MORE THREE CORNERED CONTESTS THAN EVER.
LONDON, Nov. 27. Nominations yesterday show clearly that every party is out to fight for its own hand. There are more three-cornered contests than ever before; the total being two hundred and forty. It was plain even a week ago that there is a possibility of the three parties returning something like equal forces. Straight fights are distributed as follows:—Conservatives vs. Liberals, 118; Conservatives vs. Labor, 82; and Liberals vs. Labor, 50.

HOME BANK PRESIDENT OUT ON BAIL.
TORONTO, Nov. 27. H. K. Daly, President of the Home Bank, appeared in court this morning before Mr. Justice Masten and was released on bail of one hundred and two thousand dollars in six securities of seventeen thousand dollars each.

ALBERT RETURNS MANDATE.
BERLIN, Nov. 27. Dr. H. F. Albert abandoned his effort to form a Ministry and returned his mandate to President Ebert because of his inability to find sufficient Reichstag supporters for a Cabinet under his Chancellorship. President Ebert thereupon began negotiating with leaders of the Bourgeois parties for the formation of a five party bloc, inclusive of Socialists.

JEWELLERY STORE ROBBED.
TORONTO, Nov. 27. Two armed men entered the wholesale Jewellery store of Paquette and Hughes on the third floor, 269 Victoria Street, at noon to-day, and held up Paquette, who was alone, and stole ten thousand dollars worth of Jewellery. They cut the wires and knocked Paquette unconscious before departing, and it was not until some time after the robbery that the police were notified.

BANKS REFUSE TO QUOTE MARK.
NEW YORK, Nov. 27. For the first time since the German mark started its speculative career of decline the New York banks to-day refused to quote it even nominally. Previously the banks had discontinued regular dealings in German exchange, but were willing to make a nominal rate. One broker quotes marks at twenty cents a trillion.

Research Work of Dr. Spahlinger
IN CONNECTION WITH TUBERCULOSIS.

LONDON, Nov. 23. (Canadian Press)—Dr. Henry Spahlinger, of Geneva, whose researches into the treatment and cure of tuberculosis have attracted considerable attention in recent years, and who has been in London recently at the invitation of Baron Henri de Rothschild, has been in conference with medical experts with a view to making arrangements for the circulation among members of the British medical profession of a pamphlet which will give a history of his work. Spahlinger has been at work on his tuberculosis cure for twenty years and has exhausted the resources of his family in pursuing his investigations.

When the pamphlet has been in the hands of the doctors for a month or six weeks it is proposed, if funds are still necessary to enable Spahlinger to proceed to the production of a large scale of his sera and vaccines, to issue a public appeal for money to carry on the work.

Baron Henri de Rothschild, who is himself a doctor, and Dr. Spahlinger have made public the reason why financial assistance is necessary to enable research work to be continued until Spahlinger is prepared to publish the details of his discoveries. Spahlinger is firm in his determination not to submit his system to a commercial exploitation although it is stated that he has been offered so large a sum as £250,000 for the disclosure of his treatment. His purpose is to prepare sufficient quantities of the sera and vaccines which he uses for his cure to permit them to be distributed on an adequate scale in the chief European countries so that they may be exhaustively tested and afterwards to publish his formula. The preparation of the sera and vaccines requires a period of four years and Spahlinger is apprehensive that premature disclosures would lead to

Why He Was Delayed
(From an Exchange.)
A crowd had gradually collected outside the single telephone booth, and waited with varying degrees of patience while the man using the phone held the receiver to his ear for half an hour. He made no attempt to talk, and his expression was practically blank. Finally one, bolder than the others, opened the glass door and enquired, "Are you speaking to anyone?" "Yes," the silent telephoner replied, "I'm speaking to my wife."

Too Little Thought Given This Subject

WHEN you see a woman with red, roughened hands, you may be sure that she has given little thought to the soap she uses for household and laundry purposes.

Yet this is a very easy matter to correct, as thousands of thinking women have realized. Go to your grocer and ask for Kirkman's Soap, and you will secure a soap for every household and laundry purpose as harmless to your hands as is the most exquisite toilet soap.

To make Kirkman's Soap only the finest materials are selected, in factories as clean and sanitary as Government inspected milk canneries. This has been the Kirkman Policy of soap-making for 86 years, a policy that results in the making of but one grade of soap: The very best.

