BOSTON'S POLICE COMMISSIONER.

From "Police Conditions in Large Cities," in July Donahoe's.

While, fortunately, conditions in Boston are not as difficult to meet as those in New York, still the problem of the preservation of law and order must necessarily be entrusted to a man possessed of many rare qualities of heart and mind, as well as of marked executive ability. The present Commissioner of Police for the city of Boston, Stephen O'Meara, measures up admirably to this standard. How many of the thousands who read these words comprehend what the office involves, or what are its powers and duties. The sole control of a force of twelve hundred and sixty men, with the expenditure of two million dollars a year; the arbitrary power to issue and revoke almost thirty thousand licenses, and general responsibility for the observance of the laws and preservation of peace, are the prerogatives and obligations of the Police Commissioner. In a city as large as Boston, with its varied commercial interests and its mixture of races, this is no sinecure. Strength and capability, integrity and courage are indispensable requisites of this office which Stephen O'Meara has now filled for a year, and which he accepted reluctantly and from a sense of duty. And right here is where we strike the keynote of his character.
His paramount desire is to do his duty, and his whole duty, in whatever position he may be placed. It is to that end he spares neither time nor strength. No hours are too long to devote to its fulfillment, no attraction sufficient to call him away. In his own words, "I took the office of Police Commissioner with the simplest of motives, to do the best I can for the city of Boston. . . . Whether I stay here five weeks or five years, I shall have but one supreme interest, the interest of the people of Boston. Next to that, even an essential part of it, will be the interest of the police department of Boston; but the city comes first." To improve the efficiency and elevate the standard of the police and, thus give to Boston the best possible protection has been one of his objects from the outset.

A BOSTON WEDDING.

Mr. E. J. Mooney has returned home from a visit to Boston of several weeks. During his stay he assisted at the wedding of his cousin, Mr. Charles P. Mooney. A description of the wedding is given by a Boston paper
as follows:

Charles P. Mooney, ex-commander of the Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club, and one of the leading real estate men of South Boston, was married this morning in the Sacred Heart chapel adjoining the Gate of Heaven church, to Miss Alice M. Blanchette, daughter of Mrs. Catherine C. Blanchette.
The bride is one of the most estimable of the young women of the peninsular district, and is very popular in social circles.

At 9 o'clock the ceremony was performed by Rev. P. J. Lyons, chaplain of the Carney hospital, and also in charge of the Newspaper chapel, and who is an intimate friend of the groom.

The bride was accompanied by her sister, Miss Corinne C. Blanchette, and the best man was Edward Mooney of St. John, N. B., cousin of the groom.
The nuptial mass was attended only by the immediate relatives.

The bride was attired in white lace over white satin with a bertha of Irish point lace, and carried roses.
The bridesmaid was dressed in cream lace over silk with trimming of duchesse lace and carried roses.

Following the ceremony there was a reception, confined solely to the families of the contracting parties, at the home of the bride's mother, 818 East Broadway.

Mr. and Mrs. Mooney were the recipients of many useful gifts.

At noon the couple started on their honeymoon which will include an extensive trip through the south, and on their return will reside at 85 M street, South Boston.

UNIVERSITY OF OTTAWA.

Degrees Conferred on Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, and Hon. Thos. Coffey.

The Commencement Exercises of Ottawa University took place on June 19th. A feature of the proceedings was the conferring of the degrees of Doctor of Laws upon Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster General of Canada, and Senator Thomas Coffey, publisher of the Catholic Record, London, Ont. Both gentlemen made addresses. Senator Coffey spoke as follows:

Rev. Fathers and Students:

I am deeply sensible of the honor which has been conferred upon me by the Faculty of the University of Ottawa. In our progress through life we find that one of its most cherished prizes is the thought that we enjoy the regard of our fellow-citizens, increased when this evidence of esteem proceeds from those whose ideals go beyond the things that pass away. It is a long span of time since I first began to realize and appreciate the splendid educational work undertaken and carried on with such zeal and perseverance in the capital of Canada
by the Fathers of the Oblate Order.
We have signs and tokens of the past when we look at the statue of your first Bishop on the grounds of the Basilica, and young and old may draw inspiration from the life work of that great man, and young and old may, as they look upon his countenance in bronze, feel as if he were still speaking to them the words "Go on and on and fight the good fight," and no less may we all, but especially the Faculty and students of the University, become possessed of an incentive to noble achievements by studying the life of that equally great man, Father Tabaret, who was ever a brother to his brother priests and a wise yet indulgent father to the youth who came to the University to receive a training which would give us men whose lives would be as beacon lights to their fellows. When the history of our country is written, account will be taken of those who contributed of their best to bring it honor, to bring it glory, to bring it freedom and to bring it prosperity; and surely it will be noted that the Fathers who, conduct this great seat of learning, had taken a splendid part in the work of nation-building; it will be noted that the men whose early lives were spent in its class rooms have, by putting into practice the lessons of their youth, become the exemplars of all that is good and true and noble in every walk of Canadian life. Herein
the patient striving of the Oblate Fathers receives its reward. Believe me, I do not speak in this wise with the purpose of being merely complimentary on an occasion of this kind.
Deeply do I feel the truth of what I have said. My acquaintance with men of affairs has brought me into contact with graduates of the University of Ottawa—intercourse with whom tends to all that is ennobling. The stamp of truest culture is upon them and their careers mean much for Canada.
May I not view in the same light the

A GREAT TURBINE STEAMER ON ST. JOHN-BOSTON ROUTE

S. S. Yale the Finest Craft of Her Kind Afloat is Coming to St. John.

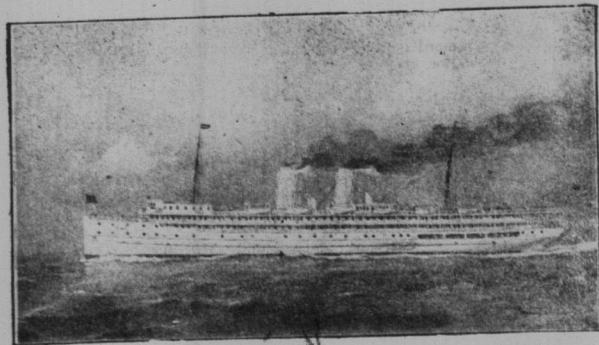

From Saturday's Globe.

The great turbine steamer Yale, the finest craft of her kind in the world, will soon be on the direct route between this city and Boston. She was built for the New York-Boston service and is by far the largest, finest, best equipped and in every respect most comfortable boat ever employed on the international route. She will be a particularly fine boat for the direct service and travelers will find in her the acme of comfort. The Eastern S. S. Company are to be commended for their enterprise in placing this fine steamer in the St. John service. Her coming shows their desire to give patrons the best possible service and there should be a decided increase in travel as a result.

The Yale is fast and will make the trip quicker than any other boat has made it. The idea is that leaving Boston on Mondays and Thursdays at noon she shall reach here about 7 o'clock on Tuesday and Friday mornings and leaving Tuesdays and Saturdays at 6.30 o'clock will get back to the Hub early the following morning.

When the question of constructing this steamship was discussed it was natural to conclude that in these days of exacting upon the part of travelers the vessel should be absolutely up to date and with appointments that would class her as being the safest, fastest and most luxuriously fitted passenger steamship in America. Plans were, therefore, prepared for the Yale which would fully carry out the conception of the owners of the line. That the motive power of this ship should be of the very latest type, steam turbine engines were decided upon for its propulsion. The great success of the turbine steamship Governor Cobb, the first turbine steamship built in the United States, only recently placed into service by the Eastern Steamship Company, led to the adoption of this type of engines.

