PRESIDENT MCKINLEY SHOT

Cowardly Attempt by an Anarchist to take His Life. Condition Critical but Hope Entertained for His Recovery. Words of Sympathy.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 6.—President McKinley was shot and seriously wounded by a would-be assassin while holding a reception in the Temple of Music at the Pan-American this afternoon.

It was a few moments after 4 p. m., that the cowardly attack was made just after the daily organ recitals in the Temple of Music.

The President, though well guarded by United States secret service detectives, was fully exposed to the attack. He stood at the edge of the raised dais upon which stands the grand pipe organ at the east side of the structure. Throngs of people crowded in at the various entrances to see the chief executive and, if possible, clasp his hand.

The good natured mob every minute swelled and multiplied. The President was in a cheerful mood and was enjoying to the full the hearty evidences of good will which everywhere met his gaze. Upon his right stood John G. Milburn, of Buffalo, president of the Pan-American Exposition, chatting to him especially persons of note who approached. Upon the President's left stood Mr. Cortelyou. A medium-sized man of ordinary appearance and plainly dressed in black, approached as if to greet the President.

Both Secretary Cortelyou and President Milburn noticed that the man's hand was swathed in a bandage or handkerchief. He worked his way amid the stress of people up to the edge of the dais until he was within two feet of the President.

President McKinley smiled, bowed and extended his hand in that spirit of geniality the American people so well know, when suddenly the sharp crack of a revolver rang out loud and clear above the hum of voices, the shuffling of feet and waves of applause. The President stood stock still, a look of hesitancy, almost of bewilderment, on his face. Then he retreated a step, while a pallor began to steal over his features. The multitude, only partially aware that something serious had happened, paused in the silence of surprise, while necks were craned and all eyes turned as one toward the rostrum.

Then came a commotion. Three men threw themselves forward as with one impulse, and sprang towards the would-be assassin. Two of them were United States Secret Service men, whose duty it was to guard against just such a calamity. The third was a bystander, a negro. The trio hurled themselves upon the assailant. In a twinkling he was borne to the ground, his weapon wrenched from his grasp, and he was pinioned down before the vast multitude began to realize what had happened. A rumour arose, spread and swelled to pandemonium. For a moment the confusion was terrible.

After the first shock of the assassin's shot, the President retreated a step; then as the detectives leaped upon his assailant, he turned, walked steadily to a chair and seated himself, at the same time removing his hat and bowing his head in his hands. In an instant Secretary Cortelyou and President Milburn were at his side. His waistcoat was hurriedly opened, the President meanwhile admonishing those about him to remain calm, and telling them not to be alarmed.

"But you are wounded," cried his secretary, "let me examine."

"No, I think not," answered the President. "I am not badly hurt, I assure you."

Nevertheless his outer garments were hastily loosened and when a trickling stream of crimson was seen to wend its way down his breast, spreading its tell-tale stain over the lines, the worst fears were confirmed. A force of exposition guards were on the scene by this time and an effort was made to clear the building. By this time the crush was terrific. Spectators crowded down the stairways from the galleries, the crowd on the floor surged forward toward the rostrum, while despite the strenuous efforts of police and guards the throng without struggled madly to obtain admission.

The President's assailant in the meantime had been hustled to the rear of the building by exposition guards, where he was turned over to Superintendent Bull, of the Buffalo police department, who took him to No. 13 police station, and later to crowd in the Temple of Music had been dispersed sufficiently, the President was removed in the automobile ambulance and taken to the exposition hospital, where an examination was made. The best medical skill was summoned, and within a brief period several of Buffalo's best known practitioners were at the patient's side.

The President retained the full exercise of his faculties until placed on the operating table and subjected to an anesthetic. Upon the first examination it was ascertained that one bullet had taken effect in the right breast just below the nipple, causing a comparatively harmless wound.

The other took effect in the abdomen, four inches below the left nipple, four inches to the left of the navel, and about on a level with it.

Upon arrival at the exposition hospital the second bullet was probed for. The incision was hastily closed, and after a brief and hasty consultation it was decided to remove the patient to the home of President Milburn. Arriving there, all persons outside the medical attendants, nurses and the officials immediately connected were excluded, and the task of probing for the bullet which had lodged in the abdomen was begun by Dr. Parks.

When the news was telephoned to the home of President Milburn, where Mrs. McKinley was resting, immediate steps were taken to spare her the shock of a premature statement of the occurrence before the true condition of the President should be ascertained. Guards were stationed about the residence to approach the house. When it was decided to remove the President from the exposition hospital to the Milburn residence the news was broken to Mrs. McKinley. She bore the shock remarkably well. The news had in the meantime been spread broadcast by the newspapers. Like wildfire it spread from mouth to mouth. The crowd surged down toward police headquarters. They were met by a strong cordon of police, drawn across the pavement. In a few minutes the crowd swelled to thousands. Some one raised the cry "Lynch him." Like a flash the cry was taken up. The situation was becoming critical, when suddenly the big doors were flung open and a squad of reserve advanced with solid front drove the crowd back from the curb, then across the street and to the station. By this time there were probably 50,000 people assembled in the vicinity of Pearl, Seneca and Erie streets and the Terrace. The crowd did not move until the President was taken to the station. It was so great that it became necessary to rope off the entire street in front of police headquarters.

THE ASSASSIN.

The prisoner at first proved very communicative. He first gave his name as Fried Nieman, said his home was in Detroit, Mich., and that he had been in Buffalo about a week. He said he had been boarding at a place in Broadway. Later this place was located at John Nowak's saloon, a saloon law hotel, No. 1087 Broadway. Nowak said he knew very little about his guest. He came there, he declared, last Saturday, saying he had come to see the Pan-American and said his home was in Toledo. He had been alone at all times about Nowak's place and had no visitors. In his room was found a small travelling bag of cheap make. It contained an empty cartridge box and a few clothes.

THE ASSASSIN'S PUNISHMENT.

New York, Sept. 6.—President McKinley's recovery would mean that his would-be assassin could be confined in prison for ten years, the maximum penalty under the penal code of New York state.

BUFFALO, Sept. 8.—Interest in the President's condition across the Canadian border is so great that the associated press was asked to furnish a bulletin this morning to be read in the churches of Quebec and Montreal. Many requests of a similar character came direct to Secretary Cortelyou from different parts of the United States and all over the world in fact have fairly overwhelmed Secretary Cortelyou. One of the most touching was from Madam Laboy, wife of Maitre Laboy who defended Dreyfus in his famous trial.

BUFFALO, Sept. 8.—Mrs. McKinley continues to bear up bravely. Members of the cabinet are doing everything in their power to prevent the sensational undoubtedly craves notoriety and because his fellow anarchists throughout the country love it. They do not desire to place any details in the path of the authorities who are laboring to unravel the plot if any plot existed.

FROM LORD MINTO.

QUEBEC, Sept. 8.—His Excellency, Lord Minto, yesterday sent the following message to Mrs. McKinley: Am deeply grieved to hear of the dastardly attempt made upon the President's life. Please accept my sympathy. Rejoice to hear that the accounts today are satisfactory.

(Signed) MRS. KING EDWARDS'S MESSAGE. Milburn House, BUFFALO, Sept. 8, following is the message from King Edward:

KING, Sept. 7.—To the President of the United States, Buffalo, I am horrified beyond words at the dastardly attempt on your life. My best and warmest wishes are for your speedy recovery.

(Signed) EDWARD VII.

(Special to the Advocate.)

BUFFALO, Sept. 9.—The following Bulletin was issued by the President's physicians at 9.30 p. m.

The President's condition continues favorable. Pulse 112; temperature 101; respiration 37.

(Signed) P. M. Rixey, M. D. Mann, Roswell Park.

BUFFALO, Sept. 10.—5 p. m.—President continues to improve. Everything favorable for recovery.

OVER THE WIRES.

Canadian Riflemen Win.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The Canadian and American riflemen held a long session on the state rifle range at Sea Girt, N. J., today, in the contest for the American Centennial Palma championship, and the Canadians won by a margin of 28 points. The match was shot in three stages, 800, 900 and 1000 yards. In the first stage the Canadians led by a margin of 7 points. At the 900 yards each team made 519 points; at 1000 yards the Canadians made 471, the Americans 450; the final score being Canada 1922, America 1494. The next contest for the Palma trophy takes place in Canada in accordance with the rules giving the disposition of the prize.