KIRKMAN'S SOAP contains no lye to hurt the hands, and is absolutely free from all adulterants, such as starch, talcum powder or water glass, which have no cleansing properties.

Therefore, for the sake of your delicate hands, it is well to remember that there can be no better household soap than Kirkman's at any price.

Without Question or Argument
Kirkman's Soap is sold to you with the distinct understanding that it satisfies YOU in every way. Your grocer will return your money without question or argument, if you are not pleased with results. You alone are the judge.

The British Elector's Dilemma

Seventeen years ago an election was fought on the issue of Protection in Britain, and the Free Traders were overwhelmingly triumphant.

Once again Protection—or Tariff Reform as it is called in the Old Country—is an issue at the polls, and no man can predict the result with any degree of certainty.

Britain is traditionally a Free Trade country; to buy raw materials abroad and import them duty free, to employ labor that could work for low wages because of the low cost of living, to sell the manufactured products abroad: This has long been Britain's policy, this is the Free Trade theory.

Of the English people it has been said that it would take two hard winters to convert them to Protection—and two hard winters the British have suffered. Unemployment has been widespread, and it was this state of stagnation in which many British industries were suffering that caused the Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin to declare himself in favor of Protection.

The Prime Minister, however, was bound by Mr. Bonar Law's pledge to the country that no alteration would be made to the tariff during the life of the present Parliament. Speculation became rife, therefore, as to the probable date of the elections, but Mr. Baldwin surprised most of his political foes by deciding upon an immediate appeal to the country.

Seventeen years ago Joe Chamberlain led the fight for Tariff Reform, but Protection was hopelessly lost; since then, however, a new generation of voters has come to maturity, millions of women have been enfranchised, a great war has been fought, serious unemployment has been suffered, the Englishman has seen foreign goods dumped on to his markets, he has seen his own manufactures kept out of foreign markets by high tariff fences. Whether these factors will make for Tariff Reform or for Free Trade no one knows.

Three main policies confront the British elector. There is the Conservative policy of Protection, the Liberal doctrine of Free Trade—both these two he knows—there is also the Labor Party's theory of the Capital Levy.

"Unemployment is rife, our industries are stagnant," cry the Conservatives, "Protection is the proper and real remedy!"

"Unutterable, unintelligible folly," retorts the Liberal Lloyd George, "it is an insult to the intelligence of the nation to offer to feed the starving industry with milled straw of the last century, with every grain of state-manship beaten out of it."

"Your food will cost you more!" is the Labor Party's slogan, and this party offers the capital levy as a cure for unemployment and the means of raising the necessary funds to pay the debt to the United States.

Taxation of food would probably destroy any chance of victory that Protection may have in England, but Mr. Baldwin has expressly stated that he does not propose to tax wheat or meat.

Mr. Baldwin who, to use his own phrase, "takes his political life in his hands," became Prime Minister of Great Britain in May, 1923, upon Mr. Bonar Law's resignation. He is more of a business man than a politician, not having entered Parliament until 1908, representing the Bowdley division of Worcestershire. His greatest achievement was his share in the work of funding the British debt to the United States.

Seated opposite the Treasury Bench in the role of Leader of his Majesty's Loyal Opposition in the last Parliament was James Ramsay Macdonald, leader of the Labor Party. Mr. Macdonald's career is an example of the fact that it is still possible for a man to rise to great heights in Britain, even though handicapped by lack of wealth and influence. Born in Scotland and educated at a board school Mr. Macdonald went to London and by sheer hard work raised himself to the highest position he now occupies not only in Parliament and his own party, but in general esteem.

Another man who owes his advancement to his own ability is that meteoric figure, the Right Hon. David Lloyd George, O.M., D.C.L., LL.D. His career is well known. Born of Welsh parents in Manchester he was brought up by his uncle and educated to the law. In 1899 when 27 years old, he entered Parliament as Liberal member for Carnarvon and soon made a name for himself as an able debater. In 1916, following his rupture with his chief, H. H. Asquith, Mr. Lloyd George became Prime Minister and in 1918 was returned to power as the "man who won the war." In the last elections his party went down to defeat.

