, social custom and even religious propriety vanish into thin air. When they are conventional for a bath, "which of you an ass fallen in straightway in a ty, law, and can't decalogue pull day?" Can language depth and horror of the national intemperance from which the ag thousands surging upward, "the malarious wash of endless waves"? In the days of the Crusades men of the braves, hearts and noblest blood in Europe bound themselves together in a semi-religious, semi-military order under the strongest vows, one of which, curiously enough, was that they should drink only water, in order to defend the Holy Sepulchre against the infidel. To-day ten thousands of men, women, and children are bound together by a solemn obligation of total abstinence from all intoxicants, that they may wage a modern crusade against this curse of nations, and defend the human temples of the Holy Spirit against a foe more bitter than Saracen or Turk. And when from this pulpit I appeal to-night for new crusaders under the banner of total abstinence, more of you, especially the good and the religious, are held back from joining us by the fear of singularity, un-conventionality, or fanaticism, than from any other motive. I answer, the ox and the ass, the strong and the weak together, are in the pit. Custom or no custom, conventional or no conventionalism, they must be pulled out, and the Lord calls you to His side to help in doing it. Though the habits of social life revolt against the custom of total abstinence, though glib theories of the liberty of the subject and the due enjoyment of the gifts of God seem to be contradicted by its propagandists, though legally-housed vendors of a profitable commodity cry out if man ceases to purchase from them madness, by the bottle, the urgent need of the community knows no laws—not even the law of Sinai, with all the rabbits of the temple to back it, for the ox and the ass are in the pit. The active side of the Divine remedial energy consists in personally seeking and saving the lost. It is a veritable descending into Hades to preach to the spirits in prison. The dignity and power of God's workers consist in their identification in heart and method with the Christ. When He, the purest being ever born of woman, willingly enters into the awful prison of disobedient spirits that He might plumb the depth of their misery and tell them of the pardoning love of God, He taught us that there is a point in human degradation at which rescue becomes impossible unless the rescuer will descend to the very depth of Hades to seek and save the lost. The imagination of man is not able to conceive any hell more foul than the drink-curd slums of a densely-populated English town. You who are shielded by the purer surroundings of your quiet homes imagine that we are fanatical, and speak in terms of exaggeration. It is because you do not know what drunkenness is, and we do, because we have descended into hell. Michael Angelo, before he painted the altar-piece of the Conventual Church of Florence, had the coffin of the newly buried opened and placed beside him, that the hideous anatomy of death might be burned into his soul, enabling him to reproduce it with terrible effects. In like manner the hideous anatomy of drink-cursed men and women is burnt into our minds, because again and again we have descended into hell. But we remember those words of Whitier: "Still Thy love, O Christ arisen, Yearns to reach those souls in prison; Through all the depths of sin and loss Sinks the plummet of Thy Cross. Never yet abyss was found Deeper than that Cross could sound." True; but that Cross, now in this dispensation, must be carried down into those hells by god, loving, consecrated men and women, who have realized the inspired challenge, "Who is on the Lord's side?" who have courageously adopted this blessed line of self-denial for others, and gone forth to "Rescue the perishing, care for the dying, Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave." One day a little girl accompanied her mother on a shopping expedition. At one of the shops they were about to visit the proprietor was in the habit of presenting the child with a doll. As they approached the shop the little one appeared to be very uneasy. "Mamma," said she, "suppose Mr. Brown forgets my doll." "Oh, he won't forget," said the lady, re-assuringly. "But if he does," persisted the child. "Well, then," said Mamma, "we must jog his memory." They entered the shop, and the lady was soon deeply engrossed in her bargain-hunting business. After this was completed to her satisfaction she turned to go, whereupon the little one clambered onto a chair and tapped the proprietor rather smartly on the head with her tiny parasol. "Whatever are you doing, you naughty girl!" exclaimed the mother. "I'm jogging his 'remember,'" said the child. "How do you tell the age of a turkey?" "By the teeth of course." "A turkey hasn't teeth." "No, but I have."

HIGH GRADE VERSUS LOW GRADE—The grade or quality of material and workmanship in the wheel is one of the most prominent questions which confront an intending purchaser. The low grade wheels lack finish, and being constructed of poor material and by cheap labor, are bound to go to pieces or get out of order before they have been ridden long—sometimes endangering life thereby. If you have not yet made your selection get a catalogue of the high grade Massey-Harris. It has established a reputation the world over for its strength and beauty.

THREE MEN DROWNED—Three Frenchmen named Denis Lebec, Thomas Hochet, and Joseph Jilbear, belonging to St. Basil, Madawaska, were drowned in Priestly Rapids, on the upper St. John last week, while working upon John Kilburn's drive. It appears that they with ten other men started to run the rapids in a small scow, a rather venturesome undertaking, and before the task had been half accomplished, the craft was swamped and sank to the bottom, leaving its occupants foundering in the icy water. Fortunately the provision boat, in charge of Alex. Kelly of Kingsclear, was close behind when the disaster occurred, and was quickly upon the scene to render assistance to the unfortunate. By hard work Mr. Kelly and his companions succeeded in rescuing ten of the party from a watery grave, but the three named above sank to the bottom before help reached them.