OTTAWA, Sept. 8.—It is reported on fairly good authority that not more than half a dozen Canadian mayors are to be created C. M. G.'s by the Duke of Cornwall. Two or three provincial premiers and lieutenant-governors may be knighted. The names of Hons. Mulock and Mills are freely mentioned as likely to receive the honor K. C. M. G.

DELMONT, Ont., Sept. 8.—A young man named Newell working with a section gang this afternoon on the M. C. R. while fooling with a boy laced on the track and was instantly killed by a passing train.

ALDENHURST, Camp, N. S., Sept. 6.—Smallpox is Camp talk. No. 4 Company of the 86th Regiment after waiting until midnight were ordered to remain in camp. There is some talk now of placing the whole camp in quarantine for thirty days. The camp is greatly excited and further developments are awaited with anxiety.

MONTREAL, Sept. 7.—Mr. E. S. Russell says that he is having the rate of wages paid to district employees on the Intercolonial Railway tabulated in order to compare them with the wages paid by the other large railways for the purpose of bringing the rate of pay in all branches of the Intercolonial service up to standard.

FREDERICTON EXHIBITION.

The management of the New Brunswick Provincial Exhibition and Industrial Fair, which is to be held at Fredericton on the 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th inst., report that all indication point to one of the most successful shows ever held in the "Celestial City." The space reserved for industrial exhibits is practically all taken, and entries for the live stock and agricultural sections are coming in rapidly. Space in the carriage building has all been allotted, and arrangements are now being made to procure a tent to hold the overflow in this department. In Amusement Hall the chief attractions will be Prof. Leon Morris' celebrated ponies and a troupe of trained dogs. There will be hand concerts on the grounds also fireworks displays, torchlight processions, etc. On Wednesday and Thursday of exhibition week (18th and 19th) there will be horse races on the Fredericton Driving Park, when Mr. C. H. Nelson, of Waterville Me., will exhibit his celebrated trotting stallion Nelson, with a record of 2:09. Excursion rates will be put on by all transportation companies.

THE GIRL IN GRAY.

How She Surrendered to a Yankee From Illinois.

It was during an encampment of Confederate veterans that Howard Pearce first saw her. She wore a gray riding habit with a double row of small brass buttons leading up to two black stars on the collar. On her sunny locks a small gray slouch hat rested, tilted just the least bit over one eye. She rode well.

Pearce leaned so far from the window to catch a glimpse of the girl that he almost fell. It was a warm day toward the end of July, and he was not sorry that he had no business on hand that must be rushed.

Evidently the girl in gray had gone to the camp ground, and with Saunders. But Saunders was married happily, Pearce hoped. Anyhow he was glad that Saunders was married.

That evening he sat before Captain Saunders' tent, with the captain, his wife and Miss Moore—the girl in gray. To the east of the camp grounds the ridge rose in a gentle slope. To the southwest, seemingly towering just over them, was the mountain.

Pearce's heart beat faster as the thought came to him that 30 years before white tents had marked the foot of the ridge as they did that day. But then they had stretched for miles north and south.

"Captain," he said, turning to Saunders, "it is easier to get up the ridge than it was once. There are no men in blue here tonight."

No, the captain replied, but the sons of some of those men are there, pointing to the company street, in which blue clad figures lounged. Loyal? Without doubt.

The bands, which had united for evening concert, had just struck. The Star Spangled Banner. In the air was recognized, a far cry from the tented wood, that said the captain.

That said the girl in gray. "What?" Pearce asked.

"Will you play Dixie after awhile, then?"

"They will yell," she said, looking at him with a bright smile and nodding a confident "You'll see or hear."

And he did. When the national air was finished, there was a brief wait. Then the quick, stirring notes of Dixie started the woods into life with sharp echoes, which were drowned by one long, loud yell.

Pearce looked at the girl to receive an expected "I told you so." But she was not looking at him. Her cheeks were dark with color and her eyes, brightened by excitement, were fixed upon the young men tossing their caps high above the tents and shouting with all their sturdy lung power.

I wonder, he mused, if she hates the north as she loves the south.

When the tumult had ceased, he turned to Saunders.

Well, captain, he said, what do you say to that?

Of course, they love Dixie, said the captain earnestly. So do I. But there is no deeper meaning in that cheer than the love of a memory. They are loyal.

Miss Moore said that she must go back to town.

As it is late I will have to leave my horse with you, captain. I shall send for him tomorrow. I reckon I can walk to the train in this rig.

She looked down somewhat doubtfully at her riding skirt. Pearce said that he would be glad to go with her, and though it was not apparent in just what way he could overcome the disadvantage of the long dress, she seemed to be grateful for his escort.

Well, that was the beginning of it, and the end is not yet. An incident that occurred under a large tree in the old Confederate fort on the mountain may give a hint of the trend of events.

Pearce and Miss Moore were under the tree because it was the shelter nearest when rain suddenly began to fall, and it rained probably because a number of young folks of the city had come up on the mountain to spend a September day which promised in the morning to be pleasant.

Mr. Pearce was not in good humor. He and Miss Moore had separated themselves from the others. One topic of conversation had led to another, which in this instance was a declaration by Mr. Pearce that he was irretrievably in love with Miss Moore and that if she refused to make him happy he should be forever miserable. At a critical stage of this declaration a raindrop kissed the girl's cheek.

Oh, its going to rain! she cried.

The next instant the downpour began, and both rushed through a breach in the earthen wall of the fort to the tree, whose branches, to which the leaves yet clung, offered protection. There they stood in silence for several minutes, she busily brushing raindrops from her hat, which she had taken off, and he watching her moodily.

The silence became oppressive and she glanced at him curiously and apprehensively from under her lashes. He caught the glance and moving toward her, said:

Well?

Oh, don't! she exclaimed, starting away, her eyes still fixed upon a ribbon with which she was working.

Why, Katherine—er—Miss Moore—Oh, you must!

He walked to the edge of the circle protected by the leaves and looked out over the clay wall of the fort, down which tiny rivers ran. She, having dried her hat, placed it again on her head and began brushing her skirt, where, here and there, rain had spotted it. She glanced several times at his back, stubbornly turned toward her. He evinced no intention of moving nor of speaking again, and she became nervous. The situation was unbearable, and she exclaimed:

We must get back to the others!

We can't very well go through this rain, he said without turning round.

Another prolonged silence, broken only by the monotonous fall of the rain. Finally, when she had almost made up her mind to gather up her skirts and run to the hotel, a quarter of a mile away, he turned and came quickly toward her.

He put out his hand as though to take hers, but she quickly put her hands behind her and stepped back. He folded his arms and stood before her, looking earnestly into the eyes she raised to his almost appealingly.

Katherine, he said, I love you. Will you be my wife?

A beautiful color stole slowly from the ribbon at her throat up, until it tinted the edges of her smiling, pretty formed ears. His gaze held hers for a moment, then her eyelids fell and their long lashes swept her cheeks.

Mr. Pearce, she said hesitatingly, I am sorry but I—I can't.

Because you do not love me?

She looked up quickly into his face and then down again, but she did not reply.

Katherine, tell me, he said. Why is it that you cannot marry me?

Because—she was very busy dislodging a half buried stone with the toe of her shoe—because you are a Yankee!

Another swift glance met his steady look. Then she moved a little farther away and stood half turned from him. His first impulse was to laugh. But that passed almost as it came. The gray, brass buttoned riding habit, the flushed cheeks and bright eyes with which she had listened to Dixie, flashed across his mental vision. The Yankee might be an obstacle not to be laughed away.

But I am not a Yankee, he said with emphasis. I am from Illinois.

It seemed a long time to both that they stood in silence. Again she was the first to speak.

This is an awful rain, she said.

Yes, a very wet rain, he replied.

Oh, you are going to jest about it!

But I am not jesting, he answered, walking rapidly to where she stood. What I mean is that you will get wet. The water is beginning to drip from the leaves. Here, stripping off his coat, let me put this around you.

Oh, no, she said, stepping back.

But you must. The air is chill, and if you get wet you will catch cold.