One of the dramatic events of the present election is the reunion that has been brought about between Mr. Lloyd George and his former chief, the Right Hon. Herbert Henry Asquith. When Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman died, Mr. Asquith became Prime Minister and remained in that office from 1908 until his quarrel with Mr. Lloyd George in 1916. Mr. Asquith's parliamentary experience coupled with Mr. Lloyd George's or-

SUIT ONLY WOMEN OF SYMMETRY

PARIS—The official winter openings are now a thing of the past and it would seem that the new lines put all but slim women at an advantage; a veritable cult of dress has been developed.

What there is the greatest in the matter of detail and ornamentation, the circular or the pleated embroidered or the unembroidered, the fundamental principle of "straight line" remains supreme.

For street and traffic wear classic tailleur has the call, and many women have remained true to it despite the changing times.

the great textile manufacturers northern France are now producing fabrics designed especially for the

The khaki, marokelline and the de Smyrne, particularly the latter, the materials used by most of the Parisian dressmakers for tailleur coats. The velours de Smyrne, too, in plaids and stripes, with a velvet surface, and all the qualities of wool, is the most popular fabric among the fashion frequenters of the Bois de Boulogne and the Champs Elysees, seen green being the color most in demand. Simplicity is the keynote. Broadly trimmed, or without adornment, these garments for morning and evening wear all retain a snug, easy fit which is causing despair among men who admit they are scanty plump. Slim women, on the other hand, have no fault to find with them. As a rule the coats of the 1923-24 season are longer than they have been for several seasons, in many cases about three-quarters or more. They also take the simple, straight line and are often the wrap-around style, extremely smart and very popular. Braided coats with fur collars and cuffs, worn over simple straight-line dresses are a trend. A tailored dress of tulle and velours de Smyrne, recently seen Longchamp, has buttons for the opening and button holes of dull leather. A dull blue leather belt and pleated rather striking ensemble.

Models made of knitted goods, corresponding into the tricot tailleur, all the fashionable features of the cloth article, were also noted with the first chill of autumn. Some of these knitted suits have borders woven into them which give the same effect as embroidery.

But whether made of velvet or knitted goods, the tailor suits of the 1923-24 season, with their straight lines and snug fitting of the body to make the coming winter a period of despair for women who are plump.

AGE AND YOUTH
Youth and age in conflict are and will be to the end of time. Age has no wish to journey far. Age has no strength or will to climb.

Age to the old will fondly cling. But youth demands the newest thing. Assistant the new old age is set.

New tricks are hard for him to get. Yet gruff old age should not forget. The time was when his dream was new.

When strength was his, then was he bold. And scorned the preachings of the old. What though you cannot run like youth, What though you cannot climb like youth?

You need not blind your eyes to truth. Muscles, of course, must bow. But still the mind can keep abreast. With what is new and what is best.

Youth does not scorn your lack of strength. It merely scorns your narrow view. Your vain attempt to hold at least. All that it undertakes to do. The blustering waves youth has seen will stem. If you will but play fair with them.

Fads and Fashions.

In hose nude-colored chiffon still leads. Boles and nude shades are favored in gloves, as in stockings.

Novel sandals of black leather are piped with white silk. The most charming of the pump shoes are coming. One of cut steel.

Paris has set the stamp of approval upon the gay Russian hat. A circular source lengthens the arch of a foot of black satin. For the daytime pump or evening suede are in favor.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

Don't you hate to have people make discouraging comments about something you are going to do?

It's the most disheartening thing. It takes all the interest, and order, and zeal out of your undertaking.

And it is just a habit of casual comment on the part of the one who does it. A comment that with a little thought, could just as well be left unsaid.

Unless He Spoils Them.

There's the ticket you bought for the winter's course of concerts. You meet a friend as you come from the box office and he says: "Oh you're taking in the concert this year—are you? I had intended to but a friend of mine heard these same musicians in Boston last year and she said the soloists were very mediocre, so I'm saving my $10 for something else. And of course your heart sinks and you think of all the things you, too, could have used your $10 for. And then, perhaps, if your judgment isn't biased by what he has said, you may find the concert well worth hearing after all, and be glad you went.

That Too Seid Fleish!