LOT FOR GAGETOWN—The Rev. T. Babbitt's residence is being sold in respect for the memory of said lot.

We congratulate Mr. Jacobson on his find.

Earl of Meath's Message to the Christian Endeavorers.

Boston, May 12.—A message to the Christian Endeavorers from the Earl of Meath, on the friendship between Great Britain and the United States has been received in this city. It says: "At this moment the best means of perpetrating friendship between America and Great Britain is the subject uppermost in my mind. I sometimes feel like the very qualities which have made these nations great should be a snare to the people. Independence can and sometimes does, degenerate into rudeness, patriotism into jingoism, self respect into arrogance, energy into vulgar push, determination into obstinacy. Americans and English occasionally meet in the friendliest spirit, but shortly irritate one another by ill-timed and odious comparisons. A wider knowledge and a desire to learn rather than to criticize would avoid such dangers. We at all events can follow the Golden Rule whenever British and Americans are brought together. This is my humble international message."

NOTE—"It is the truth in a nutshell."

Literature.

"ON TRIAL."

She was one of those girls who are perhaps more attractive than strictly pretty, because certainly her features had their faults. Her skin, however, was like satin—creamy, delicious, with a little soft flush running through it; and over her low, broad brow her chestnut hair fell in a soft, natural wave. No maid had ever cut it, it was in fact "born so," and it blew from side to side as the wind listed, and was touched with gold here and there, and had a good deal to do with her many conquests.

Her first season had pronounced her an undeniable success; which meant that to her brother Lord Hartley, she became at once a decided anxiety. She was never now without one, or rather two, young men dangling after her wherever she went, not only to balls and at homes in town, but to Tyrol or the Highlands afterwards, or wherever the Hartleys might chance to go. It was indeed Lady Hartley's private opinion that had they elected to go to Hudson's Bay for the winter, there these young men who have appeared up to time, and ready as ever to fall down and worship her sister-in-law.

And they weren't always the same two young men, either; that added to the grievance. Miss Charteris had many little ways, but the cleverest of all was the little way in which she used to get rid of a suitor when he grew importunate. This cleverness was hardly appreciated by Lady Hartley, upon whom fell, as a rule, the task of consoling and smoothing down the discarded one. She was thus compelled to think a good deal about Sophy, off and on, and just now she was particularly anxious about her, because she feared she was going to decline the best match of the year. Lady Hartley was young herself, and was not without sympathy and affection for her sister-in-law, but she certainly thought her very foolish, and she didn't in the least know how to manage her. She was a very nice woman, if a trifle pliant and given to looking at the unfavorable side of most things. She was a good woman too, intensely devoted to her nursery, as a good woman should be, but she was, perhaps, a trifle dull.

Just how she was worrying over two things; the baby's teething, which exercised her mind quite as much as though she had not seen three other babies get through the same obnoxious process, and her fear that Sophy would at last refuse Lord Elston's hand—and very handsome rent roll. She was divided between these two anxieties, when the door opened and Sophy herself entered the room.

"Anything the matter, Molly?" she asked, after a cursory glance at Lady Hartley's inexpressive features. The latter had been christened a decorous Mary by an Archbishop, but Miss Charteris insisted on calling her Molly, which of course was a trial. She came across the room now with her usual light, swift step, and leaned on Lady Hartley's chair.

"Are the children all right?" she asked.

"Baby's tooth through yet? You look as if someone had been giving you a severe scolding."

"I have many things to worry me," said Lady Hartley, with a sigh. "And of course I can't help feeling anxious about baby."

"That big, fat baby?" said Miss Charteris, laughing. "Dear Molly, how silly! It is merely his teething—I hope—that induces him to give way to those wild fits of diabolical temper."

"Oh, no; He is not ill-tempered. He has the temper of a very angel." interrupted the mother, reproachfully. "It is all, I am convinced, the fault of that coral his grandmother sent him."

"Then why let him have it? Why not get him a proper ring? Edith never has any others. A thick, soft India-rubber ring. It is not pretty, but babies like it, which, of course, is everything."

"And how am I to get one of this out-of-the-way place?" returned Lady Hartley, helplessly.

"I'll write to George. He is coming down for these theatricals, you know, the day after tomorrow, and he shall bring it."

"George!" Lady Hartley repeated, regarding her anxiously. "Do you mean to tell me you write to George?"

"Now and then."

"After all that passed between you last spring? Do you think Lord Elston would like it, if he heard of it?"

"I don't know, so I can't say."

"Sophy!" said Lady Hartley, in a solemn tone, "I do hope you are not going to do anything foolish with regards to Elston."

"I hope not, indeed," said Miss Charteris with a solemnity that put her sister's in the shade, but she rather spoiled it by laughing afterwards.

"It is distinctly wrong of you to encourage George. And you must know, waxing a little warm, that even one line from you in his present state of mind will be sufficient to waken the old regret. Now, Sophy, tell me one thing, do you or do you not like Lord Elston?"

Miss Charteris employed herself for a moment or two in looking deeply into the fire. Then she said with the most indifferent air in the world:—

"I'm not sure."

