CHAPTER XVIII.
THE TANGLED WEB OF TROUBLE.

Still possessed by the idea that something must be the matter with Addie or Len, I spring out of bed and follow in pursuit. The door, as I reach it, stands partly open, and, throwing it back, I look out into the passage beyond.

The further extremity is lost in gloom; but the moon, that is shining as bright as day, streams down through a long, narrow window in the middle, casting a patch of white light on the floor, through which, as I reach the door, the silent figure trails its dark draperies and disappears into the obscurity beyond.

"Len! Addie! oh, why don't you speak to me?" I cry thoroughly startled now for the first time. And then, dead silence alone answering me, I fly back to the bed like a frightened child, and lie there trembling like a leaf, my heart beating enough to suffocate me, while great drops of perspiration start out from every pore.

It was neither Addie nor Len, whoever it might have been I tell myself, with a sudden and overwhelming sense of horror and fright, as my strained eyes strive in vain to penetrate the mysterious shadows lurking in the distant corners of the room.

"And, oh! what if it should come back," I think with a shuddering glance at the partly open door, through which I can just distinguish that ghostly gleam of moonlight beyond; and with the thought my self-control deserts me completely.

A cry, wild, piercing, full of horror, escapes my lips, rising out on the unearthly stillness of the house, with a suddenness most startling even to myself.

Then comes the sound of opening doors, of hurrying steps, the red glimmer of a light, and I am bilaterally conscious that my brother and sister, their faces white as the night attire in which they are clad, are in the room, holding me, all bathed in perspiration as I am, in their arms, soothing and questioning me in a breath.

"Why, you poor, foolish child, it was all a dream—every bit of it," exclaims Len, with a look of relief, as I try to explain what has happened.

"You went to sleep, and dreamed the whole thing! It is quite impossible for any one to have got into your room, Lesley. No creature of flesh and blood could possibly have gained access to the house without our knowing it. And as to ghosts—you don't believe in that sort of thing, you know."

"I can't doubt the evidence of my own senses," I reply, with a desperate effort to steady my quivering nerves. "I tell you I was just as wide awake as I am now, and a good deal more calm. I was not in the least frightened, for I quite took it for granted at first that it was either you or Addie coming to call me for something. Whether spirit or human, I can't pretend to say; but when I woke up just

MRS. LEWIS OF BROOKLYN

Tells How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"For one year I was miserable from a displacement, which caused a general run-down condition with headaches and pains in my side. My sister induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I found it helped me very much and such a splendid tonic that I am recommending it to any woman who has similar troubles."—Mrs. Eliza G. Lewis, 30 Vernon Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Such conditions as Mrs. Lewis suffered from may be caused by a fall or a general weakened run-down condition of the system, and the most successful remedy to restore strength to muscles and tissue and bring about a normal healthy condition—has proved to be this famous root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have disturbing symptoms you do not understand write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years experience is at your service.

now—something woke me, you know, a sound, a touch, I don't know what a figure was standing there by the side of the bed, just where you are standing now, looking at me. I spoke to it, but, instead of answering, it glided away round the foot of the bed and out at that door without speaking."

"What sort of a figure was it?" Addie inquires. "Was it anything like the wandering maniac of Ivy Cottage? Surely that poor creature cannot have escaped from her attendant again, and got in here!"

"No!" I reply, with conviction, "it was not the madwoman! I can hardly describe its appearance, the light in the room was so very dim; but the outline was quite different."

"Nonsense, Lesley, you were fast asleep and dreaming," Len persists. "I am surprised to think you can be so foolish! You were frightened at a specter of your own creation."

"It was a hideous reality," I assert. "I was not dreaming. Why, I saw the figure pass through the moonlight out there, its long draperies sweeping the floor as plainly as I see you now! Even then I spoke to it again; but when it would not answer me, I was well frightened! I own it, and nothing shall induce me to spend the remainder of the night in this room alone," I conclude, trembling from head to foot as I speak.

"You shall come to mine, dear," Addie replies. "You silly child, how can you be so ridiculously nervous?"

I put on a wrapper, and a minute later Addie and I, escorted by Len, are treading the passage leading to the landing from which her own room opens, when an exclamation from Addie, and a startled "By Jove!" from Len causes me to look round; and there, at the other end of the long hall, its outline clearly defined in a flood of light filtering down through an upper window, stands the same figure that stood by my bed a moment ago.

