Such services should not go unrewarded ings—nothing that London or England contains was beyond the reach of their observation. They came here—nearly all colonists by birth—with eyes unprejudiced because unaccus somed, to the peculiarities of English society. They came desiring the continuance of the Colonial connection, and we believe they will leave us desiring it more argumently than ever. Knowing them to be able ardently than ever. Allowing them to men, their disinterestedness showing them to be honest men, we are bold to say no higher compliment was ever paid to the general exceptability of the Frontier County, can bear testimony to the facts which we have stated.