Or maybe you've been taking on too much flesh again (you first noticed it when John made some sarcastic remark about your double chin), and so you have steeled yourself to endure the pangs of hunger, and have cancelled that weekly order for a pound of chocolates from your favorite confectioner. And then at a tea one afternoon, one of your slender friends, whose figure always stays the same no matter what or how much she eats, remarks complacently as she munches a glazed mint: "Oh, you're foolish to diet! It never does any good. I have a sister-in-law who gave up all starches and sweets for six months and all she lost was four pounds and her nice rosy color."

Cheerful News!

Or you finally decide that Mary's tonsils must come out. She has one cold after another and the doctor has advised their removal. You feel rather nervous about it, and you are dreading it a bit when the telephone rings. "Oh, I'm sorry," you say, "but I can't possibly come to your party. That's the day Mary's going to have her tonsils out."

"What a coincidence!" says the would-be hostess. "Jennie can't come for that same reason. She had hers out last week, my dear, such a time as she had! Clamps on her throat and everything. I hope you'll get better results than we did with Walter. I can't see but what he catches cold just as easily as he did before he had 'em out."

You leave the telephone feeling sick and apprehensive and lo, Mary comes through the ordeal with flying colors and you're had all your worry for nothing.

The next time you find yourself about to make a disparaging comment on someone's undertaking—stop a minute and think. Your friend may enjoy the hook he is bringing home from the library so why tell him you found it stupid?

The new wall paper which your neighbor proudly displays, and which looks so attractive with the other furnishings in the room, may be the same shade as that which faded out in six months' time on your wall, to be sure, but hers may have a better dye, so why tell her and spoil her pleasure?

There are many minds about many matters and if your friend is committed to a certain course of action, why worry him, unless the matter is vital? What proved a disappointment to you may turn out beautifully in his case. Let him at least have the benefit of the doubt.

Story of Fight in Cribbs' Stable

THE WITNESS FROM HALIFAX COULD THROW NO LIGHT ON DISAPPEARANCE OF SLAVIN.

YARMOUTH, Nov. 23.—The preliminary hearing into the case of William Elliott of Dartmouth, arrested here a week ago on the charge of assault and doing bodily harm in connection with the fight at Cribbs' stable on Thanksgiving night, following which John Slavin disappeared and has not since been seen, was continued before Stipendiary Pulton in the Police Court to-day. Three witnesses: William Cooper, Frederick Dale and Walter Roberts, who were brought from Halifax yesterday, were examined.

They all told practically the same story as how the fight started at Cribbs. The men say they went to Cribbs' place on the evening of the 12th and found Cribbs there, also Joe Tebo, two other men and a colored man. At that time Cribbs and the colored man Slavin put on the boxing gloves and were having, for a few minutes, a friendly spar. They afterwards took them off, and Cribbs hung them up on the wall. Following that William Elliott got in an argument with Slavin regarding their fighting ability, and the next minute Elliott was heard to say: "You black—if it is fighting you are looking for, you can get it."

It was then that Slavin advanced towards Elliott, but the latter was too quick for his colored aggressor and he hit him a smashing blow in the mouth. Slavin was driven by the force of the blow against the wall, but he recovered quickly and came back at Elliott, who again succeeded in getting in the first punch and this time Slavin was knocked through a partially open door into a rear room.

He was seen to get up and go towards a back door leading out into the yard. He was last seen leaning against the side of this door and was wiping the blood from his face, as either his mouth or his nose was bleeding considerably. After Elliott had struck Slavin the second time Cribbs jumped at Elliott and exclaimed, "You—You can't lick me like you can to that coon." Then Cribbs and Elliott went into a clinch and did a lot of wrestling out into the back room where Slavin was seen wiping the blood from his face, and then back into the room, where the fight started. Both of the men were more or less covered with blood. Elliott was bleeding from a cut over one eye and the hand with which he had struck Slavin was also bleeding about the knuckles. The witnesses could not say whether Cribbs was bleeding or not, or if the blood on him came from the cuts on Elliott.

The fourth witness called to-day was Joseph Cribbs, owner and proprietor of the property on which the brawl took place. He stated that he had been drinking on that day and it was difficult for him to recall anything that may have occurred. He acknowledged being out in the afternoon in his auto, and Joe Tebo was driving it, but he could not tell whether he went. Owing to the apparent loss of memory of Cribbs, the Crown Prosecutor set him aside for the present, after which the Court adjourned until ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

None of the witnesses appeared to have seen anything of Slavin after he was knocked down and he got up and stood by the back door.—Halifax Chronicle.