"That terrible sentence!" cried Lady Hartley, impatiently. "I'm tired of it, Invent another, I beseech you. No, don't stand there. Come round here where I can see you. Do you know that chronic state of yours of not being sure is causing you to be rather too freely dismissed by your friends? And for a girl to be talked about—that, you will admit, is undesirable. And you know, too, that when people once begin to talk they never know where to stop."

"I do, indeed," returned Miss Charteris, with a conical glance at her.

"You mean that for me, of course. But I don't know. I shall do my duty whatever comes of it. And now, what fault do you see in Lord Elston?"

"He is too rich and too jealous."

"His jealousy proves his love. And if riches stand in his way, why, it is the first time I ever knew them regarded as an objection. And you should be the last to say that. You know you said last year you refused George because he was too poor."

"That only shows how I hate extremes. George is too poor; Lord Elston too rich."

"Nonsense. I begin to think you have still a secret kindness for George."

"I hope you are wrong. As in spite of the passion you think he still entertains for me, I hear he has fallen a victim to heart yearns of the youngest Miss Wolkerton. Ah! Molly, I fear my swains are not so faithful as yours were."

"I trust that what you tell me is true. If, indeed, you do not think of George, what can't you make up your mind to Elston?"

"I have told you. Never mind what I said about his money—if you will have my real reason—it is his jealous disposition that I dread. How can I expect happiness with a man who suspects me of—of all sorts of things the moment I am out of his sight?"

"Of flirting with other men, you mean. You cannot deny, Sophy, that you have given him cause."

"Well, not for a long time now. Not lately, yet he is as suspicious as ever."

"Once married, that would be all at an end."

"So you think. No I should be afraid to venture."

"Is that your only reason for hesitating?"

Miss Charteris blushed and then laughed lightly.

"You think a good thing," she said. Well, even if I do confess to it being an only one, surely it is as strong as twenty smaller ones. There! I shan't submit to any further cross examination. I shall go and give George directions about that ring."

She moved toward the door. Lady Hartley called after her.

"Don't be too hard on him," she said. "You know you wouldn't like it were he utterly devoid of jealousy. Give him a chance. Why not find some way of putting him on trial to test him?"

"But I know of no plan," returned Sophy, carelessly.

As she crossed the hall, the door of the library opened and a young man came toward her. He was tall and well made and about twenty-nine. He was dressed in tennis flannel and held a racket in his hand. He had very dark, earnest eyes, and these lit up as he saw Miss Charteris.

"I was just going to look for you, Sophy. Come out and let me give you a busting."

"I like that!" said she, contemptuously. Put it the other way round and I may be able to understand you. No, I can't go yet. I should like a game, but there is something I must do first."

"There always is," answered he, in an aggrieved tone. "As a rule I always come off second best."

"And quite right too," she laughed saucily.

"I wonder if you care for me at all?" said Elston in a gloomy sort of way.

"Yes, I do," returned she, "sometimes."

"Which means that I annoy you sometimes. Is that it? Why are you silent, Sophy? Tell me my sin."

"Would you really have me tell you?" asked she gravely, lifting her eyes to his.

"I would, indeed."

"Why, then," said she, softly. "Beware, my lord, of jealousy."

"Jealous! You think me jealous?" exclaimed he. "Why, I believe I am the least jealous man on earth. Were it otherwise, you—" He stopped abruptly.

"Go on," said she, a little haughtily.

"Were it otherwise you think I would give you food for it; but you forget there is no reason why I should study your wishes. You have no claim on me."

This was a little cruel of her, but she was angry.

"I know that," he said humbly. He regarded her with a keen reproach.

"Sophy, will you never give me that claim?"

"I tell you I should be afraid," said Miss Charteris, softened in a degree by that submissive glance, but still rather impatiently. "A jealous man is a terrible thing."

"I think you misjudge me. Of course, very naturally, I should like all your smiles to be my own, but I do not really believe I am the irrational creature you would portray me. Try me, Sophy. Give yourself to me and I do not think you will repent it."

He had taken her hand, and now, holding it fast, sought to read her eyes. But she kept them religiously lowered. Still she did not draw her hand away; it was evident that she hesitated to do so by the yield that she was almost on suddenly she moved back her charming head. There was a new light in her eyes as she looked up, as though she had come to some strange resolution.

"I shall put you on trial first," she said, gayly. Lady Hartley's last words, though still so fresh in her mind, were bearing fruit. "Do not look so frightened," she went on, smiling. "Your probation shall not be too prolonged. Just one small week! If during those seven days you prove yourself three times unreasonably jealous of any act of mine, you will—"

"Three times! Oh, absurd!" he said, hastily. "You cannot really imagine me so senseless as that."

"I am generous, you see," said she calmly. "As for yourself admit, I give you a large margin. Perhaps," with a slight but charming blush, "I do not wish you to fail. Well!—No! Stay just there and listen. If you should chance to sin three times, you will give me your word to relinquish forever all hope of—well, of—oh, you know!" she said. "On the other hand, if you do not sin thrice, I for my part will promise to—"

"Yes, go on," entreated he, eagerly.

"You will give yourself to me as my reward. Is that it?"

"Let it be so," said she, smiling prettily, whilst her blush deepened. He bent over her hands and kissed them with a fond and tender passion.

"I did not think this morning that midday would see me so happy a man," he said, with glad triumph, his dark eyes alight.

