The best of good feeling pervaded the banqueters, and their beaming countenances plainly indicated that they, one and all, enjoyed the good things set before them. The climax of enthusiasm was reached when the haggis, "great chieftain of the pudding race," was introduced with regulation honors. All stood up when the skirl of the pipes announced that his haggishness was approaching, and remained on their feet while he was borne aloft around the room—preceded by the pipers playing an appropriate march. After full justice had been done the viands, the President rapped for order and the intellectual portion of the programme was entered upon. On behalf of the Club, the President extended to all present a hearty highland welcome. He then read letters regretting inability to attend from Lieutenant Governor McIntyre, U. S. Consul Vail and Col. Irving, as well as fraternal greetings from several sister societies. The toast list was then proceeded with, all the toasts being drunk in cold water. The speeches throughout were of a high order of merit, and elicited much applause and enthusiasm. Following is the list of TOASTS.

The King—God Save the King. The Day and a' Wha Honour it—Song, Scotland Yet. The Governor General—Pipes, Hail to the Chief. The Lieutenant Governor. The Land o' Cakes and Brither Scots—Song, Scots Wha Hae. Our Parliamentary Institutions. The Land We Live in—Song, The Maple Leaf. Our Empire and its Defenders—Song, Rule Britannia. The Learned Professions. Our Guests—Song, Will Ye no Come Back Again.

The President asked the Chief to propose the first toast on the list, that of the King. Chief Stewart proposed the toast in a becoming manner, and after the singing of "God Save the King," toasts to the memory of our late beloved Queen and to the late President McKinley were proposed and drunk in silence. The toast of "The Day and a' Wha Honour it" was responded to by Rev. McLean Sinclair, an ex-President James McLean, Clansman D. A. McKinnon, M.P., responded for the Governor-General, and Lieut. Col. Moore to that of the Lieutenant Governor. The Land o' Cakes and Brither Scots was responded to by ex-Chief David Small. "Our Parliamentary Institutions" brought out Premier Farquharson, J. F. Wheeler, M. L. A., and Dr. Kelly. C. O. W. S. Stewart spoke for the "Land We Live in," while the "Empire and its Defenders" was responded to by Rev. Mr. Fullerton and Lieut. Arthur Melish. Dr. R. McNeill, Clansman John A. McDonald, Esq., Clansman J. E. B. McCreedy, J. H. Reddin and Oliver Rattenbury, Esq., answered for the "Learned Professions." Messrs. M. J. Butler, D. O. M. Reddin, Peter McCourt and W. J. O'Reilly answered for the "Sister Societies." Clansman Alexander McDonald proposed the toast, "Our Hostess," which was suitably responded to by Mrs. Archibald and Mr. Moffat. The we sang "The Land We Live in" having by this time advanced somewhat, all joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King."

Professor Earle presided at the organ, and the singing of Mr. Charles Earle elicited much and deserved praise. While Col. Moore was speaking the electric lights went out, and during the interval of darkness all joined in lustily singing "Annie Laurie." The seating capacity of the Queen's dining hall was more than taxed beyond its utmost capacity to accommodate the eighty odd guests that assembled on this memorable occasion of the St. Andrew's Dinner of 1901.

St. Andrew's Dinner.

The annual St. Andrew's Dinner, under the auspices of the Caledonian Club of Prince Edward Island, was held at the Queen Hotel on Monday evening last. Without any doubt the dinner was in every respect among the most successful Scottish celebrations held in this Province. The members of the Club assembled at their rooms on Queen Street, and about half past eight o'clock proceeded by pipers Ferguson and McInnis, marched to the hotel. Meantime a large number of guests and visiting clansmen had assembled. The dining hall of the Queen had been most appropriately decorated for the occasion with flags, banners and other emblems and devices, all having reference in one way or another to the festival about to be celebrated. The dining hall was brilliantly lighted, and in every way bore testimony to the taste and diligence exercised in its preparation by the genial hostess, Mrs. Archibald. About nine o'clock the clansmen with their friends and guests, upwards of eighty in all, marched to the dining hall to the music of the pibroch, and sat down to a most sumptuous banquet. John McSwain, Esq., President of the Club, presided, supported on the right by the Chief, Major D. Stewart and Rev. T. F. Fullerton, and on the left by Rev. McLean Sinclair and Premier Farquharson. The vice chair was filled by Mr. Charles McGregor, vice-President. Following is the

- MENU: Scotch Broth, Salted Almonds, Celery, Spanish Olives, Boiled Salmon, Saddle of Mutton, Red Currant Jelly, Boiled Turkey, Oyster Sauce, Roast Beef, Yorkshire Pudding, Roast Goose, Apple Marmalade, Vegetables, The Haggis, English Plum Pudding, Pastry, Frozen Pudding, Scotch Cake, Assorted Cakes.