I put you—you—

It won't hurt me a bit. Come!

He assumed a commanding tone, and that or something else accomplished his end, for she made no effort to free herself when he placed the coat about her shoulders. It took a long time to get it fixed just right, and his arm was still around her when he looked into her face and saw that she was looking up into his. Something in her eyes prompted him to draw her close to him and to say very tenderly:

Sweetheart, I come from the north, but I love a southern girl. Don't you think that she can love a northern man just a little—if he is not a yankee?

She studied the arrangement of his necktie closely, and then transferred her scrutiny to his watch chain. But evidently she was not thinking of either, for when she spoke she asked:

Illinois people aren't Yankees?

Certainly not! he replied, with conviction. They are a long way from Yankeeedom—more than 1,000 miles.

She examined the necktie again, looked into his eyes for a moment, then over his shoulder, off into the rain.

The Street Car to Topo chico.

Why Patricia Robbed the Driver

Four miles above Monterey toward Topo Chico, splintered from the dust and dead heat of the plain...

Patricia, his only child, 18, with slow black eyes, hair like a storm cloud and the oval, luminous face of a Botticelli Madonna...

Have you ever seen the queer little street car line with its tandem of small brown mules that runs, or rather creeps, between the Hotel Hidalgo, on the plaza in Monterey...

It was at this time in the evening that Patricia chose for a little jaunt on that queer little street car. With ancient Madre Anselma, her nurse when she was a romping child...

or bribe him to send the little mules galloping. The driver was a great, yellow-haired giant, with blue eyes and a laughing mouth. For Patricia would speed his queer little team till the car swayed like a boat on running billows...

Every summer evening till the chaparral lost its lustre and the willows in the river bed began to scatter crackling leaves across the sands Patricia and her chaperon stole away to this clandestine frolic on the street car till it became the event of the gay child's days...

One night as the blond American car driver was laughing and thrashing over the road with the laughing senorita at his elbow a horseman with his rifle presented loomed across the narrow road. The mules hesitated, stopped, backed up in their trace chains...

She gave them without a word, then her watch and ring, while the old woman, screaming like a harpy, clung to his rifle and cursed and prayed in incoherent Spanish. But the robber had no notion of harming them...

It was nearly dusk now, and from the stairway a hundred yards off the voice of Jose del Casa could be heard calling Patricia. She paused a moment as she heard it, then leaped to the ground and bent over the insensible driver...

Then old Del Casa and two of his rancheros came up. The wounded man was placed on a bench in his car. The mules were hitched to the other end and one of the rancheros drove them back to Monterey.

WHY BABIES CRY.

Some Useful Hints to Mothers on the Care of Little ones.

Babies are born with a perfect digestion, but in a few days they are unable to digest the milk of their mothers. This is because their digestive organs are not yet fully developed...

For the benefit of all other mothers, Mrs. Alex. Latafe, Copper Cliff, Ont., says: "I would advise all mothers to keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house at all times..."

Senorita, mio muchacha, what did you take from the Gringo? What was that you snatched from his neck? Tell me, pretty one, you did not rob him?

Patricia's smile came struggling through her tears. No, no, Mother Anselma, she murmured; not so bad as that, but bad enough, too. You won't scold me, will you mother?

Look, mother, and forgive me said Patricia as she opened the lock and displayed a miniature portrait of myself. I was afraid they might find it, and so—and so I robbed him of it.

Yes, mother, I'll give it back to him, and more, too, in return. I'll give him that and more—everything when he's well.

WHAT MAKES YOU COUGH.

Did you ever wonder what it is that makes you cough? In a general way it is understood to be an involuntary effort of nature to eject something from the throat...

It was an Irish trainmaster who issued the following important order:

Hereafter when two trains meet on the same track one must come to a full stop until the other passes.

THE LESSON FOR CANADA.

Canadians may be tempted at this time to indulge in reflections on their own immunity from such crimes as that committed on Friday at Buffalo. We may indeed have cause to be thankful that the doctrine of the anarchist has not as yet been proclaimed in this land, and that in this country the sanctity of human life has been maintained by law and public opinion. It is not known that the Dominion harbors even one professed anarchist who would commend the murder of men in authority. If there are such persons in this country, and if they should use such language in regard to the Buffalo crime as was openly used in Patterson after King Humbert was killed, they would bearsted and their career as encourages of crime would come to an end. But while we hope that Canada is free from these dangerous classes, it is well not to be boastful. The road is open and no country can know when its turn may come. At least, however, we can resolve that the promoters and open advocates of these crimes in other lands shall have no part or lot with us.

It is not many years since attempts to murder Old World rulers were attributed in the United States to the natural unrest of the downtrodden masses. American freedom was proscribed as the antidote for all these evils. For many years the American Republic has been the refuge of criminals guilty of the class of murders which the perpetrators called political offences. Even yet an advocate of murder in Ireland is frequently applauded in public in Chicago and other cities. There are organizations in the United States, which disfellowship their fellow members in this country, because the Canadian Irish societies do not condone acts of lawlessness and crimes of violence. Aiders of the Invincibles comrades and well wishers of the murder of Czar Alexander; associates and applauders of the man who slew King Humbert, have been too long tolerated in the United States. They have been considered good enough to find employment with respectable workmen in factories and other industries.—Sun.

OUR TRADE RELATION WITH UNITED STATES.

Free trade between Canada and the United States! Ought it to be substituted for the present protection wall 3000 miles long? Neither country is ready for it as yet. In both it would be fiercely assailed by certain interests. Farmers, lumbermen and other producers in the U. S. would cry out against Canadian competition. On the other hand, certain manufacturers in Canada would protest against being subjected to American competition. But our manufacturers here in Canada have cheaper labor and raw material than is the case with the other states. They have less to fear from American manufacturers than farmers over the line have to fear from Canada. My own judgment is that all such differences would adjust themselves within a couple of years, without material injury to any interest either side of the line. This provided Canada adopted the same tariff against other countries that the United States has, so that there might be no danger of the country being flooded with goods from other countries. It is a matter of course that we should not be flooded with goods from other countries. It is a matter of course that we should not be flooded with goods from other countries.

Canada's peerless natural resources. The United States would also be correspondingly benefited, though the benefit to the stars would not be so emphatic as to Canada. So true is this that opposition to such a policy would be tenfold more intense over the line than in Canada. Perhaps that was why the late Sir John McDonald and James G. Blair (when the latter was secretary of state) did not press this policy upon the public, though they both privately favored it. The whole matter is of absorbing interest, especially since the United States has rejected the several propositions looking toward reciprocity that have been advanced by the joint high commission.—Farm and Home.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The regular monthly meeting of the New-Town Council was held in the Council Chamber last Wednesday evening. There were present: Mayor Morrison, Alds. Hickson, Hennessy, Williamson and Stables. Very little business was before the council. A letter from Hon. L. J. Tweedie in reference to an address which is to be delivered to His Royal Highness the Duke of York was read and it was decided to appoint the Mayor a committee to look after the matter. A few bills were passed and the council adjourned.

BATHURST.

Mr. Phillip Rive, Mr. Rive and her daughter Miss Marie Estelle were in town this week enroute to Halifax where Miss Marie shall resume her studies at Mount St. Vincent.

Miss Annie DesBrisay left on Monday for Halifax where she is attending the Ladies' College.

Miss Gertie C. Mahan has gone to New York where she will visit friends for about six or eight weeks.

Misses Marion and Jean Doyle of Douglastown spent a few days here at the home of their uncle Mr. T. D. Adams.

Mrs. John Dalton of Newcastle and Master Fred Dalton visited Bathurst during the week.

Rev. S. J. Crumley of Blackville was in town on Thursday.

Mr. Herb Adams of New York is the guest of his uncle Mr. G. M. Burns, M. P. P.

Rev. Sister Theodora (nee Mullin) is visiting her home and friends in Bathurst this week.

Mrs. Jacob White, Miss Josie Burns, Miss Emma Burns, Miss Georgie Burns, Mr. Thos. A. Adams and Mr. Herb Adams drove to Grand Falls on Monday for a week's outing. The weather is most favorable for such expeditions and a very enjoyable time is expected.

Mrs. R. McDonald has returned to her home in Fort Hood.