"Do not boast," said she, warningly. But she smiled as she warned, and he heeded only the smile.

"This is Thursday. This day week I shall envy no man."

She ran away from him, up two or three steps of the staircase, but his voice compelled her to stop.

"Don't be long," he entreated; and there was hope and joy and new life in his tone.

"About ten minutes. If you don't mind waiting about for a bit, I'll join you then."

He did "wait about," for such a considerable longer "bit" than the ten minutes named; that he was a trifle restless and impatient when at last she did appear. She tripped down as unconcernedly as possible, however, with a letter in her hand.

"Oh! it was that kept you," said he, casting a wrathful glance at the letter.

"To whom were you writing?"

Miss Charteris raised her brows, and then looked amused.

"What a singularly rude question," she said.

He colored.

"Was it to—?"

"For the simple reason that I might not care to tell you."

"Why should you not care?"

To this she made no answer beyond a little swift glance as she moved towards the post bag that lay on a side table. By some accident her hand brushed against the heavy fronds of a large fern, and the letter fell to the ground, address uppermost.

It was quite impossible that he could prevent himself from seeing it. The writing was singularly large and legible for a woman, and was so clear that it might have been print of a good type. His face was as dark as night as he picked it up and returned it to Miss Charteris.

"It wasn't my fault," he said.

"Certainly not. It was my awkwardness. Still, as you know, it is an ill-wind that blows nobody good, and—you have had your curiosity gratified." She was a little flushed as she spoke—a fact that Elston saw and dwelt upon.

"I have seen what I had no desire to see," he answered, stiffly.

"Well, why shouldn't I write to George?" she asked, a touch of defiance in her tone. "He is a very old friend. She was a little put out by the whole affair."

"Why, indeed? I am bound, of course, to remember that he was first in the field."

"Oh! if you put it in that way!" she said. She turned sharply away, and then as suddenly stopped. "I suppose," indignantly, "you think I ought to open the letter and show you the contents?"

"I do," returned he, boldly.

"You suspect me, then?"

"I should certainly like to see what you have written to Markham. You call him an old friend, but you must acknowledge he was rather more than that to you a year ago."

"Not more to me—whatever I may have been to him." She paused, and then throwing up her head, regarded him fixedly. "You remember our compact of a while since?" she asked. "Such a little while. A bare half-hour, I think. You remember it?"

He paled perceptibly.

"Is this jealousy?" she said.

"You spoke of jealousy without reason. Am I now unreasonable? Have you proved me so?"

"Have you proved that you are not so? How do you know what this letter con-

No Wonder That They Grow Items About Town—The Markets, etc.

No one can shut his eyes to the wonderful industrial progress of the United States during the last fifty years—to the phenomenal inventive genius of the "Yankee." He is of the same blood as ourselves—than ourselves he has no higher incentive to activity, yet his activity is tireless, and he never rests while there is work, physical or mental, to be done. One reason for this is that every man works with a definite object in view, and the accomplishment of that object is regarded by him as the chief aim of his being. He is well equipped for this end by education. He is generally placed in school when five or six years old and when his school education is over the great public libraries that are scattered all over the land from Maine to California are open to him. During the last five years $165,800,000 have been contributed from private fortunes in that country for educational purposes, of which more than $45,000,000 was donated in 1897. The donors of these vast sums are Edisons in another sphere of activity; without them there would be no Edisons in the sphere of invention and discovery.

James W. Davis of this city is under arrest for attempted criminal assault on a fifteen years old girl living at North End.

Messrs. Mooney are having trouble with the Union men working on the Mispick pulp mill and very likely will employ non-union labor.

That two suicides should be committed in the Lunatic Asylum during a single week is not very creditable to the management of that institution.

Lyralist day, May 18, was not marked by any public demonstration, but a good many citizens availed themselves of the occasion to go fishing or otherwise enjoy themselves in the country.

Several excursions up the rivers and lakes are planned for May 24.

Messrs. Starr's employes, receiving $2 a day, struck a short time since for $3. Their pieces are supplied by better men at $2.

An inquiry will be made into recent occurrences at the Provincial Lunatic Asylum.

Rumor, with her lying tongue, has it that a dozen Spanish warships are hovering round the Nova Scotia coast.

About $100,000 is wanted by property owners for land damages, if the new water main from Spruce lake should be laid down. The total of the actual damage would perhaps be $100.

Two weak minded paupers of this city are anxious to wed. The clergy fight shy of them, though weak minded people often have no difficulty in attaching themselves legally to each other.

The market for breadstuffs has taken a weaker turn and though millers have not changed their quotations, dealers are inclined to take from 10 to 15 cents less per barrel for flour than a week ago. The foreign situation is very strong and it is generally thought that another marked advance in flour will take place. Oatmeal and cornmeal are very strong at the recent advance. The provision market is unchanged. Imported cigars are much higher, and as all communication with Cuba is cut off, prices will naturally be higher soon. It is just between seasons for dry fish and there is practically none in the market. Choice Canso herring are quoted at $5 per barrel, $2.65 per half barrel. P. R. Mollasses is much sought for, as no more can be shipped until war matters are arranged. Price has advanced to 35 cents. Granulated sugar is now quoted at 44 cents, bright extra C 4 cents and yellows 37-8 cents. Eggs are scarce and few arriving; they are wanted at 11 cents. Choice butter is in demand at 18 cents. George S. DeForest & Sons are landing a load of western brooms which are much better value than these of local manufacture.