PASSENGER TURBINE STEAMSHIP YALE.

The builders of the Yale have long studied the features of steam turbines and have the utmost faith in their adaptability to ocean steamship service. That they were correct in their conclusion as to what the Governor Cobb could do in the way of speed, economy of operation and in the lessening of vibration, which is a feature of all screw steamships, is now proved. That the Yale will be equally successful is beyond question.

The development of the steam turbine has been marvellous when it is considered that it was first put into practical use for the propulsion of vessels in 1894 by the Hon. Chas. A. Parsons, of England, and that in 1901 the first commercial vessel was equipped with steam turbines. Since that time the largest and fastest battleships and passenger steamships of the day are being equipped with such engines. This is a demonstration of the fact that in this wonderful age, when on nearly every day some extraordinary scientific fact or condition is discovered or made known, the courageous and progressive steamship men of the period are alive to the improvement of their property, and recognize that their success depends upon keeping abreast, and even ahead, of the times.

The Yale is of steel double-hull construction, the hull being divided into many compartments by water-tight bulkheads and double bottoms, thus establishing a great factor of safety.

This ship is unique, in that it will have more rooms with private bathroom and toilet accessories than has any vessel of its size yet constructed for service in American waters. On the hurricane deck are located an attractive writing and smoking room. These rooms are most attractively equipped, and because of their location it is expected that they will become very popular.

The space below the main deck is taken up by berths for passengers, by the boilers and machinery inclosures, and by the kitchen, pantries and officers' messrooms.

The decorations and furnishings of the main saloon are in the color of the university after which the vessel is named. The electrical equipment of the vessel is in accord with the very latest achievement in the electrical world, while the plumbing and steam heating is of the very best from the standpoint of sanitation and convenience that it may be possible to obtain. In fact, in every particular the Yale is most complete and thoroughly up to date.

The aim of the management is to have the dining room service, with its accessories, in keeping with what travelers in these days expect and even demand, while every feature of the ship will appeal to those who appreciate the comforts, conveniences and service which are looked for in the most modern hotels of this age.

The general dimensions of the ship are as follows: Length, over all, 407 feet; breadth over guards, 63 feet; space between inner and outer bottoms, three feet; draft of water, loaded, 16 feet; accommodations for passengers, 1,000; motive power (triple-screw Parsons steam turbines), 10,000 h. p.

There will be electric lights in state-rooms and a wireless telegraph service on board for the protection of the ship and for the convenience of passengers, who will be enabled to telegraph to their friends in any part of the world, and to communicate with friends on other steamships or steamboats equipped with the same service.

Those who have never travelled on a turbine steamship have a very agreeable surprise awaiting them. They will be astonished at the smooth running and plain sailing of the boats. It will be a revelation to the average sea-going traveller and should make more popular than ever before the sea route between Boston and the Maritime Provinces.

BISHOP BUYS PICTURES.

The Cathedral Calendar, of Cleveland, Ohio, gives the news of several handsome paintings recently hung in the Bishop's residence. They are twelve copies by Pucinotti of the celebrated paintings of angels by Fra Angelico. These pictures were among the most admired exhibits at the St. Louis exposition. After having been displayed in most of the large cities of the United States, the Rt. Rev. Bishop purchased them during their exhibition in Cleveland. They are a very valuable acquisition to the already large art collection in the Bishop's residence.

PRIESTS' STUDIES ADVANCED.

The Holy Father's program for the improvement of ecclesiastical studies in Italy has just been published. During the theological course, which is to extend over four years, Hebrew, archaeology, and sacred art are to be studied, as well as the usual subjects. The Holy Father's intention is to unify the system of teaching theology and to lay broader foundations for general culture. As Canon Bruschelli remarks in the "Corriere d'Italia," it is of great importance in the present condition of Italian society that not only the moral but also the intellectual standard of the clergy should be high.

THE ABUSES OF

CONTRIVERSY.

We take the following from one of the scholarly articles contributed in the Sacred Heart Review by Dr. Starbuck, (non-Catholic.)

It is curious and humiliating, that the habit of insulting Catholics, especially of high rank, whenever a difference of opinion occurs, is so deeply rooted among us, that we find it on levels where we should not expect it. For instance I remember a controversy once arising on some point between the Nation and Cardinal Gibbons. The Cardinal who ought to know declared that the journal had misrepresented the matter, and exhibited some not unamiable resentment.

The editors sneeringly replied, that no doubt the Archbishop would burn them alive if he could, but that luckily he could not.

Now the Cardinal was either right or wrong. If right, it was the business of the Nation to own its mistake and express regret for having made it. It has done so for me before now. But then I was not a Catholic. If the Cardinal was wrong, it had but to adduce the higher Catholic authorities which contradicted him.

In neither case was it excusable to taunt him with the unhappy facts of bygone centuries. In reality of course the editors no more believed that he wanted to burn them, than he that they wanted to burn him. But the habit of insulting a "Papist" when we are out of temper with him is so fixed among us, that it is hard even for a gentleman to cure himself of it.

It must be owned that this "short and ready method" of controversy saves a good deal of trouble. For instance, if I am at odds with a Presbyterian and he floors me in argument, all I have to do is to say: "Sir, if you could, you would burn me, as Calvin burned Servetus." So also if I had the worst of it in dispute with the Congregationalist I need only say: "Gentlemen if you could, doubtless you would hang me on Boston Common, as your predecessors hanged the four Quakers. Or else you would sell me to Barbados, as the Congregationalists once undertook, although unsuccessfully, to sell my lineal ancestor in a double line Daniel Southwick of Salem. Of course such logic would shut the poor man's mouth hopelessly.

Baring-Gould gives the same retort to some Catholic journal that contradicts him. He may not be far off for he is such a trumpery writer that it would be no great crime to burn alive not him, but his books.

Catholics, in their turn, could use the same method. Thus if they are hard pressed in argument by a Scotch Presbyterian, they need only say: "Reverend Sir, if you could you would doubtless throw us over the bridge into the water, as the Scotch Presbyterians of 1641 threw over eighty wives and children of Irish soldiers is one day." That should be an end of controversy. So it would be for any one who did not care to answer a fool according to his folly. I do not remember however to have seen contumely so turned into logic by Roman Catholic, at least of a class answering to the editors of the Nation.

ARAB COSTUMES.

There is no record of the costumes of the Syrian Arabs having changed during the period covered by human history either as regards male or female dress or adornment. Saving only for his firearms there is no reason to believe that the Bedouin of the desert does not clothe and adorn himself exactly as he did in the days of the patriarchs.

SELECTING JUDGES.

Dr. Franklin thought that judges ought to be appointed by lawyers, for, added the shrewd man, in Scotland, where this practice prevails, they always select the ablest member of the profession in order to get rid of him and share his practice among themselves.

THE PAPAL "BULL."

A papal bull is published by the pope. It may be an edict, a decree of a rescript, which contains an order of a decision to be publicly declared. It is only indirectly that the word "bull" is applied to the document itself. It belongs properly to the seal, without which the paper would not be recognized. This seal is rarely of gold or of wax. It was originally of lead and is still commonly of that material. Lead was used for seals in the time of the ancient Romans and is still used for that purpose in Italy.

THE FIRST NEWSPAPERS.

The first newspapers, the Venetian gazettes, were for many years circulated only in manuscript because the government would not allow their publication in print. Becoming seditious they were prohibited in every part of Italy by a special bull issued by Gregory XIII.

Hallen looked pityingly at the girl. In spite of the degradation to which she had sunk, vice had not yet set its seal inflexibly upon her features. The blackened eye, emphasized by the pitiful little attempt to conceal it by the use of powder, was the only stamp of viciousness, and from between the blackened lids the eye seemed to mirror an immaculate soul.