"There it is! you see for yourselves!" I gasp, in an excited whisper.

per. "There, there! Ah! it is gone!" I add, as a cloud obscuring the moon, the light fades out, and with it the mysterious figure that seemed moving, with its slow, gliding movement, in the direction of the more distant and dimly lit part of the house.

CHAPTER XIX.
OVER THE TEACUPS.

BREAKFAST the following morning is a rather gloomy affair, though Len tries to laugh away my fears.

"Talk reason and common sense as long as you wish," I retort, "and offer as many suggestions about optical illusions and phenomenal appearances as you can possibly think of, but for all that I will never sleep alone again, however long we stay here—so there!"

This announcement I try to make as emphatic as I can, but Len only grins at me in a supercilious, masculine way, and Adelaide remains silent.

"I'm sorry, for my part, that we ever came to Deepdene," I add, with a sigh. "As to you, Len, I am surprised at you. I thought you were pling after the delights of London, and yet we never hear a word about going back. After all, there are worse things in life than faded carpets and stuffy little London parlors, and in spite of our hard work and poverty, we were very happy there altogether. If this sort of thing is going on much longer, I shall certainly wish myself safely back in London and Mrs. Battler's shabby-genteel lodgings."

"If this sort of thing is going on much longer I shall begin to think we must all be afflicted with premonitory symptoms of softening of the brain or incipient lunacy," replies Len evasively.

This is not the first time he has shown a decided disinclination to discuss the probable period of our departure from Deepdene; nor do I find Addie at all more eager on the point.

It is all very well for them to take things so contentedly. Does not Devonshire hold Gwendolen Clitheroe and Ernest Warden for Len and Addie? But with me it is altogether different, and what, with one thing and another I am beginning to feel that I have had enough of Deepdene and the quiet country.

"I hope you are not going to be foolish, Lesley," Leonard says, lazily sipping his coffee. "It would be altogether too ridiculous if we suffered ourselves to be scared out of our own house by a lot of old woman's tales, and a mysterious shadow or two, created, no doubt, by some peculiar effect of moonlight through a something or other. There will be plenty of time to think about going back to town when the summer is over."

"And when you have found out whether Miss Clitheroe intends to spend her winter in London or not?" I think, indignantly.

"You are desperately wise, and wonderfully practical, no doubt," I reply, at last, with a good deal of asperity. "But all the same, the mysterious figure that stood by the side of my bed last night, and then went stalking about the house to the dismay of every one in it, was no shadow cast by a vagrant moonbeam; and you and Addie both know it as well as I do!"

"But what else could it have been, Lesley?" Addie inquires. "I don't deny that it was a very singular phenomenon, but capable, of course, of a most matter-of-fact explanation."

"Which I will leave you to discover," I reply. "Somebody wiser than I has declared that 'there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in your philosophy.' Still, if you and Len are anxious to remain here, well and good, I can face the ghost of Deepdene as well as you can. Only I wish it to be distinctly understood that I will never sleep in that room again; however long we stay here!"

"You shall sleep with me for the future, Lesley," Addie returns, in her soothing way, her attention rather unequally divided between the subject under discussion and an unopened note she holds in her hand.

The Farmerettes.

Whether from city or country find themselves living under an unusual strain. The unusual work necessitates the use of different muscles and this development demands a good supply of pure, rich blood.

Because it goes directly to the formation of new blood, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of the greatest assistance in building up new cells and tissues and strengthening the muscles.

apite of the glorious weather of yesterday. A most depressing atmospheric change has taken place during the night. The sunny, summer days that have been gliding along one after another, with the music of birds, the hum of insects, and the fragrance of flowers, have come to an abrupt ending in a chill, depressing rain, that seems to belong to October rather than July.

Midsummer though it is, it is just one of those mornings on which one's inner longings seem to turn more naturally toward the cheery glow of a wood fire and a quiet day in the house than to anything in the shops of outdoor pursuits; and I am naturally a little surprised when Addie, whom I had supposed to be busy with her writing, comes downstairs an hour later, looking very pale and pretty in her close-fitting raincoat, and becoming little velvet toque, with the announcement that she is going to walk to Hanbury.

"I want to do a little shopping, and the rain won't hurt me. I have my umbrella, you know," she remarks, with a poor attempt at indifference, that makes my heart ache very painfully as I look at her.