EDWARD EDWARDS,
St. John, May 21.
Gladstone Dead.

HAWARDEN, May 19.—5 a. m. Mr. Gladstone's death has just occurred.

HAWARDEN, May 18.—Slowly the details of the last moments of the great statesman are coming out of the castle, where the grief is too profound to be intruded upon.

The family was summoned at 2 o'clock this morning, owing to the perceptible sinking noticed by the medical watchers. From that time until Mr. Gladstone relieved from pain and suffering by the use of these wonderful little pills after having suffered untold agonies for months.

Mr. John Hitch, a man well and favorably known throughout the country, was ever ready when opportunity offered to speak a word in praise of these pills, and was never tired of recommending them to his friends. A representative of the Standard, anxious to know of the cause of Mr. Hitch's recommendation, called upon him at his home recently and upon telling that gentleman the object of his visit Mr. Hitch consented to an interview.

The story in his own words is as follows:—"In the winter of 1897 I was taken with a severe attack of la grippe, from which I was confined to the house for some time. This was followed by severe pains and swellings of my lower limbs. I consulted a physician and he told me it was acute rheumatism. I continued under his care for about two months. I was unable to stand alone, but sometimes when I got started I was able to make a few steps unaided. The trouble was principally in my feet and clung to me all summer long. I tried almost everything that friends suggested, hoping to gain relief, but neither medicine taken inwardly nor liniments applied externally gave me any relief. The pain was very great, and I was only too ready to try anything suggested. I spent dollars upon dollars in doctor's medicine, but all to no purpose. The last week I was attended by a physician it cost me five dollars, and having about that time read in the newspapers of the work accomplished by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I concluded it was certainly worth the experiment and accordingly purchased a box from a local druggist and commenced their use, discontinuing the doctor's medicine. This was in June or July 1892. After I had taken the first box of the pills I could feel some change and after taking seven boxes I noticed a great improvement. I continued taking them until I had used thirteen boxes when I must say I felt as well as I ever did in my life. Some of my customers who came into my yard would ask me what I was doing that I was looking so well (knowing the sick spell I had undergone) and I would always tell them that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had wrought the change. They are the cheapest medicine I ever bought," said Mr. Hitch, "and if I had what I spent in other medicines I could sit at ease this winter. During the interview Mrs. Hitch was an occupant of the room and she heartily concurred in what her husband said, and stated that for one other member of the family the pills had been used with success in a case of severe nervousness. Mr. Hitch at the time he was seen by the reporter appeared in excellent health. He is 56 years of age and a man who had always been used to hard work. He was born in Cambridgeshire, England, and came to this country 27 years ago. Before locating in Ridgeway he conducted a brick and tile yard at Longwood's Road, Middlesex county. He has been carrying on for a successful business in Ridgeway for the past ten years.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." If your dealer does not keep them they will be sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Boston Items.
Boston, May 12.—Two little children whose parents reside in Alton mysteriously disappeared from their homes last Saturday afternoon and for whom search was made all over the city, have been found. The boy, Bertrand C. Davis, was five and a half years old, while the girl, Ariel Frye, was four. Directly opposite the Frye home on Aldie street, the father and the uncle of the little girl found the two missing ones in the closet of an unoccupied house. The little girl was dead, her body still warm. She had died from starvation, four days without food and shut up in a narrow closet proving more than the frail little body could endure. The boy was alive but in a few hours he too, would have been dead.

It was about five o'clock last night that Mr. Frye, father of Ariel, his brother, Alexander Frye, and several others, who have been searching since Saturday in the vicinity of their homes for the missing ones, were sitting on the piazza of the former's home on Aldie street, the party was about to disperse when Alexander noticed an unoccupied house directly opposite which had not been searched and declared his intention of looking through it. He at once started across the state since parliamentary government began." The only evidence that Mr. Gladstone realized his surroundings was when his son recited the litany. Then the dying man feebly murmured "Amen." This was the last word spoken by Mr. Gladstone. LONDON, May 19.—The deepest manifestations of grief are reported throughout the country. Flags are everywhere at half-mast, the bells are tolling, shades are drawn down, and the galleries here are draped with black. The Queen and the Prince of Wales received an early intimation of the sad news, and immediately sent touching expressions of condolence to the widow. Further details from Hawarden castle of the passing away of the great English statesman, show the end was of the most peaceful kind. He was without pain or distress. Mrs. Gladstone clasped her husband's hand occasionally, and kissed it, while the Rev. Stephen Gladstone read prayers and repeated hymns. The nurse in the meanwhile bathed the brow of the patient, who showed great firmness, murmuring, "How nice."

Then came the gentle, almost imperceptible cessation of life, in the midst of his son's prayers, and the weeping family slowly filed from the room, taking Mrs. Gladstone, who was induced to lie down, and who soon slept quietly.