Severiano doesn't begin to know, because his memory has failed somewhat in recent years and it's quite a job to keep up with the names and numbers, birthdays and new babies, when one must tax one's mind with more than 200.

Bonavidez was born in Taos County in 1816. His last child was born when Bonavidez was eighty-two years old.

No Chance for Crown Prince

Former Ambassador Believes Germany Never Will Return to Monarchy.

(By James W. Gerard, Ex-Ambassador to Germany.)

The departure of the Crown Prince from Holland and the rumor of the granting of a passport by the Dutch or German authorities to the former Kaiser have drawn the attention of the world not only to the prospect of a monarchic restoration in Germany, but to the legal position of the ex-Kaiser and Crown Prince as expressed in the Treaty of Versailles.

At the conclusion of the German revolution the Government established in Germany was not sufficiently strong to suit the temperament and history of the German people. What is required in Germany is not a parliamentary Government in the form possessed by France, Great Britain and Germany, but a Government such as ours, where the head of the Government and his Ministers, appointed by him, are for four years, without any responsibility to any Parliament or party.

The present confusion in Germany is due, in great measure, to the weakness of the Central Government, and at any moment an adverse blow in the Parliament may displace the Chancellor and leave the country a prey either to the Communists on the one hand, or to the junker supporters of the monarchy and the army on the other.

From this confusion very probably will emerge a Germany stronger in its Government than before, with a President like ours, possessing real power and elected for possibly seven years, and if the Germans seek political tranquillity they will provide that the President shall not be eligible for re-election.

The most interesting question today is whether monarchy will be restored, whether the great mass of the people of the middle and upper classes, despairing of the present constitution, will welcome the return of that monarchy which may have led them into war, but which, at least, furnished a stable Government.

There are two great factors, however, which I think will decide the Germans against a return of the ex-Kaiser or the Crown Prince. The first is the right of the ex-Kaiser into Holland to seek protection behind the skirts of Holland's Queen—an act contrary to all accepted traditions of the Hohenzollerns' race. If the Kaiser had placed himself at the head of a brigade of cavalry and charged the American lines he might have been killed, but if he had survived it would be Emperor to-day. The stigma of his cowardice is attached by the people to the Crown Prince, and if any one is chosen as monarch it seems to me that it will be the oldest son of the Crown Prince under a regency which can prepare the country for a constitutional monarchy modeled on the British system, possibly with the addition of a Chancellor-President elected for a definite term.

The other factor which militates against the return of the Hohenzollerns is the bitter opposition of the working men, organized in the Social Democratic Party, who were treated as outcasts under the late regime. No pariah of India had less chance of obtaining a commanding position from the Government than had the most talented member of the Social-Democratic Party in Germany of the Hohenzollerns. All branches of the public service, the rank of officer in the army and navy—all were closed to the plain people. Since the armistice the people have learned to open the door of opportunity, have tasted the sweets of public office and will be loath again to place themselves under the rule of a dynasty which deprived them of an equal chance in the race for the prizes of life.

Stinnes May be Deciding Factor.

Stinnes and the great group of industrialists who follow him may perhaps be deciding factors in the question of monarchy or republic. There have never been any anti-trust laws, such as our Sherman act, in Germany, and the industrialists, binding themselves together for fixed periods, in what they call cartels, or trust agreements, have been able to create a big business undreamed of by the most grasping trust-magnate of America. The only check upon this monopoly of big business before the revolution was the power of the Government, since the revolution the Central Government has been too weak, its members too dependent upon the support of the newspapers, owned by Stinnes and his fellow industrialists, to oppose the aims of the trust magnates of Germany, who by the handling of the currency have made the German working men their slaves and have wiped out the savings and the salaries of the middle class.

I do not believe Stinnes and his fellow magnates will favor the return of a monarch; rather they will desire the continuance of a weak Government—a Government which will permit them unhampered to continue their absorption of the wealth of what was once the German Empire.