Time was when not so much as a shadow of a secret existed between my sister and myself; but it is different now. Ernest Warden and his baleful influence have come between us, and the frank and careless confidence of the happy days in London is at an end.

"Your business must be very urgent, I should think, if you cannot put it off until better weather," I reply, more coldly than I have ever spoken to Addie in all my life before. "It is raining hard—is likely to rain for hours, I fancy—and it is a good walk into Hanbury."

"But I'm not afraid of the rain; I had always rather a ducklike love of puddles, you know," she laughs, doing violence to her natural love of candor by a poor little attempt at carelessness that is very far indeed from imposing upon me.

"Addie!" I exclaim, turning toward her in obedience to a sudden impulse which I cannot control; "don't go on this business to Hanbury, whatever it is; be persuaded by me for once, dear, and stay at home."

"Why, Lesley, what a tragic little appeal!" she returns, with a sudden display of interest in a refractory button on her gloves. "One would really think me a pocket of sugar or salt, the fuss you made about a drop or two of rain falling on me. Oh, my dear, don't worry me," she pleads, with a sudden change of manner. "I cannot listen to you—I must go!"

"Then good-by, and Heaven bless you, dear!" I return, and I kiss the pale, sweet lips that tremble so guiltily under my touch. "And, oh, Addie, may you never—never repent this morning's work!" I add, bursting into one of my old impulsive outbreaks.

"I don't want to force your confidence, since you see fit to withhold it from me; but I cannot be quite blind to all that is going on around me! I won't ask you where you are going to-day. I think I can guess. Remember, I do not question Ernest Warden's love for you—no one could do that, I think. But why should there be all this secrecy? Why does he not woo you openly, as you have a right to be wooed? Think, dear! is he worth the sacrifice you are making for him?"

Cot Fund!

So generous have the people of Newfoundland been in every direction touching the War that it must seem almost unnecessary for the Committee of the St. John Ambulance Association to publish any reminder as to the needs of the Cot Fund. Indeed, the way in which the Districts outside the Capital are at the present time already remembering the requirements of the Fund is gratifying to the Committee. Nevertheless it may be desirable to array a few brief facts for general information.

It would seem from the report of the Committee which was published in the Press on the 27th of June, 1918, that the activities of the Association and its helpers have been, for the last two years devoted to the establishment of what is now known as the "COT FUND."

The COT FUND was established for the purpose of discharging Newfoundland's liability for the care of our wounded soldiers. Newfoundland did not, like other Dominions, establish its own Hospital, but its Cot Fund is recognized by the Military Authorities in the United Kingdom; it endows beds in hospitals already existing.

The voluntary effort of the people of Newfoundland has distinguished itself by establishing 600 beds (2 Newfoundland Wards) at Etaples, near the French front.

288 beds in various hospitals in England. 32 beds in the Convalescent Hospital, Watford Hall.

It will be seen from the report referred to that the upkeep of these beds now requires an expenditure of more than fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) annually.

The following extract from a letter from Lord Ranfurly may be of general interest.

"I am sorry to say that the St. John Ambulance Brigade Hospital, Etaples, has been severely bombed on three consecutive nights and the Government have ordered the evacuation of the small part remaining whole."

"I am glad to say the Newfoundland Ward 'A' is not damaged, but 'K' is seriously damaged, though we may be able to erect it partially on whatever now site we reopen."

And he has since written to describe the extra expense thrown on them by the German attack on the Hospital.

Further, the recent fighting clearly makes more and more of a demand upon hospital accommodation.

The Committee confidently hopes that the work undertaken in the name of the people of Newfoundland and in a manner personally touching them will be carried on with undiminished vigor during the coming year and as long as the War lasts.

As Patron of the St. John Ambulance Association, Newfoundland Centre, I have pleasure in endorsing this appeal and stating that subscriptions may be sent to Mr. L. E. Emerson, Treasurer of the Cot Fund, St. John's, or to the nearest Stipendiary Magistrate.

FRENCH MAKE FURTHER PROGRESS.

PARIS, Aug. 17. The French made further progress to-day north and south of the Avre, having taken 1,000 prisoners and numerous machine guns since yesterday. According to the War Office statement to-night, they captured the village of Canny Sur Mats and in addition took enemy positions on a front of nearly two miles to a depth of nearly a mile in the region of Autoches in the Soissons sector.