Jellies, Creams, Fruits, Crackers, Cheese, Tea, Coffee.

Get your skates sharpened!
Don't lose any sleep on account of slander. It will rub off when it gets dry.
New Year's Day will not be observed this year. It doesn't come till next year, you know.

Every day women are crowding men in some profession now to them. Toronto now comes forward with two women bargains.
Queen Alexandra entered her 57th year on Sunday. One disadvantage the women of Sovally labor under is that they cannot hide their age.
The Hillsborough Bodge will likely be ready for crossing about the first of January. It will be constructed of ice, the same as in former years.

Mr. David Nation has secured a divorce from his wife Carrie, the lady of hatches fame. When David's relations hear about this, they will be rejoicing among the Nations.
Six hundred more Canajians for South Africa! The Boers may well lay down their arms right away. They may be good at guerrilla warfare, but the Canucks know a few monkey tricks too.

There is some talk of starting a beet factory in this Province. Good idea! Now, if a factory could be started by which the characters known as "dead beats" could be put to some advantage wouldn't we be more than happy?
The Denver News says: "A Missouri man was arrested for having a $100 bill. Such unusual things are liable to cause suspicion."
The St. John Telegraph thinks he must have been a newspaper man. He might have been. But how on earth could a newspaper man get hold of a $100 bill.

George Byers, a colored puglist of Charlottetown, was knocked out in the sixth round in a fast encounter at New Britain, Conn. on Thursday night. To add insult to injury Tom Sharkey got up at the conclusion of the bout and offered to meet any man in the world, barring colored fighters. It is rumored that George on hearing this turned as white as a sheet.
"Can anoring be cured?" is the question which New York city is now discussing. Up to the present time the negative side of the argument has the advantage, but there is a simple and sovereign remedy which no one has ventured to suggest. Wake up the offender.—Toronto Globe.
And perhaps get your head punched.

Truro News: "We cannot publish the stuff we have received from a fall poet, who sends in a lovely thing which begins as follows:
The leaves are falling, falling,
And the trees are catching cold,
And the snow is on the ground,
And the wind is blowing hard,
And the birds are in the trees,
And the sun is shining bright,
And the world is all a-bleeze."
The Patriot, in its issue of yesterday, under the heading of "Men of Mark," prints some very interesting items, indeed. One of these items concerns that "President McKinley's summer tour will begin in July and will probably include a trip to San Francisco, where he will witness the launching of the battleship Ohio." Another item says that Ex-Frederic Crisp is seriously ill with influenza. This news, well kept, will be all the more appreciated by those who do not know that both men have been dead for some time.

"Sir," began the seedy-looking individual as he approached the cashier in a down-town office, "I have seen bet your eye and if you kindly render me a little assistance—
"I'm very sorry," interrupted the cashier, "but I can do nothing for you today. Charity should begin at home, you know."
"Thank you sir," replied the man, "as he extracted a memorandum book and pencil from a mysterious recess of his apparel. "What is your home address, please, and what time shall I call?"
George had wanted a bicycle for a long time. Last year his birthday was embittered by the fact that he did not get the much-coveted wheel, and so he waited the day this time "with much anxiety."
During the week before, he regularly and earnestly resorted to prayer that he might have his desire granted. His parents really feared for his faith should he again be disappointed. Therefore, on the morning of his birthday he found awaiting him by his bedside a beautiful new wheel.

When his mother entered the room she found him delightfully gazing upon it.
"Wall," he called out, cheerfully, "I thought the Lord wouldn't have the nerve to refuse this time."
My friend Scrawler has been at it again. He has turned out a beautiful picture this time—a sort of rural landscape it appears to be. "Can you think of the name I should best give to this Scrawler." "The problem I cannot answer," said I. "You're right," said Scrawler, "it's a problem. This picture is called, 'A Study in Arithmetic, or Long Division.'"

BATTLE ABBEY SOLD.

Battle Abbey, the historic place near Hastings, associated with the landing of William the Conqueror in England in 1066, was sold at auction on Wednesday for $200,000. It was the property of the late Duchess of Cleveland, mother of the Earl of Rosebery. The bidding started at £50,000, and was followed by an offer of £80,000, and immediately another of £100,000 was made. The price rose quickly by tens of thousands, and in less than ten minutes had reached £180,000. Ten minutes afterward the sale was made at £200,000 amid great cheering. The auctioneer refused to disclose the purchaser's name, but he is understood to be an Englishman.