Mrs. Chas. S. Melanson, Albert Melanson and Albert Baldwin spent several days last week at Grand Falls where they had an enjoyable outing and some splendid fishing.

Masters Clarence, Walter and Fred Vesiot, Heston and Aarlie Lanly, Joseph and Charles Tanguin, have gone to resume their studies at the S. H. Caraque. Mr. Albert Mot of Campbellton is in town this week professionally.

Mother

"My mother was troubled with consumption for many years. At last she was given up to die. Then she tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was speedily cured."
 D. P. Jolly, Avoca, N. Y.

No matter how hard your cough or how long you have had it, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best thing you can take. It's too risky to wait until you have consumption. If you are coughing today, get a bottle of Cherry Pectoral at once.

Three sizes: 25c, enough for an ordinary cold; 50c, just right for bronchitis, hoarseness, hard cold, etc.; $1, most economical for chronic cases and to keep on hand.
 J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.

In the rear of the office are the bedrooms and five cells. On this floor there are the Court Room and Judges Rooms in the front, while in the rear are seven other rooms to be occupied by one care taker. There are four entrances to the building, one in the front two to the right and one to the rear. The main entrance is reached by a flight of nine stone stairs each ten ft. long.

The contractors Messrs. S. Bishop and J. Howell are certainly worthy of the highest praise for the promptness and exactness with which they have carried out their contract. It is hard to understand how these gentlemen have been able to erect such a building for the comparatively small sum of $29,000. It is the opinion of many that it is worth double that amount to the county.—Events.

MARRIED.

Oil for the Children.
 Give them oil—cod-liver oil. It's curious to see the result. Give it to the peevish, fretful child, and he laughs. Give it to the pale, anæmic child, and his face becomes rosy and full of health. Take a flat-chested child, or a child that has stopped growing, give him the oil, and he will grow big and strong like the rest. This is not a new scheme. It has been done for years. Of course you must use the right oil. Scott's Emulsion is the one.

Scott's Emulsion neither fattens nor makes the hair grow. It is a pure cod-liver oil, and it is the only oil that is so pure and so good.

WHITNEYVILLE.

Friend greeted friend right joyfully on Wednesday evening, when upwards of forty persons gathered for the lawn party given by Misses Katie and Bessie Somers at their home here.

The night was all that could be desired being warm and bright. The lawn was prettily decorated with flowers, vines, Chinese lanterns, etc., and afforded plenty of room for the various games which the merry company indulged in. A supper, which would tempt the most fastidious was served about 10 o'clock. This was followed by music, songs, etc. The party broke up at midnight, loud in praise of the delightful time spent and the hospitality shown.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Samuel Sherard was quite seriously injured on Saturday. He was hauling a load of oats to Newcastle, when on the hill by Strathadam bridge the wagon gave a lurch throwing the load partly off. He was thrown with it striking the bridge, and injuring his side quite badly. Dr. Desmond is in attendance and reports two ribs broken and others injuries sustained. His condition is now somewhat easier than at first, but he is still in great pain. The people of this place will not have the excitement of an "election" this time, as Messrs. Ryan and McColm have been elected by acclamation.

Miss Fannie Hubbard of Cassils spent a few days last week visiting at Mr. Charles Somers.

Mrs. T. Howe and daughter Margaret have returned to their home in Lawrence, Mass., after a visit of nearly seven weeks with relatives and friends here.

There was an excursion on the Rustler to Loggville on Saturday. A very pleasant time was reported by those who attended from here.

Mrs. Peter Forsythe gave a knitting and hooking party last week, at which a pleasant, as well as profitable time was spent.

Miss Blanch McLean left on Thursday to resume her work in Boston. She was accompanied by her sister Lillian who is going to visit friends in that city.

Mrs. Jed Blackmore of Cassils, spent a few days of last week visiting her daughter, Mrs. Gregory Dunnett. She was accompanied by Mrs. David Blackmore of Lyttleton, who also visited friends here. We are glad to report Mr. R. P. Whitney as recovering from his illness. He is able to be out again.

REDBANK.

The picnic which was held at Redbank, Sept. 2nd, was a grand success, those who were there voted it the best time of the season.

Miss Jessie Gillis who has been in Boston for the past two years, is visiting her home at this place.

There was a grand ball held at Mr. J. Hylands for the purpose of building a new house. All who were there spent a very enjoyable time with the exception of Mr. Joe Gillis who had the misfortune of getting his leg broken, but we are pleased to say he is improving.

Miss Ella Johnson who was visiting friends at Seville has returned home. Her many friends are pleased to see her back once more.

LOWER LUDLOW.

The people think there is going to be another election soon, for Hon. Messrs. Tweedie and Burchard have two men laying out the road around the big hill near David Stewart's. It was a layed out by Mr. Russell and Mr. Attridge of Doaktown. This is the third time the road has been layed out. If Mr. Tweedie don't get the road built around the hill before the election it will be a poor canvas for him and his party.

Mrs. Howard Holmes and Miss Ethel Eelwee of this place was visiting friends at Bloomfield ridge on Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. John Stewart of this place has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Russell at Doaktown and other friends.

A few pairs of mens strong Working Boots only $1.00 at SPORTFIELD.

Later day passed very quietly, some of the people attending the base-ball game. Mrs. Black and family of Moncton, who has been visiting her mother Mrs. T. Jeffrey returned to her home last week. T. Jeffrey Jr., who has been drilling for water, has got a fine flow and put in a fine pump. He has to be congratulated on his success as water is very scarce in this locality.

Mr. P. Connel is putting up a fine new barn as his stock is increasing. Mr. Geo. Murray has also put up a very nice kitchen which adds greatly to the appearance of his house. It is the work of Forsythe Bros.

Mr. Savoy of Nelson is building a new house on Nivest and is finishing the outside with the intention of occupying it this fall.

The potato crop is very fair although not so good as last fall. That owned by Wm. Shepherd taking the lead.

Mr. Jerome Roy the popular boss of the local shod, has quite finished harvesting his large fields of oats on the station road. Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. A. McKenzie, about first harvest.

Mr. W. J. Craig is still busy at his trade plastering, mason work, etc. Mr. Jas Dalton, although not exactly a resident of Sportfield, but a near neighbour, has greatly improved his house with new shingles, a nice new coat of white paint and new windows.

A large number of the residents attended the railroad picnic on Saturday. They returned at night tired, but thoroughly pleased with their days outing.

Mrs. Jas. Jellison of the Junction House Chatham jet. was in town last week.

REXTON.

Miss Nellie Clark left on Monday to prosecute her studies at Mount Allison Ladies College, Sackville.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis, G. Sypher of Newcastle, Grand Lake, N. B. are visiting at Sunnie Brae, Rexton.

H. M. Ferguson Esq., is recovering slowly from a severe attack of Typhoid fever. James Lewis is very low with consumption. His father is also quite ill.

SINGLES AND JESTS.

The One Thought. We have most of us heard of that sweet wedded bliss. Of two hearts that are beating as one. And two souls with a single thought sealed with a kiss.

But to those who have been by experience taught this effect is not hard to explain. For in most of the cases that one "single" thought is—"I wish I was single again."

The Fee Was Temping. A very young couple in southwest Georgia called on a colored minister and offered him a string of fish to marry them. Said the minister: "If mighty pleasee dat both or you is too young fer marry, but den—you looks a heap older dan what you is, en, fudermore, ef dey is one t'ing I wants partickler fer dinner dis day it is fish. So jine han's!"

But Yet a Woman. When Mariel plays her violin. With some adjust' 'neath her chin, Such saintly mood dwells in her eyes I fear her fashioned for the skies.

Her First Concert. A country servant was given a ticket by her mistress for a local concert. She arrived home rather late and was questioned by her mistress on the matter. "I came away before 'twas over," she replied, "and they were hurrying it on, 'cause they were singing two at a time when I left."—T.H.H.

Repentance. He turned and moed at her, and she responded it faintly. In hopes to make amends, said he. (With weak arm out at gallantry, "Oh! I had to add to my family tree. A branch so fresh and fair to see." She answered, "I don't care to be inscribed on a cedar tree!")

Revenge. Mr. Fijit—I thought you said our new neighbors would not let their children play with our Tommie. I see him with them now.