He looked with disgust about the cheap dance hall, with its blaring three piece band and its little crowds of merry-makers. There was a sordidness about it all that surprised him. But this girl seemed to have no place in the picture. Even the simple lines of her tattered dress bespoke a different plane of life.

Yet the story she had told shocked him in its revelation of the depths of misery to which a woman could sink. She was scarcely past twenty, but she had been deserted by her husband, had lost her little daughter and had gradually sunk into the slough of despond. It was a tale common enough in city streets, yet he hated to hear it from her lips. He wished that it might be, like his own, a fabrication.

A week before an editor had sent back a story he had offered.

"This rings false," the man wrote.

"Dig down and get your facts first

"DON'T YOU LET ME SEE YOU AGAIN?" HE PLEADED.

hand and let me see the result. I want something like it."

Disguise had been easy—a three days' growth of beard, tousled head and a shabby suit. He knew of the Odeon as a place where he was most likely to get material. He had intended to approach some man, but somehow he dropped into a chair beside the girl, and over a few drinks (he was rather proud of his trick of ordering gin and drinking the water instead of the spirits) they had exchanged experiences.

His own experiences were drawn from his imagination, but here was a story vivid in its directness, terrible in its unvarnished unveiling of misery and sin.

"Don't you let me see you again?" he pleaded. "Have you some address?" She waved her hand comprehensively.

"This is mostly my address," she laughed. The music had not yet gone out of her voice, and the laugh appealed to him. "I'm most always here."

Hallen rose and slouched out. It was a relief to get into the bath, and a shave was a positive luxury. He tumbled into bed with a sigh of satisfaction, but when the lights had been switched off no sleep came to his tired eyelids. He lived again the scene of the evening, and the girl's face haunted him.

She had laughed when he spoke of uplifting, had scouted the possibility of reform, and yet he was determined that he would find her again and in spite of herself lead her steps back into the paths from which they had strayed.

He was at the Odeon again the next evening; but, though he sat from early evening until late in the night, the girl did not come. The waiter grinned when he asked concerning her.

"I never saw her before. I thought you brought her in."

"But she said she comes in here every evening," he persisted.

"Well, she don't," was the surly retort. "I guess I know what I'm talking about, and that goes. See?"

There was an intimation in the voice that Hallen would go if the statement did not, and he subsided. For a week he haunted that place and others like it, but not a trace of her could he find, and at last he went back to his usual it seemed almost like sacrilege to use her story as material, to vivisection the quivering remains of a miscreant life, but the story carried a great moral. Perhaps others might read and profit. He worked on it a week before he sent it off and then half hoped that it would be rejected.

On the contrary, he got instead a most cordial letter.

"Just what I wanted," declared the editor. "I've another almost as good. I am going to run the two together under the title of 'Beneath the Surface.' I am sending the check."

Hallen started as he saw the check. It was double rates, but even that did not atone for his failure to find the girl. He wished that he might take it to her, for it was she, not he, who had really earned it.

Perhaps, he told himself, it might be the means of bringing her back to the things worth while. It was at least worth trying. He could scarcely wait until evening to set forth in his quest.

He made several stops before he reached the Odeon, and it was late when he entered the gaudy resort. With a start he recognized the girl and went toward her.

A heavy set man was arguing with her as he came up. Hallen gathered that she had refused to dance with him, and he was glad of it. Her face brightened at his approach, and the other man, noticing the welcome, slunk away.

"I am so glad you came," she cried as he slipped into a chair. "I wanted to see you."

"I haunted the place for a week," he said, "but no one seemed to remember you as a regular visitor, and so I gave it up."

"I—I thought you might want to escort me home," she explained as a flush rose to her cheek. "It would have been embarrassing, so I said you could always find me here. Did you want me for anything particular?"

"I just wanted to see you again," he said. "I was not prepared to admit that your case was hopeless."

"I am afraid that I—I have a confession to make," she said. "Do you remember the other night how you said that with a fair start you might make your way up again, but that no one would take you since you came from prison? You said you wanted to go out west, you remember?"

Hallen nodded, and his face turned red. He had confessed to being a convict, deprived by that fact of a chance to get ahead.

"Then listen," she cried. "I did something I ought to be ashamed of. I put the tragedy of your life into a magazine story. See! I received $75 for it. Won't you take it? It's really yours, you know. That will take you west and enable you to make a fresh start. Won't you, please?"

"On one condition," he said soberly, though his eyes twinkled.

"And that is?"

"That you take the check I received for writing the pitiful little tragedy of your life. You told a better yarn than I did. I got a hundred."

He laid his check beside hers on the table.

"To be published jointly under the caption of 'Beneath the Surface.'"

"You are Howard Hallen?" she gasped.

"And you Gertrude Perley? Wouldn't Loewer yell if he heard how his advice turned out? I presume he sent you the same sort of letter he sent me—to study the type at first hand."

The girl nodded.

"Just what he said. I've a friend who is a mission worker. She told me how to make up. She also told how they sell women ginger ale instead of whiskey and give percentage checks."

"I was wondering about that whiskey," he laughed. "It gave a very real touch to your story."

"I don't know whether the joke is on us or Mr. Loewer," she smiled. "But let's get out of here."

"Let's have a supper to celebrate," he suggested. "I can get home and back in no time and call for you and your friend at the mission house."

"Agreed," she nodded. "I think such an encounter deserves a better ending than a simple 'Good night. Glad to have met you.'"

"I think it does," he said, "a very different ending." His tone was pregnant with suggestion, and she answered with a smile. She could imagine what that ending might be, and the idea was not unwelcome.

Athletes of Attica.

The athletes of ancient Greece, if they should appear to view, would not be taken for a football team of today. The old time man of muscle wore his hair cropped, a distinguishing feature in a land of long hair. Trainers for the games led a very careful life. They were under orders for a rigid diet, which became especially severe just before the contest. Their bill of fare consisted of fresh cheese, dried figs and wheaten porridge. A little later in the era meat was allowed, with a preference for beef and pork. Bread was not allowed with meat, and sweets not at all. At one time a strange custom of diet came into vogue. Every day at the conclusion of practice the athletes were obliged to consume snatches quantities of food, which was digested in a long continued sleep. The amount was gradually increased until huge meals of meat were taken. This diet produced a corpulence which was of advantage in wrestling, but injurious for other sports.—Smith's Companion.

His Shipwreck.

Among the many millionaires South Africa has furnished London is one who, although he has since learned to read and write, could do neither in the old days when he was making a fortune at Kimberley. His want of education was a standing joke among the members of the Kimberley club; where he was wont to spend his afternoons, pretending to read a newspaper, which he more often than not held upside down. In those days the English newspapers were not so freely circulated in South Africa, and readers had to depend on a shipping gazette style of journal, in which the advertisements were generally headed by the block of a ship in full sail. X, as we will call him, was holding this newspaper upside down when a friend approached and put the usual question, "Well, my boy, what's the news?" "Oh, not much," replied X; "only a lot of bloomin' shipwrecks," pointing to the inverted pictures of the sailing vessels.—Illustrated Bits.

A PORTLAND, ME., WEDDING.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on June 14th, at St. Dominic's church, South Portland, Maine, when Elizabeth G. McCourt, of that city, and M. J. Henry Mulholland, of St. John, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Hurley, V. G., who was also celebrant of the Mass. The bride wore a dress of white nun's veiling, made of silk, with hat to match and carried lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was Miss Berrie O'Donnell, of South Portland, Me., and the best man was Henry J. Spears of this city, an uncle of the groom. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride to the immediate families and a few intimate friends. The gift of the groom to the bride was a gold monogram bracelet. Mr. and Mrs. Mulholland received a large number of beautiful wedding gifts. They left for a short wedding tour trip to New York, Jersey City and Boston. On their return they will make their home in this city.