BULLER DEMONSTRATION.
A remarkable demonstration took place at the Devonian Dinner, at Hotel Cecil, London, Saturday night, in honor of Buller. A presiding officer he proposed the health of the King which was the signal for deafening cheers. There was no anti-Government demonstration. On Sunday the traders unions and workmen's societies with bands

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.
RAILWAY HORROR.
From 100 to 150 persons were killed or injured last Wednesday night in the most disastrous railway wreck in the history of Michigan railways. Two heavily loaded passenger trains on the Wabash railroad collided head-on at full speed, one mile east of Seneca, the second station west of Adrian. The westbound train of two cars, loaded with emigrants, and five other coaches, were smashed and burned, with the result of awful loss of life and fearful injuries to a majority of the passengers. The eastbound train, the Continental limited, suffered in scarcely less degree. The track in the vicinity of the wreck was strewn with dead and dying. Many physicians from Detroit went to the scene.

Blandine of Betharram.

BY J. M. CAVE.

(American Messenger of the Sacred Heart.)

PART II.

Blandine's memory recalled not one familiar feature of the face that was looking into hers. Still she suffered herself to be kissed, over and over again. Nan was on her knees now, both arms around the child, who was ashamed not to remember one apparently so fond of her. "The princess came in," "Wall, Anis, does she remember you?" "Remember me," cried Nan. "How could she, the darling, she never saw me. You forget, I had to go back to Rand before she came."

"Oh, yes, I remember. It was Doonasha who went to the South with them." "Doonasha was my nurse," said Blandine. "I remember her. She is in heaven with my mamma. And perhaps I remember you, a little. Did my papa call you Nan?" "Yes, that he did, and Nannette, and Nanney!" "You were very good to my mamma. Your picture is in her book, and in my papa's book too." Blandine returned Nan's embrace now, and felt as if she had found a friend. The princess was greatly pleased. "I shall give her into your hands while she is in Paris, Anis. Daria is so much to do, though I hope you will stand between me and her jealousy, when she sees you with her favorite. She would keep her by her side constantly, if I did not use violence. The child needs air and exercise."

"I am her governess, her maid, her everything, and Daria shall not be heard either," cried the delighted Nan. "Promise me, Anis, to watch over her." "I promise, good mother. But is it really too late to keep her, or give her to the Dacres, who so love her?" "Is it too late. From the hour in which I accepted the conditions of her entry at Smaloe, it was too late."

"But you will be yourself to-morrow, good mother, and all will yet be well. To-morrow the Abbe Island will be in Paris. He will cheer your heart by telling you what a noble fellow your Sacha's husband was."

"To-morrow! To-morrow!" repeated the princess. "Well, go to rest, Anis; you look tired. It is a comfort to me to know that I have you to confide in, and that the little one loves you. Here comes Daria, to put me to bed." Daria's face was the picture of melancholy, but Nan found means to whisper to her that the princess was depressed, that she must try to cheer her. Daria took the hint, and to the surprise of her mistress was all at once cheerful and even gay. But her gaiety met with sorrowful smiles, and she was obliged to withdraw at last, leaving Madame de Vallinski in a most unusually grave mood.

"She feels it a'ready," said Daria to herself. "What will it be when the door shuts forever behind the child?" * * * "The door has shut behind the child," to use Daria's words. It has shut out sunshine at the same time. Although Madame de Vallinski is dressing for a grand entertainment, and waiting to accompany her, the sound of the closing door has left in the lofty rooms and grand halls an echo that sounds mournful enough. "It is useless, Daria. The pain is there again. Ualaoe me, quick!" Before Daria's practised fingers could undo the robe, her mistress had fainted. This was not the first time Daria had witnessed such an attack. The remedies were at hand, the most powerful restoratives known to science. But it was long before they availed to bring back consciousness; and when they did, it was not complete.

not clear. Daria had to bend over her to catch her meaning. "Make my excuses. I am tired and must sleep."

Outside the door, Madame de Vallinski asked Daria if the doctor had been summoned, and if it would not be better for her to remain.

"The doctor will soon be here," answered Daria. "But she has been like this before, and if she wakes and learns you did not go, it may excite her."

"True! So I will go, and return early." While Daria is watching beside her mistress, who lies as it were in a heavy sleep, Mlle. Dorzelli makes her triumphant entry into the state departments of one of the leaders of fashion. The grand salons have been lent for a charity fete, and the greatest names of the old and the new noblesse head the list of patronesses. A splendid combination of prestige and money!