His Bright Prospects. Dey talks about de money, But I doesn't want it, honey, Fer soon I vent be coming de search; Fer de moonlight will be shinin' What I'm plain, de a plain Fer de moon in de middle er de patch.

They'll Fix It. Mrs. de Style—Of course this new furniture you've bought is quite pretty, but it's so distressingly new. It lacks the fashionable marks of age and antiquity.

Mr. de Style—Never mind. It'll be all right after the children have operated on it for a couple of weeks.

The Bad Habit of Hoarding Trash. A woman says she has a goodly store of trash in her house. She says she has a goodly store of trash in her house. She says she has a goodly store of trash in her house.

A Bad Breath

A bad breath means a bad stomach, a bad digestion, a bad liver. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. They cure constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache. 25c. All druggists.

Children Cry for CASTORIA. Allan Russell. THE BOURNE HOUSE

UNDER TWO FLAGS By "OUIDA"

Cecil put out his hand. He expected to receive a heavy blow from his commander's saber...

For the moment Cecil had but one impulse—to dash the pieces in the giver's face. In time to restrain the impulse he caught sight of the wild, eager hatred gleaming in the eyes of Rake, of Petit Picpon, or a score of others who loved him and cursed their colonel and would at one signal from him have sheathed their swords in the mighty frame of the marquis...

Rather unconsciously than by premeditation his steps turned through the streets that led to his old familiar haunt, the As du Pique, and, dropping down on a bench under the awning, he asked for a draft of water. It was brought him at once, the hostess, a quick, brown, little woman from Paris, whom the lovers of Eugene Sue called Egolette, adding of her own accord a lump of ice and a slice or two of lemon, for which she graciously refused payment, though generosity was by no means her cardinal virtue...

There was absolutely no hope possible in his future. The uttermost that could ever come to him would be a grade something higher in the army that now enrolled him—the gift of the cross or a post in the bureau. Algeria warfare was not like the campaign of the armies of Italy or the Rhine, and there was no Napoleon here to discern with unerring omniscience a leader's genius in the uniform of a common trooper. The heavy folds of a Bedouin's haik, brushing the papers off the bench, broke the thread of his musings. As he stooped for them, he saw that one was an English journal some weeks old. His own name caught his eye—the name turned so utterly, whose utterance in the sheik's tent had struck him like a dagger's thrust.

THE ROYALTY'S SUCCESSION. We regret to learn that the Right Hon. Viscount Braslin, who so lately succeeded to the family title on the father's death, has expired at Mentone, whether his health had induced him to go some months previous. The late lord was unmarried. His next brother, as it will be remembered, many years ago killed on a southern raid. The title, therefore, now falls to the third and only remaining son, the Hon. Beresford Cecil, who, having lately inherited considerable property from a distant relative, will, we believe, revive all the old glories of this peerage, which have, from a variety of causes, lost somewhat of their ancient brilliancy.

Cecil sat quite still, as he had sat looking down on the record of his father's death when Cigarette had rallied him with her gay challenge among the Moroccan ruins. His face flushed hotly under the warm golden hue of the desert bronze, then lost all color as suddenly, till it was as pale as any of the ivory he carved. He

He told on the table the split a common soldier in the Algerian cavalry, knew that by every law of birth-right he was now a peer of England. The vagabond throng—Morish, French, negro, Colan—passed as they pushed their way over the uneven road and stared at him vacantly where he stood. There was something in his attitude, in his look, which swept over them, seeing some of them, in the eager lifting of his head, in the excited fire in his eyes that arrested all, from the dullest mulatto plodding on with his string of patient beads to the most valiant French girl laughing on her way. He did not note them, hear them, think of them. He remembered nothing save that he and his pistol were the rightful lord of Royalieu. Holding the journal clenched close in his hand, he went swiftly through the masses of the people out and away, he little noted what he had forced his road beyond the gates, beyond the town, beyond all reach of its dust and its babble and its discord, and was alone in the farther outskirts.

Reaching the heights, he stood still involuntarily and looked down once more on the words that told him of his birthright. He was Viscount Royalieu as surely as any of his fathers had been so before him and was dead forever in the world's belief. He must live and grow old and perish by shot or steel, by sickness or by age, with his name and his rights buried and his years passed as a private soldier of France. There was no alternative, no all the old freedom and peace and luxury and pleasure of the life he had led so long allotted him with a terrible temptation. The honors of the rank that he should now have filled were not what he remembered. What he longed for with an agonized desire was to stand once more stammering among equals, to reach once more the liberty of unchallenged, unfettered life, to return once more to those who held him but as a dishonored man, as one whose violent death had well matched from the shame of a criminal career.

"But who would believe me now?" he thought. "Besides, this makes no difference. If three words spoken would reinstate me, I could not speak them at that cost. The beginning perhaps was folly, but for sheer justice's sake I will do it. Let me enjoy it. God knows I do not grudge him it."

The distant mellow ringing notes of a trumpet call floated to his ear from the town at his feet. It was sounding the return to camp. Old instinct, long habit, made him start and shake his harness together and listen. The rank and file were winding cheerily from afar off recalled him to the truth, summoned him sharply back from vain regrets to the facts of daily life. It awoke him as it wakes a sleeping charger. It roused him as it rouses a wounded trooper.

He stood hearkening to the familiar music until it had died away, spiritless, yet still lingering; full of fire, yet falling softly down the wind. He listened till the last echo ceased. Then he tore the paper that he held in his hand and let it float away, drifting down the yellow current of the reedy river channel.

"So best after all perhaps," he said half aloud in the solitude of the gulled and abandoned mosque. "He cannot well come to shipwreck with such a fair wind and such a smooth sea. And I—I am just as well as a soldier. I can make a good campaigner. I should never make anything else."

And he let his sword drop back again into the scabbard and quarreled no more with fate. His hand touched the 30 goldpieces in his sash.

He started at the recollection of the forgotten insult came back on him. He stood awhile in thought; then he took his resolve.

A half hour of quick movement brought him before the entrance gates of the Villa Aïoussa. A native of Sudan in a rich dress who had the office of porter asked him politely his errand.

"Ask if Corporal Victor of the chasseur can be permitted a moment's interview with your mistress. I come by permission," he added as the native hesitated between his fear of a soldier and his sense of the appalling unfitness of a corporal seeking audience of a Spanish princess. The message was passed about among several of the household. At last a servant of higher authority appeared.

"Madame permitted Corporal Victor to be taken to her presence. Would he follow?" He uncovered his head and entered, passing through several passages and chambers richly hung and furnished. She moved forward as her servant announced him. She saw him pause there like one spellbound and thought it the besitation of one who felt sensitively his own low grade in life. She came toward him with the silent sweeping grace that gave her the carriage of an empress. Her voice fell on his ear with the accent of a woman immeasurably proud, but too proud not to bend softly and graciously to those who were so far beneath her that without such aid from her they could never have addressed or have approached her.

"I do not comprehend you." She spoke very coldly. She reported proudly her concession in admitting a "passion d'Afrique" to her presence.

"Possibly not. Mine was the folly to dream that you would ever do so. I should not have intruded on you now but for this reason: The humiliation you were pleased to pass on me I could neither refuse nor resent to the doer of it. Had I done so men who are only too loyal to me would have resented it with me and been thrustled or been shot as pay-revenged. I was compelled to accept it and to wait until I could return your gift to you. I have no right to complain that you pained me with it since one who occupies my position ought, I presume, to consider remembrance, even by an outrage, an honor done to him by the Princess Corona."

As he said the last words he laid on the table that stood near him the gold of Chateauroux's insult. She had listened with a bewildered wonder, held in check by her later impulse of offense that a man in this grade should venture thus to address, thus to arraign her. As he laid the goldpieces down upon her table an idea of the truth came to her.

"I know nothing of what you complain of. I sent you no money. What is it you would imply?" she asked him, looking up from where she leaned back in the low couch into whose depth she had sunk as he had spoken.

"You did not send me these—not as payment for the chess services?" "Assuredly not. After what you said the other day I should have scarcely been so ill bred and so heedless of inflicting pain. Who used my name thus?"

His face lightened with a pleasure and a relief that changed it wonderfully—that brighter look of gladness that had been a stranger to it for so many years.