MEDICAL CHATS.

ABOUT BABIES.

Naturally-fed infants, if constitutionally healthy, almost invariably grow fat and firm. They sleep well and give comparatively little trouble. Such have the best chances of becoming adults, and of reaching old age.

The fact that an infant has to remain an infant for a good long time weighs heavily against it. The young of animals can gallop about in some instances almost as soon as born. These need only be fed by the mother and be protected from attack, and they will thrive well enough; but infants are helpless creatures for many months, and remain entirely at the mercy of their mother or nurse for everything. If the mother or nurse do what is right in every respect, all is well and good; but unhealthy surroundings, insufficient air, bad light, and a careless toilet, set the young baby at a disadvantage, in its slow developments, as contrasted with the free running, independent existence of a young animal.

What looks healthier than a calf or foal in the fields? And, on the other hand, what circumstances seem more unnatural and sickly than those found in the majority of households, which, as often as not, have babies shut up indoors, it may be days together, and subjected to endless rocking and petting in order to soothe the weary hours of fidgeting and fretting, while pale faces and flabby limbs indicate not only the "cribbled, cabined, and confined" existence that is being dragged on, but that many false balances promise to mark the future.—Catholic Citizen.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

A policeman is patrolling the streets in the early hours of the morning; he sees a man, and, stopping, accosts him roughly. "What are you doing here?" he asks. By what right does he do this? Suppose, as you go downtown in the morning or as you come out of your place of business in the evening, he should meet you with a like question. You would resent it, would you not? You would be ready to tell him that it was your business and not his about which he had asked. In the former case, you would say that the policeman was but doing his duty. Why this difference? Your right to be on the street at reasonable hours can not be questioned. Unless the circumstances are very unusual, no man has the right to be prowling about his neighbor's premises after midnight. When you are manifestly out of your proper place, you must not complain if someone asks you to give an account of yourself.

"What are you doing here?" asks the commander, as he comes upon one of his soldiers resting in the shade while the others are marching to the front. He knows well enough what the young man is doing, but the question has its effect. "I—I am on my way to fight for my country, sire," he replies, adjusting his weapons as he runs. The question has revealed him to himself; indolence has become treachery, and he hastens to make amends.

"What are you doing here?" God asks of His professed servant who has withdrawn himself from the fields where others labor. He is simply pouting; someone has offended him, or perchance he had not been appreciated. The excuse, somehow, doesn't look as important as it did before the question was asked. He realizes that the question of obligation lies, not between him and his fellow servants, but between him and his Master from whose service he has not yet been excused.

"What are you doing here?" asks the Voice of a young person who sits feasting upon the unwholesome pleasures of the play. "I am still serving you," the young Christian falters, looking about with self-accusing glance. "This is not my camp," returns the Voice: "this is the enemy's territory."

"What are you doing here, man, outside the fold of God? What is your guarantee of safety?" "I am waiting until I shall feel like coming inside." "You have surely not considered where you are—on the brink of a constant danger without a safeguard, without a hope. What are you doing here?"

GET WISE SAYINGS MIXED.

Just as the popular so-called quo-of the assertion "Few die, and none resign."

Two Western newspapers have as their motto "Error ceases to be dangerous when truth is left free to combat it." This is a mutilation of President Jefferson's celebrated saying in his inaugural address that "Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it." The commonly used phrase "A delusion and a snare" is a compression of Lord Denman's expression "A delusion, a mockery and a snare." Tom Paine's "One step above the sublime makes the ridiculous" has been modernized into "From the sublime to the ridiculous." Fouché's "It is more than a crime—it is a political fault," has become "It is worse than a crime—it is a blunder."

Josiah Quincy's threat of the secession of some of the states, "Amicably if they can, violently if they must," was so effectually misquoted by Henry Clay that his rendering, "Peacefully if they can, forcibly if they must"—has been commonly received. Jackson's famous toast, "Our Federal Union: It must be preserved," has been amplified into "Must and shall be." Then there is Chief Justice Chase's eloquent characterization of "an indestructible Union composed of indestructible states." This, in the mouth of the average Fourth of July orator, has become "An indissoluble Union of indestructible States."

REGARDING RETREATS.

Pius X. spent last week in retreat. St. Paul is on record proclaiming his solicitude for his own soul's salvation, lest having preached unto others he himself might become a castaway. The Vicar of Christ, burdened with the care of all the churches, goes into that solitude in which God speaks to the human soul as He does not do amid the distractions of ordinary life. The diocesan clergy who are to go on retreat at St. Joseph's College, Memramcook, on July 22nd, will thus find themselves in much the same soul atmosphere as the Holy Father himself. Having given many weeks of the year to caring for the spiritual welfare of others, they consult their own spiritual interests by setting apart several days for more complete consecration to the work of their personal sanctification.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Madame Roland is the author of the famous exclamation, "Oh Liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name!" This exclamation well applies to present day France.

Success brings satisfaction, but it also discovers the venom of the small mind. When "She Stoops to Conquer," a play that has charmed millions and is a delight always, was first put on the stage, unfortunate Goldsmith, though generally praised, was called arrogant and his play "an incoherent piece of stuff." The successful man too often is a well-hated man.

How little we reflect. The passing hour engrosses our every thought. Our thoughts, like shadows, flit upon the present not the future; are given up to the interests of business or profession, to seeking how to make a fortune, to better our social condition, to increase our resources, and to enlarge our income. Anything and everything but the "one thing"—salvation!

Among the Jews there was an age which stood the test of ages, in as follows: Backs backas, backs, is, in his purse, in his glass, and in his anger, a man betrays his character or disposition. You know that he is a miser or a generous from the manner in which he dresses his purse. You can tell whether he is temperate or devoted to excess from the way he uses the glass. You can discover whether he is rattle brained or prudent and far-seeing from the way he rushes into anger or dissembles when under insult and injury. The test is a good one and may be profitably applied.

Catholic piety devotes the month of July to honoring in an especial manner the Precious Blood of Our Lord. Devotion to the Sacred Heart easily merges into that which commemorates the priceless value of the Blood of the Redeemer. The primary object is the same in both. The Heart that was the seat of divine love readily poured out its life-blood for our salvation. The same worship, the same gratitude, the same affection goes out to both. Whether one regards it in its deep cistern or in its plentiful outflow, in one form of piety as in the other, we honor and venerate alike, the price of our freedom and our life.

Some bad Catholics and addle-headed infidels believed the French ministry which promised them that when the religious orders should have been expelled and their property confiscated and sold, old age pensions would promptly go into effect throughout the country. A convent was sold at Limoges recently, for 5300 francs, and the costs of the transaction were 5307. Even in thrifty France, an aged person could not live long on $2.60. This is a fair specimen of the manner in which the government is keeping its faith with its foolish supporters.

Temperance Parade of Children in Boston.

A notable demonstration in the cause of total abstinence took place in Boston on Sunday, June 24, in the form of a parade of about 3000 children from various parishes, following which services were held in the Cathedral.

Major John J. Leonard, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, a well known military man, a life long temperance advocate and secretary treasurer of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, was the chief marshal. There were a number of bands in the parade. The parishes represented by delegations were the Cathedral, St. James, Immaculate Conception, St. Francis de Sales, Roxbury Mission, Roxbury, St. Mary's of the Annunciation, Cambridge, St. Leo's, Dorchester, and Sacred Heart, Somerville. In the last named were the Knights of the Sacred Heart, in handsome uniforms, 200 strong and their excellent band.