Mrs. Drew, Mrs. Henry Gladstone, Mrs. Stephen Gladstone, Miss Helen Gladstone and others attended early communion this morning at Hawarden church conducted by the Rev. Stephen Gladstone. The ordinary service was prefaced with selected prayers from the burial service.

Many telegrams of sympathy are arising at Hawarden castle from all parts of the world.

THE NEWS IN PARLIAMENT.
LONDON, May 19.—The House of Commons was crowded today, when the Speaker called upon the government leader, Mr. A. J. Balfour. All present uncovered their heads.

Mr. Balfour said: "I think it will be felt in all parts of the House that we should do fitting honor to the great man, whose long and splendid career closed today, by adjourning." "This is not the occasion for uttering the thoughts which naturally suggest themselves. That occasion will present itself tomorrow, when it will be my duty to submit to the House an address to the Queen, praying her to grant the honor of a public funeral, if such honor is not inconsistent with his expressed wishes, or of those who have the right to speak in his behalf, and also praying the Queen to direct that a public monument be erected at Westminster with an inscription expressive of the public admiration, attachment and high sense entertained by the house of Mr. Gladstone's rare and splendid gifts and devoted labors in parliament and in the high offices of state. "Before actually moving the adjournment, I have to propose a formal resolution that the house tomorrow resolve itself into committee to draw up an address, the contents of which I have just indicated."

After a word of assent from Sir William Vernon Harcourt, the Liberal leader, the resolution was adopted and the House adjourned.

DOMESTIC FELICITY.
Maintained in Families Where Diamond Dyes Are Used.

The happiest, best regulated and most economical families in the Dominion are regular users of the world-famous Diamond Dyes. Domestic felicity is ever maintained, because the Diamond Dyes are true and unfailing in work, and money is saved by their use. No other Dyes can boast of such strong words of praise from users.

Mrs. T. Lavin, Newark, Ont., says: "I have used many other makes of dyes, but find the Diamond Dyes ahead of all, as they give the best and fastest colors."

Mrs. Silas Darcy, Mahone Bay, N. S., says: "Your Diamond Dyes give me entire satisfaction. I have used other makes, but have settled on the good, old and reliable Diamond Dyes."

Mrs. Joseph Weir, Sutton Junction, P. Q., says: "I have used Diamond Dyes for the last ten years, and they have given me great satisfaction; I can recommend them to all as the best."

Mrs. G. A. Tory, Red Deer, N. W. T., says: "I have given your Diamond Dyes a fair trial and find them excellent; failure is impossible if the directions are followed."

Miss Gussie Crawford, Kingston, N. B., says: "I have just dyed an old skirt a beautiful Seal Brown with your Diamond Dyes, and am much pleased with result. I make my Black ink from your Slate Diamond Dye, and it is the only kind of ink I have used for years, and I do a great deal of writing."

Mrs. John Leslie, Port Colborne, Ont., says: "I have used Diamond Dyes in all the colors, and I can safely say they do all you claim for them."

Up to the day in which the children got into the house or why or how they were locked into the closet. The police seem to think that they were enticed into the building as there is no way in which they could have gained entrance unless by going through a cellar window and dropping to the cellar floor, a distance of five or six feet. This theory seems hardly plausible, as a drop of such a distance would be impossible for a child of five years without injury. The parents of both children have no suspicions, and think the fatality the result of an accident.

Some of the youthful readers of the Gagetown GAZETTE may like to hear how loyal to their flag the Yankees are—first you see the Stars and Stripes from windows, across streets, stuck on wagons, in the horses head stall, on his back-saddle, two little flags made into a bow and fastened to the string and boys' coats instead of a flower, last but not least on my ladies' people dog floats to the breeze the Stars and Stripes.

Number of Victims Increased.
ST. HYACINTHE, Que., May 17.—It is now almost certain that the number of deaths resulting from the fire here early yesterday morning will total fourteen and may be still further increased. Nine bodies, several unidentified, are now lying at the hospital. Three persons are still missing and are thought to be buried in the ruins. Two Sisters, Delphine Cormier and Mrs. Gobeil, who were injured, cannot recover, and doubts are expressed as to recovery of others. Coroner Blanchard opened an inquest yesterday, which was resumed this morning, but as yet no light has been thrown on the origin of the fire. The terrible loss of life has been the means of stirring up the authorities, who will at once see that all the schools and large buildings are supplied with sufficient fire escapes, which were lacking on the building consumed.

THE BOLD Y.

Drake, Nelson, and others, his their "fling,"

"'Tis of a new champion that now we sing,
Whose match is scarce found in the annals of war;
'Tis of Commodore Dewey that bold Yankee tar.

Who tackled the Spaniards, and whollop'd them sore
'Till their squadrons, and forts (like their hopes) were no more,
And fierce though the fight was received not a scar,
True, fortune did smile on the bold Yankee tar.

Immense were the risks that he ran in the fight,

He entered the Bay of Manila by night,
And early next morn from the forts rang afar,
Their welcome to Dewey the bold Yankee tar.

Yes, Dewey was welcomed with shot, and with shell,
In turn he did welcome his brethren right well,
He sank all the ships that against him made war

And ho silenced the forts that did brave the Yankee tar.

Now Freedom rejoices, and Tyranny quakes,
The clear of the former the foundations shake,
Of the latter who sees its overthrow not afar,
All honor to Dewey "The Bold Yankee Tar."