"You give me infinite happiness, madame. You little dream how bitter such slights are when one has lost the power to do anything but resent them. Let me enjoy it. God knows I do not grudge him it."

"The serenity of a courtly woman of the world was unbroken, but her blue and brilliant eyes darkened and gleamed beneath the sweep of their lids.

"Perhaps I can scarcely say so much. He gave them from you. The words he spoke were these."

He told her then as they had been uttered, adding no more. She saw the construction they had been intended to bear and that which they had borne naturally to his ear. She listened earnestly to the end. Then she turned to him with the exquisite softness of grace which, when she was moved to it, contrasted so vividly with the haughty and almost chill language of her habitual manner.

"Believe me, I regret deeply that this most coarse indignity. I grieve sincerely that through myself in any way it should have been brought upon you. As for the perpetrator of it, Colonel Chateauroux will be received here no more in my name. I am sure that he learns not only how I resent this unpardonable use of my name, but how I esteem his cruel outrage to a defender who shall be my care that he should never be brought to my door."

"A poor one, I fear. Your colonel is your enemy, then? And wherefore?"

"He passed a moment. "Why, at first I scarcely know. We are antagonistic, I suppose."

"But is it usual for officers of his high grade to show such malice to their soldiers?"

"Most unusual. In this service especially so, although officers rising from the ranks themselves are more apt to contract prejudices and ill feeling against as they are to feel favoritism to their men than when they enter the regiment in a superior grade at once. Since I am here, madame, let me thank you in the army's name, for your infinite goodness in acting so munificently on my slight hint. Your generosity made many happy hearts in the hospital."

"Generosity! Oh, do not call it by any such name! What did it cost me? We are terribly selfish here. I am indebted to you that for once you made me remember those who suffered."

She spoke with a certain impulse of candor and of self accusation that broke with great sweetness the somewhat careless coldness of her general manner. It was like a gleam of light that showed all the depth and that broke with truth in light beneath that imperious soldier's habit. It broke further the ice of distance that severed the grande dame from the cavalry soldier. He wholly forgot their respective stations. He only remembered that for the first time for so many years he had the charm of converse with a woman of high breeding, of inexpressible beauty and of a certain noble and intelligent

He wholly forgot how time passed, and she did not seek to remind him. Indeed she but little noted it herself. At last the conversation turned back to his chief.

"You seem to be aware of some motive for your commandant's dislike?" she asked him. "Tell me to what you attribute it?"

"He obeyed and told to her the story of the emir and of the Pearl of the Desert, and Venetia Corona listened, as she had listened to him throughout, with an interest that she rarely vouchsafed to the recitals and the witticisms of her own circle.

"This Venetia is your chief?" she said as the tale closed. "His enemy is your honor. I can well credit that he will never pardon your having stood between him and his chief. But I have not heard one thing. What argument did you use to obtain her release?"

"No one has ever heard it," he answered her, while his voice sank low. "I will trust you with it. It will not pass elsewhere. I told him enough of my own past life to show him that I knew what his had been, and that I knew, moreover, though they were dead to me now, men in that greater world of Europe who would believe my statement if I wrote them this outrage on the emir and would avow it for the reputation of the emir's wife I swore to him that I would so write, though he had me shot on the morrow, and he knew I should keep my word."

She was silent some moments, looking on him with a musing gaze in which some pity and more honor for him were blended.

"You told him your past. Will you confess it to me?" "I cannot, madame."

"Because I am dead, because in your presence it becomes more bitter to me to remember that I ever lived?" "You speak strangely. Cannot your life have a resurrection?"

"Never, madame. For a brief hour you have given it one—in dreams. It will have no other. I am now so I desire to live and die."

"You voluntarily condemn yourself to this?" "Assuredly, unless by your wish it be broken. Yet—await my brother's trial here. He is a soldier himself. I shall hope that he will persuade you to think differently of your future. At any rate both his and my own independence will always be exacted for you, if you will avail yourself of it."

"You do much honor, madame. All I will ever ask of you is to return these coins to my colonel and to forget that you were ever in my presence. I regard for one merciful half hour the assurance on which alone a trooper can present himself here."

He swept the ground with his cap as though it were the plumed hat of a marshal and backed slowly from her presence, as he had many a time long before backed out of a banquet room.

As he went his eyes caught the armies of the ivory chessmen. They stood under the glass and had not been broken for his lap.

Miladi, left alone here in her luxurious morning room, sat awhile lost in thought. He attracted her; he interested her; he aroused her sympathy and her love as the men of her own world had failed to do—aroused them despite the pride which made her impatient of lending so much attention to any man.

"I am mad," she murmured. "I discovered the ring of true gold in his words and the carriage of pure breeding more than it pleased her that he should. A man so utterly beneath her doubtless brought into the grade to which he had fallen by every kind of error, of improvidence, of folly, of improbability more than folly. She laughed a little at herself as she stretched out her hand for a new volume of French poems dedicated to her by their accomplished writer, who was a Parisian diplomatist."

"One would imagine I was just out of a convent and weaving a marvelous romance from a mystery because the first soldier I notice in Algeria has a gentleman's voice and is treated by his officers," she thought, with a smile. "Such a man as that buried in the ranks of this brutalized army?" she mused. "What fatal chance could bring him here? Misfortune, not misconduct, surely. I wonder if Lyon could learn? He shall try."

"Your chasseur has the air of a prince, my love," said a voice behind her. "Equivocal compliment! A much better air than most princes," said Mme. Corona, glancing up, with a slight shrug of her shoulders, as her guest and traveling companion, the Marquis de Renardiere, entered.

"Indeed! I saw him as he passed out, and he saluted me as if he had been a marshal. Why did he come?" "Venetia Corona pointed to the napoleons and told the story rather listlessly and briefly.

CHAPTER XI. MEANWHILE the subject of their first discourse returned to the chamber. It was empty when he returned. The men were scattered over the town in one of their scant pauses of liberty. There was only the dog of the regiment, Flick-Flack, a snow white poodle, asleep in the heat on a sack, who, without waking, moved his tail in a sign of gratification as Cecil stroked him and sat down near, basking himself to the work he had in hand.

It was a stone for the grave of Leon Ramon. There was no other to remember the dead chasseur, no other besides himself save an old woman sitting spinning at her wheel under the low sloping shingle roof of a cottage by the western Biscayan sea.

Cecil's hand pressed the graver along the letters, but his thoughts wandered far from the place where he was. Alone there in the great sun scorched barrack room the news that he had read, the presence he had quitted, seemed like a dream. He had never known fully all that he had lost until he had stood before the beauty of this woman, in whose deep, imperial eyes the light of other years seemed to lie, the memories of other worlds seemed to slumber. Those blue, proud, fathomless eyes! Why had he looked on him? She had come to pain, to weaken, to disturb, to influence him, to shadow his peace, to wring his pride, to unman his resolve, as women do mostly with men. Was life not hard enough here already that she must make it more bitter yet to bear?

"If I had my heritage," he thought, and the chisel fell from his hands as he looked down the length of the barrack room, with the blue glare of the African sky through the casement.

Then he smiled at his own folly, in dreaming idly thus of things that might have been.

"I will see her no more," he said to himself. "If I do not take care, I shall end by thinking myself a martyr, the last refuge and consolation of emaciated vanity of impotent egotism."

At that instant Petit Picpon's keen, pale, Parisian face peered through the door; his great black eyes, that at times had so pathetic a melancholy,

"There is great news. Fighting has begun," and at others such a monkeyish mirth and malice, were sparkling excitedly and gleefully.

A NOISY BURGLAR.

He Disturbs the man of the House and Receives Severe Treatment.

The noise made by the burglar in the Ferguson pantry, slight as it was, disturbed the light sleeper in the bedroom not far away, and the midnight marauder was surprised a moment later to find himself covered with a big revolver in the hands of determined looking man in a long white robe.

I hadn't done nothing but eat a few cold victuals, mister, stammered the buglar.

I see, sternly replied George Ferguson, you have been eating the remains of a cake my wife cooked for dinner last night. Do you know what I'm going to do with you?

Turn me over to the police, I s'pose, gasped the helpless thief.