IMPORTANT CAPTURE.

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 16. (Via London, Aug. 15, by J. F. Livesey, Canadian Press Correspondent.)—Following up their success to-day the Canadians pushed forward and captured the very strong position known as the "Z" wood on the Roze road so called because of its peculiar formation. This is situated on the hundred foot contour and commands the surrounding country. Around its base are numerous subterranean galleries capable of sheltering a battalion. It is in fact the key to the entire position, and of immense value to further operations by the Canadian forces.

VILLAGE OF FRAPPELLE TAKEN.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LORRAINE, Aug. 17.—The Americans early this morning, captured the village of Frapelle, and eradicated a considerable German salient in the Allied lines. Prisoners were taken by the Americans, and the Germans evidently suffered heavy casualties in killed and wounded. This sector has been regarded a quiet one, and today's action began merely as a raid into the enemy's positions. The raid was preceded by a straight bombardment for a few minutes, followed by a box barrage that penned the Germans off from escape. When the Americans went over the top to attack at 4.30 o'clock they succeeded in sweeping all the enemy resistance before them, and the raid became an organized attack. The Germans replied heavily, and they also shelled the entire neighborhood throughout the day. The enemy fire, which included a barrage, was ineffective. The Americans have occupied the former German trenches and consolidated them against counter attacks.

ON THE OISNE-AISNE FRONT.

PARIS, Aug. 18. The text of the statement reads: There was artillery activity which was somewhat spirited between the Oise and the Aisne and on the Avre front. During the night two German surprise attacks in the Champagne sector east of Ville Sur Tourbe and the other in the region of Maison de Champagne failed completely. The French took prisoners. The night was calm on the rest of the front.

ENEMY ATTACK REPULSED.

LONDON, Aug. 17. The text of the official statement issued at the war office to-day reads: Our troops improved their position slightly to the south of Bucquoy yesterday and drove off a hostile raiding party in this neighborhood. There was nothing of a special interest to report during the course of the night.

ENEMY ATTACKS BEATEN BACK.

PARIS, Aug. 17. In the region south of Roze, French troops have made further progress in the Lozes wood and have reached the outskirts of the wood on the east, says the official statement from the war office to-day. There was heavy artillery fighting west of Roze during the night. Northwest of Ribcourt the French have repulsed two strong German attacks. The enemy's efforts were directed against the Monplithe and Carnoy farms. A German raid northwest of Rheims failed.

AWARDED V.C. LONDON, Aug. 18. (Canadian Press despatch from Reuters, London).—The London Official Gazette records stories of extraordinary heroism and daring, in announcing the awards of Victoria Crosses to three non-com. officers and one private of the Australian 4th Light Trenching machine gun positions. The following is typical: Corp. Davey, during the work of consolidating positions assumed by his platoon at an advance hampered by machine gun fire, moved forward alone and faced the fire point blank. He advanced with his hand grenades, put half a crew out of action and returned for fresh supply of grenades. He attacked the gun crew, which in a moment had been reinforced. He killed the whole crew of eight, captured the gun, and with it repelled determined counter attack, during which he was wounded. Corp. Davey saved his platoon from annihilation and enabled it to hold the position, which was vitally important to the success of the operation.

Here and There.

CASE OF SCARLET FEVER.—A case of scarlet fever was reported from H. M. S. Briton yesterday. The patient, a seaman of 18, was removed to hospital last evening.

VINCENTIAN PRIEST PREACHES.—Rev. Fr. Conway, Montreal, is here and preached in the Cathedral last evening, his subject being "The Healing of the Lepers."

MORE POLICE NEEDED.—We have heard many complaints that there are so few policemen stationed in Barrington Park, as the force there now is altogether insufficient to keep law and order.

CONGRATULATIONS.—This is the birthday of Mr. W. B. Grivey, who was born Aug. 19, 1860. The Telegram extends congratulations, and wishes that Mr. Grivey will live many more years to add to his 58.

PERSONAL.—Mr. R. B. Rideout, of R. B. and F. Rideout left to-day for Twillingate on business in connection with his firm. Mr. Rideout takes passage on the schooner Ellen, Capt. Snow, and will be absent for about one week.