The politics of Germany of to-day is complicated further by the separatist movement in Bavaria and in the Rhineland. In considering this movement we must remember that as late as 1868 Bavaria and the little prince's palatinate making up the Rhineland joined Austria in the war with Prussia and that Austria and her allies were defeated at the battle of the Sadowa. After that battle several of the principalities of the Rhine, without the formality of the treaty, were annexed to Prussia by a proclamation which stated that their lands were annexed "by right of war and conquest" and the city of Frankfurt-on-Main, home of much of German Kultur and business enterprise, was compelled to pay a fine of thirty million silver dollars to the Prussian conquerors—facts not forgotten in Frankfurt and the Rhine country, although for years no one dared to raise his voice against the domination of Prussia.

For years Prussian newspapers caricatured the Bavarians and the Bavarian royal family, and the newspapers of Bavaria, as far as they dared retaliate, Bavaria is a Catholic country, Prussia a Protestant one, and up to the fall of the Emperor in the revolution the Catholics of Germany were organized in a political party having no object other than the protection of their rights as Catholics from the Prussians and the aggression instituted by Bismarck as soon as he had completed the organization of the German Empire.

During the war one of my secretaries on a tour of inspection of the prison camps stopped at an inn in a small Bavarian village and asked for something to eat. The waiter refused to serve him, stating that they would not serve Prussians, and when the secretary stated that he was not Prussian but American he was served with food. And this when all of Germany was fired by official inspired hatred against America. Incidents of this nature show how widespread and how deep is the hatred between Bavarian and Prussian.

Folly to Try Ex-Kaiser New.

The rumor of the granting of the passport to the ex-Kaiser and the journey of the Crown Prince, from Holland once more raise a question as to the trial of the Kaiser and of the Crown Prince for violation of the laws of war. Lloyd George won his last election to office by promising the British people that he would try to hang the Kaiser, but as soon as he attained office he proceeded vigorously to kiss the Germans and to excuse the horrible unemployment situation in Great Britain by alleging that the British workmen were out of employment because of the confusion in Germany.

The Treaty of Versailles provides in Article 227 par. 7, after arraiging the ex-Kaiser for supreme offences against international morality and the sanctity of treaties, that a special tribunal would be constituted to try the Kaiser, this tribunal to be composed of five judges, one appointed by each of the following powers: United States of America, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan. The article further provides that the allied and associated powers would request from the Government of the Netherlands the surrender of the ex-Kaiser in order that he might be put to his trial. It seems to me it would be ridiculous now that five years have passed, to revive the question of the trial of the ex-Kaiser. While the atrocities of the war were still fresh in the minds of men his trial would have been possible, but now the eldest god of time has placed such an event beyond the bounds of probability.

There is no provision in the treaty naming the Crown Prince, but Article 228 provides that persons accused of having committed crimes and violations of the laws of war may be put to trial. Personally I do not believe that violations of the laws of war can be proved against the former Crown Prince.

He is now a citizen of Germany, and there is no reason why the German Government should surrender any one of its citizens, unless, under this provision of the Treaty of Versailles, a prima facie case of violation of the laws of war has been made. The refusal to surrender the ex-Crown Prince by the German Government would be a proof of its strength, showing that that Government does not fear the intrigue of the monarchists, but is ready to extend to former monarchists the same protection afforded all citizens of the republic.

To the student of history there appears no cure for the evils of Europe. Its people have been fighting for many years, actuated not only by the spirit of conquest and land grabbing, but by age-long hatred and revenge. Any attempt on the part of the United States of America to interfere in Europe would result disastrously for us, not in the military sense, of course, but in the sense that the lives of our young men, the savings of our people, would be used in conflicts which history teaches us will be without end. Many returning American statesmen say that we must do something for Europe. So far no one has specified any line of action. There are only four possible ways in which we could act: We could interfere with armed force, but I do not believe our people are in favor of sacrificing American lives in this conflict of hates. We could give Europe more money; but I do not think that the American people are in favor of giving England money to assist in keeping down its subject races, or of giving France money with which it can continue to lead armament money to Poland, Yugo-Slavia and Czechoslovakia, or of giving Italy more money in order that Italy may once more attack Greece or extend its domain over the Arabs of Africa.

Europe does not want our advice—they have had enough advice from us already—and why should we take sides in their quarrels? And we certainly do not wish to undertake to knock the heads of the bickering people of Europe together in order to promote universal peace.

Italy we will give to the starving and the unfortunate; the peoples of Europe must learn for themselves the futility of war.

THE IRON TRAIL A THRILLER—BIG BILL TO-MORROW.