Worse than that, said Ferguson, with a ferocious grin. I'm going to make you eat a quart of health food. It's a new kind my wife heard of and fixed up for us yesterday, and it's pretty dry eating, but you'll eat every particle of it or I'll bore six holes through you. There it is in that big bowl. Turn yourself loose on it.

With grim determination the indignant householder stood over him till it was finished, after which he picked up the luckless scoundrel, who had fallen exhausted to the floor, and threw him out of the open pantry window.

It may kill him, soliloquized Mr. Ferguson somewhat remorsefully as he crawled back into bed without disturbing the rest of the family, but a man who breaks into another man's house takes his life in his hand anyway.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

CURES NEURALGIA, BANISHES NERVOUS DEBILITY AND BUILDS UP THE WHOLE SYSTEM.

MRS. M. YOUNG, Jarvis Street, Toronto, Says:

"I Thank God and Paine's Celery Compound for my Renewed Health and Strength."

When Paine's Celery Compound is used by sick and broken-down women, a solid foundation of health is quickly laid. The bowels are kept regular, poisons in the blood are banished, neuralgia and rheumatism are expelled from the system, the appetite becomes natural, and sleep and sweet rest prove that perfect health has taken the place of sickness and disease. We urge every wife and mother to test the virtues of that medicine that "makes sick people well."

Mrs. M. Young, desiring to benefit suffering women, writes thus:

"I was a terrible sufferer from neuralgia and nervous debility, and was extremely weak and run-down. While in this condition I tried almost all kinds of medicines without any improvement. My sister finally persuaded me to try your Paine's Celery Compound. The first bottle helped me wonderfully, and, after having used six bottles my health is restored and I am now a new woman. I am pleased to say that Paine's Celery Compound is all that you represent it to be—a banisher of disease and a restorer of health. I thank God and Paine's Celery Compound for my renewed health and strength."

Three Operations Failed to Cure Itching Piles.

News of a Marvellous Cure Files Across the Continent—Father and Son Unite in Praising Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some cures effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment seem like miracles. Here is a case where doctors labored in vain and operations failed to cure.

Mr. Donald McLeod, Tarbotvale, U. S. writes:

"I received the sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has done me a considerable amount of good. I am now enclosing payment for a large box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, which you will please send to my address.

I have had itching piles for four years and did not know of any medicine that would relieve me until last fall, when I received a letter from my son in Winnipeg, who said that three doctors treated him and operated for piles, but failed to cure him. He now thanks God and Dr. Chase's Ointment for a perfect cure. He had piles in the worst form, and suffered terribly. He is now working hard every day, and does not feel any symptoms of piles returning. You are at liberty to use this letter for the benefit of others."

There is little use trying to cure piles unless you use Dr. Chase's Ointment. It is certain to afford quick relief and ultimately through 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmondson Bate & Co., Toronto.

THE SUFFERINGS OF JOB.

If the agonies of Job were any worse than the tortures of itching piles from which so many people are now suffering, he had much to endure. The difference is that there is no reason for any one to endure the miseries of piles for a single day.

Dr. Chase's Ointment has cured tens of thousands of cases and is absolutely guaranteed to cure each and every case of piles. 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmondson Bate & Co., Toronto.

UNDER TWO FLAGS.

"You, Picpon? What is it?"

"My corporal, there is great news. Fighting has begun, the Arabs want a skirmish and Rake has run a spallie through the stomach, that is all. I don't think the man is so much as dead, even. He always does something when he thinks promotion is coming—something to get himself out of the way, do you see? And the reason is this: He's a good friend, and loves you, and he will not be put over your head. 'Me rise afore him?' said he to me once. 'He's a prince, and I'm a mangled got in a gutter.' I love him more 'n I ever say, and I'll kill the general myself afore I'll insult him that way."

"Little to him about the spallie; he loves you well, does your Rake."

"Well, indeed! Good God! What a pity!"

Picpon glanced at him; then with the tact of his nation, glided away and bashed himself teaching Flick-Flack to shoulder and present arms, the weapon being a long chicken stick.

"Is this true, Rake—that you intentionally commit these freaks of misconduct to escape promotion?" Ceil asked of the man when he stood alone with him in his place of confinement.

Rake flushed a little. "Mischief's bred in me, sir; it must come out. It's just bottled up in me like ale. If I didn't let it out now and then, I should fly a-piece!"

"But many a time when you have been close on the reward of your splendid gallantry in the field you have frustrated your own fortune and the wishes of your superiors by wantonly proving yourself unfit for the higher grade they were going to raise you to. Why do you do that?"

Rake sidgetted restlessly, and to avoid the awkwardness of the question, replied like a parliamentary orator by a flow of rhetoric.

"Oh, there's a many chaps like me. They can't help nobow busting out when the fit takes 'em. 'Tain't reasonable to blame 'em for it. They're just made so, like a chestnut's made to bust its pod and a chicken to bust its shell."

"But you wander from my question," said Ceil gently. "Do you avoid promotion?"

"Yes, sir, I do," said Rake, something sulky, for he felt he was being driven "up a corner." "I do. I ain't not one bit fitter for an officer than a rioting pup is fit to lead them crack packs at home. I should be in a straight waistcoat if I was promoted. And as for the cross, Lord, sir, that would get me into a world of trouble! I should pawn it for a toss of wine the first day out or give it to the first girl that winked her black eye for it."

Ceill's eyes rested on him with a look that said far more than his answer. "Rake, I know you better than you would let me see. Let me lead your way. My noble fellow, you reject advancement and earn yourself an unjust reputation for mutinous conduct because you are too generous to be given a step above mine in the regiment."

"Who's been telling you that trash, sir?" retorted Rake, with ferocity.

"No matter who. It is no trash. It is splendid loyalty of which I am utterly unworthy, and it shall be my cure that it is known at the bureau, so that henceforth your great merits may be."

"Stow that, sir!" cried Rake vehemently. "Stow that if you please! Promoted I won't be—no, not if the emperor himself was to order it and come across here to see it done! A pretty thing surely! No a officer, and you never a one; me a-commanding of you, and you a-saluting of me! By the Lord, sir, we might as well see the corn scullion a-riding in state and the marshal a-scouring out the soup pot! If you don't let me have my own way and if you do the littlest thing to get me a step, why, sir, I swear as I'm a living being that I'll draw on Chateaugay the first time I see him afterward and slit his throat as I'd slit a jackal's! There, my out's took!"

And Ceil knew that it was hopeless either to persuade him to his own advantage or to convince him of his disobedience in speaking thus of his superior before his noncommissioned officer. He was himself, moreover, deeply moved by the man's fidelity.

He stretched his hand out.

"I wish there were more blackguards with hearts like yours. I cannot repay your love, Rake, but I can value it."

Rake put his own hands behind his back.

"God bless you, sir, you've repaid it ten dozen times over. But you shan't do that, sir. I told you long ago I'm too much of a scamp. Some day, perhaps, as I said, when I've settled scores with myself and wiped off all the bad uns with a clear sweep tolerably clean; not afore, sir."

And Rake was so sturdily obedient that he never carried his point. Meanwhile Picpon's news was correct.

Anslow, Sergeant, Ferguson. Sergeant Major Slade, of the permanent corps, is instructor. The men looked well and no doubt will uphold the reputation of this Battery.

John A. Fish, formerly of the Gurney Heater Co. Boston, is now manager of the boiler department of the Walker & Pratt Manufacturing Co., 31 Union street, Boston. Mr. Fish extends a cordial invitation to all friends when in Boston to visit the company's warehouses and examine the merits of the boilers to be seen there.

Sts. Nelson and Mianichi will run on Sunday, the 15th, if the weather is favorable, in connection with the dedication of the new Catholic church at Douglastown. The Mianichi will leave Chatham at 8.30 a. m., for Nelson, calling at Newcastle, Nelson and Chatham. The Nelson will leave the wharf at 9.30 for Douglastown, and run between Douglastown and Chatham.

Before Judges Barker and McLeod on Saturday in the matter of the Maritime Sulphite Fibre Co., Chatham. Hon. Mr. Pugsley suggested that an order should be made allowing the sale of pulp now on hand jointly by the liquidator and receiver the proceeds to be placed to their joint credit, subject to the order of their honor. Mr. Pugsley and Mr. A. H. Hanington, K. C., represented the unsecured creditors. Mr. H. H. McLean, K. C., for the Bank of Montreal and Royal Trust Company, objected, but after some discussion the judges decided to make the order.