One of the chief stalls is that of the Princess Vallinski, whose name was worth a fortune in itself for all such undertakings, she being one of the most dangerous as well as the most popular ladies of the select circle.

"Where is the princess?" was the question on every lip, as Mlle. Dorzelli took her place at the head of the bower or kiosk, above which was suspended the Vallinski's coat-of-arms.

There was a murmur of general sympathy mingled with exclamations of regret and incredulity as to the possibility of any of their set's being ill at such a crisis. "Impossible! Impossible! She cannot be sick to-day! Dukes and grand-dukes and foreign potentates, and only Dorzelli to receive them! No! that will never do," said some of the leaders. "What is to be done?" There is no substitute available!

The wit of Mlle. Dorzelli took in the state of affairs in a twinkling. She knew she was the object of conversation, and that she could not remain in solitary state, to represent the absent princess. The halls began to fill. It was not long before she singled out the very one on whom her wiles were fixed. She turned away to hide a smile, while a brilliant group approached the Vallinski kiosk.

"The princess is not here?" A pretty woman, very gorgeously attired, asked the question. Regrets followed, moon talk, much admiration of everything. The group was about to withdraw without making any purchases, when Mlle. Dorzelli made a little motion to a stout lady who had kept well in the rear of the brilliant advance guard.

"Madame de Vallinski, I believe?" The stout lady bowed stiffly, haughtily. She was the widow of the great Vallinski; and who was this booth saleslady who spoke to her without warrant and without introduction?

Mlle. Dorzelli, nothing daunted, meeting pride with pride, and holding in her own hand the power to patronize even the stiff-necked dame, whispered something that made her bearer start.

"Can it be possible?" "And if you would take her place here, it would secure the success of our section. Alone, I shall not be able to meet the demands."

If a great fortune had suddenly fallen into the lap of the widow of the great Vallinski, it would have been less prized in one way. To be submitted for the Princess Vallinski was like representing the Queen, to say the least. There was at once even more than cordiality between the two ladies. Once or twice during those busy and eventful hours Mlle. Dorzelli sent a messenger to bring her news of the princess. "There was no change, Madame was sleeping. The doctor was with her. Madame de Vallinski was not needed." So she gave herself up to the really hard work of the fete, and charity was well served that day by her efforts.

The following day Madame, the widow Vallinski, called upon her new friend. The intimacy ripened rapidly. The words of the kind princess were realized. "You will go, Appoline, and I will go, but Daria will remain." Soon only Daria remained. Daria remained, and kept the closely sealed house and its contents for the heir, who was far away in the Russian Soppes. She was virtually mistress of everything. None of the good intentions of the princess could be carried out. They were only intentions, to which neither seal nor signature had been set. Mlle. Dorzelli went away, rich with her savings and perquisites. Anis Clough went away poor; she had come, but with an unselfish joy in her heart. She had been able to brighten the last moments of the princess, or, at least, to take from the dying woman's heart the worst blackness, the worst sting. After leaving Blandine in the hands of Madame Blank she had sought the Abbe Laland. She found him feeble, broken, a spark of life only left to the good old priest. She told him of the morbid depression of the princess, of her remorse and anxiety. She begged him to go with her then and there and give what consolation he could to one who had been a good friend to her parents and to herself, and who could easily be brought to do more good under the right influence.

The Abbe was indeed too feeble to undertake even this work. But Nan's earnestness, her intense entreaties, were hard to resist. "It will be for the child, too," she added. "You will tell her, Abbe," she pleaded, "that they must let her keep the faith of her parents, your faith, Abbe. Unless they do this the child is lost, soul and body. This was going to the great charity fete this morning, but must against her will. She will not remain, only just show herself, while the great people are in line, and then come back. She is very far from well. I would not be surprised if she were called away suddenly, at any moment."

The call had come even then. They found Daria in tears. The doctor had come and gone. He gave no hope at all. Heart disease, and a stroke of apoplexy, was his verdict. Several times had Daria asked her mistress if she should not send for a priest, for Atyets Ivan, her confessor; but a slow rolling of the eyes seemed to protest against the question, and the faithful servant was yet hesitating in doubt on the subject, when Nan returned. She led her at once to the bedside of the sufferer. One look, and Nan rushed back to the reception room where she had left the Abbe. "Haste," she whispered, and almost by force she drew him with her, terror on her face, terror and anguish in her heart. The old man tottered on as fast as his feeble limbs permitted.