FISH ARRIVALS.—The following vessels from the Straits have arrived at Greenspond: Orange, L.D. 290 qts.; Queen Consort, 220; Mack Lake, 1,000 qts.; Mabel, 380; Commander, 200. At Westville, Harold B., 790; Lizzie E. B., 700.

CARGO LUMBER ARRIVES.—A cargo of lumber arrived here from Green Bay on Saturday, the seventh of this season. This lumber is being brought here by Mr. E. Boring, Contractor, and speaks well of his services as a house builder and as a hustler.

YESTERDAY'S FIRES.—At 8.29 last evening, an alarm from box 38 called the Central and Western Companies to Flower Hill where a slight fire had started in the house of Michael Hickey. It was caused through a defective chimney, and was so trivial as not to need the services of the firemen a few pails of water extinguishing the blaze. Another alarm at 10.15 was sent in to the Central and Western Companies. The fire this time being in the house of Mr. Doherty. It also was put out without the aid of the firemen who found everything safe and sound when they arrived.

Comparative Values in Footwear!

With the majority of people, price is the chief consideration in purchasing footwear. That's why there are so many uncomfortable feet in Newfoundland to-day and so many dissatisfied shoe purchasers.

For low-priced shoes cannot be good shoes—the high cost of good materials and skilled labour won't permit. Then why experiment—at the expense of your comfort—with low-priced shoes? Why not wear

When the Loan is Called.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"I don't know how I can ever thank you. If there's anything I can do for you—"

So I heard my neighbor saying, the other day, to a friend who had just done her a service, which, though not intrinsically very large, had loomed large to her because it came at a most opportune moment. To be specific, the neighbor was moving and the friend had invited her and her little girl to take their last three meals with her—thus saving the horrible confusion which inevitably results when one tries to get meals in a house and move out of it at the same time. I am sure those who have moved will understand that, and those who have not will perhaps think back to it some day.

Naturally I didn't wonder that my neighbour was grateful. And yet when I heard these words I could not help wondering if there were trouble ahead for her.

An Expensive Straw Hat.

Of all dangerous words, by tongue or pen, I think there are none more dangerous than those, "If there's ever anything I can do for you—"

I once knew a man who had a straw hat with another man and lost. Being a gentleman, he gave the winner his signed check with the amount left in the check for seven dollars. (That does not sound so alarming to-day, but that was in the days before one expected to pay the price of luxuries for all the necessities of life.)

When One's Exchequer is Empty.

The person who says: "If there is ever anything I can do—" is really handing out such a blank check. And while most people are not mean enough to fill it out for double the normal amount, it does seem as if they always selected the time when one's exchequer were most empty to cash the check.

I speak feelingly, myself, because I have just passed through such an experience. I owed a small debt of gratitude. My debtor called the loan by asking me to do a very difficult errand on a day when I had almost every moment crammed with engagements involving other people. To refuse seemed impossible, to accede equally so. I inconvenienced two other people in my attempts to comply, and I have not even the satisfaction of being sure I did the right thing.

The Fear of Living.

The older I grow, the more I shy away from incurring obligations. I am inclined to suffer much inconvenience rather than incur them. They are too dangerous, too uncertain. And yet I am not sure that this is the right attitude. Isn't it an un-pleasant thing to live among people and yet not be able to give and take small kindly services? Perhaps to dread them, is to fall into that greatest of all mistakes,—the fear of living."

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.
Gentlemen,—I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT on my vessel and in my family for years, and for the every-day ills and accidents of life I consider it has no equal. I would not start on a voyage without it, if it cost a dollar a bottle.

Another Bond Broken.

Among the chemical products which have been imported in considerable quantities from Germany for consumption here, tartar emetic has always held a place. It is used, pharmaceutically, as an expectorant in bronchial diseases, and commercially as the fixing agent for basic aniline dyes, for fastening the colors to textile fabrics, leathers, and the like.

Now tartar emetic is, chemically speaking, potassium tartrate of antimony; so for its manufacture potassium salts of some sort are required. That is why Germany has always supplied it; that is why we cannot supply ourselves, now that German trade is cut off. The extent to which we normally require this material is indicated by the import figures, which show, for 1913, 120,000 pounds; for 1914, 185,000 and for 1915, 255,000.

Granting that we cannot find the potassium for the manufacture of sufficient of this material along accepted lines, we have the alternatives of developing a substitute calling for no potassium at all, or one calling for notably less of the difficult element.