LIBERTY.

Oh Liberty! blest Liberty!
Thou art the watch word of the brave
And manhood's foremost deity.
Thy charms inspire the lowly slave
To rise and join the freeman's van
Hold up his head and be a man.

Oppression thou dost overthrow,
And set his long wronged subjects free;
Before thy might he grovells low,
While they thy praise blest Liberty,
To thee man lifts the captured eye,
Thou movest him to do or die.

Thy power is felt o'er all the world,
The Red Cross flag, which none dare mar
And Stars and Stripes, thy guardians are,
Boast of the Anglo-Saxon race.

The Red Cross flag, which none dare mar
And Stars and Stripes, thy guardians are,

Care of Milk.

Milk should be set as soon as possible after being drawn from the cow, whether shallow or deep setting is used. With open setting it must be in a room where the air is pure. A pantry with a door opening into the kitchen is a bad place. The odor from cooking vegetables and meat will surely injure the butter. Many make butter in a cellar because it is cool, but it is apt to impart a musty, mouldy smell to the butter. A cellar may be good and cool, and yet be so ventilated as to have pure air; then it is all right for butter making. To get the best results with shallow setting, the temperature of the milk should not go much above 60° F. At that temperature it can usually stand about thirty-six hours. The time to skim is when the milk has soured just enough to be a little thick at the bottom of the pans and to thicken the cream. The cream cannot be skimmed off when it is thin and sweet without loss. No milk should be taken with the cream. Cream with milk in it sours much more rapidly than cream with no milk in it. This cream will be very rich and thick, and although partially ripened when taken off, if kept at a temperature of 60° or below, it will be all right if held two or three days before churning. Whenever a new skimming is put into the cream jar or can the whole should be thoroughly stirred and mixed.

In the winter effective creaming may be had when the room in which the milk is set is very cool, even down near the freezing point. This is accomplished by heating the milk above 100° F., before setting. The cream will rise very rapidly while the temperature is falling. The warming can be repeated after twelve hours, if the milk is in small pans, by setting over a kettle of boiling water. If large pans are used, such as have been described, the heating is done by running hot water through the water channels beneath the milk. This practice of repeated heating and cooling makes very effective creaming, leaving very little butter fat in the skim milk, and the cream is rich and thick.

Dahlia Culture.

Dahlias are most satisfactorily grown from roots, which can be safely planted when the danger of freezing is over. There are three distinct systems of growing, the best of which is the single stem branching system. This method does away with the unsightly stakes and produces fine, symmetrical plants of medium height. In other words, a plant growing to The Orange Judd Farmer and is authority for the following:

To secure the best results in dahlias through cultivation is necessary. The surface of the soil about the plants must not only be kept scrupulously free from weeds, but thoroughly stirred at all times. This stirring of the soil should be to a considerable depth at first while the plants are small, thus causing them to root deeply and preventing too soft a growth. As soon as they come into bloom, however, all deep cultivation should cease and the surface be stirred only to a depth of about two or three inches. As soon as the flowers begin to grow smaller a top dressing of well rotted manure should be applied to the surface about the plants and carefully worked in.

Making a Lawn.

If your lawn is not very extensive, the better way would be to sod it, but if on a large scale, seeding down is by far the best. Of course if you must use it this season, by all means sod it, but provide you can do without using it for one season, seeding makes by far the most permanent lawn. Should you determine to sod, begin by digging the ground in the same way as you would for flower seed. Dig about three feet and then rake stones and rougher parts into the trench, leveling the ground as the work proceeds. When you have gone over the space allotted for the lawn, begin at one end and tramp it down with the feet, keeping the feet close together, taking very short steps, and at the same time walk as much upon the heels as possible. When you have gone over once, begin crossings and do the same; when you have finished crossing take the rake and loosen the surface, leveling the whole before the sod is laid down; then begin at one corner and lay the sod, making sure that the edges are cut straight. After all the sodding is finished take a heavy spade and clap them down flat. Going over them several times. Get some fine soil and spread it over the grass, then rake all evenly so that the grass is seen through. Afterwards give a thorough watering, and the work of making the lawn is finished. As soon as the grass begins to grow it must be cut, and kept well cut throughout the season. Should you decide to sow grass seed, the work on the ground is the same. Procure the best lawn mixture grass seed, sow very thickly and rake the seed in, finishing by going over the ground with a roller. The sooner the work is done the better.

The Business Sluggard.

A good many young men spoil their chances for success in life by the frequency with which they come late to business.

Arriving at business in good time does not create ability where the same is lacking; but late arrival at business discounts whatever ability the slothful one may have.

The habit of arriving at the post of duty late betokens slothfulness. And no employer will be in a hurry to advance persons of this type.

Then the young man who is slow to put in an appearance at the post of duty is usually the quickest to get away from it at the close of the day. In other words, he is quite willing to cut off something at both ends of the working day.

The men who have been the most successful in life are those who have been early at the post of duty in the morning and not been in an inordinate hurry to leave it at night, especially when pressing matters required attention.

He who would be successful must not only exercise well his ability, but he must use well the time which his own or his employer's business demands of him.