A young man named Legere, aged 22 years, son of Isiah Legere, postmaster at Legere, Northumberland county, went out fishing Monday, 19th, with two companions. About 9 o'clock in the evening, when entering the harbor on their return, the main-boom struck Legere and threw him overboard. A young man on board went to save him with a smaller boat but was too late. The body was found the next morning at 9 o'clock.—Advance.

Mrs. J. K. Barney Superintendent of work for prisoners in connection with the World's and National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, will speak at a public meeting in the Temperance Hall, Millerton, Sept. 18th at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Barney made a round the world tour in 1897-98. She is a most persuasive speaker and her gentle ministrations have won for her the title of "Prisoner's Friend." There will be vocal selections.

Mrs. Frances Watt and Dr. Ritchie were married at Ald. Watt's residence, Thursday morning, with only near relatives present. The bride wore a becoming gown of French grey broadcloth and carried a shower bouquet of crimson roses and smilax. She was unattended. After the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Ritchie left by train for Montreal, via St. John. The Strang residence, Duke st., has been taken by Dr. Ritchie, and the happy couple will begin housekeeping there on their return.—World.

Mr. J. E. Layton is now reorganizing his classes for the "coming year, and as he has become identified with the New Brunswick School of music, he will in the future receive his pupils at Studio over J. D. Creaghan's store. As the people of Newcastle and vicinity have in the past manifested a desire for high grade musical instruction, we feel confident that the introduction of a school of music will meet in the hearty approval, and we trust the earnest co-operation of all interested in the musical welfare of the town.

The Salvation Army will celebrate their annual harvest thanksgiving Festival from Saturday, September 21st to Tuesday Sept. 24th inclusive. The officers in charge of the Local Corps solicit from the public a tithe of the bountiful blessing of field and store, in kind or cash, as a thank offering to God. Anything received will be turned to good account to support the numerous benevolent institutions, as well as to continue and to extend the evangelical work of this successful organization. It is now generally conceded that the Army has become a very necessary recognized institution in this as in every other country where it operates. Their achievements are beyond controversy highly praiseworthy. This year part of the effort in Newcastle will go towards repairing the S. A. Barracks which Captain Thompson is now engaged in doing. The officers Captain and Mrs. Thompson invite all friends to contribute their mite to this fund and surely they will not lose their reward.

MRS. J. K. BARNEY.

Supt. of Work for prisoners in connection with the World and National W. C. T. U. Miss Willard said of Mrs. Barney, no woman in the state of Rhode Island (her native state) wields so great an influence or possesses the confidence of all classes of people to an equal degree. Her general lectures, Bible readings, sermons and addresses to young people and children, together with the presentation of her special department and rescue work, make her popular and helpful in all our varied lines of work. She is a most persuasive speaker and her gentle ministrations have won for her the title of Prisoner's Friend. Mrs. Barney visited Great Britain at Lady Somers' request two winters in succession, conducting most successful Gospel Temperance meetings in various parts of Great Britain and Ireland. At Miss Willard's urgent request Mrs. Barney made a round-the-world tour in 1897-98 and her lecture around the world with the white ribbon caused to be of great interest. Last winter was spent by this indefatigable worker and traveller in Cuba and her lecture Temperance expansion in Cuba is said to be most suggestive and interesting. Mrs. Barney is not a stranger in Canada, she has visited and spoken in all the leading cities of the Dominion.

THE BIG SHOW.

The managers of the Provincial Exhibition at Fredericton, Sept. 17, 18, 19 and 20th, have secured as a special attraction Professor Leon Morris' Trained Comedy Ponies, Dogs and Baboons, also Prof. Hawley's Dog Circus. These attractions have never been east of Boston before, are the best trained animals now being shown, and have been engaged at an enormous expense. They will give performances every afternoon and evening in the large tent on the exhibition grounds.

R. A. Lawlor of Chatham was in town yesterday.

BASEBALL.

On Friday last the Royal Oaks of Chatham played a game with the Junior Cornkillers of Newcastle.

The score 10 to 19 in favor of the Newcastle.

Mr. Ashford officiated as umpire with satisfaction to all parties.

Although baseball appears to be a very popular game it does not turn out profitable financially at least in Newcastle. This was shown at Friday's game when the gate receipts amounted to only $4.75.

Newcastle has a very good team considering the length of time they have been playing together, and the boys deserve more popular support to encourage them. We believe in our sister town, the sport is better patronized and that the proceeds of a game there will amount to from 20 to 25 times the receipts of one here.

GOVERNMENT IN SESSION.

Question of Timber Licenses in Connection with Maritime Sulphite Co.—French School Inspector—Other Matters.

FREDERICTON, Sept. 4.—The local government transacted considerable business today.

This morning C. N. Skinner, George W. Allen, M. P. P., E. G. Evans, Captain Elkin and A. P. Barnhill, representing the N. B. Coal and Railway Company, were heard in reference to acquiring running powers over the Central Railway.

Premier Tweedie was appointed a commissioner to investigate the charges prepared by the Lord's Day Alliance in connection with the enforcement of the Sunday observance law.

F. E. Came was heard in regard to an importation of thoroughbred horses, to defray the cost of which he wants government assistance. The matter was referred to Hon. L. P. Farris and Hon. Mr. Hill.

A delegation of North Shore lumbermen and representatives of the Royal Trust Company were heard this afternoon in reference to renewing the license of the Maritime Sulphite Fibre Company to the Royal Trust Company. The lumbering opposing the application of the trust company.

Dr. E. B. Fisher, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, made a report this afternoon on the smallpox outbreak in Carleton and other counties, and Hon. A. S. White made report on the work of consolidating the status.

The board of education held a meeting this afternoon at which Lieut. Governor McClellan presided. J. Flavin Doucet, of Petit Rocher, Gloucester county, was appointed an inspector of schools in charge of the French districts of the province.

The government, after hearing the representatives of the Central Railway and New Brunswick Coal and Railway companies, approved of the amalgamation of the two companies as provided for by an act passed by the legislature at its last session.

It is understood that the government had further information from Ottawa regarding the visit of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall. It is probable that Earl and Lady Minto will accompany the royal party during their visit to the Maritime provinces.

W. A. Hickman made an exhaustive report of his immigration work in England during the past nine months.

This evening the surveyor general was engaged in hearing the application made on behalf of the Royal Trusts Company asking for approval of the transfer of the assignment of the timber licenses of 200 square miles to it from the Maritime Sulphite Pulp Company. Geo. W. Allen, K. C., and Warren C. Winslow, K. C., supported the application which was opposed by R. A. Lawlor, K. C., on behalf of certain creditors of the company who had got out lumber to the value of many thousands of dollars for the pulp company, believing the company held the licenses. It appears that the assignments were made in November 1900, to the Royal Trusts Company and were not presented to the department until July 31, 1901—after the failure of the company, notwithstanding a provision in the law that notice of the assignments must be given within a reasonable time. R. A. Lawlor, K. C., contended that the surveyor general has the power, to refuse his consent to the transfer. This, he held, was eminently a case where he should exercise that power. The surveyor general has taken time to consider the matter.

The government transacted business until midnight.

Everyone Knows that violins of the same manufacture vary greatly in tone. The same is true of pianos only not to as great an extent. However, only a piano expert can tell the difference between one a little off tone and the best. Almost every day we are receiving new Pianos, and not one is ever accepted without a thorough examination by us. If the piano shows a want in tone, quality, action, or any other particular, what do you think we do? Do we keep it? Decidedly not. We send it back. We have returned Pianos of some of the most eminent manufacturers in America. We know the difference between the Pianos that would pass with the average person, and the one that is really artistic, and we want have an instrument in our stock that is not up to the standard in every particular.

The moral of this argument is to buy a Piano from a firm that know their business and have the reputation for keeping the best. J. E. LAYTON, THE W. H. JOHNSON CO., LTD., WAVERLEY HOTEL, NEWCASTLE, N. B. ST. JOHN AND HALIFAX.