"Good mother, awake! awake! you are sleeping too long." Nan knew well enough that it was the last invading sleep that was settling there. "Awake, good mother! Here is the good Abbe, come to tell you of Sacha, and of Sacha's father!" The princess opened wide her eyes. They rested on the face of the priest. A light shone in them. The Abbe was in time, not indeed to tell anything of Sacha or of Sacha's father, but to ask a few vital questions, to take such responses as could be given to them—a look of anguish, a deep sigh, a moan, a wail that his words and his prayers changed from look and sound of mortal anguish, to something like hope and resignation. The Abbe was in time for that and no more. "The absolving of this soul was the last work of his apostolic ship. He blessed Nan, and would not let her follow him, but went his way homeward, leaving her there, disconsolate, yet thankful and submissive."

While all Paris is following the splendid obsequies of the Princess Vallinski, Blandine is travelling northward, not under the safe wing of the good Mme. Blank, but beside her "grandmother," the widow of "The Great Vallinski."

HOME AND CHILD

Does your horse "feel his oats"? What a difference between the grain-fed and the grass-fed horse! The first strong and full of ginger, the second flabby, weak and tired out before he begins. The feeding makes the difference. Children are not alike either. One is rosy, bright-eyed, full of life and laughter, another is pale, weak and dull. The feeding again is responsible. Sickly children need special feeding. They don't "feel their oats." Scott's Emulsion adds just the right richness to their diet. It is like grain to the horse. The child gets new appetite and strong digestion. Scott's Emulsion is more than food. It is a strong medicine. It rouses up dull children, puts new flesh on thin ones and red blood into pale ones. It makes children grow. Scott's Emulsion makes ordinary food do its duty.

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle. Send for free sample. SCOTT & BOWNE, TORONTO, CANADA. 50c and $1. all druggists.

KIDNEY DISEASE FOR TEN YEARS.

A Glen Miller Man's Terrible Trial.

He Found a Cure at Last in Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mr. P. M. Burk, who is a well-known resident of Glen Miller, Hastings Co., Ont., was afflicted with kidney trouble for ten years. So pleased is he at having found in Doan's Kidney Pills a cure for his ailments, which he had begun to think were incurable, that he wrote the following statement of his case so that others similarly afflicted may profit by his experience: "I have been afflicted with kidney trouble for about ten years and have tried several remedies but never received any real benefit until I started taking Doan's Kidney Pills. My back used to constantly ache and my urine was high colored and milky looking at times. Since I have finished the third box of Doan's Kidney Pills I am happy to state that I am not bothered with backache at all and my urine is clear as crystal. I feel confident that these pills are the best kidney specific in the country."

An English Author Wrote:

"No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves—November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh, and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

RAILWAY COLLISION.

A fatal wreck occurred on the Santa Fe Railroad near Flagstaff, Arizona, a switch station twenty miles east of Needles, Cal., last Wednesday. Seven trainmen were killed and three passengers and fourteen trainmen injured. Limited trains east and west bound crashed together while running full speed. The east-bound train was driven by two engines, while the west-bound train had but one locomotive. The three engines were crushed and blown to pieces by an explosion which followed the collision. Both trains were made up of vestibule cars of the heaviest kind, and while they stood the terrific shock well and protected the passengers to a great extent, several of the cars took fire at once and burned up the dining cars, one on each train, one Pullman and two composite cars were destroyed.

TRAGEDY ON ST. JOHN BARK.

The British Bark Birnam Wood, from Rio Janeiro, in charge of Mate Poe, arrived at Mobile, Ala., on Friday, and reports that on Nov. 18, the Captain, named Morris, killed the vessel's steward. The body was buried at sea. The captain kept his cabin, paced up and down. When informed that Sand Island light was sighted, Nov. 23, he gave the mate the order, picked up a sea lead, jumped overboard and was drowned. The vessel belongs to St. John, N. B.

WOMEN WILL TALK.

Can't Blame them for Telling each other about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

It's only natural that when a woman finds a remedy which cures her of nervousness and weakness, relieves her pains and aches, puts color in her cheek and vitality in her whole system she should be anxious to let her suffering sisters know of it. Mrs. Hannah Holmes, St. James Street, St. John, N. B., relates her experience with this remedy as follows: "For some years I have been troubled with fluttering of the heart and dizziness, accompanied by a smothering feeling which prevented me from resting. My appetite was poor and I was much run down and debilitated. Since I started using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, the smothering feeling has gone, my heart beat is now regular, the fluttering has disappeared, and I have been wonderfully built up through the tonic effect of the pills. I now feel stronger and better than for many years, and cannot say too much in praise of the remedy which restored my long lost health."