Another Klondike Disaster.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 9.—Word has reached here that on Monday last, the ice covering a stream in the delta near Crater Lake, gave way under the passing throng of Klondikers, and more than a score of men were precipitated into the water and drowned.

Dr. J. P. Fryhle of Los Angeles who brings the news, passed the scene only a few hours after the calamity occurred. It was on the other side of the summit between Landerman and the Long Lake at a point on the Canyon some 14 miles above Stone House, where an ice slide over a mountain stream had been utilized as a path for sleds.

A number of men were advancing in almost unbroken rank, each having a heavy laden sled, when there was a sud-expect a man to write about babbling brooks, twittering birds and flowers that bloom on the hillside, when the cold wind is playing hide-and-seek between his legs and his rheumatism is beginning to come back on him. But we want to tell you about these Elegant Spring-Edge Conches.

Odd Chairs.

This isn't a public meeting, but all the same, we invite you to take the chairs, save all in fact; the more chairs you take the handsomer and more attractive you will make your house. It's the best bit of oddity not to admire our odd chairs, and surely no one is so odd as that.

The cheapest easy chair, the easiest cheap chair and the best looking easy and shapely chair ever sold. You can lean way back or sit up straight—adjustable. Deep spring seat, a wealth of padding and tufting—that's what makes it feel so good, and rests you so.

For That Tired Feeling,

Try One of Lemont's Conches.

We want to talk Conches to you. By talking the right kind of Conches, couched in plain words, we hope to have every house couched with one of our elegant Conches. If your house is not supplied with a good Conch you do not know what you are missing. It's just the piece of furniture needed to supply the aching void. Just imagine yourself reclining on one of our soft, downy Conches, which gives way to your every weight. But talking about weight reminds us to warn you not to wait too long, as our list of 810 Conches are going very fast.

BICYCLES,
Crescent, Victors.

The Easiest and Best Terms Ever Offered.

If you knew us better, you would be less willing to pry our faces. Just at this time, we have a position to make to you that will pay over fifty per cent. as it gives you an opportunity to see a first class bicycle on the road, tennis and at the love-up-ice ever known.

WHAT TO SEEK AFTER.

By George R. Scott.

In the Book of Amos the following verse can be found:

Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live; and so the Lord, the God of hosts, shall be with you, as ye have spoken.

Seeking for that which is good is a very pleasant occupation and assuring to the passage quoted it is also profitable.

Seeking after that which is bad is a mean occupation, and seldom is a great daily newspaper issued that does not contain an account of some incident showing that seeking after that which is bad is very apt to bring present punishment.

If I should attempt to give, even in brief the scores of incidents that have come to my knowledge concerning the curses that have come upon those who sought evil, and the good things that befell those who sought good, it would take nearly all the pages of this journal to relate them.

Seek that which is good early in the morning, at noon, and in the evening. It will pay you in more ways than one so to do.

The most wretched, ruined, worst punished man I ever knew told me with his own lips, just before death ended his earthly sufferings, that he had more than repaid the harvest of what he had sown while seeking evil.

It is now over forty years since I saw that man die. It was the first death-bed scene of a wicked man I had ever beheld, and I hoped to be spared the anguish of seeing another. All his life he had reversed the good advice found in Amos. He had practically rendered it: Seek evil, and not good.

The result was that he took a look inside the gates of Hell while in this world, and when death claimed him he stood shuddering on the brink of the Dark River, afraid to venture into the Unknown World beyond.

He felt, at that time, what an awful thing it was for a man to spend his life seeking that which was evil.

The verse that follows the one I have quoted contains these words: "Hate the evil and love the good."

About the only way, to properly make use of the quality of hate, is to hate evil, and we cannot love the good sufficiently.

What a blessing it is that there is so much in this world to love. It can be found every day and every hour.

The last baby in a household, be it ever so small, is big enough to have concentrated on it all the love that the family can spare. What contains more innocence, goodness and sweetness than a child just old enough to make believe it can talk!

I have one at home sometimes that belongs to one of my daughters. It is so cunning that I cannot help but squeeze it. I seek for it because it is a bundle of fat goodness and I enjoy its presence.

Hunting for badness generally results in the hunter soon being made acquainted with the fact that he is the game that will be brought low, the target that will be hit at every turn. And he will have to admit that it would have been a good day for him if he had never gone hunting in that fashion.

The good people ought to live longer than bad people, providing that they are good all through.

I was acquainted with a good man, except in one thing—he would eat that which he ought not to have eaten. And the result was that that seeker after good in many things died before he was thirty years of age. If he had only sought a very good food instead of bad food he would have lived to accomplish more than he did.

Seek after a good home—in this life as well as the life to come.

We were long ago admonished to seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, after which all that is necessary to existence will be added.

Scriptural Reading.

From whence come wars and fightings among you. James 4: part of 1st verse.

The apostle James has written but a few words compared with some of the other apostles, but full of inspiration. He has fully set forth God's sovereignty and pre-eminence over all his subjects and creatures. Has all control of the devil, does not allow him to tempt us above that we are able to bear, which makes us accountable for all the gifts and knowledge he has given us, therefore from whence come wars and fightings among you. We are told we lust and have not simply because there is no God in that lust, but gratification of self.