The Revs. F. J. Butler, rector of St. Leo's Church, Dorchester, and president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the Archdiocese of Boston, M. J. Doody, permanent rector of St. Mary's Church of the Annunciation, Cambridge, and John T. Mullen, D. C. L., rector of the Cathedral, accompanied the marchers.

The parade was reviewed at the Cathedral rectory by Archbishop Williams.

After the children reached the Cathedral the Most Rev. W. H. O'Connell, D. D., Archbishop Coadjutor of Boston, made an appropriate address and administered the pledge for one year to the entire body of children. Vespers were sung by Dr. Mullen.

NEW VATICAN GALLERY.

The work of making a new and worthy home for the pictures of the Vatican is taking rather longer than was anticipated, but the reason is not, as has been whispered, that the site chosen has not been found to be suitable. It is not unlikely that the new gallery, which is being richly decorated, thanks to the generosity of private benefactors, will be ready by next October.

HURRIED EXIT.

"Gladly would I die for you!" Her look of hauteur was maintained despite this plea.

"You are in error," she replied, coldly; "if you think the color of your hair constitutes my chief objection to you."

The good-night was brief and soon.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE BRIDEGROOM.

"They're talking about what the bride is to wear; They're talking about how she'll do up her hair; They're quarrelling over the bridal bouquet— I listen in silence to all that they say. They treat me as though I was chained to my doom. Alack! What am I? I am only the groom!"

Thus runs a verse of "The Bridegroom's Song." It is quite true. From her youth up until the time she stands at the altar a girl has "how to behave at a wedding" as part of her education, until she is permeated with it to the very finger tips. Hitherto nobody has taken the luckless bridegroom gently by the hand and guided his tottering footsteps in the proper path, speaking figuratively.

For the benefit of prospective bridegrooms the following directions are given at this late day:

Always take a walk in your wedding shoes the night before the wedding. If you do not, their raw newness will be apparent to everybody in the church when you kneel down, and, as is often the case, the price is marked on the shoes in ink that fact will be patent also. You wouldn't care for everybody to know that your wedding shoes were "warranted solid leather, $3.50," would you?

Invite as many of your bachelor friends as possible to the wedding breakfast. It costs you nothing—the bride's parents have to provide this—and they are sure to give you more sensible presents than saltcellars and standard lamps. Such useful things for the home as smokers' companions and spirit cabinets.

Do not lounge against the wall with your hands in your pockets while awaiting the arrival of the bride. The attitude would, of course, convey to the congregation the fact that you are cool and collected, but it is not adopted at the best society weddings.

Even if you are noted for your originality in the matter of ideas, be conventional for once, especially in the matter of dress. Your bride will be far happier to see you at the altar in a frock coat than she would if you donned a golf costume and a red necktie. Please her in this little thing for once, even if you never do anything to merit her approval again. Remember there are many jealous eyes in the church burning to pick holes in the taut ensemble.

Speak the responses in a level, medium voice. If you utter them softly, some of your bride's girl friends are sure to say you were frightened from the start, while if you give vent to them in clarion tones, they are sure to say that your voice is that of a man who will not allow his wife to call her soul her own, and that it is evident that poor Jessie had been bullied into it.

Don't for goodness sake, sign the marriage certificate with a trembling hand, as folks do in novels. Think that you are signing a receipt for an asset which represents millions of dollars in love and comfort. N. B.—It requires a powerful imagination to do this.

Always wear a high collar when getting married. It enables you to walk down the aisle after the ceremony with your bride on your arm in the radiantly happy style so much appreciated by connoisseurs at weddings.

Furthermore, keep your head up when you reach the church door and the confetti commences to shower. If you duck, as most silly bridegrooms do, you are certain to get several handfuls down the back of your neck, whence it percolates uncomfortably through the whole system to the boots. A very high, tight collar is a true friend in such a situation.

Do not talk about the weather to your wife on the way home from the church. There are far more attractive subjects—such as the war and the prospects of the football season.

Do not let any sense of false modesty prevent you from making a hearty wedding breakfast. It will probably be the last free meal you will have the opportunity of partaking of for some time. Joy in the possession of your wife may detract from your appetite to some extent, but remember you will have her with you all your life, while wedding breakfasts do not come every day.

In replying to the toast of the bride and bridegroom do not say that you hope this may not be the last time that you may see their smiling faces gathered under similar conditions. Your wife may misconstrue your meaning.

It is the correct thing before starting on the honeymoon to kiss your mother-in-law good-by. You may also, if you wish, kiss the bridesmaids—in fact, kiss all the ladies. Such a chance will not be yours again in a hurry.

Marry a girl whose surname begins with the same letter as your own, if possible as she will appreciate it. It saves her buying new trunks with fresh initials on them, remarking clothes and handkerchiefs, remarking monograms, and a dozen other details of the utmost importance.

AN IMPORTANT DECREE.

"Rome," in its "Vatican Notes," says: "The Sacred Congregation of the Council has issued an important decree ordaining that for the future when intentions for masses are sent from one diocese to another the Ordinary of the latter diocese be informed of the name of the priest to whom they are sent with the date and number of masses."

A VERY OBLIGING SCHOOL MA'AM.

In a village in New Jersey the school mistress saw one of the little boys crying. She called him to her and enquired the reason. "Some of the big boys made me kiss a little girl out in the school yard," was the reply. "Why, that is outrageous! Why did you not come right to me?" "I—I—didn't know that you would let me kiss you," he said.

THE REASON FOR TOAST.

"Did you ever wonder why toast is always recommended for invalids?" said a chemist to the Chicago Chronicle. The reason is that toast is predigested bread.

"What makes fresh bread trying for invalids is the starch in it."

"Starch is very hard to digest. It needs a good stomach to take hold of the soggy starch in bread and change it to strengthening, stimulating dextrine."

"But when you cut bread thin and toast it brown the fire itself changes the starch to dextrine. That, in fact, is what the brown color in toast indicates—that the starch is gone and dextrine has taken its place. The stuff is predigested."

"So we feed our invalids on toast, a dish as thoroughly predigested as any of the most famous breakfast foods."

THE OCEAN, LTD.

A MAGNIFICENT STEAMER.

The new turbine Eastern Line S. S. Yale, Capt. Pike, reached St. John on her initial direct trip from Boston at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning with over 500 passengers and 128 tons of freight.

Those who looked her over that day saw the Globe in its description of her on Saturday did not in any way exaggerate her many attractive qualities. On Page 2 we reprint the Globe's story of the new turbine.

SOMETHING LACKING.

The firelight dispels the gloom Within the bachelor's room. Before the grate his pets await—

A sleepy dog, a purring cat. Here's coziness and rosiness;

What needs a man, ah! more than that?

He smokes his pipe here at his ease, And does whatever his fancies please. Tonight his fancies are aflight,

On rings of smoke they float away. Here's coziness and rosiness!

Ah! no one bids him come or stay. He hears no footsteps on his stair—

All's quiet, unmolested there. This is the cream of life. A dream!

A sleepy dog, a purring cat. Here's coziness and rosiness—

But, ah, a man needs more than that.

S. KERR & SON,
ODD FELLOWS' HALL

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY WAS CELEBRATED AT BROOKLYN

Former Residents of St. John Who Were Married on the Day of the Great Fire.

In celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of their wedding, made memorable in that it occurred on the day St. John, N. B., was destroyed by fire, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Walsh, who are well known in this city, held a reception for their friends in their home, No. 345 Fourteenth street, Brooklyn, on last Tuesday evening. A large number of their friends, among whom were many well known in St. John, congratulated them and expressed a wish to be present at their golden wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Walsh were married on the morning of June 20, 1877. They left on their honeymoon trip by steamer for Halifax, and when they arrived there were informed that St. John was on fire and being consumed by flames. They returned and when they again reached this city found that the greater part of it had been reduced to ashes. Their home and Mr. Walsh's place of business in King street were found burnt and all that remained standing was the chimneys to mark the once prosperous city. The many wedding presents had been moved several times in an effort to save them from the flames, but the fire won out and they were destroyed.

About them were the homeless and suffering, many of them intimate friends. The suffering from hunger and exposure was great. Edward Hayes, Mrs. Walsh's father, had a large bakery on Mill street, which was destroyed. Temporary ovens were built and although great difficulty was experienced in obtaining flour the bread that was made did much to relieve the hunger. Shortly afterward Mr. and Mrs. Walsh came to New York and for the past fourteen years have resided in Brooklyn. They have one son, Mr. Edward Walsh, who is connected with the staff of the New York Herald.

Many beautiful presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Walsh on last Tuesday evening from their friends in honor of the occasion. The evening was spent with music and dancing. Mr. Albert Krins, assisted by his sister, Miss Vera Krins, entertained with piano solos, and Miss Ida Olsen and Mr. Herbert Hawkins, formerly a member of the Isle of Pong Pong Company, were heard in songs. At the supper table, which was beautifully decorated with roses and carnations, Mr. and Mrs. Walsh were toasted and wished a long continuance of their happy married life.

Among those known in St. John who were present were Mrs. James Boden, sr., Mrs. James Boden, jr., Miss Ida Olsen, Captain Olsen, Mrs. Kearney, Miss Mary Colgan and Mrs. Thornton.

Dr. Alward's Oration.

It will be learned with pleasure that the Alumni oration given at the recent convocation of King's College by Dr. Silas Alward has been printed for general circulation. The oration dealt with the Unity of the Empire and when given at Windsor was declared by competent critics to have been an unusually able effort, virile in thought, graceful in construction and chaste in language. It is now on sale at the local book stores in pamphlet form. It will be read with especial interest at this time, dealing as it does with the colonial conference and to some extent with the past forty years of Canada's development. Coming from a scholar and thinker so well known as Dr. Alward the pamphlet is of the greatest value to the student of empire affairs.

WHY THEY CRIED AT THE WEDDING.

"I say, mamma," said little Floasie, "why did Mrs. Brown cry at the wedding to-day?"
"Oh, because her dear daughter was getting married and leaving her."
"And why did Mrs. Jones cry?"
"Oh, because her dear son left her."
"I see. And why did Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Simpson cry?"
"Oh, because they have ever so many daughters to get married and no sign of any of them going off."

WEDDING BELLS.

On Monday morning, July 1st, in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, a pretty wedding took place, when Miss Bessie Flaherty, daughter of Mr. John Flaherty, Charles street, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Quigg, of Fairville. The bride was becomingly gowned in a dress of violet grey eolienne, with a large white picture hat, and carried a white prayer book. Miss Ethel Flaherty, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She was attired in a dress of blue eolienne, with white picture hat. Mr. Jas. Quigg, cousin of the groom, acted as best man. After the ceremony, the happy couple proceeded to the home of the bride's father, a Charles street, where the wedding breakfast was served. The many useful and costly presents show how the young couple were esteemed by their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Quigg will reside in Fairville.

At Roxbury, Boston, Mass., on June 6 Rev. F. Sullivan united in marriage Mr. Frank E. Britt and Miss Margaret Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hayes. The bridesmaid was Miss Theresa Hayes, and the groomsmen, Mr. J. L. Hayes. The happy couple are well known in this city and many friends will be interested in the announcement of their wedding. The bride received many beautiful gifts.

The marriage of Fred L. Roderick, son of Joseph Roderick, to Miss Ella Stanton, daughter of Joseph Stanton, was solemnized in St. Peter's church Monday morning at 5.30 o'clock. Rev. M. Maloney, C. S. R., performed the ceremony in the presence of a number of relatives and friends of the bride and groom. The bride, who wore a grey travelling costume and hat to match, was attended by Miss Teresa McManus in white dotted Swiss muslin. The groom was supported by his brother, Frank J. Roderick, of New Haven, Conn. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Roderick left on the steamer Governor Cobb for a tour of United States cities. On their return they will reside on Canterbury street. Many handsome and useful presents testified the popularity of the young couple. The bride, who was a prominent member of the Cecilia orchestra, received from her sister musicians a bronze ornament in token of their esteem.

"BEYOND THE ALPS."

Out in Kansas a sweet girl graduate who had been given the theme, "Beyond the Alps Lies Italy," according to The Topeka Capital, dashed off the following:

"I don't care a cent whether Italy lies beyond the Alps or in Missouri. I do not expect to set the world on fire with my future career. I am glad that I have a good education, but I am not going to misuse it by writing poetry or essays on the future woman. It will enable me to correct the grammar of any lover I may have should he speak of 'dorgs' in my presence, or 'seen a man.' It will also come handy when I want to figure out how many pounds of soap a woman can get for three dozen eggs at the grocery. So I do not begrudge the time I spent in acquiring it. But my ambitions do not fly so high. I just want to marry a man who can lick anybody of his weight in the township, who can run an eighty acre farm and who has no female relatives to come around and try to boss the ranch. I will agree to cook dinners for him that won't send him to an early grave, and I will give him a wholesome affection and to see that his razor has not been used to cut broom wire when he wants to shave. In view of all this, I do not care if I get a little rusty on the rules of three and kindred things as the years go by."

FORESTERS HEAD THE LIST.

As a purely insurance order, the Catholic Foresters, with 130,000 members, is the largest Catholic fraternity. But the Knights of Columbus, with a membership of 180,000 (60,000 of whom are insurance members), and growing at rate of 20,000 members a year, has distanced all its competitors, numerically.

JAPAN UNFURLING HER FLAG ON THE PACIFIC

(Adachi Kinnosuke, in Harper's Weekly.)

Japan will soon control the trade of the Pacific. Her merchant fleet is growing with great rapidity, not only in American traffic, but in the commerce of Korea, Formosa, China, India and the Far East generally. Certain American optimists declare that the Pacific will always be dominated by the United States. But it is only the optimists who have this faith. Shipping men, American men actually engaged in commerce with the Far East, know that Japan is fast assuming command in that quarter of the globe.

If any one doubts the accuracy of this proposition, let me ask him to consider the organization of the Nippon Kisen Kaisha (Japan Steamship Company), which is energetically carrying the Sunrise flag half way round the world.

A group of the most noted bankers and steamship men of Nippon met on the second day of February of this year in the Bankers' Assembly Hall in Tokyo. This was the first public meeting of the promoters of a new steamship company. At that meeting it was christened the Nippon Kisen Kaisha. A large name. Yet the company has the consolation of knowing that amid the cheerful summer growth of mushroom enterprises since the war it is bigger than its name.

The company commands the capital—no watered stock, by your leave—an instantly available capital of thirty million yen (15,000,000 dollars gold). Their financial programme sets aside ten million yen for the purchase of about one hundred vessels of 200,000 tons, which are, at this present moment, actually engaged in shipping business under the merchant flag of Nippon. The remainder of the sum, the twenty million yen, is to be spent on the construction of new ships. They will have the speed, the improvements, and other qualifications that would please the subsidy regulations of the country. This sum is also meant to cover the expenditure of establishing new lines of traffic.