Pauline Thurston, the attractive dancer at the Majestic Theatre is undoubtedly a star. Her dancing has pleased thousands and her remarkable grace charmed Majestic patrons again last night. Her costumes are the topic of much favorable comment. Her partner, Fritz Bruch, now holds a place seldom enjoyed by visiting musicians or vaudeville workers. His rendition last night caused continuous applause. "In the Gloaming" and "Believe me if all those Endearing Young Charms" won the hearts of the assemblage. To-night the "Trop Trail" will be repeated as also the performance of the artist.

"The Iron Trail" adapted from the Rex Beach story of the same name, is a really big picture—big in suspense action, thrills and good clean stirring interest.

As a picture play "The Iron Trail" surpasses the novel. It has preserved all of the vital interest of the book and thus elaborated the theme by making the characters real and embellishing the story with a wealth of settings that make a story seem true. The big attraction for Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be Curwood's great Paramount picture, "The Man From Home."

Firemen Called Out

At 7:50 last evening, the Central and West End Fire Companies were called to O'Keefe's Forge, Waldegrave Street, where it was thought a blast was in progress. The cause of the alarm was a pile of smoldering shavings. A few buckets of water were applied and the "all-out" rang at 7:55.

STATES NEW MEDICAL DISCOVERY

LONDON, Ont.—A medical discovery that approaches in importance the invention of insulin treatment is soon to be given to the world by a young Western Ontario doctor. Dr. R. A. Waud of Highgate has announced the completion of apparatus that will revolutionize existing methods of diagnosis by means of testing the circulatory system of the human body. Details have not been made public, but it is known that radio has something to do with it. The original experiments have been conducted in the London medical school, and the board of governors of Western University are preparing to provide financial backing for the discovery, having decided not to be short sighted as in the case of Dr. Banting, who was forced to go to Toronto University for accommodation in the manufacture of insulin. Incidentally, there is a race on between Western University and the University of Michigan, as to patients. Doctors at Ann Arbor are said to have arrived at some of Dr. Waud's earlier conclusions in the work of diagnosis, and are endeavoring to patent these processes before Dr. Waud registers his completed invention.

The work of diagnosis is to be revolutionized by the Waud process. The current of the blood-stream and its effect on certain radio currents induced in the vicinity will register instant and convincing indications of what is wrong with the patient, and the reactions are said to be unvarying where the diseases are the same.

Law Student Lives in Tent

Thrifty Youth Camping Way Through College at One-Half Usual Cost.

Wake Forest, N. C.—Shades of the immortal Ben Franklin and Abraham Lincoln!

Some day friends of Frank H. Rust may point to his experience in camping his way through college as a strong argument appealing to the public that he should be elected to the United States Senate!

Lincoln studied law by the light of a pine knot, and Mr. Rust reads Blackstone in a large army tent on a lonely hill overlooking the Wake Forest College athletic field. A joint of piping pokes its head through a makeshift flue. The tent is Rust's kitchen, study and bedroom. Here he expects to stay until he has finished his course in law, and hopes to set a new record for college expenses.

"A fellow who wants to read law had enough to live in a tent—ought to get the camp site free," declared Alumni Secretary J. A. McMillan, when Rust arrived this Fall from Hopewell, Va., and told him that he could find no available rooms in Wake Forest.

"I've a camping outfit," the youth told Mr. McMillan. The suggestion solved the quandary. With the assurance that the site would be free, Rust found an ideal spot. Honeysuckle vines were thickly matted in the branches of a low tree on the north, serving to break the "lime bucks" of the wind from that direction.

"Not only will I just about cut a year's expenses in half, but there'll be little noise to bother me in my studies at night," he declared, enthusiastic over prospects of living in the tent, and regarding the venture as a lark.

He wired home for his tent and outfit and within an hour had arranged with a local lumber concern for a floor. Now he is busy buying provisions, and the stove on which he will do his own cooking will serve as a heating plant.

Royal Easy Chairs.

The "Royal" Easy Chairs are known as the "push the button" Chairs, for by this simple contrivance the back can be lowered or raised to the exact angle where it is most comfortable, while tucked away under the seat is a rest, which when extended forms a perfect support for the legs and feet. If you're "treating" yourself this Christmas let it be to a "Royal" Easy Chair.

Fumed Oak Frame, Upholstered in Tan Fabricated Spanish Leather.