In other words, we may hope to displace potassium entirely or partly by other compounds in the making of a tartar emetic substitute.

A New York chemist has attacked the problem along these lines with success. As might be expected, he has replaced most of the potassium by sodium, giving a lacto-tartrate of sodium and calcium combined, with antimony. It then turns out that the percentage of available antimony is double what it is in tartar emetic, so that the new product is superior to the old, alike on theoretical grounds and in the practical trials of many cotton dyers and print works using it. So German tartar emetic will hardly be able to regain its lost position.—Scientific American.

DEFEAT AND VICTORY.

Defeat and victory are kin. And one must know them both to win.

He has not proved his worth at all who has not suffered from a fall. The victor's part man cannot choose; who seeks to win, must learn to lose.

Man in his failures looks the best. 'Tis there he meets life's real test. In every form of strife there lies a victor's treasure than the prize, And he who places victory first Has set his standard with the worst.

Who will not rather choose defeat Than stoop to conquer by deceit— Who counts an honest effort less Than victory-stained success— Has fallen in life's supremest test. Whatever medals deck his breast.

The brighter glories sometimes fall To him that men a failure call. The goal he misses is his pride; For when his soul was being tried He chose to lose the victor's fame Than win by any trick of shame.

Better it is to miss the goal Than stain the splendor of the soul; And when at last the race is done And known are all we've lost and won.

Our victories then may brighter glow Than all the victories we show.

Milady's Boudoir.

THE MOUTH THAT SMILES.

You can keep father time at bay a long time with a smiling mouth, and you can add necessary years with a drooping mouth.

The expression of whole face is old, unhappy and ugly. Then smile without showing the teeth. Don't you look years younger and far more attractive?

Some people possess this capacity naturally, but anyone can make an attempt to cultivate it.

The aging lines about your mouth are purely habit. You allow the muscles around your mouth to sag through indulging in discontent and ill temper.

Everyone can feel without consulting the mirror, when the mouth is drooping, and then is the time to correct the downward curve of the muscles. Curve the lips upward in a smile. Then damp and fix a piece of plaster cut the shape of a half moon, on either side of the mouth.

Leave them in this position for several hours, if worn during the day, or they can be applied at night and left on till morning whichever is most convenient.

Mustard Gas is Deadly

The most dangerous kind of poison gas used by the Germans is "mustard gas," or dichlorodithy sulphide. Mustard gas has a distinctive but not altogether unpleasant smell, more like garlic than mustard. It is a heavily oily liquid. It boils at 217 degrees centigrade, and thus has properties whereby it can be distributed in the form of a spray on the impact of a shell.

Mustard gas is a powerful producer of tears. After several hours the eyes begin to swell and blister, causing intense pain. The nose discharges freely and severe coughing and vomiting ensue.

Direct contact with the spray causes blistering of the skin, and the vapor penetrates through the clothing. Gas masks, of course, do not protect against this. The symptoms are similar to pneumonia—high fever, heavy breathing and often stupor.

The damage done by the mustard is a slow and insidious development. The breaking down of the affected tissues is slow, the height being reached from five to ten days after the burn is received. The painfulness of the lesion is also a marked characteristic. Healing is slow.

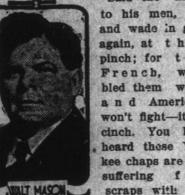

Mustard gas is employed in shells of all calibres up to 8 inches. In one recent attack, lasting 48 hours, the Germans used 7,000 tons of it. At Armentieres the gutters ran with the horrible reddish-brown liquid. It has killed men as far back as 12 miles from the front.

The American mask to fight mustard gas is of the box respirator type. The hood is of rubber. Breathing is through the mouth, pinners shutting the nostrils. The gas charged air enters through the bottom of the canisters, where by means of neutralizing chemicals it is purified. From the top of the canister the air is drawn into the lungs. There is a one-way shutter in the valve in the hood, through which the air comes out. This mask is designed to last 10 hours.

For artillerymen the U. S. War Department has made an oil suit which encloses the soldier bodily.—Acadian Recorder.

When you want something in a hurry for tea, go to ELLIS—Head Cheese, Ox Tongue, Botted Ham, Cooked Corned Beef, Bologna Sausage.

FOOLED AGAIN.