From a copy of the company's financial estimate which is before us—a modern book of prophecy penned by scientists—learn that the company expects an income of more than five million eight hundred and twenty thousand yen annually from freight handled by regular and established lines of the company; 1,884,597 yen from the freight carried by their vessels on irregular and special services; 213,211 yen and 25 yen from subsidies and bounties; and 100,000 yen through miscellaneous sources. The total expected income per annum amounts to 8,107,825 yen. Against this the total expenditure of the company is estimated at 4,614,265 yen and seven sen.

You must admit that the showing is not at all bad. The estimate was drawn up by a very cautious set of people who are more than once before drawn up estimates; who have never disappointed their friends, especially in their predictions—not the worst showing, to say the least, for an enterprise which is as far from a get-rich-quick trap of this money-mad age as is the north pole from the equator.

"TWELVE MONTHS HENCE."
A person having behaved very rudely to Mr. Boswell, he went to Dr. Johnson, and talked of it as a serious distress. Dr. Johnson laughed, and said, "Consider, sir, how insignificant this will appear twelve months hence." "Were this consideration," says Mr. Boswell, "applied to most of the little vexations of life, by which our quiet is too often disturbed, it would prevent many painful sensations. I have tried it frequently and with good effect."

MADE IN IRELAND.
A beautiful cope of Irish white silk, with a clasp of Irish gold in Celtic design, are being made in Dublin for presentation to His Holiness Pius X. on the occasion of his coming jubilee. The design of the clasp is purely Irish, as everything about the cope and clasp will be. A jeweled spectacle case is being wrought of Irish material also for the Holy Father.

DUKE ORDERS HANDS OFF.
The Duke of Abruzzi has encountered the American souvenir hunter, and he does not like the species. On his recent visit to the Jamestown exposition his flagship was filled of nearly all the valuable mementos that he spent years in gathering. When the Duke went to Boston he refused to allow any visitors on board lest they should dismantle the ship.

HOWL AND CLAW THE AIR.
Mrs. Scott M. Ladd, wife of Justice Ladd of the Iowa Supreme court, is the Des Moines high priestess of the newest religious cult. At the services which she conducts in Des Moines her devotees writhe on the floor like epileptics, leap in the air, chatter, scream, gnash their teeth, and beat themselves on the head. So great is the public indignation over these exercises that Mrs. Ladd last week was arrested on the charge of disturbing the peace.

Prince Fushimi Delighted With I. C. R. Train Service.

Expresses His Gratitude to the Management for The Splendid Arrangements for His Journey.

Before leaving Canada for Japan, His Imperial Highness Prince Fushimi of Japan, instructed his Secretary to send the following telegram to the officials of the Intercolonial Railway:

To D. Pottinger,
Moncton, N. B.

His Imperial Highness, Prince Fushimi desires me express to you his warm thanks for the services of all the officials of the Intercolonial Railway on the train from Quebec to Toronto. Everything worked with the greatest smoothness, and His Imperial Highness much appreciated all the arrangements made to insure him comfort.

He is grateful to you for all your services on this occasion.

Signed

NAGASKI.
In discussing the Royal Train which the Intercolonial Railway placed at the disposal of His Highness on his arrival at Quebec, the Toronto World says:

The Royal Train which created so much attention was composed of seven cars, occupied by a party of about forty. It was the first real Government owned train which ever arrived in Toronto, a fact which was remarked by railway officials. Five of the cars on the Intercolonial Railway which never saw Toronto before, returned this morning to the blue nose regions to resume their usual grind as a portion of the regular equipment and service on the Intercolonial Railway, to which it may be said they are a distinct credit. They are the cars that are in ordinary use on the "Ocean Limited," and their general appearance is pleasing. The other two cars were those known as the "Cornwall" and the "York," and were occupied by Prince Fushimi and his suite who were greatly pleased with the attentions to their comfort and expressed themselves accordingly. The Prince through his interpreters lauded the railway service. The observation and dining room on the Cornwall was very handsomely decorated with evergreens and flowers as was the Dining Car of the Intercolonial Railway.

HER DEAR FRIEND.

Miss Knock—Ethel is to be married next month, and she says Walter wants to board, as he thinks she needs a rest.

Miss Knock—She does need a rest, considering the way she ran after him, but I didn't know he knew it. —Woman's Home Companion.

CONFESSION BY PHONE.

In a communication to the New York Freeman's Journal last fall the editor of The Catholic Fortnightly Review, quoted theological authorities to the effect that confession by telephone was not valid. In The Casuist (New York: Wagner, p. 94), there is, says the same Review, in its latest issue, discussed an interesting case. The wife of a Free Mason is gravely ill, and the priest, notwithstanding all his efforts, has failed to gain admission. He gets into communication with the sick woman by means of the telephone, obtains from her a confession of sins, and conditionally absolves her. The Casuist condemns him as having acted imprudently since there is not even a slight probability that the absolution is valid.

Rev. Dr. J. M. Harty, of Maynooth, reviewing the book just quoted in the Irish Theological Quarterly (ii. 6), while admitting that there is no solid probability in favor of the validity of the absolution, insists there is a slight probability that a valid absolution can be given by telephone in cases of extreme emergency. He deduces this not merely from the fact that, as the author of The Casuist states there are some theologians who maintain the validity, but also, and indeed principally, from the attitude of the Holy See towards the question. Asked for a solution, the Sacred Penitentiary replied: "Nihil esse respondendum." "Did the Holy See think that the absolution is clearly invalid," says Dr. Harty, "it would never have given this formal reply. Hence, if there is a case of urgent necessity—if, for instance, the above mentioned lady were in serious danger of death—conditional absolution may be given by means of the telephone."

WHEN WE'RE DOWN AND OUT.
To be "resigned to fate," 'tis true
We'd feel less hesitation,
Were fate not always certain to Accept the resignation.

HOW SHOULD A MAN PROPOSE?

(Kurt Stein, in Chicago Journal.)

How should a man propose?
Who knows?
Should he go down upon his knees
And get his trousers out of crease?
Or should he merely up and say:
"Here is your ring, Mag; name the day."

Should he with sighs his love declare,
Or just buy a big solitaire?
And should he, when he comes around
Throw hints about his bank account?
Who knows?

How should a man propose?

Who knows?

Should he use terms that Shakespeare sang,
Or should he talk the latest slang,
Should he be dressed in somber gray
And black or should his clothes be gay?

If by these matters you are vexed,
And feel bewildered and perplexed
Until your head's all in a whirl,
Just simply go and ask your girl—
She knows.

KIER HARDY WILL SOON VISIT CANADA

Mr. Keir Hardy, who is coming to Canada on a visit, is one of the most striking figures in British politics. To him more than to any other it is due that the labor movement in the old country has become a vitalized force, and that there is in the House of Commons to-day a party strong enough to influence the most powerful government of modern times in its legislative efforts. One of the founders of the Independent labor party, Mr. Hardy early realized that the voice of labor to be heard and given effect to must be expressed at the polls and in parliament independently and accordingly he set himself to organize a party with political aims and a definite platform. When he first took his seat in the House of Commons Mr. Hardy was regarded as something of the nature of a political freak. Disregarding all traditions, he shocked the dignity of the "best club in the world" by appearing in a suit of sodden grey, and wearing a biled shirt and a workman's bonnet.

He has learned a good deal since, and now he dresses "more respectably," as the fastidious M. P. would say. Born in a mining village in Ayrshire, Scotland, Keir Hardy was sent to work in the pit when he was seven years old. He taught himself reading and writing, and while still a youth was elected secretary of a large miners' union. He afterwards took to journalism, edited a local newspaper for some years, and then founded The Labor Leader, the organ of the Independent labor party. He entered parliament fifteen years ago. Mr. Hardy is a forceful writer and a fluent and convincing speaker. Like John Burns, he is never happier than when among his books, of which he has a rich store.

QUALIFIED PRAISE.

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

Quoth I to Grace:
"I much admire
May's winsome face.
"She's lots of fire."
And Grace retorted with a sniff:
"Oh, yes; she would be pretty, if—"

Quoth I to May:
"Of Grace I'm fond.
She is, I say,
A lovely blonde."
And May her nether lip did jut.
And said: "She would be pretty,
BUT—"

NOT AN IMPRESARIO.
I cannot sing the old songs,
I cannot play the new.
He looked at her in ecstasy.
O, darling, I love you.

TIME'S MUTATIONS.
How times change may be judged from the following excerpt from a recent issue of the London "Tablet":
"The following extract, from the 'Cardiff and Merthyr Guardian' of February 16, 1856, takes us back to the day of little things: 'POPERY. —We regret to state that owing to the increasing Irish population of this town, it has been found necessary to enlarge the Roman Catholic chapel by extending the gallery.' The Catholic population of Cardiff to-day numbers nearly 20,000, and is served by some of the finest churches in Wales."

WANTED HIS MONEY'S WORTH.

Have you any choice as to the wedding march?" asked the church organist.
"The wedding march?" echoed the father of the bride.
"Yes. The march that is played when the bridal possession moves down the aisle. Which one would you prefer—Mendelssohn's or the march from 'Lohengrin'?"
"A y difference in the expense?"
"O, no."
"Then play the one that's the longest."

ROCKWOOD PARK.

Rockwood Park had many visitors on Saturday afternoon, when the new features were opened to the public. It was a great time for young and old and all agreed that the new pavilion, the Ferris wheel, the merry-go-round and the other amusements add to the attractiveness of the place and make it more than ever a desirable playground. Mr. F. L. Tufts is in charge for the Frank White Catering Company and will prove a most obliging and gentlemanly manager. Rockwood now has many interesting features and a good restaurant.

A RECENT APPOINTMENT.

The Rev. Dr. A. A. Sinnott, secretary to the Apostolic Delegation, Ottawa, has been raised to the dignity of a Monsignor. Dr. Sinnott accompanied His Excellency Mgr. Scharotti, the Delegate Apostolic, on his visit to this province a few years ago.

Mgr. Sinnott is a P. E. Islander, and has many friends in St. John and throughout Canada, who will be glad to hear of his promotion.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH.

During the months of July and August, there will be no sermons preached at the Sunday evening services in St. Peter's church. The exercises will consist of Rosary, Vespers and Benediction. Also the different Confraternity meetings of the Holy Family will be discontinued during these months, to be resumed again in September.

WEDDING BELLS.

An event of pleasing interest to a large circle of friends and acquaintances occurred on Wednesday morning at 6 o'clock in St. Peter's church. The occasion was the marriage of Mr. Louis M. Owens, of Fredericton, to Miss Ellen Josephine, daughter of the late George Quinn, of the North End. The sacred rite was administered by the Very Rev. A. Duke, C. S. S. R., who also celebrated nuptial mass. This was the first marriage at which the new Rector officiated since taking charge of St. Peter's. The groom was attended by Mr. James B. Keenan, and Miss Katherine Quinn, a sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. Mr. W. James Quinn, of the Marine and Fisheries Dept., Ottawa, a brother of the bride, led her to the altar. The bride looked charming, and was beautifully attired in white organdie over white silk, with a veil and orange blossoms and carried a white prayer book. The bridesmaid presented an attractive appearance, gowned in grey foulard. Prot. A. G. Balliere, the new organist, played the wedding march, and the choir rendered appropriate music in excellent style. Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the bride's home, Main street, after which Mr. and Mrs. Owens left for the Cedars, where they will spend some time before taking up residence in Fredericton. The bride's travelling dress was a neat tailored suit of navy cheviot.

The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and useful presents.

Among the relatives who attended the festivities was Miss Elizabeth Owens, of Fredericton, a sister of the groom.

Mr. John E. Owens, brother of the groom, married Miss Martina Quinn, a sister of the bride, in April last.

Both young ladies were capable and efficient teachers on the staff of St. Peter's Schools, and have many friends throughout the Province.

The altar boys, who served the mass on each occasion, were suitably remembered with appropriate gifts.

A pretty wedding took place at St. Peter's church at half past seven Thursday morning, when Miss Beatrice Doherty was married to Mr. Alexander Gibb, formerly of Montreal and now stenographer in the office of the terminal agent of the Intercolonial Railway here. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. Scully, C. S. S. R., in the presence of a number of the relatives and friends of the bride and groom. Nuptial music was rendered by the church choir, a beautiful solo being sung by Miss Julia McCarthy. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Lillian Sweeney, while Mr. D. J. McRae was the groomsmen. The bride wore a gown of white point d'esprit over white silk with a veil and orange blossoms, and carried a white prayer book. Her going away costume was a gown of brown broadcloth with a hat to match. The bridesmaid wore pink silk with a white chiffon hat. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Doherty, Bridge street.

At 11 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Gibb left on the Ocean Limited for Montreal. From Montreal they will go to Niagara, Buffalo, Chicago and other United States cities. Returning they will make their home at 126 Bridge st. Both the bride and groom are popular with a wide circle of friends. The regard in which they are held was shown by the many beautiful presents received by the bride. Among the gifts was a handsome clock from the clerks in the local intercolonial freight office, and a couch from a number of employees in the railway station.

THE CONSERVATIVE PAPER.

In the office of Col. J. R. Armstrong Wednesday night a number of shareholders in the new morning newspaper, which the conservative expect to start, met and decided to go ahead immediately with the purchase of a press, linotype machines and the rest of the equipment necessary. The Morning Standard will be the name.

Mr. S. D. Scott is spoken of as the editor of the new paper.

B., also three daughters, Mrs. Jere Mahoney, Misses Sarah and Ellen Butler, of Bangor; one sister, Mrs. Jerome Arsenault, of Enniskillen.

SIZE OF THE UNIVERSE.

"By considering the universe's size," said a mathematician, "man can form an idea of his own littleness. Here is an impressive illustration of the incredible vastness of the universe."

"Electricity travels at the rate of 180,000 miles a second. If we could board an electric current and journey at its speed, our train would require eight minutes to reach the sun."

"A short enough trip, eh? To Alpha Centauri, the nearest fixed star, would be a longer trip. Our train would travel four years ere we arrived at Alpha station."

"There are other fixed stars which going at the 180,000-mile-per-second rate, we would only reach in a 2,000 year journey."

"And still further on lie those black and horrifying chasms, the interstellar spaces, which contain stars we know not how far distant, for our telescopes are unable to reveal them to us."

Sir Thomas Lipton who made $60,000,000 in twenty years, attributes his success to printer's ink employed in the advertising columns of the newspapers.—Boston Herald.

About fifty persons left here on Tuesday morning, at 11 o'clock, for Moncton, where they will join the main body of the Pilgrims who are going to St. Ann de Beaupre. They will proceed in a special train.

On Thursday evening, June 27th, the St. Vincent's Alumnae Association held their annual reunion at White's Restaurant King street.

THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA.

We received a few weeks ago, from Mr. P. G. Hall, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, North End, the annual report of that well known banking institution. It embodies a comprehensive statement of the bank's affairs and is one of the best pieces of printing of its kind that has come to hand. The report is printed on coated papers and contains in addition to the several statements and the list of shareholders, splendid engravings of the bank's several buildings. St. John people will be particularly interested in the cut of the bank's new building on King street, as it will appear when completed. The cut leaves no doubt that the building is to be one of the handsomest not only in St. John, but in the provinces. The report was printed by the American Bank Note Company, Ottawa.