WILLY MASCO

Said the kaiser to his men, "Go and wade in gore again, at this pinch; for the French, we've bled them white, and Americans won't fight—it's a cinch. You have heard those Yankee chaps are just suffering for scraps with the Teut? I am Wilhelm, always right, and I say they will not fight, worth a hoot. There is but a handful here, and 'twill cost that handful dear, bet your boots; just a handful has been brought here to scrap with me and Gott, and my Teuts. They are money grubbing gent; they can't fight for eighteen cents, take my word; do not fear that bunch of jays, with their awkward backwoods ways—it's absurd. I will stand upon this hill, I your kaiser, Unser Bill, on its brow; and I'll watch your mighty ranks going through the yielding Yanks, like a plow. Here I take my kingly stand with my sceptre in my hand—go ahead! I will keep you in my view while the crimson fields you strew, with your dead." Then the kaiser from his hill saw his mighty legions drill to the fray; and he saw the Yankees come, to the stirring beat of drum, making hay. And he saw his soldiers chased, punished, rattled and disgraced, shot and spiked; oh, they struck their hardest trots, hitting but the higher spots, as they hiked. Who can tell the kaiser's woe as he watched the scene below, red and wet? But the Yankees, full of vim, didn't make a hit with him, we may bet.

Hit by Street Car.

As Florrie, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. Peter Higgins, was crossing Water Street, near Mr. W. H. Jackman's store, at 4.30 p.m. on Saturday, she was struck by the fender of street car No. 3 but fortunately escaped serious injury. The child who lives in a range of houses just off Water Street, was crossing the street to buy some candy at Egan's confectionary store when she was hit by the fender. It appears that the driver did not notice the child as he did not stop the car until it had reached a point nearly opposite the station. This shows a lack of carelessness on his part, and he should keep a stricter look out in future.

The Depth Bomb And the Patrol Boat.

The appearance of the depth bomb in U-boat warfare has enormously increased the offensive value of the patrol boat. Armed with this most efficient weapon, even the smaller converted craft, such as former steam yachts and motor boats, have become a terror to the U-boat when it is operating in the restricted waters forward which the ocean traffic converges in its approach to Allied ports and harbors. This is true even of such craft as have only a moderate speed. For when a submarine submerges anywhere within range of the comparatively small guns carried by motor boat patrol vessels, there is an excellent opportunity for one or more of these craft to reach the point at which the enemy has disappeared, and drop its bombs before the radius of destruction of their heavy explosive charge. Broadly speaking, the object of the patrol is to keep the submarine down, and the fact that even the smaller craft to say nothing of the swift and powerful destroyers, are now carrying the depth bomb, has exerted a powerful moral effect upon U-boat commanders. When a submarine has been seen to submerge, the patrol boat dashes for the spot and follows along in the direction taken by the enemy; and the accuracy with which the bomb is detonated within destructive range of the submarine is determined by the judgment and skill of the patrol boat captain.—Scientific American.

Von Buelow, Under the Wings of the German Eagle, Typical as of Ill-Omen to Mankind. From Brand Whitlock's story of German oppression in Belgium in Everybody's Magazine, we take the following account of a single incident that occurred in May, 1914, just before the war. Mr. Whitlock, with other diplomats, was the dinner guest of Mr. Von Buelow, the German minister to Belgium. "We were standing by a table in the corner of the room, and from among the objects d'art, the various trinkets, the signed photographs in silver frames, with which it was loaded, he drew forward a silver bowl that he used as a cendrier. As I dropped the ash of my cigar into it, I noticed that it was pierced on one side near the rim by a perfectly round hole, the jagged edges of which were thrust inward; plainly a bullet hole; doubtless it had a history. I asked him. "Yes, a bullet hole," he said. "In China it stood on my desk, and one day during the riots a bullet came through the window and went right through it." "Several of the guests pressed up to see; such a bowl with its jagged bullet hole and a history was an excellent subject for conversation; the German minister had to recount the circumstances several times. "I have never had a post," he said, "where there has not been trouble; in Turkey it was the revolution; in China it was the Boxers. I am a bird of ill-omen."

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—Mrs. A. J. Ryan, Convener Red Cross Work, Placentia, begs gratefully to acknowledge receipt of two dollars ($2.00) from Mrs. Carrie Fowler, late Placentia, now residing at Brooklyn, N. Y.
